are battered with temptations, that through temptations their lives many times become a burden to them; Ay, but death shall set them free out of Gun-shot; here they are tossed up and down, turmoiled by Satan, as Christ was carried up to the Mountain, and then to the Pinnacle, tossed up and down from Mountain to Pinnacle; Ay, but then there shall be no tempter, no temptation shall enter any place of that Jerusalem that is above in Heaven, and therefore to the godly man death is gain.

Besides, They shall gain freedom from all the oppositions and oppressions of the World; I say freedom, they shall rest from the oppressions of men; and Job did account that, and look upon that as a great mercy; he did envy men in their Graves, says he, They are at rest: the poor man is freed from the Oppressor, from all persecutions of men, and from all the slaveries and bondages, and tyrannizing of them; why, death shall set them free from the oppressions of men, from all evil of men, from all wars, and rumors of wars, and sad effects of wars, death sets them free from these. O, say you, I have lost a friend, but you know not what he gained, he is taken from the evil to come in the Generations after him; he shall rest from all sorrows, from all afflictions, from all passions: the Lord God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes, there shall be no mourning beyond the Grave, no complaining in the streets of the new Jerusalem.

Brethren, Lay all these together, and see if this be not gain to those in whom the life of Christ is: to gain nothing but this; Rest from their labors, and rest from oppression and tyranny, to rest from sorrows, passions, tears and mournings, this is a mercy; but to rest from temptations, to rest from sin, and from all those lusts and corruptions that did war in their members and in their minds, this is a great mercy, if there were no more; see how you are beholding to Christ for these, if you find no more gain that death brings you in that are in Christ, how are you beholding unto Christ for it? Death is not gain in itself, but you are beholding to Christ that hath made it so. It is said of Noah in Gen. 5. 29. when Noah was born, it is said, this same shall comfort us concerning our work and toil of our hands; This man shall comfort us, for he shall be a Preacher of righteousness, he was a Type of Christ, and a Preacher of righteousness through faith, and therefore Noah did comfort them through Preaching of Christ the righteousness of Faith, an object of rest, a place to take up in, in the midst of their toil and labor; they were beholding to Christ, o whom Noah was a Type, who is this rest: and to you death would not be thus gain, if Christ had not made it so; no, this man, this Lord Jesus hath brought in comfort concerning that estate of separation of soul from body; it is not gain in itself, but Christ hath made it so unto his people. O how are you engaged unto Christ! say even for this, if you should hear no more of this rest, I will bless his great name for it.

SERMON VI.

PHILIP. 1. •1. For to me to live is Christ, and to die is gain.

THE Apostle, I told you the last day, doth converse with Death at a distance. But I entered into the main Point, which I shall prosecute at this time.

For to me to live is Christ, and to die is Gain.

DOCT. Where Christ is life, there death is gain.

See the Connection, For to me to live is Christ; Christ is my life, and death is my gain: Death is gain to that soul that hath Christ for its life. One particular I named, I shall prosecute the rest.

1. First, Their gain is a gain of rest; I say, every Believer by death gains Rest, a rest from toil and troubles of an evil turmoiling World; Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord, for they rest from their labor, they rest the rest of the righteous man: When he is in the Grave, it is another kind of rest than the rest of the wicked; it is said of David who is a Type of Christ that his flesh rests in hope: the flesh of the righteous man rests in hope, but the flesh of the wicked man may be said to rest in fear, he may fear the approaching day of light, he may fear to lie down, but more to rise up; he cries out, O Lord, let me lie here to Eternity, for the chains of darkness are better than the light of a new day; but the flesh of the righteous man shall rest in hope, he shall have no more fiery darts of the Devil thrown at him, he rests from temptation and oppression of the World, and from the tyranny of man, he rests from all griefs, sorrows, tears and complaints, where all tears shall be wiped away, and no complaints in the streets at that day: here is a great deal of gain, the righteous man gains rest in the day of death.

2. Secondly, As he gains rest, so he gains perfect peace, and fullness of joy; it is said in Isa. 57. 1. The righteous are taken away from the evil to come, &c. and it is said, he shall enter into peace, They shall rest in their beds, everyone walking in his uprightness; they shall not only rest in their bed, in the Grave, but they shall enter into peace, and they shall enter into joy, in Matth. 25. 21. Enter thou into the joy of thy Lord: he enters into peace, he enters into joy, that he shall thenceforth dwell in it; he shall dwell in joy, he takes full possession of it, it is no more shut out: peace doth enter into the righteous man's heart whilst he is on earth, but till death comes, his peace here shall be interrupted, he shall enter into it, and it into him; what Job says of the body, so of the joy of the righteous man, it continues not at a stay, his peace and joy is many times interrupted, but in Heaven he shall meet with no more Clouds, there shall be a morning that shall drive away all Clouds, he shall enter into joy, and he shall dwell in the fullness of it; Christ hath purchased it, and he hath given out the first fruits of this peace and joy, but the full possession is no till death, and therefore it is said in Psal. 97. 11. That light is sown for the righteous, and joy for the upright in heart: he reaps something here, but it is but a little in respect of the harvest that he shall reap afterward, it rather seems to be a sowing time than a reaping here, but afterward he shall reap the fullness of it; peace is sown for the righteous, and joy for the upright in heart: so that here is another benefit of gain to a Believer by death, he shall then drink to satisfaction of those Rivers of joy and pleasures for evermore that do run at the right-hand of God.

3. But again, Thirdly, As he gains joy and peace, so by death the believing soul gains enlargement and liberty; this is a great part of his gain: the soul by death is set at liberty; for the spirit even of a righteous man, though it be the Candle of the Lord, and though it be enlightened from Heaven, yet whilst it is in this body, which is now corrupted, it is like a light that is in a dark Lanthorn, the light of those excellent faculties of the soul are eclipsed and darkened; I say, so it is with all mankind, the curse came by the fall of Adam, that the body is as a dark Lanthorn to the soul, and it doth hide that light which should otherwise be revealed; as the soul acts most highly when it hath least of the body, as when the body is asleep, it sees not, it hears not, it reads not, yet the soul then sees, and mourns, and joys more exquisitely than it doth or can do in the body; and therefore when the soul is nigh parting with the body, it acts most highly, and so it shall do in its separation, when separated from his body, it shall be freed from his dark Lanthorn, it shall be taken out from his Dungeon, as it were, and all the faculties of the soul shall be enlarged, the understanding, the apprehension, the capacity of the soul shall be mightily enlarged. The Prophet speaks of a time a coming, that there shall be no more an Infant of days, the beginnings of it shall be on earth but the perfection of it shall be in Heaven, There shall be no more an infant of days, there shall be no more a child of understanding, but he that is weak shall be as David, and he that is as David, shall be as the Angel of the Lord; the capacity of the soul shall be wonderfully enlarged, as it shall comprehend most of God; here it is straitened, and it could not receive much of God, it could not receive much of the mysteries of the Kingdom of Jesus Christ, it is not large enough to take in much of the notion of those glorious things, but when death comes, it shall be enlarged: And then, says the Apostle, I shall know, even as I am known. It shall be exceedingly enlarged to take in very much of God. And as the understanding shall be set at liberty, so all the faculties of the soul shall be set at liberty. They shall be greatly enlarged towards God, and run towards God, the desires of the soul shall run like a mighty stream towards God; here there was but a little drop of the affection, but then a mighty stream shall run; not only faith but love shall be perfect.

A believing soul shall be enlarged in respect of action; as the faculties, so all the actings of the Soul, shall be set at large, at liberty: here the soul canit act according to its desires, it would do more for God, but there's a clogg that lies upon it, it hath mighty wings, wings like the Ostridge, but there is such a heavy body, as it canit get up: there's wings would carry the soul up to Heaven every moment, but there is a heavy body; in Rom. 7. 19, 20, 24. For the good that I would, I do not: but the evil which I would not, that I do. Now, if I do that I would not, it is no more I that do it, but sin that dwelleth in me. O wretched man that I am, who shall deliver me from the body of this death? I say there is infiniteness in a believers desires to do for God, and he would enjoy more and more still, and he would do more and more for God, ay, but he is straitened up in his actings, there he is narrow, he cannot act according to his desire: but now when death comes, the believing soul shall be set at liberty, it shall be able to act according to its desire, it shall be whatever it desires to be, and it shall do whatever it desires to do, and it shall have as much holiness as it will desire to have; this is a mighty privilege, and a great deal of that gain that comes in by death unto that soul where Christ is its life; it meets with this liberty and enlargement. But again,

4. Fourthly, The believing soul by death gains not only liberty but abundance of life: it gains life, it hath more of the life of Christ, it enjoys more of the life of Christ, and hath the fullness of it communicated; and now Brethren, this is a mighty gain to gain life: what would a man gain more, and what is a greater gain than life? It is beyond the gain of all treasure whatever. Natural life is the greatest of all mercies; Thou shalt have thy life for a prey, and that's the greatest mercy, Skin for skin, and all that a man hath will he give for his life: and in this the believing soul shall come nearer to the life of Christ, for he shall have the life of Christ, who is the fountain, and so more of it communicated to him; and therefore it was that, for which the Apostle desired to be dissolved and to be with Christ, which is best of all, for there he should have perfection of life in Christ, there shall be nothing there to hinder the life of Christ from flowing in unto the soul, there shall be no cloggs, no rubs in the way, but there shall be a full enjoyment, and a full manifestation of that life of Christ, which is the life of the soul, is made over to the soul for its life even to Eternity; this is another part of the great gain that comes in by death to believing souls. But again,

5. Fifthly, As it gains life, so it gains victory by death; the believing soul gains Victory, full, complete victory and conquest over all its enemies: He doth not only rest, as I said before; it is a great gain to rest, rest from the motion of sin, and lust, and rest from the motion of temptation, but that's not all; it rests and sits down as a Conqueror, the Palm of victory is then put into the hand of every Believer, and he shall stand upon that Mount Zion, and shall sing Hallelujah unto the Lord, he is then made a Conqueror there, for all enemies at that day are put under; all the lusts of his heart, and all Principalities and Powers, and whatsoever was a vexation and disquietment, shall be put under his feet, and he shall sit down with Christ as a Conqueror, I have fought the good fight saith the Apostle in 2 Tim. 4. 7, 8. I have finished my Course, I have kept the Faith, and now is laid up for me a Crown of righteousness: my lifetime, it was my time of combating, but now I am ready to be dissolved, to be offered up, I shall sit down as a Conqueror, and I shall have a Crown of righteousness; that's another privilege, another part of the gain that comes in to the believing soul by death. But,

6. Sixthly, It gains a full sight of God: I say, the believing soul by death gains a full sight of God, a full vision of God; this gain is glorious and unspeakable: it's that which the Saints do press after to see the face of God; it was Moses's great request, I beseech thee show me thy face; mighty desirous to see the face of God: and indeed it is a completing of their happiness that they shall see the face of God; Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God, in Matth. 5. 8. here is the blessedness of that people whose heart is purged by faith, they shall see God; they shall see him here, •ay, but in Heaven they shall see him face to face, in 1 Cor. 13. 12. We now see him through a glass darkly, but we shall see him face to face, and then shall we know him as we are known: It is true, God cannot be seen with the eye of the body, neither here nor in Heaven, so the Saints cannot see him, for he is an infinite Being, a Spirit invisible, invisible to the eye of the body, but he shall be held forth clearly, God will hold himself forth to the eye of their understanding, and his people shall have full and clear visions of him: they shall know him in his Nature, and they shall know him in his attributes, they shall know him in all his works, and they shall know him in his Word; whatsoever was hid from them in the days of their flesh, shall then be revealed, they shall know him in his Counsel, in those secret ways which God walked in from Eternity, which no creature can give a reason of, God will then unfold himself, they shall have continual visions of God, visions of grace, and visions of love, and visions of light, and visions of glory, which shall continually flow forth from the Throne, this will be a mighty gain. When the Queen of Sheba came to Solomon to see his House, in 2 Chron. 9. 7. she said, Happy are thy servants that stand in thy presence, to hear thy wisdom; if they were happy that saw Solomon and his wisdom, and looked him in the face, then much more shall they that stand forever in the presence of the great God, King of Kings, and Lord of Lord's, and shall see his face and behold his wisdom, and shall for evermore be satisfied with a full vision of God, so much as the creature can hold. It's true, the creature is finite, it shall not be infinite as God himself is, but they shall behold the glorious visions of God himself, which will be mighty gain. But again,

7. Seventhly, Believing souls by death shall be gainers in respect of their habitation: here they dwell in a house of Clay, so Job calls it, Job 4. 19. it is a house of Clay, whose foundation is in the dust, and is crush'd before the Moth. It is a poor house that a Moth can throw down, that the Moth can crush, and yet this is the house, the house of the body, and this is the house that the soul lives in whilst it is here; a house of Clay that hath no foundation but the dust: a house without a foundation, it cannot stand, it's down in an instant, every storm of wind will blow it down, it hath only its foundation of, and from the dust; exceeding frail is the body set forth by this expression: now what shall the soul gain when death comes, It hath a house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens, in 2 Cor. 5. 1. For we know, that if our earthly house of this Tabernacle were dissolved, we have a building of God, an house not made with hands eternal in the Heavens: It's a mansion, or dwelling house, it's not a Tabernacle; In my Fathers house are many mansions, Job. 14. 2. It's not made by the hand of man, it's made by God himself: It's glory that was laid up before the foundation of the world; it's uncreated glory, God himself will be the heaven, he will be the dwelling place of his people, and they shall dwell in him, throughout all Generations forever and forever: here is a change you see, in respect of the habitation, and it will be much more gain, than for man to change a Dungeon for a Palace, the soul comes out of a Dungeon, and it's put into an Inheritance, an Inheritance with the Saints in light. But Again,

8. Eighthly, They gain in respect of their company: our Savior says in Matth. 8. 11. They shall sit down with Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob in the Kingdom of God; no worse company than Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and the spirits of just men made perfect: there shall be no failings, nor defects, there shall be no want of love, there shall be no blemish to take off love, but they shall enjoy the company of the spirits of just men made perfect, this will be a mighty gain. Here there are many failings, failings in the best of Saints, the best company that believers have, even Saints, there are failings in the best of them; but there shall be nothing seen there, but the Image of God, nothing but the Image of Christ; when they look upon one another, they shall see nothing but an attractive love, there shall be no emulation there, they shall not envy one another's glory, but everyone shall glory in his own happiness as his own gain: they shall gain in respect of company. Again in the

9. Ninth place, They shall gain Confirmation and Establishment by this blessed condition, all this that is spoken of, he shall be established in it forever: there shall be no more returning to sin and sorrow, no more returns of former temptations, there shall be no more possibility to fall again, but it shall be confirmed and established in blessedness, it shall no more lose his happiness than Christ can lose his, no more turned out of heaven than the Son of God can be turned out, they shall be confirmed and established forever, there shall be no robbers, nor no fear of danger; this is another part of their gain.

10. Tenthly, To name no more, Believers shall be gainers in respect of their body; for their bodies shall be new molded at the Resurrection of the great day, the body shall be made new and serviceable to the soul, every way fitted and Organized for the soul to work: This corruptible shall put on incorruption, says the Apostle, and mortality shall be swallowed up in life; God will make up these vessels of the bodies of his people again at the Resurrection, and when he hath raised them up, he will raise them as vessels of honor, and vessels of glory. And as it is said, that that matter whereof is made the purest China, is buried many Generations in the earth before they take it, and of that they make the purest China▪ so though you be buried in the earth, the Lord will raise you up, though many Generations after, and they shall be raised up, and fitted for the spirits of just men made perfect, that God may be glorified both in soul and body to Eternity. This is the gain of that soul by death▪ to that body whose life Christ is: And there must needs be gain to those that are Christ's. For,

1. First of all, It were not possible that Believers should be willing to part, and leave all comforts behind them, and that they should so part with all willingly, with that which is so desirable in the world, I say, it could not be, if there were not gain behind: for God's people have nature as well as others, and they have natural affections, and nature seeks its own preservation, and it looks upon death as an enemy, and yet that this enemy shall be entertained so willingly, that when the Lord calls, he should open his bosom to receive the stroke that he shall send; and be a volunteer in his death; certainly there is something in this, there is that which the World knows not of: how willingly did Christ send forth his spirit? It's said, He cried with a loud voice, and gave up the Ghost, his spirit was not snatched away violently, but he gave it up willingly; it is not so with the wicked man, and it was not so with the rich fool in the Gospel, This night shall thy soul be required at thy hand; his soul was commanded, it was taken from him by force and violence, whether he will or no, he was not a volunteer, but his soul was plucked from him; but that a man shall give his life up voluntarily, that he should entertain death voluntarily, and part with all friends, Wife and Parents; why, surely it is because the Lord gives a greater assurance of gain, which is to be found beyond death itself. But again,

2. Secondly, If there were not such gain by death to the godly man, it were not possible that he should make such a venture as he doth. If a man venture into a far Country, he will not venture for a little, he will venture for gain, and good gain, or else he will not venture: there is a venture at death with the godly man, he makes a venture, and it is the greatest venture that ever was made, he doth not venture his estate, but he ventures his soul which is infinitely of more worth than his estate, and the venture is for Eternity, and if that venture be lost, all is lost, and he is undone forever, yet thus he ventures and launcheth forth into the Gulf of Eternity: but he hath a word from the Lord, and he saith, Well, if God will deceive me, let him, I will venture; now the believing soul doth see the future great gain that will follow death. But again,

3. Thirdly, If it were not so, Believers were the miserablest creatures of all men; If it were not for Christ, we were of all men most miserable, if there were no hopes of better, then we were the miserablest of all men, for we are the lowest of all men: Afflictions, Persecutions, Grievs and Sorrows of all sorts is the portion, many times, of God's dearest people and children; now if there were nothing beyond the Grave, we were of all men most miserable; the Apostle was in deaths often, he was dead every way, he carried his life in his hand, he was the offscouring of the world, so accounted, and now if there were in this life no hope, no hope of a Resurrection, no hopes of a better world, then we were miserable indeed; but the believing soul knows that the end of the righteous man is peace, and the end of the transgressor is, to be cut off. But again,

4. Fourthly and lastly, to name no more, Death must needs be gain to believing souls, because it was gain to Christ: Christ's gain came in by death, and therefore so shall theirs: Ought not the Son of man to suffer these things, and so to enter into his glory? It's the way to his glory, by way of sufferings. He was led along all his life in this way, his gain came in by losses, his honor, his greatest honor came in by dishonor, and that reproach and that low condition that befell him whilst he was in the World, he found honor in dishonor, and his exaltation came in in a way of humiliation, and life came in for all his people in a way of death, by his own death, He took upon himself the form of a servant, &c. his exaltation came in in a way of humiliation, and life for his people came in by his death; as it was with Christ, so shall it be with his members; for there shall be a conformity, and there shall be an uniformity betwixt Christ and them; as it was in the head, so shall it be with the members; as his exaltation came in in a way of humiliation, so shall theirs, and their life in the greatest of it shall come in by death; God the Father delights to walk in this way, for it is contrary to the World, and God delights always to do the greatest things by contraries. In the Creation of the World, and so in the new Creation, when he made the World he made all things of nothing; and so of the new Creation, he converts a sinner by that which is most opposite, by the Word of the Lord, which his soul hates, and yet that Word of the Lord doth conquer him, and change him into his own likeness: and so God leads his people to glory through a low way of suffering, and when he brings them to the full possession of it, he carries them through the dark entry, through the dark narrow strait entry of death, and through that place he leads them to the enjoyment of that glory which comes in by death. I have no time for Application: But Brethren consider it, death is gain to those whose life Christ is, but it is loss, and the greatest loss that ever was met with, unto those that have not Christ for their life; I beseech you to look to yourselves, and to look about you before death comes: when death comes you must venture such a venture as never was made, you venture your souls and your Eternity, and by that venture you are made or else you are mar'd to Eternity; look about you, examine, Is death like to prove gain to you or no? What assurance have you that death shall be gain? I should press this further, but the time is past already, I shall reserve it for another time.

SERMON VII.

PHILIP. 1. 21. For to me to live is Christ, and to die is gain:

YOU may remember the Point that we are insisting upon.

DOCT. That where Christ is life, there death is gain.

I have opened the Point, and shown you wherein death is gain to believers in several particulars. But I shall proceed in answering some Objections before I come to the Use.

Object. It may be, may some carnal heart say with Nicodemus, how can these things be? how is it possible that death should be gain, when it strips a man of all his comforts, turns him out of possession of House and Land, it is no longer his, if death comes it deprives him of all his friends, he is left friendless, it turns him naked out of the World, and how is it possible that that should be gain?

Answ. I Answer, If there be not something beyond the Grave, if a man hath not an Inheritance laid up in Heaven, I grant it, that death is the greatest loss of all, for it robs a man of all comforts at once; therefore I say, if a man hath not a share in the Land of Promise, if he hath not a more endurable substance in Heaven, I grant that death is a great loss; therefore what I say concerning those who are gainers by death, it concerns them only that have interest in Christ, and to them it is not loss to be stripped of all comforts; for why? It puts them into possession of their Inheritance; and what though death doth strip them of a few outward comforts? It's no great loss, or it's not considerable. If a great Heir be gone home to his own Country, if he gets to his own door, his own house, and his purse be taken from him, what are a few pence? It's no great wrong, because he hath now taken possession of an Inheritance that will bring him in a yearly Revenue, thousands it may be; the loss of his few pence from his purse is no great matter.

2. Secondly, Besides, Whatsoever is lost in death, it is no great matter to a gracious heart, because the World is Crucified to him, and he to the World beforehand; I say, however the World may look upon death as a loss, yet a gracious heart doth not, because the World is dead to him beforehand, and if it be dead, if it be a dead Carcass, it is no great loss to part with it; and though a man loves his Friend never so dearly, as Sarah, she was the beloved of Abraham, Abraham's beloved wife, and yet when death came, Give me a burying place, says he, that I may bury my dead out of my sight, it was no matter to be parted with, when she was dead; and so says a gracious heart of all the things of the World, they are dead, The world is crucified to me, says the Apostle, and I to the World, and therefore no great loss to him to part with them, because they are dead to him.

3. Thirdly, Besides, A believing soul shall find all to be made up in God abundantly; whatsoever seems to be a loss shall be made up in Heaven, with the presence of God and Christ: Is there a loss of house and Land? The Lord will be the dwelling place of his people throughout all Generations; dost thou lose the light of the Sun? the Lamb is the light of that City: thou shalt find all relations in God, Husband, Wife, Brother, Sister, whatever relation is broken by death, it shall be made up in God, he shall be their friend instead of all, and you shall find the comfort of all relations made up in Heaven; in Gen. 17. 7. I will be a God to thee: it comprehends all relations, that is, Friends, Father, Husband, Wife, House, Land, all creature comforts whatsoever: I will be a God to thee, they are to be found in God. Therefore whatsoever, I say, seems to be lost by death, shall be made up in the enjoyment of God himself, and of his Son Jesus Christ: so much in answer to that. But,

Object. 2. Some poor hearts that are taken with this truth, and with the great gain of Heaven, will try out, O Lord, why do I live in this miserable world? and why is light given to him that is in misery? and why is life given to the bitter in Spirit? Job 3. 20. I have heard of the gain of death, and I cannot be content any longer in this vale of misery, to be kept from my gain, I know not how to bear it any longer: O that the Lord would make haste, and let loose his hand upon me, and cut off this thread of my life.

Answ. Now good Christian, let me say a little to thee; do not make too much hast, do not make more hast than thy Father would have thee. I remember the Apostle in Ephes. 4. 26. says, Be angry and sin not; so say I to thee, desire death but sin not in thy desire: every desire of death, is not a good and a warrantable desire; there is a holy desire of death, and there is a sinful desire of death, and have a care thou sinnest not.

Quest. But you will say then, How far may a man desire death? When are his desires holy, and when are they sinful? This is a Case of Conscience, that is very obvious and obnoxious to most of God's people at one time or other, and therefore I shall spend some time in answer.

First, I shall show you when a man's desires of death are sinful. And secondly, When they are holy and good.

1. First of all, Desires of death are Sinful, when a man shall act anything against his own life: I say, when a creature shall act anything against his own life, when a man or woman shall do anything that shall shorten their own days, or when they shall refuse the comfort that God hath given, or helps to prolong life: if a man's hand be found against his own life, it proceeds from a sinful and wicked desire of death. There's great evil in this, let me show you the evil. For,

1. First, It doth pluck that out of God's hand, which God hath challenged as his right: the issues of life and death they belong to the Lord; my times are in thy hand, says David; now it is wicked boldness for a man to pluck times out of God's hand; when a man will have them in his own hand, and not that God should have the disposal of them.

2. Secondly, Besides, There is this evil in it, A man casts away the most precious Jewel, when he acts against his own life; he casts away the most precious Jewel in nature: Life is the precioussest of all natural gifts; Life is a Talent, a great Talent, it is a Talent given thee for to improve it for God, not to waste it away; God gives thee this Talent, that it may be laid out for him, that thy life may be laid out for his name and glory, and not to cast it away at thy own pleasure, or displeasure: know therefore, that if any man shall at any time act anything against his own life, God will call him to account for it; if the wicked servant was condemned, because he did not improve his Talent, what shall become of him that threw away his Talent? Life is precious; when a man shall act anything against his own life, it proceeds from sinful desires of death.

3. Thirdly, Again, Desires of death are sinful, When a man shall desire to die, before he knows what it is to live or to die; when a man desires to die, before he hath begun to live, or before he knows what it is to die. There is many a poor creature will be speaking against his life: O that my life were at an end; O that God would take me out of the World: But hast thou begun to live yet to God? Many a poor creature will speak against his own life before he knows what God hath done for him: hast thou done the work God hath sent thee into the World for? Hast thou glorified his name on earth? Hast thou finished thy course? Hast thou considered these things before thou desirest to die? Dost thou know what it is to die? Hast thou considered that death is a door that opens to Eternity? It opens to an Eternal condition, to a place whence there is no return: Hast thou considered what door death will open to thee, whether to the inheritance of the Saints in light, or to an inheritance with the wicked in utter darkness? If thou hast not well considered of these things before thou desirest to die, then these desires of death are sinful desires: No, rather go first to God, and desire him to teach thee to live. It may be thou hast been twenty, thirty, forty, fifty years in the flesh, hast thou begun to live? hast thou made him the end of all thy services? dost thou bring forth fruit to him, and not to thyself? is it he that strengthens thee and carries thee out to all thy duties and services? is Christ thy life? Thou hadst need know what it is to live: desire that God would teach thee, what is the end he sent thee into the World for, the cause of thy coming, rather that thou mayest know how to live, and when to die, that when death comes it may be gain, for if thou dost desire death before, thy desires are sinful.

4. Again, Fourthly, Desires of death are sinful, When a man desires death in a passion: It is a failing that is incident unto God's own people, and therefore you had need take heed of it: It was Jonah's fault, and also Elias failing, in Jonah 4. 3. says he, Take away my life, it is better for me to die than to live; and when Jonah spake this, he was in a great passion: says God in Verse 9. *Dost thou well to be angry? I do well to be angry even unto the death. Was Jonah fit to die now? to die in an anger, to die in a passion? Certainly if at any time, Jonah was now unfit to die. It was a strange passion he was now in, and at this time he was angry with God himself, and yet this man will needs die; did he know what he said? O, passion, passion is blind and unreasonable; he will go to God, he will go to the Throne of God, to dwell with God forever, when he is angry with him, he is angry with the grace and mercy of God, in Jonah 4. 2, 3. For I know that thou art a gracious God, and merciful, slow to anger, and of great kindness, and repentest thee of the evil: Therefore now, O Lord, take I beseech thee, my life from me, for it is better for me to die than to live. Certainly Jonah was now unfit to die, to go to God, whenas there were such contrary distempers prevailed in his spirit, such a distemper as was most contrary to God; God was full of love, full of bowels and pity, full of meekness, patience, compassion, calmness and quietness of mind: contrary to all this, Jonah must and would needs die; here's a passion which is a sinful desire of death; and so Elijah in 1 Kings 19. 4. *But he himself went a days Journey in the Wilderness, and came and sat down under a Juniper tree: and he requested for himself that he might die; and said, It is enough now, O Lord, take away my life: for I am no better than my Fathers; Jonah will die in a passion of anger; Elijah would die in a passion of fear: he was afraid of Jezebel, afraid that she should cut him off, but it was his failing; what was Elijah loath to be made a Martyr? would he die? and is he loath to die in God's cause? to die for the truth? why, would Elijah die, yet afraid that God won't support him, and uphold him in his way? This is his infirmity, like unto those of Moses's; therefore, Brethren, take heed of Elijah's fears, and Jonah's passion. It is common, if they meet with any discontent, O then that God would take away my life, O that I were out of the world; thus to desire to die when in passion, thou art least fit to die; and therefore it is a sinful desire. That's a Third. Again,

4. Fourthly, Desires of death are sinful when a man shall desire to die, only to gain ease to the Flesh, to be rid of some troubles or afflictions that lay upon him: When a man says, O I lie under a heavy burden, and I know not how to get rid of it, O that God would make an end of my days, for I see if such or such affliction comes upon me, I know not how to bear it when it comes; O that God would take away my life beforehand; this is a desire of the flesh, which is a sinful desire. I will show you the sinfulness of it, when a man desires to die only upon these grounds, to be rid of trouble and affliction.

1. First, He doth charge God foolishly: It is said of Job in the latter end of the first Chapter, In all this he sinned not, nor charged God foolishly. But afterward Job did charge God, when he came to consider the day of his birth, he spake against his own life, Wherefore is light given to him that is in misery, and life given to the bitter in soul? There Job did charge God foolishly, as if God were not wise enough to measure out thy portion▪ O thou wouldst die that thou mayest be eased of such and such an affliction, thou chargest God with want of faithfulness, want of wisdom, want of love: see what Absalom said when he flattered with the people, O that I were Judge, saith he, I would hear every man's Cause, and it should not be so and so, I would rule better than my Father David; he charged his Government with folly, I would do Justice better than he. And truly so thou sayest, O that I were in God's place, O that I sat upon the Throne, I would dispose better of my own condition, I would dispose of it with more wisdom, and more love, and more compassion. What a high charge is this to lay upon God! O, have a care thou dost not charge God; thou sayest, wherefore is life given to thee in such an affliction? thou chargest God foolishly: Dost thou not know? why God knows (it may be) that the life of Nature is continued, that so he may increase the life of grace in thee, or that he may kill the life of sin in thee, or that he may give thee more of himself, that thou mayest have more experience of his love and goodness, or that thou mayest be a pattern to others, a pattern of his patience, of his power and goodness, and therefore is life given thee.

2. Secondly, Nay further, When thou speakest against thy own life, and desirest to die, thou dost limit the holy one of Israel, and commit that sin which the Children of Israel did, they tempted God, and limited the holy one of Israel. When thou sayest, O that God would take away thy life, that thy affliction may be taken away; why, cannot God take away thy affliction, and not take away thy life? hath God no other way? He can make a hundred doors, and find out a thousand ways; must he needs open that door, the strait door of death, or else he cannot open a door of deliverance for thee? why dost thou limit and tempt the holy one of Israel? If thou desirest death because thou wouldst be delivered, thy desire is sinful. O desire rather that the Lord would be with thee in thy affliction, and make thee a Conqueror over thy affliction, that thou mayest get above thy affliction to glorify God in the fire. That's a Fourth. But,

5. Fifthly, Thy desires of death are sinful, When as thy desires are unlimited, when they are not subjected to the Will of God, when they are absolute, when a man will have no denial whether God see it good or no, whether the Lord's time be come or no; thou sayest it is gain, shall I not desire gain? No, thou mayest not desire gain with an immoderate desire. The Apostle James reproveth those that say, We will go, and buy, and sell, and get gain, no, but says he, Stay and ask God leave, If God will, we will do so and so, &c. When you would go to the new Jerusalem for gain in that City, say not, We will go, we will go; no, say, If God will let me go: God will have thee to finish thy course; there are many that would go, though the Lord hath no need of them; these unlimited desires of death, are unlawful desires.

Quest. But you will say, When are desires of death Lawful? I shall desire to speak a few words to that briefly.

Answ. First of all, When a man doth not desire death for death, but death for life. There are many poor creatures are desirous to die, but they know not wherefore, but now a holy man hath holy desires, his desires are not death for death, but death for life: for death is an enemy; to desire death, only to cease to be, only to lie still in the Grave and cease to be; the Apostle in 2 Cor. tells you wherefore he desired death, he do not desire to be unclothed, But to be clothed upon, that mortality may be swallowed up in life; not to be unclothed, to lay aside the body, to be in the Grave, and to cease from being, but to be swallowed up in life, to be clothed upon, to desire death for life: seek for that life which we are sure shall come into us by death, this is a lawful desire.

2. Secondly, Desires of death are lawful when a man desires to die, that he may sin no more against God, that corruption may be fully mortified, that there may be nothing left in the soul to provoke the Lord any longer, that may displease the eye of his glory, that it may be holy in all things, made like unto Christ, even without sin: a gracious heart says and believes, because the Lord hath spoken it, that death shall be the death of sin, as well as the death of the body, sin brought death into the world, and death shall carry sin quite away, that at death it shall be abolished, that there shall be no more sense of sin, no sense of lust; to desire death for this end, that the creature may sin no more, that God may be displeased no more, and grieved no more, this is a lawful desire.

3. Thirdly, When a man desires death, that he may enjoy communion with Christ, this is lawful, to enjoy full communion with Christ, that was the Apostles desire, Phil. 1. 23. Having a desire to depart, and to be with Christ which is far better; wherefore doth he desire to be dissolved? he tells you, To be with Christ, to see the face of Christ, to enjoy the presence of Christ, that he may be filled with the love of Christ, and behold the glory of Christ, and may be forever in the presence of Christ, and never look off his face, but to enjoy full and perfect communion with Christ: to desire death for these ends is lawful.

4. Again, Fourthly, When a man desires death, That he may lift up the name of God in Heaven, that he may do the Will of God perfectly, as it is done in Heaven by the Saints and Angels. O here he cometh short in all the works and services he desires to do, he cannot do the thousandth part of that which he desires to do, and therefore desires death, that he may lift up the name of God fully in Heaven, that he may there be swallowed up in the present enjoyment of God and Christ, that he may be infinitely enlarged to sing Hallelujahs unto God to all Eternity; thus to desire death is lawful. But,

5. Fifthly and lastly, to say no more, This desire of death must be with an indifferency to the Will of God: though it be for never such good ends, though a man desires death for life's sake, though he desire death that he may sin no more, that he may be with Christ, that he may lift up the name of God fully in Heaven; yet if it be not with an indifferency to the Will of God, it is not a holy and lawful desire: and therefore the Apostle in the Text, refers himself to the Will of God, I am in a strait, I know not what to do: it is best for me to die, I am in a strait, I will not determine: though I shall be deprived of my gain, and be a loser by it, yet it is no great matter, if God may gain anything by my life, if his Church may gain anything, if any poor soul may gain anything, if God hath any further work for me, I am content to live, I know not what to choose, says he, but I refer myself to God, this makes the desires of death lawful. When a man hath considered all, and yet notwithstanding he knows death shall be gain to him, yet he refers himself still to the Will of God. If thou hast any service which may be for the good of thy people, and for the advancement of thy name, if thou hast any message, though it is hard to keep from home, if the Lord will have me do any service for him, why, I am willing. When the desires of death are thus referred to the Will of God, submitting to his Will, whether by life or death; thus are the desires of death holy and lawful. Thus have I shown you when desires of death are sinful, and when lawful. The Application of the Point is yet behind.

SERMON VIII.

PHILIP. 1. 21. For to me to live is Christ, and to die is gain.

THE Subject in hand is Gain, and therefore I hope you that are wise Merchants will not be weary of it: the whole World is for gain; every man says, Who will show us any good? I have shown you a great deal of gain that is by death, for those that have interest in Christ: and O that the Lord would make your hearts desirous to know how you shall get this gain, how you may so live as that the great venture you make of death may be gain unto you. But I shall prosecute that in its time. You may remember the last day we spent most of the time in Answering a Question.

Whether it be lawful to desire death or no? I told you there is a good desire, and there is a sinful desire of death, and I shown you the differences. But I shall wave repetition, and come to the Application of the Point.

Use 1. It lets us see what a fancy or conceit that is that men have taken up, That the soul hath no existence without the body, but that it ceases to be, whenas the body is laid in the dust: there is such a conceit that the soul sleeps, or that it ceases to be until the day of Resurrection, that God should give life again to the body.

This Text doth confute that opinion; though it may be matter of temptation, even to God's own people: if it were so, then it should not be gain to die, if the soul cease to be, when separated from the body, it should not be gain to die. I might bring many places to confute this: what think you of that in Luk. 23. 43. where Christ says unto the good Thief, This day shalt thou be with me in Paradise; surely Christ speaks not of the body, it could not be understood of the Grave that his body should rest in, for to be with Christ in Paradise implies more: Paradise was a place of pleasure, it was a place in which Adam did enjoy the presence of God: therefore certainly the soul hath existence when separated from the body, the souls of the righteous are where they do enjoy the presence of God. Again, that in Rev. 6. 9, 10. where it is said of them that are under the Altar, they cried out, How long Lord, holy and true, will it be, e're thou avenge our blood on them that dwell on the Earth? Then the soul hath existence when it is out of the body, for these souls cried, How long Lord? It is true, there are divers operations of the soul which do cease, which do depend upon the operation of the body; but there are many operations in the soul which the soul doth most excellently exercise, notwithstanding its separation from the body: the Apostle Paul was in a holy, ecstasie as out of the body, and when he was in the body it's said, His soul saw such things as were unutterable, not to be seen nor heard. But I shall not need to go any further to strengthen you against this temptation; the Apostle in this Chapter saith, I am in a strait between two, having a desire to depart, and to be with Christ, which is far better. Where you may see, first, That the soul when it is separated from the body, it doth not cease to be, for it is only departed: I desire to depart, an active expression; some Translate it, to flinch, or move, to remove from one house to another; or to be loosed, or dissolved, so some Translate it: I desire to be set free from this my prison; my soul is in prison while I am in the body, now I desire to depart from this house, to be fetched from this house, to depart from, this Prison, and to be with Christ, to depart and to be with Christ: so then there is a being with Christ in a state of dissolution, for the Apostle doth desire to be dissolved for this very end, that when he was dissolved, he might be with Christ; there is a being with Christ, there is an enjoyment of Christ in a state of dissolution. Nay, he saith, It is far better: he knew that he should enjoy more of Christ when he was gone, he should have more intimate communion with the Lord Jesus in a state of separation, than when he was in the body, that condition was far better; now I say, if the soul do sleep, if it ceases to be, or to act or to enjoy Christ, when it is separated from the body till the day of Resurrection; why, then he could not have said, it is far better to die, and to be with Christ. But it may be said, it is better to die, because death frees from the miseries of life, and so the Apostle might say, It is better to die, because death frees from the miseries of life, because there is a rest and a cessation from the present troubles and turmoils in the world. If there had been nothing else, he could not have said, It is better to die; for I say, to live, to live the most afflicted life, and the most troublesome life in the world is better than to die, and to cease to be, if there be not an enjoyment of life after that departure. Yea, it had been better for the Apostle to have lived, if there had been no existence of the soul, for then all knowledge of God and of Christ cease, and no actings for God, no lifting up of the name of God, it had been better for him to have lived to have been serviceable to God in his generation, to have lived to have known Christ, for all knowledge of God, upon that supposition, is to be lost and gone; to rest thus, his gain is no better than the beasts gain, the very beasts gain rest to the flesh: If there had been no more gain by death, he could not have said, It had been better to die than to live; and to live, it had been far better than to die and rest, if there had not been a further enjoyment of God in Christ, in that estate of separation and dissolution. And therefore I beseech you that you would hold this fast, that you may be strengthened against this temptation, that there is no enjoyment of God and Christ in a state of separation, when the soul is loosened from the body: though it is true, the full enjoyment, the full revelation of heaven is not until the Resurrection, when soul and body shall both enjoy the glory of heaven. But so much for the first Use.

Use 2. Secondly, If death be gain where Christ is life: then this may comfort you in the loss of your friends, you should not mourn inordinately for the loss of your friends, when you have hopes of their death. It is true, it is not only lawful, but it is a duty to mourn. I shall show you how far it is lawful to mourn in the loss of friends.

1. First of all, As seeing that the hand of God is gone out against you: If the Lord comes and makes any breach in a Family, and the hand of God is gone out against you, the Lord would that men should lay it to heart, in Heb. 12. 5. My son despise not the chastening of the Lord, neither faint when thou art rebuked: there are two great extremes, either to despise the chastening of the Lord, or else to faint under it; the Lord would that we should lay his hand to heart when it is upon us; to consider what is the voice of the Rod, what is the message that is in its mouth, and what it is that the Lord speaks by such and such an affliction. Again,

2. Secondly, Our mourning ought to be either more or less according as those that we part with are more or less useful and serviceable in their Generation; when God plucks away those that are Pillars, those that should stand in the gap, those that should prevent Judgments, that should hold his hand from striking a Nation; in such a case the Lord allows, nay, he calls for a great deal of sorrow: and it is made a sign of a hardhearted people, and a people that are fit for destruction, and nigh to ruin, when the Lord shall take away such Instruments, and it is not laid to heart, in Isa. 57. 1. The righteous perish, saith he, no man lay it to heart, none considereth that they are taken away from the evil to come; It is a sign that there was evil a coming to that people, when the righteous are taken away, and they do not lay it to heart. But I say, when that we have no hopes in the death of Friends, when we see the hand of the Lord is gone out to cut off men in sin, when God shall meet them in a way of rebellion, I confess there is more cause of raking up a sad lamentation. You know what was David's carriage in this case, when God smote his son Absalom, he was smitten in his rebellion, he died in his sin, and therefore David takes up a sad lamentation, O Absalom, my son, my son, would God I had died for thee; but in another case, in the case of another Child, when his Child died, in whose death he had hopes, David did not mourn with bitterness then, he rather was comforted: seeing it is the Will of God, I shall go to him, says he, he shall not return to me. Thus you see how far it is lawful to mourn, whenas God takes away a friend by death; but when we have hopes in their death, that death is gain unto them, this should exceedingly compose and calm and quiet our spirits.

Object. But you will say, Your loss is great, your loss is exceeding great, such a dear Husband, such a loving Wife, such a beloved Child, there's none know how great my loss is, and therefore do not condemn me in my mourning.

Answ. I Answer, How dear so ever thy friend, and how great so ever thy loss be, if thou hast interest in Christ, thy loss cannot undo thee; if the Lord be thy portion, thy loss cannot undo thee: Baruch was reprov'd because he took up so sad a lamentation in Isa. 45. 3. Woe is me, for the Lord hath added grief to my sorrow, I fainted in my sighing, and I find no rest: woe is me, &c. he had interest in God, and therefore he did not well so to complain, because his loss could not undo him; yea, thy loss is not so great but God can make it up in himself, and if God give thee more of himself, though less of the creature, thou shalt have no cause to complain.

3. Thirdly, But again, Consider, and look upon not only thy loss, but look upon the gain of thy friend: if thou hast hopes in his death, look upon his gain, and let that quiet thy spirit; why, he gains rest, he is laid down to sleep, will you mourn when your friends lie down in their beds to sleep? The righteous when death comes, it lays them upon their beds to sleep; if thy friend gain rest, why then shouldst thou disquiet thyself by inordinate mourning? He gains peace and joy: the righteous enter into peace, and therefore why shouldst thou so mourn, as to disturb thy peace, or to quench and damp the joy of the Lord in thee? Why, it is thy friend that dies in the Lord, it is the time of his advancement, he is advanced, it is his Marriage-day, or a day of Coronation, and therefore there is no cause of inordinate mourning. And you that are Parents, that love your Children never so dearly, you will be willing to part with them for their preferment, though you marry them, when it may be you shall enjoy little of them, when they shall go hundreds of Miles from you, you shall enjoy little of them; But you will say, it is to a man that hath a great Estate, and why should I hinder them? Now are you willing to part with your Children for preferment when you see they may enjoy a little of earth, and shall you be unwilling to part with them, when they may enjoy the fullness of Heaven? Will you trust a man, a creature with them, and will not you trust the Lord with them, who hath more right to them than you, and hath more bowels towards them, and more power to do them good, infinitely more than you? Why, you are willing to part with your friends for their safety; if dangers are coming, you are content that your friends should be hidden in places of safety, and shall you mourn, if the Lord shall take your friends to hide them? for if God do take away the righteous, it is but to hide them, he will hide them from the evils to come, he will take them and hold them in the Grave, that they shall not see the evil that is coming, he will hide them till all calamities be past and gone, and they shall then come again in the time of the Resurrection. If you love me, says Christ, you would rejoice because I say I go to the Father: Do you love your friends, and will you mourn inordinately because they go to their Father, when they go to lie in the bosom of their Father?

But you will say, Did not Christ weep when Lazarus was dead? Christ wept and mourned. It is lawful to mourn, I told you before, and how far you may mourn; But it is conceived, our Lord did no mourn nor weep so much because Lazarus was dead as because Lazarus was to live again; our friend Lazarus sleepeth: Christ did not weep because of that, Christ knew what he intended to do, that Lazarus should be raised again, therefore he did not weep for the loss of Lazarus, but rather he wept that Lazarus was coming into a troublesome World, for he knew that his friend Lazarus should be a loser by it, though Lazarus was content that Christ might be glorified to come again; even as Christ was content to leave the glory of Heaven to do his Father service. Christ knew Lazarus should be a loser, and therefore he was very loath to awake him, to stir him; his friend was now lain down to sleep, and shall he awake him before the morning? Therefore was it that Christ wept. Still, I say, retain this as a ground of Consolation, in the parting with your friends, when ever you have hopes in their death, know that it is a time of their advancement, and therefore whilst you have your friends; do all the good to them you can, and get all the good from them you can, so that that neglect of yours may not be a burden to you, and be a gaul to you in the loss of friends, but when God shall call for them, when you have hopes in their death, do not grieve inordinately, but know and rest in this, and rejoice in it that it is their gain, and their greatest advantage. So much for the second Use.

Use 3. Let this stir up everyone to be inquisitive, how death shall be made gain to them; I say, let everyone seek after this, it is a point of as great concernment as you have met with, and therefore you should spend many thoughts upon it; how shall you know, and how shall you get assurance of this, That when death comes it shall be gain unto you? Let me stir you up to seek after this, to get the knowledge and assurance of it. Why Consider,

1. First of all, That you cannot withstand the stroke of death, you had need make hast in this work, I say, you cannot out-stand the stroke of death when it comes; the stroke is unavoidable. Poor man! he is crush'd before the very Moth, there is a decree, and an appointment of God concerning it, and therefore it cannot be withstood. O how little do men exercise themselves in the thoughts of this? That man doth not only die, because he is made of dust, and so must return to dust, all creatures must be dissolved into their principle; but he dies by his Statute Law, he dies by the decree and appointment of God, which was inflicted by way of punishment, and this still makes it more certain: In the day thou eatest thereof, thou shalt die the death, which was appointed for all men once to die; there is no man can redeem his soul from going down to the Grave; what man is it that lives and shall not see death? It is everyone of your conditions, every fool that is here: and therefore what need of looking out to get assurance that death shall be gain!

2. Secondly, Nay let me tell you further, that you may make the more hast in this work, This time is like to be a time of great Mortality, Judgments will sweep away many, Plagues shall be poured out upon the World, till the World be reconciled to God and his Truth; and now in this latter time, there shall be greater opposition than ever, and so greater Plagues than ever; now that Christ is making way for his Kingdom, he will bear down thousands before him. Look to yourselves, you had need get assurance that death shall be gain: If his wrath be kindled but a little: blessed are they that trust in him; blessed are they that know death is gain; I tell you Christ shall go forth in a great deal of wrath now to smite and bring down his enemies to make his way to his Kingdom; and certainly the appearances of Jesus Christ shall be exceeding glorious, and terrible to the World; in Rev. 6. 16, 17. see how terrible Christ's coming shall be, which certainly is at hand! even the Kings and Counselors, and the great men in the World shall cry; when the appearances of the wrath of God do come even amongst the Saints, what flinching shall there be of great men, to be hid from the wrath of the Lamb? Still this calls upon us to get assurance that death shall be gain. Nay, let me tell you, that many of God's own people may be born down in the brunt, for Anti-Christ will cost something in his fall; as he cost a great deal in his rise, so he falls by violence, and by the sword, and it is possible his fall may crush many of God's own people.

Nay, let me propound this to your Consideration, That it is the greatest adventure that ever soul can make, this of death; and let that be another spur to you where death shall be gain: you do not venture your Estate, but you venture your souls, and a greater venture cannot be made; it is the venture of the soul, and it is a venture made for Eternity; that, that can be but once done, had need be well done: It is appointed for all men once to die, and but once, they cannot die it over again, they had need learn to die well when death comes, that you that are Believers may trust God in the venture, you may shut your eyes and follow God, as Abraham did, when as God led him forth from his Kindred, from his Fathers house, he follows God no man knows whither: and so must you do when death comes, shut your eyes, and believe, and venture, and follow God whither he will lead you, though from your Kindred, and from your Fathers house to a Land you know not: and therefore before death comes, your eyes had need be opened. Look about you and consider seriously of the venture that you make of death, and how it is that you shall be able to go through. What is it that shall carry you through this venture? you had need take a great deal of pains in searching after this, you had need learn to get assurance that death shall be gain, how else shall you be carried through this venture?

And let me tell you, It is strange to consider that rational men that have rational souls, should be no more moved in such a point as this is; when a man shall know that it is appointed for him to die, and that in death he doth make an adventure, the greatest venture that he can make, he ventures for Eternity, the greatest venture that ever was, and yet whilst it is high time, that he doth make no more inquisition after the knowledge of this one thing, that death might be his gain. And let me speak a word to you who are in Christ, that I may press it upon you. Labor to get the knowledge of this, that death may be your gain; you that do walk in the dark, and at uncertainties concerning this, you that fear the Lord and have given up your names to him, and now walk in the dark, and at uncertainties, and know not whether death shall be your gain; No, my Brethren, this is a sad condition, next to the condition of the unregenerate, this is the saddest; O that the Lord would cause you to wait upon him till he clear up this truth to you; why, how mightily are your spirits disenabled! the want of the knowledge of this, that death shall be gain, it keeps you in bonds; in Heb. 2. 14. Who through fear of death, were all their life-time subject to bondage: you are kept all your life-long in bondage, through the fear of death, because you know not whether it will be your gain or no; O it is a sad condition that God's own people should be all their life-long subject to bondage. Nay, if you have not this knowledge, that death shall be made gain, your spirits will be weak and feeble, it will weaken your hands and knees, and make you unable to do for God; the want of this knowledge will make a Christian to walk basely and cowardly, it will make him servile, and make him slavish in what he doth for God, and make him fearful to stand for God, and to hold up the name of God in evil times, and in suffering times, it will make a man be base, and betray his trust, the want of this knowledge will make a Christian betray his trust, it will make him deny Christ and his truth many times, as Peter did, when he was pressed with this fear.

And therefore to say no more, As you desire to have your spirits raised mightily for God, and for the service of your Generation; would you do great things for God, (and truly God hath great things to do for his people, even in these last and latter days, even such things as eyes have not seen, nor ears heard, God will work in these latter days, and his people shall be his Instruments.) What shall raise up your spirits, make them noble and suitable to the great work and enterprises that God hath now in hand? If anything in the World will do it, it is this, the knowledge and assurance that death cannot hurt you, when it comes nigh: death shall be an advantage to you, you shall find gain in death, and whatsoever you shall lose, you shall find it infinitely made up in God; the knowledge of this that death shall be gain, it heightens your spirits, and raises up your spirits in the great things of God, in the service of your Generation. But you will say, How shall we come by this knowledge, by the assurance of this, that death shall be gain? It is a great Question which will take up much time, therefore I shall not enter into it. So much for this time.

SERMON IX.

PHILIP. 1. 21. For to me to live is Christ, and to die is gain.

Where Christ is life to any soul, there death is gain; That's the Proposition in hand. I have entered the Application, and drew several conclusions the last day by way of Instruction.

But I shall spend the remainder of my time in Answer to this Question.

Quest. But you will say, How shall we come by this knowledge, the assurance of this, that death shall be gain?

Answ. That you would all labor to get assurance that death shall be gain to you. It is a point that concerns every soul in the Congregation, and therefore it calls for your attention; get assurance that death shall be gain to you. And let me speak,

1. First, To such as have not interest in Christ, but are in the gall of bitterness, and in the bonds of iniquity, under the power of sin and Satan, and so necessarily under bondage and fear of Death.

You had need look about you betimes, there is a time a coming when you must make such a venture as you never made in all your lives; you Ship all that you have, and all that you can carry with you for another world: when death comes, there is such a venture as never was made in respect of the distance of place, you do not venture to the Indies, but you venture to another world, a world which we had known nothing of, if the Lord had not pleased to give us a glimpse of it in his Word, for else we should have known nothing of it; you venture more than all your Estates: for, my friends, you venture your souls; the soul that is more worth than all you have in the World, if you were Masters of the whole world: What! will a man venture for the gain of the World, to lose his own soul? Your loss is irrecoverable, there is no hopes of any future trading, for you venture once for all, so it is forever.

And herefore, I beseech you, Consider what need you have of looking to this venture, and to get assurance that it shall be made a gainful venture to you.

But you will say, What directions will you give us, that we may have assurance of gain in this venture? I shall speak but one word to you.

Seek after an interest in Christ, get Christ to be your life, and then you shall be assured that death shall be gain: I will not give you any other direction, I will not set you any other way, it will but lead you about; and alas, poor souls, you had not need be led about, you know not how soon the Wind and Tide may serve, and you may set Sail for Eternity. And therefore again, I say, seek after an interest in Christ, get him to be your life: If death shall find you whilst you live to the World, and live in yourselves, whilst you live upon your works, upon your righteousness, upon your riches, upon the creature; I say, if death shall find you before Christ be your life, it is not possible that it should be gain: know that there is none can give you assurance but only Christ, there is none can assure the commodity that you Ship for Eternity, but only Christ, he is the Master of that Insuring Office, and there is none can assure the soul but only he; I tell you, the venture that you make, is more worth than all the world, it would break the whole World to make good the loss of the soul, and yet not able to effect it; Christ sits in the Insuring Office, and he only can give you assurance that death shall be gain, and therefore go and wait upon the Lord for the promise of Christ: Christ is made over to poor sinners in the promise of free grace, and when Christ is given, all other promises are given with him, and if Christ be given with them, then this promise is true, that death shall be made gain to you: go and wait at the footstool of grace, and say, Lord, give out one word, one promise, and that shall be my assurance for my venture for Eternity; do not rest till you get Christ into the Ship, till you get Christ into the venture to venture with you; when Christ comes once into the soul, he will be a good Pilot, he will carry you through all straits and difficulties, he will save you in the midst of all storms you shall meet with in your passage to Eternity, he will rebuke the wind and the waves, though the Ship were ready to be overwhelmed: he can stop every leak, he will throw out everything that is burdensome unto the Ship; then death lightens, and out goes sin, and out goes self; Micah 7. 19. And thou wilt cast all their iniquities into the depth of the Sea. Well then, go to the Lord and say, O Lord, the time is a coming when I must make a venture; I must venture my soul, I must venture for eternity and to another world, and I would fain have my Goods insured before hazard comes, before I shoot the Gulf; give me a word of promise from thyself, and I shall rest upon it, if thou wilt come into the Ship, if thou wilt be my Pilot, I know then that all shall be safe, and I shall not only meet with safety, but I shall make the most gainful voyage that ever was made; I say, get Christ to be your life, O rest not till Christ have Insured you that all shall be safe: this is the only way to make death gain. But,

2. Secondly, I shall speak to such as have interest in Christ, and yet do walk in the dark, and still are as if they walked in the region and shadow of death; they have chosen the Lord for their portion, and they have cleaved to him, and yet are not able to say that death will be gain to them. I beseech you labor to get your hearts fortified, and your souls strengthened against the fears of death, O how unuseful will you be until that be done? What bondage are your spirits in through fear of death till that be done? How low are your spirits, how unsuitable unto God's glorious dispensations until that be done? Therefore look unto the Lord this day to strengthen yourselves against the fears of death. What shall strengthen you, you will say, how shall our spirits be fortified against these carnal sinful fears of death?

1. First of all, Labor to understand clearly what is the nature of the Covenant of Grace; I say, labor to understand clearly the nature of the Covenant of Grace, what that Covenant is by which now God saves his Children, and brings all his Sons unto glory: The ignorance of this keeps Christians in bondage through fear of death; know therefore, that the way of salvation now, it is by a Covenant of free Grace, God engages for all, and it is even of free promise, I will pardon, and I will save, and I will sanctify, I will give salvation, and I will give faith to apprehend that salvation; Ephes. 2. 8. By Grace are ye saved, through faith, and that not of yourselves, it is the gift of God; there is an abundance of the Covenant of Grace in these words, You are saved by grace, through Faith; Ay, But that Faith is not of yourselves, but it is the gift of God; know that all is given out freely unto poor creatures under the Gospel; and that all that God requires to be done, it is not to make any purchase of Love, or Grace, or Heaven, there is no sacrifice or oblation to be offered anymore: Christ hath offered himself a sacrifice once for all, and there needs no more oblation, no more sin-offering, but that all the sacrifices of the Saints now under the Gospel, are sacrifices of thanksgiving only; it is only to render unto the Lord for what he hath done, for what he hath given out freely by Jesus Ch••••. Brethren, labor to know the freeness of God's Covenant in this and the like particular, it will be an excellent preparatory to thee to die well, and to fortify thyself against deaths approaches, viz. the clear understanding of this Covenant; it is said in Heb. 2. 15. That when Christ came, he delivered them who through fear of death, were all their life-time subject to bondage; In the Gospel men are delivered from the fear of death, because that the Gospel doth clearly unfold the Covenant of grace. Before the coming of Christ they were trained up in a more legal way, they did not see the clearness of the Covenant until Christ came, and therefore till Christ came they were in bondage through fear of death; but when the Gospel was once given out, and where that comes, it doth unfold God's Covenant, the Covenant of his Grace in the freeness of it, which doth mightily fortify and strengthen the hearts of his people against fears of death; and truly, so long as any of God's people do act legally in their spirits, I say, though they be under a Covenant of Grace, yet if they act legally in their services, not clearly understanding the Covenant they are under, it is not possible that they should meet with perfect peace, or be strengthened to this venture of death with freedom of soul without abundance of fear: Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace whose mind is stayed on thee, Isai 6. 3. because he trusteth in thee; when the soul trusts only in God, when it rests only in the Word of God as a foundation of the Covenant of Grace, then it rests in peace; but when the soul doth act legally, and thinks he shall purchase something by his actings, O how unquiet and legal will those services be to him? When he works for life, how will he know he hath wrought enough? If he stays himself on his own righteousness, and not on the righteousness of Christ, there will be misgivings of heart, and no perfect peace; Ay, but is this righteousness complete? Have I done enough? But are not my works defiled? Is not my righteousness spotted? or is it not short? or is it not scant? doth it not want something of length and breadth? will it wholly cover my nakedness? Thus the soul doth question with itself when it is looking after the Covenant of Grace, and thus the soul is carried out to act in the Covenant, and to look upon all as purchased by Christ, there is the mighty foundation laid, free grace and the righteousness of Jesus Christ; the soul may even venture upon it when it walks through the Valley of the shadow of death; that is the first Direction. I beseech you labor to understand the nature of the Covenant of Grace by which he brings his people to glory. But again, Direct. 2. Secondly, As you desire your hearts should be fitted against the fears of death, look up to the Lord to enable you to live by Faith; whilst you look up, learn to live by Faith; to live by Faith is the way to die in Faith, and the more Faith the less fear, the less carnal fear: and therefore, O look up unto the Lord to help you to live by Faith, to exercise Faith in every condition; it is said, Thou shalt justly live by Faith, in Habak. 2. 4. Ay, in sorrows, in afflictions, in distresses, in the darkest condition he shall live by Faith; he shall exercise Faith in the promise, and live above the darkness of his condition, through the love of God in Christ, in him he shall thus live by Faith: Go to Christ therefore to strengthen your Faith, you that are weak in Faith go, and say as the Disciples did, Lord increase our Faith, for it is he only that can draw forth the soul to acting of Faith, Psal. 119. 49. Remember thy Word unto thy servant, upon which thou hast caused me to hope; The Lord caused his soul to trust in his promise: Labor to exercise Faith, Faith in every condition; there is some promise that God hath suited for his people in all conditions, and he expects that they should live by Faith upon those promises; the more that you live by Faith in the promise whilst you live, the more able shall you be to look death in the face without terror; exercise Faith every day on the promise, and Faith will grow so strong as you shall be able to say with David, I will not fear, though I walk through the Valley of the shadow of death, for thou art with me. That's a Second Direction.

Direct. 3. Thirdly, That your hearts may be strengthened against the fears of death, look up to Christ to strengthen you whilst you are in the World; to die to the World, to Sin, and to Self; remember that you are Pilgrims here on earth, O entertain such thoughts continually: I am a stranger on earth, I am upon my travel, in my journey, this is not my home, I must ere long depart this World, I came not here to rest, is not this the bridge to Eternity? it is a bridge to pass over, and shall I build upon this bridge? shall I think to dwell here? shall my affections take up here? No Lord, I am a Pilgrim and a Stranger as all my forefathers: I am crucified to the World, and the World crucified to me; Paul could look death in the face beyond <math>\langle \diamond \rangle I am crucified to the World, and the World to me; labor to die to sin and to self, be willing to cast out self, be willing that the Lord alone should be exalted: he that hath made it his work to lay self aside in all his ways and actions, he will be very willing to lay himself aside, if it shall be for the honor of the Lord Jesus Christ; and when he conflicts with sin, he will rejoice at the reproaches of death, that that enemy that hath done him so much injury shall be fully conquered. That's a Third Direction.

*Direct. 4. Fourthly, Desire the Lord to teach you what is the service of your Generation, and to help you to perform it; desire that the Lord would help you to know what is the work of your Generation, and to enable you to perform it; this will fortify the soul against the fears of death: It is very sad to a servant when his Candle goes out before his work be done, he cannot lie down with comfort, his Master hath given him a piece of work, and he hath wholly neglected it whilst his light was given, and what comfort can he have in his lying down; our Lord Jesus Christ hath finished the work his Father gave into his hand, and then he was willing to be gone; in John 17. 4, 5. I have glorified thee on the earth, I have finished the work which thou gavest me to do, and now, O Father, glorify thou me with thine own self, with the glory which I had with thee before the World was. And so it is said of David, After he had served his Generation according to the Will of God, he fell asleep; death was welcome to him, as sleep is to a weary man; when his work was done he lay down with comfort, there is nothing to trouble him, his work is done: after he had served his Generation he fell asleep. There is some work God hath appointed to everyone of us, O desire the Lord to teach you to know what that work is he hath put into your hand, and sent you into the world for, O do that work with all your might, that when death comes it may be welcome, as welcome to you as sleep is to a weary man. But again,*

*Direct. 5. Fifthly, To fortify your hearts against the fear of death whilst you live, Live much upon Christ, make Jesus Christ your life continually, where Christ is life there death is gain; be looking up to Jesus Christ to be a principle of life to you, and to act you continually, live upon him for Justification, live upon him for Sanctification, live upon him for all your comforts, make much use of Jesus Christ continually; the soul that hath lived upon Christ, that hath made him the beginning of all, and made him the end of all (for then is Christ their life) it will be exceedingly strengthened against the fears of death: Let him be the beginning of all your works and actions, take nothing in hand without the strength of Christ, look for the strength of Christ to act you, to breath in you, and to fill your sails in your motion Godward and Heavenward, and let Christ be the end of all that you do; I say, propound Christ as your end, do what you do as unto Christ, whatsoever you do in your services to men, do it as unto the Lord, do your common work as unto the Lord, let Christ be the end, propound him as the end of all that you undertake; I tell you, if Christ be not the end of a man's works, all his works are lost; Christ speaks of some that shall come and say, Lord, Lord, have not we prophesied in thy Name, and in thy name we have cast out Devils; and yet in the very next words Christ says unto them, Depart from me you workers of Iniquity: here is a strange Epithet, you workers of Iniquity; they did abundance of good, Prophesied <...> Name, and cast out Devils, &c. and yet he call <...> workers of Iniquity: if they be not done for C... to Christ, Christ will interpret them work <◇> Iniquity. Make Christ your life, and live upon him, and that will fit you to look death in the face without fear.*

Direct. 6. Sixthly, Converse with Death continually; that is another Direction that I desire the Lord might set it upon our spirits: converse with death continually, behold death at a distance, even all your lifelong; see death both in the death of Christ, and in your own death. Here you may converse with death:

1. First, In the death of Christ, and then with your death, which is approaching: Christians, Behold your own death in the death of Christ, look upon a dying and a bleeding Savior, behold him as dead, and laid in the Grave, and what was the end of all this, but that through death he might destroy him that had the power of death, and deliver his poor people from fear of death? Behold Christ as a mighty Conqueror by Faith every day, and see death conquered: and know that when Christ conquered, he conquered as a common person, he conquered death not only for himself but for his people; O Christians, if you were wise to make improvement of the death of Christ, how might your spirits be strengthened against fears of death? The death of Christ would kill all the fears of death in you; I say, if you made improvement of the death of Christ, you may go and bury the fears of death in the Grave of Christ, for he hath swallowed up death: make it your work to converse with death in the death of Christ.

And again, Converse with your own death which is approaching: O, how is this neglected? how seldom do men look for a dying hour, or a departure? how loath are men to entertain thoughts of death? I have read of an Emperor that gave a Command That no man should name Death in his Palace, he was afraid of death that he gave a Command upon pain of death not to hear death named; what advantage do men gain by this? This strengthens the enemy, and weakens their own hearts and spirits, because they are afraid to think of death before death comes: this doth exceedingly weaken a man against the time of his coming. I have heard of a Serpent that is called a Cockatrice, that if it sees a man, it kills him, but if he sees it, it doth him no harm: why, it is true, in this sense we are upon, If death comes upon a man it kills him, but when the soul hath seen death, and hath digested and seen death at the worst that it can do, and hath lived in a dying condition, death when it comes is able to do no harm; and therefore that's a sixth Direction; I desire the Lord would teach us to converse with death, and to die daily, with the Apostle.

Direct. 7. Seventhly, I desire that you would labor that your hearts may be thoroughly rooted and established in the promises; this will fortify you against the fears of death; upon the promises, and upon that free grace, and that infinite righteousness that is held forth unto you in the Gospel. Many men content themselves with common thoughts and ordinary notions of Christ and the Gospel, and way of Salvation in his free grace, and of the power of Christ in saving of poor creatures; but this is like the stony ground, they are not persuaded of the truth of it, and so settled. And therefore how should this be fortifying against the fears of death? This cannot bear them up in the time of death. Go to the Lord, desire him that he would realize things to you, and that he would make real and deep impressions by his promise upon your souls, that so you may be supported and carried out in the midst of all fears and danger.

⟨◇⟩ Eighthly, Here is one more Direction, which will give you, which may help to strengthen your spirits against the fears of death, and that is, Whilst you live, labor to live in constant communion with God; desire that the Lord would uphold your spirits in constant communion and fellowship with himself, and with his son Jesus Christ: Labor to walk with God as Enoch did, He walked with God and was translated; walk with God in your Generation, and labor to enjoy communion with God in all Ordinances, be thoroughly acquainted with God, with the goings of God in your spirits, with the counsels of God, with the promises of God, that the Word may be your Counselor and your guide, and your comforter, seek acquaintance with God: What is it that makes men afraid to die? It is because they are not acquainted with God; a man fears in going into a strange place and strange company that he knows not, it makes him fearful: O, if men were acquainted with God, if they did walk with God whilst they lived, and were acquainted with God in life, it would take away the fears of death. And truly, Brethren, you had need get extraordinary acquaintance with God before you leave your Country and Fathers house, and follow him to a place you know not; you had need be well acquainted to follow God, and in making such a venture as you have heard of: therefore make all improvement that may be to get more acquaintance with God under the Gospel: God's people are more generally freed from the fears of death, because they have more acquaintance with God; We are come, says the Apostle, Heb. 12. 23. we are not only come to Jesus Christ the Mediator of the Covenant, but we are come to God the Judge of all: Now under the ⟨◇⟩ there is the way for Christians to come with ⟨◇⟩ and boldness to God, even to God the Judge ⟨◇⟩ to have a sweet familiarity and acquaintance w•••• God, even that Judge who judgeth all; and that soul that hath been acquainted with God, will not fear to go to God when God calls. There was a gracious man I have heard of, when he came to die, says he, I shall change my place, but not my company; he had walked with God all his life, God was his companion, he had walked with God in all his ways, and had done his work, though he doth change his place, having walked with God on earth, he should now walk with God in Heaven: Now, O that we might thus walk with God, and not be afraid to walk with God, my Friend, my Father, my Companion. Thus much for Direction, the Lord sanctify them to you I shall conclude these Words and this Text with one word more.

I beseech you, you that have interest in Christ, that have Christ for life, and death for gain,

1. First of all, That you would see how you are beholding to Jesus Christ for this, that ever the Lord should make death to be gain. What a loss is there in that? What is there more dreadful than death? That the Lord Christ should make this to be gain to his people! O stand and wonder: death is not gain in itself, it is the greatest loss in the World; Ay, but this man shall comfort us concerning the toil of our hands: this man comforts, this Lord Jesus comforts concerning death as he makes it to be gain; that which separates soul from body, which might have separated soul from God to Eternity, shall not only separate soul from body, but set it nearer unto God and Christ, and carries he soul into sweet enjoyment of himself, it leaves the body in the Grave to refine it, and God will at the last day ⟨◇⟩ it up unto Glory. And therefore, I beseech • ⟨◇⟩ •hat you would endeavor that your lives ma• ⟨◇⟩ to Christ; Hath he made death gain to yo• ⟨◇⟩ he make it the most gainful venture that ever you made? How ought you to desire, by all means, that your lives may be gain to Christ? Be you willing to suffer anything for him, for his sake: you may well do it, he hath made death to be gain to you; you may well labor, there is a Rest for you: Be you willing to do and suffer for Christ. Nay, you should lay out your lives for Christ, O put them off at the best advantage, to die for Christ is the best advantage, O, put off life for the best gain for Christ: you may well do it, for he hath made death exceeding gainful and advantageous to you. To conclude all with a word of consolation: You that have interest in Christ, is he your life?

What strong Consolation doth this minister unto you? O, blessed are the people that are in such a case; Christ to be gain, Christ to be advantage in life and death? There is a blessed condition, why, all you that have interest in Christ, what need you fear death? I say, what need you fear death? It cannot hurt you, it is an enemy disarmed, the sting is taken out: you may take a Wasp in your hand and put it into your bosom when the sting is out; the sting of death is out, and it cannot separate you from the love of your Father.

Nay, it will carry you unto nearer embraces of God and Christ; I am persuaded, says the Apostle, that neither life nor death, can be able to separate from the love of God in Christ; Death cannot separate from God's Covenant, though it may separate from body and soul, though the body lies in the Grave, yet the Covenant of Grace holds: I $\langle \diamond \rangle$ God of Abraham, Isaac and of Jacob; the $\langle \diamond \rangle$ ••••nt of God holds; now the Lord takes care of $\langle \diamond \rangle$ ••••ones of the Saints in the Grave, they shall $\langle \diamond \rangle$ *by virtue of this Covenant. O what! do not you fear death? you may make a bold venture on death, you that have Christ for your life, I say, you may make a bold venture, you may shoot the Gulf of Eternity, and venture all upon him, for he is your life, and he will not fail you, you have his example, and he is gone before you, he would fortify your hearts, he hath gone before you, he was the Captain of your Salvation, and he first broke the Ranks; he was partaker of flesh and blood with us that he might suffer death, and so that he might destroy death, and therefore Christ hath given you his Example; he intended that you should see the worst that death can do, and it can do you no more hurt than it did him, you that have interest in Christ it can do you no more hurt than it did him; he is in the Ship with you, he is Partner with you in the venture, and if you lose, he shall be the greatest loser: Christ is Partner with you in the venture; and if you shall lose in this venture, Christ had as good never have risen again, it is all one whether he suffers in his person or in his members, if they should miscarry in this great venture of death, Christ had as good never to have risen again, it is all one; O, what hath the Lord done for you, thus to fortify your souls, and to strengthen you by his own venture in that Partnership that Christ hath undertaken with you, that this may spur you on? Consider it well, is not this a blessed privilege? O that I might die the death of the righteous, saith Balaam; no wonder he desired it; what a gain does the righteous man get in his $\langle \diamond \rangle$ at the Lord would persuade you to live the $\langle \diamond \rangle$ righteous, to see the life of Christ, and $\langle \diamond \rangle$ Faith of the Son of God: whilst you liv•••••ath engaged that you should live the life of $\langle \diamond \rangle$ *•••teous; but if Christ be not your life, you will never partake of the life of the righteous; for where Christ is not life, death cannot be gain.

But you will say, Do not God's own people fear death, even as well as others? Why, we see they are subject to fears; where is the difference betwixt their death and others? they may have fears of death as well as other men.

I Answer, It is true, even the righteous man may fear; nay, not only the fear of nature, but his fear may be sometime inordinate and sinful; Ay, but in his fear he runs to the promise, even as Jacob did when he was greatly distressed when he came to his brother, Lord, says he, I fear my Brother, but he runs to the Promise, but Lord, thou hast said, thou wilt be with me, and do me good and bless me; he fears as well as others, but in his fears he runs to the Promise.

Yea moreover, To say no more but this, The righteous man shall be delivered from all his fears; therefore he does not upbraid the righteous, they have Promises to run unto, and the Lord their God will save them from their fears: even our Lord Jesus feared when death approached, he was greatly afraid, he put up strong cries with tears and groans, and yet was heard in that he feared, in Heb. 5. 7. In the days of his flesh he feared, and his fears made him cry aloud, and his Father that was able to save him, is able to save thee from all thy fears: these fears shall make him cry to his God, and he shall be certainly heard in that he feared, and so was made a Conqueror: And so shall it be with those that are in Christ, they shall be Conquerors over all their fears; this poor man cried, and the $\langle\phi\rangle$ saved him and delivered him from all his fears. $\langle\phi\rangle$ shall serve for this time.

FINIS.

P-TA2-3. The Son of God walking in the fire with the servants of God in nine sermons upon Dan. III. XXV - Armitage, Timothy, d. 1655.

THE SON OF GOD Walking in the Fire with the Servants of God. IN NINE SERMONS Upon DAN. III. XXV. BY That Precious and Holy Man M^r TIMOTHY ARMITAGE, Late Pastor of a Congregation gathered in the City of Norwich. Unto which is added another SERMON Preached by him, upon Eccles. 9. 10. At the Entrance of one of the Mayors there into his Office.

LONDON, Printed by J. Macock, for Henry Cripps, and are to be sold at his Shop in Popes-Head-Alley, near Lombard-Street, 1656.

To the Reader.

The Prophets, do they live forever? as the holy Prophet Zechariah asks the Question; wherein he also implies the Answer, Surely they do not live forever; which daily experience doth bear witness unto; For we see that wise and good men die, as well as the foolish and brutish person: And 'tis no small Mercy unto them (what ever it be to those who remain) that they may rest from their Labors; yet were it not great pity that all their precious Labors should die and be buried in the dust together with themselves? Now although that gracious and sweet-Spirited Man, M^r. Timothy Armitage, the late Pastor to a Congregation gathered in the City of Norwich, is now gone to his blessed Rest, (of whose Death it cannot be said, as 'twas of that King Jehoram; That he departed without being desired; for his absence is still very much lamented (and not without cause) unto this day: Yet through the Lord's good Providence, some of his holy Labors that fell from him being taken up by the careful Hand of a Christian Brother of that Congregation, who had the Pen of a ready Writer; are here presented to the world (as some others also may, if the Lord please, in time be brought, to light) whereby such as have their senses exercised to discern both good and evil, may easily perceive what a good Treasure there was in the heart of that good man, whence such good things, both new and old, have been brought forth. I doubt not but such a sweet savor of a gracious Spirit, will so evidently appear all along through the Veins of these Sermons, to such as are spiritual, and can savor spiritual things, as that should I go about to write Letters of Commendation of Him or Them, I suppose it might be said to me as the Samaritans sometime spake unto the Woman that persuaded them to come and see the Christ; Now we believe, not because of thy saying, for we have heard him ourselves, and know that this was a most choice and precious Man indeed.

And seeing it hath been the Lot and Portion of the Saints, even in all Ages, more or less to meet with manifold exercises, and sharp sufferings, in one kind or other; yea sometimes even with Fiercy Trials: and what afflictions may also abide us in these latter Times, the Lord only knoweth: Therefore I cannot but think, that the Subject of these ensuing Sermons (viz) The walking of the Son of God with his Servants in the midst of the Fire) may be very seasonable and comfortable to all the Servants of Christ, even in these and the after times. What this our Dear and Reverend Brother spake herein, was (as it seems) that which he had the experience of not long before, having (as I am told) but newly come out of the Furnace; I mean a most violent hot burning Fever: so that there is the more cause to hope, that what came from his own heart, may (through the Blessing of Christ) go to the Hearts of others also.

If any seeming Pleonasms, or Redundances, or deficiency in any Phrases or words may appear to any herein, let them please but to consider, that these Sermons are put forth not by the Authors own Notes, which (as it seems) are very hardly to be read, but as they were taken from his Mouth in Preaching. I shall only crave leave to mention one passage, lest possibly any might seem to stumble or be offended at it, viz. That about the suppressing of Errors, in pag. 118, 119. as if he did absolutely deny the exercise of the Magistrates Power in any such matters, or in any case whatsoever; Whereas if his Expressions be candidly taken, as they may, viz. That the Sword or Power of the Magistrate is not to be exercised against any Person merely for the very holding of an Error, if no more, without any manner of Civil disturbance or circumstances of that Nature (for he speaks not at all of any such holding & spreading of Errors) I know not any that will, or can affirm or maintain the contrary, and so take any just offense at the Expression. I shall add no more, but desire that the Blessing of Christ may accompany these holy Labors.

13d. 7m. 56y.

THO. ALLEN.

The Table. Showing several things observable, in every particular Sermon in this Book.

The first Sermon.

- SEVEN Wonders or seven Miracles discovered in the Text.
 - First, That the light of the fire continued, and not the heat. Page 3
 - Secondly, That their number was not diminished, but increased. 4
 - Thirdly, That the fire did burn their bands asunder, but did not hurt them. ibid.
 - Fourthly, These men were seen walking in the midst of the fire. ibid.
 - Fifthly, That the fire did remain fire, and yet not burn them. ib.
 - Sixthly, That they should be in the midst of the fire, and have no hurt. 5
 - Seventhly, There was one among them like the Son of God. ib.
- The Observation, That the Lord doth oftentimes in a wonderful manner rescue the lives of his Servants from death. 7
- What restraints God lays upon the Creatures, that he might rescue the lives of his Servants. p. 7, 8, 9, 10
- The first Ground of the Point. 10

- How God's Name is glorified by delivering his Servants. 11, 12, 13
- The second Ground of the Point. 15
- The third Ground of the Point. 16
- Quest. What God requires when he works Mercies for his people. 17
 - 1. Take heed that we neither forget the Mercy, nor the God of the Mercy. ibid.
 - 2. Not look with a slight eye upon great Mercies. 19
 - 3. Give nothing to the Creature, but all to free grace. ibid.
 - 4. Give back again to God, what God lends us. 20
 - 5. Be willing that we lay down our lives, when God calls for them. ibid.
 - 6. We should do something extraordinary for God. 21
 - 7. Look upon all outward mercies in reference to some spiritual mercy. 22

The second Sermon.

- Use 1. To teach that the lives of the Saints are very precious to God, p. 28.
 - This is made out in four particulars. 30.
- Use 2. To teach, that the souls of the Saints are much more precious to God; and therefore our souls should be very precious to us. 34
- Use 3. To teach us to set an high price upon our lives. 37
 - 4. Rules how to prize our lives. 39
- Use 4. To exhort the Saints to trust God forever. 45

The third Sermon.

- The former Use further pressed, and directions given what to trust God for.
 - 1. For all the comforts of their lives. 52
 - 2. For overcoming the evils of their lives. 53
 - 3. For the prolonging of their lives, amplified in three particulars. 54, 55
 - 4. For spiritual Mercies. 57
- Quest. When mercies received may be helps to trust God for the future; shown in six particulars. 58

- Quest. How to improve mercies so as to strengthen faith for the future, in two particulars. 62
- Two things premised, and two Cautions how to rest on former experiences. 63

The fourth Sermon.

- Wherein is shown who it was that bare witness to this Miracle, viz. Nebuchadnezzar. And a Question propounded, whether he was hereby truly converted?
 - Arguments for the Affirmative given by some, p. 73.
 - And determined in the Negative. 74
- Doct. 2. That it is not in the power of greatest Miracles to convert a soul to God, unless the spirit of Christ step in. 75
 - This is cleared by Scripture-examples. ibid. By Scripture testimony. 76
 - And by experiences in our own times. 78
- First Ground of the Point, To put the greater glory on the word. 80 2.
- From the desperate hardness of man's heart. 81
- Use 1. Take notice what a Miracle of iniquity there is in man's nature. 82
- Use 2. What a Miracle it is that any soul is converted. 83
- A three-fold Miracle is shown in the conversion of every sinner; Of Wisdom; Of Power; Of Mercy. 84
- Use 3. Bless God for his word, and look to it more then to Miracles. 87

The fifth Sermon.

- Doct. 3. God many times makes his people's enemies to acknowledge and confess that the Lord is with them, and that he hath dealt graciously with them. 92
- The Point cleared by five Demonstrations.
 - 1. Christ put up a petition to his father for it. 94
 - 2. Christ hath promised it to his people. 95
 - 3. God hath put a power into his Word to convince enemies, though it convert them not. 96
 - 4. God makes enemies oft to be the eye and ear witnesses of his people's mercies; and Agents therein. 97

- 5. God works for his people in such away, that enemies are forced to acknowledge the same, so freely, unexpectedly, suddenly, solitarily. 98
- Two Reasons why God will make enemies to acknowledge this truth. 101
- Use. 1. A ground of Patience and encouragement to the Saints in tribulation. 103
- Use. 2. Let not wicked men look with delight on the miseries of the Saints. 104
- Use. 3. Let the people of God acknowledge this as a very great mercy. ib.
- Use. 4. Let the people of God much more acknowledge the gracious dealing of God toward them. 105

The sixth Sermon.

- Doct. 4. That all the persecutions which the Devil or his Instruments raise against the Saints, shall not diminish their number, but rather increase them. 111
- The point evidenced by manifold examples out of the history of the Church in all ages. 112
- The first Reason, God delights to walk contrary unto men 115
- 2. Reason, The Lord Jesus is a mighty King, and will improve his power for the Saints. ibid.
- 3. Reason, From the impotency of enemies to hinder Christ's Kingdom. 116
- Use 1. To let us see the vanity of all attempts of men against the truth and people of Christ, with an item to the Powers of the world concerning it. ibid
- Use 2. To give a ground of patience and comfort to the Saints, against opposition of men. 119
- Doct. 5. That the Lord Jesus Christ is never nigher to his people, then when they are in great afflictions, in fiery trials. 121
- Some instances given to prove it. ibid
- Quest. What presence of Christ the Saints may expect in their trials, 121
 - 1. His supporting presence.
 - 2. His enlightening and teaching presence.
 - 3. His sanctifying presence.
 - 4. His quickening presence.

- 5. His comforting presence. A warning to the Saints to improve this Doctrine, they not knowing what trials the Lord may ere long bring them into. 126
- The further handling of this Point is in the eighth Sermon.

The seventh Sermon.

- Wherein is considered the restraint the Lord laid upon the fire, it could not hurt them, only loosed their bonds, whence note.
- Doct. 6. At the command of the Lord, the fiercest of Creatures, shall not only not hurt his people, but shall take part with them, and do them good. 130
- Two Branches of the Point. 1. They shall not hurt them. 2. They must do them good; both illustrated from Scripture instances. 131, 132
- 1. Reason, The Creatures are God's Host, they go along with him, where he is a friend, they are friends. 134
- 2. Reas. From the Covenant and League made with the Creatures, which hath two Branches. 1. To do no hurt. 2. To take part, and do good. 137
- 3. Reas. God hath a special providence over his people. 139
- 4. Reas. The Creatures are all reconciled in Jesus Christ. 140
- Use 1. Take notice of the mighty power of the Lord, what a great King he is, that hath all Creatures at his command. ibid.
- Use 2. What a shame to man that he should not be at the command of God. 141
- Use 3. A strong Motive to those that be strangers to God, to come in and submit to him; till then they are liable to be harmed by the Creatures. 142
- Use 4. It is not in though Creatures power to do good without God. 143
- Use 5. Comfort to the people of God, and encouragement to their faith. 145

The eighth Sermon.

- Wherein the fifth Doctrine is further handled, Concerning the presence of the Lord Jesus with his people in afflictions 150
- 1: Reason, The Lord Jesus knows they have most need of his presence then.
 - 1. Because of the weakness of the flesh. 152
 - 2. Because of the strength of Temptations. 154

- 2. Reason, The Lord Jesus remembers his Fathers kindness to him, in being near to him in his afflictions. 155
- 3. Reas. Christ remembers his engagement to his people. 158
- 1. By promise. 2. By a Law of Love written within him. 3. By the Law of friendship. 4. That he may see to his work he is doing upon his people by afflictions.
- Quest. By what way doth Christ communicate so much of himself to his people in affliction? 161 &c.
- Answ. 1. He raises up his people's faith to an high pitch. 2. He pours upon them the Spirit of Supplication. 3. He draws the hearts of his people nigher to him. 4. He manifests much of himself by his word which he sends with affliction.
- Objections Answered of such as complain they have found little of Christ in their Afflictions. 164.

The ninth Sermon.

- Use 1. To show the unparrallell'd love of Jesus Christ, who will never forsake his in afflictions, no friend on earth like him. 173
- Use 2. To draw in those that be strangers to Christ, to submit to him, and get interest in him, that they may have a friend in an evil day. 174
- Use 3. There is not so much evil in affliction then, as men apprehend. 176
- Two things may make the people of God not to fear afflictions 176
 - 1. Because they shall certainly enjoy the presence of Christ in affliction. 177
 - 2. The presence of Christ will countervail the bitterness of affliction. 180
- Use 4. Let the people of Christ expect the presence of Christ in their afflictions. 183
- Object. But we have no promise of it now, as the Saints had formerly. 84.
- Answ. 1. Though God speaks not now from Heaven, yet we have a larger word written. 2. We have the spirit given more abundantly then at that time to particularize the Promises to us. Where is shown how we may know it is the Spirit that brings the Promises to us. 185, 186
- Object. But sure Christ is not with one in affliction; Why is it so and so with me then? Answered in three particulars.
- Use. 5. To teach the people of God thankfulness, 1. Because God leaves them not alone in their low conditions. 2. Because he affords them his presence therein. 187

- Objections of such as say they find not Christ's presence with them in afflictions, answered; and directions given in such a case. 190, &c.

THE First Sermon, On DAN. III. XXV.

He answered and said▪ Lo I see four men loose, walking in the midst of the fire, and they have no hurt, and the form of the fourth is like the Son of God.

THE School of Discipline, which God trains up his Children in; teemeth to have very severe Statutes, and strict Orders that are not joyous to the flesh but they are exceeding profitable for the Spirit: there is no School in the world, in which there is more to be learned; the Lord Jesus himself is the head Master in this School, who learned obedience perfectly by the things that he sufferd, and so he knew how to teach his School (as I may say) the Lord Jesus will teach his Scholars all kind of weapons, that they may be fit for all assaults; he will make them good at any exercise, before he leave them: In the 11. of Hebrews, you have a Role of the several exercises they were put upon, beginning at the 36. verse, Others had trials of cruel mockings and scourgings, yea moreover of bonds and imprisonments▪ they were stoned, they were sawn asunder, were tempted, were slain with the sword, they wandered about in sheep's skins, and goats skins, being destitute, afflicted, tormented; and he teaches them how to conquer all these: The Apostle here doth speak of these as Conquerors through faith, in the verses foregoing, see what glorious Conquests they had: In the 33, 34. verses Who through faith, subdued Kingdoms, wrought Righteousness, obtained promises, stopped the mouths of Lions, quenched the violence of fire, escaped the edge of the sword; out of weakness were made strong, waxed valiant in fight, turned to flight the Armies of the Aliens: Here are glorious victories that the Saints had through faith; over all the evil that they met with in the world: you have an instance of this in the Text. In the Chapter where the Text is, you shall read there of three Scholars of Jesus Christ, that were put to hard exercises, they were put to it, to grapple with the flames of fire; and they had all manner of disadvantage; and yet they went on Conquerors; they had to deal with the wrath of the King, He was exceeding wrath, and his countenance changed: They had to deal with the flames of fire, and flames that were made seven times hotter, than ordinary: So the King gave commandment (as you read in the 19. verse,) that they should heat the Furnace seven times hotter than ordinary: Again. they were bound hand and foot; for so the King gave commandment in the 20, 21, verse. And they took them and bound them, and cast them bound into the Furnace; yet the Lord he made his servants Conquerors, notwithstanding all their disadvantages. You have in the Text, the confession of the very enemies themselves; the King said, Did I not cast three men bound into the Furnace: and Lo I see your men walking? I see four men walking in the midst of the fire, and they have no hurt: So then in the Text you have witness given by the mouth of an enemy, unto that great deliverance that God wrought for his three Servants: Lo said the King himself, I see four men loose, &c. where, take notice of the several wonderful things, that God wrought for these three children: See how many wonders there were in this deliverance of theirs.

First of all, there was this wonder, That the light of the fire continued, and not the heat, viz. so as to work upon them; this seems to be a great Miracle; that light and heat should be separated from the fire; there was light; the King saw them walking in the midst of the fire, and yet that fire did not burn: I say▪ this could not be done without a great Miracle: 'Tis true they shall be separated in Hell; light shall be separated from the flames of Hell: When God will show and testify the greatness, the fierceness of his wrath upon the disobedient; there will be heat, but no light, • flames there shall be burning, and yet there shall be nothing but utter darkness: Now when God will show a Miracle of Mercy to his Servants here upon earth, God so disposeth and orders it, that there shall be light and no heat.

Secondly, There was this Miracle▪ that their number was not diminished, but increased: Lo I see four men▪ saith the King; Did we not cast in three, and lo I see four? They had thought to cut off at once, all that were disobedient to the sinful command of the King; they had thought that the flames would have consumed them all three, that there should not have been one left: behold their number is increased; since they begun to suffer, their number is increased, they have a fellow Martyr, a fellow sufferer, that is in the midst of them.

Again Thirdly, Here was this Wonder, this Miracle, That the fire did burn their bones asunder, but did not hurt them: I see four men loose, say's the King, •id we not cast three men bound into the furnace, and lo I see four men loose? And what a wonderful work of God was this, that the flames that were prepared to devour them, should help them, that the flames should burn their bonds, and not hurt them?

Again Fourthly, Here was yet another Miracle, that these men were seen walking in the midst of the fire; The fire was prepared to be a Torment to them; but the Lord made it a sweet walking fire: that which was pretended to torment them, it becomes a blessing to them; they were walking each with other, and lifting up the Name of the Lord; •n the midst of the fire.

Fifthly, Here was this Miracle, That the fire should remain fire, and yet it should not burn them: I see four men loose walking in the midst of the fire, say's the King; So that the fire was still fire; it was not quenched; some conceive that the Angel did quench the heat of the fire, with some sweet dew, or by some fresh gale; but the Text saith, they were in the midst of the fire: now here is the wonder; that it should be fire, and yet not burn; the heat of the fire was not absent from the fire at this time; for the fire did burn their bonds after they were in the midst of the fire, after they were fallen down: So then it was fire, and when they were in the midst of the fire it burnt their bonds, and they had no hurt; so that the burning faculty of the fire was not taken away, but only the art of it was suspended for the present, by the Mighty Power of God.

Sixthly, Here was another Miracle, that they should be in the midst of the fire, and have not the least hurt, that the fire should not reach to the hair of their head, or that the smell of the burning should not be upon their clothes: I see them walking in the midst of the fire, and they have no hurt: that fire that burnt the men that cast them into the fire, did not them the least hurt.

Seventhly and Lastly, That one was among them that was like the Son of God: Now what doth Nebuchadnezzar mean by these words? Had this King any knowledge of the Son of God, of the Incarnation of Christ? it was likely he had not, he was still an Hea•hen and still he worshipped his Idols; but only he was convinced thus far, that the fourth man that was among them, was was more then a man: there was some extraordinary glory and splendor; some Divine Majesty did appear in his countenance, which did convince him that he was more than a man; and so he calls him the Son of God, but yet without all doubt this was the Son of God, that was among them; it was none other but Jesu• Christ, •he came down to rescue, he came down to deliver, he came down to walk with his Servants in the Furnace; here he fulfilled his promise, When thou goest through the fire, I will be with thee:

Object But you will sa•, Jesus Christ •as not yet come in the fl•sh, C•rist had not yet taken the nature of •an upon him; and there•fore how could this be the Son o• God?

Answ. I Answer 'Tis true, Christ was not then come in the flesh, he had not taken a body: that body that he did appear in, it was not the body Jesus Christ hath now in H•aven; it was not united Hypostatically unto his Person, it was not that flesh he took afterward, and in which he now appears before his Father for us: But yet the Son of God did sometime take up a body; yea many a time, in which he appeared oftentimes to the Patriarchs in the Old Testament; as to Abraham, and J•cob; and to Moses, and many others.

Object But you will say What bodies were these th•t t•e Son o• God did assume and take• up? Whether were they the bodies of men, or no?

Answ. I Answer It is most probable they were bodies that were created: The Son of God when he appeared to the Patriarchs, when he appeared to any of his Servants, he had power to create himself a body at any time, to make a body of nothing, and so to dissolve it in a moment to nothing, as to make it in a moment, so to dissolve it in a moment; and thus did the Son of God appear in the midst of these three Children, that it might be a sign unto them, and to the Church

First, That the Son of God should afterward come and take the nature of man: That he should come in the flesh to rescue the souls of his people, from the flames of the wrath of God; that he should come to deliver them from Hel & destruction.

Secondly, That he would be with his people in all Furnaces of Tribulations; that when they walk through the fire, and through the water, he will be in the midst of them: And thus you see a great deal of Mercy, and a great deal of Miracle is in this Deliverance which God wrought for these his Sons: There are very many Observations that the words will afford us; but I shall not stand to name them, least the time prevent me, but shall close with one Point: And that is this,

That the Lord doth oftentimes in a wonderfullmanner, rescue the lives of his Servants from death and destruction. I say the Lord doth oftentimes in a wonderful manner, rescue the lives of his Servants from death and destruction: 'Tis very evident in the Text: I shall point you to some Instances out of the word of the Lord that shall clear up this truth to you, and confirm it: Therefore it is that the Lord shows his wonders in the deep, that he might rescue the lives of his Servants from destruction: he hath discovered the foundations of the great Waters, and made a path in the midst of them, for the ransomed of the Lord to go thorough: Thus did the Lord rescue the lives of the Israelites, when the Egyptians pursued them; as you read in the fourth of Exod. latter end

Secondly▪ Sometimes God hath laid a restraint upon fire, as well as upon the water: He hath given commandment to the flames not to harm his Servants; For this, you see it clear in the Text, they walked in the midst of the fire, and they had no hurt; they were neither choked with the smoke, nor their bodies confined by the fire; for the Lord had laid a restraint upon the fire.

Thirdly, Sometimes God hath given command to the verbruit ests, not to hurt his people: He hath rescued the lives of his servants from the paw of the Bear and the mouth of the Lyon: you read in this Book of Daniel, the sixth of Dan. what Command God gave there, concerning Daniel when he was cast into the Lions Den, in Dan 6. 22. My God, saith he, hath sent his Angel and hath shut up the Lions mouths, that they have not hurt me: what a wonderfull woe▪ was this, that the ravenous Lions should not eat the flesh, that was set before them?

Again sometime we find; That God hath laid a restraint upon the devouring Sea-Monster; upon the great Leviathan; and God hath given commandment to that, not to hurt his Servants: This you have clear in Jonah; you read in Jonah, that the Lord prepared a Whale to swallow him up; God delivered him from two deaths at once; from the Sea and from the Whale; and in the second of Jonah, the last verse, God gave commandment to set the Prisoner at liberty, God spake to the Whale, and the Whale set Jonah on dry land.

Again, You shall find that God hath laid restraint upon violent men, that they have not been able to take away their lives; He rebuked even Kings for their sakes; Touch not mine Anointed, and do my Prophets no harm: you know what command God gave to Laban, and what restraint he laid upon Esau, concerning Jacob in Gen▪ 31, 33. though it was in the heart of Laban to destroy him, and though Esau came out with an intention to take away his life; the Lord laid a restraint upon them.

Again, Sometimes you shall find that God hath laid a restraint upon deadly Diseases, upon violent sicknesses, such as would have been destructive to the bodies of his Servants, God hath laid a restraint upon them; that though violent Diseases and Distempers, have pulled down his Servants from their strength, to great weakness, to the grave; God hath given command that they should not destroy them: And thus God dealt with David and with Hezekiah, and David doth acknowledge it in the 30. Psalm. 3. saith he, O Lord thoughst hast brought up my soul from the nave, thou hast kept me alive, that I should not go down into the pit: He was at the very grave, and he Lord delivered him; and then a remarkable instance you have of Hezekiah: at the 38. of Ia▪ at the beginning of the Chapter, there is the very sentence of death gone out against him, and a deadly Disease seizes upon Hezekian, he was gone and quite gone, by the course of nature; he could not have lived, and yet the Lord rescues his life; as you shall read in that Chapter, at the fifth verse.

Again, Sometimes you shall find that God hath laid a restraint upon the very Devil himself: and hath given him a charge that he should not meddle, nor touch the lives of his Servants; and thus God dealt with Job as you may see in the second of Job; there the Devil sought after nothing more than the life of Job, fain would he have had his life; but God would not grant it, in the 6. verse. of that Chapter, in the 5. verse, saith Satan, Put forth thy hand now, and touch his bone and his flesh, and he will curse thee to thy face, verse. 6. And the Lord Answered, Behold he is in thine hand, only save his life: There is nothing the Devil thirsts more after, than the taking away the precious life; and therefore he set upon Christ with this temptation, If thou beest the Son of God cast thyself down; and so the Devil doth set upon many of the poor Servants of God many times with this Temptation, Cast thyself down; make away thyself; and take away thine own life: Yet the Lord is pleased to lay a restraint upon him, and keep up his people, notwithstanding all those storms and temptations and they are yet in the land of the living; and thus you see what care God takes for the lives of his Servants; and in what a wonderful manner he doth sometime rescue them from death and destruction.

But you will say, What end hath God in this? Wherefore doth God do this?

First of all, and above all, in respect of his own Name; He respects his own glory in it, therefore he suffers his people to be brought into such great straits and low conditions, as none but God can deliver thence; He suffers them to be brought down sometime, even to the very dust; that it may appear that none can deliver but God, that doth raise from the dead, and call things that are not, as if they were: Now God's name is glorified these 3. ways, by such kind of deliverances as these.

First of all, God doth thereby draw forth great praises from his people: I say such deliverances draw forth great praises from his people: When God gives great mercies into the hands of his people, he is pleased to put high praises into the mouths of his Servants; in Ps. 149. at the 5. and 6. v. Let the Saints be joyful in glory, let them sing aloud upon their beds: Let the high praises of God be in their mouth: Now my brethren, know this; That there is nothing on earth, that God doth more delight in, than in the praise of his people; he is pleased to account it as a glory done to him; Who so offereth praise glorifieth me, and therefore it is that God is said, to dwell in the praises of his people: See that expression in the 22 Psalm. it is an expression of Jesus Christ in his Agony, 22 3. v. Oh thou that inhabitest the praises of Israel! To inhabit the praises of Israel, 'tis one of the most glorious Titles that is given to God; O thou that inhabitest the praises of Israel: The Lord delights more in the praises of Israel, than in all the world beside; He delights there more than in Heaven, if it were not for the presence of his Son; therefore it is one of the dwellings of God, the praises of his people: Great Princes and Nobles, have their several Palaces, so hath God; sometime they leave the City, and go into the Country, and places of Recreation: Why, thy Lord he is said sometime to come down among his people, and he is pleased to dwell there, that he may refresh himself in the praises of his people: 'Tis a house that God doth delight to dwell in forever and forever: when Faith shall cease, and Prayers shall cease, the Praises of the Saints, the Hallelujahs shall never cease, but the Saints shall compass the Throne round about with their Praises, with their Songs, with their Hallelujahs, and there shall God delight to dwell, there shall God delight to inhabit forever; and therefore because that God doth thus delight in the praises of his people, he works great deliverances, that so he may greatly draw forth the praises of his people; that their hearts may be abundantly enlarged to him: He will work such deliverances, as there shall be a great deal of God in them, that so their hearts may be greatly drawn forth in praises to God.

2. Again, God gets himself the glory in the second place, by confuting the blasphemies of the enemies; and therefore 'tis that God doth carry on such works of deliverance, that he may stop the mouth of enemies, and confute all their blasphemies: When God brings his people into a low condition, many times enemies they rise high in their blasphemies against God and his people; sometimes they cry out, where is now thy God? and sometimes they condemn the generation of the righteous, and judge rashly, as those in Act. 28. did of Paul, when they saw the Viper on his hand they said among themselves, No doubt this man is a murderer, whom though he hath escaped the Sea, yet vengeance suffereth him not to live: Now God many times he works great deliverance, that he may confute the enemies of the Saints, that they shall see if they will not willfully blind their eyes: they shall see that God was in the generation of of the righteous; in the Psal. 126. v. 2. you may see there, God he made the very Heathen to confess, that God was with his people; and that he had done great things for them: Then said they among the Heathen, the Lord hath done great things for them; The Lord hath done great things for them.

Thirdly, God brings glory to his Name, by such kind of Deliverances; for he makes it appear that he hath the sole prerogative over the times of men, and over the lives of men; he will make it appear, that the times of his creatures, are in his hand, and not in their own hand, and not in the hand of enemies. Above all things in the world, God is said to keep this in his hand, the times of men, and the lives of men: See what Dani^l says to Nebuchadnezzar, in Dan. 5. 23. And the God in whose hand thy breath is, and whose are all thy ways, hast thou not glorified: See here, the breath that is in man's Nostrils, it is in God's hand, and he can withdraw it when he please; thy breath, 'tis in his hand, and he will dispose of it, he keeps it in his hand, and he will not give it out of his hand: and therefore when any life is communicated to any creature, 'tis given him of God: Job, he will acknowledge this, that his life was given out by way of favor, and free grace: Job 10. 12. Thou hast granted me life and favor: See here he doth acknowledge it, that the giving out of his life, 'tis God's prerogative: 'Tis granted of God; Princes they grant such and such a favor: so life and favor is granted of God; He will keep it in his own hand; He will not make any Lease and Term to any man living, they shall have it from Moment to Moment; the creatures shall have their lives from Moment to Moment; but for any term, God will not, that shall be at his own disposi^g: and therefore the Lord hath exercised wrath and anger, when the creature hath gone about to make this their prerogative, to promise life to themselves, and grant life to themselves; You know what is said of the fool in the Gospel, when he had been very prodigal, he would make many promises to himself: Soul, saith he, thou hast goods laid up for many years: why how doth God take this? why he is called fool for his labor; he reckons without the Landlord and therefore God he comes and turns him out of his Farm: Thou fool▪ saith God▪ th^o night shall thy soul be taken from thee; 'tis God's only prerogative; he makes it appear so, the giving out of life is in his hand: and therefore it is said in the Scripture, that the Issues from death, belong to God: See that place in the 68. Psal. v. 20. ▪Tis our God that is the God of salvation, and unto the Lord belongeth Issues from death: Issue that is the way that God leads to death and from death; The Door, the Gates of death▪ both to and fro, they belong to God, to the Son of God, he keepeth the door: Behold, saith he, I have the keys of Hell and death; so that the Issues to death belong to him; He shuts the door when he pleaseth; and the Issues of death belong to him: he opens the door when he pleaseth: Sometime a man hath this conceit of himself; well, I am brought lower and weaker, wasted and decayed in my strength and in my body; but there is such a means as will surely help me: such a Friend; such a Physician, they will certainly help me: if it were not for them I should despair, there is my hope: why you are deceived, saith God, I will have you know that I keep thee door of life, and the Issues of life belong to me: if God shut the door of life, man cannot get back again, notwithstanding all his friends; Again, sometime a man is brought low, that friends give him over, and then we say he is gone; all means are used, and none effectual, and we say, surely there is no hope for him to come back again: You are mistaken, saith God, I will have you to know that the Issues of life come from me: and I will open a door for life, and say, life come back again: and thus God makes it appear, that the Issues of life belong to him, and that is for his glory: That is the first ground of the Point.

Secondly, God doth work such Deliverance for his Servants, that so he may afford great matter of rejoicing, both to themselves and to others: I say, that he may afford great matters of rejoicing, great Mercies, and great Deliverances, they commonly bring along with them great joy; 'tis not only a Mercy, but a Duty: great Mercies, call for great joy: See it was their duty, in Psal. 126. 1, 2, 3. When the Lord turned again the Captivity of Zion, we were like them that dreamed, them was our mouth filled with laughter, and our Tongue with singing: Then said they among the Heathen, the Lord hath done great things for them, the Lord hath done great things for us, whereof we are glad, or rejoice. The Spirit of joy, 'tis the life of Heaven, 'tis the inheritance that the Saints shall have there: W•ll done good and faithful servant, enter into thy M•sters joy: Now God, whilst they are upon earth, he will cause part of that joy to enter into them: that they shall have some of that joy, now have a little taste of the joy of Heaven whilst they are here upon earth: therefore God he will will work such deliverance for his people, that they may see much of the glory of God in the Mercy: much of the glory of God in the Deliverance, that so they may have their hearts lift up to rejoice in God: Yea Again, God will have others to rejoice with them; and therefore some Mercies are spreading Mercies: such a Mercy as God gave to Sara; See Gen 21. 6. And Sarah said, God hath made me to laugh, so that all that hear, will laugh with me, her own affection was too narrow to rejoice in the goodness of God: and therefore I sa•, God many times he gives out such Mercies, such Deliverance•, that they shall be spreading Mercies: the joy and the sweetness of them shall spread abroad, and his people shall say, we rejoice in the goodness of t•e Lord; and all the people that fear his Name, shall rejoice with us: That's the second Ground.

Thirdly, God he works •uch Deliverances for his people, that so he might strengthen their confidence for the future, that he might encourage their hearts, and the hearts of many that trust in the Lord, that whensoever they are brought down into low conditions, they might look back and see what God did sometime for them: See what the Psalmist saith, in Psalms. 77. see what a help this was, when he was in a low condition; the 77. Ps. v. 10. Then said I; so this is my infirmity, but I will remember the years of the right hand of the most High. I will remember the years of the right hand, of the most High: I will remember those days, those years when God did by his Mighty Hand, save and deliver me: This is an encouragement for the future, to trust in God; he saved me at such a time, at such a low condition: Oh he was there, the right hand of the Lord was stretched out to deliver; and why should we ever distrust the Lord again? surely that power of the Lord can never be nonplust, that hath wrought such great things for me; Thus you see the Grounds: Here is no time for Application. I shall add a fourth Particular, and that is this which will yet make the Point more useful, before I leave it: What doth God require of his people, when he works such Deliverances for them? And how should the Servants of the Lord express their thankfulness for such Mercies, when God doth so and so rescue the lives of his people?

First of all, Take heed that we neither forget the Mercy, nor the God of the Mercy. I say, forget not the Mercy, nor the God of the Mercy; we are very apt to look upon our mercies with a slight eye; we remember our wormwood and our gall, but we forget our mercies, and the goodness of the Lord that did shine in the Mercy: Now know, that there is a great provocation to the Lord: It was the sin of Israel, that they forgot so soon what God had done for them: we read of this, how they provoked the Lord and they turned back, saith the Psalmist; and you shall see how God did take it as a great provocation, and God threatens them for it: See how they forgot what God had done for them; Psal. 106. 13. They soon forgot his works, they waited not for his Counsel, and verse 21. They forgot God their Savior which had done great things in Egypt; and therefore the Lord was wroth with them: Brethren, so should we take heed that we do not forget our Mercies, and forget the God of the Mercy; forget not what God is, and forget not what God hath done for us: forget not what God requires of us: Did God remember us in low conditions, and shall we forget him? shall we forget him when he hath raised us up? will not this be horrible ingratitude? does the Lord remember us continually, and shall we forget him? Oh! we should get a remembrance of God, and a sense of God, and the goodness of the Lord, written in our hearts: Where doth God write the name of his people? Why he writes their names there, where he will not forget them: why see what the Lord says in Isa. 49. verse. 15, 16. Can a woman forget her sucking child, that she should not have compassion on the son of her womb? they may forget▪ yet will I not forget thee; Vers 16. Behold I have graven thee upon the Palms of my hands: See what care God takes, that he might not forget his people; and so he would have us not to forget his Mercies: Behold I have engraven thee upon the palms of my hands; When a man would not forget his friend, he will engrave his name upon a Ring; but you will say, he will not forget, that doth not only write it upon a Ring, but upon his own flesh: And thus the Lord deals with you, Behold I have engraven you upon the plames of my hands; and doth the Lord thus take care to remember us: Let not us forget him.

Secondly, we should not look with a slight eye upon great Mercies: Oh view the Mercy, compass the Mercy, go round about it, tell the Towers, and see the Bulwarks, see what Mountains of goodness and mercy shine in them! Oh see how the Attributes of God do shine in them! God cannot endure that people should despise affliction, his Chastisements; My son despise not the chastening of the Lord, he cannot abide when men are careless, when they are sleighty under affliction; and surely he will not endure that men should look slightly upon mercies: My son despise not the goodness of the Lord, the mercies of the Lord, the deliverances of the Lord; Let not them be looked upon with a sleighty eye, look into the height of the Mercy, and the depth of the Mercy, and all the evil that would have befallen us, if we had not enjoyed the Mercy.

And Thirdly, Take heed that we give nothing to creatures, but all to the free grace of God; this God he requires in thankfulness, when he gives such Deliverances; ascribe nothing to man, nothing to ourselves, nothing to our prayers, nothing to our faith: No, give all to God, give all to free grace; look upon Ieb, take him for an instance, in the 9. of Job v. 16. If I had called and the Lord had Answered, if he had given me my Petition; given me what I desired, yet I would not say he hath harkened to my voice: I would not say 'tis for my prayers, or for my faith: No, I am poor dust and ashes, what's my voice in Heaven? No, sure I will give all to him: I will say, surely the Lord hath heard his own voice, the voice of his free grace, pleading for me, he hath heard the voice of his Spirit pleading in me, and the voice of his Son, making Intercession for me: I will not say the Lord hath heard me; but that the Lord may teach his people this; he gives Mercies before they have thoughts to seek them: as in Ps. 21. 3. Yea, sometime God, he hath exceeded the faith of his people, to let them see that it was not for the worthiness of their faith, though when God would give Mercies: Many times he sets his people a praying and believing, but he doth not give mercies for these. And therefore God he doth prevent their faith; as you may see in Psal. 126. verse. 1. When the Lord turned again the Captivity of Zion, then were we like to them that dreamed; like to them that dream; as much as to say, When the Lord brought us back, we had not faith enough to believe it, we could not think that the Mercy was real; when as we came out of Babylon, we doubted whether we should believe it or no, whether it was real or a dream: It was real, but it was not for their faith; and therefore ascribe nothing to faith, nothing to means, nothing to prayer, but all to the free grace of God.

Again Fourthly; we should give back again to God, what God lends us: That is the Fourth way to express Thankfulness: Hath God given us life; let us give it back again to him: Hath God given us strength? we should give it back again to God: we should lay out all our strength for God: Improve it for God, and be willing to suffer for God, Again Fifthly, in the fifth place, We should be willing to lay down our lives when God calls for them again: Thus should we express our thankfulness for life given us: I say, be willing to lay down life freely and voluntarily, the next time when God calls. When God hath rescued any of our lives from the grave, why all those days that are added, are freely given, and 'tis an addition of free grace, more then we thought of, more then was expected: And therefore we should freely be willing to lay it down when God calls for it: we should be willing to lay down our own lives and let them depart; and so friends should be freely willing to let that life go, that was so freely redeemed: Thus we should be Volunteers to death, we should freely and willingly submit to God, as well as die in obedience, as in faith, and let it be our wisdom, often to look to what Christ hath done for his people, in matter of death and the grave; and set faith on work every day; to see how the sting is taken out by Christ; and the grave is made a sweet resting place: 'tis sanctified, 'tis perfumed, 'tis sanctified that it may be a sweet resting place to the Saints.

Again, in the Sixt place, When God hath wonderfully saved our lives, we should seek to do something extraordinary for God; we should not content ourselves with ordinary service, saith Christ, What do you more then others? in the 5. of Mat. and the latter end; if you only love those that love you, what do you more then others? or what singular thing do you? he would have his people do some singular thing for him: and especially when God hath done some singular thing for them: and what says Hezekiah, when God had restored his life from the grave, in Isa. 31. v. 19. The living, the living, he shall praise thee, as I do this day: The living, the living, he shall praise thee, he that hath life once given and he that hath life restored to him again; he that hath life given from the grave: The living the living, he shall praise thee: he shall speak of thy glory▪ and testify o• thy wonders: something more then ordinary is implied there; That the living, he should live to God.

Seventhly, In the last place to conclude, Look upon all outward Mercies, in reference to some spiritual Mercy, and never take up in the outward Mercy, but let it lead you to the spiritual mercy: Alas what is life if it be not in reference to spiritual Mercies? if it be not in reference to get more of God, to get more glory to God: Life, what is it? a poor empty thing: 'tis true, life itself is a mercy, a great Mercy; but yet though life be a blessing, a man may die betimes and be blessed: Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord: And on the contrary, though life be a blessing, a man may live long, and be a cursed creature •or all this: See what is said in the Prophecy of Isaiah the 65 ch. 20. v. 'tis spoken of the days of the Gospel: There shall be no more thence an Infant of days, nor an old man that hath not filled his days; For the child shall die a hundred years old; but the sinner being a hundred years old, shall be accursed: ▪Tis a prophecy of Gospel blessings; showing how it should be in the latter days: a child die a hundred years old: That is, the young men shall have abundance of the glory of God: those that are children in years, shall be old in grace, they shall have as much grace as those that were a hundred years old: and the sinner a hundred years old shall be accursed; a curse, though he live a hundred years: See then, life is not desireable, but in reference to spiritual Mercies: Oh then rest not in outward Mercies: if God at any time hath give▪ any of your lives; for a prey, res• not in outw•rd Mercies, but labor to see further Mercy in it: that mercy is given in reference to further Mercy; and wait for the Communication of it: It was well when He•ekiah could say that God had done it in love to hi• soul, in Isa. 38. 17. Th•u hast in love to my soul, delivered it from the Pit of corruption, for thou hast cast all my sins behind thy b•ck: He looked more to the spiritual Mercy then to the outward Mercy: Alas, it had been a poor small thing for life to be given, and my sins not pardoned; if God had given me life, and not given it out of love; Oh it had been a curse to my soul: and t•is doth David bless the Lord for, in Psal. 23. 3. He restoreth my soul, he leadeth me in the paths of righteousness, for his name sake: It was after God delivered him from sickness, he bless God, he restored my soul and my life, he doth not take up there, but he leads me in the pathe• of righteousness for his name sake: I have further mercy my life is given for further Mercy: God he will not restore that mercy of life only, but he will convey me to further Mercy, seeing he hath given me life, he will lead me in the paths of righteousness, that I may live to the praise of his name. And this should all our desires be, when God doth such great things for us.

THE Second Sermon, On DAN. III. XXV.

He answered and said. Lo I see four men loose, walking in the midst of the fire, and they have no hurt, and the form of the fourth is like the Son of God.

I Made entrance into the words the last Lord's day, There is witness and testimony given of a glorious Miracle and Wonderful Deliverance that was wrought for three servants of God. God had brought them forth to exercise their faith: And to suffer; To suffer the wrath of the King, but yet the Lord delivered them, he delivered them from the wrath of the King; he wa a violent King; from the flames of the Furnace, and the Furnace was heated seven times hotter then ordinary: they were bound hand and foot, and cast into the midst of the fire; and yet they became Conquerors: The very enemies do witness as much: The King Answered and said, lo I see fou• men loose, walking in the midst of the fire: Here are many Miracles in one; here is heat and light separated one from the other: sight remains and yet the heat is taken away, and it burned not, here is the wonder of mercy; it shall be a miracle of judgment in Hell, there is fire that hath heat, but no light: the hotter the flames are, it shall be the darker, it shall be dark that day; but here when God will show a Miracle of mercy, he takes away the heat, and the light remains: Lo, says the King, I se four men, &c. Imagine, their number is increased, as another Miracle: Whereas they thought that the flames should devour them all: and •o their number is increased since they began, to suffer: there were but three cast in, and now there are four. Again, these four men were loose, And there is another Miracle, they were cast in bound, with their Cords, and Chains, and Fetters, but what ever they were, they were dissolved: See hear, God makes the very fire to fight for them to loose them, to set them at liberty from death: Again, they were walking in the midst of the fire; there is another Miracle: The Adversaries thought it should have been a place of torment to them: but lo, it proves to them a place of pleasure: 'tis to them a sweet walking place: They walk together, and confer together, and praise the Lord together; and that's another Wonder: Again, To walk in the fire, that the fire should be fire, and should not burn them: it was still fire, the fire was not put out, as some imagine, but the fire did remain fire; so the Text saith, they were in the midst of the fire; and the fire remained fire: and the fire did consume their bonds, they fell down in the midst of the fire, and their bonds were burned by the fire: that the fire should continue fire, and that the Lord should suspend the burning act of it, that it should not burn them; here was another Wonder: Again, they had no hurt, the flames consumed their Adversaries, and there was not so much as the smell of burning upon their clothes: besides, the Son of God was among them; there were four, and the form of the fourth was like the Son of God: It was the Son of God, Christ took a body, he made himself a body when he pleased: He came down to walk with them, to refresh them, to deliver them: Here was held forth what Christ would be to his people, that he would deliver them; that he should come to do his Fathers work, here was the promise fulfilled, that Christ would be with his people in every fiery trial, in every affliction, and in every Tribulation: The Son of God, he came down, and he makes a fellow sufferer in all their affliction: so he makes good his promise to his people, that if they go through the fire and water, he will be with them: The Point insisted upon, is this:

That God doth oftentimes in a wonderful manner, rescue the lives of his Servants from death and destruction: He lays a restraint sometimes upon the waves of the Sea they shall not take away the lives of his people: You know Israel went through the red Sea; and the Lord did lay a restraint upon the fire sometime: So in the Text, and sometime the Lord did lay a restraint upon the fishes of the Sea; so in the case of Jonah: and sometime the Lord did lay a restraint upon the devouring beasts: the Lions, their mouths were shut up, they could not eat the flesh that was set before them, when Daniel was cast into their Den: He laid a restraint upon violent men in the world: He laid a restraint upon violent sicknesses and diseases; David was delivered; and so was Hezekiah, when the sentence of death was gone out: He laid a restraint upon the very Div^l himself: Behold he is given into thy hand, only save his life: and God he doth this of his own accord, to be lift up, to be the praise of his people, and that it may unanswerably confute the blasphemies of enemies, he delights in the praises of his people: Oh thou that inhabitest the praises of Israel: God comes many times out of Heaven to refresh himself with the praises of his people: He delights to dwell there; it is the House that God will take up into all eternity, the Saints shall compass the Throne with Hallelujhs, and there shall God be praised. Again, God he will give great matter of rejoicing to his people, and therefore he works great Deliverance many times, though they cannot whilst they are here on earth; They cannot enter into their Masters joy, yet their Masters joy enters into them: When the Lord turned again our Captivity, then was our mouth filled with laughter, and our tongue with rejoicing. I come to the Application of the Point: Is it so that God doth in a wonderful manner rescue the lives of his Servants from death and destruction: It let us see,

First of all, That the lives of the Saints are precious [Use 1] in the eyes of God, they are Jewels that God will not easily part with, that he might have great Incomes of glory. He will not part with them: See what is said in Psal^m 116. v. 15. Precious in the sight of the Lord, is the death of his Saints, not that God delights in the death of his Saints: he means their lives are precious, and therefore their life shall not be taken from them, but upon good ground; they are very precious in his sight: the Lord knows that he hath the greatest Income of glory that way; yea all the glory that God hath in this visible world, is by the lives of his Saints: if it were not for them God should have none to lift up his name in the world, he should have none to make his name glorious here, he should have none to pay him rent for all his great Farm: the world now, that would be a great loss if God should loose all his Rent in the world: the men of the world, they pay God no Rent, they bring nothing to God, that God can accept; they deal with God, as those Husbandmen did in the Gospel, instead of paying Rent, they fall upon his Servants and beat them, when God sends and demands his Rent and Glory from them, they seize upon the Inhabitants as their own, and seize upon all as their own: so that if God should not have a portion from his people, that do from day today bring in his Rent of Glory, he should loose all his glory in this visible world; and therefore it is that the Saints they have made this as an Argument, when they have been in low conditions, when they have pleaded with God for their lives, they can tell God of the glory he shall have thereby: So Hezekiah, when he was sick unto death, in Isa. 38. v. 18, 19. For the grave cannot praise thee, death cannot celebrate thee, &c. as much as to say; Oh Lord, if thou takest me away, how wilt thou do for thy Rent of glory in the world? Thou hast Thousands of Thousands of Saints in Heaven, to lift thee up; but there are but a few, a very few, to lift thee up in the world, this visible world; and if thou takest away my life, and I go down to the dust, that dust cannot praise thee, though I shall praise thee among the Saints and Angels; yet I shall not praise thee here in the land of the living; nor shall I lift thee up here in the midst of the enemies, though I shall bring glory to thee another way; yet I shall not bring glory to thee in this world: And therefore Oh Lord, do this for thy servant: remember me for thine own name, and for thine own glory; and so the Psalmist, David did use the same Argument with God, in Psal. 30. when he▪ there was sick and ready to go down to the grave; he pleads with God in the 8. and 9. verse. What profit is there in my blood, when I go down to the pit, as much as to say, Oh Lord, what wilt thou not look to thine own glory: What shall become of thy gain, of thy Rent, that should be brought in, here in the land of the living? if I go down to the pit, I cannot lift thee up here in this world; there is a long time indeed even for eternity, when thou shalt be lift up by the Saints in Heaven; but it is but a short time that thou shalt be glorified in the land of the living, and thou hadst need spare the life of thy servant, to lift up thy name in the land of the living, What profit is there in my blood, if I go down to the pit? So that still you see the lives of the Saints are very precious in the eye of God: Oh that you that are the people of God, that you would believe this; it is worth the pressing it upon you, that you would fix this truth upon your heart; that your lives are very precious in God's sight: if you be not persuaded of it: I beseech you consider these particulars.

First of all consider, What a charge God hath given to all his Creatures concerning the lives of his Saints: do but remember their former charge. He hath given charge to the water, and charge to the fire, and charge to the beasts in the earth and fishes in the sea; he hath given charge to the earth he hath given a charge to violent men, he hath given a charge to the Devil, to Diseases and Sicknesses; surely doth God take such pains and give such charges? surely the lives of his Saints must needs be precious to him: did a man go up and down in his family and give charge to everyone from the greatest to the least: Take heed you do not meddle with such a Box take heed that none of you touch it: why then certainly 'tis precious, there is some precious thing in it; such a charge ha•h God given concerning the lives o• the Saints, he hath taken pains to go up and down in all his family: even the whole world. Heaven and Earth, is his Family; and he hath spoken to everyone of his Creatures, to the highest and to the lowest: Take heed you do nothing against the lives o• my servants; the very meanest of all the Creatures in the whole family shall not say, but that they were warned; he commands the very stones in the field, as it is in Job, making a League with the stones in the field, not to hurt his servants; doth God take such pains, and give such charges, you must needs conclude that your lives are precious in his sight.

Again Secondly, Consider what a guard God hath set about the lives of his Servants: He hath set a guard of Angels about them: He shall give his Angels charge over thee, that they shall keep thee in all thy ways; See what the Apostle saith in the first of the Hebrews, he speaks of the great privilege of the Saints in the last verse, Are they not all Ministering spirits, sent forth to Minister to them? There is not one of the Angels in Heaven, but hath a charge to guard the lives of his Saints; are they not all Ministering Spirits? Why brethren, the best of them have a charge given them: from the highest to the lowest, they have all a charge given them concerning the lives of his Saints: and they are as watchful as may be: what says our Savior Christ in Mat. 26. 53. do you think (says he) that man can take my life from me whether I will or no? I go according as it is written of me. I go because my father hath decreed it, no man can take my life from me, if I would rescue myself, I could pray to my father, and he should send a Legion of Angels to rescue me, rather than my life should be taken away from me before my time be come. And so the like may be said of all the Saints: God would send more then twelve Legions of Angels to rescue the lives of his servants out of every danger, and out of the hand of every enemy, rather then their lives should be taken from them, before it was determined of God: certainly the lives of his servants are precious to him, he hath set such a guard about them: a guard of Angels, that God should be pleased rather to want attendance in Heaven, then his Saints lives on earth, should be in jeopardy: God he will spare them all out of Heaven, for to rescue the lives of his Saints before they shall be cut off, before his time appointed shall come.

Yea further in the third place, Consider that the Lord himself takes a special care of the lives of his children; he will not trust the lives of the Saints with the Angels; though the Angels be watchful, and as faithful as can be desired in creatures; yet God himself he will have to do with the lives of his Servants; his eye shall be upon them, and his hand under them; there is never a moment in which God doth not watch over them, and himself take a special care of them; what he says of his Vineyard in Isa. 27. 3. may be said of every particular Saint; I the Lord will keep it. I will water it every moment, lest any hurt it, I will keep it night and day: See here, is a gracious promise; I will keep it, and I will water it, and this shall be every moment this shall be night and day: there is not a moment in the night, nor a moment in the day, in which God hath not special care of his people, from first to last; from the womb he hath a care of them, and so the Psalmist doth confess in Psalm 22. speaking of the watchful care of the Lord, of the goodness of the Lord, Ps. 22. 9, 10. Thou art he that took me out of the womb, thou didst make me hope when upon my Mothers breasts, I was cast upon thee from the womb, thou art my God from my mothers belly: See here, from the very womb, from the very beginning, God begins to take the care of his people; he brings this to strengthen his faith on God for the future, to uphold his soul now in his suffering: 'tis spoken of Christ, surely the Lord he can do it he hath not left me, he took care of me: when I was in the womb, he began then to take the care of me, he delivered me when I was in such straits, when I was almost dead, struggling to get into this world, the hand of the Lord was helping of me: The hand of the Lord was more to me then all creatures, he helped me: See at the beginning, from first to last, God takes a special care of the lives of his Saints.

Fourthly, It will further appear, this great love of God; this great care of God, will further appear; if we consider what a rate he makes men pay for the lives of his Saints, when they take their lives away by violence: He will make them know they have stolen precious Jewels from him: and he will make them pay dear for it; you know what it cost Jerusalem, there was found the blood of the Prophets slain, there was a great deal of blood lay upon them; the blood of Abel, and the blood of Zacharias; and they shed the blood of the Prophets, and Servants of God, and that blood became their overthrow; the blood of them did throw down the Walls and Temple of the City; the streams of blood did sweep away all the Inhabitants thereof: whensoever the life of a Saint is stolen and taken away, God presently sends Hue and Cry after it, and wheresoever God hath found the blood of his people, he hath declared his wrath against them; he hath prosecuted the Law to the utmost against them: See what is prophesied of Babylon; how doth the Lord deal with her in the 18. of Revelation, when God came to make inquisition after the blood of the Saints, 'tis said. And in her was found the blood of the Saints, There God found his stolen Jewels, the blood of his Saints: See how God doth prosecute the Law against her in the 18. Chapter you read of most fearful judgments that came upon Babylon: God seizes upon all her Riches, all her Glory, and they were all brought down in a day; she herself was brought to execution, she was cast down, as a Milstone, cast down into the bottom of the Sea, never to rise again: what was the cause of all this wrath and displeasure, and fearful judgments that was to come upon Babylon? Why this was given as the reason, In her was found the blood of the Prophets; So then still you see, and I beseech you believe it; there is nothing in all the world more precious to the Lord, then the lives of his Servants.

Well 2ly. If the lives of the Servants of God [Use. 2] be so precious, how precious are the souls of his Servants; the life is more then raiment, saith Christ; the life is more then all creatures, and the soul is more then life: the life of Christ in the soul it must needs be a hundred times more precious, a thousand times more precious: Oh what a high account hath God of the souls of his people? what will not God part with rather then he will loose the souls of his people? he will part with the Jewel of Heaven, the great Jewel of Heaven, to ransom the souls of his people: he was content that his Son should come out of his bosom, rather then he would loose one of the souls of his people; the Son was infinitely dear to the Father, more dear to him then all the world; yea ten thousand worlds, and yet he will part with his son, that he may rescue the souls of his people from destruction: Oh how precious was the soul in the eye of Christ, what did he do? what did he suffer to redeem the precious soul? how far did he come to fetch them? a mighty journey the Lord Christ took from Heaven to Earth, that he might bring back poor souls that were taken captive by the Devil, and rescue them from death and destruction; what great hazard did the Lord Christ run when he was upon Earth? Oh what mighty Armies? what Troops did Jesus Christ break through? Armies of sins, and Armies of Devils, that was in his way; and yet he brake through them all, to rescue the souls of his Servants: when he had broke through those Troops, what depths did he descend into, that he might fetch up the souls of his Servants? He was content to go into the depths of the Sea, the red Sea, the Sea of blood; yea, into the depths of the Sea of his Fathers wrath and indignation, that so he might fetch up the souls of his Servants, the depth of the wrath of God, the depth of the infinite wrath of God, it is a Sea that hath no bottom, a Sea of wrath, that men and Angels should never have found the bottom; they shall be descending lower and lower still, and never find the bottom; and yet the Son of God was content to go to the bottom of wrath, of all the billows of his Fathers wrath and displeasure▪ that so he might fetch up the souls of his servants that lay under wrath; they could never have lift up their heads above the billows of the displeasure of the Almighty; if Christ had not fetched them up, if he had not upon his own back carried them over: Oh how precious were the souls of his

Saints in the eye of God! The life of the Son of God was precious to him, and yet his life was nothing to him in comparison that he might save the souls of his people; if he had a thousand lives, he would have laid them all down. Now I beseech you think of this, you that have a mean account of your souls: O how precious is the soul in the account of the Son of God? how great was the price that Christ paid for thy soul? and why dost thou undervalue thy soul, and art willing to part with this most precious treasure in the world: it cost the life of the Son of God to purchase thy soul, and wouldst thou be content to sell thy soul for a trifle; and yet how many thousands in the world do value a thousand things in the world above their souls? and many they will part with their souls for a lust, for vanity, for nothing, for a bag of earth, for an empty cloud of honor for a little pleasure: Oh what undervaluing is this of thy poor soul: I beseech you remember the worth of the soul; do but consider how precious it was in the eye of God, you that do slight your precious souls: If $\langle \diamond \rangle$ you sold your body, you care not if the soul starve: Oh that you would remember, you will make a hard bargain, though you win all the world and loose your own soul; what shall a man give in exchange for his soul? I beseech you for the Lord's sake, have more care of your souls, let your souls be precious in your eyes; 'tis more worth then all the world, if you loose the things of the world, you may find them again, you may gain them again; if you loose all the friends in the world, you may find them all in the Son of God. he stands in all relations to his people; nay, if you loose this life itself, yet thou mayest find life in Christ, thou mayest find thy life again in the Son of God; but if thou loosest thy soul, thou art lost forever and thou art undone forever; and thy soul once lost, cannot be found again: Oh that men would account of their souls to be as precious as Christ accounts of them! do not prefer the body, do not prefer the things of this world before thy soul, and the glorious things that are concerning Eternity: thy soul is more precious then thy life, wouldst thou not put off thy life for a trifle? and wouldst thou put off thy soul for a trifle? life is precious but the soul is more precious:

Thirdly, If life be so precious to God, the life [Use. 3] of his Saints; Then this should teach us to prize our lives: I say, It should teach us to prize our lives, to look upon them as precious, to look upon them as the most precious Jewel of nature; for 'tis the will of God that we should so look upon them: remember there is nothing in the world that God takes more care of next to the soul, then he doth of the lives of his Saints; and so there is nothing that God is more careful to preserve, so there is nothing that the Devil is more diligent to seek after then life: next to the soul he seeks the life, the precious life; I say, life 'tis the most precious thing in nature: See what Solomon says in that 9. of Eccles. v. 4. For to him that is joined to all the living there is hope, for a living dog is better then dead Lyon. He knew there was nothing more excellent then life; speaking of natural life, there is nothing more excellent then life: A living dog is better then a dead Lyon; a living dog, that is, a man in a vile condition: a living dog, a man though he lives and be in a vile condition, in a bad condition in a most desperate condition; looked upon from God as a dead creature, that man because he lives is better then a dead Lion; better then Princes and Potentates of the earth, though they did live never so gloriously: Indeed if you look beyond nature, if you look to that condition that is after life, why then their condition is not precious to the Saints; for their condition is better then the condition of the greatest worldly men in the world; and one that dies in the Lord Christ were he a dog, yet he is better then the greatest Lion on the earth: but in natural things the wise m•n would have you to know that life is the greatest treasure in nature; and therefore when as the greatest love is expressed, 'tis expressed by laying down of life: Here is love indeed, that a man lay down h• life: When Christ did express his greatest love that possibly he could, unto his Saints he expressed it by laying down of his life: I lay down my life for my shep, saith Christ, and Here is love i•deed, here God commendeth his love to us, that whilst we were yet sinners, Christ died for us; Here is the commendation of love, to lay down life; nothing better then life to be given: and therefore you shall find that God hath given it as the greatest outward mercy: he reckons it as the greatest outward mercy in times of distress; God sometime hath promised to do this to his Servants, that their lives, shall be given for a prey: that was promised to Baruck, Jer. 45. verse. 4, 5. God tells him, the whole land shall be laid waste, and evil shall come upon all flesh; yet this was the mercy promised, the greatest outward mercy, He should hav• h• life for a prey; but thy life will I give unto thee for a prey: as the greatest mercy that God could give him for his faithfulness; his life should be given him for a prey: God would rescue his life from danger, when it should seem to be taken away, God would rescue it as a prey, out of the hand of danger, out of the hand of enemies: he would give Baruck the greatest outward blessing that can be bestowed: and therefore I beseech you prize your lives: I will tell you briefly how you should prize your lives.

First, Take heed that you speak nothing against your lives: Oh that men and women would remember what a precious thing life is: speak nothing against thy life; how common a thing is this in the world? if a man meet with matter of discontentment, presently they cast sad thoughts against their lives; and oh that God would take me away; and oh that there were an end of my life: that I were in the grave; and such kind of expressions: Poor creatures, do you know what you say? is life so precious? and is it such a precious treasure? and does God make such an account of it? and do you undervalue it? will you throw away your lives upon every discontentment? will you part with such a Jewel? Oh the folly and the madness of men's hearts; suppose that God should take you at your word; you say, Oh that the Lord would take away my life; suppose now, that God should come and say, Oh thou vile creature, have I given thee such a precious Jewel as life is, that thou mayest improve it for precious ends, for glorious ends, that thou mayest gain a portion in myself and son, which should make thee happy forever? have I trusted thee with such a Jewel as life is? and dost thou upon every discontentment, throw life at thy foot? dost thou come and throw it into my hand, before I call for it? Well I will t•ke thee at thy word; this night shall thy life be taken from thee; if God should be in good earnest, I doubt you would call your words back again. Elijah, he spoke in a passionate way, against his life, in the first of Kings and v. 19. but when God would have taken him at his word, he went back again: See how he desires God to take away his life, at the fourth verse, and He requested for himsel• that he might die, and s•id it is enough now Oh Lord, take away my life• for I am not better t•n my fathers, for a little affliction; he is persecuted and driven into the wilderness; in discontentment he sits down, and speaks words against his life; take away my life, why should I live? why, God he takes him at his word, and Jezebel shall take away his life from him; but at the tenth verse, the Prop•et goes back again, and there 'tis his greatest complaint that he makes: and they seek to take away my life; and yet before in his passion, he would needs die: Lord take away my life I am better then my Fathers: Now 'tis a most grievous sin thus to slight that which God hath set such a high price upon: O what care hath God of life? and what charge hath God given all the Creatures in Heaven and Earth? Oh take not away the lives of my Servants; and God hath set Angels over them to keep their lives? and dost thou account so meanly of thy life? wilt thou put away thy life for a trifle, for every cross and discontentment that thou meetest with in this world? what dishonor is this to God? and what undervaluing of that which God counts so highly of?

But Secondly, Take heed that you act nothing against your lives take heed thou dost not go about to shorten thine own life; take heed thou dost not go about to cut off thine own life; this is a grievous sin, and high provocation: there is nothing that the Devil seeks more then this, and this many times is a very urging temptation, a pressing temptation: Oh take away thy life. Now I beseech you remember how precious life is, what a precious Jewel 'tis in the sight of God; and will you cast it away for nothing? will you cast it away to gratify the Devil at his request?

But Oh I live a miserable life, say some, my life is a burden, nothing but crosses, nothing but troubles in the world; it were a thousand times better for me to die then to live.

I say, Should'st thou rid thyself of thy affliction? or shouldst thou not rather wait till God open a door unto thee? what wilt thou break chains? wilt thou break God's chains? wilt thou break prison to be gone, before God hath set thee at liberty? Oh know God hath worse chains: chains of darkness.

But suppose thou livest in the greatest affliction; why wilt thou sin to rid thyself of affliction? is not the least sin worse then the greatest evil? to sin against God, an infinite God? and if the least sin be worse then the greatest evil, shouldst thou sin to rid thyself of affliction?

Object. Ay but, I live to sin against God, that makes my life a burden to me; Oh I bear about me a body of death, and I drag it about with me every day so long as I live; it makes me weary of my life, and, I desire to die rather then to live:

Well, suppose it; Suppose thou livest in sin, and suppose by taking away thy life, thou dost free thyself from sin: yet shouldst thou have an eye to the word of God; hast thou any such rule that God hath prescribed to free thyself this way? Oh, why dost thou not look to Christ, and fetch it from his righteousness, from his blood, and from his death? shouldst thou not go thither to be free from sin? is there not pardoning mercy, and healing grace, and washing for all kind of spots to the utmost? thou talkest of freeing thyself from sin, and thou sinnest the greatest sin that thou canst sin, if thou takest away thy life. I tell thee, thou hadst better live a thousand years and sin all thy time against God, then sin this sin; and go about to do anything against thy life; why this is the greatest thou canst do to God; thou givest God the lie: God holds forth grace and mercy in the Gospel, and thou givest him the lie: he tells thee in his word, that he is able to save to the utmost, and thou givest him the lie: and therefore I besech you, remember your lives are precious Jewels, remember what account God hath of them, and do not act anything against them; do nothing against your lives.

Thirdly, If you would improve life; then gain as much of God as possibly you can in the time of life, this is the way to gain by life; labor to gain the knowledge of God, and of his Son; labor to get insight into the Mysteries of the Gospel, the great Mysteries of Christ manifested in the flesh: Oh there is an Infinite depth; 'tis worth the seeking after: Oh the precious Mines of grace in the Gospel; truly you cannot improve life better then this way; seek the knowledge of God and of his Son; seek communion with God, and acquaintance with him; get more grace from him more strength; more spiritual good things, this is a rich improvement of a man's life; and will you not make the best improvement of such a Jewel as life is? you will make the best improvements of your estates, put off any commodity for the best advantage, and will you not put off your lives for the best advantage? I tell you, 'tis a Stock, a precious Stock, that God hath given you to use: Oh why should you let the Stock lie dead by you, and do nothing that may advantage your souls another day?

Consider again: this kind of improvement of life, makes a man's life more glorious; if a man be not thus exercised, and thus lay out life, to seek after God, and to get more acquaintance with him, get more communion with him, more fellowship of the Spirit, more knowledge of Christ, more grace, more assurance of his love; why it will make him scarce a man without this: Oh this makes a man's life, a noble life, an Evangelical life; when as he is exercised in such glorious things as these; but when a man doth spend his life, and doth nothing this way, and does not give more of God and Christ, he lives like a beast; more then like a man: a poor low, carnal, senseless drossy life, though he be never so high and excellent in the world, though he be in the greatest outward honor, that man lives a low life, and he will not continue in his honor, but in the conclusion, becomes as he beasts that perish.

Fourthly▪ If you would prize your lives, labor to act as much as you can for God in the time of life: this is a prizing of life, an improving of life: know that life is given you for action; and when a man is dead, he doth not act for God: Oh therefore remember, that there is something that God hath given everyone of you to do in this term of life: there is some service, some work in your generation that God expects at your hand, even in this life: and I besech you take the wisemans council that he gives you in the 9. of Eccl's. v. 10. Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do, it with all thy might, for there is no working, no device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom in the grave, whither thou art a going; Improve your lives, saith he, and what ever you do, do it with all your might: consider what is the work you have to do for God in your generation: what work you have to do for God, and what your hand findeth to do, do it with all your might; do not neglect but do what your hand finds to do, do with all your might: life is very short, the work is long; and life is very short, you need work while you have time, you need work while the day last: the night cometh upon everyone of you when there is no time for to work, there is no device, no knowledge nor wisdom in the grave, whither thou art going: Oh labor to be for God everyone of you in your places: Oh lay out yourselves with all your might, to do something for God; though the service you are to perform in your generation may be tedious, may be laborious and toilsome to the flesh; yet be willing to lay out yourselves for God, lay down strength for God, and lay down life for God; Why consider, there is a long rest that is prepared for the people of God; this is the day time, and here you must work for God; there shall come a time of rest, ye• they shall rest in their grave; there is sleeping time enough, and they shall rest in Heaven; and there they shall rest enough, they shall rest forever and forever; and therefore be content to do for God, and lay down all your strength for God: Oh there is a resting time, a long resting time that is prepared for you; I have glorifi•d thee on earth, saith Christ to his Father, and now Oh Father glorify me in H•aven: labor everyone of you in your places• in your callings, to exalt the name of God, to glorify God on earth: I would not have you glorify God▪ that God may glorify you, that is not the end of your work; but glorify God, because he will glorify you: because he hath declared that there is rest for you that are his people, and there is an eternal rest in which he will glorify you with himself: Oh glorify him therefore with your lives, with your strength, with your abilities, with your parts, with your riches, with all you have, glorify God in your lives.

I shall conclude all with one word of Exhortation; doth God rescue the lives of his servants in such a wonderful manner? why, let his servants forever trust him: as great mercies do call for great thankfulness, so they call for great faith in the Lord, expect a great deal of future confidence in him: when he hath declared his name to his people, when he hath once made his goodness and mercy, and power, and faithfulness, and truth to pass by before them in some special providence, he expects then that they should trust him in the lowest condition, in the faddest condition; that you should take hold of him, and live upon him, he expects that you should reason upon former experiences; and remember the years of the right hand of the most high: remember such and such years when the right hand of the most High was declared, when God wrought such works of deliverance, such and such wonderful mercies: the Lord expects that such kind of deliverances should be engagements to trust in him; to trust in him at all times. Many times we will not believe unless we see signs and wonders; and the Lord he is pleased to condescend to our weakness; and Christ he shows us a Miracle, yea he shows many wonderful works, mercies and deliverances that he works for his people: and now God he may wonder at the weakness of our faith, if after all these wonders we shall distrust him: See what the Psalmist saith, in Psalms 96. 10. Be still, and know that I am God: why, in all your afflictions, in all your temptations, in all your crosses: in all sad conditions God would have you to be still and know that he is God; and when ever we have received any special mercy from God, we should urge this upon our ow• souls; if at any time we are ready to distrust God, and repine at any of the dealings of God: Oh my soul be still and know that God is Jehovah; remember the years of his right hand; remember what he did for such and such of his servants: and for thee in such a condition; how he made his power and mercy, and truth, and faithfulness to pass before thee, and wilt thou again murmur, and repine, and distrust him? Oh my soul be still, and know that he is God▪ know that he is Jehovah, and that he gives existence to his promises; know that he is as good as his word, know that he is better than his word: when ever any rebellious lust doth rise up in thy heart after we have received mercies (which is a great engagement, yet still beat it back with this, know that the Lord is Jehovah: the Lord hath a mighty Arm, and as he hath done, so he will do, and he will not leave his people: the power and the goodness of the Lord, it should sound in our ears when ever we are in any strait: this is a glorifying of God for mercies received: And Brethren, upon all occasions, Remember the years of the mercy of the most High: See what the Psalmist saith (with which I will conclude all) Psal 62. 11. God hath spoken once; twice have I heard this, that power belongeth unto God: God hath spoken, how hath he spoken? in some glorious deliverance he hath spoken, in some great mercy: for God speaks in his providence as well as in his words, and when God speaks in his mercy, he expects that we should hear him: nay, that we should not only hear him, but that we should hear him often; he expects that we should hear; what should we hear! we should hear this, That power belongeth to God, and mercy belongeth to God, and loving kindness and free grace belong to God; and so loving kindness it belongs to God: The Attributes of God, that do found in ev•ry mercy, in every deliverance, and in some special mercies, we should not hear it once but twice: God spoke once, and I heard it twice, that is, often 'tis an allusion to an Echo; a man speaks sometime that it raises an Echo; and the words will be repeated again, he shall hear it round about him, the words sound again; he speaks once and it sounds twice, often, so there is such a voice in many mercies, many deliverances; and many special providences, they sound lov'd as the Echo of a man doth: The Lord speaks once we should hear twice, that power belongs to God. Well, remember that the Lord expects that thou shouldest hear it often: and when ever thou art brought into a low condition, remember this, what thou hearest in thy former low condition, that power belongs to God: and mercy belongs to God: And thus should we trust the Lord in straits: former mercies are engagements for the future; and this is part of the glory the Lord expects, this is part of the In-come that he desires for mercy, for deliverance: poor creatures that have seen much in it▪ they should never forget the loving kindness of God, when they are in straits, in great straits, still to make use of former experiences, and to remember the years of the right hand of the most High. Thus you hear what improvement there should be of our afflictions.

THE Third Sermon, On DAN. III. XXV.

He answered and said. Lo I see four men loose, walking in the midst of the fire, and they have no hurt, and the form of the fourth is like the Son of God.

YOu know what Proposition was raised the last day, viz. That God doth often times in a wonderful manner, rescue the lives of his Servants from death and destruction: You had then the Doctrinal part; I have since that, in another place, made some Application, which I shall finish, God willing, at this time: we learned by way of Instruction. First, That the lives of his Servants are precious in God's sight; All the Income of glory that God hath brought in from this world, it comes in this way from the lives of his Servants: if it were not for them, God should loose all his Rent; and therefore the Psalmist doth plead with God, when his life was brought nigh to the grave: In Psal 30. Lord, saith he, what profit is there in my blood, if I go down to the pit? as if he should say, Lord thou art like to loose thy Profit, thy Rent; if I go down to the grave I shall not bring thee in that Rent of glory; Though I shall glorify thee in another way; yet I shall not lift thee up here in this world; I shall not make thy name glorious before the eyes of the sons of men, & in the midst of thy adversaries: therefore Lord look to thine own Profit, saith he: The lives of the Servants of God are very precious to him, and therefore he hath given such charges concerning their lives: He hath laid a charge upon all his creatures: Fire, Water, Wild beasts, upon Fishes of the Sea, upon violent men upon violent Diseases, Sickneses, upon the Devils themselves; he hath charged them all concerning his Servants; that they are not able to lift up a hand against them: and therefore God hath set such a guard about the lives of his Servants; are they not all Ministering Spirits? so 'tis said of the Angels, Hebrews •. Are they not all ministering Spirits sent forth for the good of the Saints? God will spare all his Angels out of Heaven, rather than the lives of any of his Servants should be lost; yea the Lord he will not trust the Angels themselves, but he takes special care of the lives of his Servants. I the Lord do keep it, I watch over it every moment; And therefore also you find that men have paid dear for his Jewels, when they have taken away the lives of his Servants; he hath always made Hue and Cry after them, and where ever he hath found the blood of his Servants, he hath made them to pay dear for it. It is said of Babylon, That when God made search for blood, he found the blood of his Prophets there; and how suddenly was Babylon brought down? all Babylon's goods were forfeited presently, they were seized upon as •elons goods, and •he was brought down with all violence, and she was cast down as a Milstone, into the bottom of the Sea: Now if life be so precious to God, how precious is the soul to God? Oh, the care that God takes of the souls of his people! Oh the pains that Jesus Christ took to fetch the souls of his people! What a journey did he come? And what a Sea of blood did he pass through? What an Ocean of his Fathers wrath did he dive into? He was content to go to the bottom, when all the billows of his Fathers wrath lay upon him; that so he might fetch up the souls of his people; and therefore if the soul be precious unto God and Christ, it should be precious unto you; What will it profit a man to gain the whole world, and to loose his soul: and therefore what ever you do, neglect not those great Matters of Eternity, those matters that concern the soul.

Again, If life be so precious with God, why then you should prize your lives? It is the will of God that you should look upon your life as precious: take heed that you speak not against your lives; It was the Prophets failing, he would needs die in a passion; Lord, I am no better than my Fathers: and take heed that you act nothing against your lives, it is the greatest sin that you can sin: Improve your lives to the utmost, gain as much knowledge of God, and communion with God in this term of life, as possibly you may; do as much for God, act as much for God in the term of life▪ as possibly you may: This is the way to put o•• your lives for the best advantage. Though man hath never so much of the world, never so much o• outward honor yet if his life be not spent in this, in seeking after God in acting for God, he looseth all his honor at last, & become as the beasts that perish.

In the last place, We should trust God for the future; and I shall now press this Use of Exhortation more fully upon God's people: When eve• you have seen God in a way of deliverance, you should trust God for the future; 'tis part of the Rent that God doth expect for mercy, that they that have received mercy, should forever cleave unto God, and in all conditions put their trust in him, Psal. 62. v. 11, 12. God hath spoken once, an• twice have I heard this, saith the Psalmist, tha• power belongs to G•d. he hath spoken once, and I have heard it twice: When God speaks in some remarkable providence, why this is the voice o• God, That power belongs to God, and free grace belongs to God.

1. Trust God first of all, for all the comforts of life, for whatsoever may make your lives comfortable; and that because that life is more than all the comforts of it; and God that gives the greater, will not deny the lesser; it is our Savior's Argument to his Disciples, in Mat. 6. 25. Therefore I say unto you, take no thought for your life, what you shall eat, or what you shall drink; nor yet for your body, what you shall put on; is not the life more than meat, and the body than raiment? Is not life more than meat? Is not the life of greater value than meat, drink, and clothing? more than all the comforts of life? it is more in the eye of God, the life of one Saint, is more unto God, than all the creatures in the world. Now where God gives life, he takes care for life, he takes care for the comforts of life: See what provision God did make for the beasts in the old Law; there was a Law given in the 25. of Deut. v. 4. That they should not muzzle the mouth of the Ox that treadeth out the corn, and the Apostle does apply it; doth the Lord take care for Oxen? and so doth he not abundantly care for men? and so our Savior he tells us, the Lord takes care of the Ravens, and he feeds them: Does the Lord take care of Ravens, and will he not take care of his Saints? Certainly those that fear the Lord, he will fulfil his Promise, they shall want nothing, that is his Promise. Psal. 34. 10. They shall want nothing that is good for them: they may want something of that they desire, because we desire, like children, that which may be hurtful to us; but it is not possible that God's people should want anything that is good for them: Why God is engaged to maintain the lives of his people, and life is more than all the comforts of life.

Secondly, Trust God for the overcoming of all the evils of this life: 'Tis true, God's people may meet with a great deal of evil in their way, there is many Tribulations to go through; Now trust God, I say, for the overcoming of them all; for they come all under the providence of your Father; what ever evil thou fearest should come upon thee, it comes under the providence of thy Father: Now he hath promised to be a Shield and a Buckler to his people, it is part of his Covenant, to be their defense against all the evil of life; in Gen. 15. v. 1. Fear not, there saith God to Abraham, For I am thy Shield, and thy exceeding great reward; Fear not, I am thy Shield, and therefore I am able to defend thee, to protect thee, to deliver thee from all the evil that thou fearest; though there lay never so many evils in thy way, believe that God will and can, notwithstanding them all, make your lives comfortable.

Thirdly, Let God's people trust him for the prolonging of life, for the preservation of their lives; though there is nothing that meets with more enemies, with more danger, then the life of man: and there is nothing so unable to resist the evil that it meets with, as the life of man; 'tis true, 'tis very easily taken away, as a vapor soon blown away; as a candle it is soon blown out with every puff of wind, with the least affliction when God is pleased to permit it: You know how soon King Asa his life was taken away, how easily was his life taken from him, in Chron. 16. it is said He had a disease in his feet, and one would have thought it had been far enough from the heart, that he might have lived long enough for all that disease, and yet it turned him into the grave, it threw his life down to the dust: There is nothing I say, more in jeopardy, then the life of Man; and no man's life more in jeopardy then the life of a Christian; and yet believe it, notwithstanding all this, your lives shall be prolonged.

First of all till the determined time be come; They shall not be taken from you the least moment before God's determined time be come: our Savior, he was often in Jeopardy of his life; he was often in the hands of his enemies, and yet when he was in the midst of them, they were not able to lay hold on him, and this he gives as the reason, because his tim was not yet come, his hour was not yet come.

Secondly, Nay believe further, you that are God's people, Your lives shall not be taken away, till you have done that work that God hath sent you into the world for: So that you need not fear untimely death: I say, your work shall be finished before God cut off the Thred of your lives; 'tis said in Revel. 11. see what is spoken there, concerning the two Witnesses, verse. 7. And when they have finished their Testimony, the beast that ascendeth out of the bottomless pit shall make war against them, and shall overcome them, and kill them: 'Tis possible the beast that ascendeth out of the bottomless pit, may make war against the Saints, and overcome them, and kill them; but that shall not be till they have finished their Testimony, till they they have done that work which God put into their hand, and they were sent into the world for to do.

Thirdly, Nay further believe it for your comfort, that you shall not be cut off till you be ripe in grace: Many of the Saints they are apt to fear untimely death. I tell you, You that are in Christ, you may be confident of it, that you shall not be cut down till you are fully ripe, see that Promise that is made in Job 5. v. 26. Thou shalt come to thy grave in a full age, like as a shock of corn cometh in his season; 'tis a promise that is made to the righteous, Thou shalt come to thy grave in a full age, as a shock of corn that cometh in its season: The Husbandman brings not in his corn till fully ripe, no more will God take away his people til they be fully ripe; very thing is beautiful in its season; 'tis beautiful when it is fully ripe; God plucks his fruit when they are most beautiful; it may be it is possible God's people may be cut off young; aye but yet they are fully ripe, it shall not be before they are ripe; God will either ripen them betimes, or else he will ripen them in the very plucking; for this, see another Promise that is made, in Ia 65. 20. There shall be no more thence an Infant of days, nor an old man that hath not filled his days, for the child shall die an hundred years old; but the sinner being a hundred years old shall be accursed: There shall not be an Infant in days, there shall not be an old man that hath not filled up his days. An Infant of days, that is, one that is a child in grace, while he is young: Well, the time is coming the time of the Gospel, where there shall not be an Infant of days, nor an old man that hath not filled his days: a man fills his days when as he is full of grace, full of the Image of God, when he is full of the fruits of Righteousness, then hath a man filled his days; when a man fulfils that which he lives for, then he hath filled his days: Why now God hath made this promise to his people, That they shall all fill their days; they shall be full of grace, they shall be full of righteousness: So that before God pluck them, they shall be fully ripe. Trust God therefore with your days, and with your lives; be confident that God he will hold the candle of your life light; though there be many blasts, yet God he will hold, he will maintain the candle of his people's life: Be not you negligent in your work, but let it be a spur to you, make all hast for there are many blasts that seek to blow out the candle of your life; make all hast you can to do your work; but do not distrust, the Lord will hold the candle-light, till his people's work be done. That is the third particular.

Fourthly, Trust God for spiritual mercies; even outward mercies should strengthen our confidence to trust God for spiritual mercies; Truly Brethren, this is the best improvement that you can make of mercies and deliverances, when as you can see so much of God as should draw forth your hearts forever, in all conditions, to put your trust in God; Now know, that the outward mercies were given for this end: It is one end I say, wherefore God gives mercy, that so he might engage his people, for the future to trust in him; it would be a great discredit to God, if his people after all experiences, he hath given them shall not trust in him for the future, and there is nothing that doth provoke God more then this. If Israel after all the experiences that God hath given them, after all the wonders they had seen in the Land of Egypt, and in the red Sea, and after all this shall distrust God through unbelief, God does look upon it as a great provocation: See what God says in Ps. 78. about the 19 20 verses, 'tis said in v. 18 That they tempted God, yea they spake against God, in the 19. verse. They said; can God furnish a Table in the wilderness? behold he smote the Rock, and the water gushed out, and the streams overflowed, can he give bread also? can he provide flesh for his people? Now 'tis said in the next verse, therefore was the anger of the Lord kindled against them, therefore was the anger of the Lord kindled, because they had seen his wonders at the red Sea, and his wonders at the Rock, yet they distrusted him; can God prepare a Table in the wilderness? this was a limiting of God, and this their unbelief, it cost them dear: Therefore the Lord sware in his wrath, that they should not enter into his rest.

Object. But you will say, Whether can any mercies or deliverances that a man hath received, be any help unto him for the future?

Answ. I answer they may; and I will show you when; When mercies received, or deliverances are helps unto the soul, concerning his confidence and trusting in the Lord for the future.

First of all, when the soul is careful to lay up the experiences of mercy; when a man is careful to remember the goodness of God, a man may receive a thousand mercies, a thousand deliverances, such as he might make experience of, for his own benefit and for the help of others, and yet be never the better: I say, if they be not carefully laid up, if they be not carefully treasured up, a man looseth all the sweetness of them; for there are two things that God doth intend in every mercy. First of all, There is present comfort and refreshment that he presently gives out, and then there is something in the mercy to be laid up for the future; there is something in every mercy that God would have his people lay up, something that will stand them instead another day; now when a man does not remember the mercy that the Lord dispenceth to him, though he may take some comfort in them, yet he looseth the greater comfort of them, that which he should lay hold on is the fruit of experience, or else all the mercy is lost.

Secondly, Mercies become helpful when as the soul can see the love of God in the present mercy; when the soul sees the love of God in every present mercy, this puts life into the mercy; when the soul receives mercy, and doth not eye love in it, that mercy, it proves a dead mercy; or if there be any sense it will not last long, because there was not special love seen in it: Now when the soul can eye the love of God in the mercy, then is the heart affected with the mercy, and then is the sense of the mercy most like to be continued: When a man can look at every mercy, as the offspring of love, he will be careful to nourish the sense, the remembrance of that mercy: one mercy that the soul can see love in, is more dear, more precious, than many mercies: See it in Hezekiah, he saw special love of God to him in that mercy, Is. 38. part v. 17. But thou hast in love to my soul delivered it from the pit of corruption; for thou hast cast all my sins behind thy back. Hezekiah was taken with the mercy, why? because he saw the love of God in the mercy: Thou in love to my soul hast done it; and therefore he set a high price upon the mercy. Those fifteen years that God added to his life, was more than all his life before, because he saw a special hand of God here, and he saw the love of God here; and therefore this was a long-lived mercy, it was remembered, it continued, it remained in Hezekiah's heart so long as H•zek•ah lived.

Thirdly, Again Thirdly, present mercies become helpful to the soul for the future, when as the heart is fully convinced of the unchangeableness of the love of God to his people: When he is fully persuaded of this truth, That where God loves he loves to the end, and where he begins in a way of mercy, he goes on in a way of mercy, he goes all along in free grace, saith the Psalmist, All the ways of the Lord are mercy and truth, unto his people. When a soul is once convinced, this will help much to turn mercies into experiences; and therefore that Doctrine which doth teach falling away from grace, that a man may be beloved today, and cast off tomorrow: 'Tis a most uncomfortable Doctrine; and 'tis impossible then that a man should make any experience at all of the mercies that he hath received: If God be changable in his love, if he cast off his people that he hath received in his free grace; why then though a man hath never so much of God today, and know never so much, and have never so much of the presence of God in the mercy, he can have no experience; and therefore that which concerns the soul, it is to be grounded in the unchangeableness of God's love to his people.

Fourthly, Again Fourthly, A man may make use of present mercies to be helpful for the future, if he be careful to keep faith in action, if he be careful to keep faith upon the wings: To act faith in every condition upon the free grace of God, and the mighty Righteousness of Jesus Christ; it is faith that puts a luster upon all mercies; and if faith be down, a man cannot see the goodness of God in any mercy that he hath received; if saith be dead then the sense of the mercy is lost, precious mercies, they become useless, they are as a treasure locked up, that a man cannot come by to make use of a treasure buried in the earth, that will do a man little good; and therefore it concerns the people of God to keep faith upon the wings; act faith and keep that fresh and lively; and then all mercies and all deliverances that you have received, they will be fresh in your eye; for faith puts a varnish upon the mercy, and though they be old, yet faith will make them present as things new to come.

Fifthly, Mercies become helpful for the future. When the soul is careful to keep up his Communion with God, when a man is careful to walk with God continually, to fix his eye upon God, and to follow God fully in everything, to follow God wheresoever he leads him; so long as God and the mercy is kept together, there will be abundance of luster and beauty in every mercy; but when the soul is careless in maintaining his Communion with God, it looseth then the sense of all his goodness that formerly he tasted in every mercy, and they become useless; even grace itself cannot comfort a man if God be not nigh, if God by his spirit do not shine upon it: and therefore mercies much less though they be never so great and precious mercies that a man hath received; yet they can afford no present comfort nor be a support to him, nor encouragement to wait upon God for the future: but if so be God and the mercy be kept together, then mercies become useful, and an help to the soul to trust in God for the future.

Sixthly, Mercies are helps for the future, when as the soul is enabled by the Spirit of prayer, to urge God with former mercies, and to lay them before the Lord as engagements to help for the future; there is such an improvement to be made of former mercies: When God doth pour a Spirit of prayer upon his people; and then, and then only do mercies that are past become a help to the soul or the future: you shall see so the Saints have urged this with God, they have pleaded with God, and put him in mind of his former kindness; so you may see in the 51. of Isaiah about v. 9. Awake awake, put on strength. Oh A•m of the Lord, awake as in the ancient days, &c. And so in the 22. Psal. The Psalmist there doth use the right Argument with God, he turns former mercies into Arguments, to engage God for the future: in the 9 & 10. verses, But thou art he that took me out of the womb, thou didst make me hope when I was upon my mothers breasts, I was cast upon thee from the womb, thou art my God from my mothers belly: Thou art he that took care of me, when I could not take care of myself, and when the care of creatures could do me no good, without the care of the Lord: and seeing thou hast done this for me, I am still encouraged to wait upon thee, to trust in thee for future mercies Thus you see when mercies and deliverances may be encouragements for the future; and how the soul may make experiences of them.

Quest But you will say further, how should we look upon our mercies so as to make the best improvement of them to strengthen our faith in the Lord, for the future.

I Answer briefly.

First, Look upon them all, as the first fruits which God hath promised to you; this will mightily help to strengthen the faith of the soul for the future: look upon all as beginnings of that which God doth intend to do for his people; as a spark of that flame of love that is in the bosom of God towards his people, as drops of the Ocean of love, drops of those Rivers that run at God's right Hand, which he hath reserved for his people. I say, look upon all mercies that you have received as fruits of that which God hath reserved in glory for his people; and this will mightily help to strengthen faith for the future.

Secondly, Look upon them all, as stays that God hath given, staffs to hold in your hands for the present; all mercies, all deliverances, all sights of God all manifestations of his love, all experiences of his goodness: I say, look upon them as stays and crutches that God hath given into your hand for the present, to lean upon while you are in this your Pilgrimage; do not build upon them, you cannot build upon the best of your experiences, do not lay them as the foundation, but only look upon them as helps in your way, and so use them as helps for the present that God gives you, that you may more cheerfully go on to his self, and to his son to the rest in him, where there is everlasting peace. And therefore here will I premise two things, and give you a Caution how to rest upon former experiences; and so I shall end the Point.

1. Know this, that it is possible that the soul may lose the sight of all his experiences, they may be all out of sight; 'tis possible that a man may call them all in question, the soul may be brought into such a sad condition, into such a dark condition, that it may call in question all that ever it hath seen of God, and those very things that he did take as some special Tokens of love, all manifestations given forth of himself, all communications of his presence, of his grace; I say, all these they may be darkened out of sight. Or,

Secondly, Though they may be in sight yet God doth many times bring his people into such conditions as their former experiences cannot reach them; God may come still with further and further trials, and such trials, I say, that all a man's former experiences cannot reach them: his trial and temptations may be above them all: And therefore here take these two Cautions when as you are thus to follow experiences, and to make use of experiences.

First of all, Take heed that you do not make your own experience the first ground of your trust: Make not, I say, any experience that you have had the first ground of your trust, or confidence; I said before, experiences are good helps, good Crutches, but they will make no foundation for the soul to build upon: They are not the first foundation that is to be laid: No, you must learn to trust God when you see him not, you must trust God before your trials; for that is the most blessed thing. See what our Savior Christ says concerning Thomas, in that 20. of Joh. 29. Jesus said to him Thomas, because thou hast seen thou hast believed, but blessed are they that have not seen, and yet have believed. The heart is so backward to faith, that it is well if it be by any means at last brought off to believe; and therefore the Lord hath condescended to reveal himself to his people by experiences; but yet our Savior, he saith, it is more blessed to believe and not to see. Blessed are they that believe and have not seen: This kind of faith is that which brings most glory to God; to believe a man before he try him, 'tis a great trusting of him and so 'tis an honor put upon him; now to believe in God before the soul hath tried him, before he hath had experience, this is an honor, a great honor that is done to God; and this is the faith that will hold out, this will last; this kind of faith it will uphold the soul in the greatest straits, in the lowest condition, when sense fails and when experiences are gone out of sight, why then this kind of Faith will hold up the soul: when the soul can trust the Lord though he had not tried him, trust him, though God had not given experience; trust him first of all because of his word, because of the word of his grace, that is given forth to the soul, as a foundation to build upon, this is an honor Indeed to God.

Secondly, Be careful throughout all your whole course of life, that you rely more upon the word of the Lord, then upon your experiences; throughout the whole course of your life, you will find this more beneficial to rely upon the word of the Lord: and here I beseech you to remember, that this life it is the life of Faith, it is the life of Faith, and not the life of sense; in Heaven the Saints shall live by sense, they shall have no need of Faith, the life of Faith is not proper for them; but the life of Faith is proper to God's people on earth, to believe and not see: Faith is the evidence of things not seen; it is taken up with things not seen: I say, this life it should be a life of Faith unto the Saints 'tis not a life of sense: And consider moreover if God do give any spiritual sense, or if he do give any experiences of his love, it is given for this end, that so he might help the Faith of his people, that he might help their Faith, and strengthen their Faith, that so he might encourage them for the future to trust in him; to trust in him when they see him not, when all is dark and sad, when God seems to be out of sight; I say, God gives encouragements for this end, that so he might encourage them to believe; and therefore it is that oftentimes he trains up his people in this way; he will strike the Crutches out of their hands, he will put them to it, they shall walk alone by Faith; that all the sense of God's dealings with them shall be out of sight, they shall have nothing to rely upon; God will put them to it, to rely upon him alone, upon a naked word of promise, upon the word of grace, to rely upon him though they have nothing in the world to rely upon,

2. Consider, though it be great mercy that the Lord is pleased to condescend so far to the Creature to give spiritual sense, and many times experiences, by which he will seal up his word and his grace to them, yet it is a greater mercy that God hath given a word of promise to rely upon, that is the greatest mercy in the world; asurer foundation of hope, and that which will stand a poor creature instead when 'tis in the dark, when all the sense will be in the dark, and experiences out of sight; but then the word o• the Lord will endure forever; and so then to have a word of grace to rely upon, a word of promise; this is the greatest mercy that God can show to poor Creatures: My Brethren, if it were not for this, it were not possible that the soul should be at any certainty; though God had given never so many experiences of his love, though the soul had seen, and though it had felt, and tasted of love, and though it had lain in the bosom of Jesus Christ, and been refreshed with his •ove; yet if the Lord had not given a word of grace to rely upon, a word of promise to rely upon; It would be impossible but that •t some time or other they would call all in question, for 'tis not possible that otherwise the soul should be supported in dark conditions, for why? when the soul begins to look towards God, why it is filled with the sense of his own vileness, with the sense of his own unworthiness: Oh that •s one of the greatest discoveries that the Lord makes: show the soul how vile it is in itself: and therefore I say, the soul is ready to question all: all that God hath done for it, though it hath seen God walk in a way of love to him; yet still, Oh 'tis too good for me, too good for such a •ile Creature as I am!

Again, The desire of the soul is carried migh•ily after God, when God comes once to set his Face towards Heaven, it is filled with vast desires to God, that it can never have enough, never be satisfied; and though God do come and manifest himself by gracious Experiences; yet still it desires more of God: It is apt to question, Have I anything of God or no? Have I seen God or no? it is very solicitous when it is once set towards Heaven, God makes it very solicitous concerning the great matters of Eternity: 'tis filled with the weighty things of Eternity, and the weighty business of Eternity; so though God hath come and hath spoke, and the soul hath seen God, and experiences of God; yet because it apprehends such great weighty matters concerning the soul for eternity; all experiences are called in question of God's love and his favor to him: A man is so careful in this case, that he will scarce believe himself: nay, though he have seen Christ, and though he have felt him, and seen his goings, still he will hardly believe himself, whether he hath seen him or no? you know Mary Magdal•u, she was very solicitous, she stood weeping; she saw him and she would not believe her own sense; and so 'tis with a poor Child of God; Oh 'tis so solicitous that though it have seen Christ, and experiences of his goodness, and his favor and love; yet it will scarcely believe his own sense, and he is apt to call all in question whether he hath seen the Lord or no: So that still, I say, after all experiences and the manifestations of love, the soul would call all in question many, and many a time, if it had not a word of Grace to trust to; and therefore the Saints are more beholden to the Lord for his Word of Grace to them than for all experiences: And remember this, That though God hath done never so much for you, and you have seen his goings in your hearts; yet do not you make your experience the first Ground of your trust, and do not trust to your experiences so; but look to the Promises as the Promises, as the only Foundation that will bear up your heart forever, through all dark conditions; And so for Experiences, look upon them as Crutches to lead you to the word of his Grace; but they are not to be rested in.

THE Fourth Sermon, On DAN. III. XXV.

He answered and said. Lo I see four men loose, walking in the midst of the fire, and they have no hurt, and the form of the fourth is like the Son of God.

I Have spoken out of these words. We have finished one Proposition: Namely, That God doth oftentimes in a wonderful manner rescue the lives of his servants from death and destruction. I pressed you the last day, that Christians should therefore trust in God; such as have seen his goings; should trust him for the future, upon former experiences; when God speaks once in a remarkable providence, he expects we should hear twice, again and again; In every low condition we should hear, That power belongs to God. Trust him for the comforts of life, and trust him for the preventing the evil of life; trust him for the upholding of you in life, till his time be come, and your work be filled; only be not you negligent, make hast in your work; work the works of God while the day lasts: but yet you may be confident the Lord he will not suffer the Candle to be blown out till your work be filled: The righteous shall come to his grave as a shock of Corn that cometh in, in his season; I shown how far we may make use of former mercies for the future to become great helps of Faith; when the soul is careful to lay up the remembrance of them, when the soul can eye the love of God, special love; when the soul is once convinced of that truth, of the unchangeableness of the love of God; when the soul keeps up the wing of Faith, and holds up its communion with God, can go and lay before God former mercies, and use them as Arguments to plead with God for the future; as God's people have done; then do mercies become helpful for the future.

But how far should we trust Experiences? Why look upon them as Earnests of that which God doth intend to give, and look upon them as Crutches, as helps in the way; so though all the experiences of God may be out of sight, for God may bring his people into some condition that may be above Experience, Experience cannot reach them: And therefore do not make your own Experience the first ground of your trust; but trust first in the Lord, and the word of his grace trust them more than all your experiences; the life of a Christian, 'tis the life of Faith, and not of sense; the life of sense is in Heaven; but the life of Faith is most proper here. Blessed are they that believe, and have not seen: and if God do give Experience, and manifest his love and goodness to thee, it is for this end that he might strengthen Faith; he will learn his children to go alone: and therefore God many times hath struck the Crutches out of their hands, and all sights of God shall be gone, and God will make them to trust in his naked word: Great use may be made of Experience; but yet I say, lay the word of the Lord as your foundation, and trust that, for that will hold in all conditions, in the greatest darkness, when Experience may be out of sight, and you can see nothing.

We proceed.

He answer'd and said: Lo, I see four •en loo•e, &c. Who is it here that bears witness of this Miracle of deliverance? 'Tis Nebuchadnezzar the King: it was one that was a proud insolent Monarch; one that scorned God, and defied the most High, in the 15. verse of this 3. Chap. that commanded the people to fall down and worship his Image, that he had set up; and in the latte• end, Who is that God that shall deliver you out of my hand? a persecutor of the Saints, one that was filled with wrath against them: The King was •xceeding wrath, and comm•nded the Furnace to be heated seven times h•tt•r then ordinary: Yet here Nebu-Nebuchadnezzar himself is forced to bear witness of the goodness of God to his people; He confesses it before all men: Did we not cast in three? and loe I see four men loose walking in the midst of the fire, and they have no hurt: There is a question propounded by Inter•eters, neither Nebuchadnezzar was truly converted or no? It seems there is much does make for his conversion.

First of all; Here was a strong work of conviction that past upon him, he was convinced of his sin, he was convinced of the glorious Majesty of God, to shine in this Miracle: His conviction makes him cry out before all the world, before all that were about him.

2. There is Secondly, A confession of his Error, and an acknowledgment of his sin: Now he knows there is no God• but the true God: There was also in the

3. Third place, A rejoicing in his own disappointment, he rejoiced in that the Lord had prevented him in the evil that he intended, that he was not able to bring it to pass, his mischievous device against the Saints: as you may see in verse 28 Then Nebuchadnezzar spake and said, blessed be the God of Shadrach, Meshach and Abednego, who hath sent his Angels, and delivered his servants that trusted in him, &c. There is a rejoicing here that they were delivered, and that he was disapointed, that he did not succeed according to his will: Now this seems to be a great measure of self-denial: What did not Nebucadnezzar do as much in this as David did when he was disappointed? in the first book of Samuel 25. when David had an intention to cut off Nabal: Abigail she comes to p•rswade him, and in the 32 v. David said to Abigail, blessed be the Lord God of Israel which sent thee this day to me. Nebuchadnezzar did seem to do as much as David did here; he blesseth God for his own disappointment.

Fourthly, this seems to make for him• that he did rejoice in the goodness of God to his people, he does rejoice in their grace; as you may see in the 28. verse, Blessed be the God of Shadrach, who sendeth his Angels and delivereth his servants that trust in him: He seems to rejoice here in their grace, in that constancy of theirs that they did not yield to his command, and serve no God but their own God; and he rejoiceth in the deliverance of the Saints: Blessed be the Lord that delivereth his servants; yea further, he seems to give the glory to God: He does eye God in the deliverance; he takes notice of it as from God, and blessed the Lord: Blessed be the Lord that sendeth his Angel, and delivereth his servants: Nay further, he takes care of true Religion, and of God's Name to be exalted; he makes Decrees, and sends it to all people, and whosoever does act anything against God, shall be cut in pieces, and their houses thrown down and made a jakes: Thus you see what a great way he went, and what a great deal Nebuchadnezzar did seemingly for God upon this his conviction; and yet it may be it was but a conviction; and that there was not a thorough work of grace at this time wrought upon his heart. Many works he did, but yet they seem to be effects of a temporary faith.

Nebuchadnezzar notwithstanding all this, he fell back again to his old way of supposition; for in the fourth Chapter, you shall read there of his Superstitious ways: He dreams a Dream, and he fends for the Sorcerers to tell his dream, and he would have cut them off because they could not tell him his dream, and reveal it to him, which belongs to God to reveal secrets: So that though great conviction, I say, post upon him, which did rise from the present sight of the Miracle that was wrought, yet Nebuchadnezzar at that time, he was not truly brought home to God: So then we may observe this Proposition of Doctrine,

That it is not in the power of the greatest Miracles to convert a soul to God, unless the Spirit of Jesus Christ step in: I say, it is not in the power of the greatest Miracle, to convert a Soul to God.

Neither Miracles of Judgment, nor Miracles of Mercy will do it: Pharaoh, King of the Egyptians, he saw as many Miracles of judgment, as one would have thought, would have broken the most stoniest heart, and made the most obstinate wretch to submit to God; and yet notwithstanding Pharaoh's heart was not softened, but hardened. And all those Miraculous works of Judgment, they made him harder: The people of Israel, they saw Miracles both of judgment and mercy, and yet for the most part, they were secure, hard hearted, unbelieving people, they were a burden to God, and a provocation to his Spirit: All the time they were in the Wilderness, what Miracles of judgment did they see? God smote some of them with fire from Heaven, and consumed them: God smote Miriam with Leprosy, in the 12. of Numbers, for her murmuring: And the Lord consumed Corah, Dathan, and Abiram, in Numbers 16. they were consumed, and yet the people rebelled against God; he sent fiery Serpents amongst them, in the 21. of Numbers: another Miracle of judgment, and yet notwithstanding for all that, they rebelled against the Lord; They saw Miracles of Mercy also; What wondrous works did God do for them in the Land of Egypt? What wonders at the red Sea, in dividing the waters, and made a path of life and death to go through? life to the Israelites, and death to the Egyptians: they saw his wonders in the Wilderness; God led them in the day time by a pillar of light, and in the night time by a pillar of fire; He rained Manna from Heaven, they eat Angels food, he gave them water out of the Rock, Moses smote the Rock, and the water came out: He rained feathered fowl into their Camp that they all eat and were full: And many other Miracles of Mercy they saw: many Mercies which are expressed in the 78. Psalms; but notwithstanding for all this, you may see what this people was, at the 8. verse of the 78. Psalms, A stubborn and rebellious generation, a generation that sets not their hearts aright, and whose spirit was not steadfast with God: This is the description that is given of their fore-Fathers, They were a stubborn generation, rebellious a generation, that set not their hearts aright, and whose spirit was not steadfast with God:

Secondly, As we have instances to prove it, so we have the word of Christ to prove it, to make it evident that it is not in the greatest Miracles of the world to convert a soul to God: See what our Savior saith, in that 16. of Luke, and the 31. 'Tis the word of Abraham in the Parable; he said unto them, if you hear not Moses and the Prophets, neither will you be persuaded, though one rose from the dead: The rich man in Hell, he desires that one may be sent from the dead to give them warning; why Abraham tells them they have Moses and the Prophets, let them hear them, and if they hear not Moses & the Prophets, neither will they be persuaded though, one rose from the dead: The greatest Miracle in the world what ever, it will not turn the heart to God, it will not make them to believe in his name; though one should come from the dead thou God should send an Angel, a Saint from Heaven, that should be as a flying Angel, to fly up and down in the world, to speak the voice and tongue of an Angel, though he should declare this to all the world, that the glory of Heaven is unspeakable, incomprehensible, eternal, the joy is everlasting, they shall never be able to declare it; though he should declare one hours enjoyment of the presence of God and the Lamb, it is more worth then ten thousand enjoyments of all the pleasures of the world; though he should declare it, that there is but one way to Heaven, there is but one door to enter in at, and that's only by Jesus Christ and his Righteousness, and should tell you of ten thousands that shall not come there, that sought to enter in their own way, and by their own works, and their own righteousness, and they are all shut out: though he should further declare, that God hath now set Heaven doors wide open, and that he is willing that poor sinners, the worst of sinners, should come to him by his Son, and they shall be accepted, and all their former iniquities shall be no block, no rub in the way, he will embrace them as freely as if they had never sinned against him; I say, if such a thing should be, it would be a Miracle of Mercy; but yet for all this, it would not persuade the heart of one sinner to submit to God. This could not overcome the heart of man to Jesus Christ. And again, on the other side, if one should come from the dead, God should send one from the pit of destruction to declare, to bear witness of the unspeakable Torments that are there; and should declare, that way is broad, and many walk in the way to destruction, and that unbelief it is the readiest way: Though he should declare that every man and woman living; that seek not after Jesus Christ, and hath not an interest in him, are like, sooner or later, to come into the same Lake of condemnation: It would be a terrible Miracle of judgment; but yet all this would not work upon the heart of one sinner: no, our Savior says to such men and women that sit under the Gospel, and hear what I speak from day today, and thereby are not wonted to submit to God: Why, neither would they believe though one should come from the dead.

Thirdly, The Point may be further cleared, by our own Experiences. I say, by experiences of our own days; are there not many poor Creatures that have seen Miracles of Mercy, that have seen God, many times in wonderful way of deliverance towards them? at such a time they were in danger, eminent danger, at such a time they were nigh to death, and what great promises, and what great purposes came into their hearts and mouths: and yet notwithstanding all that God hath done for them, they have turned again to folly; nay, sometime they have seen and tasted as it were of the power of the world to come, that God hath convinced them many times of the excellency of the way, and the necessity of walking with him, and the happy condition of the Saints, & they it may be, have had some tastes, some drops to cool their tongue; and though they have had that Miracle of Mercy, yet notwithstanding their hearts have gone back again; and they have not been converted and persuaded to come to Christ, after a hearty draught of his love and good ness, which might abundantly satisfy them: others that have seen even Miracles of judgment; God many many times hath wrought strong conviction in their conscience, they have been as it were for the present, hung over the flames of Hell, and great thoughts have been darted into their spirits; convincing thoughts of the necessity of seeking after faith, they have seen as it were the mighty consequence of the soul, the mighty consequence of the things of Eternity, and yet have worn out all hints that have been made upon conscience, and soon returned to their former ways of folly; to folly & desperate madness; others taken up in vanity, taken up in the world, others taken up in their own righteousness, and think themselves whole, and need no Physician; notwithstanding all these Miracles of judgment; how many are there that have seen them, and have felt them, and have not been brought home savingly by them?

But you will say, how come this to pass! what cannot miracles of works bring home a soul to God? what then? what miracles?

I answer first of all, God would have it so that he might put a great glory upon his word, he will [Reason 1] have it known what the word of the Lord is, he will make known the power and efficacy of it; his word is more dear to him then his work, more then all his works of Creation, of Providence, or Miracles; though all perish, yet the word of the Lord that endures, that abides; God will put a great deal of glory upon his word; and therefore he hath chosen his word rather then Miracles; though men think, Oh Miracles are glorious; and surely, if God show miracles that will convert, that will bring home the soul to God; but God's thoughts are not our thoughts, his ways are not our ways, he knows that miracles cannot do it: therefore he hath chosen his word, he will make that glorious in the Conversion of sinners; for the most part God works by his word; it is true, the word itself neither cannot do it, the word without the Spirit is a dead letter; but God is pleased to send his spirit along with his word; when he intends this work the spirit of the Lord shall come with some word from heaven that shall be effectual to turn the heart of a sinner, when Miracles of judgment or mercy cannot do it; it seems a weak thing to men, but the word of the Lord is mighty and powerful: When God is intended to catch any soul to bring it home, commonly this is his Net, he takes his word, and throws that over them, and that shall catch them. When he is intended to beat down strong holds, mighty Towers of lusts, sinful imaginations that do exalt themselves against Himself, and his Son, and his Gospel; why, God is pleased to use his word as the battery which will do this great and glorious work.

Secondly, It comes to pass from the desperate [Reason 2] hardness that is in man's heart; that averseness that is in the soul naturally to God: it is the hardest matter in the world to bring God and the soul together: Oh what striving is there in the gracious heart, before it is brought to God? it flies off from God; and the soul is forced to put Arguments upon himself, it may be again and again; Why, art thou cast down Oh my soul, why art thou disquieted? why, trust in God; Why trust in God. He repeats it again, and again, and all too little to trust in God, and to have confidence in God; but there is much more averseness in a natural man's heart to God; there is an infinite distance, there is a contrariety; and 'tis a hard matter to bring off a soul to close with God, to submit to him: the greatest Miracle in the world cannot do it: why, when there is much peace in God's heart, there is war in the sinners heart; yea, when there is peace in God's mouth too, there is war in the sinners mouth: when God doth call upon them, come and behold the face of my Son, and behold the face of my righteousness, I give thee leave to look to either me, so thou look to me through my Son: yet still he will have his heart draw back, and he will look to God through his own righteousness, that of a creature, or else run away from God, hide himself in his own shame and confusion, and dare not come to God: And truly 'tis a very hard thing to overcome the heart in this cause, to trust God, to rely upon him; the heart is fille'd with slavery, and 'tis a very hard matter to overcome that slavery that is in the heart: I tell you, Miracles will not do it; though it should see never so many Miracles when it is in that condition; Miracles would not overcome the heart to trust in God to believe in God: Miracles, they declare the power of God and the glory of God, hold forth the beams of his Majesty; ay but there must be a declaration of the love of God and the mercy of God in Christ; there must be a discovery of this to the soul, before he can come in and submit to God, and trust in him, before the slavery can be overcome that is in the heart. I tell you, you must have a word, a sure word, to go upon; for the soul dare not go to God, he looking upon himself as stubble, and upon God as a consuming fire; and still he keeps off from God: and therefore nothing but the word of the Lord can persuade the heart to come in, and to trust, and rely upon God.

Now let us make some Application: Is it so, that the greatest Miracle cannot convert a soul to God? Why then

First of all, take notice what a Miracle of iniquity, [Use 1] of sin, is in every man's heart! a strange thing that the heart of a man should be so hardened against God and his own good; who would think it, that there should be so much stoutness in such a poor thing as the heart of man? so small a piece of flesh, to be so stout, and so hard against God? that no sword should be able to pierce it; it should not be only Musquet proof but Cannon proof; stand out not only against afflictions, lesser judgments, but stands out against great judgments; many times against miraculous judgments: why here is a strange stoutness, and hardness in every man's heart: Oh what a dead sleep is every man by nature cast into! you will say that man is in a dead sleep, that though he be shot at, it cannot wake him, that he should sleep secure when the house is on fire about his ears; truly, this is the condition of every man by nature though God do lay Cannon shot against him, and though God set on fire the world about his ears, yet still he sleeps; what a strange condition is the state of nature? Let us all take notice of it, and set us all bewail it in the presence of God, seeing how woeful it is, and what we are like.

Secondly, If Miracles cannot convert a soul, [Use 2] then what a Miracle is it that any soul is converted? truly we may stand and wonder that any soul should be brought home to God; how many Miracles is in this work of conversion? to convert a soul to God; 'tis a greater Miracle then to open the eyes of the blind, to give strength to lame to give life to the dead; a greater Miracle then to turn darkness into light, a greater Miracle then to beat down strong Cities with seven R•ms horns, 'tis a greater Miracle then to make the world; he spake, and it was done, it was made, he spake his word, and the world was created: but God speaks again, and again, once and twice, and often, before the new creature is formed, before faith is created in the heart of man: and truly Brethren, you need not wonder that so few are brought home to God; that's not the Miracle: but stand and wonder that any should be brought home to God; there are many Miracles in the conversion of the soul to God; I beseech you take notice of them: there is a Miracle of wisdom; there is a Miracle of wisdom, I say, in the conversion of a soul, that God should find out a way to reconcile himself to a sinner, and then re•oncile the sinner to himself; here is infinite wisdom to find out a way to reconcile himself to the sinner, to find out a way to satisfy both justice and mercy, that they should meet each other and kiss each other, and both be satisfied; that justice should say, I have enough, and Mercy should say, I am well pleased, and both be glorified in Christ: Brethren, here is a way that men and Angels could never have found out, here is a Miracle of wisdom to reconcile the sinner to God; also here is abundance of the wisdom of God, that God should find out a way to make a rebellious sinner, come in and submit when he had stood out long, and stood many batteries, that God had laid against him; that the Lord should bring him in by a word of his grace; that God should come and catch a poor soul, and take him before the soul be aware: here is abundance of holy wisdom, truly none could do this, but only God.

And as there is a Miracle of wisdom, so there is a Miracle of power in every souls conversion: Oh wonderful power hath God put forth to over•ome the creature, and to overcome himsel•: To overcome the creature, to make a stubborn, stout hearted sinner relent, to shake the Oaks of Bashan, and make the Cedars of Lebanon to stoop: Yet truly this is the work of God, he put abundance of power into a word of his; and when an obstinate sinner hath stood out bo•h the allurements of Mercy, and hath out stood all the batteries of Judgment that God hath laid against him, God hath sent out many Armies of judgments, to bring him in, and they have returned back again, and have not done their work; and that yet the Lord at last, should be pleased to arm a word of his, a poor naked word of his with so much power, •o give such authority, and to give such commission, as to go and bring in the stout hearted sinner, and make him fall down at the footstole of Jesus Christ; here is a Miracle of power; and then that God should overcome all his wrath, and all his fury and indignation, and say, it is not in me, I give thee leave to draw nigh to me, in my Son, fury is not in me; that God should overcome himself to stoop to the creature that the Majesty of Heaven should first stoop to the creature, that the Prince should come and beseech the Rebel to accept of mercy offer the first terms of peace, and not looking to the infinite distance that is between him and the creature; but lay that aside, and beseech a poor creature to accept of mercy; here is a Miracle of power.

And then there is a Miracle of goodness, a Miracle of mercy in every souls conversion; a Miracle of mercy, that God should pardon the sin of his people from Eternity; Oh the Miracles of mercy, writes the pardon, gives the pardon into the Sons hand; that he should work it over by Covenant, and make all sure for his people in Christ, even from Eternity, even to give Christ a pardon for his people's sins, many thousand years before the sins are committed; I do not say the pardon is given out to them, before they are brought in to submit to Christ, but it is given out into the hand of Christ; that if they come and submit to Christ 'tis in his hand to give it out, 'tis already written and Sealed; here is a Miracle of Mercy.

Again, that the Lord should so freely, and so fully blot out transgressions; that he should make the sins committed to be as if they had not been committed; there shall no more remain of them as if they had never been acted; to bury them, to cast them behind his behind his back, to throw them into the depth of the Sea, to carry them into the wilderness, into a land of forgetfulness, that when they are sought for, they shall not be found, they shall be as if they had never been; what a Miracle of mercy is this? that God should bear no old grudge to a poor sinner, a Rebel, one that have stood out against him▪ and yet that God should retain no grudge in his heart, but receive a poor soul into his Bosom, as if he had never been defiled; to receive him into his own bosom, into intimate communion and acquaintance with himself in love▪ as if he had never been a Rebel; to bear no old grudge: here's wonderful rich mercy!

Again, for God to account the soul righteous, to look upon him as righteous, when he is unrighteous; to look upon him as righteous in Christ, when he is full of spots and pollution, and deformity in himself; at that very time to look upon him in Christ, and behold him as righteous, as if he had no spot, no defilement in him: Brethren, all these are Miracles of mercy.

Again, that God should pour out his spirit upon a poor lump of flesh; that his spirit should work upon a poor creature, and take a poor creature into union with himself, and communion with himself; that he should be working in the heart, and cleanse a poor creature from pollution, both of flesh and spirit; all these are Miracles: Miracles of Wisdom: Miracles of Power: and Miracles of Mercy, that doth shine in the bringing home of a soul to God: And therefore to conclude all; in the last place,

Let us bless God for his Word, and look more [Use 3] to the word of God, then to Miracles; seeing what power God hath put into his word, and how he is pleased to accompany his word with his spirit▪ and do great things; and now why should we look to Miracles? and why should we stand upon miracles? truly, if you will not believe the Word of the Lord without Miracles; neither would you believe though God should work Miracles; why there is more power in the word to persuade the heart, that it is indeed the word of God, and so to overcome the soul to believe, to rest on it, then there is in all Miracles that can be shown; and therefore in this case, if any look for a Miracle, they may hear Christ say, no Miracle shall be given to such a generation; He that believes not the word, he will not believe, though one rose from the dead: Nebuchadnezzar, he saw three men that had a resurrection from the dead, they were dead in all their accounts, they thought that they had been all consumed; they have an unexpected life, they are all loose, walking in the midst of the fire; and yet I say, Nebuchadnezzar's heart was not firmly wrought upon by this Miracle; but he returned again to his own folly: And therefore, Oh praise the Lord for his word, bless the Lord for his word; if it had not been for the word of his grace, how should a poor creature have been brought in, and what should poor creatures have relied upon? what foundation to build upon? what can give boldness and confidence to a poor soul to draw nigh to God? truly it could not be, it is impossible that the heart should overcome, to submit to God, without the word of his grace: Oh bless the Lord for his Word: we are more beholden to the Lord for his Word, then for all Miracles that possibly can be shown.

THE Fifth Sermon, On DAN. III. XXV.

He answered and said. Lo I see four men loose, walking in the midst of the fire, and they have no hurt, and the form of the fourth is like the Son of God.

There is witness given to a Miraculous deliverance, that God wrought for his three Servants, who through their faith, overcame the violence of the fire: Nebuchadnezzar makes a large confession here. I propounded this question the last time; Whether Nebuchadnezzar was truly brought home to God or no; he did a great deal, he spake a great deal; there was a great work of conviction past upon his spirit, he doth acknowledge his Error, and sin, he doth rejoice in his own disappointment, that God did not suffer him to have his will; he doth rejoice in the goodness of God that was shown to his Servants; he rejoices in their constancy, that they did not obey the Kings command, worship his God's: he did rejoice in their deliverances; he doth acknowledge that it was God that delivered them; he takes care of the worship of God, to promote it, he makes a penal Statute▪ That whosoever did profane the name of God, should be cut in pieces; and yet notwithstanding for all this, we concluded probably, That Nebuchadnezzar was not converted; for in the next Chapter, he returned to his old way of sin, of superstition; he dreams a dream, and he sends for the Sorcerers, to tell him his dream, which belongs to God to reveal secrets, as Daniel told him: So then we observed, that It is not in the power of the greatest Miracle, to convert a soul to God. Nebuchadnezzar saw great Miracles, Miracles of mercy and Miracles of judgment: We told you Pharaoh saw Miracles, and Israel saw Miracles in Egypt, and at the red Sea. in the Wilderness; Miracles of mercy, and Miracles of judgment; sometimes their plagues were wonderful, stung with fiery Serpents: and Miracles of mercy, God he fed them with Manna and water out of the Rock; and notwithstanding for all this, they were a stubborn Generation, and dwelt in unbelief: our Savior tells us in that Parable, in the 16. of Luke, but they are the words of Abraham. They have Moses and the Prophets, and if they will not hear them and believe, neither would they believe though one rose from the dead: Though God should show the greatest Miracle, yet that would not convince them, that would not bring off their hearts to believe in the Son of God: 'tis the hardest matter in the world to bring God and the heart together, they are at such a great distance, Infinite distance; and the heart of the creature is filled with such slavery, and lay under bondage▪ that it dares not go to God, when God calls to behold his face in his Son, but run to the bush, as Adam did; but though Miracles will not do it; it hath a word of grace, a sure word of grace, to draw nigh to God; and therefore we should look upon that Miracle of iniquity that is in the heart of all the sons of Adam; it is a strange thing that the heart of man should out-stand so many blows, that so small a piece of flesh as the heart of man is, should withstand those great batteries that God many times is pleased to make by judgments, wonderful judgments, when he declares his wrath from Heaven to sinners; and consider what a Miracle of mercy it is, that any soul should be converted, and brought home to God; seeing Conversion is so hard a thing, and Miracles will not do it? What a Miracle it is for a soul to be brought home to God! I show how many Miracles were in this work: Miracles of wisdom; Miracles of power: Miracles of mercy: Oh we should bless the Lord that hath given us his word: we should prefer the word before Miracles; we should not look to Miracles, but we should look to the word of the Lord; God hath made that to bring home souls; and therefore we are infinitely beholden to the Lord for the word of his grace, that we have the word of his grace to trust in. We proceed,

Consider who it is that bare witness to the Miracle: 'Tis Nebuchadnezzar that was an enemy to the Saints, a persecutor, a scorner, a contemner of God. Who is that God that shall deliver out of my hand? and yet the Lord makes him to bear witness of that good he did his people: We shall observe then this: Proposition:

God many times makes his people's Enemies to acknowledge and confess that the Lord is with them, and that he hath dealt graciously with them: God makes very enemies to confess oftentimes, that he deals wonderfully, and graciously with his people: The Church was confident of this in her affliction; therefore she was supported: See that 7 of Mich. 9. 10. I will bear the indignation of the Lord, because I have sinned against him, until he plead my cause, and execute judgment for me; he will bring me forth to the light, and I shall behold his righteousness, verse 10. Then she that is my Enemy shall see it, and shame shall cover her which said unto me, where is the Lord thy God? mine eyes shall behold her, now shall she be trodden down as the mire in the streets: Then she that is my enemy shall see it, and shame shall cover her which saith, where is the Lord thy God: The Church was confident that she should not only see the footsteps of mercy, but that God would make the very enemies to see it; She that said, where is the Lord your God! she that sometimes insulted over me, and blasphemed the name of my God; that said, where is your God? time is coming when she shall see it▪ and I shall say, Loe here is my God, I waited for him, and he will save me, and she shall see the deliverance, so as shame shall cover her; she shall be ashamed that ever she opened her mouth against God: And the Church did not loose her expectation, this was fulfilled to the Church; in the 126. Psalm, you shall see the fulfilling there of this promise, that she took hold of the 126. 1. When the Lord turned again the captivity of Zion, then was our mouth filled with laughter, and our tongue with singing; then said they among the Heathen, the Lord hath done great things for them: When God turned again Zion's Captivity, when he brought them out of the grave—Babylon; the work was so wonderful, that enemies could not but see that the hand of the Lord was in it, to give poor Captives so much favor in the eye of Princes, that they should release them, send them home, countenance them, help them in all they could, help them to build the Temple of the Lord; this could not be if the Lord had not wrought wonderfully for them: The Heathen were convinced, They said amongst the Heathen, the Lord hath done great things for them. God makes the very enemies to acknowledge his power and glory, and that he was with his people; in the 8. Chapter of Exodus verse 19. God wrought a Miracle by Moses, and the Egyptians stood out long, but they say in the 19. verse, Sure this is the finger of God: Lo they had hardened their hearts, and would not be converted, at last God works a Miracle, and makes them to cry out, sure this is the finger of God; look into the New Testament, and you shall find that the Lord Jesus Christ did extort confession from the mouths of his enemies; he made them to acknowledge that he was the Son of God, and that God was with him in those mighty works that he wrought: See the 6. of John and the 14. verse. There the multitude followed Christ, when as they had seen the Miracles Christ wrought; then they said, This is of a truth that Prophet that should come: into the world; and so in the 7 of John, verse 47. When the Officers were to bring Christ to the chief Priests, they returned with their conviction, and they answered, never man spake like this man; yea, when he was upon the Cross, in his greatest Eclipse; seemed to be forsaken of all men, even his very friends forsook him, they all forsook him and fled, and he was looked upon as a scorn to all the people; yet even then did the Lord Jesus extort confession from their mouths; See the 27. of Matth. and the 54.

For the further clearing of the Point by Demonstration: God makes sometimes the very enemies to confess that he is with his people, and that he hath dealt wonderously, graciously with them.

First of all you shall find for this, that Jesus Christ hath put up a Petition to his Father, he hath made it his request to his Father that his Father would manifest so much of himself to his people, that the very men of the world might be convinced that his Father did love him, that the world might be convinced that they were one with God, and one with the Father and one with the Son; for this Christ prays in the 17. of John, and the 21 v. That they all may be one as thou Father art in me, and I in thee, that they also may be one in us; that the world may believe that thou hast sent me, verse. 22. And the glory which thou gavest me, I have given them, that they may be one, even as we are one, verse. 23. I in them, and thou in me, that they may be made perfect in one, and that the world may know that thou hast sent me, and hast loved them as though thou hast loved me that the world may know that thou hast sent me, and hast loved them as thou hast loved me: Christ he would manifest so much of himself, and of his goodness unto his people, that not only they may see it, but that the very world may be convinced when they see what God hath done for his people, and what excellent Spirit God hath put upon them, that they may be convinced that God loves them as he loves the Son, that they are one with the Father, as the Son is made one with the Father,

Secondly, The Lord Jesus Christ hath promised this to his people: he was confident that because he prayed for it, it should be given out: he was never denied any of his requests, and therefore he hath made a promise to his Church, that he will do such great things for them, that the world shall be convinced that God is with them: See the 3. of the Revelations and the 9. verse: Behold I will make them of the Synagogue of Satan, which say they are Jews and are not, but do lie; behold I will make them to come and worship before thy feet, and to now that I have loved thee: He makes this promise to them, as a recompense to them for their faithfulness, because they had kept close to the word in time of persecution; now as a recompense of their faithfulness and love, Christ makes this promise to them: Well, because thou hast ventured all for me, because thou hast ventured thy name for me, thou hast suffered reproach for me; I will give thee a name, thou shalt have a name in all places, where thou hast been put to shame; those enemies that hated thee, that made a scorn of thee; I will make them to come and fall down and worship thee; I will make them to acknowledge that God is with thee: this is a promise that Christ hath given out, and he will fulfil it to his Churches, those that have kept the word of Christ; those that are faithful to the truth of Christ, to the ways of Christ, in the worst times, though they may suffer reproach for a time, yet at last he will make the very enemies to confess that he was with them: That's the second Demonstration.

Thirdly, Therefore it is that God hath put so much power into his word, to convince the men of the world, and to force them to make them acknowledge that the Lord is with his people, and that he hath loved them, and that he deals graciously with them; I say, for this end the Lord hath made his word powerful, he hath made it sharper then a two edged sword, that it shall serve not only for the conversion of some, but for the conviction of many that are not really brought home to God; The Gospel where it comes, it shall lay chains upon men, it shall lay a restraint upon men; See what is spoken of the power of the word of God, in the first Epistle of the Corinthians, and the 14. 24. 25. verses. But if all Prophecy, and there come in one that believeth not, or one unlearned, he is convinced of all, he is judged of all. Verse 25. And thus are the secrets of his heart made manifest; and so falling down on his face, he will he will worship God, and report that God is in you of a truth. See the power that God hath put into his word for the convincing of the hearts of wicked men, that God is in his word, and that God is with his people; the secrets of his heart shall be made manifest, when he comes in, he shall fall down on his face, and say God is in you of a truth: It may be, before he came, he had hard thoughts of the people of God; it may be, he was ready to say, that folly was in them, and madness was in them; nay, they were ready to say, that the Devil was in them: Ay but when his conscience lay before the word; when he comes and sees your way, when he hears that God speak in you, such a power shall go along with the word, that it shall lay chains upon him; and it shall make him to fall down and say I was deceived, I was wrong in that I did judge amiss of the people of God; Now I see that God is in you of a truth.

Fourthly, Therefore it is that when God hath dealt graciously with his people, when he hath given out great mercies; or great deliverances, he hath ordered it so, that their greatest enemies should be eye witnesses, and sometimes Agents against their will, in doing good to his servants; you shall find it so, that when God hath so ordered to do great things for his people, he hath made his people's enemies to be great eye witnesses, and ear witnesses: You see here in the Text, how God doth order the King Nebuchadnezzar, that he should be present to see this Miracle, that so a work of conviction should pass upon his conscience; it is a wonder that the King should be present, and would have thought it should not have stood with the State of the King, to be with three poor Captives, he might have left them to his Officers; but God did order it, that he should see, that he should be present; and therefore in the 6. of Dan. There you may see the Lord made him to be an eye-witness: After Dani•l was cast into the Lions Den, he could not sleep nor rest that night, and he rose betimes in the morning to see the Miracle, to see the wondrous deliverance that God wrought for his Servants.

Yea, God makes his people's enemies to be Agents sometimes, in doing good to his Servants, though against their wills, that so he might convince them, and exert confession from them, that he is with his people: In the promotion of Mordecai, which you read in the 6 o•st•er; God did order it so, that the King did command that Haman (Mordecais great enemy) should be an Agent in his promotion; He was Arrayed by Haman with Royal Apparel; H•man was one that sought Mordicais life, and God orders it, that this man Haman should be an Agent in his promotion, that h• should Array him, that he should lead his Horse, and he should cry Thus shall it b• done to the man whom the K•ng will d•light to honor.

Fifthly, Therefore it is that God many times works deliverance for his people, because he works it in such a manner, and in such a way as must needs leave conviction upon the hearts of the men of the world, if they be not given up to that fearful judgment of hardness of heart: I say, if they be not given up to hardness of heart; God works in such a way, that they must needs confess •hat God is with his people.

First, The Lord he works freely for his people he works freely for his name sake; when there is nothing at all in them, that might deserve the least mercy: God many times gives out great mercies when they can apprehend nothing in themselves: Nay, when the men of the world look upon them and see nothing in them; they themselves through their grace and humility, see nothing in themselves, and the men of the world see nothing in them; why God should do them good; yet the Lord then many times he gives out great mercies, and works great deliverances for his people.

Secondly, As God works freely, so he works unrxpectedly; and this helps to work conviction in men's hearts, when God works unexpectedly for his servants, when he gives out mercies contrary to expectation; when enemies conclude, Oh they are brought down into such a condition, that it is impossible that ever they should be brought up; yet the Lord he works unexpectedly, that so he might work conviction in men's hearts: See that fourth of Micah, you shall see how God works contrary to men's thoughts.

Verse 11. Now also many Nations are gathered against thee, that say, let her be defiled, and let our eye look upon Zion.

Vers. 12. But they know not the thoughts of the Lord, neither understand they his Counsel for he shall gather them as the sheaves into his floor. And v. 13. Arise, &c.

When they say, let her be defiled, and let our eyes look upon Zion; Why? she is utterly undone, she is brought down; she is destroyed, she lay in her blood, she lay in her heaps, she lay in her ruins; why you are deceived, say's God; I will work unexpectedly, above your thoughts, you know not the thoughts of the Lord; you say, let your eye look upon Zion, you say her destruction is come already; but you know not the thought of the thoughts of the Lord; I will work unexpect•dly.

Thirdly, God he works sometimes suddenly, that he might give conviction to men; when God gives mercies, he do• it sud•nly; when God brings judgments upon the wicked o• the world, he doth it suddenly, their destruction is li•e warlew•nde; it shall not come like o•her winds that o• rise by degrees; but as a whirlwind it shall come suddenly, and carry them away before they think of it; a•d so sometime he compares the judgments that he brings upon wicked men as the b••ach or a wall that cometh suddenly, See the 30 of •ai•h, and the 13. verse,

Therefore this iniquity shall be to you as a breach •edy •o fill swe•ling o•t in a high wali, whose breaking come•th s•da•nly, at an instant.

And so when God works de•iverance for his people many times God works it in a sudden way; look into the 1: 6. Ps•lm you shall see how suddainl• God wrought for his people, how suddenly he brought them forth from B•b•lon.

Verse 1. W••n the L•rd tur•ed again our Captivity we were like to them t•a• dreamed.

Verse 2. Th•n was our mouth filled with l•ughter, and our ••ngue with singing; then said they among the Heathen, the Lor• hath done great th•ngs for them.

Verse 4. Turn again our Captivity O Lord, as the streams in the south.

He prays and be•eeves that God would turn again their Captivity as the streams in the sou•h; the streams of the South, they come suddenly; the streams there, they do not arise as other Rivers, they come from several Heads, and so they increase a•d come broader and broader, that when the rain falls mightily, then the land floods come down suddenly; Why, in such a way doth God work for his people, their deliverances shall be as the Rivers in the South as streams in the south, that shall come suddenly, in a moment, before enemies are aware; And thus doth God many times work conviction.

Fourthly, God he works solli•arily, he doth it by his own Arm; when e•emies can see none to roll away the stone, none to open a door of deliverance, why then God himself he stretches out his A•me; when there is none to bring salvation his own A•m shall bring salv•tion, he will role away the stone, he will open a door of deliverance; and when God doth thus work; this tends mightily to the conviction of those that are by-standers.

Quest. If you ask but wherefore doth God thus work? Wherefore doth God make very enemies to confess that he deals graciously with his people? Why should they be eye-witnesses o• it?

Answ First of all, because their eye looks upon the afflictions of the Servants of God; and therefore God, he will make them to look upon their mercies; they look upon the m•sery of the Saints, and they look upon them with delight; and therefore God he will <◊> them to look upon their mercies, and see the•••eliverances: They say, •et •ur eye look upon Zion, and let her he def•led: Let our eye look upon her, that is, let us behold her ruin-in, let us glut our sense, and say, thus we would have it: Let our eye look upon Zion: so in the 22. Psalm, you shall find how the wicked do look upon the affliction of Jesus Christ; for 'tis spoken of Christ, Psalm 22. verse. 17. I may t•ll all my bones, they stare upon me; they look and stare upon me: When Christ was upon the Cross, they stood looking upon him, and did stare upon him; the word signifies, they looked with delight, to stand gazeing insatiably. When a man looks upon an object that pleaseth him, he thinks he never looks enough, he doth enlarge his sense, to take in the speciousness of the thing, and he thinks he never sees enough; the same word is used by the Propet Isaiah, 53. verse 11. He shall see the travel of •is soul and be satisfied: He shall see the travel of his soul; he shall look upon it with delight, he shall gaze greedily upon it; it shows his wonderful affection, that Chri•t looks upon his Spouse with wonderful desire; that he looks upon the travel of his soul, to see the fruit of his righteousness, to see the benefit of his death; he shall look upon the travel of his soul, he shall gaze upon it with delight; and so do enemies, they look upon the affliction of his people, and gaze upon it with delight: and therefore God makes them to look upon the mercies of his people, the deliverances of his people; they shall see their glory, God will make them eye-witnesses, God will make them to confess that he hath dealt graciously with his people.

Secondly, God doth 〈◇〉 mercy to the sons of men; God would do even wicked men good, and doth them good even by this; while he works such conviction upon their heart, by eyeing the mercies and deliverances that he doth give out to his people: God by this he would allure them he would make them to stand and wonder, while God not only in word, but in his providence doth proclaim before them, Thus shall be done to the man whom the King delighteth to honor: At least, God doth this out of pity to men that they might not go on to contemn the Gospel; God he will give a check for this; and therefore he works glorious deliverances, that he might restrain them in the ways of persecution; and thus doth the Lord pity his very enemies: he is better to them than they are to themselves: God he would lay rubs in their way, that they might not go leaping and jumping to Hell: God he will not let wicked men do themselves as they would, if God should leave them to themselves: And thus doth the Lord pity his enemies. A word for Application; And so I conclude.

First of all, Here is ground of patience, and encouragement to the Saints in all tribulations, in all adversities, in the midst of your greatest afflictions, in the midst of all the persecution you meet with for Christ's sake, for his Gospel sake; for his truths sake; though the world cast shame upon you; time is a coming that the Lord will roll away reproach, and he will make your very enemies to see it, and they that have stood looking upon your misery, with delight they shall be forced to look upon your mercy and therefore here is a ground of patience to you in all adversity & what ever you suffer from the world for Christ's sake; time is coming that God will make them to condemn themselves, and to acquit you, they shall see your mercy, and they shall say of a truth, God is with his people: 'Tis a ground of great comfort to the Churches of Christ in the midst of all the opposition that they meet with, for the keeping of the word of his patience: Oh see the promise that is made to the Churches, in t^o 12. of Zachariah, verse 5. And the Governors of Judah shall say in their hearts the Inhabitants of Jerusalem shall be my strength in the Lord of Hosts their God,

I will put glory upon my people, saith God, and I will make their Governors to acknowledge it, and they shall say, The Inhabitants of Jerusalem shall be my strength; they are the Pillars, they are those that bear up the Land; they are our Chariots, they are our Bulwarks, the Lord Jehozah is with them, they shall be my strength.

Secondly, Let it be an Item to the men of the world; Oh take heed how you look with delight upon the miseries of the Saints, upon the afflictions of the Saints! I tell you, God will not bear with it, he will punish you for it: how did God threaten Edom, because he stood and looked upon his brother in the day of adversity; he stood in the high-way gazeing upon his brothers misery, and delighted in it: I tell you, you that laugh at the misery of the Saints, God he will make you lament and they shall not only rejoice, but they shall shout for joy; the time is a coming, that he will make you to see the mercy, and that he is with them, and deals graciously with them;

Thirdly, Let God's people acknowledge this as a great mercy, that God should work conviction many times in the hearts of the wicked, that he should deal in such a way with them that might convince the hardest heart, that God is with his people; I tell you, 'tis a great mercy, 'tis no ordinary mercy; admire God in it, bless God for it, that God should thus reprove men, and convince men for your sakes: The Jews did look upon it as a great mercy, in the 126. Psalm: When God turned again our Captivity our mouth was filled with laughter and our tongue with singing; Then said they among the Heathen, the Lord hath done great things for them. They looked upon it as a great mercy that the Lord should thus convince the Heathen; 'tis a mercy, for they writ it, they penned it as a great mercy, worth the singing, worth the glorifying of God for: that God should work so powerfully upon the hearts of men, and make the Heathen say, The Lord hath done great things for them.

In the last place, to conclude all.

Doth God make enemies confess that he hath done great things for his people? why then the people of God should much more confess that the Lord hath done great things for them: if enemies say it, you may well say it, you have more cause to say it, that 126. Psalm, verse 2. They say among the Heathen, the Lord hath done great things for them; and what say the people of God? will not they say so? yes, in the very next words; The Lord hath done great things for us, whereof we are glad: shall the Heathen say it, and shall not we say it? yes, we are bound to say it, and to acknowledge, The Lord hath done great things for us, whereof we are glad: Remember, I beseech you: remember, God cannot endure his mercies should be slighted; he loves that you should have great thoughts of him and of his mercies, that you should say, he hath done great things: When God works deliverance for you, he will make the very Heathen to say so, he will make by standers to say so; and shall not we honor him for the mercy, who are the receivers of the mercy? shall not we say so The Lord hath done great things for us: shall Nebuchadnazzar say. The Lord hath done great things for them; and shall not the three children say so? yes sure, they will lift up the name of God in their song: And therefore I beseech you all, you that have received mercy from God, you should aggravate the mercy as much as you can, though not compulsively, you should freely say, The Lord hath done great things for us; you shall find this always hath been the frame of God's people, to aggravate the mercy, to aggravate the deliverance that God hath wrought for them: See the 40. Psalm and the 5. verse. Many O Lord my God are thy wonderful works which thou hast done and thy thoughts which are to us ward they cannot be reckoned up in order unto thee, if I would declare and speak of them, they are more then can be numbered.

See what an aggravation there is of the mercy received, they are many, and they are wonderful, and very many, more then can be numbered, they cannot be reckoned up in order: and so Ezra, when he and the people received mercies, see how they do aggravate it, how they do acknowledge it, in the 9. Chap. verse 13. And after all that is come upon us for our evil deeds, and for our great trespass, seeing thou our God hast punished us less then our iniquities deserve, and hast given us such deliverance as this, should we again break thy Commandment? He knows not how to speak it; Oh 'tis a great mercy, he stands and wonders at such a deliverance, such a mercy; and so aggravate all our mercies, we should say with Ezra, seeing thou hast wrought such deliverance, such salvation, seeing thou hast wrought in such and such a way; this is a great engagement to God, when mercies are thus eyed and reviewed, when a man looks into the depth of them, and eye the mercies; seeing thou hast given such deliverance, should we again sin against thee? he looks upon it as an engagement to stand close, seeing it was great mercy: And Oh so should we in all our mercies, as Ezra saith, so we should say, Seeing thou hast wrought such deliverance for us, should we again sin against thee: Oh no, let thine mercies be an engagement us to, to love thee, and serve thee, and forever to cleave to thee.

THE Sixth Sermon, on DAN. III. XXV.

He answered and said Lo I see four men loose, walking in the midst of the fire, and they have no hurt, and the form of the fourth is like the Son of God.

I Have made some further progress in the words: We considered who it was that gave testimony unto this miraculous Deliverance that God wrought for his servants; It was Nebuchadnezzar, a proud and an insolent man, an enemy to God and his people, and so he continues still in his heart; for 'tis probable, he was not converted, not really brought home to God, for in the next Chapter you may see he did return to his very old ways of Idolatry; he sent for the Magicians to interpret his dream; and yet God makes him here bear witness what he hath done for his people.

So then we observed this Proposition, That God sometimes works such deliverances for his people, as he makes his very enemies, and their very enemies to acknowledge that God hath done great things for them: It was said among the Heathen, in the 126. Psalm, When God turned again the Captivity of Zion, They said amongst the Heathen, the Lord hath done great things for them. The Lord Jesus many times did extort confession from the mouths of his greatest enemies; Never man spake like this man: And of a truth this was the Son of God: And then for this thing did Christ pray, in the 17. of John, that his Father would manifest so much of himself unto us his people, and pour out so much of his Spirit upon them, that the very world might know that he hath sent the Son; and that he hath loved his people with the same love that the Son is loved: and this did Christ promise unto his people, to the Church of Philadelphia, in the 2. of the Revelations and the 9. verse: Behold I will make them of the Synagogue of Satan, which say they are Jews and are not, but do lie; behold I will make them to come and worship before thy feet, and to know that I have loved thee: Therefore hath Christ put so much power into his word: that at least it might lay chains upon wicked men and convince men many times that God is in his word and that God is in his people; When you Prophecy, saith the Apostle, and there comes in one that is unlearned; the secrets of his heart is made manifest, and so falling down on his face, he will worship God, and report that God is in you of a truth.

Therefore it is also that when God works great deliverances, he doth so order it in his providence, that his people's enemies should be eye-witnesses, and ear-witnesses, of what God hath done for them, yea sometimes Agents, against their wills, in doing good to the Saints: So Haman was an Instrument in the promotion of Mordecai: Yea,

Therefore it is that God works in such a glorious manner, as must needs convince; he works freely; He works suddenly, he works unexpectedly; and he works solitarily: Now God's very manner of working deliverance for his people, doth carry a great deal of conviction along with it: As,

First of all, wicked men they look upon the afflictions of the Saints; they say, Let our eye look upon Zion, and let her be defiled; Therefore doth the Lord make them to look with astonishment upon their mercies and deliverances; God hath gracious ends, even towards wicked men, he would convince them by this, he would lay blocks in their way, that they might not take the running leap into Hell, that they might not go on in their violence, and persecution of the Saints.

I proceed to what remains: Loe I see four men, and the form of the fourth is like the Son of God.

There were three cast in, and now there are four: Now before we come to consider who this fourth man was; By way, take notice of the wonderful providence of God, that a fourth man should be added to them; that while they were in the midst of the fiery Furnace, while they were bearing witness against the Idolatry of Nebuchadnezzar and his people; while they were suffering Martyrdom for the Truth, and for the Name of God; here is a fourth added to them: Certainly, their enemies supposed that fire would soon have devoured them all, that there should not be one of the three left to bear witness any longer against their wickedness and idolatry; but how contrary doth God work to the expectation of them? their number is not diminished; but Loe there were three cast in, and now there is four four men loose walking in the midst of the fire: Therefore we shall consider this Proposition by the way, before we come to the Main.

That all persecutions that the Devil, or his Instruments, do raise against the Saints, shall not diminish their number, but shall rather increase them.

I say, all the opposition and persecution that the people of God meet with, for the name and cause of Christ shall not diminish their number, but shall rather increase them.

I shall make it evident to you; Look upon Israel's oppression by the Aegyptian, which you read of in the 1 of Exodus, 10. 11, 12▪ 13. Come say they let us deal wisely with them, let us increase their task, let us lay heavy burdens upon them, &c. Thus they thought to have weakened their strength, and to have brought them low, but did this stratagem prevail? no; you shall read in the 12. verse, That the more they afflicted them the more they increased: And therefore God did appear to that Church unto Moses, in the 3. of Exodus: God shows Moses there, the vision of a Bush that was not consumed: this did hold forth the state of Israel then: a Bush all on fire, and was not consumed; such Bushes are all the Churches of Christ, that men of the world may set them on fire many times. but though they burn, they shall not be consumed; yea the hotter any fire of persecution be against the Saints, the more green shall this Bush be, the more shall it flourish, take root and grow, and spread abroad her branches till it fill the whole earth: This was represented unto Daniel in a vision, in the third of Daniel: The Kingdom of Christ is set forth there by a little stone cut out of the Mountains without hands, the stone was a growing stone, and although there were many hammers at work to break this stone in pieces, yet they have not, nor shall not prevail, but the stone grew more and more, and became a Mountain, and filled the whole earth. Under the Gospel I shall give you some instances of it: To begin

First with Jesus Christ: It was a main design that the Pharisees had to keep men from believing in Christ, therefore they resolved that they would take some course to lessen the number of Believers; to lessen the number of his followers; See in John, 11. what they feared, and what course they resolved to set upon: 11. 48. verse, Oh say they, if we let him alone all men will believe in him, and the Romans will come & take away our place; Therefore you shall read in the 52. verse that they gave counsel to put him to death: to smite the Shepherd, and the Sheep shall be scattered: they would put him to death that they might not believe on him; Behold how contrary doth God work to the imaginations of these foolish men? for by that very thing, by the death of Jesus Christ, is so many thousand, thousand, brought in to believe in him; they would put the Lord of life to death, that they might not believe in him; and it was the Fathers way to make men believe in him, if I be lifted up, John. 12. 32. And I, if I be lifted up, will draw all men to me: And they say, if he be lifted up, there shall be none drawn to him; ay but If I be lifted up, I will draw all men: if I be lifted up upon the Cross, if I be Crucified, by this means will I draw all men to me. For,

First, Christ became a suitable object for a poor sinner; a poor guilty sinner could never have looked upon a glorious Savior but Jesus Christ he is clothed with garments of blood, that so by that means he became a reconciler: Without shedding of blood there is no remission: Here is encouragement given to poor guilty sinners, that apprehend nothing due unto them but wrath; yet by the blood of Jesus Christ, by that new and living way they come in; and then God the Father too he made a promise to the Son, that because he laid down his life, he should have a multitudinous offspring: in that 53. of Isaiah, In the day that he pours out his soul to death, he should see the travel of his soul, and he should have a large portion; because he poured out his soul to death for transgressors; so you see that the killing of Jesus Christ, and putting him to death, is so far from lessening believers, that this is the way to draw in all those multitudes of souls that were given to Christ of his Father.

Secondly, Again, If you look upon the primitive Churches, you shall find that the worlds persecution had the same effect upon them; there was a great persecution, a mighty storm, which you read of in the 8. of Acts, persecution begun first at Jerusalem; and by that means the Churches were scattered: Well, did this tend to the hindrance of the Gospel, and lessen the number of Believers? No you shall read in that Chapter, that God made this a means to carry the Gospel to many, other Countries were brought in to believe in Christ: the great City of Samaria; you read in the 6. verse. Philip went down and Preached to Samaria; and this did tend to the furtherance of the Gospel: in the 8. verse, They gave all heed, and there was great joy in that City: If you look upon the Churches in those Ages, for the first three hundred years after Christ, there was a most terrible persecution, there were ten persecutions, ten bloody Emperors that sought to root out the Name or Christ, and to destroy the Saint; and therefore those that write of Ecclesiastical History, they tell us, they devised all manner of torments; some speak of about twenty seven deaths they devised to torment the poor Christian; Many thousands, many millions, suffered in the time of those persecutions; and yet this was so far from diminishing the number of Believers, that they were increased: the more they were oppressed and persecuted, the more they increased; and therefore some of them did observe that Julian he used all means to oppress them; shut up all their Schools that they might not have learning; and yet never had they more learning than then: He devised all manner of torments to terrify them, and yet he saw they increased and multiplied so fast, that he thought at last, his best course was to give over his persecution, not out of love but out of envy, because that through his persecution they increased. And thus you see the Point cleared, That the persecution of the Saints shall not diminish the number of them, but shall increase them: For the Grounds of it, Briefly,

First of all, God delights to walk contrary to men; therefore he will have it thus. He loves to cross the imaginations of the hearts of men of the world; and to set his ways against their thoughts and their ways; in the fourth of Micah, the latter end; they say, Let our eye look upon Sin; but what saith God in the next verse? They know not the thoughts of the Lord, neither understand his counsel: When men dream that such a way it shall be the utter rooting out of the Gospel, they are might lie mistaken, saith God, my thoughts are above yours, my ways above yours: You know not the thoughts of the Lord, for this very way shall increase multitudes: God delights to walk contrary to men, and to oppose his gracious thoughts, to their cursed imaginations.

Secondly, The Lord Jesus is a mighty King, all power is given into his hand, both in Heaven and earth; and all this power he will improve for the Kingdom of Saints: all is given to him, and he will give all to them: Neither life nor death, things present, nor things to come, they are all yours: He hath given all to them, and all shall make for their advantage: In this the power of the Lord Jesus, King of Saints, is mightily seen, that he can turn all opposition to advantage: the greatest persecution that the Devils can raise, shall all turn to the advantage of Christ's Kingdom: It is so with particular souls, all is yours, all is yours to do you good; life and death is yours, all given you to serve you, and they shall work together for your good, for your best good, for your eternal good; the Lord makes an advantage of all unto his people; the Devil casts blocks in their way to hinder them; he turns it to their advantage, and so they are helped nigher to himself. all the evil of the world, yea all the evil of sin, and the Devil himself, shall (though against their wills) help forward the salvation of God's people; and so Christ cause all to be for the good of his Church, for the good of his Kingdom all opposition and persecutions which are raised to blow down the Kingdom of Jesus Christ shall but establish it; for 'tis rooted, 'tis a Kingdom that cannot be shaken: And then Thirdly, Men cannot hinder the increase of Christ's Kingdom, for there is no man able to hinder the work of the Spirit of Christ from working; The wind blows where it lists and so the Spirit of God, that breaths where it lists, and where ever he please to breath; It is not possible for man to resist his work: The work of Christ by his Spirit upon men's hearts, is a mighty work, an irresistible work; and all the powers of Hell shall not be able to hinder the work, 'tis a mighty work, and none shall let it.

To apply this briefly;

First of all, It lets us see the vanity of all the attempts of men against the truth of Christ, and the people of Christ, they are but vain imaginations [Use 1]; men do but imagine a mischievous device, that they shall never be able to bring to pass; it is a vain thing for a man to go about to silence the truth of Christ, or to destroy the Saints of Christ; I tell you, the more the truth is trodden on, the more it shall shine; and as it goes with truth, so it goes with Saints, the more trodden on in the world, the more loved of God; all the wind of opposition that the Devils can raise from the world, it shall never be able to shake them, though it may shake some particular grains and ears, that they may fall to the earth, but yet they shall rise again, every grain that falls, shall bring forth fruit, some thirty, and some a hundred fold, the more they are opposed, the more they increase; persecution shall but sow the blood of Christ the thicker, and sow the ashes of the Saints the thicker, and out of their very ashes shall new converts arise.

And therefore Oh that this might be an Item to the Powers of the world to the men of the world that they seek not to suppress either the truth or the people of Jesus Christ. For truly, the more they endeavor it, the more they shall increase; if they cast three of them into the Furnace, a fourth shall be presently added to them.

Object. But you will say, God forbid any should suppress truth, there is none goes about such a work, but only to suppress error: and you will not say that that is persecution; but that it is rather zeal for God.

My Brethren, To suppress error, 'tis a good work, 'tis a blessed work; but men must be careful to do it in God's way. Error in judgment will a great deal sooner be suppressed by the sword of the spirit, then by any sword of man: I tell you God hath appointed a means for the suppressing of error, and men that stray in their judgments, and that is to be convinced by the word of God, in matters of faith men must be convinced by God's word: Our weapons saith Paul are not carnal but they are mighty through God, to cast down strong holds, and sinful imaginations: Paul did not use carnal weapons to bring down sinful imaginations in the hearts of men; he had used those weapons before he was brought home to God, you know he went for power from the High Priests, to persecute all those that believed in Christ; he went to authority to silence them, to stop their mouths and all that he could do, because they pleaded error contrary to the Law of Moses; but you do not read that Paul after his conversion, did use such weapons, he does not call the help of Men, no says he, the Lord he hath given us weapons: Our weapons they are not carnal, but spiritual, and so they are mighty through God: Brethren, I am persuaded it glads the Devil much, when he sees men so violent against error, by drawing the sword against them: I say, it glads the Devil to see men seek this way to suppress them, not that the Devil hates error, or that he loves the truth, for he hates the truth, and loves error; but he knows God will hardly bless that way of men, when men shall neglect God's Institution, and shall cleave to their own ways, and to their own inventions; God will hardly bless that way of men, when his own way is neglected.

Besides, Let men consider, that 'tis possible, that while men go about to suppress error, they may suppress the truth for error; unless you will say any man hath an infallible spirit, or that any company of men hath an infallible spirit; if they have not an infallible spirit, then with what right can they force another's judgment, another's conscience? men may, and do many times suppress truth, under the notion of error; we know in the times of Popery, that truth was persecuted that we now see to be truth; out great truth, our main truth of justification by the free grace of God, and the blood of Jesus Christ without work, without merits: I say, how was this truth persecuted? and how did men seek to persecute this truth as error? many things have been persecuted as error, which now we see to be truth; and why may it not be so now? does all truth come into the world at once? and may not we persecute that which afterwards may appear to be a truth? Well let it be an Item to men, and let them not suppress the truth of Christ: it is a vain imagination, and men shall not be able to bring it to pass, but the more it is suppressed, the more it shall shine, and the more the people of God are opposed the more they shall multiply.

Secondly, Here is a ground of Patience and strong consolation to the Saints in the midst of all opposition and persecution, that they meet with, and may meet with for the name, and truth, and way of Jesus Christ: Hear what Christ saith to you; fear not little flock; you think you are but a small number, there is but a few that profess the name of Christ; and Oh if persecution arise it will lessen the number: I tell you, fear not; that persecution shall not lessen the number, but shall increase the number: though the men of the world may strike at the Tree, and they may beat off many of the branches yet the Lord Jesus he will make use of every branch that is broke off, he will slift it and ingraft it, and so all shall tend to the furtherance of the Gospel and of the truth and of the way of God. But to Proceed.

I shall make some entrance into the main Doctrine: Here you see three cast into the fiery Furnace, and Nebuchadnezzar saw four: Let us consider then who this fourth man was: Nebuchadnezzar could not tell who it was; but he perceived some glorious majesty, and therefore though he was ignorant of Christ: Yet saith he, The fourth is like the Son of God: the form of the fourth is like the Son of God; that's sure, he is more then a man; God hath sent his Angel and delivered them, but this was in truth the Son of God. This Companion that is added to the Saints in Tribulation, it was Jesus Christ, who did at this time create himself a body, and came down visibly amongst men, that so he might support them, and comfort them, and deliver them, that it might hold forth this unto us, that he would come in his appointed time, to rescue his poor people, that lay under wrath, from all the flames of his fathers indignation, and that he would be present with his people in every condition: when they went through fire and water, in the midst of every Tribulation they should enjoy him; so then here is another main Proposition offers itself; and I shall but bring you unto it, and leave the further prosecution of it:

The Proposition is this;

That the Lord Jesus is never nigher to his people, then when they are in great affliction, in fiery trials

I say, Christ is never nigher to his people, then when they are in the greatest affliction: they never in joy more of the presence of Christ, then in sad conditions.

The three Children, they never saw Christ so visibly as here they did, when as they lay in the flames; The children of Israel, they never saw so much of God among them, as when they were in the Wilderness, in the barren Wilderness, where there was neither meat nor drink, nor clothing, for they had a great deal of the special presence of God, and abundance of the power and goodness and faithfulness of God, was manifested to them in a special manner, while they were in that condition: Jacob he never saw such vision of God as at that time when he was driven from his fathers House, when he was forced to fly to save his life; he was in a sad condition, he had not a bed to lie on, he had not a pillow to lay his head upon, but took a heap of stones to lay his head upon; and yet in that condition did God come and manifest himself most gloriously to him: he dreamed a Dream, and saw a Vision of the Ladder set up to Heaven, and of the Angel Ascending and Descending, God was there in a special manner; so he saith, The Lord was there, and he was not aware; never did he enjoy more of God, then in that condition.

Stephen, the first Martyr, never enjoyed more of God, he never enjoyed more glorious Visions of Jesus Christ, then when he looked through a shower of stones that came about his ears, and took away his life; he saw the arm of the Lord Jesus ready to receive him, to embrace him in the everlasting arms of his love he had heard much of Christ in his everlasting Gospel; but he never saw him before with his eye. John the Evangelist, there is another instance, if you look into the first Chapter of the Revelation of John, about the 9. verse. you shall see; there where he was, and in what condition he was in, when he received those glorious Revelations; he said he was banished into the Isle of Patmos for bearing witness to the Name of Christ, and the truth of Christ: he was a Martyr and fellow sufferer, and when he was banished from all friends and comforts, and left naked and destitute of all comforts, the Lord Jesus doth draw nigh, and doth reveal the most glorious Mysteries concerning his Churches to John: The primitive Churches never enjoyed more of God, then at that time when they were most persecuted by men; in the times of those 10. bloody persecution, the Churches had abundance of the presence of Christ, abundance of the Spirit of Christ, and abundance of the grace of Christ, abundance of holy zeal, and abundance of activity for God; it was poured out upon them, the Lord Jesus never took so much delight to walk among them, as when they were in the midst of the fiery persecution.

Quest. If you ask me, But what presence of Christ is it that the people of God do enjoy in their great afflictions, and in the midst of their fiery trials?

Ans 1. First of all, they have most of the supporting presence of Christ; never more of the supporting presence of Christ, then in sad conditions; he supports the inward man, and he supports the outward man; he upholds the spirits of his people in sad conditions, and he makes their spirits able to bear their infirmity: Now here is a wonderful work of the Lord, that he should strengthen the spirit of a poor creature with such mighty power, as to resist, and to keep out the violence of such mighty trials, such great afflictions: There is nothing that the Devil seeks more, then to drive affliction home to the spirit, that so he might crush the spirit and conquer the spirit, when he can get in, and cease upon the spirit, then he becomes master, and creates a deal of smart and vexation: Now the power of the Lord Jesus is seen, in that he doth support and strengthen the spirits of his people; that when they have but a little strength, no strength, and yet are able to hold out, notwithstanding they are so strongly besieged, and so straitly girt many times round about with afflictions; yet he makes that little strength to hold out at that time, that so he is pleased to renew their strength, to give fresh supplies, and to remove the disease, and so the power of Christ is seen in supporting the outward man; many times in the midst of great afflictions: when the Saints meet with great afflictions; afflictions of the body, crosses, such afflictions as might even overwhelm the outward man, and they have but little strength many times, yet the Lord doth so bless that little strength, that though they meet with crosses, that little strength shall not fail, till such time as the Lord do bring deliverance to them.

Secondly, As they have the supporting presence of Christ in the affliction, so they have the enlightening presence of Christ; and that's a great mercy: commonly the Lord never teaches his people more then in affliction; when Christ gets them into the School of affliction then he instructs them, there he doth open men's ears, and he doth seal up men's instruction to them, when Christ draws nigh in affliction: I know afflictions in themselves, cannot teach, but when Christ draws nigh▪ they learn a great deal in affliction; they never see more of God, and of themselves, never more of their corruptions, and vileness that is within them; never see more of the power and way of God, and the mysteries of Christ at that time, when Jesus Christ draws nigh with his enlightening presence:

Thirdly; Jesus Christ draws nigh with his sanctifying presence, his people have more of his sanctifying presence in their greatest trials, when Christ draws nigh to sanctify their afflictions, to subdue their corruptions, and to strengthen their graces: the fruit of their affliction, shall be to purge them from sin; afflictions themselves cannot do it, afflictions themselves harden; but when the Lord Jesus Christ draws nigh in affliction, the Saints do enjoy abundance of the sanctifying presence: and through their afflictions they are made partakers of the Divine Nature; their corruptions are subdued and mortified.

Again fourthly, They never enjoy more of the quickenning presence of Christ, then in affliction: I say, the quickening presence of Christ: many times dead hearts, how are they raised up, when Christ draws nigh to them? how are they elevated above themselves and their own strength, because they are mightily acted by the Spirit of Christ? in the fifth of Hosea, you may see there, how God doth promise his quickenning presence in the time of their affliction; Hosea 5 last verse, I will go and return to my place till they acknowledge their offense, and seek my face: in their afflictions they will seek me early: They were dead-hearted people, and they had lost all activity for God, they were not carried out with desire after God, they would not stir up themselves to take hold of him: Well, says God, I will make them prize me, I will fling them into affliction, and then in their affliction I will draw nigh to them with my quickenning presence; and in their afflictions, they will seek me early.

Again fifthly and lastly, The Saints never enjoy more of the comforting presence of Christ, then they do in the time of their great affliction: in the 2. of the Song of Solomon, verse 6. what says the Spouse there in her greatest afflictions? His left hand is under my head, and his right hand doth embrace me, As Christ doth support in affliction, so he doth embrace in affliction; he commonly never reveals more of himself, never gives out more glorious manifestations of himself, then in the time of affliction: I will bring her into the Wilderness, see that place, Hosea 2. 14. I will bring her into the wilderness, and speak comfortably to her: she shall have my comfortable presence in the Wilderness, I will speak comfortably to her; and so David, he had experience of it, in Psalms 23. Thou art with me, and I will fear none ill, though I walk in the midst of the shadow of death: I will fear none ill, thy rod, thy staff doth comfort me: never more consolations of Christ are given out to poor creatures then when the Lord brings them into great trials: he deals as an indulgent Mother with her child, never manifests more love then when the child is sick; though a Parent does restrain love before; yet then she manifests her love the child shall know that the Parents love it, and then she shall bring out all her sweet meats, in the time of sickness: and so doth the Lord bring out a great deal of sweet meats, they have more sweet meats, and sweet drinks that the world knows not of, then in the day of tribulation, in the day of affliction; when it is sad and dark with the outward man, they have meat to eat that the world knows not of, they have the comfortable presence of Christ that the world knows not of: they have never more of the comfortable presence of Christ then when they are brought into great straits, and low conditions.

I shall have no time to come to the Application; but only let me say this to you: You know not what use you may have of this before another Sabbath, the Lord may bring you into afflictions; and therefore remember this truth, hide it in your heart, that so upon all occasions, you may make use of it; and if God do bring you into afflictions submit willingly and readily to him, submit to low conditions, submit to trials, submit to persecutions; know this, that Jesus Christ manifests his presence; and this is the way to manifest his presence, I will abundantly comfort you in all your afflictions you lay under, and that you meet with for his names sake; and let it help to strengthen your faith; and truly you had need to strengthen your faith in times of affliction, there is no time in which the heart of men, good men are more ready to faint and give over, then in times of trial; how did David cry out? and how did Christ cry out in his great affliction? Oh my God my God, why hast thou forsaken me? In affliction we are apt to think that God hath forsaken us; Zion said in her affliction, the Lord hath forsaken me: in her affliction she said, the Lord hath forsaken me: and thus an unbelieving heart is apt to question in times of affliction, Oh is God amongst us? as Israel said when they were in wants and great straits; Oh then their unbelieving hearts were discovered; though they had seen his Miracles, they tempted God, and said, is God amongst us? And the best of God's people in time of temptation and affliction, may be apt to question, is the Lord with us? Now therefore strengthen your faith in the day of adversity, that so you may not faint and dishonor God, and look unto the Lord Jesus Christ, that beholding the Lord Jesus Christ, your faith may be strengthened; remember that it is his way to give out much of himself to his people in times of affliction; and therefore never say, is the Lord with us? but expect to meet with God; conclude the Lord is with you, and he will be with you in the time of affliction; and remember you shall never have more of his supporting presence of his enlightening presence; his comforting presence; his sanctifying presence; and of his quickening presence: I say, you shall never have more of the presence of Christ, then in such sad conditions:

strengthen the feeble hands and knees, and look to the Lord, that your faith may be strengthened.

THE Seventh Sermon On DAN. III. XXV.

He answered and said. Lo I see four men loose, walking in the midst of the fire, and they have no hurt, and the form of the fourth is like the Son of God.

FRom Nebuchadnezzar's Testimony of this Miraculous Deliverance that God wrought for his Servants: This Proposition was handled the last day: *God often times works such deliverance for his people, as he makes their very enemies to confess, that he hath done great things for them: He made the very Heathen to confess that God hath done great things for his people: When God did turn again our Captivity, in the 126. Psalm, They said among the Heathen, the Lord hath done great things for them. I will make them o the Synagogue o Satan (saith Christ) which say they are Jews and are not, but do lie, I will make them to come and worship before thy feet, and to know that I have loved thee: but this P•nt is concluded; and therefore I shall proceed; For I desire to keep time, and to be short in these morning Exercises: Well then, let us go on, and look upon the Restraint that God laid upon the fire: Consider the effect of God's command, and the effect of his prohibition; God had given command that the fire should not burn them, that the fire should burn and dissolve their chains, and their fetters that were upon them; they were cast in bound, bound hand and foot; but God had commanded, and the fire obeys; it takes part with the three Children, to loose their fetters, and set them at liberty; they were cast in bound: And low, now says Nebuchadnezzar, I see four men loose, God had laid a prohibition upon the fire, and it obeys the commandment, that it should not burn them, that it should not touch their, bodies it should not stop their breath, that it should not so much as singe one hair of their head, or scorch their garments, and the fire is obedient to the word of the Lord; they were walking in the midst of the fire, and they had no hurt: I shall put the particulars together, because I would make hast, they hold forth this Proposition.*

That at the Commandment of the Lord, the fiercest of Creatures shall not only not hurt his people, but shall take part with them, and do them good.

I say, At the command of the Lord, the fiercest of Creatures, shall not only not hurt them, but shall side with his people, to take their part, and do them good: The fire cannot hurt, nay the fire takes part with them, nay the fire sets them at liberty.

First of all, I shall show you that the Creatures▪ cannot hurt.

And then secondly, That they must of necessity take part with the Saints, and do them good.

First of all, they cannot hurt; The water of the Red Sea, it could not destroy the Israelites; The Lions, though fierce creatures, yet they could not open their mouths against Daniel: The most violent men of the world cannot hurt, when God lays a restraint upon them; you know Laban was not able to speak so much as a hurtful word to Jacob▪ because God met him, and laid a restraint upon him; Take heed that thou speak to Jacob neit•er good nor evil: God would persuade his people of this, in that 54. of Isaiah, verse, 15, 16. God would let them know that they were not able to lift up a weapon without him; nay, they could not so much as make a weapon without him; the Smith could not so much as blow the fire to form a weapon without the Lord; Thus saith God, I have power over all creatures, and over all the actions of creatures; a weapon cannot be lifted up, for the workman cannot so much as lift up his hand to blow the fire, unless God permit him; • Dog cannot bark against a man, unless God give leave, the barking of a Dog will do little hurt; yet a Dog could not so much as bark against Israel, when the Lord lay a restraint upon them; God would carry them quite out of the land of Egypt, and not one Dog should move his Tongue at them; as you may see in the 11. of Exodus, verse. 7. you see the creature cannot do the least hurt; for a Dog cannot do so much as bark, he cannot do so much as move his Tongue, when God lays a restraint upon them.

Secondly, The creature cannot hurt, but they must do good to God's people, at his command; if the Lord will make choice of any creature to do his people good, he will effect his own design, it cannot be hindered, he will do them good by anything he will do them good by any creature; by the most violent creature: Who would have thought that the fire should have done these three children good? that the fire should take their part? and yet the fire at the command of the Lord, does loose their bonds, and sets them at liberty: Who would have thought that the waters at the red Sea should have done the Israelites good? and yet they were abundantly useful to them in their passage through the red Sea; you shall read in the 14 of Exodus, verse. 22. that the children of Israel walked through the Sea, and the waters were a wall to them on the right hand, and on the left; the creature that might have been their destruction, became security to them; their way was made strait to them, they could not go out of their way, for the Sea was a wall to them on the right hand, and on the left: Who would have thought that the Ravens should have done Elia so much good? that the hungry Ravens, creature that are of so greedy an appetite, should spare meat out of their own bodies, to feed the Prophet? yet so it was, as you may read in the first book of Kings, 17. verse. 6. God makes the very Ravens to be careful Nurses to Elias; when he was in the Wilderness they brought him his meat in the morning, and in the evening: Who would have been thought that the belly of the Whale should have a protecting place to Johah? that it should save him from destruction? yet God he made use of it, and he made the belly of the Whale to be a place of safety to Jonah, the Whale kept him safe till she carried him and set him on shore: So that you see God can do his people good by any creature, he can make them all to be useful. Sometimes he works by improbable means, and sometimes by impossible means: I say, sometimes God doth his people good by improbable means; to have Honey out of the Rock, and Oil out of the Rock; you will say this is improbable, and yet this is his promise that is made to Israel in the 32. of Deuteronomy. verse. 13. And he made him to suck Honey out of the Rock, and Oil out of the flinty Rock: He speaks of the fruitfulness of the Land of Canaan God made the barren places fruitful, and he made the very Rocks to bring forth, yea the very flinty Rocks to be fruitful; the Rocks gave them Honey, and the Rocks gave them Oil: That is, (as I conceive) God made the very Rocks to bring forth trees, and trees brought forth pleasant fruit, the Rocks brought forth the Olive Trees and the Date Trees, and so they had Honey out of the Rock, and Oil out of the Rock. You know that it was impossible that Israel being carried into Babylon, they should be carried again into their own Country, and while they were in Babylon, they seem to be in the grave: What a mercy was it that God should stir up their enemies to be a defense to them? and to have them to be assisting of them? and to stir them up to the work of the Lord, to work in the Temple? you know God wrought by that means: And so how improbable was it, that Josephs accusation by his Mistress, that his fetters, his chains should be his advancement? and you know God wrought that way, and he made Joseph to be lift up, and made the second man of Pharaohs Kingdom.

Yea God works sometimes by Impossible means; you see it was impossible that the fire should have been a protection to these three Children, to loose their bands, and set them at liberty, and be a place to walk in; and yet it was at the command of the Lord. He can turn the very stones into bread; He can send bread out of Heaven, as to Israel; and give water out of the Rock, as to them in the Wilderness; He cannot only work without means, but by impossible means: And thus you see at the command of the Lord, all creatures must obey; He can do his people good by Improbable means, and by Impossible means;

For the Grounds of the Point; Why creatures cannot hurt, but they must do good to the people of God?

First of all, Because they must all go along with God; and where God is a friend, they must be a friend; where God will not hurt, they will not hurt, for they all go along with him: Balaam could not go against the word of the Lord: If Balak would have given him his house full of Gold and Silver, he could not go against the word of the Lord: and therefore when he would have had him cursed the people: Oh says Balaam, How should I curse, when God hath not cursed, and defy wh•n God hath not defied? This is the voice of all Creatures; how shall we curse, when God hath not cursed? and how shall we hurt, when God hath not hurt? they are all obedient to the word of the Lord, to the command of the Lord; all creatures obey that word of the Lord that he gave them when he first created them; see the 148. Psalm, what is spoken there of all the Creatures of God, they obey that Law he gave them.

Verse 6. Who hath also estblished them forever and ever, he hath made a Decree which shall not pass.

Verse 7. Praise the Lord from the earth you Dragons and de•p waters: And so in the 8. verse, Fire and Hail, Snow and Vapours, stormy winds, fulfilling h•s word: They all obey that Law of God that God gave them, they all keep their bounds, they willingly obey the Word, the Command, of their Creator; and therefore it is that the Sun does rise and set, that so might fulfil the word of the Lord; the Sea that ebbs and flows, and so all creatures they keek their Motion and their Station that so they may fulfil the word of the Lord; and keep that Law that God gave them at the first Creation, when he put them in order, and set them in their bounds. Yea, sometime God doth give another word to them, he doth alter the Law that he made at their Creation; and he gives a new word of command, which is contrary to nature, and then also the creatures they obey that word of the Lord; See what God commanded in the second Book of Kings. 20. 9. 10. verses.

Verse 9 And Isaiah said, this sign shalt thou hav• of the Lord, that the Lord will do the thing that he hath spoken; shall the shadow go forward ten degrees, or go backward ten degrees?

Vers. 10. And Hezekiah answered, it is a light thing for the shadow to go down ten degrees; nay, but let the shadow return backward ten degrees.

Vers. 11. And Isaiah cried unto the Lord; and he broughe the shadow tne degrees backward, by which it had gone down in the Dial of Ahaz.

See, God he can alter the Law of nature, and at his command, the Sun shall not only go forward, but it shall go backward; if God say, Sun stand still, it shall not move; and if God say, Sun go back, it go^h back ten degrees: Thus you see that all the creatures, they obey the word of the Lord, they fulfill every command of God; if he say to the wind, wind arise, arise and blow, it presently fulfills his word; if he send them about any work, and he say, go and carry destruction upon your wings, to such a party, to such an enemy, they presently fulfill the word of the Lord; and then if he say, go and blow such a man profit, carry blessings in your wings, the wind that presently fulfills the word of the Lord; they are all his creatures; therefore they must go along with the Lord; they are all his servants, and therefore they attend him; they are all the Army of the Lord; and all the Host in Heaven and earth are his Army, and therefore they must obey the word of their General; they must obey his word of Command, they are all at his Command: And therefore I say, where God is a friend, the creatures they must needs be friends, they cannot do hurt, for they all go along with God.

Secondly, The creatures they cannot hurt, but they must do good to the people of God, for God hath made a Covenant with all the creatures for his people; There is a League made with all the creatures, even with the meanest of creatures; God hath not left one out of the League: See the 5. of Job, verse 23. For thou shalt be in league with the stones in the field, and the beasts of the field shall be at peace with thee. Now because God hath made a league with them therefore of necessity, Fist of all they must do no hurt, for that is one end of their League and Covenant: When there was a League made between Laban and Jacob; see what is the end of it, Gen. 32. 52. and that thou shalt n^t pass over this heap, and this pillar unto me for harm: that's the end of the League and Covenant, that so they that are in League and Covenant, may not harm one another: Now God hath made a Covenant for his people, with all the Creatures; that is, God he hath laid an Injunction upon them, that they shall not do the least harm to his Servants.

Object. But you will say, may not Creatures be hurtful to the Servants of God? May they not perish by fire and water, and have their lives taken away by Creatures? Was not Stephens life taken away by stones? how then does God make a League with the ston^s in the field?

Answ. I Answer, 'Tis true they may, when God commands them to take away the life of his own people; but still I say, they cannot do them hurt, they do but take away their lives, if they could send them to the torments of Hell, send them to the pit of destruction, that would hurt them indeed; but they cannot hurt them, though they be instruments to take away the lives of the Saints, yet they do them no hurt; for they do but send t^em to their Fathers house, they help them the sooner to God, to rest in the Arms of Jesus Christ, where they shall rest for evermore.

Secondly. Because there is a League with the Creatures, they shall do them good When Jehoshaphat entered into Covenant with Ahab, there was an engaging to do all the good he could, my men are as thy men, my horses as thy horses, and all that's mine as thine: And so saith God to the Creatures, I have put so many particular good things, good qualities into your nature, that so you may convey them to my servants; and therefore I charge you be serviceable to them, give out all the good you can, let them enjoy all the good that I have given to you, for I made you for their sakes: and therefore of necessity they must give out the good that God hath given them, they must do the people of God all the good they can, because God hath made a Covenant with the Creature: And this Covenant that God hath made with the creature, is grounded upon the great Covenant, the everlasting Covenant that he hath made with his people in Jesus Christ, there comes in all the good that we receive by creatures; God hath made an everlasting Covenant with his Son, in which he hath promised to be their God; to take them into Union and Communion with himself, to be their portion, and to give himself to them: And therefore because God hath given himself to them, all creatures also are given to be useful and beneficial to them.

Thirdly, The Third Ground of the Point, The Creatures must needs do good, they cannot hurt, but they must do good to the people of God, because of God's watchful eye over them; the more hurtful and violent any creature is, the more doth the Lord set a watch over them, his providential eye is over his people; I say, the Lord doth watch over them with a special, providential eye: See what is said in the Prophecy of Isaiah, concerning his Vineyard; I the Lord will keep it, I will watch over it every moment, lest any hurt it: I will keep it night and day, lest any hurt it: I will keep it night and day: See then there is a special eye of providence over the Saints that are the Lord's Vineyard; and therefore 'tis not possible the Creatures should hurt it. God he watches over his Vineyard for this end, lest any hurt should befall it; I will watch over it every moment; 'tis true other wicked men, they are kept from harm by a common providence of God, they have their lives preserved; but still 'tis but a common providence: But there is a special eye, and a special providence of God over his people, lest any hurt should befall them; there is no time, no moment, that God doth lay aside his watchful eye, and not watch over his people; And therefore there is no time that any harmful creature can step in to his people to do them hurt; they all come under the providence of God, every creature comes under the providence of God; and therefore the Lord he is able to prevent the harm.

Fourthly, The Creatures they are all given to Jesus Christ, as he is King, as he is the great King: All power is given to him in Heaven and earth: Now Christ he hath reconciled the Creatures, and therefore the creatures cannot be hurtful to the Saints; the Lord Jesus Christ hath reconciled the creature: He hath reconciled all things in Heaven and Earth, and made them all friends; and therefore the creature shall not do harm to the people of God: See the Promise that is made to the Church, in a special manner it shall be fulfilled in the latter Ages; Hosea 2. 18. And in that day will I make a Covenant for •hem with the beasts of the field, and with the fowls of Heaven, and with the creeping things of the ground; and I will break the Bow, and the Sword, and the Battle cut of the •arth, and I will make them to lie do•n safely: This Promise is made to the Churches in the latter days. When they shall enjoy abundance of Jesus Christ, when they shall enjoy abundance of Jesus Christ, when they shall have abundance of the Spirit of Christ; why then shall those promises be fulfilled in a great measure, they shall enjoy peace with the Creatures: In that day I will make a Covenant with them, in a special manner, with the beasts of the field, and with the fowls of Heaven, and with the creeping things of the ground; and I will break the bow, and sword; and there shall be no hurt in all my holy Mountain: we are all reconciled to God by the blood of Jesus Christ; And therefore they cannot hurt the Saints, but do them good.

Briefly to make Application, and so conclude.

If the fiercest of Creatures you see cannot hurt; The fire it cannot hurt, but it must do good, when God commands; take notice then of the mighty power of the Lord: Oh know that he is a great King, and his name is dreadful over all the world; do but look upon the powerful command of God, what effect it hath upon the Creatures: 'Tis impossible they should transgress, he hath set them bounds that they cannot pass; they are all ready to obey his Command; if he say go, they go; and if he say come, they come; why this will make it evident. That God is a God of infinite power, to command so many Creatures, so many thousand thousand Creatures, as God doth order every day; and that God should make them obedient to every command of his, that none can transgress the least command; but they must fulfill his word; when he sets them about it; Oh this declares that God is a God of infinite power, and doth what he pleaseth.

Secondly, What a shame is it to the sons of men that they will not submit to the Lord? Will not the Creatures rise up in judgment against men? When the Creatures fulfil the word of the Lord, and you disobey the word of the Lord; shall God have more service from senseless Creatures, then from the sons of men, that was made Lord over them? Certainly this will be their iniquity another day, and the very creatures will condemn them: See what God says to that fire; fire, burn not: it cannot so much as touch the hair of the head: If God say to the fire, fire, burn their bands asunder; set my children at liberty, the fire it burns their bands and fetters, and sets them loose, that they were able to walk in the midst of the fire.

And so all the Creatures in Heaven and Earth, and the Sea, they all keep their bounds; Hitherto shalt thou go, and no further; the Sea, a raging Element, it obeys the word of the Lord: The Lord says to the Sun, Sun run thy race, it obeys; stand still, it stands still, and is obedient: Now shall all Creatures in their places obey the word of the Lord, and shall not man? Oh what a shame is this to the sons of men, that they should disobey the word of the Lord? That God should speak but one word to the Creatures, and they should obey, and that he should speak so many to the sons of men, and they not obey: That God comes again, and again, and speaks in his Ordinances, and still man walks contrary to God: when he lays a command upon them; this is the command, That you believe in Jesus Christ, and renounce all your own righteousness, and rely upon the Righteousness of the Son of God, and still men disobey: What a shame is it, for man to disobey, and all the Creatures that the Lord hath given to him, to obey?

Thirdly, Here is a great Encouragement, and strong Motive, to those that are strangers to God, to come in and submit to him: Oh that the Lord would persuade your hearts to come in and submit to him! So long as you are strangers to God, see the danger you are in; you are liable to be harmed by all Creatures in Heaven and Earth; they are all at the command of the Lord; they all obey his word; If God say to the least of Creatures go and take away the life of man; avenge my quarrel upon such a Rebel, the Creatures obey: The Lord can arm the least of his Creatures: a fly, he can make that take way the life of man; And therefore 'tis a miserable condition, to be a stranger to God and Christ, to be out of Covenant with God; you have no Covenant made for you and therefore you are left to harm of the Creatures every day: Oh that the Lord would persuade you to come in, to cast away your own righteousness, and to submit to the righteousness of the Son of God, and to make a close with him, and with his Son, and then all Creatures, will take his part: and if God be your friend, they will be your friend; and if God will not curse, they will not curse; and if God will not hurt you they will not hurt you; for they are all obedient to the command of their Maker.

Again in the fourth place, To make haste; This may let us see, that it is not in Creatures to do us good without: I say, 'tis not in the power of Creatures to us the least good without God: We are apt to look too much upon Creatures; you expect too much from Creatures, and too little from God; and therefore it is that oftentimes we are disappointed: I tell you, they cannot do us the least good, without the command of God; the very meat you eat, it cannot refresh you, unless it have a command from God, and a blessing from God, and the very clothes that you wear, cannot warm you, unless they have a command from God; there is no creature can do you good unless it have a command from God, and a blessing from God: I beseech you take notice of it: Oh we are apt to propound such and such things to ourselves if we had such a portion of the creature: men think, Oh if they had such an Estate, so much riches; and if they were in such places of honor, and if they had so much wealth, and such and such a creature, such and such friends and relations: such meat to eat, and such drink to drink; and such clothing to put on; then they should be satisfied, and their lives made comfortable; I tell you, my Brethren, 'tis a great mistake; if you had those very creatures you would have, still they could not satisfy you, nor make your lives comfortable: If God do not come along with the Creature, the Creature cannot satisfy you: God he can make your lives comfortable in the want of Creatures; 'tis as God will come in; and 'tis as God will bless: See what Job propounded to himself, in that 7. of Job, verse. 1•. When I said, my bed shall comfort me, my Couch shall ease my complaint: Though Creatures be never so likely of themselves to comfort a man, if God will not make use of them, they cannot comfort: What more likely to give Job ease, then his Couch, then his Bed? he had wearied his body; and his Bed and his Couch is a place of ease; but I cannot find it so, saith Job, I expected that it should ease me, I will lay my head upon my Pillow, and take my rest, but I could not find it; no, it terrified my thoughts: and truly friends, you may think of all the Creatures you enjoy, you may think that the Creatures will comfort, but if God doth not make use of it, it cannot comfort you; and if God will make use of any Creature, it shall comfort you: If God make use of imprisonments, bonds and fetters, they shall be engagements to you, and make you sing in the Stocks at midnight; God can say to the Creatures go and comfort: You know when God commanded the heaps of stones that Jacob laid his head upon, to give him comfortable sleep, he slept well that night, he slept better upon his heap of stones, then he did upon his pillow, when God makes use of the Creature to comfort: and therefore do not think you have comfort from Creatures, as Creatures; 'tis God that must come in and bring comfort to you, for God can make every Creature comfortable; and the best of Creatures cannot comfort, if God do not come in.

To Conclude all.

Fifthly, Here is matter of great comfort to the people of God; it may be a Prop to their faith, to their confidence; if they consider this, that all the Creatures are at God's command, and God can make use of any Creature to do them good; he can make use of their Bonds; it is a mighty comfort to you that are the people of God, to remember this upon all occasions, where ever you are, in your way, in your journey, in your voyages, whether you be at Sea or Land; still remember, that all the Creatures they are your Fathers Host, they all fulfil his Command, they cannot disobey his Law, they cannot hurt you without commission: Nay, though they be hurtful, yet he can do you good by them: Oh how quietly may God's people walk in the midst of all Creatures, when they are at Sea, and when they are on land? in the midst of dreadful Creatures, they may walk safely, for why? they are at your Fathers command, and they cannot do you the least hurt, though they be hurtful in themselves in their own nature; and therefore upon all occasions strengthen your faith in the Lord: What shall we say to these things, saith the Apostle in the 8. of the Romans, the latter end: If God be for us, who can be against us? I tell you, you may challenge all the Creatures in Heaven and Earth, if God be with you; if he be your portion, if he hath received you into Covenant, and you have made a close with God: And therefore in all places and dangers, walk by faith; strengthen your faith in the mighty power and goodness of God, that hath the Command and Rule over all Creatures.

THE Eighth Sermon On DAN. III. XXV.

He answered and said, Lo I see four men loose, walking in the midst of the fire, and they have no hurt, and the form of the fourth is like the Son of God.

I Have handled many Propositions out of these words; The last day, we considered that Addition that God made unto these Martyrs while they were suffering for his Name sake: There were but three cast into the fire, where as their enemies looked that they should have been all consumed, and none left to bear witness any longer against their Idolatrous ways, the Lord makes an addition to them; there is a fourth that joins himself to them to bear witness with them unto the truth of God, which they suffered for.

Hence we raised this Proposition.

That all the opposition & persecution that the people of God meet with for the Name and Truth of Christ, shall not diminish their number, but shall increase them

I shown how the children of Israel were multiply'd by those oppressions, and heavy burdens that were laid upon them in Egypt; the more they oppressed them, the more they increased, saith the Text: I gave you an instance in Christ; what counsel did the Scribes and Pharisees use, in the 11. of John, to hinder the number of believers: If we let him alone, all men will believe in him; Now they thought they would take a sure course that none should believe in Christ; They put the Lord of life to death; smite the Shepherd and the sheep will soon be scattered; but this did not diminish the number of Believers; no, God did out reach them, and made this the way to bring in men to believe in Christ: If I be lifted up, saith Christ, I will draw all men to me; The Lord Jesus by dying, becomes a suitable Object to poor guilty, unclean sinners, which durst not else have drawn nigh to the glorious Fathers: and Because he pured out his soul as an offering for sin: his Father gave him a portion with the great and mighty, so that the number of Believers were increased, and not diminished by this mischievous device against •im. The Primitive Churches persecution that was raised in Jerusalem; it did help to the increase of the Gospel, and number of Believers; The Apostles and Brethren were scattered, in the eighth of the Acts, so they carried the word up and down, and by their means many were brought in to God: Samaria, a great City, many in it were converted; They with one accord gave heed to what Philip spake, and there was great joy in that City. I shown you out of Ecclesiastical story, that all the persecutions, those bloody persecutions the Church me• with, did not diminish, but did increase the number of Believers: The Lord delights to walk contrary to wicked men; to cross the corrupt imaginations of the men of the world; In those things wherein their deal proudly, he will be above them; he will let them know, that his thoughts are above thy thoughts, and his ways above th•ir way•. When they say concerning Zion, Let her be defiled, and let our eyes •ook upo• her, let us see her desolation. They know no• the thoughts of the Lord, nor understand his Counsel: for the event shall be quite contrary their expectations. The Lord Jesus is a great King; and therefore it shall be so; All power is given into his hand in Heaven and in Earth, and he will order all for the advancement of his own Kingdom: all is his, and he hath given all to the Saints: All is yours, all shall do them good, all shall further and increase their graces, and the increase of his Kindom; There is none can hinder the Lord from pouring out of his spirit, there is none can hinder the Spirit from working; and therefore all opposition cannot hinder the increase of Believers: The wind blows where it lists, and so the Spirit of the Lord, breaths where it it pleaseth: Man may as well stop the Sun in the Firmament, or hinder the Sun from shining▪ and the wind from blowing, as the Spirit of the Lord from working grace; he darts in beams of light, beams of conviction, to the hearts of Creatures; and his work is an irresistible work, all the powers of Hell and darkness shall not be able to hinder his work; Therefore I conclude this Point, with an Item to the men of the world; To take heed how they seek to oppose the truth of Christ, and the people of Christ; this is not the way to diminish their number, no▪ the Lord he will out reach them in all their design• of persecution; the hottest pe•secution shall but increase the •umber of the Saints; they shall but sow the blood of Christ and their ashes, the thicker, and if one fall to the ground, a hundred shall rise up in their stead.

But I entered into a second Point; in which I shall proceed: After we considered who this fourth man was; Neb•chadnezz•r saw four men loose, walking in the midst of the fire, and t•ey have no hurt, and the form of the fo•rth is like th• Son of God, it was indeed the Son of God: It was the Angel of the Covenant, the Lord Jesus, who did assume a body at this time, and came down to refresh his Servants in the fire: It holds forth this, That he would in time come to deliver poor servants from the flame; of his Fathers wrath; That he would be present with his people in all afflictions, in the midst of all their fiery trials:

The Proposition then entered into is this.

That the people of God never enjoy more of the presence of Christ, then in their lowest conditions.

When they are in great afflictions and fiery trials, the Son of God is with them. Here you see it in this fiery trial; Israel never saw more of God, then when they were in the barren Wilderness: Jacob never had such glorious visions, as when he was driven from his house and home, when he was separated from all creature comforts, had not so much as a Bed to lie on, nor a Pillow to lay his head upon, but laid him down upon a heap of stones; then had he those glorious Visions of the Ladder set up to Heaven, and of the Angels ascending and descending. Stephen never saw such glorious Visions of Jesus Christ, but when he was under a shower of stones that took away his life; He looked up, then and he saw the Heavens opened and the Son of God at the right hand of the Father, ready to receive him. The Apostle John never had so glorious Visions, as when he was banished to the Isle of Pamos, then did Christ reveal those glorious Mysteries, written in the Book of Revelations, concerning the Churches, to the end of the world. The Primitive Churches enjoyed most of Christ in the times of persecution they enjoyed most of the presence of Christ, and most of the mind of Christ, most purity, and most holiness, they had most of the supporting presence of Christ, then his left hand is put under to support a poor Creature, when it is in a low condition, in a sinking condition, in an afflicted condition: He supports the inward man, and he supports the outward man; he makes a little strength to go a great way, as the Oil in the widows cruse, till such time as he sends deliverance unto his people: They have never more of the enlightening presence, of the teaching presence of Christ, then in such conditions: Affliction is Christ's School, in which he teaches his people many precious Lessons; they have never more of the *quicken*ing presence of Christ, then in such conditions: never more of the Sanctifying presence of Christ, he is pleased to make use of affliction, to knock off that unevenness many times that is upon their Spirits, and make them partake of his own nature. They have never more of the comforting presence than in such conditions; he brings his people into the Wilderness there he allures them and there he speaks to them; then he puts under his left hand to support them, and then his right hand embraces them: But, What are the grounds of the Point? Why doth Jesus Christ manifest most of himself to his people in their afflicted conditions.

First of all he knows that then they have most need of his presence. If ever they have need of comfort; if ever they have need of strength, of teaching, quickening, guiding; 'tis then when they are in afflicted and low conditions, then is a mercy sweet, when 'tis in season; and then 'tis seasonable, when a poor creature stands in need of it: The Lord Jesus knows that they have need of his presence in low conditions.

First because of the weakness of the flesh; And,

Secondly, Because of the strength of temptation.

1. Because of the weakness of the flesh: He knows his peoples frame, and remembers that they are but dust; and therefore he pities them; He knows how unable they are to bear, and how little time they are able to hold out; and therefore sometimes the Lord Jesus hath spoken comfortable words to his people, when they have expressed a great deal of weakness in them: See in Mat. 26. when the Disciples could not watch with him; at the 41 verse, they could not watch with him one hour, though he was in great extremity, and they might have expected a sharp reproof from him: the Lord Jesus he looks upon them, and he pities them, he rather excuses them, and comforts them. Oh The Spirit is willing, but the flesh is weak: He knows what the weakness of flesh is, for he was partaker of our flesh and blood, he remembers it since he was in the days of his flesh how weak the flesh is; he is partaker of our flesh and blood, saith the Apostle; he knows what it is for a poor creature to grapple with fears, with inward fears, ever since he poured out his strong cries unto his Father, with tears: none in the world are so sensible of affliction, as they that have gone under the same affliction themselves; the Lord Jesus he is sensible of all the weakness, of all the sorrow of his people; he knows by experience what they mean; he knows what it is to be weak, and he knows what it is to be in fear; he knows what it is to grapple with the wrath of his Father; he knows what it is to want his Fathers Countenance; he knows what it is to be acquainted with sorrow, with grief; there was none so acquainted with them as he: See what the Prophet Isaiah says of him, in Isaiah 53. verse. 3. He was despised and rejected of men, a man of sorrow, and acquainted with grief; and we hid, as it were, our face from him: A man of sorrows, and acquainted with grief: grief and sorrow were his greatest acquaintance, when he was upon earth; they were his acquaintance from the beginning of his life; and they were his companions, from first to last, from the womb to the Cross, they were the acquaintance that Christ could never shake off; his old acquaintance, when all his friends lest him, when his Disciples left him; in affliction did they leave him; but his grief did not leave him, he was always acquainted with it, and he was acquainted with all sorrows, with all grief, grief of all sorts; he knows what spiritual sorrows are; and therefore he will pity people his under them: a natural man cannot pity a poor creature that groans under spiritual sorrow, he knows not what they mean, what it is for a poor creature to groan under corruption, and cry out of the want of a believing heart, and of the want of God's presence; but now the Lord Jesus is acquainted with these sorrows also he had experience of them in his own person. The woman that hath been in Travel, pities another that is in the same case; the Lord Jesus, he newly come out of Travel, he remembers his pangs still; and therefore he pities poor creatures when they groan under grief and sorrows, for he was acquainted with them himself.

2. Again secondly, He knows they have most need of his presence, in afflicted conditions, because they are most nigh to temptations; and he knows what temptations are; he knows the strength of Temptations; he knows that it is the Devils policy, to drive home temptation to the spirit of a poor creature at that time when it groans under affliction; and therefore he knows that then a poor creature, if ever, stands in need of the presence of the Lord Jesus; when Satan stands at the left hand to resist, Christ had need to stand at the right hand to comfort and support, and strengthen; and therefore the Apostle saith; that he was tempted in the days of his flesh; in that 2 of Hebrews, verse. 18. Being tempted, he was able to succor those that are tempted: he knows by experience what it is for a poor creature to be tempted; he knows that temptations are most grievous to a gracious heart: Temptations are worse than afflictions, and therefore though a poor creature stands in need of succor in affliction, yet much more in temptation; When temptation goes along with affliction, Oh then the Lord Jesus knows that there is need of his presence: When a City is besieged, and the Inhabitants within it be disquieted, and the enemy hath raised their Batteries, and makes breach upon the Walls, and their Provision grows low, Then, if ever, they have need of relief: Truly so it is with a poor tempted soul; when it is afflicted Batteries are made against the Spirit; provision, strength, is little, knows not how to hold out; then the Lord Jesus, he is their friend; and therefore in such conditions, he usually makes hast to afford his presence: That the first Ground of the Point.

The Lord Jesus knows, if ever, then they have need of his presence when they are in low conditions, for then the flesh is weak, and then temptations are strong.

Again secondly, The Lord Jesus manifests most of himself to his people in low conditions, because he remembers the kindness of his Father, when he was in the same condition; I say, he remembers the kindness of his Father unto him, when he was in low conditions; now he will requite this kindness upon them, that kindness that God the Father did show to Jesus Christ when he was in affliction, and in low conditions; I say, he will requite it upon his people, it makes deep impressions upon the heart of Christ; the love that his Father shown him when he was here in the days of his flesh, when he was in weakness, and was in perplexity, and was in distress, he cannot forget it: You know what impression Jonathan's kindness made upon David, because Jonathan shown him kindness when he was in distress; his kindness made impression upon his heart, that he could not forget it; he inquired for some of his children, that he might requite the love of their Father, which he shown to him when he was in low conditions; Jonathan shown him kindness; when Saul persecuted David, Jonathan stepped between David and him, and was as a faithful friend to David: and therefore saith David, I will requite his kindness; if I can find but one poor Mephibosheth, that calls himself a dead Dog; yet David shows a great deal of kindness to him, to requite the kindness of Jonathan: And so doth Jesus Christ, he goes up and down to inquire in the world, where is the Seed of God, the Sons and Daughters of the most High, that I might show them kindness for my Father's sake: Oh he showed me kindness when I was in distress, and therefore I will do the like to them, when they are in affliction and low conditions: Oh saith the Lord Jesus, I remember since your Father and my Father, took care of me when I was helpless; he formed me in the womb, and he took me out of the womb; he guarded me all my life long, Thirty years and upward, when I was in the midst of the world, with Bears and Tigers; I remember how he sent his Angels to comfort me when I was wearied out by Satan's temptations; Nay, I remember when he stood by me, when all left me and fled; when all left me, that I had none in the world to stand by me, the Father stood by me; and therefore I will lay all this kindness upon you his seed: The last kindness that the Father shown to the Son, it took mighty impression upon him; that his Father did not leave him alone, but was always with him; And therefore Christ he often makes mention of it, in that 16 of John, verse. 32. The Father hath not left me alone, but he is with me all my life long; he never left him alone: yea, when he was in his affliction and low conditions, the Father did not leave him alone; See that 16. of John, verse. 32. Behold the hour comes, yea is now come, that ye shall be scattered every man to his own, and shall leave me alone; and yet I am not alone, because the Father is with me: This made deep impression upon the heart of Christ; that the Father did not leave him alone, when he was in his affliction, when he was persecuted, when all his friends upon earth fled from him, then the Father did not leave him. And therefore the Lord Jesus Christ, he did often retain this Kindnesse; and he will not leave the Sons and Daughters of God alone in low conditions, but he will be present with them; though they be in the fire and water, he will be sure to comfort them with the same consolation, wherewith his Father comforted him, when he was in the same distress; That's the second Ground of the Point.

Thirdly, Christ will show most of his presence in afflicted conditions, because he remembers his Engagement, he is engaged then to manifest most of himself.

First of all He is engaged by his Promise and Covenant; He hath promised to be with them always; he hath promised never to leave them nor forsake them: as the Father promised to be with him in trouble, so he hath promised to be with them: You may see his Fathers promise to him, in Psalm 91. 15. He shall call upon me, and I will answer him, I will be with him in trouble, I will deliver him, and honor him. Now as the Father made a promise to be with the Son in trouble, so hath he made a promise to be with his people in trouble: See that promise in the 43. of Isaiah, verse. 1. 2. how he hath promised to be with his people in all Tribulations, in the midst of the fire and water, and fiery try als; nothing shall separate betwixt him and them, he is always making good his Promise; and therefore he will fulfill it to them.

Secondly He is engaged by a Law of Love: There is a Law of Love written in the heart of Christ; he takes delight in his people, they are the joy of his soul: in the 16. Psalm. at the beginning of it. it is spoken there of Christ; All my delight is in the Saints, saith Jesus Christ, and these that are excellent upon Earth; All my delight is in them, next to the delight that Christ hath in his Father; to that Infinite, Incomprehensible Light; his delight is in his Saints, in his people; and therefore because he loves them, because he delights in them, he will be present with them; he loves their presence; where ever they are he loves to be with them, though their condition be never so sad; though they be in prison, it shall be a Heaven to Christ, because he bears dear love to them, he loves to see their face; he loves to hear their voice, he loves to enjoy Communion with them; he loves to be giving out of himself to them: and therefore he made it his great request before he went to Heaven that his Father would make room for his people, as you may see in John 14. beginning of the third verse: And if I go and prepare a place for you; I will come again and receive you unto myself, that where I am, there you may be also: he tells them, he would have them with him in the same place; they shall enjoy the same glory. and they shall have no worse room then he: And he besought his Father, John 17. 24. That those who were given him of his Father, might be with him: Father, I will that they also whom thou hast given me, be with me where I am, that they may behold my glory which thou hast given me; for thou lovest me before the foundations of the world.

Father, I desire that they may be with me; I desire thou shouldst bid them as welcome to Heaven as thou bidst me; and that they may partake of the same glory as I do, that they may •e in the same place that they may always see •y <◇> ▪ and I may see their faces, for my delight is in them: Heaven could not content Christ with•••the presence of his Saints: and it is a second, Heaven unto Christ, to be present with them here upon earth; wherever they are, or whatever their condition, though be never so low; though they be in prison, in chains, in the stocks, the Lord Jesus loves to be with them; he carries them about in his heart, and therefore he cannot be absent from them.

Again Thirdly, He is engaged by a Law of Friendship, to be most of all present with them in their low conditions; the Law of friendship binds him to it. Affliction is a Touch-stone, it discovers feigned friends, and real friends; it shows whether a friend be Cordial or no: By the Law of Friendship, a man is bound to stick to a friend in the midst of all his adversity, and then there is most need of a friend: It was a reproof unto Hushai, that Absalom gave him in that second of Samuel, 16. 17. Is this thy kindness to thy friend? why went you not along with your friend? David was a friend to Hushai, and saith Absalom to Hushai, Is this thy kindness to thy friend? why wentest thou not along with thy friend? This shall never be said of the Lord Jesus Christ, that he broke the Law of friendship: It shall never be said of Christ, is this thy kindness to thy friend? Why wentest thou not along with thy friend? Thov wentest not along with thy friend, but thou forsookest thy friend, when thy friend had most need of thee; no, the Law of Friendship is i• Christ's heart, and he will keep it; and therefore he will stick close, and most close to his people, when they are in low conditions.

Again Fourthly, There is a fourth engagement. He is present with his people most of all in low conditions; in afflicted conditions, because he is engaged to look after h•s work, 'tis the work of Christ's own hand; he sends afflictions for that end, to work something in the heart of his people: and therefore he is engaged to see what becomes of his labor and pains, that he may not loose his cost and labor: When a Physician gives a Purge to a P•tient, he is engaged to see what becomes of his Physic, how it works; So the Lord Jesus Christ, the great Physician, he never gives any bitter Purge, any bitter Pill of affliction to his servants; but he looks upon himself as engaged to look after it, that he may look after his Physic, and see how it works: the very presence of Jesus Christ will help the Physic, if it work too much, or too little; if the soul despise, the chastening of the Lord, or faint under the chastening of the Lord; the Lord Jesus can by his presence he•p: When the Gold Smith pu•s his Gold into the Furnace, then he is engaged to be present to look after his Gold; and so is Jesus Christ when he duts his people into the Furnace of affliction; he is engaged to look after his precious Gold, that so none may be lost and consumed in the fire: You see the Grounds of the Point.

Quest. If you ask me, how doth Christ give out much of himself in affliction? By what way or means doth Christ communicate much of himself in affliction: Briefly for answer:

Answ. First of all, he doth raise up his people's faith unto a high pitch; many times, I say, he raiseth up their faith to a more then ordinary pitch, he clears the eye of faith, and strengthens the eye of faith: Now the more the eye of faith is cleared and strengthened, the more it sees of Jesus Christ: Now the Lore he doth mightily strengthen faith; many times in affliction faith is strengthened, for faith is left alone many times, and then it works best; all props are taken away, God takes away all sense, many times, and leaves faith to work alone;

now faith never works better then when 'tis alone; it meets with a great deal of opposition; and faith is strengthened by opposition; the nature of faith doth take his rise by opposition; the more opposition it meets with, the higher it rises: The woman of Canaan, what opposition did her faith meet with? that which was a discouragement to her, yet from that discouragement, her faith takes a rise; and because Christ says; she is a dog, therefore she is confident that she shall have Crumbs of mercy before she goes away: When faith is put to extremity, then it becomes strong: When faith is exercised in extremity; I having wavered a long time, at last it sees that it must either believe or perish, believe or sink; it fares in such a condition, as with a man that is to pass over a River, he being afraid that the Bridge should not bear him, stays long before he dare venture; at last he sees the River swell higher and higher, he goes to make an offer, and pulls back his foot; he dare not venture; at last the water swells up to the neck of the Bridge, and he sees there is no way but one with him, either he must venture upon the Bridge, or else perish in the water; and then he considers, that many have gone over that way, and many have been saved that way, and it hath born up many, thousands have gone over before, well he ventures: and so doth many a poor soul waver many times, draw back his foot, dares not venture upon Christ, can he bare me up? and will he bear me up? may I venture? God he puts faith many times to it, puts it to such a strait that the soul must venture or perish, believe in Christ alone, or perish; faith here many times takes a rise; that's the first way whereby Christ doth communicate much of himself in affliction, he many times lifts up faith, and strengthens faith; Now the more strong faith is, the more it sees, the more it apprehends of God.

Secondly, He pours out the Spirit of Supplication many times upon his people when they are in low conditions; he makes them to cry out, to cry a main to him, as he cried to his Father in his distress, he puts up his cries; He puts up his requests with strong cries and tears, and he was heard of his father; And so the Lord Jesus he doth pour out of his spirit upon his people, that he may stir up their souls in such a way as Christ is taken with; Let me see thy face, and let me hear thy voice, saith he, for sweet is thy voice, and thy countenance is comely, 'tis melody to Christ; Christ draws nigh to hear the melody; and the nigher Christ draws the more evidently the soul sees him.

Thirdly, The Lord Jesus by affliction, or in affliction he draws the hearts of his people nigher; Then he doth bring them back many times from their wanderings, from their stragglings: Before I was afflicted I went astray, saith David. The Lord Jesus by affliction, he brings them nigher to himself, he causes them to wait more upon him, to eye him more, to keep closer unto him, and to take heed of straggling: Now the nigher the soul is brought to Christ, the more it sees of him, though it be not for our waiting not for our believing, our walking, that Christ doth manifests himself: Commonly when Jesus Christ manifests much of himself, he will draw his people's heart to look towards him, and wait upon him.

Fourthly, He manifests most of himself in affliction, by his word which be sends along with affliction: Commonly, I say, when Christ doth afflict his people, he sends his word along with affliction, some word of instruction, or some word of promise, or some word of Counsel; there is some word or other that goes along with affliction, that so Christ may teach them before they go out of that sti•g: Now the word of grace the word of Promise, it is the Chariot on which Christ rides; he doth by them draw nigh, by his word he draws nigh to the soul: and therefore when the word comes with evidence, Christ comes along with the word, and then the soul sees most of Christ, because Christ sends such a word to the soul in affliction; which word he comes along with & in which word he conveys himself to them.

Quest. It may be some of God people will say, Alas if this be true, that Christ manifests most of himself in affliction, what shall become of me? I have had no such experience, I cannot say that I have had most of God in affliction, I have not enjoyed the presence of Christ in many afflictions.

Answ, Why art thou one that hast closed with Christ, and received the mercy of the Gospel? Why then certainly it cannot be, but that thou hast seen something, or thou mightest have seen something of Christ in affliction; do not say thou seest nothing of Christ in affliction; do not say thou hast not enjoyed any of the presence of Christ in affliction; hast not been supported by Christ in affliction; and is that nothing, sayest thou to support a poor creature under affliction? Hast thou not been supp••ed by the strength of Christ or by some word •• Christ in affliction? And hast thou not said as David said, I had perished in my affliction, if thy word had not been my stay? hath not Christ given thee some secret Refreshment in affliction? surely he hath been nigh to thee and thou wett not aware; he hath fed thee in affliction, and thou didst not take notice of it; Joseph he sed his Brethren and they did not know it was Joseph; And so Christ he doth give sweet refreshments to his people, and they do not take notice of it; they do not consider that it is Christ that supports them: Oh thy Spirit had sunk under affliction, if it had not been Christ that had upheld thee!

Object. Ay, But if it had been Christ that had supported me in my affliction, I should h•ve gained by my affliction, I should have seen the benefit of my affliction; but I see nothing at all, affliction is come and gone, and left nothing behind.

Answ Hast thou seen nothing, no, benefit? Why resolve again to walk through, though thou hast not seen, thou mayest see; and these afflictions that have been laid upon thee, though they be gone, the fruit of them may be to come: When man takes Physic, you cannot expect that he should have health the same day, strength the same day, he must wait some days after; and see how his strength comes in, and then afterward he perceives the benefit of his Physic; and so it is with affliction, God may, and doth do his people good by affliction, though they saw little benefit while they were under affliction: The rain doth make the earth fruit••l: but the growth of the corn 'tis not seen presently; wait a while, stay a Week or a Fortnight, and then look into the Field and you shall see the rain was beneficial to the Field, and so 'tis with afflictions, they are as rain, when the Lord Jesus comes along with them he makes them very beneficial to his people; Ay• but the growth is not discerned presently: No, stay a while; But do not thou say in unbelief, I shall get no good by my affliction; no thou hast got good by thy affliction; The Lord hath said it, he hath said That All things shall work together for their good; he hath said, that He will purge away their sins; he hath said, that We are made partakers of his Divine Nature, by affliction: and therefore give not way to unbelief; do not by unbelief, shut out the blessing; but believe that it shall be as God hath spoken; and though thou hast not seen the accomplishment of the promise, go and wait upon God, watch over thine own heart; look to thyself, the Weeds grow as well as the Corn: you know how it was with Hezekiah, and therefore we had to need watch over our own hearts, and know thou shalt get good by affliction; for God hath spoken it, and it shall be accomplished unto thee in the Lord's due time; for the Lord will fulfill his word.

THE Ninth Sermon, On DAN. III. XXV.

He answered and said▪ Lo I see four men loose, walking in the midst of the fire, and they have no hurt, and the form of the fourth is like the Son of God.

YOU may remember the Proposition in hand; Namely, That Christ is never rigler his people than when they are in great afflictions, in fiery trials: He entered into the Furnace here; into the fiery Furnace, that he might save his people harmless: I gave you the Grounds the last day; why Christ draws nigh to his people, and why he doth communicate most of himself in their afflicted & low conditions.

First of all, he knows that they have most need of him, they have most need of him because of the weakness of the flesh; and because of the strength of temptation; he knows the flesh is weak; and therefore he expresseth pity and compassion to his Disciples, when they could expect nothing but fury from him, they could not watch one hour, when he stood in need of them; and yet the Lord Jesus pities them; The flesh is weak, but the Spirit is strong; he knows what the weakness of the flesh is; and he himself was partaker of our flesh, that he might know experimentally what the weakness of the flesh is; and therefore well might Isaiah say, He was a man of sorrow; a man of sorrow, and acquainted with grief; he was a man of sorrow all his days, and he had no other acquaintance almost but grief and sorrow when all his acquaintance left him, his grief and sorrow followed him, even to the very grave; and therefore there is no grief, no sorrow, but the Lord Jesus had experience of it, that he might know how to pity his people in their weakness, and when they lie under their burdens.

Again, He knows the strength of temptation, he knows what it is for a poor creature to be tempred, for he was in all things tempted like unto us, saith the Apostle: He had experience of all manner of temptations; he knows how to relieve his people under temptation, he knows, their straits, when they are besieged; he knows how the force of Satan's Batteries are; he knows that in their weaknesses the Devil takes advantage against them, and then above all other times endeavor to drive home the darts of his temptation into their Spirits; and therefore the Lord Jesus because they have most need of him, he pities them, and relieves them at that time.

Again, He remembers the kindness of his Father to him in his low condition, and therefore will show the like kindness to his people in their low conditions; he remembers that his Father did not leave him in his straits, and therefore he will not leave them in their straits: The kindness that God the Father shown to his Son when he was upon earth, took such an impression, made such an impression upon the heart of Christ that he can never forget it; but he will always labor to requite it, by showing the like kindness to the people of God in their distress: Oh how was he taken with that kindness, that The Father would not leave him alone? how often doth he make mention of it; I am not alone, but the Father is with me? and therefore he enquires for some of the Saints of God, that he may show the like kindness unto them: David remembers the kindness that Jonathan shown him, when he was in his low condition; and therefore David enquires for some of his children; Is there none left of the house of Soul, that I may show kindness to for Jonathan's sake? though there be but one poor lame Mephibosheth, one that is lame of his feet, that is no fit companion for a King; yet for Jonathan's sake, and for the kindness Jonathan shown to David: David shows great kindness to Jonathan's son, took him, and set him at his Table: so doth Jesus Christ deal, he remembers the kindness of his Father, the kindness the Father shown him in his low condition; says he, is there none of the seed of God? are there none of the children of the most high, that I may show kindness to, for the fathers sake? Because he shown kindness to me in my low condition; and though he can hear of none but poor lame Mephibosheth, yet he shows kindness to them, takes them into communion with himself, sets them at Table with him, and in the midst of their low conditions will afford his presence▪ because his Father & their Father did not leave him alone when he was in low conditions. Again, The Lord Jesus he is bound unto this by many engagements; I say, he is bound to be present with his people in low conditions; He is bound by his Word, by his Promise, by the Law of love that is in his heart: All my delight is in the Saints, and those that be excellent; it is a second Heaven to him, next to the presence of the Father, he delights to be in the presence of his Saints, and therefore because he delights in them he will be present with them, though they be in the prison, in chains and fetters, though they be in the fiery Furnace; yet it is a Heaven unto Christ to be with them; for all his delight is in his Saints; He is bound also by the Law of friendship, to be with them in low conditions; a friend is tried in adversity; it was a reproof to Hushai, when he left David in straits; and therefore says Absalom, is this thy kindness to thy friend that thou wouldst not go along with thy friend? It shall never be said so of the Lord Jesus, it shall never be said of him, Why didst thou not go along with thy friend? for he will go along with his friend in the greatest adversity: he will not leave them, but afford them his presence.

Again, He is bound because his work is in hand; A Physician is bound to look after his Patient, because he hath given him a Purge: And so the The Lord Jesus is bound to look after his Patient when he hath given him a Purge: Gold-Smith is bound to look after his Gold when he hath put it▪ into the Furnace: And so the Lord Jesus is bound to look after his Gold when 'tis in the Furnace of affliction.

But I come to the Application.

First of all for Instruction: This lets us see the wonderful unparallel love of J•sus Christ; I beseech [Use.] you take notice of it, and get your hearts affected with it: here is such love as creatures cannot show, a friend that will never leave one; a friend that will always afford his presence, in the greatest straits; afford his presence, that's a friend indeed; a man may be brought into such conditions, as all his friends may forsake him, all men upon earth may leave him; David was left of his best friends; Father and Mother forsook him: and Jesus Christ was left of his best frsends, they all forsook him and fled; and truly this may be the condition of any man upon earth, cast out and forsaken of friends, of most friends, of best friends: will a friend venture his own life for a friend? will a man keep his friend, when some deadly infectious disease is upon him? when he hath a plague sore upon him? will he then lie down in the bosom of his friend? when a man is condemned to the flames of fire, when a man is cast into the fire, will a friend follow him into that condition? Truly such friends you will hardly find upon earth; but this is the friendship of Jesus Christ to his people: when he first looked upon them he saw how many plague sores, infectious diseases were upon them, and yet that could not hinder him from drawing nigh, and affording his presence, and from working mightily by his spirit, upon their hearts: Nay, when they are brought to fiery trials, to great afflictions; yet even then he will not leave them, and he will not forsake them; and this makes the love of Christ the more remarkable, that he should thus condescend when he was at the highest, for he is now advanced above the Heavens, he sits down at the right hand of the Father, he is at the highest condition, and yet he is pleased to condescend to the lowest condition, he is pleased to come down when they are in the depths, in the greatest straits that possibly can be; what love was that the Spouse speaks of in the 5. of Canticles, and the last verse: she speaks a great deal of the beauty of Christ, and in the last words she makes her boast of her Beloved: This is my Beloved, and this is my Friend, Oh Daughters of Jerusalem: I will compare with you all; I will compare my friend to all the friends in the world; This is my Belov•d; and this is my friend; she compares him for for his beauty; and so you may compare him for his love; you may make your boast of the Lord Jesus; you may say, This is my Beloved, and this is my friend.

Secondly, What a strong Motive may this Doctrine be unto such as are strangers unto Jesus [Use:] Christ, to come in and submit unto him? What glorious Benefits may you be partakers of? What a desireable thing is it to have such a friend as Christ is, which will be present with his friends in their lowest conditions? Oh that every man would set down and consider that which Solomon speaks of, to remember the days of darkness, which will be many; many days of darkness may come upon the earth, what a favor will it be to have a friend in the darkness? a friend that will stick by thee when thou art in the dark a friend that thou mayst take hold of his skirts when thou art in the dark Entry; a friend that will hold thee fast when thou art in the dark: such a friend is Jesus Christ to all that do embrace him: Oh what a favor, what a mercy will it be, to have a friend stand by thee, that is both able and willing to help thee, when all Creature-comforts shall fail, when the very strength of body shall fail? to have a friend stand by to help and succor? and truly such a friend is the Lord Jesus: what saith the Psalmist, in the 73. Psalm, verse. 26. My flesh and my heart faileth, but God is the strength of my heart, and my portion forever: heart and flesh fail, and then there is a strength above nature; the Lord then is the strength of my heart, and of my flesh and blood: What a mercy will it be, to have one stand by you, when you go through the valley of the shadow of death, a friend then to comfort, a friend then to uphold? such a friend is the Lord to his people; David was confident of this, therefore you see how his faith triumpheth in the consideration of it, in Psal. 23, verse. 4. Yea though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear none ill; Why? For thou art with me; see what a mighty confidence was raised up in David's heart; and what was the ground of it? The presence of the Lord? Though I walk in the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear none ill: why? For thou art with me; he doth put cases of the most uncomfortablest condition that may befall him; valley of the shadow of death, though I be brought down from the Mountain, and walk in the valley; and though this valley be a dark way, though it be a shadow of death, that is, though it be never so dreadful; and though it be so nigh that all the world cannot save you, even then, when I am in such a condition, and walk in the valley of death, I will fear none ill, for thou art with me; so long as I have thy presence, my soul is upholden: you read in the 4. of Revelations, at the 6. verse, that the world is like a sea of Glass: I saw before the Throne a sea of glass: there the world is shadowed out unto you, and the condition of men that are in the world, the world is like to a sea of glass: and Oh that men would remember this; if it be a Sea of Glass, what need have you of a friend to stand by you? you that are Travelers in the world, you walk upon a Sea of Glass; Oh what need have you of a friend to take you by the right hand; to uphold you? there is none but Jesus Christ, none but his presence can uphold you in this Sea of Glass: and if this world be a Sea of Glass; Oh what need have we to take Jesus Christ into the Ship, into the heart, that so he may be our Pilot, and he may guide you safe? Oh do but think in what stead Jesus Christ will stand you, when the storms arise, and the waves shall beat when it may be the body of the Ship shall be split, in pieces; Oh what will it be then for a Savior to uphold the Spirit, to bear up the spirit, and take the soul upon his own shoulder, to bear it above wrath and amazement? Now do you apprehend this to be desireable? Oh that the Lord would make your hearts to close with Christ, to accept of Christ, and the tenders of mercy now held forth in these days of grace! I tell you, the time is coming, when you shall see weakness written upon the tops of the Mountains; they will say, look to yourselves, for we cannot help you; now will not the presence of Jesus Christ be desireable to you in such a condition? Oh then I say, accept of him, he freely tenders himself to you now in this day of grace; and Oh that the day of grace might not be slighted! his presence is desireable in such a strait; and is he not now desireable, that so you may have him in such a time of need?

But Thirdly, This let's us see, that there is not such great evil in affliction as men apprehend; men fear affliction, and flee from affliction as from Toads and Serpents, and cannot endure to think of affliction, cannot endure to think of the day of darkness: I say, there is not so great an evil in affliction as men apprehend, for the Lord Jesus is present with his people in affliction; and there is no reason why you that are the people of God should inordinately fear affliction, and why you should inordinately seek to be delivered from affliction; seeing you may possibly enjoy more of the presence of Jesus Christ in affliction, then ever you did in other conditions? would a loving wife be afraid to go into a dark place when she shall meet with her Beloved? Why should you be afraid to go into a dark place when you shall meet with the presence of Christ? Remember that Expression of the Martyr, when he was ready to suffer death, he breaks forth into this expression. Come fire, and come wild beasts; Come rack of the body; Come breaking of the bones; Come all the torments in Hell, that all the Devils in Hell can afflict with, I care not so I can meet with the presence of Jesus Christ: Remember how many of the Martyrs have ventured into the flames to meet with Christ? they have willingly sacrificed their lives that they might meet with Christ: shall Peter venture into the water, and shall the Martyrs venture into the fire, and shall you be afraid to enter into an afflicted condition, where you may meet with the presence of Jesus Christ.

There are two things that make the people of God to fear affliction inordinately:

1. First of all, Either they do not believe that they shall meet with the presence of Christ in an afflicted condition. Or
2. Secondly, They do not believe that the presence of Christ will countervail the bitterness of affliction.

Now I shall endeavor to clear both these, and to persuade you that are the people of God: First of all, that you shall certainly meet with Christ in affliction: And then that his presence will countervail the bitterness of affliction.

First I say, You shall certainly meet with Christ in your affliction; for first of all▪ he hath spoke it, he hath promised it, he hath set a part the time and place of his own appointment; he hath given out the word, the word is out of his mouth, and 'tis under his own hand written, 'tis under his hand and seal, that he will meet with his people in afflicted conditions, he hath said in the 5. of Job verse. 19. that he will deliver thee in six troubles, and in seven; and every Promise is under the Hand and Seal of Christ: and so in the 43. of Isaiah, God promiseth there, to be with his people in all their afflicted conditions; in their greatest afflictions: In the 43. of Isaiah, and the second verse, When thou passest through the water, I will be with thee, and through the R•verse, they shall not overflow thee, when thou passest through the fire thou shalt not be burnt, neither shall the flame kindle upon thee: the fire, that is in the greatest straits: in thy greatest affliction, when the waters are ready to overwhelm thee, I will be with thee, and lift up thy head; I will be with thee in fiery trials, when flames are ready to consume thee, I will be with thee: I say, you may be confident of it, because the Lord Christ hath given it under his hand and seal, that he will give your souls a meeting in such a condition; is there anything that can hinder Christ from performing this his promise; he cannot forget his word, he cannot mistake the time and place, he cannot be hindered by any outward impediment: I say,

1. First of all, He cannot forget his Promise, though he hath spoken many years ago, yet the Lord he cannot forget his promise; he is always mindful of his promise: See in the first of Chron. and the 16. Chapter, and the 15. verse, He is mindful always of his Covenant, the word which he commanded to a thousand generations: though the promise▪ be given out never so long ago, suppose it be a thousand generations, yet the Lord he is always mindful of his promise, always mindful of his Covenant, to a thousand generations; a man may promise his friend to meet with him, but it is possible a man may forget his promise, but so cannot God, he is ever mindful of his promise.

Again, He cannot mistake the time, happily a man though he hath promised, yet he may mistake the time, he knows not how the time passes, and so may be deceived; but it cannot be so with God, he knows all times, all creatures; Foreknow• unto God are all his works, from the beginning of the world, Acts 15. 18. Nay, he cannot be hindered by any impediment; his Father will not hinder him; he was willing to spare him out of Heaven for many years together, that so he might be present with his people, and all creatures cannot hinder him from performing his promise; see the 27. of Isaiah, verse 4. Fury is not in me, who would set the Briars and Thorns against me in battle? I would go through them, I would •urn them together; The greatest opposition was briars and thorns to Jesus Christ; briars and thorns before devouring fire, will soon be burnt; and therefore upon this you may be confident, seeing the Lord Jesus hath given out his word, he will keep time and place with you.

Again Secondly, You may be confident of his presence in affliction, because affliction is, for this end, it is the main end that Christ in affliction may meet with his people, that he may draw them into •igher communion with himself, that they may see more of him, & that they may enjoy more of him, and he enjoy more of them; that he may make use of affliction to remove that which is in the way between him and the soul, to subdue corruption, and to strengthen faith, and to draw forth grace, to heighten the holiness, and the grace of the soul; and to comfort the heart, and all that the soul may enjoy more communion with Christ; he doth take his people into a by-Lane, as I may say, in every affliction that he may speak unto them; he took the Spouse into the wilderness that he might speak to her; and so doth Jesus Christ when he takes his people into a by-way, it is, that he may speak something more to them, that he may speak freely, and speak something that may be for their good; he doth not speak in affliction, because he delights in affliction, he doth not delight in their afflictions; he doth not afflict that he may be satisfied: no, afflictions they are not their punishments, for God hath satisfaction at the hand of Jesus Christ, and therefore it relates to something to come, that he may with this Chastisement draw the soul more nigh, and see more of him, and enjoy more of him, more of his presence, of his love, more communion with him, that he may comfort, strengthen and support, and sanctify: and therefore seeing it is the end, the main end of affliction, that Jesus Christ and his people may meet and converse together; certainly God's people must not slight this his afflicting them, must not slight this main end of God.

Object. But if Christ do meet with his people in affliction, the presence of Christ cannot countervail the bitterness of the affliction.

Answ. But it will to the full, for there is that in the presence of Christ, which may supply the wants of all creatures: I say, there is all goodness, all sweetness gathered together in the Son of God, which is scattered up and down in Creatures, and therefore in Heaven the Saints need no creature comforts, they need not the light of the Sun, nor the light of the Moon; and there all recomfortable relations are broken a pieces, there is no husband, nor wife, nor child, Master, nor servant; why? because the good of •ll these lations do meet in Christ, and the good of all these relations shall be supplied by the presence of Christ, and therefore Christ tells his Disciples in Mat 22. 30. In the Resurrection, (saith he) they neither marry nor are given in Marriage, but are as the Angels of God in Heaven: they neither marry nor are given in Marriage; that which is the most comfortable relation in earth there is no need of in Heaven, 'tis too poor, too needy for Heaven, there shall be no marrying nor giving in Marriage; and •o the comfort of all other relations shall be found in Christ. In him there is a perfection of all goodness, of all sweetness; now you cannot meet with the fullness of these in any condition; there is a fullness of joy in Christ, a fullness of good in Christ; what says the Psalmist in Psalm 16. v. last. In thy presence is fullness of joy, at thy right hand are pleasures for evermore. there is a fullness of joy in the presence of Christ, there is not a fullness of sorrow in any condition, no, there is a mixture of Mercy in every condition; the evil that a Soul meets with is not infinite, there is not a fullness of sorrow, but in the presence of Christ there is a fullness of joy, there is that which can abundantly countervail the evil that is met with in any condition; if all the evil under the Sun were met together in one condition, and a Soul brought into it, yet it might find in the presence of Christ that which may answer that condition, the presence of Christ will comfort, and support, and raise up a Soul in that evil condition; and therefore you shall find that the presence of Christ hath made the Saints to rejoice in Tribulations, to joy abundantly. The Apostles rejoiced that they were counted worthy to suffer for the Name of the Lord Christ: it doth fill the Soul with holy joy, heavenly Raptures, yea the presence of Christ hath been astonishment to the Soul many times when it hath been in a sad condition: see what Paul saith of himself in 2 Cor. 12. 2. I knew a man in Christ about 14 years ago, whether in the Body I cannot tell, or whether out of the Body I cannot tell, (God knows) such a man whether in the Body, or out of the Body was caught up into the third Heaven: some think this vision of Paul was when he was in a sad condition, it was immediately after his conversion, when the light of his Body was taken away by blindness: Now it is supposed when Paul was blind in his Body he had this Vision of Christ; you may see what abundance of sweetness he found in Christ, it carried him beyond himself, he was carried out with holy Raptures; I knew not where I was, (saith he) whether I was in the body, or was taken out of the body, I cannot test, the Lord he knows! and therefore still I say there is no cause why any of God's people should inordinately fear affliction seeing you may meet with the presence of Christ in that condition, and the presence of Jesus Christ, will countervail the loss of all Creature comforts, and the sweetness of it will be equivalent to the bitterness of it, let thy condition be never so low: That's the third Use.

Fourthly, Let the people of God expect the presence of Christ in their affliction, in their low condition; seeing Christ hath promised his presence, do you expect his presence, look for his presence: Oh that we might labor to improve our affliction for this end, that we may meet with more of Christ, that we may enjoy more of the presence of Christ in our affliction; truly there is a great deal lost, God's people lose abundance of sweetness which they might enjoy both in Ordinances and in affliction, if their hearts were raised up to look for the performance of that which Christ hath promised; if we would believe that Jesus Christ will be as good as his word: did our souls expect the fulfilling of this word, that we shall see the presence of Christ in affliction; why then should we be so loath to suffer for Christ, and be unwilling to submit to low conditions, seeing it is the will of God that we should suffer? Therefore I beseech you, you that are the people of God, get your hearts enlarged in affliction, that so you may get above your affliction, if that you shall certainly meet with the presence of Jesus Christ in your afflicted conditions; he hath spoken it, he hath given out the word, and therefore he will fulfill it; what confidence had the people of God in their affliction, when they remembered this? I will fear none ill; though I walk in the valley of the shadow of death; And see what David saith, in the 27. Psalm, the beginning of it, The Lord is my light and my salvation, whom should I fear, the Lord is the strength of my life, of whom should I be afraid? I cannot tell who the enemy is, who is it? he looks and he finds none in all the world, whom should I fear and be afraid of? so long as the Lord is with me, I see no such enemy; and therefore I beseech you that you would look after the presence of Christ expect the presence of Christ in all your afflictions that you meet with.

Object. But you will say, I have no such word as David had, David might well believe that the Lord would uphold him; for David had a particular word God spake to David, he ware to David, He swore by his Holiness that he would not fail David; and so others of the Saints, they had a particular word the Lord spake to Joshua, Fear not, I will not leave thee, be courageous, but we have no such word, and therefore how should we expect to meet with Christ in afflicted conditions.

Answ. I Answer first of all, Though God does not speak now from Heaven by Visions, he doth not reveal himself by Urim and Thummim. as unto David yet we have a larger word than David had, and Joshua had; the Scripture is larger now, we have abundance of the word; there was but little of the Scripture writ in David's time, and less in Joshua's time, there was none of the written word, but only the Book of Moses; but now we have the word of God complete, we have a sure word, a large word, and 'tis full of gracious invitations and encouragements; and therefore the Saints now may be encouraged as well as they to whom God spake.

Secondly, Yea Secondly I say, God hath sent forth more of his spirit now in a Gospel way, in a way of Gospel dispensation, there is a great deal more of the Spirit of Christ poured out. Now 'tis the work of the Spirit, the Office of the Spirit, to particularize those promises to the soul, to take th• promises and bring them home to this and that particular soul: Now where the Spirit of God comes, • comes with evidence, and he brings home the word of grace to th• soul, that the soul cannot gainsay it, nor resist it.

Object. But you will say, How shall I know 'tis the Spirit of God that doth speak to me?

Answ. I Answer, The Spirit of God always speaks according to the word of God; I say, it speaks according to the written word that is given to us, it speaks according to the word of grace, for the spirit and the word do bear mutual testimony one of another.

But I Answer, 'Tis in the power of the Spirit to resolve the soul; the Lord Jesus sends forth the Spirit with so much evidence, •s to convince the heart that it is the spirit that speaks; the Lord Jesus he is able to persuade the soul that it is not a delusion; but speaking according to the word of grace, it is indeed the voice of the Father, the voice of the Spirit that speaks.

Objct. But you will object further; If the Lord Jesus be present with m• according to his promise; if the Lord were present with me in affliction; why how is it possible that it should be thus with me as it is? How is it possible that there should be so much deadness, and so much of the world, and unbelief? Surely the presence of Christ is not with me in my affliction.

Answ. I Answer to such a poor soul, that looks after the presence of Christ, and fain would enjoy the presence of Christ, but cannot see him in affliction;

I say first of all, Undoubtedly there is the presence of Christ with thee, and thou canst not but thou mayst see something, if unthankfulness doth not lie before thine eyes; he is there, the Lord Jesus is there, and he will make good his word; certainly if he hath promised to be with his people in afflicted conditions, he will make good his word; an• he is with thee at the door, though he may be behind the Curtain, and undoubtedly he is not far; as I said before, Joseph was with his Brethren when they did not know him; and so the Lord Jesus is present with his people, and they do not see him, he doth feed them, support them, and maintain their lives, and they not know it.

Secondly, Yea I say secondly, That if thou dost not see more of the presence of Christ, the fault is in thee, 'tis not in the Lord, not in the word of the Lord, he is present according to the word that he hath spoke; and therefore Christ may be present and thou seest him not because through negligence thou dost not stir up thyself to take hold of him, thou givest way to a slothful spirit, and so thou dost not stir up thyself to take hold of him, or else thou dost not exercise faith in thy afflicted condition, and then no wonder though Christ be with thee, and thou seest him not: Faith is the eye of the soul, and if that be shut Christ may stand at the right hand and the soul not discern him: and therefore I say, stir up thy faith, go to the Lord to strengthen thy faith, and stir up thy faith, Faith shows Christ, represents Christ to the soul; Faith takes hold of Christ, and brings the sweetness and the comfort of his presence to your souls.

Or it may be 'tis through unthankfulness, that thou dost not see the presence of Christ, thank thine unthankful heart; I tell thee, thou hast a great deal of thanks to give, and thou sayst Christ is not with thee: who is it that supported thee? who is it that put under his hand? was there more strength in thee then in others? Surely there was an everlasting Arm put under to support thee in thine affliction; and is not here matter of thankfulness? And this you may be sure, all ye people of God, the heart of God is always towards you; though his face is not towards you, his hand may seem to be against you, yet his heart is always towards you; and therefore still, I say, the people of God ought to expect that they shall see and enjoy the presence of Christ and shall meet with him in every affliction.

Fifthly and Lastly, What cause of thankfulness is here? What cause hath the people of God to be thankful to Christ that hath made this comfortable provision for them (as this?) that he is pleased to walk in such a gracious way, and to afford them most of his presence at that time that they stand most in need of it? Here is matter of thankfulness that the Lord should not leave you alone, but afford you his presence; Here is matter of double thankfulness that the Lord Jesus should not leave you alone in your afflicted condition: Oh 'tis an uncomfortable condition to be left alone; Woe to him that is alone; saith the wise man, if a man fall and be alone who shall help him up? and how miserable had it been if we had been left alone in such conditions, in afflicted conditions, when we were fallen low? but the Lord hath not left his people alone.

Nay, here is further matter of Thankfulness, that he should afford his own presence to his people; If the Lord had sent a Messenger to comfort a poor afflicted Creature, we should have thought it a great mercy; but that he should afford his own presence in affliction, that he should come himself to support and strengthen, what a double mercy is this? This is more then if he had sent twelve Legions of Angels to comfort in afflicted conditions: Oh what is the presence of Christ? 'tis the greatest good in the world, 'tis life eternal, 'tis the beginning of Heaven, and shall be the fullness of Heaven hereafter; the fullness of joy, is the presence of Christ, it shall be the greatest misery to loose the presence of Christ; and therefore that is a most dreadful threatening, when God doth threaten to depart from a people; see how God doth threaten Jerusalem, in Jeremiah 6. 8. Be thou instructed Oh Jerusalem, least my soul depart from thee, least I make thee a desolate land, not inh•bited, Least my soul depart f•om thee: Now when God departs, what follows? nothing but desolation; So in the Prophet Hosea, see there what a dreadful threatening 'tis for God to depart, in Hosea 9. 12. Though they bring up their children yet well I bereave them, that there shall not be a man left; yea w• also to them when I depart from them: There is all threatenings sum•d up in this, and more cannot be said (w• unto them when I depart from them.) You see it will be the greatest evil in the world to be shut out from the presence of God it shall be the Torment in Hell so depart from Christ: Why then 'tis the greatest mercy to enjoy the presence of Christ; if God go away, all blessings go away with him; Woe to them if I depart, now on the contrary, when the Lord Jesus comes unto a soul, all blessings come along with him; when Christ comes to a poor afflicted creature, Oh what sweetness comes along with Christ? there is comfort, and there is refreshment, there is grace, and there is holiness, and there is support, there is life and light, all come along with the presence of Christ.

Object. Ay but if I could find the effects of these, may some soul say, I shall labor to thirst after Christ, if I could find these effects of Christ's presence, why then I may be comforted, but alas I find not the effect of his presence, and how then should I think it to be his presence that is with me?

Answ. I say Believe; Believe that Christ is present with thee; I speak to every soul that hath made a close with Jesus Christ in the tenders of grace; I say, 'tis thy duty to believe that he is with thee in thy afflicted condition: Believe it, though thou seest not the effects of his presence, and that is the way to see; believe that he is present according to his word, and through the grace of God, thou shalt see the effect of his presence; only Christ would have us to believe his word, Christ would have thee believe that he keeps time and place with them, and that he is with them in afflicted conditions; yea he deals with his people as Jobs friends dealt with him, they came to visit Job in his affliction, but sate them down seven days, and spake not a word unto Job, and at last they found an opportunity to speak; even so doth Jesus Christ, it may be he may sit seven days and not speak a word to his people, he may come to the soul, and not speak a word to the foul in an afflicted condition; all the time he sits by them, and looks on them, and his heart is toward them, and his bowels relent, and he will break out at last, and he will speak unto them; it was long ere Joseph did reveal himself to his brethren, when they were in straits, but at last he breaks out, and says he, I am your brother; and so the Lord Jesus he may sit long before he speaks a word; O• but at last he will break out, and then shalt thou see that Christ was present with thee; and therefore 'tis thy duty to believe that the Lord Christ is with thee in thy affliction, though thou seest him not, though he be behind the Curtain; and believe that thou shalt see the effect of his presence, he will not go away and leave no blessing behind him; surely where he comes he brings a gift with him, he does not come empty; and therefore believe that thou shalt see a blessing left behind; it may be thou mayst not see •e gracious effects of the presence of Christ in thee, but believe the time is coming when thou shalt see; a friend may come with a Present to a friend, but no• presently give it him, it may be he will sit with him a long time, and when he is ready to go away he will give the gift to him; and so the Lord Jesus Christ, he never comes empty, and he comes and sits long before he gives out that grace, that strength, that comfort, that is in his hand ready to give, but undoubtedly Christ will give it before he goes away; and therefore 'tis the duty of all his people to wait upon him for the giving of that grace that he hath promised to their souls; and therefore when Christ comes to a soul, manifesting of himself is expressed to the soul by his supping with the soul, see Revel. 20. Behold I stand at the door and knock, if any man hear my voice and open the door, I will come in to him, and will sup with him, and he with me: If any man open the door, I will come in and sup with him; he doth not say, I will come in and break-fast with him, or Dine with him, no, he shall have my comforts before I go away, though I be at the last Meal, I will be sure to sup with him, though he break his fast with sour herbs and dine with sour herbs, yet I will be sure to sup with him, and he with me; before I go away I will open my Bottels, and pour out my Flagons of Wine, and he shall taste of my Duties before I go; and therefore the Martyrs cried out, He is come, he is come, meaning the gracious presence of Christ to their souls; the Lord Jesus will at last manifest himself to his people, and will be present with them in their afflicted conditions, according to his word: and 'tis the Lord Jesus his will, that his people should expect his presence, though he do not give it out to them presently, yet wait for it, and he will abundantly satisfy your souls before he go away.

FINIS.

A SERMON Preached in Norwich, upon the day of the Mayors entering into his Office.

ECCLES. 9. 10.

Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might: for there is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom in the grave, whither thou goest.

WE shall not seek far for the sense of the words, we shall find the sense in themselves: Some conceive that Solomon spake in the person of the natural man, or the Atheist, who keep this Counsel; Follow after the world, enjoy thy pleasure and thy profit, and do it with all thy might, for thou hast no long time to enjoy them in; there is nothing in the grave, and therefore now take thy fill. But I rather conceive that Solomon spake here as a Prophet, in the person of a Prophet, and spiritual man, and gives better Counsel then this, from the seventh verse, unto the end of the Chapter. He gives advice in the seventh verse, to take the comforts of those things that God hath given: And upon this Account, Because the Lord accepts thy works: Go thy way, eat thy Bread with joy, and drink thy Wine with a merry heart, for God now accepts thy works: And so in the ninth verse: Live joyfully with thy Wife whom thou lovest, all the days of the life of thy vanity; not with the Harlot, as the Atheist would have spoken; but with the wife whom thou lovest: And so also this Counsel in the Text, seems to be given by Solomon, in the person of a spiritual man: Whatsoever thy hand finds to do, do it with all thy might, for there is no working in the Grave, &c.

The wise man here gives counsel unto all men to improve the time of life, he calls all men to activity in the time of life: And first he declares wherein men ought to be active, Whatsoever thy hand finds to do: Whatsoever is in thine hand to do (as some read it) Whatsoever God puts into thy hand to do, in thy general or particular Calling, more especially in the great Affairs that do concern the world to come, whatsoever thy hand find to do in relation unto the state of Eternity, whatsoever thy hand find to do; a man finds that sometime which he seeketh, and sometimes that which he seeketh not: After thou hast sought out the mind of God, and dost know what is his will concerning thee; when thy hand hath found out what to do, then do it with thy might; or if the Lord shall prevent thee with his goodness, and shall discover his will to thee, when thou soughtest not after it; Oh then give up thyself to work the work of God, and do it with all thy might: And then he shows in the second place, how men must work these works of God; do it with all thy might, with all diligence, with all faithfulness; lay forth thyself to the very utmost for God; do it with thy might: This he presseth with two Arguments.

First, There is no work in the grave, there is no work to be done there, that is the place of rest, there is no possibility of working; if thou wouldst work afterward, thou canst not, thou shalt not be able to work, there is no possibility of working for God, and for thy soul, when once in the grave; there is no believing, there is no repenting, there is no turning to God, when once in the grave; if it be not done before thou comest there, it is like to be undone forever; There is no work in the Grave.

And secondly, as there is no work in the grave, so there is no device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom, there is no means to accomplish work; if there were any work to be done in the grave; there is no means to accomplish this work, there is no knowledge in the grave. This Argument is further backed by the consideration of the hastening of that estate of death, where there shall be no possibility of working; there is no work in the grave whither thou goest: He doth not say there is no work in the in the grave whither thou shalt go; but whither thou goest, thou hadst need make hast; for thou art going Thou, and Thou, and everyone, thou goest to the grave, thou art making post hast thither, thou art going every moment, thou art every moment stepping over the Threshold of Eternity: And therefore the Result of all is this.

Whatsoever God shall lay before thee to be thy work, whatsoever thou hast to do for God, or for thy soul, in the great business of Eternity, do not dally with it, do not defer it, do not put it off, there is no work in the grave, there is no possibility of working there: If thou wouldst, there is no means to accomplish work there: And this condition is hastening upon thee, thou art stepping into the grave every moment, thither thou goest; therefore he saith, what thou doest, do it with thy might.

I shall fasten upon this one consideration to prosecute at this time.

Observat. That it concerns every living man to do with his might, whatsoever he hath to do for God, or for his own soul, in that great business that doth concern Eternity.

It concerns every living man and woman, to do with all their might, what ever they have to do with all their might, whatever they have to do for God, or for their own souls in the great business that doth concern Eternity.

I shall here show you, First, what it is for a man to do with his might.

Secondly what are those things that God requires of everyone of you to be done with your might; And that will make way for the Application.

First of all, What is to do with thy might?

To do with thy might; First, is to do with diligence, to do diligently, to take all opportunities of doing for God; yea seek opportunities, not only embrace opportunities, but seek opportunities of doing for God: Our Lord Jesus Christ went up and down doing good, in the days of his flesh; he sought opportunities to serve his Father, and to serve the sons of men.

The Sun carries his light up and down the world, and visits poor Creatures that are in darkness; when a man is faithful in taking opportunities to do for God, in seeking opportunities, when a man works with diligence, then he works with his might.

Again secondly, To do with thy might; to do with a man's might, is to do or work resolutely; to do with resolution, not to be beaten back by discouragements, and by opposition, that doth lie in the way; never did any work meet with so much opposition, as the great work of our Redemption by Christ; But he brake through Devils and all the powers of darkness that were in his way, he did with his might the work of his Father, for he did it with resolution: To go on notwithstanding all storms, all winds that blow, though never so many dangers lay in a man's way, though there seem to be Lions in the way, great enemies, great persecutions, loss of name, loss of estate, loss of friends, to go through evil report, as well as good, to break through the strife of Tongues, and the strife of hands: This is to work Resolutely, this is to do with a man's might.

Again thirdly, to do with a man's might, is to do faithfully; when a man works faithfully, and sincerely, when he doth not warp nor turn aside; when he is not biased nor drawn by the allurements of the world: In the 33. of Deut. it is said that Levi did not know his own Father, nor his own Mother, nor his children: he did the work of God with all his might, for he did it faithfully: And when the cause of God was in hand, he knew no friend, he knew not his Father, he knew not his children; Get thee behind me Satan, saith Christ to Peter, a dear friend, a chosen Disciple; yet when Peter will dissuade Christ from doing the work of his Father, Peter is a Satan, he is an adversary; get thee behind me Satan▪ And so, what do you mean to vex my heart? saith Paul, when his friends dissuaded him, I am ready not only to be bound, but to die at Jerusalem for the name of Christ. When a man works faithfully, then he works with his might.

Fourthly, when a man works spiritually, then he works with his might: When his heart goes into the work, when the spirit goes into the work, when a man is content not only to give God the outside, but his heart shall be engaged, and that shall bow to God, and submit to Christ: If he do not find that his heart and spirit is engaged in the work; he cannot be satisfied: It is said of good Josiah, in the 2 of Kings, 23. verse. 25. there was none like to him, there was none like before him, that turned to the Lord with all his heart, with all his soul, and with all his might: He turned with his heart and soul, his heart and Spirit was engaged in it; and therefore now he did it with his might.

Fifthly, when a man works with his might he works speedily; I say speedily: Our Lord Jesus did the work of his Father with his might, and he began betimes, in the morning; he was called the Hind in the morning; he was hunted betimes in the morning; He began betimes to work the works of his Father: when he was thirteen years of age, he was found disputing among the Doctors, and saith he, Wist you not that I must do the work of my Father? To begin betimes in the day of youth, to take the best season, the fittest opportunity to do for God; when a man doth speedily, then he doth with his might.

Sixthly, When a man doth strenuously, when he doth with all his strength, with all those abilities God hath given him; when he is content that God should have all that he hath; that God should serve himself of the best he hath, and rejoice that he hath anything for God; when a man lays down himself, and lays down all at the footstool of God, & saith, Lord take me, and take mine, and improve me to the utmost of thyself; it matters not what become of the Creature, so God may be glorified; when a man works thus, he works strenuously and with all his might.

Seventhly and lastly, when a man works constantly: When a man holds out unto the end, when he is willing to abide with Jesus Christ, yea to abide with Christ in his tribulation; when he is willing to serve the Lord all the six days of his life; when he is content that his works and his life should be finished together, and not one before the other: Thus it was with our Lord Jesus Christ when he was upon the Cross, his work and his life were finished together▪ when a man works thus to the end, this man works with his might. That is the first Particular, we hasten to the second: You have heard what it is for a man to work with his might.

The second follows: What those things are that every man ought to do with his might.

I shall speak first to Sinners, and then to Believers, and show both their works: Something the Lord requires of both to be done thus, with all their might.

If Sinners ask what is their work? I answer; First, their work is to know themselves: To know that they are poor and miserable, blind and naked, that they are lost and undone; that they are without light, and without life, and without strength, and without hope for eternity; that they have sinned, and cannot satisfy; that they have lost themselves, and cannot return of themselves; that they have done evil, and cannot do better of themselves: If free grace do not prevent them, they are as poor wandering sheep upon the Mountains; they are like to wander, and wander, and wander forever, till they be separated everlastingly from the Lord, if the good Shepherd of souls do not go forth to seek and save them: That is the first thing that doth concern them to know, seek after this knowledge, and that speedily, with all your might.

Secondly to know the Lord Jesus; it concerns the sinner to search after the knowledge of Christ, to know that he is the only Mediator between God and man; to know that all pardon, all peace, and all grace, and all strength, and all holiness, it must come in through the blood of Jesus Christ; that this Lord Jesus is freely held forth to lost sinners; he is tendered by free promise, or Covenant of grace: and that men are invited everywhere to return to the Lord, to deny themselves, their own works, their own righteousness, their own worthiness, and to submit to the righteousness of the Son of God, that everlasting righteousness that Jesus Christ hath brought in by his blood. To seek after this knowledge of Jesus Christ, is the second great work that sinners have to do.

Thirdly, To believe in Jesus Christ; this is another work: To believe in the name of Jesus Christ, Oh this is the great work! when poor sinners came to Christ, and asked him what work they should do: How they should work the works of God? he tells them, that this is the work of God, To believe in the Name of Jesus Christ, Joh. 6. 29. this is the work of God, this is the great work, the first work, all other works are not accepted, till this be done: This is the first born of graces, this is the beginning of the souls strength; and till this be done, all other works are lost, because, without faith, it is not possible to please God; All the time of their continuance in unbelief in the wilderness, it was a time of temptation and provocation; this is the great work, the work of God, which meets with most opposition; all within a man, and all the powers of darkness do make against it; and therefore it concerns poor sinners to seek after this great work of God, with all their might; they can never begin too soon, never begin too speedily; it is a mighty work, if you had hundreds of years to live, you would find time little enough to believe in, to exercise faith in. I shall go no further with sinners, for till this work is done, nothing is accepted. And therefore, Oh that God would persuade the hearts of poor sinners to know that this is their work, To know themselves, and to know Christ, and to believe in his Name! Oh that the Lord would stir them up to seek after it with their might!

But what is the work of Believers? What must they do with their might?

First of all, To seek after further knowledge of their God, and Communion with him, acquaintance with him, fellowship with him; to know more of him in his Attributes, in his Son, in his Word, the mysteries of his Kingdom; to know the truth of the Times, the will of God concerning you. Oh, this is a great work, it concerns you to seek after this with all your might: to wait upon God in all means for it.

To wait at wisdoms Posts, to climb upon every Sycamore Tree, where Jesus Christ is wont to pass by; to set your souls under every Golden-Pipe, where there is saving knowledge of Christ to be Communicated to you, or further acquaintance with God; Breath more after him, thus did David, in Psal. 63. O God thou art my God, early will I seek thee, my soul thirsteth for thee, my flesh longeth for thee in a dry and thirsty Land, where no water is; He doth not only thirst; but he longs: Now longing is a mighty strong desire; How dangerous is it to the Creature, if longing be not satisfied? With this desire of longing was David's soul carried after further acquaintance with God, further enjoyment of him; That's the first.

Secondly, The second work that you have to do with your might, you that have interest in Christ, is to get your hearts fully rooted, and fully established upon the promises, that you may not be left at uncertainties in the great matters of your everlasting welfares; to get your hearts built, I say, established upon the Promises, rooted in Christ, to get your Acquittance cleared up to you, clearly written, and wait till the Lord shall teach you to read it; that you may be able to say as the Apostle, in Rom. 8. 33. Who shall lay anything to the charge of God's

Elect? it is God that justifieth, it is Christ that died, and is risen again, and sits at the right hand of God, and makes intercession for us; I say, you had need be perfect in your evidence for Heaven; there may come a time of darkness, black clouds may come over all your comforts, and present enjoyments: a black night of temptation may be upon you, the Devil may cast a mist before your eyes; and therefore you had need be perfect to read your evidence for Heaven, that you may be able to read, and to know your interest in Christ, in such a condition as that is: Oh do this, make hast to do this, do it with your might.

Third▪ To serve God in your generation, is another work you have to do with your might; to serve God in your generation is that you have to do, and Oh that you would do it with all your might, to honor and lift up God upon earth, to make him glorious, to lift him up by your praises, to lift him up by your conversations, by your obedience, by your shining in the midst of a crooked and sinful generation: The Lord he hath put his Name upon you Christians for this end; he put his Spirit into you to enable you to this: He expects more from you than from others; the eyes of the world are upon you, and God shall either reap honor, or dishonor by you; therefore it concerns you, I say, to do the work of your generation with all your might, to seek wherein you may be serviceable to the Lord how you may advance his Name: That is the third work, to lift up God by the service of your Generation.

Fourthly, It concerns you to get your hearts made sensible of the perishing condition of the Creature, of the fading condition of all things under the Sun, that you are fading Creatures, your life fades, and comforts fade: The Lord would have you seek with all your might, to have such impressions as these made upon your spirits: 'tis a hard matter to receive them; and therefore God bids the Prophet cry, in Isa. 40. The voice says cry, What shall I cry? all flesh is grass, and the glory of it as the flower in the field, the grass withereth, and the flower fadeth. The Prophet must cry, and cry again, before men will hear this, before this impression will be made upon the spirits of men, That they are fading men, and their comforts are fading; That they are as grass, and their comforts as the grass: You had need live in a continual converse with your fading condition, die daily, see death at a distance, and grapple with death at a distance: Put yourselves into a dying condition, and say often, Oh! what if this were my last? What if I were now to breath forth my soul? What if now to shoot the Gulf of Eternity? What have I now to rely upon? What have I to carry me through? How shall death be conquered? How shall the sting be taken out for me? You had need I say, converse with death at a distance, and live continually in the sense of your dying condition; that so death may not be terrible when it comes, that you may know before hand how to conquer it, and that it is conquered by the blood of the Lamb.

Fifthly, Another work that you have to do with your might, is to do good to your friends, and to your Relations. Christians, give out the good things to your Relations, and do it speedily, do it with all your might: Impart the knowledge of God to your Relations, Christ finds Andrew, and Andrew finds Simon Peter; Christ finds Philip, and Philip finds Nathaniel; Oh come, saith he, we have found the Savior, the Messias, 1 Joh. 41. 45. You have but a little while to be with your Relations, and they are gone, they are taken from you, and you from them; and therefore with all your might work this work, and do them good, and give out good to your Relations. That is the fifth work that you have to do with all your might.

Sixthly, In all your waitings upon God, see that you do there with your might; I say, when ever you wait upon God in every Duty, in every Ordinance, whensoever you draw nigh to God, the Lord requires you should do it with your might. In the second of Samuel, the 13. it is said there, that David when he danced before the Ark, he did it with all his might: And so in the second of Chron. 28. It is said there, that David when he offered unto the Lord, he offered with all his might. And so that place, in 2 King. 23. and 25. It is said that King Josiah turned to the Lord with all his heart, and with all his might; what ever you do in the matters of God, do it not lazily: If you pray, do it with your might, and if you hear, let it not be done, but with all your might; and if you speak, do with your might; because these are mighty things, and they have relation to the business of Eternity.

Seventhly and Lastly; To mortify your corruptions, to get your lusts mortified, subdued, cast out, your souls more conformable to Christ; this is another work, and the last work that I shall name, that you Christians and Believers have to do, and that with your might: To get your lusts mortified and subdued; Do it with your might, do not look upon it as an easy matter, as a frivolous business; Do not go out against such Giants with straw and Bulrush: But Oh! get the complete Armor of God, go forth in the name of Christ, in the strength of Christ, with the blood of Christ, with with the promises of Christ, it is a work of great concernment; and therefore I beseech you do it in good earnest, go out in the Name of the Lord, and do this great work in good earnest, that your corruptions may be mortified, and more of the Image and likeness of Christ may be imprinted upon your Spirits. And thus have I shown you (my Brethren) what it is for a man to do with his might, and what are those works the Lord puts into your hands to do with all your might: You have heard what works are put into the hands of sinners, and what works are put into the hands of Believers: And now I shall make some short Application, and I have two words to speak.

First, The one a word of Caution and Direction. The other a word of Exhortation.

First in the first place, a word of Caution and Direction is needful; and let this be the first Caution.

That though God call upon you to work with your might, yet he doth not put you upon it, to work to pay your debt, To discharge that great debt of ten thousand Talents of transgressions: My Brethren, if you had a thousand hands to work with, if you could work as much as the very Angels, it is not possible you should work so much as should discharge the debt: for you could not pay the least farthing of that which is owing to God: No, know my Brethren, the Father of mercies hath pitied poor Creatures, he sent his Son, the Lord Jesus Christ for this end, to marry poor Widow-souls, that were left in an infinite debt, and could not discharge it; he hath sent his Son to to pay the debt of every widow-soul, that is content to be espoused to Christ; he came from Heaven for this end, he wrought with his hands, he had no other way to pay the debt, he left himself poor; The Lord Jesus was rich, but for your sakes he became poor; he had no way to pay the debt, but by working with his hands; he wrought hard, he wrought till he sweat, he wrought till he sweat drops of water and blood; he wrought three and thirty years together, that he might pay this great debt that was owing, that his people did owe to the Father. And therefore take heed you do not go about, to work to discharge your own debt: do not work to pay your debt; but work because your debt is paid and discharged by Jesus Christ.

Secondly, Take heed you do not work for your living; God calls upon you to work with your might, but he does not put you upon it to work for your living: Life is not from your works, neither should Christians live upon their works; The life of your joy, and the life of your peace; the life of your comforts, the life of your righteousness, it is not from your works; the Lord never put you upon it, to work for this end: no, Christ hath wrought enough for his people, that they might live as his people: he hath provided for their maintenance, to fill their cup; he hath provided for their clothing; he put mighty righteousness, everlasting righteousness upon you; It is not now to do, and live, this is not the Covenant. But the Covenant of grace is, live and do: fetch life from Christ, and then do, and do with all your might, because life is given freely by Christ.

Thirdly, God doth not put you upon it to work to purchase love, to purchase favor, or to purchase Heaven: I say, you are not to work to purchase the favor of God by your works, to purchase Heaven by the works of your hands; Alas Adam in innocence could not do it: he could not yearn life by working: And how shall poor Creatures in a fallen estate be able to purchase, and yearn life by their own works? No• if you will seek salvation by works, you rest upon your works; and if you rest upon your works, you break your works, and both you and your works are like to be lost forever: and therefore know my Brethren, you are to do your utmost for God; if you could do ten thousand times more, all is too little for God: But know, that life and salvation is not purchased by your doing; work as much, and do as much for God, be as diligent in doing the work of God as if life were to be purchased by works; but when you have done your utmost, renounce all, and know, that by your own works you are no more nigh to Heaven then the very Publicans and Harlots; It is by the door of grace only, that you must enter into life: That is the third.

Fourthly, When God calls you to work with your might, he does not call you to work with your own strength: I beseech you take this Caution along with you, that poor Creatures may not think that they are able to do that which they are called upon to do: I say, the Lord does not call you to work in your own strength; And therefore know, that without Christ you can do nothing; you are not fit for the least work, for the least duty: All your sufficiency must come down from Heaven: you cannot believe, you cannot repent, you cannot obey, you cannot give glory to God, unless this power be given you from on high, you cannot move towards God in any gracious action, unless the Lord comes in with strength: O therefore, when ever you are to work for God, go and set yourselves under the promise; the promise of strength and assistance, Go and look for strength to Christ; do not act in your own strength: Oh let your souls open to the breathings of the Spirit of Jesus Christ: The soul never acts graciously, but when it is acted by the Spirit of Christ: Oh know that you are as a Ship becalmed upon the Sea, and you cannot sail, till the spirit breath upon you, and fill the sail of your affections, and carry you Godward, and Heaven-ward; and therefore let Christ be your strength, wait for his strength, that you may say, Now I live, and yet not I, but it is Christ that liveth in me: I act, and yet not I, it is the Spirit of Christ that acts in me: I pray, and yet not I: I believe, and yet not I: I obey, and yet not I, it is the Spirit of Christ that acts in me, it is his strength that helps me. This is the fourth Caution: I beseech you take heed you do not work in your own strength; you will spoil your works.

Fifthly, Take this Caution, do not present your works yourselves to God: When you have done your work, go to Jesus Christ, and desire him to carry your works home: Christians know, it is not for you to carry your work home, it is the Office of Christ; and therefore make use of Christ, and say, Lord present this Sacrifice, this Duty; do thou wash it with thine own blood, and cover it with thine own righteousness: I tell you, your works are not pleasing, unless they come out of the hands of Jesus Christ; Christ must wash your works, and perfume your works, and sweeten your works, and present your works with acceptance to the Father; and therefore when you have wrought with all your might, let Jesus Christ present it to God your Father, and his Father.

Sixthly, Take heed that when you work with all your might, you work not for your own end: I tell you, good works may be spoiled if you work for your own end, if self come in: a man may work the work of a Magistrate, or the work of a Minister, but if self come in, if vain glory be his end, if the praise of men, if his own profit: If the glory of God be not the end he propounds to himself, that man will be called by Christ another day, a worker of iniquity: We have cast out Devils in thy name, and yet saith Christ to them, I know you not, depart from me, ye workers of iniquity Oh this is the dead fly that spoils the Box of Ointment, when a man does it for vain glory, to be seen of men, to get a name in the world, and to raise their estates in the world, when they do public works for private ends; how ever it seems to be glorious, it is abominable; and therefore when ever you work for God, make God your principal: Begin in his strength, and end for his glory.

The second word, is a word of Exhortation, and I will conclude with that; let me speak in my former order, first to Sinners, and then to Believers, and I will be but short.

First to Sinners, You that have not yet wrought the work of God; you that have not given up your names to Christ, in whose heart the great work of faith is not yet wrought, You that are found this day working the works of darkness, the works of iniquity; Let me speak a word to you, let me reason with you thus, in the name of the Lord Jesus, my Master, and yours: What do you think of it my dear friends? does it not concern you? Is not this a work put into your hands, to seek after an interest in Jesus Christ? to believe in his name, to give up yourselves unto him? is not this work that is put into your hands, that God hath given you to do in this moment of your life? Doth it not concern you to believe in the name of Christ, think you? Without faith it is not possible to please God: If you be found in a way of unbelief, you are found in the way of wrath: It is said the wrath of the Lord does hang over the heads of unbelievers: If in a state of unbelief, you are in an estate of wrath; if in an estate of unbelief, you are lost, and your works are lost; whatsoever you do without faith, your works cannot be accepted; without faith you cannot please God, without faith you cannot enter into life: And now what think you my dear friends, is it not a work that concerns you, to seek after faith in Jesus Christ? If you grant it, let me further urge it upon you; Oh if this be your work, then do it with your might: Oh that the Lord would stir up your hearts to do it with your might; There is but a moment to seek faith in, there is but a moment to seek after an interest in Christ; and if this be not done now, O when shall it be done? If it be not done now, it is like to be undone forever: there is no work in this kind in the grave; there is no repenting in the grave, no believing in the grave; there is no turning to God in the grave: Oh that the Lord would persuade your hearts of a necessity of seeking after Christ, and getting an interest in him; and do it I beseech you speedily, and diligently; the Lord hath put it into your hand, and therefore now seek after an interest in Christ with all your might.

To you that have an interest in Christ, I shall say no more, but what I said before: I laid your work before you, get more acquaintance with God; get your hearts established upon the truth of the promises, that you may not be left at uncertainties; and lift up God in your generations; and get your hearts made sensible of your frailty, to die daily, to wait upon God with all your might in Ordinances; to get your hearts subdued, and your corruptions mortified: This is your work; and Oh that the Lord would help you to do it with all your might.

To you that are the Fathers of the City:

I have one word to you from the Father of Heaven: Oh that the Lord would make you willing to receive it, and to do it with all your might: There is something that is your work, that the Lord requires you should do with all your might: I shall but briefly give you a few hints, and shall leave it to the blessing of the Lord.

First of all, There is a work of Judgment and Justice that the Lord hath put into your hands: I say, the first work that God hath put into your hands, it is a work of Justice, to punish sin; to punish sin is the work that is in your hand to do, to punish the breaches of the moral Law, and the contempts thereof: that Law of nature which is written in the heart of all men, the Lord hath put it into your hand to punish the breach of this Law: What ever your hand finds to do in this case, I beseech you do it faithfully, do it with your might: God requires it of you, that you should do it with your might; yea let your hand find out sinners, let your hand do this work of the Lord, to punish the drunkards, and the swearers, and the profane persons, the deceiver, the liar, and the stealer, and all other workers of iniquity: here is no fear of smiting Christ; smite here and spare not; where there is no danger of smiting Christ, smite on and spare not, do it with all your might; the Lord lays it before you as your duty.

Secondly, There is a work of Righteousness and Equity, that the Lord puts into your hands to do: and Oh that you would do this also with all your might: to judge betwixt man and man; do it faithfully, to accept no man's person, to know no friend in the matter of Justice, but to decide every man's cause with wisdom, and with faithfulness, and with sincerity; not to know Father, nor Brother, nor Son, nor Daughter, as Levi did not in the cause of God: That so Justice and Righteousness may run down as a mighty stream: That there may be no oppression, that there may be no complaining in our streets; This is the second work that the Lord puts into your hand: And Oh that you would do it with your might.

The third work is a work of Mercy; There is a work of mercy; the Lord puts into your hands to relieve the poor, and the needy, and the fatherless, to take care that the poor be provided for, that they may have work, that they may have employment, and that they may have maintenance; this is a work of mercy, that the Lord puts into your hands to do: Oh it is one of the crying sins of England; it is the sin of the whole Land; and Oh that it were not the sin of this City, that the poor are not yet employed and provided for; that God would put it into your hearts to do it: Oh that some blessed hand might find out this way to employ the poor; this would be an acceptable work of mercy: Know that the Lord hath given you something for the poor, though I think every man hath a propriety in his estate, yet I also think that God hath given every man something for the poor: and truly before God, the poor hath a right in it, though not to take, yet it is your duty to give, and to provide for them: And I fear if this work do not go through the whole land, that there be not some provision made for the work of the poor, and for the relief of the poor; That God will level this Land, and that God will bring down all the pomp and pride, and stain the glory of all flesh in it; this is a work of mercy.

There is a fourth work; and that is a work of Piety that God puts into your hand, to seek the good of poor souls; to provide that all that are under your power in this City, may be instructed in the knowledge of the Lord Jesus, to send into the dark corners, (the Suburbs of this City, and not only to confine men to the heart of the City) but send to them that will not come out for it: The Lord Jesus came to seek as well as to save; and therefore send forth to seek them; they know not what they do in rejecting the means of life: But Oh send to seek them, and instruct them in the knowledge of the Lord, that they may not perish for want of provision: And what though (my Fathers and Brethren) every man cannot see his way clear to take a Pastoral charge of such a people, where he knows there is but little of Christ, yet if he do the work, what though he do it not under that notion: If he preach Christ to them, if he bleed for them; If his desires be to instruct them, and be willing to instruct them in public and private, and to pray for them, that the Lord would give them repentance, and bring them into the number of Christ's Sheep-fold: I say, if this work be done, what though it be not done under that notion? why should the work of the Gospel be hindered? If in all other things men be conscientious, and able, and fit to teach and instruct the people in the knowledge of Jesus Christ, this will be a work of Piety,, to send into the dark corners of the City, that there may be no place in which the word of the Lord shall not be heard.

There is a work of Love to Christ, and of wisdom to yourselves, and I will name no more; I commend this to you, as the last; And Oh that your hand would find to do it, a work of love to Christ, and of wisdom to yourselves; And that is to protect the Saints, and those that have an interest in Christ, and desire to walk unblamably before you, if they be such as walk according to the Law of God, and not disobey the Law of Magistracy, it is the work of the Magistrates to protect them: The Magistrate is set up to be a praise to them that do well; What though they may differ from you in particular opinions? I am p^rswaded it will not excuse before Christ, not to have protected them: If you be convinced that they are such as fear the Lord, and desire to walk conscientiously, It is your work to be a wall to them, and to protect them, so they walk regularly, and in the fear of the Lord: The people of God, they are the strength of the Land, whoever they be, they are the strength of the Land, they are the strength of a City; They protect you, and therefore it is your work to protect them. The godly in a City, they protect the City, they are the safety of the City; God said he could not destroy Sodom, so long as Lot was there, and could do nothing so long as righteous Lot was among them; they are the strength of a City: I beseech you see what is said in the second of Zechariah, verse 5. And the Governors of Judah shall say in their hearts, the inhabitants of Jerusalem shall be my strength in the Lord of Hosts their God: Such as fear the Lord of all ranks, they are the strength of the City, and the time is a coming, when the Governors of Judah shall say so, The inhabitants of Jerusalem are my strength, in the Lord of Hosts their God; they have great interest in God, and therefore they are my strength, they are the strength of the Governors, and they are the strength of the City: And now let me say to you as Paul said to Agrippa, Believe you this? (Oh you Fathers of the City) do you believe this, that the Inhabitants of Jerusalem, they are your strength, and the strength of the City in the Lord of Hosts their God? do 〈◇〉 believe this? I know you believe it, 〈...〉 the Lord will cause you all to believe 〈...〉 people of God, what ever they be, they are 〈◇〉 strength of the City: you shall say it one day, all the Governors of Judah shall say That the Inhabitants of Jerusalem are my strength in the Lord of Hosts their God: And now I have humbly presented this Counsel, as from the Lord: I have laid before you what is your work,

1. There is a Work of Justice.
2. A Work of Equity.
3. A Work of Mercy.
4. A Work of Piety.
5. A Work of Love to Christ in the protection of his people; And a work of Wisdom to yourselves, which will be your strength.

And now let me say to all Christians, and Christian Magistrates; Let me say to you all, what ever is your work, what ever is in your hand to do: Oh that the Lord would help you to do it with all your might: What is in your hand to do as Christians, as Magistrates; Oh that the Lord would help you to do it with all your might! I shall not need to press it further upon you both, as Christians: The Devil worketh with all his might, and shall not Christians work with their might, and Magistrates work with their might? He goes about night and day seeking whom he may devour, and shall not you go about night and day, seeking whom you may save? And seeking whom you may punish, for contemning the Law of the Lord your God? The Devil compasses the earth, (Whence comest thou? I come from compassing the earth) And Oh shall not Christians 〈◇〉 with all their might, when Satan doth with all his might? sinners do with all their might, and shall not Christians do with their might? It is said of sinners, That they draw iniquity as with Cart-ropes; It is the expression of the Prophet, and in the seventh of Micah, it is said, they sin with both hands; they do evil with both hands, aye, earnestly, and they do it with both hands; and if they sin with both hands, shall not Christians do good with both hands? Shall they sin with all their might, and shall not you do the work of God with all your might? Let me say further to you, Christ did the work of the Father with all his might, and your work with all his might, (the work of your salvation) he wrought three and thirty years together, he sweat hard: And Oh! shall not you in a way of love, in a way of obedience, labor to do for God with all your might, seeing Christ hath done for you with all his might? Let me say to you, you are not put upon it, to work for life, and righteousness, or for Heaven: but only to express your thankfulness, your love, and obedience; and therefore well may you work for God, you have a great deal of work, and you have but a little time to do it: Sinners you are hastening to the grave: Oh work for God with all your might.

Christians you are hastening to the grave: Magistrates, you are hastening to the grave; Oh then do what ever you find to do for God, with all your might: There is no work as a Magistrate nor as a Minister, nor as a Christian, in the grave, whither thou art going; here is all the working time that you shall have for eternity, you have six days to work in: And you that are Believers, shall have a long rest, you may well work a while, though you sweat hard for it; there is no more time to work in, but a long time to rest in▪ an everlasting Rest, eternity of Rest, that shall never have an end: your rest is long; And Oh make hast, there is no possibility of working more for God hereafter: If you do not finish your work now, you cannot finish it in the grave: You had need work, the Candle is set up, and you have but little of the Candle left: Oh if you do not finish this work of God before this Candles end be out, there is▪ nothing but darkness in the grave: There is no wisdom, no device, &c. If there were work, you could not see: But there is no believing, no repenting, no doing for God, no further time to be serviceable to God; but a time of receiving for the Saints, and a time for the wicked to be punished: And therefore, What ever thy hand findeth to do, do it with all thy might, for there is no work, nor device, nor wisdom, in the grave, whither thou goest.

And so much for this time.

FINIS.

ERRATA.

*P*Age 1. line 12. read seemeth. p. 4. l. 17. r. bonds. p. 5. l. 15. r. act p. 6. l. 10. r. was. p. 9. l. 22. r. grave. p. 11. l. 31. r. the. p. 16. l. 5. r. they, for now. p. 17. l. 28. r. this. p. 21. l. 15. blot out as, r. in as die. p. 41. l. 26. r. open. p. 43. last. v. r. get. p. 49. last v. blot out time. p. 68. l. 27. r. grace p. 73. l. 6. r. whether. p. 74. last v. r. superstition. p. 75. l. 7. r. past. and l. 9. r. not. p. 77. l. 13. r. though, and l. 25. r. to. p. 78. l. 18. r. terrible. and l. 30, r. in a. p. 81. l. 27. blot out either. p. 93. l. 25. r. done. p. 99. l. 6. r. off. and l. 28. r. his. p. 100. l. 3 and 4. blot out the thought of. p. 101. l. 5. r. but for that. p. 103. l. 30. r. adversity. p. 107, last line but one, r. to us. p. 115. l. 29. r. whether. p. 119. l. 10. r. our. p. 121. l. 22. r. condition. p. 125. l. 19. r. comforting. p. 130. l. 22. r. Lo, for Low. p. 132. l. 2. r. quiet. p. 133. l. 6. blot out been, and put it into the end of the next line, and l. 8. r. Jonah, last line but one, r. improbable for impossible. p. 135. l. 24. r. so it might. and l. 26. r. keep. p. 143. l. 18. r. without God. p. 144. l. 32. r. encouragements. p. 148. l. 28. r. Father. p.

149. l. 14. r. they, for their. and l. 16. r. their for thy. and l. 21. r. contrary to their. p. 150. l. 27. r. deliver his poor. p. 154. l. 23. r. poor. p. 156. last line but one, r. are. p. 160. l. 4. r. be though. p. 161. l. 22. r. puts. p. 162. l. 2. r. Lord. p. 164. l. 26. r. God's p. 165. l. 17. r. fed. p. 166. last line, r. need to. p. 173. l. 5. A Goldsmith. p. 181. l. 11. r. relations.

John Arrowsmith, 1602-1659.

P-JA2-1. A great wonder in heaven, or, A lively picture of the militant church drawn by a divine pencill : Revel. 12, 1, 2 : discoursed on in a sermon preached before the honorable House of Commons, at Margaret's, Westminster, on the last monthly fast-day, January 27, 1646 - Arrowsmith, John, 1602-1659.

A great Wonder in HEAVEN: OR, A lively Picture of the Militant CHURCH, Drawn by a divine Pencill.

REVEL. 12. 1, 2.

Discoursed on in a SERMON Preached before the Honorable House of COMMONS, at Margaret's Westminster, on the last Monethly Fast-day, January 27. 1646/7.

By John Arrowsmith; B. D.

John 16. 20, 21.

—Ye shall be sorrowful, but your sorrow shall be turned into joy.

A woman when she is in travel hath sorrow because her hour is come; but as soon as she is delivered of the child, she remembereth no more the anguish, for joy that a man is born into the world.

LONDON, Printed by R. L. for SAMUEL MAN dwelling at the Swan in Paul's Church-yard, 1647.

ECCLESIAE nutritiis, REIPUBLICAE fulcris, PIETATIS energeticae

Asseclis simul & patronis: H. E.

Selectis e populo ANGLICANO Senatoribus WESMONASTERII Congregatis, Qui ut nobis posterisque consulerent Se per sexennium prodegere, Conciunculam hanc qualemcunque

(Intra cujus ambitum CHRISTI Sponsam Mariti sui radiis coruscantem, Mundi tum illecebrarum minas calcantem, Evangelicâ veritate redimitam, Laborantem tamen, & puerperarum more Periclitantem cernere est)

Coram ipsis habitam, Avidisque nuper exceptam auribus, Oculis propitiis perlustrandam, Si quando negotia deferbuerint, Perquam humiliter OFFERT D. D. Q.

Ad obsequium illis in DOMINO pro virili exhibendum paratissimus Joannes Arrowsmith.

Die Mercurii, 27 January, 1646.

ORdered by the Commons assembled in Parliament: That Sir Anthony Irby do from this house give thanks unto Master Arrowsmith for the great pains he took in his Sermon he preached before the House of Commons on this day, at Margaret's Westminster, and that he do desire him to print his Sermon, wherein he is to have the like privilege in Printing of it, as others in the like kind usually have had.

Hen. Elsyng, Cler. Parl. Dom. Com.

I Appoint Samuel Man to Print my Sermon,

JOHN ARROWSMITH.

Errata.

Pag. 4. lin. 4. for came r. come in some, p. 17. lin. 13. for in. r. through ibid. lin. 14. for of r. with p. 19. lin. 12. for word r. world, p. 27. lin. 8. r. Apostolical for Aposticall in some few copies. p. 34. l. 10. for dost r. didst ibid. l. 14. for 65 r. 66. & l. 18. for child r. children. p. 3. l. 9. for which r. with p. 37. r. wrangling.

A SERMON Preached before the Honorable House of COMMONS at their late Solemn Fast.

REVEL. 12. 1, 2.

And there appeared a great wonder in heaven, a woman clothed with the Sun, and the Moon under her feet, and upon her head a Crown of twelve Stars.

And she being with child, cried, travailing in birth, and pained to be delivered.

THE New Testament which exceeds the old in many respects, may not be thought to come short of it in any essential, or integral part; that is made up of Histories, Psalms, Dogmatical, and Prophetical passages; none whereof are wanting in this. Its Historians are the Evangelists; Its Psalmists, Mary, Zachariah, and Simeon whose Songs are recorded in the first and second of Luke: Its dogmatical Writers, those that penned the several Epistles; Its Prophet John: who indeed was all four. For ye have Evangelical Histories in his Gospel; Dogmatical truths in his three Epistles; and besides sacred Hymns (as that of the four and twenty Elders, Chap. 5. and that of Moses and of the Lamb, Chap. 15.) Prophetical Visions everywhere throughout his Apocalypse. This is my Text is none of the least. There appeared a good wonder in heaven, a woman clothed with the Sun, †

While the bush burned with fire, and was not consumed, Moses turning a side to see that great sight, was called upon to put off his shoes before he approached. That which is here held forth is a wonder, a great wonder, and that in heaven; your looks speak a desire to see it: But let me tell you, Honorable and Beloved, the view will neither be full, nor comfortable, unless ye put off earthly wisdom and carnal affections. That being done, Come and see.

The words are veiled with some obscurity, by reason of variety of metaphors: But much of the veil will be taken off, by a right discerning of their scope, which is briefly this, to represent the Church of Christ in her Militant state, especially during the Primitive times.

The Militant Church, which is elsewhere impared to such things as are weak in themselves and in danger to be ruined, as to a ship tossed with tempests, to a vineyard exposed to wild beasts, and to a flock of sheep among wolves; is here upon the same grounds represented by a woman in travel. Her appearing indeed was in heaven, for reasons to be hereafter specified, but that which she was designed to signify, is not the state of the Church as triumphant (for there is no travail, no crying out no pain in heaven) but as militant here below, chiefly in her first age after the Word was made flesh. So Interpreters not a few. One passeth it with a Certum est, To me (saith he) 'tis certain, that the first begotten Church of Christ is here meant. The Woman (saith another) is the Apostolical Church. A type of the Church which was new-borne under the New Testament, So a third. An excellent picture of the childebearing Primitive Church, So a fourth. A fifth extends the representation to the first six hundredth years, from the birth of Christ to the rising of Antichrist.

Having thus set up a light in the porch, let us now enter in at the door of this magnificent building: wherein we shall find the apparition laid before us, First, more generally, as a great wonder in heaven, Secondly, more distinctly, as a woman, described two ways,

- 1 By her rare perfections, which are three,
 - Being clothed with the Sun,
 - Having the Moon under feet,
 - Having a Crown of twelve stars upon her head.
- 2 By her weak and perilous condition, in that being with child she cried, travelling in birth, and pained to be delivered.

I begin with that which first offers it self, intending to proceed to the rest in order as they lie in the Text.

There appeared.

It hath always been the custom of God to manifest himself in special manner to special favorites. Solomon was named Jedidiah, because the Lord loved him, and to him the Lord appeared twice; Daniel a man greatly beloved, and upon him visions were multiplied; John the Disciple whom Jesus loved, and to him there appeared great wonders in heaven.

When his favorites came to be sufferers for his name, he is then wont to visit them more then at other seasons. The Spirit of Christ is with his Saints at all times, but in such cases the Spirit of God and of glory resteth upon them, as Peter speaks, that is the spirit of God in a more glorious way. This was Johns case. Ye have his experiment registered here, Chap. 1. ver. 9, 10. I John who also am your brother, and companion in tribulation, and in the Kingdom and patience of Jesus Christ, was in the Isle that is called Patmos, for the Word of God, and for the testimony of Jesus Christ; I was in the Spirit on the Lord's day. 'Tis thought that all contained in this book was revealed to him on that one day. Who ever spent a Sabbath so well? whoever had so many discoveries in so short a time? how was his banishment sweetened herewith, and his Patmos turned into a paradise? How excellent is thy loving kindness O Lord! how glorious are thine influences upon suffering Saints! what Psalms doth David indite in the cave! what Epistles doth Paul write in the prison! what apparitions doth John see in a desolate Island! there appeared

A great wonder.

The more lightsome anything is, the more glorious; the more glorious anything is, the more wonderful. Glorious things are spoken of thee, ô thou Citie of God, saith the Psalmist, of the Church: which is therefore a great wonder, because all the Luminaries of heaven concur to the making up of the glory thereof; and that in a posture suitable to the stations they hold in the firmament. There the highest lights are the stars, the lowest the Moon, the Sun in the midst. So here; the stars are allotted to the Churches head, the Moon to her feet, the Sun to those parts of the body that are between both. She is all over glorious, and consequently altogether admirable, because lightsome all over; for her head is crowned with stars, her body appareled with the Sun, and she hath the Moon for her footstool, so as to tread in paths of light.

If any here discern no glory in the Church to be wondered at, but say of her, as they of Christ, Isa. 53. 2. she hath no form or comeliness; and when we shall see her, there is no beauty that we should desire her: it is not for want of light in her, but of spiritual sight in them. A skillful painter, to an ignorant man that wondered at his gazing so much on a curious piece, said, Friend; Si meos oculos haberes, hadst thou mine eyes, thou wouldst be ravished with the sight of this picture as I am; and instead of wondering at me, fall a wondering with me. So, if we had the eyes and spirit of John, the Church of Christ would appear a great wonder to us, as it did to him.

A great wonder in heaven.

We read of a door opened in heaven, and of a call that John had to come up thither, Chap. 4. 1. That was the Scene of all his Visions; there did this great wonder appear to his mental eyes. And well it might, seeing, the Church (whose hieroglyphick it is) hath her original from heaven, her tendency to heaven, her conversation in heaven, and her dependence upon heaven.

1 Her original from heaven. Except a man be born 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 (which may be rendered from above) he shall not see the kingdom of God, John. 3. 3. Converts are all born of God, John 1. 13. and Jerusalem, which is above, is the mother of them all, Gal. 4. 26. Mihi patria Coelum, may be the motto, of every Saint during his pilgrimage in the World, Heaven is my Country, there I was born, and I am returning thither, which is the next thing.

2 Her tendency to heaven. Those Martyrs and Confessors, Heb. 11. 14, 16. declared plainly that they sought an heavenly country. All Saints, as Saints, naturally move to this center of rest; and because their motion is natural, it commonly proves swiftest at last. As the approaches of a needle are so much the more quick by how much it draws nearer to the loadstone; and rivers run with a stronger stream, when they are about to empty themselves into the Ocean whence they came: so true believers, when their bodies smell most of earth (as towards death they are wont to do) have the strongest sent of heaven in their souls.

3 Her conversation in heaven, Phil. 3. 20. 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, the phrase imports their living and trading as denizens of heaven, there being governed by the local statutes, and municipall Laws of that City; their conversing with God in Christ, and having fellowship with the Spirit here below: whence it is that when death comes, the godly are said to change their place, but not their company.

4 Her dependence upon heaven, knowing as she doth that every good and perfect gift is from above, Jam. 1. 17. she accordingly expects from thence supplies of grace to help in every time of need. When the German Princes in a Diet at Norimberg had framed certain Decrees against the Protestant cause; Luther comforted himself and his Patron the Duke of Saxony, to whom he wrote, with this weighty consideration, That the Princes at Norimberg had concluded one thing in that business, but God had decreed another in heaven; and the Counsel of the Lord that should stand.

Let us now proceed to show more distinctly, what this great wonder in heaven was, viz.

A woman.

〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 a married woman. That's the importance of the word in other places, as in Chapter 21 of this book Verse 9; Come hither and I will show thee the bride, the Lambs wife, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉. Yea the 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, the decency of the allegory requires it should be so taken here, because we find the woman with child, and in her travel. Being so taken it imports a mystery, one of the greatest in all Divinity, viz. the Churches relation to Christ as her husband. Paul who was well skilled in Gospel-secrets (to which the depths of other Sciences are but shallows) gives the title of great only to two Evangelical mysteries: that of our Savior's incarnation, 1 Tim. 3. last. Without controversy, great is the mystery of godliness, God manifest in the flesh, and this of the Churches marriage to Christ. Ephes. 5. 31, 32 For this cause shall a man leave his father and mother, and shall be joined unto his wife, and they two shall be one flesh. This is a great mystery, but I speak concerning Christ and the Church. That which was one of Paul's great mysteries, might well be part of John's great wonder. But I forbear to enlarge upon it, because I hasten to a discovery of this woman's rare perfections; the first whereof is her being Clothed with the Sun.

That which some Platonists say hath savor in it, Lumen est umbra Dei, Deus est lumen luminis. The light is but the shadow of God, God is he that enlighteneth light it self. Now of all visible lights there is none so radiant as the Sun: Scripture accordingly styleth God a Sun and a shield, Psal. 84. 11. and Christ is called the Sun of righteousness, Mal. 4. 2. He it is, and no other person or thing, whom we are to understand by the Sun in my Text. The resemblances are many. Christ and the Sun agree.

1 In point of Sovereignty. The Sun is the Prince of Planets; a body so glorious that all admire, many adore it for a God, because they see more Majesty in it, then anything else that can be seen. Whence it is, that the idolatrous Chaldeans (as Bodin observes) gave it the name of Baal a Lord; whereas the Hebrews, with whom were the Oracles of God, call it Shemes, which signifieth a servant; for so it is to him that made it. Christ took upon him the form of a servant, but is indeed the Lord of all. And as God made the Sun to rule by day, and to diversify seasons of the year by its approaches and recesses: So hath the Father appointed Christ to be King of Saints; and upon his various aspects depend the Churches Summer and Winter, the souls Spring and Fall, the seed-time of grace and harvest of glory.

2 In point of singularity. There is but one Sun in the firmament, which made that great Conqueror say, The heaveus could neither bear two Suns, nor the earth two Alexanders. Look to Christ's person, it is but one; although there be two natures in him. When the light which was created the first day, did, as it were, assume a star three days after, that star and the light made but one Sun; so when the Word, who was God from all eternity, assumed flesh, in fullness of time the Word and flesh made but one Christ. Look to his office, he is so a Mediator, as not to admit of any copartnership in the work. To us there is but one God, the Father, of whom are all things, and we in him; and one Lord Jesus Christ, by whom are all things and we by him, 1 Cor. 8. 6. One God, and one Mediator between God and man, the man Christ Jesus, 1 Tim. 2. 5. Is Christ divided? saith Paul elsewhere. We may say, is Jesus multiplied? No verily: As but one Sun, so but one Savior. None but Christ (as the Martyr cried) None but Christ.

3 In point of necessity. When men would express the removal of somewhat absolutely necessary, they use to say, this were Solem e mundo tollere, to take the Sun out of the World. If that were removed, how would all beauty vanish, and (as some think) all motion cease? The potters wheel (say they) could not turn upon earth, if the Sun should not move in heaven. So take Christ from a soul, 'tis impotent to all good, Without me ye can do nothing, John 15. 5. Were it not for the Sun it would be perpetual night in the world, notwithstanding all the torches that could be lighted; yea notwithstanding all the light of the moon and stars. It is neither the torch-light of natural parts and creature-comforts; nor the star-light of civil honesty and common gifts; nor the moon-light of temporary faith and formal profession, that can make it day in the soul, till the Sun of righteousness arise and shine there. Once indeed there was a time, when fruits were produced without a Sun; when God, to prevent the idolizing of this creature as the only cause of all fertility, enabled the earth to bring forth on the third day, whereas the Sun was not made till the fourth: But never was there any the least moment of time since the fall, wherein man could bring forth fruit to God without the cooperation of Christ. (ϕ) that hath not the Son hath not life, 1 John 5. 12. Neither can any vital action be performed but by his special grace.

4 In point of purity. Other creatures admit of some defiling mixtures, the sun doth not. It looks upon filth, but contracts none. Christ is a lamb without blemish, and without spot. Such as cast aspersions upon him in the days of his flesh, calling him glutton, winebibber, and friend of Publicans and sinners, did but act the mad man's part, throwing dirt at the Sun, which none could possibly fasten upon. He came indeed into a sinful world, but as a Physician among his sick patients, to cure them without taking the sickness of them, being antidoted by his Divinity against all infection. He hath an hand even in sinful acts; as they are acts (for in him we move) but not in the sinfulness of them: shines into the noisome dunghills of our hearts with beams of grace, yet continues most pure. He was borne of a sinner, lived and conversed with sinners, died with and for sinners, yea as a sinner, yet had not in himself the least sin of his own to answer for.

5 In point of sufficiency. There is in the Son a fullness of created glory. All the light that had been dispersed throughout the great fabric of the new-born world for the first three days, was gathered together on the fourth into that one body. So it pleased the Father that all fullness should dwell in Christ: And the several graces that shined in the Patriarchs, Fathers and Prophets of old under the Law, were all to be 〈ϕ〉 once in him. The innocence of Abel, perseverance of Noah, obedience of Abraham, devotion of 〈ϕ〉, chastity of Joseph, patience of Job, meekness of Moses, courage of Joshua, zeal of David, and whatsoever any of them excelled in, was an ingredient 〈ϕ〉 that fullness of grace and truth which was found in Christ, Quae divisabeatos efficiunt, conjunctatenet. Each of them had the fullness of a star, he the sufficiency of a Sun that filled them all, and had a fullness beyond them all.

6 In point of efficiency. The efficacy of the Sun appears in imparting three things, Light, Heat, and Influence,. Each whereof is so qualified, as to resemble the grace of Christ in sundry particulars.

First, The Sun imparts light, a discovering, guiding, cheering, growing light.

1 Discovering what was hid from our sight before. But for it we should neither see the Sun it self, nor anything else in heaven or earth. Without irradiati•• from Christ men would forever continue igno•• of the only true God, and of their Redeemer; we should never know either our sins or our duties, our dangers or our privileges but for Christ. With him only is the fountain of life, and in his light we see light.

2 Guiding. Luke 1. 78, 79. The day-spring from in high hath visited us, to give light to them that sit in darkness and the shadow of death, and to guide our feet into the way of peace. The dim light of nature in common people shines a little, but is not strong enough to guide, like that of a glowworm or rotten stick. The light of worldly wisdom and policy in men of great parts, but profane spirits shines more strongly, but misguides; like the meteor, which Philosophers call Ignis fatuus, we the Lanternman. There is a third kind of light that shines strongly, and guides too, but the head only, not the feet; I mean that of hypocrites, who contemplate things of God, but reduce not their brain knowledge to practice. Yea a fourth, that guides both head and feet, yet but into a way of formality; namely that wherewith they are enlightened who have a form of godliness, but deny the power of it: whereas this, we are speaking of, doth not only shine but guide, not the head only but the feet, and that not into the way of formality, but of faith, which is the only way of peace both with God and with conscience.

3. Cheering. Eccles. 11. 7. truly light is sweet, and a pleasant thing it is for the eyes to behold the Sun. How sweet are the discoveries made by Christ to believing souls! what a pleasant thing is it for spiritual eyes to behold the Sun of righteousness, moving and shining in the spirit of a convert, as in its own proper Sphere! Such as are dark are accounted melancholy rooms: well may they be melancholy souls that want the cheering light of Christ. But blessed is the people Psal. 89. 15. that know the joyful sound; they shall walk, O Lord, in the light of thy countenance. We may invert it, and say, Blessed are the people, O Lord, that walk in the light of thy countenance; they shall know the joyful sound: they shall enjoy a continual jubilee in their hearts.

4 Growing. It increaseth more and more from break of day, and is in this respect a fit emblem of that grace which Christ communicates to his members, the nature whereof is to be growing till it come to arrive at perfection. That in Isaiah 8. 20. To the Law and to the Testimony; if they speak not according to this Word, it is because there is no light (no morning) in them, intimates a remarkable difference between the knowledge of Saints and Hypocrites; the former is like the morning light, that shines more and more to the perfect day, Prov. 4. 18. But evil men and seducers (as Paul foretold) wax worse and worse; whereby it appears that theirs was but an evening light, which shines less and less, till it end in the blackness of darkness forever, Jude 13.

In the second place, the sun imparts Heat, a melting, inflaming, quickening heat.

1 Melting. When the surface of the water is glaz'd with ice, the Sun-beams dissolve it. The grace of Christ hath a like operation upon frozen hearts; which are never truly melted into contrition but by Evangelical beams. The Law, like a hammer, may break ice in pieces; but what remains is ice still: the Gospel dissolves it into water; 'tis no longer ice then. They shall look upon me whom they have pierced, and they shall mourn, Zech. 12. 10. No such kindly mourners, as they that have hearts melted with Christ's heat, and heated with sense of Christ's love. She in Luke 7th, the end, who had much forgiven her, loved much, and wept much.

2 Inflaming. The Sun-beams falling upon a burning-glass create a fire. So doth the Spirit of Christ (who is therefore called a spirit of burning, Isa. 4. 4.) when he falls upon the spirit of man. Did not our hearts burn within us, while he talked with us by the way, and while he opened to us the Scriptures? Luke last, 32. The burnt child, we use to say, dreads the fire: but there is a fire, which whosoever hath truly felt, will long to be so burnt again. Bernard having been well warmed with the consideration of that passage, Psal. 32. 1. Blessed is he whose transgression is forgiven, whose sin is covered, professeth he was seized upon with unspeakable joy, and assurance of his own share in that blessedness; after the feeling whereof he cries out, O•s• durasset! I would to God it had been continued. Lord, do thou visit me so again and again with thy salvation.

3 Quickening. Some creatures have no other father, but the sun, nor other mother but the slime. This perhaps is one reason why the sun is compared to a bridegroom, Psal. 19. because his beams are prolificall. The grace of Christ is so much more, the last Adam was made a quickenin spirit, 1 Cor. 15. 45. he that hath the son hath life, 1 John 5. 12. yea, a double life (for no less will serve his turn) the one of righteousness, all being naturally dead in law by reason of guilt; the other of holiness, all being dead in sins and trespasses, till quickened by him, the end of whose coming was that we might have life, & that we might have it more abundantly, Joh. 10. 10.

A third thing, which the Sun communicates, is its influence; the strength, and universality whereof are considerable here, we have an intimation of both, Psal. 19, 4, 5, 6. In the heavens hath God set a tabernacle for the Sun; which is as a bridegroom coming out of his chamber, and rejoices as a strong man to run his race. His going forth is from the end of the heaven; and his circuit unto the ends of it: and there is nothing hid from the heat thereof.

1. It is a strong influence, as may be evidenced by the Suns concocting of such solid bodies, as gold and precious stones are, in places that are so remote from his own sphere. Were not the influence of Christ exceeding forcible, how could it possibly rectify crooked, purify filthy, soften hard, and raise dead souls, as it useth to do, all on the sodain? 'Tis true indeed, that the operations of his grace are incomparably sweet; but it is no less true, that they are withal incomparably strong. To make use of the Psalmists Metaphores; Our Lord Jesus, in respect of the former, may be said to come as a bridegroom out of his chamber, clothing himself with all sweetness of carriage on his wedding day: of the latter, to rejoice as a strong man to run a race, bearing down whatever opposeth him in the way.

2 'Tis universal. No visible creature but shares more or less in the benefits of this influence. So Christ being the light that lightneth everyone that t•nes into the world. John 1. there is no man but partakes of his goodness in one kind or other, though with much variety in the success. For as the sun hath different operations upon different objects, e. g. wax and clay, softening the one, hardening the other; a chicken and a toad, increasing the wholsomnesse of the one, the poison of the other: so upon several men within the pale of a visible Church, Christ preached to all hath several works. Some are made softer, some harder; the spirits of foam are sweetened by the Ministry of the Gospel, of others imbittered. One, with the Amalekites servant refreshed by David, becomes instrumental against the enemies of his refresher: Another, with the snake in the fable, warmed by the husbandmans care and compassion, becomes an enemy to the author of that warmth; turns apostate, and falls to stinging Christ in his members so much the more, by how much he was the more enlightened with common grace.

You have had enough, and (I hope) not too much, of this metaphorical sun in the text: see now in what regard the woman is said to be clothed therewith. Surely because the Lord Jesus Christ is of the same use to his Church, that apparel is of to the body of man. It serves for covering, shelter, and ornament. In like manner.

1 Christ covers the Church with his graces. I will greatly rejoice in the Lord, my soul shall be joyful in my God: for he hath clothed me with the garments of salvation, he hath covered me with the robe of righteousness, Isa. 61. 10. That which Job speaks of himself in a natural, is true of him and all men else in a spiritual sense, naked came I into the world: and there is none but continues so till he come to be apparel'd by Christ, who therefore adviseth the Church of Laodicea, to buy of him white raiment, that she might be clothed, Revel. 3. 18. Paul having exhorted the Romans to walk honestly as in the day, not in rioting and drunkenness, not in chambering and wantonness, not in strife and envy; instead of adding, put on temperance, chastity, and such other graces, as have in them a contrariety to the fore-mentioned sins, chooseth rather to say (as a late interpreter well observes) put ye on the Lord Jesus Christ, because he is the only fountain of all grace, and without the putting on of his righteousness first by an hand of faith, ours will never exceed that of Philosophers and Pharisees: yea because even when the Spirit of God hath enabled us to good, we have need of Christ to hide the deformity of our best performances.

2 Christ shelters the Church by his merits from the wrath of God, as apparel doth our bodies from the cold and injuries of the weather. Jesus is he which delivered us from the wrath to come, 1 Thes. 1. last. Paul therefore desires to be found in Christ, Phil. 3. 9. as one would to be found in his clothes, when a biting frost comes, which if he were naked, would pinch him to death. Christ is so beloved of God, and God is so well pleased with Christ, as in him to love, and in him to be well pleased with all his members, even of that whole mystical body whereof he is head.

3 Christ adorns his Church, putting upon her a comeliness far beyond that of other Societies spoken of Ezek. 16. 14. Thy renowne went forth among the heathen for thy beauty; for it was perfect through my comeliness which I had put upon thee, saith the Lord God. That excellency of Jacob by which God swears, Amos 8. 7. is not to be understood of the Temple at Jerusalem, as some would have it, for God useth not to swear by creatures (that were to practice what he hath forbidden us) but by himself, Heb. 6. 13. Junius therefore expounds it of Christ, whose essence is the same with the Fathers, and who is indeed the Churches excellency. He it is that makes the Kings daughter to be all glorious within, Psal. 45. that renders a poor Saint in his russet, fuller of bravery then a profane son of Belial in his scarlet: one of their souls being apparelled with Christ himself, whilst the others is clad only with the rags of the first, not robes of the second Adam.

I go on to another rare perfection of this woman, which is her having

The Moon under her feet.

In explication whereof, I shall follow the stream of Expositors, who (some few only excepted) make the moon here an emblem of the world; and not fitly, seeing it is

1 Full of spots; Insomuch as the Saints, whose main care is to be found of God in peace without spot and blameless, 2 Pet. 3. 14. find it a very difficult matter and an high point of Religion, while they walk and converse in the world; to keep themselves unspotted from it, Jam. 1. last. The heirs of heaven come to be maculated more or less, notwithstanding their watchfulness. As for worldlings (whose spot is not the spot of God's children, Deut. 32. 5.) no Leopard is more spotted then they. Can the Ethiopian change his skin or the Leopard his spots? then may ye also do good th• are accustomed to do evil. That beast (they say▪ though it be stead, will appear spotted still, the spots inhering in its flesh, as well as its skin. Such are these men without and within, in conversation and in heart, all over full of spots.

2 Subject to many changes, never continuing long in a shape; sometimes an horned, sometimes ⟨◇⟩ half, and sometimes a full moon. So the world is a stage of vicissitudes, constant only in its inconstancy. The fashion of this world passeth away, 1 Cor. 7. 31. It is never long in one garb. As soon may the moon be suited with a coat that will always fit it, as the world with any accommodation that will always give content; with any condition that will always last. The fool changeth as the moon, saith the son of Sirach. And as worldlings are changlings, so the world it self passeth away, and the lusts thereof, 1 John 2. 17.

3 The cause of many diseases, especially of the falling-sickness. Scripture speaking of such as were troubled therewith, calls them ⟨ in non-Latin alphabet ⟩ Lunaticks or moon-struck, Mat. 4. 24. The symptoms of falling sometimes into the fire, sometimes into the water, of tearing, foaming, gnashing, expressed by the Evangelists, clearly show what disease the man had of whom his father said ⟨ in non-Latin alphabet ⟩ . Mat. 17. 15. The word in like manner renders the soul apt to be troubled with a spiritual falling-sickness; nothing exposing men to apostasy more then worldliness. Demas (saith Paul) hath forsaken me, having loved this present world, 2 Tim. 4. 10. and again, The love of money is the root of all evil, which while some coveted after, they have erred from the faith, 1 Tim. 6. 10. Many fearing the world would fall out with them, fall off from God. Spira revolted, merely in hope to preserve his estate, and so lost himself.

But why is the moon said to be under the woman's feet? that must now be our next enquiry.

The phrase imports victory over, and contempt of persons or things. Thus in Psal. 47. 3. He shall subdue the people under us, and the Nations under our feet. You know how the five Kings were used by Joshua; how Tamberlane served Bajazet, and what was prophesied of Christ, Psal. 110. 1. The Lord said unto my Lord, Sit thou at my right hand until I make thine enemies thy foot stool. So as the woman's having the moon under her feet, seems to imply the Churches being enabled by Christ, to overcome and trample upon the Elements, the Affronts, and the enjoyments of this world.

1 The elements of the world, spoken of Gal. 4. 3, 9. which one of great insight into this mystical book of the Revelation, understanding both of Mosaical ceremonies and of heathenish worship, makes account that the clause in my Text which we are now discoursing of, relates to that victory which the Primitive Church got over both; in that she, not only saw the abolition of legal ceremonies (which, saith he, might well be signified by the moon, seeing all the feasts of the Jews, and whole course of their Ecclesiastical year depended upon and were regulated by the motion of that Planet) but also the extirpation of those Idols, which the heathens formerly worshipped. For then did Satan fall down like lightning from heaven, Luke 10. 18. he fell from being adored as God, to being slighted as an Impostor, yea abominated as a wicked spirit. Then was fulfilled that which is written, Revel. 12. 9. The great Dragon was cast out, the old Serpent, called the Devil and Satan, which deceived the whole world; he was cast out into the earth, and his Angels were cast out with him. Yea then was that promise in part fulfilled, the language whereof hath great affinity with the phrase in my Text, The God of peace shall tread Satan under your feet shortly, Rom. 16. 20.

2 The affronts of the world. The Church got these under her feet, when she gloried in tribulation, was above her persecutors, and had patience to endure as much as their malice and cruelty could inflict. I take pleasure (saith Paul) in infirmities, in reproaches, in necessities, in persecutions, in distresses, for Christ's sake: for when I am weak then am I strong, 2 Cor. 12. 10. The Apostles rejoiced that they were counted worthy to suffer shame for the name of Christ, Act. 5. 41. They in Heb. 10. 34. took joyfully the spoiling of their goods, knowing in themselves that they had in heaven a better and an enduring substance. Laurentius the Martyr when they laid his body upon a gridiron with a purpose to broile him to death, is reported to have said, I have always longed for such cheer as this: To me these very flames are cooling, and refreshments rather than torments. Gordius desired his Executioners not to grudge him overmuch happiness; telling them, that the more they tormented him, the more GOD would reward him.

3 The enjoyments of the World. 1 John 5 4. Whatsoever is born of God overcomes the world: and this is the victory that overcomes the world, even our faith. Carnal reason paints the things of this life, and sets them out in beautiful colors; but faith washeth off the complexion, and then their deformity appears. Those Christians in the primitive times that laid their estates at the Apostles feet, had first got them under their own; learnt to trample upon, and to have a low esteem of them in their most serious thoughts. Take the goodliest things in the world, there have been some in all ages found, that were above them. One of the Fathers will not allow temporal riches the name of Goods, but accounts it enough if we forbear to call them evils. Another thinks him too dainty for a Christian, that desires pleasure on this side heaven: too foolish, that imagines carnal delights to be real pleasures. A third being tempted with preferments to a revolt, said, Offer them to children, not to Christians: As for me, I can part with life, but not with truth. Many such instances there are, wherein ye may clearly discern the Moon under the woman's, the World under the Churches feet.

Her third and last perfection follows, to wit, having

Upon her head a Crown of twelve Stars.

That is, holding fast the pure doctrine of the Gospel, first preached by the twelve Apostles, and after them by succeeding Ministers, which is as a Crown on the Churches head.

So as here three things are to be made out.

First, That the Apostles are here meant, and such faithful Ministers as succeeded them not excluded. The number expressed points us directly to the Apostles, who are often called the twelve in Scripture. There were no more chosen at first, Luke 6. 13. and when Judas was fallen from his Apostleship, Matthias was substituted in his room to make up the number: yea though there was a superaddition of Paul and Barnabas, yet, in memory of the first election, they are still spoken of as twelve, long after that, in the Apocalypse. I will not trouble you with discoursing of the twelve stones taken up out of the midst of Jordan, the twelve Spies sent out to search the land of Canaan, the twelve Oxen under the brazen Sea, the twelve Lions that supported Solomon's Throne, the twelve Officers appointed by him to provide for his household; all which are by some made types of the twelve Apostles. Neither will I insist upon that notion which Jerome presumes to be unquestionable, and sets a nec dubium est upon, viz. that those twelve wells of water, and seventy palm trees at Elim, Exod. 15. last, did undoubtedly prefigure the twelve Apostles and seventy Disciples. It may perhaps be worthy of more consideration, that as the Jewish Church had twelve Patriarchs, from whom the twelve Tribes of Israel descended; so Christ ordained twelve Apostles to be as fathers of his Israel under the Gospel, the Christian Church: And that the Spirit in Revel. 4. 4. where mention is made of twenty four seats, and twenty four Elders sitting upon them, alludes both to the twelve Patriarchs and the twelve Apostles, which put together make up those twenty four, by whom the whole Church under both Testaments is represented. It appears by what hath been said, that the Apostles are certainly meant in this place. The reason why I conceive other Ministers not excluded, is because the Angels of the seven Churches are called stars, Revel. 1. 1st. as well as the twelve Apostles here. Which is The second thing to be cleared, viz. That the Apostles and all faithful Ministers are like stars. Wherein it were easy to be large, seeing they and the stars resemble each other in many things. But I will content myself with a few.

1 As the stars are heavenly bodies shining, but with a borrowed light; so the Apostles of old were, and all godly Ministers ever since have endeavored to be men of an heavenly conversation; heavenly men and earthly Angels, as Paul was styled by Chrysostom. They shine as lights in the world, acknowledging all the light they have to be derived from Christ, as the Sun, of whose fullness they all receive. That which one of the German Divines made his Motto, fully speaks everyone of their hearts.

Nil scio, nil possum, nil sum quoque; quod tamen esse, Scire, & posse aliquid dicor, id omne Dei est.

They are most ready to profess that of themselves they know nothing, can do nothing, are nothing that good is: and that whatsoever good they are, or do, or know, they owe it wholly to the free grace of God in Christ.

2 As the Stars are in continual motion for the good of the Universe: so were the Apostles for the good of the Church. Paul ceased not to warn everyone night and day with tears. Acts 20. 31. went from Jerusalem round about to Illyricum, preaching the Gospel, Rom. 15. 19. Succeeding Ministers have accordingly in their places acquainted themselves with continual labors; which Scripture calls upon them for. Cry aloud, spare not, lift up thy voice like a trumpet, Isa. 58 1. Durante pugnâ non cessat tuba; the trumpet must be sounding all the while the battle is in fighting. Now there is no end of the Christian Warfare, and therefore none of the Ministers pains. The Church is God's husbandry, 1 Cor. 3. 9. her Ministers his husbandmen. Redit agricolis labor actus in orbem. The husbandman hath never quite done his work; but the end of one task is still the beginning of another. So it fares with painful Ministers. One while their employment is instructing poor ignorant souls; then are they like Stars that shine in a cold Winter-night. Another while convincing gainsayers and Heretics; then are they like those stars in their courses that fought against Sisera, Judge. 5. The most benign Constellation is not more promising to the World, than their Associations are unto the Church.

3 As the stars are said to differ one from another in glory, 1 Cor. 15. 45. So the Apostles excel'd other Ministers, in the universality of their commission, the immediatnesse of their call, the infallibility of their doctrine, together with many other privileges. And among succeeding Ministers there hath been found very great difference in regard of their parts, gifts, and graces; such as there is among Stars of the first, second, and third magnitude, Melancthon speaking of the Divines of his age, said, Pomeranus is a Grammarian, I a Logitian, Justus Jonas an Orator, but Martin Luther is all these; a miracle of men, and one that penetrates the heart in whatsoever he speaks, or writes. Beza comparing the three famous Ministers of Geneva, saith that Farellus excelled in Fervency, Viretus in Eloquence, Calvin in Sententiousnesse: and that the concurrence of these endowments in any one man would have rendered him a complete Evangelical P•stour.

The third thing which I am to clear is, That Evangelical doctrine is as a crown to the Church of Christ. The prudent are crowned with knowledge, saith Solomon, Proverbs 14. 18. Now there is no knowledge saving, but this of Evangelical truth; and therefore no such crown as that. 'Tis our Savior's counsel to the Church of Philadelphia, Revel. 3. 11. hold that fast which thou hast, that no man take thy crown. Some false Apostles, it should seem, had been tampering with this Church; Christ commends her for keeping the word of his patience, ver. 10. i. e. the Gospel, which declares the sufferings of Christ, and excites to patience by his example: whereupon he adds the fore-mentioned word of advice. It would save much labor in debating one of the Arminian points, if the place might be interpreted (as for ought I know it may) to this sense.

As if he had said, O Philadelphia, keep that truth, which hath been taught by those that planted thee at first. That truth is thy crown; let no man take it from thee, no tyrant rob, no seducer cheat thee of it. A crown, thou knowest, is the most principal ornament: take it from me, evangelical truth is the most principal crown.

I believe you expect some application of what hath been already delivered, before we close with the second verse; and will therefore briefly infer somewhat, first from the whole vision, then from the woman's several perfections, and lastly from the order of those perfections.

1 Inferences from the whole vision. Which are two.

1 That besides the natural, there is a spiritual use to be made of all the creatures. The Sun here points to Christ, the Moon to the World, the Stars to the Ministers of the Gospel. Mans soul is an Alembick, in which when the creatures are laid like so many herbs, if there be any fire of devotion within, many sweet meditations may be distilled. Natural hearts are apt to make a sensual use of divine things: but spiritual hearts have an art of making divine uses even of natural things, which we should all do well to learn.

2 That the Whore of Babylon differs much from the woman in my Text; the Apostaticall Church of Rome, from the Apostolical Church of Christ: As not being clothed with the Sun, but with outward pomp, Revel. 17. 4. She was arrayed in purple, and scarlet color, and decked with gold and precious stones, more for state than for Christ; refusing to accept of him for her only covering, shelter and ornament, and going about to establish a righteousness of her own. Not having the Moon under her feet, but in her heart, loving the world, maintaining her greatness by carnal policy, and making prosperity a sign of the Church. Not being crowned with these twelve stars, but with the inventions and traditions of men, recommended by the Council of Trent, as worthy to be received with the same affections and reverence, which are due to the Holy Scriptures. So as indeed the Moon is her crown, and the Stars her footstool.

2 Inferences from the several perfections here ascribed to the woman.

Her being clothed with the Sun lets us see,

1 The All-sufficiency of Christ. Jacob desired but bread to eat and raiment to put on. Having food and raiment (saith Paul) let us be therewith content. Now besides spiritual meat and drink which Christ affords us, John 6. 55. my flesh is meat indeed, and my blood is drink indeed, he himself becomes apparel to us, Gal. 3. 27. As many of you as have been baptized into Christ, have put on Christ.

2 The true fountain of all that wisdom, zeal, and grace which appears in the conversation of true Saints. They are clothed with Christ, as with the Sun, and he it is that communicates to them light of wisdom, heat of zeal, and influence of grace. Such as have really put on him, make not provision for the flesh (as others do) to fulfill the lusts thereof: although but too many, while they profess a being clothed with the Sun, give just occasion to renew a sad complaint made by one of the Fathers, viz. That the blood of Christ when newly shed, did as it were boil in believers hearts, whereas now 'tis almost frozen in ours. So much do we come short of the first love of those Primitive times.

Her having the Moon under her feet, shows us how very ill it becomes the genuine issue of this woman to love the world; the friendship whereof is enmity with God, Jam. 4. 4. Mundus in maligno positus, 1 John 5. 19. next after Satan, this present evil world is the great Malignant. Look as the Moon, when she is at the full, is then in most direct opposition to the Sun; so 'tis the temper of the world to be most opposite to, and rebellious against Christ, when it receives the most light of prosperity from him, and is fullest of the blessings of his goodness. Jesurun waxed fat and kicked: then he forsook God which made him; & lightly esteemed the rock of his salvation: Deut. 32. 15. I spake to thee in thy prosperity, but then saidst I will not hear, Ier. 32. 21. why should Christians then be friends to that world, which is such an enemy both to their salvation, and to their Savior?

Her being crowned with twelve Stars may serve

1 To beget in us honorable thoughts of the Ministers calling. How mean soever their persons be, yet are they Stars, and that in the right hand of Christ, Revel. 1. 20. an expression that argues affection to them (as when Jacob called the son whom he meant to love for his dying mothers sake, by the name of Benjamin, or the son of his right hand) nor only so, but care of them according to that, Psal. 17. 7. Shew thy marvellous loving kindness, O thou that savest by thy right hand: and that Psal. 80. 17. Let thy hand be upon the man of thy right hand, upon the son of man whom thou madest strong for thyself. I know there are many wandering stars (as Jude calls the false teachers of that age; in the 13th. verse of his Epistle; men that made a fair show, but had no substance of truth in them: and are therefore in that and the foregoing verse compared to clouds but without water, to trees but without fruit, and to stars but without light. I am far from taking upon me to plead for any such, but fear not to profess myself an advocate for all those, that are godly, gifted, and faithful in the work of their ministry throughout the Land: the rather, because there was never more, never so much contesting against their Office as now. But who are they that think themselves able to wrest from Christ, that which he holds in his right hand; and do not rather fear lest he stretch out this hand of his; to the crushing of all those, that go about to crush his stars? Godly Ministers when they are slighted and injured most, may comfort themselves, by considering that it is the fate of stars to appear much less to the eyes of men, then indeed they are: and that they, who during life are as Stars in Christ's right hand, favored and protected by him, shall after death be as stars at his right hand, glorified with him, according to that Dan. 12. 3. They that be wise (or they that be teachers) shall shine as the brightness of the firmament, and they that turn many to righteousness, as the stars forever and ever. There will soon be an end of their labors and sufferings, but none of their glory.

2 To put us all upon prizing Apostolical doctrine as the Crown of our Church and Nation. Let Italy boast of her rich Copes, stately Altars, curious Images (which are so far from adorning a Church, as that they do indeed defile it) the Crown and glory of England is, that she hath maintained the truth of Christ, and enjoyed the light of the twelve Stars; deposited in this blessed book. Did I only say she hath maintained the truth of Christ? may I not venture to assert that she doth maintain it? If not, the next assertion must be that of the Lamentations, Chap. 5. 16, The crown is fallen from our heads, not unto us. But I hope better things of the Kingdom, and such as accompany Reformation, though I thus speak. Doubtless the Confession of Faith, lately presented to the Honorable Houses by the Assembly of Divines (who have therein expressed the sense of many millions beside themselves) will abundantly manifest to the world, that this crown is not wholly fallen from England's head: yet I fear there is cause enough to acknowledge, that it doth not stand so fast on as heretofore, by reason of the many Opinionists, whose main employment is to shake it. Verily whosoever bears a loyal heart to Jesus Christ, cannot but grieve to see the jewels of that crown, which he hath provided for his Churches head, pawned and sold, and embezled as they are: to see not only Arminians, Libertines, and Socinians gratified in abundance of their principles; but even Mohammedans closed with by some, in what they hold concerning the authority of Scripture, and concerning the deity of Jesus Christ, and of God the Holy Ghost. Yet notwithstanding, would we all in the strength of Christ, set ourselves for time to come, to buy the truth (which none should sell) and, when truth hath been sold by others to redeem it; I doubt not but within a while that would become applicable to England, which the Prophet speaks of Zion, Isa. 62. 3. Thou shalt also be a Crown of glory in the hand of the Lord, and a royal Diadem in the hand of thy God.

3 Inferences from the order of these perfections.

1 That men will never contemn the world till they have learned to put on Christ. The woman is first clothed with the Sun, then gets the Moon under her feet, not till then. The world tastes bitter to a soul that hath got the relish of Christ, and is amiable only to such as know him not. The stars that shine with some luster all the night, when the sun riseth in the morning hide their heads and appear not, being so out-shined, as to be obscured by that more glorious light. Such are all worldly excellencies to a soul wherein Christ is risen. A man can then slight the things, for which he formerly valued himself. To Zacchaeus gold is not the same thing after conversion and before it. Now he makes restitution, and cares not how little he leave himself, so he be not left by Christ.

2 That men will never prize the Gospel as their Crown, till they have learned to contemn the world. The Moons being under the woman's feet, goes before her having a crown of twelve stars upon her head. Those in the parable who had no mind to come to the marriage supper, but desired to be excused, fetch all their excuses from worldly affairs. That in Psal. 119. 36. Incline my heart unto thy Testimonies, and not to covetousness, implies that an heart inclined to covetousness will never give the Oracles of God their due esteem. Luther, who gloried in nothing more then the Gospel of Christ, and ventured all for it, is reported to have professed that he was never so much as tempted by Satan to that sin. The Pope tried to win him by money (which it seems was more then the Devil had done) but upon trial made, the answer which his agents returned was, That the German beast cared not for gold.

Hitherto of the first Verse. Come we now to that other part of the description, which concerns the Churches weak and perilous condition, laid down in the second.

And she being with child, cried travelling in birth, and pained to be delivered

Where there is a kind of gradation, the steps whereof will help to bound, and likewise to methodize our discourse, after this manner. She is with child, her being with child introduceth a travel; that travailing is attended with pains, those pains force her to cry.

1 The woman was with child. This Apocalypse being the last piece of Scripture, hath a retrospect to the former canonical books, well nigh in all the passages of it. Most of the phrases in this chapter seem to be allusions, either to the story of Israel, as related by Moses; or of Christ as reported by the Evangelists. For example, the woman's crying may look back to the doleful cry of Israel in Egypt, by reason of bondage; her flying into the desert and nourishment there, to the wilderness into which Israel was led, and where Manna was sent them from heaven to feed upon. Her being delivered of a man-child, to the Virgin Mary's bringing forth of Christ; being watched by a Dragon ready to devour her child, to Herod's lying in wait to murder Christ, the child's being caught up to God and his Throne, to our Savior's Ascension, and sitting at the right hand of the Majesty on high. In conformity to which notions it may be said, that as the Virgin Mary conceived Christ, when she had been over-shadowed with the Holy Ghost; so when the Spirit came down at Pentecost upon the Apostles, the Primitive Church fell with child. The words are 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 having in her womb. Never was the Church more pregnant; for she then had in her womb all those converts that were brought forth to God in the several Nations of the world, by the ministry of the first Evangelical teachers, and of their immediate successors.

2 This being with child brought her in time unto her travel, which consisted partly in the pious endeavors of zealous Christians to bring in others to Christ, (it being a principle with such, that he walks unanswerably to his new-birth, who doth not desire and labor to see others new-borne) whence it is that Augustine commends his mother Monica for putting her self to more trouble in being instrumental to his regeneration, then she had been at in bringing him forth into the world: partly and especially, in the great and uncessant labors of her Apostles, Evangelists, & other Officers, to disperse the Gospel throughout the world for its conversion to the faith, and making good of that prophesy, Isa. 54. 1. Sing barren, thou that dost not bear; break forth into singing; and cry aloud thou that didst not travel with child for more are the children of the desolate, then the children of the married wife, saith the Lord. As also of that, Isa. 65. 8. Who hath heard such a thing? who hath seen such things? shall the earth $\langle \diamond \rangle$ made to bring forth in one day, or shall a nation be borne at once? for as soon as Zion travelled she brought forth her child. Ye have to this purpose a most emphatical speech of Paul, Gal. 4. 19. My little children of whom I travel in birth again, until Christ be formed in you.

3 Her travel was accompanied with sore pains, which were increased by the opposition she met withal from two sorts of men, Persecutors and Heretics. That which arose from the one sort was more violent, that which came from the other more fraudulent; but both exceeding dolorous. The former had more of the Lyon in it, that term Scripture puts upon Tyrants; Jer. 4. 7. The Lyon is come up from his thicket, and the destroyer of the Gentiles is on his way; the latter more of the Fox, which is the name given to seducers, Cant. 2. 15. Take us the Foxes. Satan in the one shown himself a Dragon, and a Serpent in the other. Lion and Fox, Dragon and Serpent, all conspire to enlarge the Churches sorrows.

4 Being thus in pain she could not hold from crying out;

1 To God in her prayers. As Acts 4. from the 24th Verse to the 31. They lift up their voice to God with one accord, and said, Lord, thou art God, &c. Of a truth against thy holy child Jesus whom thou hast anointed, both Herod and Pontius Pilate, which the Gentiles and the people of Israel were gathered together. And now, Lord, behold their threatenings, &c.

2 To men in her Apologies. Those of Paul in the Acts of the Apostles, those of Justin Martyr, Tertullian and others afterwards, what were they else but the cries of this woman, travelling in birth, and pained to be delivered? This may suffice for a brief explication of the words.

The way to improve them in this Auditory will be to accommodate these materials to the State of things among ourselves.

AFTER some overtures of a Match in the Reign of King Henry the Eighth, the Reformed Church in this Kingdom was solemnly married to Jesus Christ, when the Scepter was swayed by Edward the Sixth: that godly young Prince (as became the Bridegrooms friend) rejoicing greatly because of the Bridegrooms voice. The famous nine and thirty Articles of her Confession then framed, were an evident sign of her being with child, and that a thorough Reformation was then conceived, though but conceived. Many and fore were the breeding fits she conflicted with in Queen Mary's days, and such as gave occasion to fear that she would have miscarried. But God sent her ease from heaven under the succeeding Princes: in which condition she went on for a long while, drawing still nearer and nearer her time. Six years ago, after this Parliament had sate awhile it was generally believed that she was false into her travel. And, in the midst of all those sorrows which have befallen England since, her friends encouraged themselves with this hope, that the quicker and sharper her pains grew, the liker she was to be speedily delivered of that man-child, which was by them so greedily expected. But, behold, as if all these had been but fore-runners of her labor, not bearing-throws, she continues still in pain: insomuch as they now begin to think she has not gone her full time, and earnestly to desire she may; because they fear nothing more than an abortive Reformation.

However, evident it is, not only that her pains are multiplied, but that they are caused, partly by the malignity of her enemies, who have embroiled her in a bloody Civil War, and thereby given her occasion to breath out the Prophets complaint, Jer. 4. 19, 20. My bowels, my bowels, I am pained at my very heart; my heart makes a noise in me, I cannot hold my peace, because thou hast heard, ô my soul, the sound of the trumpet, the alarm of War. Destruction upon destruction is cried, for the whole land is spoiled. Partly from the animosities and disagreement of her members, then which nothing is more dolorous to quiet spirits. Let me tell you how a great Scholar once prosest himself affected with the like times.

I know not (saith he) what pleasure other men may take in this age, but I am extremely troubled at it; because there is such contention and siding, such wrangling and jangling on every side. For my part I had rather be a seller of herbs and roots, or a man of the meanest profession under heaven, enjoying Christian tranquility, and Gospel-simplicity, then a Divine of greatest note and reputation deeply engaged in such divisions.

Our Churches condition being such as hath been described, or rather such as no description of mine can possibly reach the perplexity of; who can think it strange, if (besides her crying to God, as in Is. 26. 17, 18. Like as a woman with child that draweth near the time of her delivery is in pain, and crieth out in her pangs; so have we been in thy sight, ô Lord. We have been with child, we have been in pain, we have as it were brought forth wind: And to men, as in Lament. 1. 12. Is it nothing to you, all ye that pass by? behold and see, if there be any sorrow like unto my sorrow, wherewith the Lord hath afflicted me in the day of his fierce anger) she make her special addresses to you, Honorable Senators, whom God hath now called to the Midwives office? No loving neighbor but would rise at midnight to help a poor woman in travel: No tender Christian but would put on bowels of mercy towards a Church in such a case. O what care! what bowels! what help is expected from you, who above all men are bound with all your might and skill to promote the birth of such a child, as may cause the woman to forget all her sorrows!

Would you obstetricate, as ye ought? I know you would, yet think it not presumption in me, if in pursuance of the allegory which my Text puts me upon, I take liberty to suggest three or four things by way of humble advice, before I conclude.

1 Imitate Tamars midwife, Genes. 38. The story is this from Verse 27. to the end of the Chapter. It came to pass in the time of her travel, that behold twins were in her womb. And it came to pass when she travelled, that the one put out his hand, and the midwife took and bound upon his hand a scarlet thrid, saying, This came out first. And it came to pass as he drew back his hand, that behold his brother came out, and she said, How hast thou broken forth? this breach be upon thee: therefore his name was called Pharez, And afterwards came out his brother that had the scarlet thrid about his hand, and his name was called Zarah. The different judgments of Professors throughout the Land, show that our Church hath twins in her womb. So much of Truth as hath been already owned by Parliament, Zarah-like hath put forth the hand; None can but say, This came out first, for you have marked it with the scarlet thrid of a civil Sanction. Yet is there a Pharez a Division or Separation (as the word properly signifies) whose breakings out are notoriously known; as also his challenge of primogeniture. Our hopes are that Zarah will in due time be fully born, notwithstanding this interposition: and that you will say to the party that separates in Doctrinal principles (for of them it is I now speak) by maintaining opinions that are destructive, and prey upon the vital spirits of Religion, as the midwife then did to Pharez, Upon thee be this breach and not upon us; May it never come to be upon you; may you never come to be partakers of other men's sins in so high a degree. Hitherto the damnable heresies and daring blasphemies, which have been vented everywhere, may be thought to stand on the private account of such as vent them: But if representative England (which God forbid) should espouse their crimes, by over-much connivence at them, the guilt would then become National, and too heavy for us to bear.

The Apostate Julian, who made it his business to destroy the Christian Religion, betook himself to the use of two principal means; the one whereof was obstructing the ways of liberal education, by putting down Schools of learning, that Christians being kept in ignorance might sooner be cheated of their faith, and less able to resist the Heathens sophistry: The other, indulgence to all kind of Sects and heresies, in hope by countenancing them to create such a distraction amongst Christians, as should bring speedy destruction, not only upon the Orthodox party, but upon the very profession of Christianity.

I am fully assured that you abhor nothing more then the end at which Julian aimed, and therefore doubt not but the God of all wisdom and grace, will preserve in you an abhorreny of the means which he used. As ye desire to have Religion flourish among us, give encouragement to learning, and continue nursing fathers to the nurseries of it. If notwithstanding the pleasantness of situation, the water be naught and the ground barren, in either or both our Universities (as of old at Jericho, where there was a School of the Prophets) make speedy provision of fitting salt; let it be cast into the spring that the waters may be healed. And as ye desire to answer the expectation of Christendom, yea, of Christ, and to fulfill the vows of God that are upon you, speedily raise up some bank against the inundation of blasphemies and heresies, which are like to overflow us. The Angel of the Church of Ephesus is twice commended for his patience, yet noted withal for his not being able to bear such as were evil; and particularly, for his hating the deeds of the Nicolaitans, who were a pack of lascivious Heretics. Patience it self cannot bear with such.

But there is not the same spirit in all that dissent from truth; neither is every parcel of truth of the same importance. There may be some godly and peaceable persons, who yet cannot thoroughly close with everything, which you perhaps may see a necessity of establishing, my next word of advice is, that toward such you would

2 Do as the Egyptian midwives did, Exod. 1. Spare them for they are Hebrew children, and such as belong to the Israel of God, though Jacob like they have their haltings. This with me is a maxim, Everyone that is truly conscientious will as really tender the public peace of that Church and State wherein he lives, as he desires to have the private peace of his conscience tendered by that Church and State. Now unto such as are indeed so qualified, although they may perhaps have gathered some peccant humors, there should be no churlish physic given. Lenitives may serve the turn; seeing there is a divine nature in them, which will not only preserve them from all mortal diseases, but work out those slight distempers by degrees. I often think of that prayer, Rom. 15. 5, 6. Now the God of patience and consolation, grant you to be likeminded one towards another according to Christ Jesus: that ye may with one mind and one mouth glorify God, even the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ. Why the God of all patience? Surely to imply, that unless God be pleased to beget mutual patience, and forbearance of one another in some things, Christians will never be like minded one towards another according to Christ Jesus; neither will our heavenly Father ever be glorified by all his own children, with one mind and one mouth, according to their duty. In an Army, where the several Regiments are distinguished by several colors, yet all under command of one General, and engaged in one common cause, if the soldiers by reason of some diversity in their colors, should mistake one another for foes, and accordingly charge everyone upon those of the Regiment next adjoining; how inevitable would the ruin of such an host of men be? The Church of Christ is an Army with Banners, there always hath been, and will always be some variety of opinion even among the good Soldiers of Jesus Christ: But so long as they are all obedient to the known commands of the Captain General of their salvation (as the Scripture styles Christ) this variety should not engage them in the destruction of one another, lest thereby the Armies of the living God come to be destroyed, and preyed upon by the common enemy.

3 Encourage the woman in her travel, as Rachel's midwife once did, Gen 35. 16, 17. Rachel travelled, and she had hard labor, and it came to pass when she was in hard labor, that the midwife said unto her, fear not, thou shalt have this son also. She had born Joseph before, now the midwife puts her in hope of Benjamin. We have already through the unspeakable blessing of God upon your Counsels and Forces, obtained deliverance from a mighty adverse power, that would have ruined us. Reformation is that which we are now groaning for: what satisfaction would it give to hear you saying to England, Fear not, thou shalt have this son also? The Church (as I intimated before) is said to travel in the labor of those, her agents, that are called to employments of the greatest moment and difficulty; such are Magistrates, Ministers, Soldiers, and to the first of these sorts it belongs to encourage the other two. Hezekiah was a great reformer, and it may be observed, that there is mention twice made of his speaking comfortably to certain persons, 2 Chron. 30. 22. Hezekiah spake comfortably to all the Levites that taught the good knowledge of the Lord: And again, Chap. 32. 6. He set Captains of War over the people, and gathered them together, and spake comfortably to them. If our faithful and valiant Soldiers have not received due encouragement, let them have it, I beseech you, to the full: and let me have leave to speak a few words in behalf of our godly Ministers; whose assistance (how useless soever it may be accounted in other affairs) cannot be spared in Ecclesiastical Reformations. Israel was not brought out of Egypt, but by the concurrence of Moses & Aaron; nor the second Temple built, but by joint endeavors of Zerubbabel and Joshua. It hath been formerly said by one out of this Pulpit, that you have nothing at all to do in reforming the Church; by another, that none but you have to do in the government of it. I fear not to call both these extremes, and beg your attention to those that take the middle way; whose unanimous voice to the Parliament of England, concerning extirpation of Heresies, and removal of abuses out of the Church, is that of She••aniah to Ezra, Arise, for THIS MATTER BELONGS TO THEE, we also will be with thee: be of good courage and do it. We live in an age wherein are many that do evil with both hands earnestly, as the Prophet speaks, Micah 7. 3. There is therefore need that both our hands should be employed in doing good. Now the two hands of a Christian Kingdom are the Magistracy and Ministry thereof. The business of Reformation calls for both. As we commonly use our hands for the washing and cleansing of each other. So if the Minister be extravagant, the Magistrate may correct him; then the right hand washeth the left: If the Magistrate do amiss, the Minister may admonish him, then the left hand cleanseth the right. But he that makes use of one hand to cut off the other with, destroys his body: such would our condition be, if either Ministers should suffer the Magistracy to be cried down; or Magistrates permit the Ministry to be debased. Scripture and experience bid us hope, that Amalek shall then be foiled, and Israel prevail, when faith in Christ, and zeal for truth shall support both these hands, as Aaron and Hur did those of Moses upon the mount.

Lastly, for a conclusion of all, let the prayer of faith be of greatest activity when the woman is found to be in greatest extremity. Time was when things were at such a pass even with Jerusalem in a day of trouble, rebuke and blasphemy, that the children were come to the birth, but $\langle \diamond \rangle$ was no strength to bring forth, Isa. 37. 3. The case may perhaps be ours at present, though I will not say it is. $\langle \dots \rangle$ am, the wisest course we can possibly take, is to follow $\langle \diamond \rangle$ •zekiah's good example; who, upon that sad occasion, $\langle \diamond \rangle$ not only pray himself, verse: 15. but send to Isaiah, req•ring him to lift up a Prayer for the remnant that was $\langle \diamond \rangle$ verse. 4. Verily, Honorable and beloved, there is as $\langle \diamond \rangle$ need of fasting and prayer at this day, as ever there $\langle \diamond \rangle$ since our troubles began. But the assembling of our $\langle \diamond \rangle$ from month to month will be in vain, unless that whi• is tendered to God be the fasting of sincerity and prayer $\langle \diamond \rangle$ faith. If while we fast our lusts be surfeited, and $\langle \dots \rangle$ outcry our devotion, we must expect to have it much lon•er yet ere the child be borne. Wherefore to add streng• to our faith, and alacrity to our prayers, let us feed $\langle \diamond \rangle$ those interrogations, which have the force of a promise $\langle \diamond \rangle$ them, Isa. 66 9. Shall I bring to the birth, and not cause $\langle \diamond \rangle$ bring forth, saith the Lord? I that cause to bring forth shall I shut the womb saith thy God? For my part when $\langle \diamond \rangle$ consider that Temple-work hath been always accomplished not by might or by power, but by the spirit of the Lor• and call to mind how many mountains are already $\langle \dots \rangle$ before his Zerubbabels: I am filled with hopes, $\langle \diamond \rangle$ you the Worthies of our Israel, whose souls have $\langle \diamond \rangle$

› all this while to bring forth a Reformation, shall ‹› day see the travel of your souls, & be fully satisfied: ‹› as Jesus Christ would not save his people by halves ‹› leave the work of purchasing redemption for them ‹› had brought it to a Consummatum est, so he will not ‹› his Church by halves, but carry on the blessed work ‹› Reformation till, not we only but, all they through•• the world, whose expectations are fastened upon it, sha•• cause to rejoice and say, It is finished.

FINI•

P-JA2-2. Armilla catechetica. A chain of principles; or, An orderly concatenation of theological aphorisms and exercitations; wherein, the chief heads of Christian religion are asserted and improved: by John Arrowsmith, D.D. late master both of St Johns and Trinity-College successively, and Regius professor of Divinity in the University of Cambridge. Published since his death according to his own manuscript allowed by himself in his life time under his own hand. - Arrowsmith, John, 1602-1659.

ARMILLA CATECHETICA.

A CHAIN of PRINCIPLES; Or, An orderly concatenation of Theological Aphorisms and Exercitations; Wherein, The Chief Heads of Christian Religion are asserted and improved: By JOHN ARROWSMITH, D. D. Late Master both of S^t Johns and Trinity-College successively, and Regius Professor of Divinity in the University of CAMBRIDGE.

Published since his Death according to his own Manuscript allowed by Himself in his life time under his own hand.

ECCLESIASTES 12. 9, 10, 11.

Because the Preacher was wise, He still taught the people Knowledge. Yea; He gave good heed, and sought out and set in order many Proverbs.

The Preacher sought to find out acceptable words, and that which was written was upright, even words of Truth.

The words of the Wise are as goads and as nails fastened by the Masters of the Assemblies, and given by one Pastor.

CAMBRIDGE: Printed by John Field, Printer to the University 1659. And are to be sold at the sign of the Seven Stars in Fleet-street near S. Dunstons Church, LONDON.

To the Reader.

IT is the Profession of the Apostle Paul to the Corinthians in regard of Himself; That as a wise Master-builder he had laid the Foundation; Whereby he would signify and declare thus much unto them: That the laying of the Foundation is the work of a Master-builder, as also that some skill and wisdom is both required and shewn in the right laying of it.

This hath been Eminently the care of the Reverend and Learned Author of these ensuing discourses, who being sufficiently sensible of the defect, as well as necessity of a settled and wellgrounded knowledge in the Fundamentals of the Doctrine of Christ; hath therefore with all diligence applied himself hereunto in this Treatise, which he hath left to the world.

Neither was this more seasonable for the Time then it was proper and fitting for the place, in which at first it received it's Beginning, being in One of the Schools of the Prophets, & a Principal Seminary of Divines, S^t Johns College in Cambridge. Where being at that time Master (and having as yet no other public employment, which might take him up) he was willing to lay himself forth so much the rather in this way of his Ministry, by Catechetical Lectures in that Chapel on the Evenings of the Lord's day. As Elisha when he came to Jericho, casting salt into those springs of water, for the preserving of all savoriness and fruitfulness in them.

Now these Sermons of his he had drawn up (so far as to the preaching of them) into a complete Body of Divinity in thirty distinct Aphorisms with their respective Exercitations; being also the sum, and extract of most of his former labors in the whole course of his ministry; which He had intended (if God had permitted) to have fitted, and prepared for the press. But being prevented of this his purpose by a long and tedious sickness, and much weakness growing upon him, and at last by Death itself; he finished only these six, which are now presented to view; and authorized under his own hand for those which he allowed of as his, Exclusively to any other besides: and committed them to our care alone for the management of the publishing of them: which accordingly we have endeavored to do with all fidelity.

The Book is not unfitly styled (and that by the Author himself) a Chain of Principles. For such is the Nature of the Truths propounded in it; as in order to other Points of Divinity, which are founded upon them, so likewise to the Life of a Christian, which is much regulated by them in the right improvement of them. Every Article of Christian Religion hath somewhat in it of Principle to a Gracious and Holy Conversation which it is carried and directed unto. Hence 1 Tim. 3. 16. It is said, Great is the mystery of Godliness, God manifested in the flesh &c. The Incarnation, Passion, Resurrection, Ascension of Christ and the like they are all matters of Godliness: because that they tend to Godliness in the Nature and Discovery of them, as also promote Godliness in the true Compliance and closing with them.

It is called A Chain of Principles for sundry reasons likewise.

First, From the Connection, which they have one with another. For like as in a chain there are divers links joined together, and these in a mutual dependence & concomitancy and subordination; Even so is it likewise with the Doctrines and Principles of Christian Religion. They are connected, and knit so together, as that there cannot be a denial of one of them: but more will consequently fall with it. Look as in things necessary to be done, there is a dependence and connection of Commands, so that he, who breaketh one Law is interpreted to break all the rest, & to be guilty of an Universal transgression; because he sins against that General Authority, whereby all the rest were given; so also in things necessary to be believed; he that denieth One Article of faith which is offered to him by God to be received, denieth the Faith itself in the latitude of it: as sinning against the General Veracity of him that propounds it, and weakening all other Truths, which are dependent upon it. Though perhaps in so doing, he may not always actually intend it.

Secondly, A Chain also for that special Concord and Agreement which it breedeth (and ought to breed) in those that profess it, notwithstanding all collateral and circumstantial differences whatsoever. The Principles of Christianity as they are united within themselves, so they do marvelously unite those who do really and cordially embrace them, and make them to speak the same thing that there be no divisions amongst them; But to be perfectly joined together in the same mind, and in the same judgment: as the Apostle expresseth it. From thence it cometh to pass, that there is so much disunion in Affection because there is so much distraction in opinion. Whereas the Primitive Believers, while they were all of one Faith, they were answerably all of one heart and of one soul; and so preserving the unity of the spirit in the bond of peace.

Thirdly, A Chain also for the worth and dignity of it, Prov. 1. 9. They shall be an ornament of Grace unto thine head, and Chains about thy neck. Persons of Quality and Authority they are wont to wear their golden Chains wherewith they are set out and adorned. It is the expression of Christ to his Church, Cant. 1. 10. Thy cheeks are comely with rows of jewels. Thy neck with chains of Gold. And again, Canticles 4. 9. Thou hast ravished my heart, my sister, my spouse, thou hast ravished my heart with one of thine eyes, with one Chain of thy neck. This system and Body of Truth which is here in part commended unto us, is the precious and glorious chain upon the neck of the true Spouse of Christ, which makes her to look pleasingly, and amiably in the eyes of her Beloved, and distinguishes her from all false and counterfeit lovers.

To all this we may finally add, what it is in the very work itself, and the contrivances of it: wherein (not to anticipate the thoughts of others that shall peruse it) soundness of judgment with elegancy of expression; Sublimity of Notion with sobriety of spirit; Variety of reading with accurateness of composure; Sweetness of wit with savoriness of heart, do seem to be linked together in so rare, and happy a conjunction, as which makes this Chain of Principle to be a chain of Pearls.

The Lord by his holy spirit set home the Truths in it upon the hearts of all those who shall be made partakers of it. To him be Glory in the Church by Christ Jesus throughout all ages world without end.

Amen.

Cambridge, Novemb. 2. 1659.

- THOMAS HORTON.
- WILLIAM DILLINGHAM.

A Collection of the several Aphorisms and Exercitations contained in the ensuing TREATISE.

- APHORISM. I. Pag. 1.

MANs blessedness consisteth not in a confluence of worldly accommodations, which are all vanity of vanities; but in the fruition of God in Christ, who only is the strength of our hearts, and our portion forever.

- EXERCITATION 1. Pag. 2.

Psal. 144. end opened. Blessedness what. Solomon's scope in Ecclesiastes. Why he stiles himself Coheleth. His testimony concerning the creatures. Their threefold transcendent vanity.

Intellectual accomplishments brought under the same censure, by reason of the folly, enmity, anxiety, and insufficiency that attend them. An apostrophe to the world.

- EXERCITATION 2. Pag. 20.

A gloss upon Psalm 36. 8. God in Christ a soul-satisfying object. The circular motion of human souls, and their only rest. A threefold fullness of God and Christ opposite to the threefold vanity of the creatures.

- EXERCITATION 3. Pag. 29.

Two conclusions from Psalm 73. 25, 26. The Psalmists case stated. The frequent complication of corporal and spiritual troubles. How God strengtheneth his people's hearts against their bodily distempers; how under discouragements of spirit. The secret supports of saving grace. What kind of portion God is to the Saints. A congratulation of their happiness herein.

- EXERCITATION 4. Pag. 43.

The first inference grounded upon Isaiah 55. 1, 2. by way of invitation, backed with three encouragements to accept it, viz. The fullness of that soul-satisfaction which God giveth, the universality of its tender, and the freeness of its communication. The second by way of expostulation, and that both with worldlings and Saints. A conclusion by way of soliloquy.

- APHORISM. II. Pag. 61.

We are conducted, to the fruition of God in Christ by Christian Religion, contained in the divine oracles of holy Scripture.

- EXERCITATION 1. Pag. 61.

The safe conduct of Saints, signified by the pillar in Exodus, performed by the counsel of God himself, the abridgement whereof we have in the doctrine of Christian Religion. How that tends to blessedness.

- EXERCITATION 2. Pag. 72.

The insufficiency of other Religions for bringing men to the enjoyment of God inferred from their inability to discover his true worship. John 4. 24. opened. God to be worshipped in and through Christ a lesson not taught in nature's school. Faults in Aristotle's Ethics.

- EXERCITATION 3. Pag. 84.

Oracles of God vocal, or written. Books of Scripture so called in five respects, viz. In regard of their declaring and foretelling, their being consulted, prized and preserved.

- EXERCITATION 4. Pag. 95.

How Scripture-Oracles far excel those of the heathen in point of perspicuity, of piety, of veracity, of duration, and of Authority. The divine authority of Scripture asserted by arguments. An inference from the whole Aphorism.

- APHORISM III. Pag. 111.

Scripture-Oracles, supposing it sufficiently clear by the light of Nature, that there is a God, make a further discovery of what he is in his Essence, Subsistence and Attributes.

- EXERCITATION 1. Pag. 111.

1 Corinth. 15. 34. expounded. Opinionists compared to sleepers and drunkards. Three observations from the end of the verse. What knowledge of God is unattainable in this life. What may be had. The knowledge we have concerning God distinguished into Natural, Literal, and Spiritual.

- EXERCITATION 2. Pag. 120.

That there is a God, the prime dictate of natural light; deducible from man's looking backward to the creation, forward to the rewards and punishments dispensed after death, upward to the Angels above us, downwards to inferior beings, within ourselves to the composition of our bodies, and dictates of our consciences, about us to the various occurrences in the world.

- EXERCITATION 3. Pag. 129.

Reasons three ways of discovering God fall short of manifesting what he is. The expression in Exod. 3. 14. most comprehensive. A brief exposition thereof. Satan's impudence. Nature and art both unable to discover the Trinity. What Scripture revealeth about it. Basils memento. Julians impiety. Socinians branded. The three Persons compared to those three wells in Genes. 26.

- EXERCITATION 4. Pag. 143.

Divine Attributes calling for transcendent respect. They are set down in the Scripture so, as to curb our curiosity, to help our infirmity, to prevent our misapprehensions, and to raise our esteem of God. Spiritual knowledge superadding to literal clearness of light, sweetness of taste, sense of interest, and sincerity of obedience.

- APHORISM IV. Pag. 155.

Goodness and Greatness are Attributes so comprehensive, as to include a multitude of divine perfections.

- EXERCITATION 1. Pag. 155.

God described from goodness and greatness both without and within the Church. A lively portraiture of his goodness in the several branches thereof. Exod. 34. 6, 7. Bowels of mercy implying inwardness and tenderness. Our bowels of love to God, of compassion to brethren. Mercy not to be refused by unbelief, nor abused by presumption.

- EXERCITATION 2. Pag. 169.

Grace what. From it spring Election, Redemption, Vocation, Sanctification, & Salvation. A Caveat not to receive it in vain. It purgeth and cheereth. Glosses upon Tit. 2. 11, 12. and 2 Thess. 2. 26, 27. The exaltation of free grace exhorted to. Longsuffering not exercised towards evil Angels, but towards men of all sorts. It leadeth to repentance; is valued by God, and must not be slighted by us. A dreadful example of goodness despised.

- EXERCITATION 3. Pag. 181.

The bounty of God declared by his benefits, viz. giving his Son to free us from hell, his Spirit to fit us for heaven, his Angels to guard us on earth, large provisions in the way, and full satisfaction at our journeys end. John 3. 16. James 1. 5. and Psal. 24. 1. Glossed. Isai. 25. 6. Alluded to. Inferences from divine Bounty, beneficence to Saints; not dealing niggardly with God, exemplified in David, Paul, and Luther. Truth in God is without all mixture of the contrary. It appears in his making good of promises, and threatenings; teaching us what to perform and what to expect.

- EXERCITATION 4. Pag. 201.

Keeping mercy for thousands explained. Men exhorted to trust God with their posterity. Luther's last Will and Testament. Iniquity transgression and sin what. Six Scripture expressions setting out the pardon thereof. God's goodness therein. Faith and repentance the way to it. Pardon in the Court of Heaven, and of Conscience. The equity and necessity of forgiving one another. We are to forgive as God for Christ's sake forgiveth us, viz. heartily, speedily, frequently, thoroughly. A twofold remembrance of injuries, in cautelam & in vindictam.

- EXERCITATION 5. Pag. 223.

The latter clauses of Exod. 34. 7. so translated and expounded as to contain an eight branch of divine goodness, viz. Clemency in correcting. Equity in visiting iniquities of the fathers upon the children. Clemency in stopping at the third and fourth generation. A lesson for magistrates. A speech of our Queen Elizabeth. God's proclamation in Exodus 34. Improved by Moses in Numbers 14.

- EXERCITATION 6. Pag. 234.

Job. 11. 7, 8, 9. expounded of divine Greatness. Three reasons of that Exposition, with the resolution of a question about it. The height of God's universal, unaccountable, omnipotent Sovereignty proved and improved.

- EXERCITATION 7. Pag. 253.

The depth of Divine Omniscience seen in discerning the deep things of man, yea of Satan, yea of God. Our Nescience discovered and acknowledged. The longitude of God's perfection stated. Eternity proper to him. Not assumed by, or ascribed to men without blasphemy.

- EXERCITATION 8. Pag. 263.

Divine Immensity shadowed out by the breadth of the Sea. Divine Omnipresence cleared and vindicated. The proposal hereof as an antidote against sinning in secret. Five practical Corollaries from the greatness of God in general.

- APHORISM. V. Pag. 277.

The Goodness and Greatness of God are both abundantly manifested by his decrees of Election and Preterition, together with his works of Creation and Providence.

- EXERCITATION 1. Pag. 277.

How predestination cometh to be treated of here. Election described from the Nature, Antiquity, Objects, Products and Cause of it. Rom. 11. 33. 2 Tim. 1. 9. with Tit. 1. 2. Ephes. 1. 4. with Matth. 25. 34. opened. Of Acts supposing their objects. Of acception of persons, what it is; and that Predestination doth not import it. Acts 13. 48. Expounded and vindicated. Whether one Elect may become a reprobate? The negative maintained, and 1 Cor 9. 24, 25, 26. cleared. Ephes. 5. and 11. enlightened. Concerning the good pleasure of God's will and the counsel thereof.

- EXERCITATION 2. Pag. 310.

Preterition described. The term defended. Ephes. 1. 4. compared with Revel. 17. 8. Ephes. 1. 9. and Rom. 9. 13. expounded. God not bound to any creature, except by promise. The parable in Matth. 20. urged. The three consequents of negative reprobation. D^r Davenants Animadversions against M^r Hoards book recommended. The goodness of God manifested in Election, as in a most free, peculiar, ancient, leading, and standing favor.

- EXERCITATION 3. Pag. 327.

An Introduction to Romans 9. Most part of that chapter expounded, together with sundry passages in chapter 10, and 11. for proof of these two conclusions. 1. That Paul in Rom. 9. doth upon occasion propound and prosecute the doctrine of Predestination. 2. That he derives the Decree of preterition from the Sovereign greatness of God. A Consectary showing how useful the said doctrine is to sober minds.

- EXERCITATION 4. Pag. 359.

Creation what. Pythagoras and Trismegist. Hebr. 6. 3. opened. Scripture-Philosophy. Ex nihilo nihil fit, how true. Creature what. God's goodness in works of creation, particularly in the framing of Adam. The consultation upon which, pattern after which, parts of which he framed. Two histories, one of a Priest, the other of a Monk. The original of body and soul improved.

- EXERCITATION 5. Pag. 381.

The same and other attributes of God declared from his providential dispensations, the interchangeableness whereof largely discoursed of and applied from Ecclesiastes 7. 14. A gloss upon Isaiah chap. 10. 11. Chearfulness a duty in six respects; Crosses how to be considered.

- APHORISM VI. Pag. 400.

Providence extends itself, not only to all created beings and to all human affairs, especially those that concern the Church: but even to the sins of Angels and men.

- EXERCITATION 1. Pag. 400.

Introduction concerning the contents of this Aphorism. Providence over all created beings. Preservation of men to be ascribed to God himself, not to good men, yea not to good Angels, in whom heartsearching and patience wanting. Providence reaching to human affairs: Oeconomical, Civil, Military, Moral and Ecclesiastical. Anastasius his design frustrate. Rome and our nation instanced in. J. G. castigated.

- EXERCITATION 2. Pag. 415.

Deuteron. 11. 12. opened. God's care over the Church proved from the provision he makes for inferior creatures. From Israel's conduct. From the experiments and acknowledgements of Saints in all ages. Experiments of the virgin Mary, Rochellers, Musculus, acknowledgements of Jacob, David, Psalmist, Austin and Ursin. From God's causing things and acts of all sorts to cooperate unto the good of the Saints. Isaiah 27. 2, 3. explained. The Church preserved from, in, and by dangers.

- EXERCITATION 3. Pag. 438.

Hard-heartedness made up of unteachableness in the understanding, untractableness in the will, unfaithfulness in the memory, unsensibleness in the conscience, and unmoveableness in the affections. Metaphors to express it from the parts of man's body, stones and metals, A soft heart. Mischief, searedness and virulency attendants of hardness. God's concurring thereunto by way of privation, negation, permission, presentation. Tradition to Satan. Delivering up to lusts and infliction.

- EXERCITATION 4. Pag. 463.

Objections against, and Corollaries from the foregoing propositions. The least things provided for. Luther's admonition to Melancthon. Maximilians address. Pliny's unbelief. The Psalmists stumble at the prosperity of the wicked. His recovery by considering it was not full, was not to be final. The superintendency of Providence over military and civil affairs in particular. The Churches afflictions. Promises cautioned. Duty of casting care upon God. He no author of sin. The attestation of this State, and of this writer.

A CHAIN OF THEOLOGICAL PRINCIPLES, Or, An orderly concatenation of Aphorisms and Exercitations, Wherein The chief heads of Christian Religion are asserted and improved.

APHORISM I. Mans blessedness consisteth not in a confluence of worldly accommodations, which are all vanity of vanities; but in the fruition of God in Christ, who only is the strength of our hearts & our portion forever.

EXERCITATION 1. Psal. 144. end opened. Blessedness what. Solomon's scope in Ecclesiastes. Why he stiles himself Coheleth. His testimony concerning the creatures. Their threefold transcendent vanity. Intellectual accomplishments brought under the same censure, by reason of the folly, enmity, anxiety and insufficiency that attend them. An apostrophe to the world.

§. 1. This is a case, which hath long since been determined by the Prophet David, who in Psalm the hundred forty fourth, after he had twice charged those, whom he calls strange *children, with a mouth speaking vanity, once in the eighth, and again in the eleventh verse, goeth on to record (as good Interpreters ancient and modern do conceive) the substance of their vain talk in a way of boasting about their flourishing condition in reference to thriving of children, Our sons, say they, are as plants grown up in their youth (not wishing they might, as we read it, but boasting they were) our daughters as corner-stones polished after the similitude of a palace; To plenty of provision, Our garners are full affording all manner of store; To increase and usefulness of cattle, Our sheep bring forth thousands and ten thousands in our streets, Our oxen are strong to labor; To peace and tranquility of estate, There is no breaking in, nor going out, no complaining in our streets. Hereupon they applaud themselves, and as placing their happiness in such outward accommodations, say, as it is in the former part of verse the fifteenth, Happy is the people that are in such a case. Which sense is extremely favored, not only by the vulgar Latin, inserting Dixerunt, but also by the Septuagint, who render it by 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, both concurring to have it read, They pronounced the people blessed that were in such a case. Then come in the last words according to this interpretation, as the Psalmists resolution in the point, by way of Epanorthosis, or in express contradiction rather to so gross a mistake, *yea blessed are the people which have the Lord for their God.

§. 2. There is one center in which the desires of all men meet, however distanced in the circumference; One port, for which they are all bound, although imbarked in several vessels, and affecting different winds to sail by. That center and port is Blessedness, which may admit of this description. It is the acquiescence of rational appetites in an object so full of real and durable goodness, as to be able fully to satisfy all their longings. The question debated in Ecclesiastes is, whether anything under the sun be such an object. The Preacher resolves it in the negative, by reason of that universal vanity, which overspreads the whole creation. Therefore it is, that the eye (as he telleth us) is not satisfied with seeing, nor the ear with hearing, because these two senses of discipline, when they have given their utmost intelligence cannot present the soul of man, with any created accommodations perfectly good without defect, and perpetually good without decay. Solomon was one that had both men and money at command, to assist him in making difficult and costly experiments; a wise heart able to dive into nature's secrets; a peaceable reign, in which he met with nothing to take him off from the work, or disturb him in it; strong inclinations and constant endeavors to find out the utmost of what could possibly be discovered in any creature, yet he it is that concludes, upon trial, not upon hear-say, or conjecture, Vanity of vanities, saith Coheleth, vanity of vanities, all is vanity.

§. 3. Cohleth, which is the style he gives himself in that Book, comes from a root, that signifies to collect and gather, and, though it be of a feminine termination, is, for want of a common gender in the Hebrew tongue, (as other words of the like form) capable enough of a masculine construction. To him it may be thought agreeable upon four different notions, each whereof contributeth much validity to what he testifies. First as a Preacher, who having gathered sundry arguments to convince the sons of men of the insufficiency of all things below God himself to render them happy, in that Discourse speaks as to a Congregation; whereas in the Proverbs he had spoken as to one man, frequently using this compellation, My son. So Jerome, and Cajetan. Secondly as a writer, who had collected into a Synopsis all the opinions of those, who had been taken for wise men by their several followers concerning happiness, confuting such as were erroneous. So Grotius. Thirdly as a Student, who had gathered much wisdom by observation and experience, which he there gives demonstration of. So Broughton. Lastly as a Penitent, who having by his gross idolatry and other sins fallen from communion with the people of God, and being desirous to have his return stand upon record, and to testify his repentance in that book, for the Churches satisfaction gathers together many experiments of his own personal folly, and makes an humble confession of them: whereupon he was restored, and again gathered into the bosom of the Church. So Cartwright and Junius. The witness we see is beyond exception.

§. 4. In his Testimony, Vanity of vanities, vanity of vanities all is vanity, the Assertion is repeated, as in Pharaohs dream, to show its certainty; and the term of vanity doubled, partly to manifest the transcendency thereof, as the most holy place was styled The Holy of Holies, and the most eminent Canticle The Song of Songs: and partly to note the multiplicity, as Scripture calleth that the Heaven of Heavens, which, being highest, contains many heavens within its circumference. For there is in the creatures a threefold transcendent vanity; as may appear in that they are

First so unprofitable, as to be hurtful withal. Upon this the Preacher seems to have had a special eye, because after All is vanity, he subjoins immediately What profit hath a man of all his labour, which he hath taken under the sun? He hath done nothing but filled his hands as it were with air, who hath been toiling all his days to replenish his chests with wealth: And what profit hath he that hath labored for the wind? Just so much, and no more, then that Emperor got, who having run through various and great employments, made this open acknowledgement, Omnia sui, sed nihil prosuit, I have been all things, but it hath advantaged me nothing at all. Neither are they simply unprofitable, but this sore evil did Solomon see under the sun, namely, Riches kept for the owners thereof to their hurt. They often prove prejudicial to the outward man, exposing it to danger. Who ever robbed a poor beggar, or begged a poor fool? more often to the inward: whence that of Agur, Give me not riches, but feed me with food convenient for me; lest I be full, and deny thee, and say who is the Lord? As if abundance made way for Atheism in those that know not how to manage it. Plenty betrays many souls to slavery. Which made the good Emperor Maximilian second of that name, when a mass of treasure was brought in, refused to have it hoarded up, professing himself A keeper of men, not of money, and fearing lest by falling into love therewith he should cease to be a Sovereign Lord, and become a servant to the mammon of unrighteousness.

§. 5. Secondly so deceitful as to frustrate expectation when men's hopes of advantage by them are at the highest. Let him that would rightly conceive of vanity (saith a late Casuist) imagine the Idea of a thing made up of nothing as the matter, and a lie as the form of it. Scripture speaks of lying vanities, and useth the terms deceitful and vain as equipollent. Favor (saith Bathsheba) is deceitful, and beauty is vain. The Poet interprets Vanus by mendax; and in old Latin vanare was the same with fallere. The creatures are wont shamefully to frustrate men's hopes, and seldom or never make good to the enjoyer what they promised to the expectant. Yea as Jonahs gourd (having done him no service in the night, when he needed it not) withered in the morning, when he hoped for most benefit by it against the ensuing heat of the day: so the blessings of this world frequently wither at such times as we looked to find the most freshness in, and refreshment from them. None but Haman was invited with the King to Queen Esther's banquet; this filled his bladder with windy hopes, which ended soon after in his ruin.

§. 6. Thirdly so inconstant and mutable as to be gone all on the sudden without giving their owners warning. That is said to be vain which vanisheth. Man is like to vanity, his days are a shadow that passeth away. Accordingly the two sons of the first man carried in their names a memorandum of what they and their posterity were to expect. Cain signifies possession, Abel vanity: All the possessions of this world are of a vanishing nature, and liable to a speedy decay; or rather, they are not Possessions but Pageants, which whilst they please us, pass away from us in a moment. Those we have here are running banquets, delicate, and served in with state, but soon over. How many doth swift destruction snatch every day out of the arms of worldly felicity, and stab to the heart at one blow! Behold Beltshazzar in the midst of his cups and concubines struck into a deadly trembling. Herod, when the people had newly invested him with a Godhead presently, ere it was well on, had it pulled over his ears, and became a prey to worms. The rich man in our Savior's parable invited himself to a feast of delicacy, and talked of prosperity laid up for many years; but that very night was his soul required of him to pay the reckoning.

§. 7. These things duly weighed, I could not but be affected with that gallant speech of a Christian writer, If the fruition of all the world were to be sold, it would not be so much worth as the labor of ones opening his mouth only to say, I will not buy it: Yet wondered less at it, when I remembered how much some even heathen Philosophers have disdained to think of scraping to themselves an happiness out of the worlds dunghill, how generously they have professed their living above such accommodations as it affords. I am really greater (could Seneca say) and born to far greater things then that I should become a slave to my outward man. For there are some higher acquests gloried in by more sublimed flesh and blood, as much more conducing to blessedness, I mean intellectual accomplishments of wisdom and learning. Yet, as when the enquiry was Where shall wisdom be found and where is the place of understanding? The depth said it is not in me, and the sea said it is not with me; So if the like question be put concerning Happiness, worldly wisdom itself must return the like answer, and say It is not in me, by reason of the folly, enmity, anxiety and insufficiency that attend it, so as the Preacher might well determine even of it, This is also vanity.

§. 8. I. Folly. The wisdom of this world is foolishness with God. So the Apostle, who speaking elsewhere of those who bore the name of most knowing men, saith They became vain in their imaginations and their foolish heart was darkened, professing themselves wise, they became-fools. With men indeed a little science may make a great show; but he only is wise in God's esteem who is wise to salvation. Give me a man as full of policy as was Achitophel, of eloquence as Tertullus, of learning as the Athenians were in Paul's time; If with Achitophel he plot against the people of God, with Tertullus have the poison of asps under his lips, with those Athenians be wholly given to superstition; for all his policy, eloquence, and learning, one may be bold to call him fool in Scripture-language. The learned Logician, whom Satan daily deceiveth by his sophistry, and keeps from offering up to God reasonable service, is no better then a fool for all his skill: Nor the subtle Arithmetician who hath not learned to number his days that he might apply his heart to saving wisdom: Nor the cunning Orator, who although he be of singular abilities in the art of persuading men, is of Agrippa's temper himself but almost persuaded to be a Christian.

§. 9. II. Enmity. The wisdom of the flesh is enmity against God. He that calleth it so, found it to be so indeed in his own experience; for Paul was nowhere more opposed then in Greece the eye of the world, more derided then at Athens the eye of Greece. Whence it is that S. James, not contenting himself with the epithets of earthly and sensual, brands it also with the name of Devilish wisdom. What else was Matchievel but the Devils professor in politics, as Arius, Socinus, and such like masters of error have been in Divinity? And of such Devilish wisdom what other issue can be expected but that it should lead men to the Devil from whom it came? where Bernard leaves them saying, Suffer the wise men of this world to go wisely down to hell.

§. 10. III. Anxiety. Wisdom is neither attained with ease, as requiring much study which is a weariness to the flesh; neither doth it, when attained, administer ease, but the contrary rather: for when study hath been midwife to knowledge, knowledge becomes nurse to grief. Let Solomon speak; I gave my heart to know wisdom, I perceived that this also is vexation of spirit. For in much wisdom is much grief, and he that increaseth knowledge increaseth sorrow. Many and dreadful are the damps that seize upon such as dig deep in the mines of learning. Sharp wits like sharp knives do often cut their owners fingers. The deep reach of a prudent man makes him aggravate such evils as are already come upon him, by considering every circumstance so as to accent every sad consideration, and anticipate such as are yet to come, by galloping in his thoughts to meet them. Had not Achitophel been so wise, as to foresee his inevitable ruin in the remote causes of it, when Hushai's counsel was embraced, he would never have made so much hast, as he did, to hang himself.

§. 11. Lastly Insufficiency to render men either holy or happy. For when the worldly-wise have dived into the bottom of Natures sea, they are able to bring up from thence instead of these pearls of price, nothing but hands full of shells and gravel. Knowledge indeed and good parts managed by grace are like the rod in Moses his hand wonder-workers; but turn to serpents when they are cast upon the ground, and employed in promoting earthly designs. Learning in religious hearts like that gold in the Israelites ear-rings is a most precious ornament: But if men pervert it to base wicked ends, or begin to make an idol of it, as they did a golden calf of their ear-rings, it then becomes an abomination. Doubtless these later times, wherein so many knowing men are of a filthy conversation, and have joined feet of clay to their heads of gold, would have afforded good store of additional observations to him that wrote the famous book concerning the vanity of Sciences, which appeareth in nothing more then their inability to produce suitable deportment in such as enjoy them; without which there can be no solid foundation laid for true happiness.

§. 12. Wherefore bething thyself at length, O deluded world, and write over all thy school-doors, Let not the wise man glory in his wisdom; Over all thy court-gates, Let not the mighty man glory in his might; Over all thy Exchanges and Banks, Let not the rich man glory in his riches. Write upon thy looking-glasses that of Bathsheba, Favor is deceitfull and beauty is vain; Upon thy Mewes and Artillery-yards that of the Psalmist, God delighteth not in the strength of an horse, he taketh not pleasure in the legs of a man; Upon thy Taverns, Inns, and Alehouses, that of Solomon, Wine is a mocker, strong drink is raging, and whosoever is deceived thereby is not wise; Upon thy Magazines and Wardrobes, that of our Savior, Lay not up for your selvestreasures on earth, where moth and rust doth corrupt, & where thieves break through and steal. Write upon thy Countinghouses that of Habakkuk, Woe to him that increaseth that which is not his, how long? and to him that ladeth himself with thick clay. Thy Play-houses that of Paul, Lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God. Thy banqueting houses, that of the same holy Apostle, Meats for the belly and the belly for meats, but God shall destroy both them and it; Yea upon all thine Accommodations that of the Preacher, All is vanity and vexation of spirit.

EXERCITATION 2. A gloss upon Psalm 36. 8. God in Christ a soulsatisfying object. The circular motion of human souls, and their only rest. A threefold fullness of God and Christ opposite to the threefold vanity of the creatures.

§. 1. What shall we then say? Are the sons of men, in whom such strong desires and longings after blessedness are implanted left without all possible means of attaining that in which rational appetites may acquiesce? God forbid. They shall be abundantly satisfied, with the fatness of thy house, and thou shalt make them drink of the river of thy pleasures: so David to God concerning such as put their trust under the shadow of his wings. Creature-comforts are but lean blessings in comparison, there is a fatness in God's house, such as satisfies, and that abundantly. They afford but drops, Christ a river of pleasures. Look as when an Army of men comes to drink at a mighty river, a Jordan, a Thames, they all go satisfied away, none complaining of want, none envying another, because there was water enough for them all: whereas had they come to a little brook there would not have been found enough to quench the thirst of everyone. So here. The creatures are small brooks that have but a little water in them, yea broken cisterns that hold no water: No wonder if souls return empty from them. But Christ hath a river for his followers, able to give them all satisfaction. We must not expect more from a thing than the Creator hath put into it. He never intended to put the virtue of soul-satisfying into any mere creature, but hath reserved to himself, Son and Spirit the contenting of spirits as a principal part of divine prerogative. To such as expect it elsewhere, that person or thing they rely upon may say as Jacob did to Rachel, Am I in God's stead?

§. 2. Certain it is that none can make our souls happy but God who made them, nor any give satisfaction to them but Christ who gave satisfaction for them. They were fashioned at first according to the image of God, and nothing short of him who is styled the brightness of his Father's glory, and the express image of his person can replenish them. As when there is a curious impression left upon wax, nothing can adequately fill the dimensions and lineaments of it but the seal that stamped it. Other things may cumber the mind, but not content it. As soon may a trunk be filled with wisdom as a soul with wealth; and bodily substances nourished with shadows, as rational spirits fed with bodies.

Whatsoever goodness creatures have is derivative, whatsoever happiness they enjoy stands in reduction to the Original of their being. The motion of immortal souls is like that of celestial bodies purely circular. They rest not without returning back to the same point from whence they issued, which is the bosom of God himself. Fishes are said to visit the place of their spawning yearly, as finding it most commodious for them; and sick patients are usually sent by physicians to their native soil, for the sucking in of that air from which their first breath was received. Heaven is the place where souls were produced; the spirit of man was at first breathed in by the Father of spirits, and cannot acquiesce till he be enjoyed, and heaven in him.

§. 3. Witness was born to this truth by the Amen, the faithful and true witness, when speaking of those whom the Father had given him, he uttered that remarkable assertion, This is life eternal that they may know thee, and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent. Also when he made his followers that promise of rest, Come unto me all ye that labor, and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you, &c. and ye shall find rest to your souls. God would not rest from his works of creation till man was framed: Man cannot rest from his longing desires of indigence till God be enjoyed. Now since the fall God is not to be enjoyed but in and through a Mediator: Therefore when any man closeth with Christ, and not till then, he may say with the Psalmist, Return unto thy rest, O my soul, for the Lord hath dealt bountifully with thee. That which the King of Saints testified will be most readily attested by all his loyal subjects. Enquire of such as are yet militant upon earth, wherein their happiness consists, the answer will be in their having fellowship with the Father, and with his Son Jesus Christ. Let those who are triumphant be asked what it is that renders their heaven so glorious, their glory so incomprehensible, ye shall have no other account but this, it is because they have now attained a complete fruition of that all-sufficient, all-satisfying, ever-blessed and ever-blessing object God in Christ.

§. 4. Nor can it easily be denied by such as consider that in this object there is found a threefold fullness, opposite to the threefold vanity in the creatures, which I discoursed of before. First a fullness of utility opposite to their unprofitableness. Infinite goodness extends itself to all cases and exigence without being limited to particulars, as created bonity is. Hence in the Scripture God and Christ are compared to things most extensive in their use, and of most universal concernment. Philosophers look at the Sun as an universal cause: Christ is called the Sun of righteousness by the Prophet; and The Lord God, saith the Psalmist, is a Sun and shield. In a Tree the root beareth the branches, and the branches fruit. Christ is both root and branch. A root in Isaiah, In that day shall there be a root of Jesse, which shall stand for an ensign of the people; to it shall the Gentiles seek, and his rest shall be glorious. A branch in Zechariah, Behold I will bring forth my servant the Branch. In a building the foundation and corner-stone are most considerable in point of use. Christ is both. Thus saith the Lord God, behold I lay in Zion for a foundation a stone, a tried stone, a precious corner-stone, a sure foundation. In military affairs what more useful for offense than the sword, for defense than the shield? The Lord is both. Happy art thou O Israel who is like unto thee O people? saved by the Lord the shield of thy help, and who is the sword of thine excellency. In civil commerce money is of most general use for the acquiring of what men need, of which Solomon therefore saith It answereth allthings (whence it is that worldlings look at a full chest as having a kind of Deity in it, able to grant them whatsoever their hearts desire) of God in Christ it is most true. He only can answer all the desires, all the necessities of his people; and is accordingly said to be their silver and gold as Junius renders the place in Job. To him a soul may not only say as Thomas did, My Lord and my God, but as another, Deus meus & omnia, My God and my all.

§. 5. Secondly a fullness of truth and faithfulness opposite to their deceit. The creatures do not, cannot perform whatsoever they promise, but are like deceitful brooks, frustrating the thirsty travellers expectation. We read of Semiramis that she caused this Motto to be engraven upon her tomb, If any King stand in need of money, let him break open this monument. Darius, having perused the inscription, ransacks the sepulcher, finds nothing within, but another writing to this effect, Hadst thou not been unsatiably covetous, thou wouldest never have invaded a monument of the dead. Such are all the things of this world. They delude us with many a promising Motto, as if they would give us hearts ease; but when we come to look within, instead of contentment, afford us nothing but conviction of our folly in expecting satisfaction from them. With God it is otherwise. He is faithful that promised, saith the Apostle; And again, Faithful is he that calleth you, who also will do it. I am the way, saith Christ of himself, the truth and the life. In him believers find not less, but more then ever they looked for; and when they come to enjoy him completely are enforced to cry out, as the Queen of Sheba did, The half was not told me.

§. 6. Thirdly a fullness of unchangeableness opposite to their inconstancy. This God challengeth to himself, I am the Lord, I change not; And Jesus Christ is said to be the same yesterday, and today, and forever. Another Apostle, speaking of the father of lights, from whom descend every good and perfect gift, (therein alluding, as Heinsius conceives, to the High Priest his Urim and Thummim, that is lights and perfections; to Urim in these words father of lights, to Thummim in these Perfect gift) tells us that with him is no variableness neither shadow of turning. The metaphor is thought by some to be borrowed from the art of painting, wherein pictures are first rudely shadowed; then drawn to the life. In the creatures we find a full draught and lively portraiture of mutability; but not so much as the rudiments of a draught, as the least line or shadow of it in God and Christ.

EXERCITATION 3. Two conclusions from Psalm 73. 25, 26. The Psalmists case stated. The frequent complication of corporal and spiritual troubles. How God strengtheneth his people's hearts against their bodily distempers; how under discouragements of spirit. The secret supports of saving grace. What kind of portion God is to the Saints. A congratulation of their happiness herein.

§. 1. From that pathetical passage in one of the Psalms, Whom have I in heaven but thee? and there is none upon earth that I desire besides thee. My flesh and my heart faileth; but God is the strength of my heart, and my portion forever. these two conclusions may be raised.

1. There is no person or thing in heaven or earth short of God in Christ to be looked upon and desired as our utmost good.

2. The fruition of God in Christ is able to make and to continue a man happy even in the midst of utmost extremity.

The former I have treated of in the foregoing exercitations, intending to handle the latter in this. That I account an utmost extremity as to kind, (though as to degrees it may be either more intense or more remiss) when there is a complication of sufferings both in body and mind at once. Such was the Psalmists case here. It is not flesh alone, or heart alone, but my flesh and my heart, in conjunction, both failed him at one and the same time. Such is the sympathy of soul and body, that when it fares ill with one, the other commonly is disturbed. If the soul be in an agony, the body languisheth. Satan's buffeting Paul with blasphemous thoughts, as some conceive, proved a thorn to his flesh. On the other side, if the outward man be tormented, the inward is wont to be dismayed, even to failing of heart. The Stoics indeed, those magnificent boasters, talk of an Apathy, and Plutarch tells us that Agesilaus, when he lay sick of the gout, and Carneades, who came to visit him, observing what pains he conflicted with, was about to leave him as one not in case to be spoken to, bad him stay, and pointing at once to his own feet and to his heart said, Nothing comes from thence hither; as if his mind were no whit disquieted for all the sufferings of his flesh. But far better men than any of them have born witness to the contrary. Our flesh had no rest, but we were troubled on every side; without were fightings, within were fears. So Paul. David in one of his Psalms thus, O Lord heal me, for my bones are vexed; my soul also is sore vexed. In another thus, There is no soundness in my flesh; I am feeble and sore broken, I have roared by reason of the disquietness of my heart.

§. 2. But as when Peter walking upon the waves, and perceiving how boisterous the winds were, began to sink, Jesus immediately stretched forth his hand and caught him: So when the Psalmists flesh and heart failed, God even then was the strength of his heart; according to the Original The rock of it. Rocks are not more fortifying to Cities and Castles built upon them, than God is to his people's hearts. A sincere believers soul is therefore assimilated by our Savior to an House founded upon a rock; which was every way assaulted, in the roof by rain descending upon that, in the foundation by floods washing upon it, in the walls by winds blustering against them; and yet stood because it was strong, was strong because founded on a rock. Such a rock is our God, and that even in such a case as hath been described.

§. 3. Hezekiah whom God had chosen to life, was sick unto death. Lazarus whom Jesus loved, sickned and died. Timothy had his often infirmities. The Psalmists flesh failed him, or, to speak in Paul's phrase, his outward man perished; yet God meanwhile was the rock and strength of his sick servants heart. First by preserving therein an expectation of such fruit as saints use to reap from such trials. Fruit which relates partly to sin and partly to grace. To sin by way of cure. Diseases when sanctified drain the inward as well as the outward man, and help to spend out the bad humors of both. Sickness (saith Isidore) woundeth the flesh, but healeth the mind; is the bodies malady, but the souls medicine. For instance, weakness kills the itch of worldliness. Let pleasure open all her shops, and present a sick man with her choicest rarities: Let Mammon bring forth all his bags and gingle them in his ears; produce all his Crowns, Sceptres, Mitres, and lay them at his feet, how ready will he be to cry out, Away with them. Behold I am at the point to die (as Esau once reasoned) and what can these vanities profit me? The like may be said of self-confidence and pride which are also frequently antidoted by diseases. A special end (as Elihu tells Job) which God aims at in his chastening with pain is to hide pride from man, that is, to remove it, as what we hide is removed out of sight. A Christian Emperor, one of the Ferdinands, when his Chaplain Matthias Cittardus came to visit him as he lay upon his death-bed, and according to the mode of the Court styled him most Invincible Emperor, finding himself overcome with sickness, would not admit of that compellation, but charged him not to use it more: whereupon the Chaplain made his next address on this wise, Go to dear brother Ferdinand, endure hardship as a good soldier of Jesus Christ.

§. 4. Next to Grace, in point of growth. The rise of grace is sometimes occasioned by a sore disease. Beza tells us of himself, that God was pleased to lay the foundation of his spiritual health in a violent sickness which befell him at Paris. The growth of grace is always promoted when God makes use of this means. It is not more usual with children to shoot up in length, then with Christians to wax taller in grace in or after a sickness. See it exemplified in the famous Protestant Divines: Olevian said upon his deathbed, In this disease I have learned to know aright what sin, and what the majesty of God is. Rollock upon his, I am not ashamed to profess that I never reached to so high a pitch in the knowledge of God, as I have attained in this sickness. Rivet upon his, In the space of ten days since I kept my bed, I have learned more, and made greater progress in Divinity, then in the whole course of my life before.

§. 5. Secondly by infusing and exciting a principle of Christian patience, which is therefore able to support and strengthen the heart when Philosophical Stoical patience cannot do it; because itself is strengthened from such divine Topics, as Philosophy knows but little, if anything, of. I shall instance in two, The pains of hell deserved by us, and the pains of Christ endured for us. Well may the consideration of Hell-torments due to us all, as being by nature children of wrath, conduce to the working of patience in us under these petty sufferings in comparison. For what are these rods to those scorpions? A fever to those everlasting burnings? The stone or gout to that fire and brimstone? A sick-bed to Hell, where the fit never goeth off, the fire never goeth out, the worm never dieth? So also when upon our beds of sickness we think of that garden wherein Christ lay prostrate upon the ground, in our fits of his Agony, in our sweats of his water and blood; the consideration of his torments, and of our interest in them, may well mitigate the sense of our present sufferings, if not wholly swallow them up, as Aaron's rod devoured those of the magicians. Art thou afflicted with sore pain in this or that part? He had hardly any member free. Are thy spirits feeble and faint? His very soul was exceedingly sorrowfull even unto death. Dost thou cry My God, my God, why hast thou afflicted me? Jesus cried with a loud voice, My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?

§. 6. Yea but how manifest soever it be that when the flesh faileth the heart may be strengthened, how the heart itself should fail and yet be strengthened is not so evident. I am therefore to make it appear in the next place; that these two clauses, My heart faileth, and God is the strength of my heart, may both be verified at once without a paradox in different respects. By reason of remainders of unbelief in the most regenerate on this side heaven, when Satan's temptations shall strike in with their corruptions, holy men may be induced in a fit of dejection because the Lord hath cast them down, to conceive and say he hath cast them off. David once said, I had fainted, unless I had believed to see the goodness of the Lord in the land of the living. Such fainting flows from not believing; such unbelief is much fomented by not considering that (as no outward blessing is good enough to be a sign of eternal Election, seeing God often filleth their bellies with hid treasure, who treasure up to themselves wrath against the day of wrath, so) no temporal affliction is bad enough to be an evidence of Reprobation; seeing the dearest son of God's love was a man of sorrows, and acquainted with grief. Yet may the same heart at the same time be strengthened from another cause, namely God, who easily can, and usually doth supply such effectual grace as is able to keep the head above water, when the rest of the body is under it, able to preserve the Spouse in a posture of leaning upon her beloved in a wilderness; to make one with Abraham believe in hope against hope, and say with Job, Though he kill me, yet will I trust in him. Faith can support when Nature shrinks; call God father when he frowns; and make some discovery of a sun through the darkest cloud. When it sees no light it may feel some influence, when it cannot close with a promise, it may lay hold upon an attribute, and be ready to make this profession, Though both my flesh and my heart fail, yet divine compassions fail not. Though I can hardly discern at present either sun, or moon or stars, yet will I cast anchor in the dark, and ride it out till the day break.

Time was when Jonah said, I am cast out of thy sight, but added with the same breath, yet will I look again toward thy holy temple; and presently after, when my soul fainted within me, I remembered the Lord, &c.

§. 7. The connection of these words in the psalm My heart faileth, but God is the strength of my heart, and my portion forever, may seem to imply some such thing; to wit that in times of languishment, God affords a strengthening support in secret by encouraging a believer to wait upon himself as his portion forever, notwithstanding all his sufferings for the present. There can be no better, or more sovereign cordial then this, if we consider the suitability, and sufficiency of God to this purpose. In the choice of a portion as of a wife, fitness is chiefly to be regarded; she is a wife indeed, who is a meet help, that a portion indeed, which is suitable to the soul of man. God only is so. For the soul is a spiritual and immortal substance, therefore to her worldly accommodations are unsuitable, because they are, most of them corporeal, All of them temporal. But God who is a Spirit, and who only hath immortality, fits her exactly in both respects. The uncreated Spirit becomes a portion forever to this his everlasting creature. As for sufficiency, the souls appetite is too vast for any creatures to fill up the measure of its capacity: but when she hath once pitched upon God self-sufficient in his being, all-sufficient in his communications, she then hath enough, and is ready to profess with David, The Lord is the portion of mine inheritance and of my cup: the lines are fallen unto me in pleasant places, yea I have a goodly heritage. Indeed what can one wish in an heritage that is not to be found in God? Would we have large possessions? He is immensity. A sure estate? He is immutability. A long term of continuance? He is Eternity itself. I shall therefore shut up this with a serious congratulation to the Saints, and an high applause of their blessedness.

Happy, thrice happy you, dearly beloved in the Lord, because when those men of the world which have their portion in this life, as David speaks, part with theirs (as they must all do at death, if not before) you are led to a fuller fruition of your portion. Theirs at the best is but some good blessing of God, that will in time be taken from them; yours is the good God himself, blessed and blessing you forever. He is so at present, and he will be so to all eternity; A portion of which you can never be plundered. Impoverished you may be, but not undone; discouraged, but not disinherited. Your flesh perhaps, yea and your hearts too may fail, but God will be the strength of your hearts, and your portion forever. I shall add no more, but only remind you of what is written in the hundred forty and sixth Psalm, Happy is he that hath the God of Jacob for his help, whose hope is in the Lord his God.

EXERCITATION 4. The first Inference grounded upon Isaiah 55. 1, 2. by way of invitation, backed with three encouragements to accept it, viz. The fullness of that soul-satisfaction which God giveth, the universality of its tender, and the freeness of its communication. The second by way of expostulation, and that both with worldlings and saints. A conclusion by way of soliloquy.

§. 1. IN the synagogues of old upon the eighth day of the Feast of Tabernacles, called by the Jews Hosanna Rabbah the great Hosanna, and by the Evangelist, The last day, the great day of the feast, four portions of Scripture were wont to be read. viz. The close of the fifth book of Moses, called Deuteronomy, the last words of the Prophet Malachi, the beginning of Joshua, and that passage concerning Solomon's rising up from his knees after his prayer, and blessing the people with a loud voice in the eighth chapter of the first book of Kings. Then did Jesus, who was the end of the Law and the Prophets, the true Joshua and Solomon stand up saying, If any man thirst, let him come unto me and drink. He that believeth on me, as the scripture hath said, out of his belly shall flow rivers of living water. But why did he then speak of waters? Tremellius giveth this account of that out of the Talmud. The Jews, saith he, upon that day used with much solemnity and joy to fetch water from the river Siloah to the Temple, where being delivered to the Priests, it was by them poured upon the altar, the people in the mean time singing out of Isaiah, With joy shall ye draw water out of the wells of salvation. Our Savior therefore to take them off from this needless, if not superstitious practice, telleth them of other and better waters, which they were to have of him, according to what he had elsewhere said by the ministry of the same Prophet in these most emphatical words, Ho every one that thirsteth come ye to the waters; and he that hath no money, Come ye, buy and eat; yea Come; buy wine and milk without money and without price. Wherefore do ye spend money for that which is not bread, and your labor for that which satisfieth not? Words that, besides an intimation of the forementioned truths concerning the creatures inability, and the sufficiency of God in Christ to satisfy souls, clearly hold forth a double improvement thereof, one by way of invitation, the other by way of expostulation.

§. 2. The Invitation is set on with vehemence and importunity, Ho come, but as not content with that, he doubleth it, yea Come ye, and tripleth it, yea Come. Not Come and look on, or Come and cheapen, but Come and buy, buy and eat. They may be rationally said to Come who frequent the Ordinances, wherein Christ is usually to be found; They to buy, who part with somewhat, are at some cost and pains in pursuit of him; They to eat, who feed on him by a lively faith. Careless wretches will not so much as vouchsafe to Come, by reason of their oxen, or farms, or some other impediment, the Lord must have them excused. Formal professors Come indeed, but refuse to Buy, will lay out no serious endeavors in searching the Scriptures and their own deceitful hearts, but are merely superficial in such undertakings. Temporary believers (whose hearts are really, though not savingly wrought upon) seem to have bought, yet do not eat, for want of that spirit of faith, which ingrafts men into Christ, and makes them as truly one with him as the body is with the meat it feeds upon. Want we encouragements to accept of this invitation? The place itself presents us with three.

§. 3. One from the fullness of that satisfaction which is here tendered under the metaphors of water, wine, milk, and bread: the last whereof is implied partly in those terms of opposition, For that which is not bread, as if he had said, ye might have had that of me which is bread indeed, partly in the verb Eat, which cannot so properly be applied to any commodity here mentioned, water, wine, and milk being liquids, as to bread. Now there is somewhat in Christ to answer each of these. His flesh is bread, his blood is wine, his Spirit is waters, his doctrine is milk. But because I conceive the Holy Ghost in this place doth not so much intend a parallel of these, as a declaration of that sufficiency which is to be found in Christ and his benefits for saving to the utmost of all those that shall come unto God by him; I shall only pitch upon that consideration, and by adding unto this a like place in the Revelation, briefly demonstrate from them both how all-sufficient a Savior he is. This in Isaiah holds forth somewhat proper to every sort of true believers. Milk for babes, water for such as are young and hot, wine for the aged, bread for all. The other is that of Christ to the Angel of the Church of Laodicea, I counsel thee to buy of me gold tried in the fire that thou mayest be rich, and white raiment that thou mayest be clothed and that the shame of thy nakedness do not appear, and anoint thine eyes with eye-salve that thou mayest see, where he commends his gold for such as is tried in the fire, his raiment for such as will take away shame, and his eye-salve for a special virtue to make the blind see. Take them together, and there is in them enough to supply our principal defects, viz. unbelief in the heart for which there is here gold tried in the fire, whereby we may probably understand the grace of faith, concerning which we read in Peter, That the trial of your faith, being much more precious then of gold that perisheth, though it be tried with fire, might be found unto praise. And unholiness in the life, for which there is the white raiment, if by it we understand inherent righteousness, according to that in the Apocalypse, To her was granted that she should be arrayed in fine linen, clean and white, for the fine linen is the righteousness of the saints. Lastly Ignorance in the mind, for which there is his Eye-salve to remove it, according to the Apostles prayer for his Ephesians, that God would give them the spirit of wisdom and revelation, the eyes of their understanding being enlightened &c.

§. 4. A second encouragement is from the universality of this offer. Ho everyone that thirsteth come; so he do but thirst he shall be welcome, how unworthy soever he may be in other respects. He will give grace to the thirsty, who enables them to thirst after grace. Christ is far from turning such persons away; yea but for such he would have no customers in the world; his commodities must lie by him dead for want of vent; seeing others will not take them off, but leave them still upon his hand, as things in which they see no need, have no esteem of. This let all men know for certain, that such as thirst so as to come, come so as to buy, buy so as to eat, will never have cause to repent of their bargain. I have somewhere read of a great Commander, who being extremely tormented with thirst, sold himself and his Army into enemies hands for a draught of cold water; which when he had drunk he repented and said. Oh quantum ob quantillum! How very little is that for which I have parted with so very much! Believers may take up the like words, but in a far different sense: O how much grace, how much happiness have I got for a little thirsting, a little trusting in Jesus Christ!

§. 5. A third from the freeness of communication, amply declared in this clause, Come, buy wine and milk without money and without price. In the place hitherto insisted upon, the word money occurs thrice, twice in the first verse and once in the second, but not in the same signification. In the first it is clearly interpreted by price and signifies merit; They are said to have no money, who being conscious to themselves of their having nothing of their own to answer divine justice with, to fetch them in pardon, peace and righteousness, wholly disclaim all self-sufficiency, and come unto Christ as to one that expects not to receive but to be received; looks for little or nothing from us but that we be nothing in ourselves, desirous to have all from him, and to partake of his fullness grace for grace. In the second it is expounded by labor, and denotes industry. Men are said to spend money for that, which they lay out their pains about. Money answers all, saith the Preacher: The Heathens have a proverb which ascribes as much to labor. We say not with them, that God sells his benefits to us for our pains; but this we acknowledge, he giveth them so as to require our industry about them. Yet is not this any prejudice to the freeness of his grace, or any contradiction to that clause Buy without money and without price, because our labor can no way merit his blessings. As when a Schoolmaster teacheth a boy gratis, the youth cannot possibly attain to learning unless he be industrious, and take pains at his book; but it doth not therefore cease to be free on the teachers part, because the learners pains are required. So it is here.

Yet some in all ages have been so vain as to dream of bringing their money with them whenever they come; I mean that, which if not in itself, yet in their opinion seems to deserve what they come for. So the Pharisees of old, and the Papists of late. Insomuch as Cornelius à lapide in his comment upon this very place, which maketh altogether for the contrary doctrine, countenanceth the popish tenets of free-will and merit of congruity. So Elephants, they say, are wont before they drink to bemud the water, which, if it were suffered to remain clear, would discover their deformity to them.

§. 6. I proceed to the Expostulation contained in the next words, Wherefore do ye spend money for that which is not bread, and your labor for that which satisfieth not? Words applicable both to worldlings, and to such believers as have not yet got clear of the world. First to worldlings, who manifestly spend not their money only, but their souls for that which is not bread. In the Lord's prayer Bread is put for all necessaries, and used in the Lord's supper to signify the absolute necessity of receiving Christ, by whom spiritual life is supported, as the natural life is by bread. Now the accommodations doted upon by men of the world, and often purchased with the loss of salvation are justly said not to be bread, because they are neither absolutely necessary to be had, nor able to support such as enjoy them. A man's life, saith our Savior, consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth. Wealth indeed is an accessory good, but no necessary blessing. None are made really happy by it (though Latinists use the same word Beatus to signify both rich and blessed) A Christian may be happy without it; really happy, yea and really wealthy too, for he is abundantly rich that possesseth Christ in the midst of poverty; and doth not make treasure his God, as the servants of Mammon do, but God his treasure.

§. 7. Furthermore, as the expression there is, They spend their labor for that which satisfieth not. A late Jesuit tells us a story of a feast made in Germany by a certain Magician for Noble men, who whilst they sate at table with him received good content, and fared to their thinking very deliciously, but when they departed found themselves hungry, as if they had eaten nothing at all: which indeed was their case; if the Jesuits relation of the magicians art and fact may be credited. Such entertainment doth this present world afford its principal guests. They are not fed with satisfying substances, but with deluding shadows rather. Surely every man walketh in vain show, surely they are disquieted in vain. David speaks it of such as heap up riches: of whom also Solomon saith, The rich man's wealth is his strong city, and as an high wall in his own conceit. A strong city in his conceit, but indeed a castle in the air. One that applies the scaling ladders of Scripture and reason to such walls, may easily climb so high as to reach and pull down those ensigns of vanity, which makes such a flourish on the battlements thereof. Sooner shall men gather grapes of thorns and figs of thistles, then find that a fountain of all good to any soul, the love whereof Paul hath branded for the root of all evil. It drowns in perdition; how can it then crown with happiness? Oh that ever so rich an heir, as the soul of man, should run away with so servile a thing as money is, or give the least consent to a match so far below her birth and breeding!

§. 8. Let authority be added to wealth, and great honors to great revenues, yet will the product of both sums be not soul-satisfaction and blessedness, but vanity and vexation of spirit. How often is the sword put into mad men's hands, the bramble advanced to rule over better trees, and walls of mud shined upon while marble pillars stand in shade? How often do goats clamber up the mountains of preferments whilst the poor sheep of Christ feed below? yea how often is greatness acquired by base, and confounded by weak means? Flattery held Absalom's stirrup. He that is every ones master now, was a while since at every ones service. Well might Stella call Ambition, Charities ape; for it also believeth all things, hopeth all things, yea and beareth all things too till what it hoped for be attained, then grows intolerable itself. It may further be observed that God usually taketh a course to break the staff of such pride by confounding the power of worldly Potentates, not with Lions and Tigres, but as Pharaohs of old, by frogs and lice. The Apostle I remember saith An Idol is nothing, and yet the silversmiths cried out, Great is Diana of the Ephesians. Diana then was a great nothing. Such are those men of place idolized by common people, when the Lord begins to blow upon them in his wrath, like those nobles of Idumea concerning whom Isaiah said, All her Princes shall be nothing.

§. 9. Secondly, as for those saints whose wings are still somewhat clogged with the birdlime of this world, I humbly desire them to consider, how ill it becomes the offspring of heaven to go licking up the dust of this earth, the woman's seed to content itself with the serpents food; Any one of the posterity of Japheth, after he hath been persuaded into the tents of Sem, to bring on himself Canaan's curse, A servant of servants shalt thou be, by subjecting his soul to that, which God made to serve its servant the body. Verily if this present world, or anything in it be over precious in thy sight, O Christian, thou art become vile in the eyes of God, yea in thine own: for none can set an high price upon things without him till he have first undervalued his soul. Time was when Satan shown our Savior all the kingdoms of this world, and the glory of them. If ever the world appear unto thee temptingly glorious, suspect it for one of Satan's discoveries. Sure I am the Scripture useth diminishing terms when it speaks of creature-comforts; as in styling the pomp of Agrippa and Bernice much fancy, no reality; in calling men's temporal estates this worldsgoods, not theirs but the worlds, deceitful and uncertain riches, thick clay, and dust of the earth, wind, grass and the flower of grass, the least things, hardly things. Solomon brings them down to the lowest degree of entity, yea to nullity, saying, Labor not to be rich, wilt thou set thine eyes upon that which is not?

§. 10. Let Diotrephes then say, It is good for me to have the preeminence, Judas, It is good for me to bear the bag; Demas, It is good for me to embrace this present world. But do thou, O my soul, conclude with David, It is good for me to draw near to God. Thou art now as a bird in the shell, a shell of flesh, which will shortly break, and let out the bird: This crazy bark of my body ere long will be certainly split upon the fatal rock of death; then must thou its present pilot forsake it, and swim to the shore of eternity. Therefore, O everlasting creature, see and be sure thou content not thyself with a transitory portion. I do not Lord, thou knowest I do not. Of a small handful of outward things I am ready to say, It is enough: but that which I long so passionately for is a large heart full of God in Christ. Thou art my sun, the best of creatures are but stars, deriving the luster they have from thee: Did not thy light make day in my heart, I should languish for all them in a perpetual night of dissatisfaction. There are within me two great gulfs, a mind desirous of more truth, and a will capable of more good than finite beings can afford; Thou only canst fill them, who art the first truth, and the chief good. In thee alone shall my soul be satisfied as with marrow and fatness, and my mouth shall praise thee with joyful lips.

APHORISM II. We are conducted, to the fruition of God in Christ by Christian Religion, contained in the divine oracles of holy Scripture.

EXERCITATION 1. The safe conduct of Saints, signified by the pillar in Exodus, performed by the counsel of God himself, the abridgement whereof we have in the doctrine of Christian Religion. How that tends to blessedness.

§. 1. There is no possibility of arriving at Blessedness without a safe conduct, nor at glory without guidance; No infallible guidance but by the counsel of God himself. All which the Psalmist is like to have had in his eye, when in his humble address to God he expresseth himself in this manner, Thou shalt guide me with thy counsel, and afterward receive me to glory. The husband's duty in relation to his wife is to be the guide of her youth. Such hath Christ (one of whose names is Counselor) been to his Church in former times, is at this day, and will continue to the end of the world. In Exodus we meet with the history of the Jewish Church, her youth, and her strange manner of guidance; which when the Levites in Nehemiah came to commemorate they do it thus, Thou in thy manifold mercies forsookest them not in the wilderness; the pillar of the cloud departed not from them by day to lead them in the way, neither the pillar of fire by night to show them light, and the way wherein they should go. It was not only a seasonable act of mercy to them in that age; but may be looked upon as an emblem of that safe conduct, which the Church in all ages may expect from Jesus Christ. For as in that cloudy-fiery pillar there were two different substances the fire and the cloud, yet but one pillar. So there are two different natures in Christ, his Divinity shining as fire, his Humanity darkening as a cloud, yet but one person. As that pillar departed not from them by day or by night, all the while they travelled in the wilderness. So whilst the Churches pilgrimage lasts in this world, the safe conduct of Christ by his Spirit and Ordinances shall be continued. But as at their entrance into Canaan, a type of heaven, the pillar is thought to have been removed, because not mentioned in the sequel of the story, and because when Israel passed over Jordan we read not of the pillar but the Ark going before them; So when the Church shall arrive at heaven, her resting place, the mediatory conduct of Christ is to cease, and the Ordinances, which are here of use, to disappear.

§. 2. Mean while this infallible counsel of God hath been most effectually administered by the Prophets and Apostles, especially by Christ himself, whose words were such as led directly to everlasting bliss. Insomuch as when Jesus said to the twelve willye also go away? Peter answered him Lord to whom shall we go? Thou hast the words of eternal life. As if he had said, Go whither we will to other teachers, we shall be sure not to meet with words of eternal life anywhere else. Such are proper to Christ's school taught only by himself, and his under-officers: whereof one hath left this profession upon record, That which we have seen and heard declare we unto you, that ye also may have fellowship with us: and truly our fellowship is with the Father and with his Son Jesus Christ. So the Disciple whom Jesus loved in his first epistle. Another this, I take you to record this day, that I am pure from the blood of all men: for I have not shunned to declare unto you all the counsel of God. So Paul in his valedictory speech to the Elders of Ephesus. Which he could not have said, had not the doctrine he preached among them been sufficient to have led all his hearers to the fruition of God in Christ, and therein to complete happiness. That by the counsel of God he intended to decipher Christian Religion is manifest, because that was the sum of all his ministry, as we find him declaring elsewhere, Having obtained help of God, I continue unto this day witnessing both to small and great, saying none other things then those which the Prophets and Moses did say should come: That Christ should suffer, and that he should be the first that should rise from the dead &c.

§. 3. Counsel it is, and therefore styled sometimes mystery, and that a great one, Without controversy great is the mystery of godliness. 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, of Religion, as others render it; meaning the Christian, an epitome whereof followeth, God manifest in the flesh and sometimes wisdom, and that not among punies and novices, who see not into the depth of things, but among them that are perfect. Sometimes, The wisdom of God in a mystery, even the hidden wisdom, which God ordained before the world, unto our glory. Which made an ancient writer affirm, that the mysteries of our Religion are above the reach of our understanding, above the discourse of human reason, above all that any creature can comprehend. Yea it will be found the Counsel of God himself, and not of man, if we do but consider a few of its materials; viz.

principles above the reach of man's wit, A resurrection of the dead, a mystical union of all believers among themselves and to their head; A Trinity of persons in one Essence, two Natures in one person; God reconciled to men by the blood, men to God by the spirit of Christ, with others of the like elevation. Doctrines contrary to the bent of man's will. As that of original sin, which represents him to himself as a child of wrath, worthy, before he see the light, of being cast into outer darkness. And that of self-denial, which taketh him off from confidence in his own abilities; whereas proud Nature challengeth a self-sufficiency, and will hardly be content with less. Lastly, Promises and threatenings beyond the line of human motives and dissuasives, exhibiting to the sons of men, not temporal rewards and punishments only, but the gift of eternal life and the vengeance of eternal fire: Things which not any of the most knowing Law-givers and Princes of this world did or could hold forth, till the only wise God was pleased to reveal and urge them in the sacred authentic records of Christianity.

§. 4. Now Christian Religion promotes our guidance to the fruition we treat of these two ways, viz. by discovering God in Christ, and by uniting to him, the former it performeth as Christian, the latter as Religion.

First as Christian it discovers God in Christ, which other Religions do not. *No man hath seen God at any time, the only begotten Son, which is in the bosom of the Father he hath declared him. So the Evangelist, or, as others think, the Baptist. All things are of God, who hath reconciled us to himself by Jesus Christ, and hath given unto us the ministry of reconciliation, to wit that God was in Christ &c. So the Apostle. The poor Pagan knoweth neither God nor Christ, but ignorantly turneth the truth of God into a lie, worshipping creatures; and instead of Christ is directed by his Theology to the service of a middle sort of divine powers, called Daemons, and looked at as Mediators between the celestial Sovereign God's, whom the Gentiles worship, and mortal men. The modern Jew acknowledgeth the true God of his fathers Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, but owneth not Jesus the son of Mary for the true Christ; yea disowneth him so far, as not only to expect another Messias, but (if writers deceive us not) to blaspheme and curse him and his followers. The deluded Mahometan confesseth one God, the Creator of heaven and earth; yea conceiveth so well of the Lord Jesus, as not to suffer any Jew to take up the profession of a Musulman, till he have first renounced his enmity against Christ: yet will neither acknowledge his satisfaction, upon which our salvation is founded, nor his Divinity by virtue whereof that satisfaction is meritorious. Whereas the true and pious Christian is by his Religion taught to say with Paul, in direct opposition to all the three forementioned sects, *We know that an Idol is nothing in the world; and that there is none other God but one. For though there be that are called God's, whether in heaven or in earth (as there be God's many and Lord's many) yet to us there is but one God the Father, of whom are all things, and we in him; and one Lord Jesus Christ, by whom are all things, and we by him.

§. 5. Secondly as Religion, (a term which both Augustine and Lactantius derive à religando because by the true Religion improved men's souls are tied and fastened to the supreme Being) it unites us to God and to Christ. The graces of union are especially Faith and Love; Christian Religion is made up of these two. Kiss the Son, saith David, which implieth the affection of love; Blessed are all they that put their trust in him, which holds forth an expression of faith. Hold fast the form of soundwords, saith Paul, which thou hast heard of me, in faith and love, which is in Christ Jesus. Love is the fulfilling of the Law, faith the fulfilling of the Gospel, both the fulfilling of Christian Religion. These two pipes being rightly laid from a Christians soul to the fountain of living waters fetch in from thence a daily supply of such grace as will certainly end in a fullness of glory: whereas worldlings all the pipes of whose spirits are laid to cisterns, broken cisterns that can hold no water, must needs continue empty still; and for want of Christ (who is not seen but by those two eyes, nor embraced but by those two arms) fall short of happiness, how eminent soever they may be in the pursuit of by-ways. Thus to discover and to unite are acts of prerogative not communicable to other professions. For to maintain (as some do) that a man may be saved in an ordinary course (I meddle not with extraordinary dispensations, but leave the secrets of God to himself) by any Religion whatsoever, provided he live according to the principles of it, is to turn the whole world into an Eden; and to find a Tree of life in every garden, as well as in the paradise of God.

EXERCITATION 2. The insufficiency of other Religions for bringing men to the enjoyment of God inferred from their inability to discover his true worship. John 4. 24. opened. God to be worshiped in and through Christ a lesson not taught in Natures school. Faults in Aristotle's Ethics.

§. 1. IT hath appeared already in part by what hath been hitherto discoursed, that as the other Patriarchs sheaves made obeisance to Josephs, so other Religions must bow down to Christianity, by name those three grand competitours, Paganism, Judaism, and Mahometisme: as also those other leading books, by name the Talmud, the Alcoran, and the much applauded writings of heathen Philosophers must all do homage to the Bible. Yet will it not, I suppose, be unworthy of my pains and the Readers patience further to clear the insufficiency of all exotick doctrines by an argument taken from divine worship, to which I proceed by certain steps.

I. Religion is a thing which distinguisheth men from beasts more then reason itself doth. For some brute beasts have appearances of reason, none of Religion. Man is a creature addicted to Religion may perhaps be found as true a definition, as that which is commonly received, Man is a living creature endued with reason.

II. Some kind of Deity is acknowledged everywhere throughout the world, and wherever a Deity is acknowledged, some kind of worship is observed. Should a Synod of mere Philosophers be convented to consult about the matters of God, I make no question but in the issue of their debates they would pronounce one Anathema against Atheism, and another against Irreligion. Among the Romans to worship sparingly was accounted the next door to being an Atheist.

III. None but the true God can discover what the true worship of God is. As that glorious eye of heaven is not to be seen but by its own proper light; A million of torches cannot show us the Sun: so it is not all the natural reason in the world that can either discover what God is, or what worship he expects without divine and supernatural revelation from himself.

§. 2. IV. Before the settling of Christianity and spreading the Gospel throughout the world, many everywhere were unsatisfied concerning the worship they performed, and inquisitive after some teacher who might help them therein by his advice. This may be gathered not only from that, which was said by the woman of Samaria in that dispute of hers with our Savior about worship, I know that Messias cometh, which is called Christ: when he is come, he will tell us all things. But also by what Ficinus reporteth concerning Plato, to wit, that being asked by one of his scholars, how far forth and how long his precepts were to be obeyed, he returned this answer, Untill there come a more holy one, by whom the fountain of truth shall be opened, and whom all may safely follow.

V. The precepts and practice of such as teach and profess other Religions are inconsistent with those Gospelrules which Christ and his Apostles have given for the regulating of divine worship. Two whereof I shall instance in.

The first is that which fell from our Savior's own mouth, God is a Spirit, and they that worship him, must worship him in Spirit and in truth. Where Spirit in the latter clause seems to stand in opposition partly to the formality of the Jews, who did so wholly addict themselves to outward observances in a spiritless way, as to give our Savior occasion of saying, well hath Isaiah prophesied of you hypocrites, as it is written, This people honoreth me with their lips, but their heart is far from me. In vain do they worshipme, teaching for doctrines the commandments of men. Partly to the Idolatry of the Gentiles, who instead of tendering service suitable to a spiritual Being, worshipped God in and by representations and images of this or that visible creature. The word Truth in like manner may probably seem to be opposed partly to the typical worship of the Jews, in which there were many resemblances and shadows of things to come, as sacrifices, incense and other rites, the truth whereof was exhibited in Christ and in Gospel-service: partly to the perfunctory worship of the Gentiles, who for want of Scripture-light framed to themselves sorry forms of devotion, which the wisest among them were altogether unsatisfied with, yet as knowing no better, and being loath to give offense, observed them only for fashions sake, so worshipping in show, rather than in truth.

§. 3. Doubtless what Seneca professed in his time, was a principle, which the most judicious Heathen walked by, both in that and the ages foregoing. He, speaking of their religious observances, plainly said, A wise man will keep them all as things commanded by our laws, not as things acceptable to the God's; for custom rather then conscience sake. Thereby showing (as Augustine observeth) that he himself misliked what he practiced, and did not approve his own adoration. What else was this but mock-worship? And although it must be granted that some of them were more serious in that way of superstition which the Gentiles Theology prescribed, yet was not their worship in Truth; for being destitute of Christ, who is the way, the truth and the life, they wanted that Truth in the inward parts, required by God in all holy services. The Pelagians indeed were of opinion that those virtues which appeared in heathen Philosophers and others of eminent note for morality, though they had not received the knowledge of Christ, were true graces. But if Austin may be credited, this above all their corrupt tenets was that for which the Christian Church did most abominate them & their doctrine. Yea Paul, whom we are bound to believe, in the fourth Chapter of his epistle to the Ephesians, is thought to have concluded the contrary: we find there the life of the Gentiles clearly opposed to the life of God, which they, saith he, were alienated from; as also to the truth as it is in Jesus, and to that true holiness, or holiness of truth wherewith every spiritual worshipper is endued. And so far is the Apostle in that place from excepting their philosophers, that, as Grotius thinks, he aims especially at them; because his phrase in the seventeenth verse, That yewalk not as other Gentiles walk, in the vanity of their mind, is fully parallel with that in his epistle to the Romans, They became vain in their imaginations: which is certainly meant of their philosophers, for it follows professing themselves to be wise 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 (the name whereby that sort of men were commonly known, witness the seven wise men of Greece) before Pythagoras invented that other of 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 lovers of wisdom, as more modest.

§. 4. The second grand direction about the manner of worship is, that it be performed in the name, and through the mediation of Jesus Christ, who saith of himself I am the way, No man comes to the Father but by me: And of whom Paul saith, Whatsoever ye do in word or deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus; whereupon Luther was bold to assert, That all the prayings, teachings and actings of men are out of Christ idolatry and sin in the sight of God. Now although the first direction were not altogether unknown to some of the Gentiles, as may be gathered from sundry passages in their writings, cited by Grotius in his notes upon John the fourth at the four and twentieth verse, and by Doctor Meric Casaubon in his second book De cultu the third chapter: yet of this second they had no knowledge at all; for it is not a lesson to be learned in Nature's school. The heavens indeed, and so the earth, with all the creatures in them both, declare the glory of God in himself; but the glory of God in the face of Christ as mediator is not declared by any of them. Insomuch as Paul tells the Ephesians, that while they were Gentiles, they were at that time without Christ; although Ephesus then was full of Philosophers and eminent scholars, witness the proverb of Ephesian letters, and that story in the Acts, which mentions the burning of books there to the value of fifty thousand pieces of silver, by such as were taken off from the study of curious arts upon their conversion to the faith. As for Jews and Mohammedans, the former we know have espoused long since another Messias, and the latter set up that impostour Mahomet for their mediator.

§. 5. Now the argument built upon the foundation of these premised considerations stands thus, No religion or doctrine can bring us to the fruition of God but such as instructs us how to worship him aright; No religion or doctrine but Christianity teacheth the right worship of God; Therefore none but it can bring us to enjoy him. The proposition is bottomed upon that necessary connection which is between the fruition of God and his adoration; he being wont to communicate himself in or after acts of worship, according to these and the like places. He that hath my commandments and keepeth them, he it is that loveth me: and he that loveth me shall be loved of my Father, and I will love him, and will manifest myself to him. Behold I stand at the door, and knock: if any man hear my voice and open the door, I will come in to him, and will sup with him, and he with me. The Assumption hath been already cleared. But if further proof be needful, I shall add one argument more. So far is the light of nature from making a full discovery of what belongs to divine worship, that the wisest Philosophers in their moral tractates have not only been silent as to faith in Christ, and repentance from dead works and such other eminent duties of religion, but commended to their readers some habits and actions for virtues and duties, which in Scripture are represented as vices and sins. For example, Aristotle one of Nature's high priests, in his Ethics, one of the choicest pieces of morality extant, maketh a virtue of Eutrapelia, which Paul under that very term prohibits as a thing inconvenient for Christians, Neither filthiness, nor foolish talking, nor Eutrapelia Jesting, which are not convenient. So also Nemesis, that is, grief and indignation at the prosperity of unworthy men is by him reckoned among such affections as are near of kin to virtues, but condemned at large by David in Psalm the thirty seven, and by Solomon in the Proverbs, saying, Fret not thyself because of evilmen, neither be thou envious at the wicked. Another of his virtues is 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 Magnanimity, which he describeth to be the judging of a man's self worthy of great things when he is so. Whereas our Savior directeth us even when we have done all things that are commanded us, yet to say we are unprofitable servants. He would have such a person a despiser and contemner of others, which is plainly Pharisaical; thinks all that savoreth of humility unworthy of his magnanimous man, whereas Solomon telleth us, It is better to be of an humble spirit with the lowly, then to divide the spoil with the proud. Yea he alloweth him in case of contumely to speak evil of his adversaries, whereas our Savior's rule is, Bless them that curse you, pray for them that despitefully use you.

EXERCITATION 3. Oracles of God vocal, or written. Books of Scripture so called in five respects, viz In regard of their declaring and foretelling, their being consulted, prized and preserved.

§. 1. IN the epistle to the Hebrews these two phrases The first principles of the oracles of God, And the principles of the doctrine of Christ import one and the same thing, implying also that Scripture Records are the only Storehouse and Conservatory of Christian Religion. I shall therefore from hence take occasion to show, That books of Scripture are oracles of God, why they are so called, and wherein they excel other oracles. For the first. There were two sorts of Oracles belonging to God, vocal and written. The vocal were those answers he gave from between the Cherubims on the top of the Mercy-seat which covered the Ark, by reason whereof the Holy of Holies, where that Ark stood, was styled the Oracle. The written are the two tables of the Law, called by Stephen the lively oracles, and the Canonical books of Scripture, as well those of the Old Testament of which Paul speaketh when he declareth it as the great privilege of the Jews, that to them were committed the oracles of God; as those of the New, to which Peter is like to have had a peculiar respect in that saying of his, If any man speak, let him speak as the oracles of God, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉. Especially if his meaning be to admonish such as speak in congregations, public teachers, or as another Apostle styleth them Ministers of the New Testament, that they be careful to deliver Scripture-truths in Scripture-words, New-Testament-matter in New-Testament-language, taking the particle 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 in that text for a note, not of similitude, but of identity; as when it is said, We beheld his glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the Father, it is not meant of a glory like his, but the very same; So let him speak as the Oracles of God, that is, the self-same things which God hath spoken in his word.

§. 2. The word 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, whereby heathen writers had been wont to express their oracles, (chiefly such as were uttered in prose, while such as were delivered in verse went under the name of 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉) was enfranchised by the holy Ghost, and applied to the books of Scripture to intimate (as I conceive) that these books were to be of like use to Christians, as those oracles had been to Infidels; whereof take a five-fold account.

I. Those declared to heathen men the will of their Idols, whence also they had their names of 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 from 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, and oracula from orare, quod inerat illis Deorum oratio, as Tully giveth the etymologie, because they contained what the God's spake, and delivered to be their mind. The Scriptures in like manner contain the mind of Jehovah. Somewhat of his nature we may learn from the creatures, but should have known little or nothing of his will, had not canonical Scripture revealed it. We use to call a man's Testament his last will, because in it he makes a final declaration of what he would have his executours do. He that would exactly know the will of God, must look into his two Testaments: there he shall find it fully expressed, and nowhere else.

§. 3. II. Those foretold future events, which made them to be so much frequented by such as thirsted after knowledge of things to come. These read everyone his destiny, and acquaint him aforehand with what he may or may not infallibly expect according to his present and future qualifications. Not to mention prophesies in the New testament, whereof the principal magazine is the Apocalypse, the old contains very many predictions beyond the activity of human foresight. For although such effects as depend upon natural causes (which are uniform in their workings) may be foretold by a skillful naturalist; and a wise Statesman, observing the present constitution of a government, may prognosticate what events are like to ensue upon those counsels and courses which he sees taken: yet the quickest eye upon earth cannot foresee such future contingents as have their dependence upon the mere free-will of persons yet unborn; and whereunto, when they are born, not common principles, but heroic impulses must incline them. Whereas in the Scriptures we meet with the names of Josiah and Cyrus, and with their performances long before they had a being. We find old Jacob foretelling the respective fates of all his children, and of their posterity; Isaiah speaking of Jesus Christ, as if he had written an history rather than a prophesy; And Daniel, who lived under the first, describing the several revolutions under all the other Monarchies, as if he had seen them with his eyes.

§. 4. III. Those gave advice in doubtful cases, and were in all undertakings of moment consulted with by devout Heathens, who as Strabo testifies, in their chief affairs of state relied more upon the answers of their oracles than upon human policies. These were David's delight and his counselors, as we use to advise with those friends, whom we take most pleasure in. He had many wise men about him, but in all their meetings for advice the word of God was still of the Quorum, and nothing to be concluded of in the result without its consent. Scripture must not only be heard in all our debates, but when anything comes to be voted, always have a negative voice. Concerning Ahithophel's advice it was said, what he counseled in those days was as if a man had inquired at the Oracle of God; which words (being as it is well said by Peter Martyr, Comparatio non aequiparatio, a comparison only, not a parallel) sufficiently intimate that all the Oracles of God are to be consulted, and also that their counsel is to be rested in. I shall therefore be bold to say to him that reads, whoever he be, as Jehoshaphat once did to Ahab, Enquire I pray thee of the word of the Lord today; As Paul to his Colossians, Let the word of Christ dwell in you richly in all wisdom. yea as Christ to his hearers, Search the Scriptures. Other books may render men learned to ostentation, none but these can make them really wise to salvation. Philosophical speculations, quaint notions and strains of wit, if compared wth these oracles, are but as so many spiders webs to catch flies, fitter for the taking of fancies then the saving of souls.

§ 5. IV. Those were exceedingly prized by such as enjoyed them, as the great advantage of their States, and the great donative of their God's, who were thought to gratify their worshippers by nothing more, then by oracular discoveries. These are certainly the highest privileges wherewith a people can be gratified; witness that discourse of Paul in the beginning of his third chapter to the Romans; where he handles and decides the controversy between Jew and Gentile about precedency. Consent in Religion is wont to tie the fastest knots of mutual accord; but there are no greater animosities then those that arise from diversity of professions. The Jews of old abhorred the Gentiles as uncircumcised, ignorant Idolaters; the Gentiles on the other side derided the Jews for their circumcision as savouring of obscenity, & for their sabbaths, as favoring idleness: Paul who was by birth a Jew, by office a teacher of the Gentiles, well knew what fewds, and also what odds there were between them; yet equally involves them in the guilt of original sin throughout the whole second chapter. And because the Jew, who stood upon his points, esteeming himself every way the better man, would be ready to take offense at this, and to say, as it is, in the first verse of the third chapter, What advantage then hath the Jews, or what profit is there of circumcision? The Apostle answereth by way of concession: and though he hold his conclusion firm (which is that both Jews and Gentiles, considered in their naturals, are all under sin, and that in this respect there is no difference) yet he readily granteth that in some regards the Jews far excelled the rest of the world. Divers of their privileges are insinuated in the former part of the second verse, Much every way; in the latter one instanced in, as most considerable, Chiefly because unto them were committed the Oracles of God.

§ 6. V. Those were preserved with much solicitude. History telleth us how great care the Romans took for the safe custody of the Sibylline oracles in their Capitol after Tarquin had bought them: when the Capitol was burnt and those books in it, what means were used to get other copies out of Greece; and how a College of Priests was appointed to keep them safe. These do surely deserve as much and more care in every suitable, possible way. The ancient Jews preserved the letter of Scripture entire, but lost the sense; as the Papists now keep the text, but let go the truth. A good Christian will not be backward in giving all diligence to hold-fast both, by laying the Scripture up in his judgment, conscience and memory. We are all desirous to have fair and well-printed Bibles. Believe it, the fairest impression of the Bible is, to have it well printed on the readers heart. M^r Fox telleth us of one Crow a sea-man, who being shipwrecked lost all his wares, and also cast five pounds in money into the sea, but kept his New Testament hanging still about his neck, so swimming upon a broken mast, till after four days (all the rest of his company being drowned) he was discovered and taken up in that posture alive. The only way of preserving souls from being drowned in eternal perdition, is having the grace and truth of Scripture so bound upon the heart as to be willing to part with money or anything else, for the safety of them. It is well worthy of our best consideration how much and how often Solomon in the proverbs presseth this. It is known how careful the most are to get and keep silver and gold, but Receive my instruction (saith Wisdom there) and not silver; and knowledge rather than choice gold. Yet as well as men love money they will rather let go that than lose their members, whereof none are more dear than the apple of the eye. My son (saith he) keep my words, and lay up my commandments with thee: keep my commandments and live, and my law as the apple of thine eye. Yet skin for skin and all a man hath will he give for his life: if the loss of a member or two will save that they shall go. His advice to his son is, Take fast hold of instruction, let her not go; keep her for she is thy life. Yet the martyrs parted even with their lives to save their souls; our keeping of these is really as of great concernment as the keeping of our very souls, for so saith Solomon, He that keepeth the commandment, keepeth his own soul.

EXERCITATION 4. How Scripture-Oracles far excel those of the heathen in point of perspicuity, of piety, of veracity, of duration, and of authority. The divine authority of Scripture asserted by two arguments. An inference from the whole Aphorism.

§. 1. HAVING shown wherein they agree, I am now to make known wherein these Scripture-Oracles differ from and excel those other. viz.

I. In point of perspicuity. Apollo's oracles were delivered in so dark and ambiguous terms, as gave the Grecians, though they were his chief worshippers, occasion to style him by the name of 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, because he seldom answered directly in doubtful cases, but used such a form of words as might be diversely interpreted, to the end his credit might be salved, whatever event the business had about which he was consulted with. Whereas Scripture is so framed, as to deliver all things necessary to salvation in a clear and perspicuous way. There are indeed some obscure passages in it to exercise our understandings, and prevent our loathing of overmuch plainness and simplicity: yet whatsoever is needful for us to satisfy hunger, and nourish our souls to life eternal, is so expressed (I do not say that it may be understood, but so) as men that do not willfully shut their eyes against the light, cannot possibly but understand it.

§. 2. II. In point of piety. The heathen were put upon many ungodly practices by their oracles, if good historians may be credited, even by those of the Sibyls, which were of greatest esteem for sanctity. But the frame of Scripture is according to godliness. Piety sparkleth in every leaf, and throughout the whole there runs a constant exaltation of God in Christ. Well nigh all sorts of Poems (to instance in them) with which we meet in human writings have their parallels in the Canonical books; but they are such as carry in them a genius and strain of godliness far beyond anything that occurs in the Poems of men. There are 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, Songs of victory; but such as exalt, not the prowess of man, but, the glory of God. So Exodus the fifteenth. 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 funeral songs, but such as celebrate Christ's death and the good will of God therein; so Psalm the twenty second, and Isaiah the fifty third. 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 songs of love, but such as set forth the love of Christ to his Spouse the Church, and her mutual affection to him. So Psalm the forty fifth, and the Canticles. There are also 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 sacred pastorals, but such as magnify no other Shepherd but God alone, so Psalm the three and twentieth. Yea 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 too, but such as ascribe all to him. So Psalm sixty fifth. Let Virgil be asked Quid faciat laetas segetes, he will wholly insist upon this or that secondary cause of fertility. Ask David, he presently falls in his Georgicks upon praising God as the author of all fruitfulness. Thou visitest the earth and waterest it, Thou makest it soft with showers. Thou blessest the springing thereof; Thou crownest the year with thy goodness, Thy paths drop fatness, &c. in the end of that forecited Psalm.

§. 3. III. In point of veracity. Many falsehoods were uttered, much flattery practiced by their oracles. As when Socrates was declared by the father of lies to be the wisest man upon earth, notwithstanding the two great Prophets Haggai and Zechary were his contemporaries: and when Apollo was said 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 by reason of his so palpable favoring of king Philip in his responses. Whereas Scripture is free, not only from all degrees of falsehood (for of it we may say, Verity of verities, all is verity) but of flattery too. Inasmuch as it may be observed concerning the pen-men of holy Scripture, that, contrary to the custom and guise of human writers, they are not more free, full and impartial in any relations, then in those which concern their own failings, and theirs who were nearest and dearest to them. Moses his unbelief, David's blood-guiltiness, Jonahs pettishness, Jeremies impatience, Paul's persecution are recorded by their own pens. And whereas the other Evangelists in the enumeration of Christ's Apostles barely name Matthew for one, without setting any brand upon him, he himself telleth us what he had been before Christ called him, Matthew the publicane. Yea whereas Paul in his epistle to the Galatians had brought in a charge against Peter for Judaizing, and spoken of his own resisting him openly, because he was indeed to be blamed; yet Peter for all this in his second epistle (which was written a good while after) styleth him his beloved brother Paul, and commendeth not his wisdom only, but all his epistles, even that wherein he himself was reprov'd. As for their carriage toward others, Moses who loved the Hebrews so well as to wish himself blotted out of God's book, rather then they should perish, yet spareth not to relate their many rebellions, with the aggravations thereof to the full. The idolatry of his brother Aaron, the murmuring of his sister Miriam, the frowardness of his wife Zipporah, are as freely recorded by him, as any other historical passages whatsoever. Luke who was Paul's companion and scholar telleth us in the Acts what havoc he had made, and how sore an enemy he had been to the Church of Christ. Mark, whom Peter styleth his son, aggravateth the story of his dear fathers sin against Christ, more then some of the other Evangelists. Luke and John telleth us barely of his denying; but Mark addeth further that he began to swear and curse, saying, I know not the man.

§. 4. IV. In point of duration. Satan, who is God's ape in very many things, had his oracles also of both sorts, Vocal; as at Delphi and Dodona, which Ovid in that respect joineth together in one verse, Non mihi si Delphi, Dodonáque diceret ipsa; Written; as in the Sibyls books contained at first in three volumes, two whereof, as it is said, were purposely cast into the fire by her that presented them, because Tarquin would not go to the price of them; and the third sold for as much as was demanded in the beginning of the treaty for all three. Now providence so ordered things that there was a remarkable failing of the former sort upon the coming of Christ in the flesh, and a total cessation of them not long after his death, insomuch as Plutarch wrote a book of their defect: and a destruction of the latter after Christianity had taken root in the Roman empire, when Stilico burnt the Sybils books as fomenters of paganism and profaneness. He that was manifested to destroy the works of the devil stopped the mouths of those evil Angels that gave answers by oracles. The Sun of righteousness arose, and those wild beasts were forced to betake themselves to their dens. Then was the prince of this world judged, and his Angels dislodged, for the Lord Christ had ejected them. But the Old Testament Scriptures received a strong confirmation from Christ by his appealing to them, arguing from them and expounding of them. Yea so far were the Oracles of God from any diminution by his coming, preaching and dying, that they received not a confirmation only but a glorious augmentation, in that within a while after there was added to them by his Secretaries the Evangelists and Apostles another Volume, I mean the books of the New Testament; upon the publishing whereof there came out from God as it were a second edition of his Oracles much enlarged.

§. 5. Fifthly and lastly. In point of authority. Those were from the father of lies, as hath been said; but these from the Father of lights. Scripture is of divine authority: Holy men of God (saith Peter) spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost. They wrote accordingly. All Scripture, saith Paul, was given by inspiration of God. It is not more true that they are oracles for their use, then that they have God for their author. Many large volumes have been written for to make good this assertion. It is a thing wherein the Spirit of God, who indited the Scripture, gives such abundant satisfaction to the spirits of godly men, as to make other arguments, though not useless, yet to them of less necessity; He alone bearing witness to the divinity of holy writ, and to the truth of his own testimony, so putting a final issue to that controversy. But because there is need of other reasons for the conviction of other men, I have produced certain arguments elsewhere, and shall here make an addition of two more, which are not mentioned in that discourse, one from consent, another from continuance.

§. 6. From consent thus. Writings of men differ exceedingly one from another, which made Seneca say, Philosophers would then be all of one mind when all clocks were brought to strike at one and the same time. Yea it is hard finding an author that doth not differ from himself more or less, if he write much, and at various seasons. But here is a most harmonious consent. The word since written fully agrees with that which in former times was delivered to the Patriarchs, and transmitted by word of mouth. As the word God is the same today, yesterday and forever, although not incarnate till the fullness of time came, and then made flesh: So the word of God, although till Moses received a command to put it in writing, there wanted that kind of incarnation, was for substance the same before and after. And as the written word agreed with the unwritten, so doth one part of that which is written harmonize with another. The two Testaments, Old and New, like the two breasts of the same person give the same milk. As if one draw water out of a deep well with vessels of different metal, one of brass, another of tin, a third of earth, the water may seem at first to be of a different color; but when the vessels are brought near to the eye, this diversity of colors vanisheth, and the waters tasted of have the same relish: So here, the different style of the historiographers from Prophets, of the Prophets from Evangelists, of the Evangelist from Apostles may make the truths of Scripture seem of different complexions till one look narrowly into them and taste them advisedly, then will the identity both of color and relish manifest itself.

§. 7. From continuance thus. Notwithstanding all the confusions that have happened in the world, all the fires that have been kindled, the massacres that have been executed, and the battles that have been fought against the true Christian Religion, the storehouse thereof hath continued to this day, and these Oracles of God been preserved in spite of hell. Solomon's philosophical treatises, which the world had no spleen against, but a liking of, are long since lost; whereas his Canonical writings are extant still. When the earth clave asunder to swallow up Korah & his company, there are that think some of his children were taken up by the hand of God into the air till the earth closed again, then set down without having received any harm because in the titles of sundry Psalms mention is made of the sons of Korah, whom they suppose then preserved to propagate these whose service the Lord had a purpose to use so long after. How often hath persecution opened her mouth from age to age, and swallowed up millions both of men and books! Yet the bible hath been continued still by the over-ruling hand of heaven, yea, which maketh it more remarkable, God hath so befooled the devil herein, as to preserve his own Book many times by the hands of his and its enemies. It is too well known how small friends the Jews are and have heretofore been to the truth contained in the Old Testament, yet of them did the Lord make use to keep it, and they proved careful feoffes in trust for making over the assurances of life to us Gentiles. Concerning one book of the New Testament, viz. the Apocalypse, it is very observable that when the authority thereof was questioned of old, the Church of Rome struck in with her testimony, and was a special means to have it kept in the number of Canonical books; not without a special providence. God, who made Pharaoh's daughter a second mother to Moses, whom he had appointed to bring destruction afterwards upon her fathers house and kingdom; did then make the Romish Church a dry nurse to preserve this Book (whose meaning she knew not) that it might bring desolation upon herself and her children afterwards. Well may we therefore conclude and say of the holy Bible, as Gamaliel once did of the Apostles preaching, Had this work been of men it would have come to naught longere this, but being it is of God, the devil and his complices have not been able to overthrow it.

§. 8. Learn we also from that hath been said, to magnify the grace of God, who in order to the promoting of our blessedness, hath brought us of this nation to the knowledge of Christian Religion, for want whereof many millions in other parts still sit in darkness and the shadow of death. It was a memorable act of Witekindus, one of the Dukes of Saxony, who flourished about the nine hundredth year of Christ; after his renouncing paganism, and receiving the faith of the gospel, he caused the black horse, which he had formerly born in his military colors, to be laid aside, and instead thereof a white horse to be born, in testimony of his triumphant joy for that great change: perhaps because among the Romans the manner was to make use of such coloured steeds in their triumphs. It put me in mind of what we read in the sixth of the Revelation verse the second, where Christ is described as going out in the ministry of the Gospel, which was then newly embraced by that Prince; Behold a white horse, and he that sat on him had a bow, and a crown was givne unto him, and he went forth conquering and to conquer. Yea whereas there are sundry modes of the Christian Religion, we are therefore to have our hearts and mouths filled with the highest praises of God, because we have it in the purest, that is, the Protestant way, which allows the people in general a free use of Bibles in their native language. In sundry parts even of Europe it is far otherwise, particularly in Spain, where the Bible in their vulgar tongue is reckoned among prohibited books, and sufficeth to bring him that reads it into danger of the Inquisition. Wherefore let such as list make their boast of other things which England is said to be famous for, as beautiful Churches, bridges, women, &c. If I were asked what advantage have English men and what profit is there of living in that Island, mine answer should be much every way; but chiefly because to them are committed the Oracles of God, & liberty to read their fathers mind in their mother tongue.

APHORISM III. Scripture-Oracles, supposing it sufficiently clear by the light of Nature, that there is a God, make a further discovery of what he is in his Essence, Subsistence and Attributes.

EXERCITATION 1. 1 Corinth. 15. 34. expounded. Opinionists compared to sleepers and drunkards. Three observations from the end of the verse. What knowledge of God is unattainable in this life. What may be had. The knowledge we have concerning God distinguished into Natural, Literal, and Spiritual.

§. 1. AWake to righteousness and sinnot: for some have not the knowledge of God; I speak this to your shame. These are the Apostles express words to his Corinthians. Which will be better understood, if we consider.

I. That there was a time, when of all the Nations in the world Greece was held the most licentious, and Corinth of all the cities in Greece; insomuch as in common speech revellers were said to play the Grecians, and fornicatours to play the Corinthians. Also that after the grace of Christ (who came to call sinners to repentance) had appeared there in planting Christianity, this riotous humor was notably fed in false brethren by those false teachers, who opened a gate to all profaneness by denying the resurrection.

II. That of such teachers and professors Paul speaks in this chapter, How say some among you that there is no resurrection? and calleth upon them in the beginning of this verse to awaken unto righteousness, because the many and gross vapors that ascended from this heresy had cast them into a deep sleep, wherein all their spiritual senses were bound. Heretics may perhaps pretend to the highest strains of devotion, and make their boast of strongest assurances: yet all this be but like the talking or walking of men in their sleep, or like the quick and nimble phantasmes of dreaming students. Their devotion is but a dream of piety, their assurance will prove but a dream of happiness.

§. 2. III. That the word 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 there used by the Apostle is very emphatical, and properly signifies an awaking out of such a sleep as hath been occasioned by too much drink. Thus Noah awoke from his wine, and Awakeye drunkards saith Joel. Neither will it be difficult to discern in a sensual opinionist the symptoms of a drunken man. Ye may see him reeling to and fro, now entertaining this odd conceit, tomorrow that, and the next day a third, unstable in all: well if not vomiting too and casting out scornful reproaches upon all that are of a contrary judgment, as upon dark and low-spirited men. Ye may perceive him full of tongue, as drunkards commonly use to be, prating, and venting his own apprehensions everywhere; yea perhaps boasting of himself and his party as too many, too hard for all their opposites. So one drunkard, our proverb saith, is forty men strong. Who so attempts to reason with him will easily find him as incapable of conviction, as Nahal was of Abigail's narration till his wine was gone out of him.

IV. That the cause was manifest why such men had a charge given them not to sin, Awake unto righteousness, saith the Apostle, and sin not. For that the desperate opinion they had embraced was an high-way to abominable courses. The denial of a resurrection hath a natural tendency to looseness of life, inclining men to say, as they did, Let us eat and drink for tomorrow we shall die. And the more licentious any man is, the more willing to close with such an opinion. Accordingly among the Jews, whereas most of the common people adhered to the Pharisees, who professed strictness, and amused them with outward forms of godliness, the Gentry and such as gave themselves most to voluptuousness became followers of the Sadducees, who denied the resurrection. Such men (saith Theophylact) are not so easily persuaded of a resurrection, because they are afraid of punishments in another life, if any be.

§. 3. V. That these especially were the persons whom Paul there censureth for gross ignorance, such as they had just cause to be ashamed of. He had said before in the twelfth verse, Some among you say there is no resurrection: in the four and thirtieth speaking still of the same men, Some have not the knowledge of God. Only whereas in case of personal affronts to himself and his fellow-preachers he had appeared much more mild in the fourth chapter, I write not these things (saith he there) to shame you, but as my beloved sons I warn you. Here he setteth an edge upon his rebuke, and telleth them he spake it to their shame; because the heresy he striketh at, struck at the root of all religion, and became an in-let to Epicureanism, yea to Atheism.

VI. That from the latter part alone, Some have not the knowledge of God, I speak this to your shame, three observations may be raised without offering violence to the words, one as implied, the rest as expressed, to wit,

- 1. There is a knowledge of God to be had.
- 2. Some have it not.
- 3. The want of it is a matter of shame.

All which I intend to insist upon in this and the following Exercitations.

§. 4. Concerning the first. There is a knowledge of God to perfection, which is always saving; and another to salvation indeed, but as yet imperfect. The former hath been proudly challenged by some sons of delusion, and accounted attainable in this life by the sole improvement of reason. For we read of Aetius that he dared to say, I so know God, as I do myself; yea I do not know myself so well as I do God. A certain evidence to make it appear, that the wretch neither knew himself, nor God. And Petrus Abelardus is said to have maintained this assertion, That the whole of God's essence may be comprehended by human reason. But the truth is, it is neither attainable in this life, as being reserved for another world (according to the Apostles doctrine, We know but in part. When that which is perfect is come, then that which is in part shall be done away) nor at all by the sole improvement of reason. The lesser cannot comprehend the greater; God is greater than our heart, faith S^t. John, therefore incomprehensible by the shallow reason of shipwreck'd nature. He and the Sun are alike in this, both refresh wary beholders, but put out the eyes of curious pryers. However faith may look upon God with much comfort, for reason to stare too much upon him is the way to lose her sight. When she hath tired and wildered herself in searching after the true God her return must be Non est inventus, He is not to be found, at least not by me. Faith only can find him out, yet not to perfection neither, although to salvation it may and doth.

§. 5. Which is the latter kind of knowledge above-mentioned, and that I am now speaking to, as attainable here. Even the lowest rank of Christians, whom John styleth his little children are described by their having known the father: And because the new covenant runneth thus, They shall all know me from the least of them to the greatest of them, saith the Lord. But although it be most true, that there is a saving knowledge of God attainable here, yet for any man to presume, that whatever knowledge of God he attaineth, it will certainly save him is a most strong delusion. For whereas there is a Natural and a Literal as well as a Spiritual knowledge, it will be manifest by the sequel of this discourse, that none is saving but the third. The first is that which may be fetched out of the book of nature without any further manuduction of higher principles. Antony the religious Monk, when a certain Philosopher asked him, how he did to live without books, answered he had the voluminous book of all the creatures to study upon, and to contemplate God in.

Believe me, said Bernard to his friend, as one that speaketh out of experience, There is sometimes more to be found in woods, then there is in books. Trees and stones will teach thee that, which is not to be learned from other masters.

The Book of Scripture without doubt hath the preeminence in worth by many degrees; but that of the creatures had the precedency in time, and was extant long before the written word. We may therefore well begin with it.

EXERCITATION 2. That there is a God, the prime dictate of natural light; deducible from man's looking backward to the creation, forward to the rewards and punishments dispensed after death, upward to the Angels above us, downwards to inferior beings, within ourselves to the composition of our bodies, and dictates of our consciences, about us to the various occurrences in the world.

§. 1. There are six several acts which every man of understanding is able to exert in a way of contemplation: He may respicere, prospicere, susplicere, despicere, inspicere, and circumspicere. Whosoever shall advisedly exercise any of these will undoubtedly meet with some demonstrations of a Deity; much more if he be industriously conversant in them all.

I. If he do respicere look backward to the creation of the world (which the light of nature will tell him had a beginning) he will see and understand the invisible things of God by the things that are made, even his eternal power and Godhead, as Paul speaks. Basil therefore called the world a school wherein reasonable souls are taught the knowledge of God. In a musical instrument when we observe divers strings meet in an harmony, we conclude that some skillful musician tuned them; when we see thousands of men in a field, marshalled under several colors, all yielding exact obedience, we infer that there is a General, whose commands they are all subject to. In a watch, when we take notice of great and small wheels all so fitted as to concur to an orderly motion, we acknowledge the skill of an artificer. When we come into a Printing-house and see a great number of different letters so ordered as to make a book, the consideration hereof maketh it evident that there is a composer, by whose art they were brought into such a frame. When we behold a fair building, we conclude it had an architect; a stately ship well rigged and safely conducted to the Port, that it hath a Pilot. So here. The visible world is such an Instrument, Army, Watch, Book, Building, Ship, as undeniably argueth a God, who was and is the Tuner, General, and Artificer, the Composer, Architect and Pilot of it.

§. 2. II. If he do prospicere look forwards to the rewards and punishments, to be dispensed in another world, (which the heathens Elysium and Tartarus show them to have had a sleight knowledge of by the light of nature) he cannot but acknowledge some supreme Judge, whom they are dispensed by; and that he is a searcher of hearts, wherein piety and sin do chiefly reside; seeing it were impossible for him otherwise to pass righteous judgment without mistaking good for evil, and evil for good. Some discourses of Plato, and some verses of Menander, besides many other testimonies make it appear that the notion of these things was entertained by the wiser sort both of Philosophers and Poets, and that which they held of a world to come is a topick sufficient to argue from, for the being of a God in the world that is.

III. If he do susplicere, look upwards to a rank of creatures above himself, I mean good and evil spirits, of which the heathens were not ignorant; witness their large discourses of Demons, of Intelligences, and of a bonus & malus Genius. For if such creatures as Angels be acknowledged, so good, holy, wise and powerful as they are said to be by all that take notice of them, they must have a maker better, holier, wiser and powerfuller than themselves; seeing the cause is always more noble than the effect, and hath that perfection which it communicates much more eminent in itself. If there be Devils, whose mischief and might are both of them so confessedly great, there must needs be a God to restrain and countermand them; else the world would soon be turned into a mere hell, full of nothing but abominations and confusion.

§. 3. IV. If he do despicere, look downward to things below himself, whose nature is inferior to that of man; the contemplation of elements, plants and brute beasts will extort the confession of a Deity. The heavens declare the glory of God, and the firmament showeth his handy-work. Nor these alone, which have so much of magnificence in them: but the least fly, if it could be anatomized, would be found to have in it more miracles, then parts; such proportion of members, distinction of offices, correspondence of instruments, as speaketh the infinite power and wisdom of the Maker. Well might Job say, as he did, Ask now the beasts and they shall teach thee, and the fowls of the air, and they shall tell thee: or speak to the earth, and it shall teach thee, and the fishes of the sea shall declare unto thee. Who knoweth not in all these that the hand of the Lord hath wrought this?

V. If he do inspicere, look within himself, and that either to the composition of his body, or to the dictates of his conscience. We are so fearfully and wonderfully made, that the great physician Galen, though an heathen, being amazed at the wisdom which he discovered in the frame of every member in man's body, could no longer contain himself, but fell to praising the Creator in an hymn. As for conscience there is nothing more common then for wicked men after the commission of gross sins to be inwardly tormented and affrighted by reason of somewhat it suggests, the substance whereof is, that there is a God, and that he will judge them for what they have done. Calvin telleth us of a certain profane fellow who was ranting at his Inn, and blasphemously wresting that of the Psalmist, The heaven of heavens is the Lord's, and the earth hath he given to the children of men, as if God left us to do what we list upon earth, confining himself and his providence to the heavens; thereby as far as he openly durst disavowing a Deity. Whereupon he was struck suddenly with extreme torments in his body, and began to cry out O God, O God. So natural it is even for the worst of mankind to acknowledge a God in their extremities; and for others more ingenuous, even among those that want Scripture-light (as Tertullian hath observed) to be frequently saying, God seeth. I commend it to God, God will recompense: which drew from him an exclamation that must be warily understood, O the testimony of a soul naturally Christian!

§. 4. VI. If he do circumspicere, look round about him to the various occurrences in the world; the great deliverances vouchsafed to some, the great calamities brought upon others, both beyond all expectation. The Lord is, and cannot but be, known by the judgments which he executeth; so by the blessings which he bestoweth. Who can see a Daniel rescued from reasonable lions, unreasonable men, a Moses preserved in an ark of bulrushes, a Noah in a deluge of waters, others in a furnace of fire? Who can behold a Pharaoh plagued, an Herod eaten up with worms, an Achitophel making away himself, a Judas bursting asunder in the midst, an Arius voiding of his bowels, and not cry out, as it is in the Psalm, Verily there is a reward for the righteous, doubtless there is a God that judgeth the earth? We meet with a passage in Atheneus not unworthy, as I conceive, to be taken notice of, and recorded here. When at a public meeting in some place of receipt, a beam of the house suddenly falling had dashed out the brains of a notoriously wicked man in the sight of many by-standers to whom he was known; one Stratonicus brake out into a speech so emphatical in the Greek, as it can hardly be translated without much loss, yet take it thus: Sirs, said he, the beam of light which I have, convinceth me that there is a God; if any of you be otherwise minded, this beam of wood may suffice to beget in him the same persuasion.

§. 5. But notwithstanding all this, as it fared with the wise men from the east, who, although they were assured by the appearance of a star that a King of the Jews was born, yet needed the prophets manuduction to give them notice who he was, and where they might find him: so though natural reason improved can make it appear that there is a God, yet there is a necessity of Scripture-revelation to inform us who and what he is, in regard of his Essence, Subsistence, and Attributes; in all these the written word goes far beyond whatever was or could be discerned in Natures school, and becomes the fountain of that literal knowledge which we are now to treat of.

EXERCITATION 3. Reasons three ways of discovering God fall short of manifesting what he is. The expression in Exod. 3. 14. most comprehensive. A brief exposition thereof. Satan's impudence. Nature and Art both unable to discover the Trinity. What Scripture revealeth about it. Basils memento. Julians impiety. Socinians branded. The three Persons compared to those three wells in Genes. 26.

§. 1. DIVINES tell us of three ways, whereby reason goes to work in her enquiry after God; but none of them all is able to make a full discovery of his Essence. The first is via causalitatis, when from the creatures, whereof God is the supreme universal cause, reason begins to contemplate him as their efficient, because they could not make themselves. But hitherto it only discovereth Quod sit, that there is a God, to whom all things ow their beings; not Quid sit what he is. The second is via remotionis, when it considereth the several imperfections of creatures, and removeth them all from God, as inconsistent with a Deity. Thus it conceiveth him immortal, impassible, impeccable, because to die, suffer, sin, are imperfections. But this only showeth Quid non sit, what he is not; she is still to seek for what he is. The third is via eminentiae, when reason considereth the sundry perfections, which are scattered here and there among created beings, and ascribes them all to God in an eminent and transcendent way. As when finding in Angels and men wisdom, holiness, and strength, it conceiveth God to be most wise, most holy, and most strong. Yet even this doth but show Qualis sit, non quis, what kind of being God is, not who is he. Reason for that must be beholding to revelation. In which respects I cannot but applaud the wise answer of that Philosopher, (Epictetus, as some report) who when his hearers said to him, S^r you have uttered many excellent things concerning God, but we cannot as yet understand what he is, told them plainly, Were I able fully to set forth God, I should either be God myself, or God himself cease to be what he is. Si omnino ego Deum declararem, vel ego Deus essem, vel ill Deus non foret.

§ 2. Were all such passages set aside as are not originally the Heathens own, but borrowed from Jewish or Christian authors, I should not be afraid to affirm, that there is one very short expression in Scripture, to wit this, I am that I am, which revealeth more of God, then all the large volumes of Ethnick writers. An expression so framed as to take in all differences of time, according to the idiom of the Hebrew tongue, wherein a verb of the future tense, as Ehieh is, may signify time past and present, as well as that which is to come. Hence ariseth a great latitude of interpretation; for according to different readings it implieth different things. Reading it, as we do, I am that I am, it importeth the supremacy of God's being. The creatures have more of non-entity than of being in them: It is proper to him to say I am. 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 . so the Septuagint. Or the simplicity thereof; whereas in creatures the Thing and its Being, Ens and Essentia are distinguishable, in him they are both one. Or the ineffabilitie; as if the Lord had said to Moses, enquiring his name, I am myself, and there is nothing without myself that can fully express my Being. Which put Scaliger upon inventing that admirable epithet 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 , that is, Ipsissimus Ipse. Or lastly, the Eternity thereof; since there never was, never will be a time, wherein God might not, or may not say of himself I am. Whence it is that when Christ would manifest his goings out from everlasting, as Micah phraseth it, he maketh use of this expression, Before Abraham was, I am, not I was; for that might have been said of Enoch, Noah and others who lived before Abraham's time, yet were not eternal, but I am. If it be rendered I am what I was, as Piscator would have it, then it speaketh his Immutability: I am in executing, what I was in promising, Yesterday and today and the same forever. If, as others, I will be what I will be, then it denotes his Independency. That essence which the creatures have dependeth upon the Creatours will; None of them can say I will be, not having of and in itself any power to make itself persevere in being, as God hath. It may perhaps intimate all these, and much more than the tongues of Angels can utter. Verily it is a speech containing more in it (as a learned writer acknowledgeth) than human capacities can attain.

§. 3. I shall therefore forbear to enlarge upon it. Let me only observe before I leave it the notorious impudence of apostate spirits. Satan not contenting himself to have got the name of Jove in imitation of Jehovah, the incommunicable name of God, prevailed with his deluded followers to ascribe unto him that, which the Lord of heaven and earth assumeth to himself in this mysterious place of Exodus, saying I am that I am. For over the gate of Apollo's temple in the city of Delphi, so famed for oracles, was engraven in capital letters this Greek word 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 . which signifies Thou art, whereby those that came thither to worship, or to consult Satan's oracle, were instructed to acknowledge him the fountain of being, and the only true God: as one Ammonius is brought in discoursing at large of this very thing in the last Treatise of Plutarchs morals, whereunto I refer the reader.

§. 4. As to the point of divine subsistence, Jehova Elohim, Father, Son and Holy Ghost: three persons, but one God; or in Leo's expression, One God without division in a Trinity of Persons, and three Persons without confusion in an Unity of Essence; it is a discovery altogether supernatural: yea Nature is so far from finding it out, that now when Scripture hath revealed it, she cannot by all the help of Art comprehend, or set it forth as she doth other things: Grammar itself wanting proper and full words whereby to express, Logic strong demonstrations whereby to prove, and Rhetoric apt similitudes whereby to clear so mysterious a truth. The terms Essence, Persons, Trinity, Generation, Procession and such like, which are commonly made use of for want of better, have been and will be cavilled at as short of fully reaching the mystery in all its dimensions. Of the similitudes usually brought for its illustration that which Hilary said is most true, They may gratify the understanding of man, but none of them exactly suit with the nature of God. For example, Not that of a root, a trunk, and a branch; the trunk proceeding from the root, the branch from both, yet but one tree: because a root may for some time be without a trunk, and a trunk without a branch, but God the Father never was without his Son, nor the Father and Son without their coeternal Spirit. Neither that of a crystal Ball held in a river on a Sunshineday, in which case there would be a Sun in the Firmament, begetting another Sun upon the crystal Ball, and a third Sun proceeding from both the former, appearing in the surface of the water; yet but one Sun in all: for in this comparison two of the Suns are but imaginary, none real save that in heaven; whereas the Father, Word and Spirit are distinct Persons indeed, but each of them truly and really God.

§. 5. Well therefore may Rhetoricians say, It is not in us and in our similitudes fully to clear this high point; Logicians also, It is not in us and in our demonstrations fully to prove it. For however reason be able from the creatures to demonstrate a Godhead, as hath been said, yet it cannot from thence a Trinity; no more then he that looks upon a curious picture can tell whether it was drawn by an English-man, or an Italian, only that the piece had an artificer, and such an one as was a prime master in that faculty: because the limner drew it as he was an artist, not as one of this or that nation. So the world is a production of that Essence which is common to all three, not any personal emanation from this or that subsistent; which is the reason why a Deity may be inferred from thence, but not any distinction of Persons, much less the determinate number of a Trinity. The doctrine whereof is like a Temple filled with smoke, such smoke as not only hinders the view of the quickest eye, but hurts the sight of such as dare with undue curiosity pry into it. A mystery, which my faith embraceth as revealed in the word, but my reason cannot fathom. Whilst others run themselves on ground, and dispute it till their understandings be non-plust; may I be enabled to believe what Scripture testifieth concerning an unbegotten Father, an only-begotten Son, and an Holy Spirit proceeding from both; Three, yet but One: and therein to acquiesce without enquiring as Mary did, when the Angel foretold her miraculous conception, How can this thing be? To which question my return should be no other but that of Augustine, who notwithstanding his fifteen books concerning the Trinity, modestly said, Askest thou me how there can be Three in One, and One in Three? I do not know, and am freely willing to profess my ignorance herein. Verily this light is dazzling, and our eyes are weak. It is a case wherein the wisest clerks are punies, and the ablest Orators infants.

§. 6. Yet is the mystery itself written in Scripture as it were with the Sun-beams. I reject not as invalid, but only forbear as less evident the places commonly cited out of Moses and the Prophets; choosing rather to insist upon New-testament discoveries, when the veil which formerly hid the Holy of Holies from men's sight was rent in pieces, and the secrets of heaven exposed to more open view, then whilst the Church was in her minority. At our Savior's baptism there was a clearer manifestation of the Trinity then ever before; as if God had reserved this discovery on purpose to add the greater honor to his only Sons solemn inauguration into the office of Mediator-ship, which was then most visibly undertaken. Who so casts his eye upon the third chapter of the Gospel according to Luke, will quickly discern the Father in an audible voice, heard but not seen, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am wellpleased. The word made flesh now in the water, receiving baptism, and after praying, so both heard and seen. The Spirit like a Dove descending and resting upon Christ, seen but slot heard. Insomuch as the Catholics were wont in the times of Athanasius to send the misbelieving Arians to Jordan, there to learn the knowledge of a Trinity.

§. 7. Behold after this a clear nomination of the three coessential Persons in that commission which Christ our Lord sealed to the Apostles before his ascension, in the end of the Gospel according to Matthew, when he sent them out to make disciples in all Nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost. Who can but see a Trinity here? How can any who by virtue of this institution hath been baptized, refuse to believe it? It becomes us (saith Basil) to be baptized as we have been taught, to believe as we have been baptized, & to glorify as we have believed, the Father, the Son, and the holy Spirit. This the great Apostate Julian, was not a little sensible of; wherefore considering that he could not fairly disclaim the Trinity, till he had renounced his baptism, he took the blood of beasts offered in sacrifice to the heathen God's (as Nazianzen tells us from the report of his own domestical servants) and bathed himself therein all over; so, as much as in him lay, washing off the baptism he had formerly received. Add hereunto that impregnable place (which hath hitherto, and will forever hold out against all the mines and batteries of heretics) in the first epistle of John, There are three that bear witness in heaven, the Father, the Word, and the holy Spirit; and these three are One. Where a Trinity is proclaimed both in numero numerante, there are three; and in numero numerato, telling us plainly who they are, Father, Word, and holy Spirit: And that the same Essence is common to them all. For these three are One.

§. 8. Yet is there a late generation, of men commonly known by the name of Socinians, who although they maintain against Atheists the Personalitie and Eternity of God the Father, have confounded Christian Religion by denying the Eternity of the Son, whose Personalitie they acknowledge; and the personalitie of the Spirit, whose Eternity they confess. Methinks it fares with these three blessed Persons, as with those three noted wells of which we read in the twenty sixth of Genesis. Two of them Isaac's servants were enforced to strive for with the herdmen of Gerar, which made him call the one Esek, that is, contention, the other Sitnah, that is, hatred. A third they got quiet possession of, and he called the name of it Rehoboth, saying, Now the Lord hath made room for us. The Fathers Godhead is like the well Rehoboth, which there was no strife about, the Sons divinity like the well Esek, we are forced to contend for that, as also for the Deity of the Spirit, which is as Sitnah to the Socinians; they hate the thoughts of it, much more the acknowledgement.

But can any man say by the Spirit of God, that the Spirit is not God? Is it not as clear by Scripture-light that Christ is God, as by Natures light that God is? Are they Christians and Spiritual, who deny the divinity of Christ and the Spirit? Let the judgment of charity enjoy its due latitude: but for my part, I would not for a thousand worlds have a Socinians account to give at the end of this.

EXERCITATION 4. Divine Attributes calling for transcendent respect. They are set down in the Scripture so, as to curb our curiosity, to help our infirmity, to prevent our misapprehensions, and to raise our esteem of God. Spiritual knowledge superadding to literal clearness of light, sweetness of taste, sense of interest and sincerity of obedience.

Next to the Essence and Subsistence of God, his Attributes are to be considered; concerning which I premise this rule.

§. 1. The degrees of our respect are to keep proportion with degrees of worth in persons and things; ordinary worth requiring esteem, eminent calling for reverence, supereminent for admiration, yea and adoration too, if it be an uncreated object. Hence the Psalmist upon contemplation of God crieth out as in an ecstasy, O Lord, our Lord, how excellent is thy Name in all the earth! His Attributes are his Name; their worth so superexcellent, as far to transcend the utmost pitch of that observance, which we, poor we, are able any way to render. Seeing as the stars of heaven disappear, and hide their heads upon the rising of the Sun that outshineth them: so creatures seem not to be excellent, yea, not to be, when the being and excellency of their Maker displayeth itself, according to that, All nations before him are as nothing; and they are counted to him less than nothing and vanity. The best of them have but some perfections: God either hath (as manna is supposed to have had the relish of all meats) or containeth all; Sovereignty comprehendeth inferior honors. The best of their perfections are mixed with some defects: but God is light, and in him is no darkness at all. They may be perfect and good in their kind: He is perfection and goodness itself. In them we may find matter of wonderment, but of astonishment in him, witness that eminent place Nehem. 9. 5. Blessed be thy glorious Name, which is exalted above all blessing and praise. Nature, though not altogether silent upon this argument, to wit the divine Attributes, yet enjoyeth but a dim light to discover them by, whereas the Scripture representeth them most magnificently in sundry respects.

§. 2. First, so as to curb our curiosity. For which end it expresseth divers of them negatively, as when God is said to be infinite, immortal, invisible, unsearchable: whereby we are taught that it is easier for us to know what he is not, then what he is; which is known only to himself. The best terms (as Scaliger hath it) for men to manifest their understanding of God by, are those which manifest that they understand him not. Thou, O Lord, saith Nazianzen, hast produced all those things of which we speak; but art unspeakable thyself. All that can be known by us is from thee, but thou thyself canst not be known. Yea Austin was not afraid to affirm that Nescience is the better way of knowing God.

Secondly, so as to help our infirmity. For whereas we are not able by any one act of our finite understandings to comprehend that infinite Essence, which is itself one simple Act, but comprehensive of all perfections; Holy Scripture, condescending to our weakness, alloweth us to take up as it were in several parcels, what we cannot compass at once; and in contemplating the Attributes to conceive some under the notion of divine properties incommunicable to creatures; such as are Immensity, Independency, Eternity, Simplicity, Self-sufficiency, All-sufficiency, Omnipotence, Omniscience, Omnipresence. Others under that of divine faculties; such are Understanding, Will, and Memory ascribed to God. It gives us leave to look at some as divine affections; such are his Love, Hatred, Anger, Grief and Delight. At others as divine virtues; such are his Mercy, Justice, Patience, Faithfulness, Holiness, Wisdom, &c. and at other some as divine excellencies resulting out of all the former; such are Majesty, Blessedness and Glory.

§. 3. Thirdly, so as to prevent our misapprehensions. The Attributes of God however diversified in our conceptions (as hath been said) are identified with his Essence, which is but One: though to us they appear to be different each from other, and all from it; as the vast ocean, though but one, receiveth divers names from the several shores it washeth upon: so however Justice, Mercy, Power and the rest, be several names suited to different operations; yet God is but one simple Act under those various denominations. Lest we should therefore apprehend them to be such qualities as our virtues are, really distinguishable, yea and separable from our being (as appeared when the first man fell from his holiness, yet continued a man still) Scripture doth sometimes predicate them of God in the abstract: as when Christ is styled Wisdom; when it is said, God is love, and the Spirit is truth. Men may be called loving, wise and true: God is love, wisdom and truth itself. The Apostle telleth us that if God swear, he doth it by himself and no other; yet we find him in the Psalm swearing by his holiness: whence it followeth that his holiness is himself. Christ is usually said to sit at the right hand of God; but in one place it is expressed by sitting on the right-hand of power: Therefore God is Power, as well as Love. There is the same reason of all his attributes.

§. 4. Fourthly, So as to raise our esteem of God. Some there be which are frequently called Communicable Attributes, because in them the creatures share, as being, immortality, goodness, and wisdom. Lest we should in this respect have lower thoughts of God than becomes us, Scripture is wont to ascribe them to him in such a way of supereminence as, (however they be participated by Angels and men yet) he only is said to have them. Witness these texts, There is none besides me. Who only hath immortality. God only wife. And There is none good but God. Because in him they are all infinite, all eternal, all unmixed, and without the least allay of imperfection. An apostrophe borrowed from a devout, though popish, writer, shall shut up this. O abyss of divine perfections! How admirable art thou, O Lord, who possessest in one only perfection the excellency of all perfections, in so excellent sort, that none is able to comprehend it but thyself!

§. 5. There is yet behind, a third kind of knowledge far exceeding both the former. A knowledge of God not proceeding from the light of Nature alone, as the first doth; nor of Scripture alone, as the second; but from effectual irradiations of the Spirit of wisdom and revelation, accompanied with purging and cheering influences from the same spirit. Look as the Literal maketh an addition of further discoveries to the Natural (which hath been sufficiently proved) So this Spiritual knowledge of God superadds even to the Literal sundry particulars, not unworthy of our serious consideration, viz.

First, Clearness of light. Since the Canon of Scripture was perfected, the things which the Holy Ghost discovereth are no other for substance, but those very things which are contained in the written word: only he affords regenerate persons clearer light to discern them by, than any they had before their conversion. Take a man that is now become a learned Critick, turn him to the same Author which he perused when he was a young student; he will find the self-same matter, but see a great deal further into it, because he hath now got further light. So is it here.

Secondly, Sweetness of taste. I satedown under his shadow with great delight, and his fruit was sweet to my taste. So the Spouse. O taste and see that the Lord is good. So the Psalmist. Upon which place the School-men have founded their distinction of knowledge of sight and a knowledge of taste. Spiritual science is steeped in affection; taking delight in the things known, and not barely apprehending, but relishing and savouring what it apprehendeth with abundance of love and complacency. Whence those expressions in Solomon's song, Because of the savor of thy good ointments, thy name is as an ointment poured forth, therefore do the Virgins love thee, He doth not know the things of God (saith a late writer well) who doth not desire and love them.

§. 6. Thirdly, Sense of interest. Of the Zidonians God said, They shall know that I am the Lord: But of his own people Israel, They shall know that I am the Lord their God. Paul of the believing Ephesians concerning Christ, In whom ye trusted, after that ye had heard the word of truth, the Gospel of your salvation. Others may consider the Gospel as a word of truth, and a doctrine holding forth salvation; but such as are savingly enlightened and sanctified by the Spirit, view the salvation it holdeth forth as theirs, and are ready to say of every truth therein contained, This is good and good for me. Happy man, whosoever thou art, that canst look by an eye of faith at the Gospel as the Charter of thy liberties, at the condemning Law as cancelled by thy Surety, at the Earth as the footstool of thy Fathers throne, at Heaven as the portall of thy Fathers house, at all the creatures in Heaven and Earth as an heir is wont to look at his fathers servants, which are therefore his, so far as he shall have need of them, according to that, All are yours, and ye are Christ's, and Christ is God's.

Fourthly, Sincerity of obedience. No doubt but Eli's two sons, being Priests had a literal knowledge of God; yet being profane, they are said expressly not to have known him. They were sons of Belial; they knew not the Lord. When Lucius a bloody persecutor offered to confess his Faith, in hope thereby to beget in the auditors a good opinion of his orthodoxy, Moses the religious Monk refused to hear him, saying, The eye might sometimes judge of ones faith as well as the ear: and that whosoever lived as Lucius did, could not believe as a Christian ought. Fully consonant hereunto is that of James, I will shew thee my faith by my works. That of John, He that saith, I know God, and keepeth not his commandments is a liar, and the truth is not in him. And that of Job, Behold the fear of the Lord that is wisdom, and to depart from evil is understanding.

APHORISM IV. Goodness and Greatness are Attributes so comprehensive, as to include a multitude of divine perfections.

EXERCITATION 1. God described from goodness and greatness both without and within the Church. A lively portraiture of his goodness in the several branches thereof. Exod. 34. 6, 7. Bowels of mercy implying inwardness and tenderness. Our bowels of love to God, of compassion to brethren. Mercy not to be refused by unbelief, nor abused by presumption.

§. 1. The most learned among the Heathen made account they had sufficiently characterized their Jupiter, when they styled him Good and Great, yea the Best and Greatest of Beings. Neither can it be denied that these two attributes, if we take them in their latitude, comprehend very many of those perfections, which commonly go under other names. And this perhaps may be the reason why David in Psalm one hundred forty fifth (which the Rabbins are said to have esteemed so highly of, as to determine, but with more superstition than truth, that whosoever repeated in thrice every day might be sure of eternal life) having set himself to extol God and to bless his name, as appeareth by the first and second verses, insisteth chiefly on these two. Great is the Lord, and greatly to be praised, and his greatness is unsearchable. Shortly after, They shall abundantly utter the memory of thy great goodness. The Lord is gracious and full of compassion, slow to anger and of great mercy. The Lord is good to all; and his tender mercies are over all his works. I shall accordingly treat of both, and first of his Goodness.

§. 2. Moses was skilled in all the learning of the Egyptians; yet as not content herewith, he becometh an humble suitor to God for some further and better knowledge, I beseech thee (saith he) show me thy glory. Other notions may fill the head of a moral man: nothing short of the knowledge of God can satisfy the heart of a Saint. Wherefore in answer to this request, the Lord maketh him a promise, saying, I will make all my goodness pass before thee. The thing desired was a sight of his glory; the thing promised a view of his Goodness. Which intimateth that however in themselves all the Attributes of God be glorious, yet he glorieth most in the manifestation of his goodness, neither doth any bring him in so much glory from the creatures who are wont to magnify this most. I will mention the loving kindnesses of the Lord, and the praises of the Lord, according to all that the Lord hath bestowed on us; and the great goodness towards the house of Israel, which he hath bestowed on them, according to his mercies, and according to the multitude of his loving kindnesses. So the Church in Isaiah.

Now the forementioned promise made to Moses in Exodus the three and thirtieth, was made good in chapter the thirty fourth, where the Lord is said to have passed by him, and proclaimed, The Lord, the Lord God merciful and gracious, long suffering and abundant in bounty and truth, keeping mercy for thousands, forgiving iniquity and transgression, and sin, and that will by no means clear the guilty, visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children, and upon the children's children unto the third, and to the fourth generation. All which clauses, (even the latter, expounded by most of God's Justice) may be so interpreted as to relate to his Goodness rather.

It is twofold, one Essential, that wherewith God is good in himself, the other Relative, that whereby he doth good to his creatures. The former is here set forth by the term Jehovah, which is doubled, and doth most fully serve to express it, as coming from a root, that signifieth Being. For Goodness and Entity are convertible, and everything so far forth as it partaketh of Being, partaketh also of Bonity: wherefore God in whom all degrees of Entity meet is undoubtedly most good. The latter in the title El, which as a learned Jew affirmeth, doth not less clearly express his influence, than Jehovah doth his Essence: El and Elohim in their most proper notion (as he telleth us) signifying the author and producer of things by an infinite power. Of this Relative goodness there are sundry distinct branches mentioned in this superexcellent Text, which are spoken to in their order.

§. 3. The First is Mercy. The nature whereof may receive much light from the Hebrew word which is here made use of. It cometh from a root that signifieth shutting up in ones bowels, as child-bearing women retain and cherish their dearest offspring within their wombs.

Accordingly we read in Luke of the bowels of God's mercy; a phrase which implieth both inwardness and tenderness. First inwardness, our bowels are the most inner parts: The mercy of God springs from within, and hath no original cause without himself. Humane affection is commonly both begotten and fed by somewhat without, in the thing or person beloved; as culinary fire must be kindled and kept in by external materials: But God loveth because he loveth, and showeth mercy on whom he will show mercy; as celestial fire is fuel to itself. He freely extendeth mercy to us in making us good, then doth us good for being so; is not this a merciful God? Secondly tenderness. The forecited passage in Luke runneth thus in our translation, Through the tender mercies of our God. Of all parts the bowels relent and earn most. In them we are wont to find a stirring, when strong affections of love or pity are excited, as Joseph did upon sight of Benjamin. God speaking after the manner of men useth this pathetic expression concerning his people, How shall I give thee up Ephraim? how shall I deliver thee Israel? how shall I make thee as Admah? how shall I set thee as Zeboim? mine heart is turned within me, my repentings are kindled together. His people accordingly cry to him, Where is thy zeal, and thy strength? the sounding of thy bowels, and of thy mercies are they restrained? Of all human bowels those of mothers are the tenderest. Can a woman (saith the Lord) forget her suckingchilde that she should not have compassion on the son of her womb? Yet sooner shall all the mothers in the world prove unnatural, then he unmerciful: for so it followeth, yea they may forget, yet will not I forget thee.

§. 4. Well may this notion of mercy put us in mind of returning bowels of love to God, according to what David said in the beginning of Psalm the eighteenth, I will love thee O Lord my strength; where the word cometh from the same forementioned root, and intimateth exercising love out of his most inward bowels: as also of extending bowels of compassion to those especially that stand in nearest relation to him, according to that of John, Whoso hath this worlds goods, and seeth his brother hath need, and shutteth up his bowels of compassion from him, how dwelleth the love of God in him? But that is not all the improvement we are to make of this Attribute. As it is a most tender affection, so is it to be most tenderly used. Take we therefore diligent heed, as of refusing it by unbelief, so, of abusing it by presumption.

First, of refusing mercy by unbelief. Many, as the phrase is in Jonah, forsake their own mercy, by giving way to objections arising from the flesh, like smoke out of that bottomless pit in Revelation. Say not therefore God is so angry with me, the arrows of the Almighty stick so fast, and the poison thereof doth so drink up my spirit, that I cannot expect any mercy from him. Know that the Lord is wont even in wrath to remember mercy: and that the correction which thou at present lookest at as an argument of wrath, may perhaps be an evidence of love, and an act of mercy. God is not about to hew thee down, as thy unbelieving heart imagineth, but to prune thee for prevention of luxuriancy. Be sure the right hand of his clemency knoweth whatever the left hand of his severity doth. Thou hadst better be a chastened son, then an undisciplined bastard. There is no anger to that in Isaiah, Why should ye be stricken anymore? ye will revolt more and more: That in Ezekiel, I will make my fury towards thee to rest, and my jealousy shall depart from thee; and I will be quiet, and will be no more angry; That in Hosea, He is joined to idols, let him alone. Then is God most angry of all, when he refuseth to be angry; yea there is no anger of his to be compared to this kind of mercy. Men that are fatted to destruction often go prosperously on in the world, have few afflictions in their life, no bands in their death: but as Erasmus once said, From this prosperitie good Lord deliver us.

Say not I am unworthy, and must therefore despair; for mercy is free, and if God should show mercy to none but such as are worthy of it, he should show mercy to none at all, seeing All have sinned and come short, as of the glory, so, of the mercy of God. Say not my sins are many and great, too many and too great to be pardoned: but oppose to the multitude of thy transgressions that multitude of tender mercies mentioned by the Psalmist; not forgetting the gracious invitation by another Prophet, Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughtss; and let him return unto the Lord, and he will have mercy upon him, and to our God, for he will abundantly pardon, or, multiple pardon, as the original phrase imports. To the greatness of thy sins oppose the riches of God's mercy, and greatness of his love spoken of by the great Apostle. God, saith he, who is rich in mercy, for his great love wherewith he loved us. Lo here a vast heap, whereunto men may come with confidence, be it never so much they have need of, because these riches are not impaired by being imported. The mercies of an infinite God are infinite mercies, and so able to swallow up all the sins of finite creatures. What though thou hast heretofore delighted in sin? despair not, for he delighteth in mercy, mercy pleaseth him, as much as ever any sin did thee. What though thy rebellion hath been long continued? The mercy of the Lord is from everlasting to everlasting upon them that fear him. Yea what though to former guilt thou hast added backsliding, and relapses to rebellion? yet remember that in Jeremiah. Return ye backsliding children, and I will heal your backslidings, together with that in the last of Hosea, where Israel had no sooner said, In thee the fatherless findeth mercy, but it followeth immediately, I will heal their backslidings, I will love them freely. But lest any should surfeit on these sweet meats, take we heed.

§. 5. Secondly, Of abusing mercy by presumption. Mercy improved openeth to us the surest refuge; Mercy abused brings upon us the sorest vengeance. It would be considered that there is one kind of presumers whom mercy itself is resolved to have no mercy on, so long as they continue such: to wit, those that dare expect it, notwithstanding their resolution to go on in their impenitence, and ignorance of God. For thus saith the God of heaven concerning him, Who blesseth himself in his heart, saying, I shall have peace, though I walk in the imagination of my heart, to add drunkenness to thirst, The Lord will not spare him, but the anger of the Lord and his jealousy shall smoke against that man; and the curses that are written in this book shall lie upon him; and the Lord shall blot out his name from under heaven; and shall separate him unto evil. And again, It is a people of nounderstanding; therefore he that made them will not have mercy on them, and he that formed them will show them no favor. Such shall at length find to their costs that the Justice of God, as well as his Mercy endures forever: And that as nothing is more calm then a smooth, more raging then a tempestuous sea; nothing more cold then lead when it is taken out of the mine, nor more scalding when it is heated; nothing blunter then iron, yet when it is whetted nothing more sharp: So none more merciful then God, but if his patience be turned to fury by our provocations, none more terrible. Because I have purged thee, saith the Lord, and thou wast not purged; thou shalt not be purged from thy filthiness anymore, till I have caused my fury to rest upon thee. I the Lord have spoken it, and I will do it I will not go back, neither will I spare, neither will I repent &c. Woe and again woe to them all, against whom mercy itself shall rise up in judgment. Look as the power of God, though infinite, receives limitations from his will; He could have made millions of worlds, would make but one: In like manner his infinite mercy is also limited by his will; and his word the interpreter of his will; plainly telleth us that, as Physicians begin with preparatives, so he begets fear in their hearts, whom he intendeth mercy to. Look as a father pitieth his his children, so the Lord pitieth them that fear him. The mercy of the Lord is from everlasting to everlasting upon them that fear him, to such as keep his Covenant, and to those that remember his commandments to do them. Not they that presume, but that fear; not such as break, but as keep his Covenant; not those that forget, but that remember his Commandments to do them; or at least whose earnest desires and endeavors are that way bent, may expect and shall receive mercy from him. They shall find by sweet experience the infallible truth of what M^r Peacock once said upon his recovery out of a deep and long desertion, viz. That the sea is not more full of water, nor the sun of light, then the Lord is of mercy.

EXERCITATION 2. Grace what. From it spring Election, Redemption, Vocation, Sanctification and Salvation. A Caveat not to receive it in vain. It purgeth and cheereth. Glosses upon Titus 2. 11, 12. and 2 Thess. 2. 26, 17. The exaltation of free grace exhorted to. Long-suffering not exercised towards evil Angels, but towards men of all sorts. It leadeth to repentance; is valued by God, and must not be slighted by us. A dreadful example of goodness despised.

§. 1. A Second branch of God's goodness is Grace, which relates to unworthiness, as the former did to misery. God is merciful to the ill-deserving, Gracious to the undeserving. So far are we from being able to merit so much as the crumbs which fall from his table, that even temporal favors are all from grace. Noah was preserved in the deluge. Why? because He found grace in the eyes of the Lord. Jacob was enriched, and had enough. How came it to pass? Because God, said he to Esau, hath dealt graciously with me. But beside that common favor which all share in more or less, there is a more special grace, which the Psalmist prayeth for, Remember me, O Lord, with the favor that thou bearest unto thy people; O visit me with thy salvation.

§. 2. This third is drawn throughout the whole web of salvation, and there is not a round in the ladder to heaven, which doth not give everyone that steppeth upon it just occasion of crying, Grace, Grace. Did the Lord elect thee to life and glory, when so many were passed by? What reason can be given of this but free grace? Paul styleth it the election of grace in his epistle to the Romans; and telleth his Ephesians that God had chosen them in Christ before the foundation of the world, according to the good pleasure of his will, to the praise of the glory of his grace. Hast thou obtained redemption through the blood of Jesus? That also, saith he there, flows from the riches of his grace. Hath the Lord effectually called thee? Bow down thine head and adore free grace, as the cause thereof. For he saveth and calleth us saith the same holy Apostle, with an holy calling, not according to our works, but according to his own purpose and grace. So in the Acts, when a great number believed, and were turned to Christianity, Barnabas saw the grace of God, shining forth in their conversion. Hast thou received any abilities tending either to thine own sanctification, or to the edification of others? Do the like upon this occasion too, as Paul did, saying, By the grace of God I am what I am; and his grace, which was bestowed upon me was not in vain; but I labored more abundantly than they all; yet not I, but the grace of God, which was with me. In a word, dost thou find in thyself any beginnings of salvation, any hopes that it shall be perfected? Remember what that great asserter of free grace hath left upon record to all posterity. By grace ye are saved through faith; and that not of yourselves, it is the gift of God. Remember it so, as

§. 3. First, to beware of receiving the grace of God in vain, it being ordained for better ends, to wit, purging and cheering of such as receive it. The grace of God that bringeth salvation, hath appeared to all men, teaching us that denying ungodliness and worldly lusts, we should live soberly, righteously and godly in this present world. All partakers of grace should not only deny that gross ungodliness of conversation, which the very sons of morality decrie and abhor; but also worldly lusts, which others are secretly indulgent to. Neither should they content themselves with a negative purity, such as that of the Pharisee was, I am not as other men; not as this publicane; not an extortioner, not an adulterer, (Logicians say of this particle Not, that it is of a malignant nature; Divines know that the malignant Church is much built up by such negatives) but also practice positive holiness, by living soberly, righteously and godly, and that too in this present world: not putting on a vizard of these, as the manner of some is, on a sick bed, or death bed, when they can no longer look at themselves, as men of this world, but of another. As for cheering, remarkable is that prayer made in behalf of the Thessalonians, Now our Lord Jesus Christ himself, and God even our Father, which hath loved us, and hath given us everlasting consolation, and good hope through grace, comfort your hearts. It implieth that whereas we cannot possibly raise from ourselves any ground of hope, or have any lasting, much less everlasting consolation from the creatures, Grace is a firm foundation for both. And this is it, which hath put the prince of darkness (whose desire it hath always been to keep men in as hopeless and comfortless condition as he can) upon using his utmost endeavors in all ages of the Church, either to obstruct the doctrine of free grace, as by Pelagian and Arminian tenets, or to poison this fountain with corrupt deductions and inferences, as by Antinomians and Familists. Wherefore remember it so, as

§. 4. Secondly, In all thy tenets and discourses to magnify and exalt that to which thou owest so very much, indeed thine All that good is. Think it not enough, with some, of a thousand parts to ascribe nine hundred ninety and nine to free grace, reserving but one for free-will: for as Prosper resolves the case well, It is not devotion to give almost the whole to God, but deceit to retain the least part. And again, Grace is wholly repelled, where it is not wholly entertained. I list not now to dispute the point: Only let me have leave to commend to thy reading and observation a paper of verses, inserted by certain Divines that were present at the Synod of Dort, into their suffrage, and comprehending a brief decision of the five Articles there debated, with a pious inference from thence; because with me they have ever been of great esteem since I first met with them in the Acts of that Synod.

Gratia sola Dei certos elegit ab aevo;

Dat Christum certis gratia sola Dei;

Gratia sola Dei fidei dat munera certis;

Stare facit certos gratia sola Dei.

Gratia sola Dei cùm nobis omnia donet,

Omnia nostra regat gloria sola Dei.

In English thus,

Free grace alone elected some to bliss;

Free grace alone gave Christ to death for some;

In some free grace works faith that saving is,

Some by free grace to perseverance come.

Since God's sole grace doth all our good provide,

Let God's sole glory all our motions guide.

§. 5. A third branch of divine goodness is Long-suffering; whereby God hath been pleased to put a notable difference between Angels that fell, and the lapsed sons of Adam. Of them Peter saith, God spared not the Angels that sinned, but cast them down to hell, and delivered them into chains of darkness, to be reserved unto judgment. This was quick and speedy work. But the Lord saith the same Apostle, is Long-suffering to usward. He exerciseth much patience, very much, even towards all, though vessels of wrath. For so Paul, What if God willing to show his wrath and to make his power known, endured with much longsuffering the vessels of wrath fitted to destruction? How profane was the old world? How wicked a place was Jericho? yet was he one hundred and twenty years in warning those of that age, before he brought the deluge upon them: And he that made the world in six, was seven days in destroying that one city. The great Doctor of the Gentiles was not much more then thirty years old, when God converted him: yet we find him looking at this as infinite patience, as all longsuffering, that he was born with so long. I obtained mercy (saith he) that in me first Jesus Christ might show forth all longsuffering. How sensible then ought they to be of this Attribute, whom God hath born with forty, fifty, sixty years, and still continueth to cry unto, as it is in Habakkuk, Woe to him that increaseth that which is not his: How long? as in Jeremy, O Jerusalem wash thine heart from wickedness, that thou mayest be saved: How long shall thy vain thoughts lodge within thee? And again, Woe unto thee O Jerusalem, wilt thou not be made clean? When shall it once be. All which places declare sufficiently that the longsuffering God doth in a manner long to see our conversion to him.

§. 6. And that indeed is the most proper use we can make hereof according to Paul's expostulation, Despise thou the riches of his goodness and forbearance, and longsuffering; not knowing that the goodness of God leadeth thee to repentance. Verily we cannot meet on this side hell with a worse temper of spirit then that which inclines a sinner to despise the forbearance of God, and to kick against the bowels of his goodness: As that profane Arian did, who was executed at Norwich, concerning whom M^t Greenham acquainteth us with this strange and prodigious narration.

This hellish heretic, saith he, (for so were the deniers of Christ's Divinity accounted of in those days, whatever thoughts be had of them in these) a little before he was to be executed, afforded a few whorish tears, asking, whether he might be saved by Christ or no? When onetold him that if he truly repented he should surely not perish; he brake out into this speech, Nay, if your Christ be so easy to be entreated indeed, as you say, then I defy him, and care not for him.

Horrible blasphemy! desperate wickedness for a man to draw himself back from repentance by that very cord of love, whereby he should have been drawn to it. The next degree of impiety is, when men are therefore bold to continue long in sinning, because he with whom they have to do is a longsuffering God. A vice which the Preacher of old took notice of. Because sentence against an evil work is not executed speedily, therefore the heart of the sons of men is fully set in them to do evil. But let such fear and tremble at what followeth, Though a sinner doth evilan hundred times, and his days be prolonged; yet surely I know it shall not be well with the wicked. The Lord valueth every moment of his forbearance, as in the parable, Behold these three years I come seekingfruit on this fig-tree, and find none. Christ sets an high price upon every exercise of his patience, as in the Canticles, Open to me, for my head is filled withdew, and my locks with the drops of the night. Take we heed of slighting that which God and Christ value. Know and consider that patience may be tired, that however the Lord be longsuffering, yet he will not suffer forever, but be weary of repenting in case men will not be weary of sinning. Hear what was once said by himself to Jerusalem, Thou hast forsaken me, saith the Lord, thouart gone backward: therefore will I stretch out my hand against thee, and destroy thee: I am weary with repenting.

EXERCITATION 3. The bounty of God declared by his benefits, viz. giving his Son to free us from hell, his Spirit to fit us for heaven, his Angels to guard us on earth, large provisions in the way, and full satisfaction at our journeys end. Joh. 3. 16. James 1. 5. and Psal. 24. 1. Glossed. Isai. 25. 6. Alluded to. Inferences from divine Bounty, beneficence to Saints; not dealing niggardly with God, exemplified in David, Paul, and Luther. Truth in God is without all mixture of the contrary. It appears in his making good of promises, and threatenings; teaching us what to perform and what to expect.

§. 1. OUR Bibles in the next clause, making use of the generical term, have it, Abundant in goodness. I will make bold to vary a little from the common translation, and to read it, Abundant in bounty, because the word, as Zanchi and others have observed, most properly signifieth that kind of goodness, which we call Bounty or Benignity, and which maketh a fourth branch. This God is abundant in: witness the greatest of his gifts, by which we are wont to measure the bounty of benefactors. I shall instance in some of the chief. He bestoweth upon us,

First, His son to free us from hell. Godso loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son. He did not grant him upon the request and earnest suit of lapsed creatures; but freely gave him unasked; not a servant but a Son; not an adopted son, such as we are, but a begotten, begotten, not as Saints are, of hiswill by the word of truth, but of his Nature; he himself being the Word and the Truth; not one of many, but an only Son thus begotten; and this not for the procuring of some petty deliverance, but that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life. Well might this gift of royal bounty be ushered in with a God so loved the world. Majesty and love have been thought hardly compatible. Yet behold the majesty of God bearing love, and that to the world, the undeserving, yea illdeserving world of mankind. Herein is love, (saith S^t John elsewhere, let me say, herein is bounty) not that we loved God, but that he loved us, and sent his Son to be the propitiation for our sins. Loved, and So loved; that particle is most emphatical, and noteth the transcendency of a thing, either good or evil. Paul speaking of the incestuous Corinthian decyphers him thus, Him that hath sodone this deed; so impudently, so abominably, so unchristianly. The officers being astonied at our Savior's doctrine, cried out, Never man spake so athis man; so excellently, so powerfully, so incomparably. Here, God so loved the world, that is, so freely, so infinitely, so unspeakably. The Apostle himself, who had been wrapped up to the third heaven, and there heard things not to be uttered, wanteth words, when he cometh to utter this; and useth an accumulation of many; because no one could serve his turn to express it sufficiently. Not content to have styled it love, mercy, grace; as not having yet said enough, he calleth it great love, glorious grace; rich mercy, yea, exceeding riches of his glorious and merciful grace, in his second chapter to the Ephesians.

§. 2. Secondly, His Spirit to fit us for heaven. Our heavenly Father is he that giveth the holy Spirit to them that ask him. The Spirit thus given worketh in us regeneration (we are therefore said to be born of the Spirit) and that real holiness, concerning which the Apostle saith, without it no man shall see the Lord: So preparing us for that place, which our Lord Jesus is gone before to prepare for us. A daily conversation in heaven is the surest forerunner of a constant abode there. The Spirit, by enabling us hereunto, first bringeth heaven into the soul, then conducteth the soul to it. Whence it is that Nehemiah, recording the acts of God's bounty to Israel, reckoneth this as one of the principal, Thou gavest also thy good Spirit to instruct them.

Thirdly, His Angels to guard us on earth. After David had said, The angel of the Lord encampeth round about them that fear him, and delivereth them, he addeth immediately, O taste and see that the Lord is good; herein good, in bestowing such a guard upon us. It was an act of royal benignity towards Mordechai in king Ahasuerus, to make Haman the favourite, his attendant as he rode through the streets: Lo here a far greater; the holy Angels, those favorites in the Court of heaven, are all ministering spirits, sent forth to minister for them who shall be heirs of salvation. A task which they perform without grudging, (although in themselves more noble creatures than we are) both out of love to their younger brethren, of whom they have a most tender care; and out of obedience to God, their Father and ours, who hath given them charge so to do, as it is in the Psalm, He shall give his Angels charge over thee, to keep thee in all thy ways. Lay this to the former (as Bernard did) and we shall see the whole heaven at work for our preservation; God the Father sending his Son to redeem us; the Father and Son sending their Spirit to guide us; the Father, Son, and Spirit sending their Angels to minister for us. O taste and see that the Lord is good, bountifully good!

§. 3. Fourthly, Large provisions in the way. We consist of body and soul; he provideth plentifully for both; giving us richly all things to enjoy, as one Apostle phraseth it, yea as another, giving unto all men liberally and not upbraiding. Whereas ordinary benefactors, by reason of their stinted abilities give either but a few things, or to a few persons only, or if to many, but sparingly; and are besides apt to corrupt and blemish their good turns by casting them in the receivers teeth, and making their boast continually of them: all these are here removed from God, whilst he is said to give unto all men, and that liberally, yea and so as not to upbraid; although whatever men receive, yea whatever they are, (sin excepted) be wholly his. That of the Psalmist is very emphatical, and well deserveth our consideration. The earth is the Lord's, and the fullness thereof, the world, and they that dwell therein. The house wherein a man dwelleth, may be his landlords; but the furniture his own. Here we are told that not the earth only, but the fullness of it is the Lord's. Both house and furniture may be another's; but he that inhabiteth it his own man. Here they that dwell therein are the Lord's, the inhabitants themselves, as the room and the stuff. To which agreeth that of S^t Paul, ye are not your own; and that of an ancient writer cited by Heinsius. Our very being is none of ours; much less the things we have in possession. As for spiritual provisions, his people use not to be scanted in them. Another particular reckoned up by Nehemiah, when he set himself to celebrate the acts of divine bounty towards Israel, was the institution of Ordinances. Thou camest down also (saith he speaking to God) upon mount Sinai, and spakest with them from heaven, and gavest them right judgments and true laws, good statutes and commandments; and madest known unto them thy holy Sabbath. One way whereby great Princes are wont to manifest their royal bounty is the making of great feasts, as Ahasuerus, and Solomon did: we may safely allude to the Prophets expression (though the place have another meaning) and say of the Church in that respect, In this mountain doth the Lord of hosts make unto all people a feast of fat things, of wine on the lees; of fat things full of marrow, of wine on the lees well refined. Good Sermons and Prayers are like well refined wines: and as Christ himself is a Savior full of merits, so is his Gospel a doctrine full of promises; his Supper a Sacrament full of mysteries; his Sabbath a day full of opportunities; all his Ordinances fat things full of marrow.

§. 4. Fifthly, Full satisfaction at our journeys end. Now indeed, as the natural, so the spiritual eye is not satisfied with seeing, nor the spiritual ear with hearing; because we see but as through a glass darkly, not face to face, and know but in part that of which we hear. Then shall eye and ear have enough, when we shall see God as he is; and hear Christ saying, Come ye blessed of my Father; inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world. Here, although believing souls have fellowship with God in Christ sufficient to stay their stomachs as at a breakfast; yet that degree of fruition is wanting which should satiate them fully, as at a feast beyond that of Ordinances. What shall there be enjoyed will replenish every chink of rational appetites; the first Truth filling up our understandings, and the chief Good our wills to the very brim. Then shall that be to the utmost verified, which David once said of regenerate persons, They shall be abundantly satisfied with the fatness of thy house; and thou shalt make them drink of the river of thy pleasures: for with thee is the fountain of life, in thy light shall we see light.

§. 5. For improvement hereof. As our Savior once said, Be ye merciful: so Be ye bountiful, let me say, as your father is bountiful. S^t Paul having praised the Macedonians for their deep poverty abounding unto the riches of their liberality, urgeth the grace and benignity of Christ as a principal motive to excite his Corinthians to a like exercise of bounty towards the poor Saints at Jerusalem. For ye know, saith he, the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, that though he was rich, yet for your sakes he became poor, that ye through his poverty might be-rich. More especially let us all learn from hence not to deal niggardly with God himself; but to think no pains too great, no expense too much, no time too long that is spent in his service: Not, as the manner of some is, who so manage the profession of religion, as if their main care and study were how to serve him with most ease, and to come off with the cheapest performances. David, Paul, and Luther, were men of another spirit. The first, as he delighted in the commemoration of divine bounty to him, saying, I willsing unto the Lord, because he hath dealt bountifully with me: And again, Returnunto thy rest O my soul, for the Lord hath dealt bountifully with thee; so he was no niggard in his returns, but ever and anon enquiring what he should do to testify his thankfulness, What shall Irender unto the Lord for all his benefits towards me? And as providence offered occasion laying himself out for God; witness that his resolution, testified to Araunah the Jebusite, not to offer unto the Lord of that which cost him nothing. The second was willing tospend and to be spent in the work of his ministry; and not to be bound only, but to die at Jerusalem, for the name of the Lord Jesus, who had there suffered not bonds only, but death for him.

The third, during his retirement in the castle at Coburga for the safety of his person, having then more time to spare for devotion than his many public employments had been wont to afford him, was no niggard of it; But as one Vitus Theodorus, who then lived with him, informed Melanchthon, spent no less in prayer to God than at least three hours every day, and those such hours as were fittest for study.

And yet O the business of some men's spirits! whose services cost them very little or no intention, whilst instead of using the world, as if they used it not, they use good duties as if they did not use them; pray as if they prayed not, hear as if they heard not, keep the Sabbath as if they kept it not, and repent as they did no such thing: Who although they profess believing in Christ, and know that God spared nothis own Son, but delivered him up for us all, yet deal so sparingly with the Lord, as to grudge him (I say not every drop of blood, but) of sweat, yea almost every minute of time that they spend in his immediate service. Let such men know that to be over-thirfty in our expenses upon God is the worst piece of husbandry in the world. I shall dismiss them with that of Moses to those unthankful men of Israel, Do ye thus requitethe Lord, O foolish people and unwise!

§. 6. A fifth branch is faithfulness. One letter of this glorious name is Abundant in truth, that is, in faithfulness. Multus fide, so Junius renders it. These two are frequently joined in Scripture, as exegetically of each other. So when Christ is styled the Amen, thefaithfull and true witness, and the counsels of God said to be faithfulness andtruth. God abounds in it so as to have no mixture of the contrary, although the best of men have some. Whence that of Paul, Let God be true, that is, owned and acknowledged for such, but every man a liar. A lightsome body may have somewhat of darkness in it; for example a precious stone some speck or cloud, but light itself admits of none. God is light, and in him there isno darkness at all: So God is truth, and in him there is no falsehood at all. God that cannot lie, saith the Apostle. Satan is so the father of lies, as that he doth notwithstanding at times speak some truth, to the end he may deceive the better: God so the father of truth, as that he can never lie, no more then he can deny himself; which is utterly impossible. If we believe not, yet he abideth faithful, he cannot deny himself. Now his truth appeareth especially in two things.

First, The fulfilling of all his promises; which shall as surely receive their accomplishment in due season, as that of Christ's Incarnation did when the fulness of time was come; and that of bringing the people of Israel out of Egypt at the end of four hundred and thirty years; which was most exactly performed the self-same day in which that number of years was expired. The Greek word for truth (as some think) according to its Etymology implies not forgetting what one hath promised. God remembereth whatever he hath at any time said, and that so effectually, as to make everyone of his promises good, although perhaps long after the making of them; yea and after many appearances to the contrary. See it in Abraham. He receiveth a command to go out to a land which the Lord should show him, and a promise that it should be given to him and his. He goeth; but meeteth with a great famine at his first coming thither, which forced him to flee into Egypt for bread, because he was like to starve there. Yet afterwards it proved a land flowing with milk and honey to his posterity. Another grand promise made to Abraham was that his seed should be as the stars of heaven for multitude: yet Isaac the son of promise was not born till a good while after; and being grown was like to have been offered up for a sacrifice at God's command. But the Lord spared him, and a wife is at length procured for him; yet for twenty years together after his marriage he hath no issue by her. All this while how small appearance is there of a numerous seed? Neither did the posterity of Isaac begin to multiply of a long time after this: for all the souls of the house of Jacob which came into Egypt were no more but threescore and ten. In Egypt a course was taken by Pharaohs tyranny to keep them from increasing. But behold the faithfulness and truth of God, who being mindful of his promise, caused such fruitfulness amongst them, notwithstanding all obstacles, that there were numbered in the second year after their coming out of Egypt, more then six hundred thousand fighting men, besides women and children, and the whole tribe of Levi.

§. 7. Secondly, The accomplishing of all his threatenings, as it is written, I the Lord have spoken it, it shall come to pass, and I will do it; I will not go back, neither will I spare, neither will I repent.

Accordingly when the seven Angels appeared with the seven last plagues, they that stood on the sea of glass, said in their song, Great and marvelous are thy works, Lord God Almighty, Just and True are thy ways, thou King of Saints. And when the third of them poured out his vial upon the rivers and fountains of water, an Angel out of the altar said, Evenso Lord God Almighty, True and righteous are thy judgments. If it be objected that destruction was threatened to Nineveh at the end of forty days, but not then executed, the answer is at hand; Their repentance prevented their ruin. For as some of God's promises are made with the condition of faith and perseverance; so his threatenings are denounced with the exception of repentance; which though concealed for the most part, is always included, and sometimes expressed, as in that place of Jeremiah, At what instant I shall speak concerning a nation and concerning a kingdom, to pluck up, and to pull down, and to destroy it; If that nation, against whom I have pronounced, turn from their evil, I will repent of the evil that I thought to do unto them. Be we admonished from hence,

First, What to practice in reference to God, to wit Truth in our promises to and covenants with him, that so our returns may be answerable in kind to our receipts. All his ways are mercy and truth to us-ward; therefore all ours should be truth and faithfulness towards him. Thrice happy we, whatever our outward condition prove, if we be able to profess in the sincerity of our hearts, as they did in Psalm the forty fourth, All this is come upon us, yet have we not forgotten thee, neither have we dealt falsely in thy Covenant. Our principal comfort flows from God's keeping his Covenant of grace with us; it should therefore be our principal care to keep touch with him.

§. 8. Secondly, What to look for in reference to ourselves. To wit, an exact fulfilling of all promises and threatenings that are conditional, according to their several conditions. Hath the faithful and true witness said, He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, but he that believeth not shall be damned? Let no unbeliever then, whilst he continueth in that estate, expect salvation: neither any that believeth and walketh in Christ fear damnation, seeing he hath Truth itself engaged for his safety; and seeing the faith of Godselect, according to S^t Paul's doctrine, should go hand in hand with the hope of eternal life, which God that cannot lie promised before the world began. Let all that wish well to Zion make full account that in due time, The mountain of the Lords house shall be established in the top of the mountains, and shall be exalted above the hills, and all nations shall flow into it; because it hath been promised of old. Let them also know assuredly, that the Lord will consume Antichrist with the spirit of his mouth, and destroy him with the brightness of his coming; because this commination standeth upon the file in holy Scripture, and is not yet completely verified. Former ages have seen Antichrist Nascent, when the Bishop of Rome first usurped authority over all the Churches; Antichrist Crescent, when he began to maintain the doctrine of adoring Images, and praying to Saints departed; Antichrist Regnant, when he exalted himself above Kings and Emperors, setting up his mitre above their crowns; yea Antichrist Triumphant, when he once became Lord of the Catholic faith, so as none might believe without danger more or less, or otherwise then he prescribed. To this observation made by one of our own learned countrey-men, let me add; we our selves have seen him Antichrist Cadent, falling and waning ever since Luther, Calvin, Perkins and others were set on work by God to unmask him. And no doubt, if we do not, our posterity shall see him Antichrist morient, dying and giving up the ghost: for the Lord faithful and true hath not only threatened his ruin, but foretold that his day is coming.

EXERCITATION 4. Keeping mercy for thousands explained. Men exhorted to trust God with their posterity. Luther's last Will and Testament. Iniquity, transgression and sin what. Six Scripture-expressions setting out the pardon thereof. God's goodness therein. Faith and repentance the way to it. Pardon in the Court of Heaven, and of Conscience. The equity and necessity of forgiving one another. We are to forgive as God for Christ's sake forgiveth us viz. heartily, speedily, frequently, thoroughly. A twofold remembrance of injuries, in cautelam & in vindictam.

§. 1. THE sixth branch of divine goodness, is the Lord's keeping mercy for thousands; which phrase admitteth of sundry notions, worthy of diligent consideration.

First, Keeping it as in a storehouse. God is said to be rich unto all that call upon him, and we read of the riches of his goodness. These riches are laid up with him, and kept as in a magazine, to be made use of upon all occasions according to the emergent necessities of his people. Whence it is, that we also read, of their obtaining mercy, and finding grace to help in time of need.

Secondly, Keeping it for the present age, as well as having dispensed it formerly to predecessors. Our fathers were all liberally supplied out of God's forementioned Treasury, as it is in Psalm the two and twentieth, Our fathers trusted in thee; They trusted, and thou didst deliver them; They cried unto thee, and were delivered; they trusted in thee, and were not confounded. This should be no disheartening to us, as if his Treasury were exhausted; but encourage us rather, as Paul's example did succeeding believers. For this cause I obtained mercy (said he) that in me first Jesus Christ might show forth all longsuffering, for a pattern to them which should hereafter believe on him to life everlasting. Which is the next observable.

Thirdly, Keeping it for time to come, as well as dispensing it at present. God hath mercy in hand, and mercy in store. We now say, as it is in the Lamentations, It is of the Lord's mercy that we are not consumed, because his compassions fail not. The same will they have occasion to profess that shall come after us. God keepeth mercy, and mercy keepeth us. Created goodness indeed, being limited, may be justly suspected of penury. Esau might have somewhat to plead for his saying, Hast thou but one blessing my father? But Divine goodness is like an ocean without either banks or bottom. Our heavenly Father hath blessings reserved, as well as bestowed: many more blessings than one, yea for many more persons than one; as it followeth.

Fourthly, Keeping mercy for thousands, and that not of persons only, but, as it is in the Chaldee, for thousands of generations. One generation goes, saith the Preacher, and another generation cometh; but the earth abideth forever. Not one of all these generations but coming and going tasteth of mercy; and the whole earth, during the time of these revolutions are still full of the Lord's goodness. When the ark rested Moses said, Return, O Lord, unto the many thousands of Israel. He that charged his providence with the thousands of Israel, is ready to charge it with the thousands of England, both in this and after ages, if they do not apostatize from him, and so forsake their own mercy.

§. 2. Well may we therefore trust God with our posterity, seeing he that hath shown mercy to us keepeth mercy for them. As that fountain of light the Sun is not weary with shining; it giveth us light, and keepeth light for our Antipodes: so this fountain of mercy is never tired with communicating goodness to one generation after another. Good parents in bad times are often troubled with great solicitude, when they think what will become of their children after them. Let such consider that they leave them in his hand, who is a God keeping mercy for thousands: as Luther did, who had this passage in his last Will and Testament. Lord God I thank thee for that thou hast been pleased to make me a poor and indigent man upon earth. I have neither house, nor land, nor money to leave behind me. Thou hast given me wife and children; I restore them to thee. Lord, nourish, teach and preserve them, as thou hast hitherto done me, O thou that art a Father of the fatherless, and a judge of the widows. Let them remember how much mercy is entailed upon the issue of believers by virtue of these and the like places, He will bless them that fear the Lord both small and great. The Lord will increase you more and more, both you and your children. The just man walketh in his integrity; his children are blessed after him. And that Satan never can, God never will cut off this entail, unless either the children degenerate; or the parents, distrusting providence, make use of some unlawful means for their promotion. In which case, Woe to him, saith the Prophet, that coveteth an evil covetousness to his house, that he might set his nest on high—Thou hast consulted shame to thy house—For the stone shall cry out of the wall, and the beam out of the timber shall answer it. If Jeroboam out of design to secure the kingdom, and settle the crown in his own line, will take the practice of Idolatry as a means to this end; This thing becomes sin unto the house of Jeroboam, even to cut it off, and to destroy it from off the face of the earth. No wonder then, if when God's own peculiar people begin to distrust him, and by reason of unbelief take irregular courses for their advancement in the world, this very thing prove an obstruction to that mercy, which they and theirs might have otherwise been partakers of. Such as would be sure to find him a God showing and keeping mercy unto thousands, must be careful to be found in the number of those that love him and keep his commandments, as he himself informeth us in the Decalogue.

§. 3. The seventh branch is forgiving iniquity, transgression and sin. Where the terms are multiplied to note the readiness of God to forgive our offenses, how many soever they be, though transgression be added to iniquity, and sin to transgression. How great soever they be Pescha, which signifieth rebellious, as well as Chattaah, which imports failings; and of what kind soever they be, whether original, viz. the crookedness & perverseness of nature, intimated in Avon the word used in that speech of David, Behold, I was shapen in iniquity, or actual, expressed by the two other terms. To help our understanding herein, the Holy Ghost in Scripture is pleased to make use of sundry expressions very significant, when he speaks of God's pardoning sin. viz.

I. Taking it away, as in that place of Hosea, where the Church is directed to make her addresses on this wise, Takewith you words, and turn to the Lord, say unto him, Take away all iniquity, and receive us graciously; so will we render the calves of our lips. Not as if when iniquity is forgiven it were presently to be taken out of the memory; but that which the Saints desire is to have it taken out of the conscience, that their hearts may accuse them for it no more. As a thorn in the hedge is a fence, but an offense in the midst of a garden: So sin in the memory may do well to keep us from relapsing, but is a grievance in the conscience. Which made Austin after assurance of forgiveness, when he had made confession of his former aberrations, bless God that he could now call them to mind without being affrighted at the consideration of them.

II. Casting of our sins behind his back. So in Hezekiah's song, Thou hast in love to my soul, saith he, delivered it from the pit of corruption; for thou hast cast all my sins behind thy back. This God doth with a purpose never to view them more Oculo vindice, so as to take vengeance for them, though Oculo iudice, he cannot but by reason of his Omniscience see and discern them. All the while David's sins were before his own face, and he making a penitent confession of them as in the one and fiftieth Psalm, I acknowledged my transgressions, and my sin is ever before me, they were cast behind the back of God, as the Prophet Nathan assured him, saying, The Lord hath put away thy sin, thou shalt not die.

III. Scattering them as a cloud, or as a mist. So the Geneva translation hath it in that cheering passage of Isaiah, I have put away thy transgressions like a cloud, and thy sins as a mist. Sin is that which interposeth itself between the soul and the light of God's countenance: But whether it be a slender mist or a thick cloud, an infirmity or a rebellion, the sun of righteousness eyed by faith can and will dispel it so, as to make it vanish.

§. 4. IV. Covering or hiding them. So in the Psalm, Blessed is he whose transgression is forgiven, whose sin is covered. Men never punish hidden sins, because the law taketh notice of none, but such only as come to light, by breaking out in words or actions. God is accordingly said to cover and hide those sins as it were out of his sight, which he never intends to inflict punishment for.

V. Throwing them into the depth of the Sea. Thus in Micah's Prophecy, Who is a God like unto thee that pardoneth &c. He will subdue our iniquities, and thou wilt cast all our sins into the depths of the Sea. Alluding perhaps to what befell Pharaoh and his host in the red sea, which drowned the greatest Egyptian Commanders, as well as the meanest common soldier. The vast Ocean overfloweth both the lowest sands and the highest rocks: that of God's pardoning grace removeth both the smaller prevarications, and the grosser abominations of all such, as are truly penitent believers.

VI. Blotting them out, as in David's petition, Have mercy upon me, O God, according to thy loving kindness; according to the multitude of thy tender mercies blot out my transgressions. Wherein he alludeth to the custom of Creditours, who use to set down what everyone oweth, and when debts are either forgiven, or paid, to blot them out. Our sins are called debts in the Lord's Prayer: Christ as our surety hath given satisfaction to divine Justice for them; When this is once apprehended and applied by a lively faith, God issueth out a pardon; drawing as it were, the lines of Christ's Cross over the lines of his debt-book; so as he may still see the sum we were indebted in, but sees it cancelled, never to be exacted more.

§. 5. Be we then advertised from hence in the first place, to acknowledge the singular goodness of God to us in this particular, of forgiving our iniquity, transgression and sin. David in the place last cited speaketh of it as a special evidence of loving kindness and tender mercies. The Apostles Creed, having premised the articles concerning Christ, by whom all blessings were procured for the Catholic Church, when it comes to recite them, nameth forgiveness of sins in the first place, as the choicest privilege on this side heaven. And in that compendious prayer, which our Savior taught us, there is a remarkable connection of two petitions by a conjunctive particle, not to be found in any of the former. Give us this day our daily bread, And forgive us our trespasses. To show that as our daily sins make us unworthy of daily bread, so there is no sweetness in them till the other be pardoned. Bread and all other outward mercies a man may receive from an angry God: pardon of sin never cometh but from favor and special love, yea riches of grace, as Paul expresseth it, speaking of Christ, In whom we have redemption through his blood, the forgiveness of sins according to the riches of his grace.

§. 6. In the second, to believe and repent, that we may be found in the number of those to whom this choice blessing is imparted. Scripture telleth us men must be turned from darkness to light, from the power of Satan to God, that they may receive forgiveness of sins, and an inheritance among them that are sanctified, by faith that is in Christ. Also that God hath exalted him with his right hand to be a Prince and a Savior, for to give repentance to Israel and forgiveness of sins. Observe the method, Repentance first, and then forgiveness. God doth not bestow his distinguishing favors upon all men promiscuously. Pardoning mercy doth indeed come from him with ease (he is called a God ready to pardon) but droppeth not from him at unawares, that I may allude to what Seneca said of his liberal man. He will know whom he bestoweth his forgiveness upon. Unbelieving, unrepenting sinners never obtained it; faithful penitents never yet went without it. They may perhaps not be so sensible of it in times of temptation and of desertion: but, to make use of a known distinction, whereas there is a double forgiveness, one in the high Court of heaven, of which the Lord speaketh in his answer to Solomon's prayer, Then will I hear from heaven and forgive their sins. (all authentical pardons are coined there; the stamping of them is a part of prerogative royal; and it is no less then high treason in the Pope to have his mint of Indulgences going at Rome) Another in the Court of conscience, spoken of in the epistle to the Hebrews, The worshippers once purged should have had no more conscience of sins: it may safely be asserted that forgiveness is certainly passed in the Court of heaven, whensoever Christ is received by faith; according to that, Be it known unto you, that through this man, meaning Christ, is preached unto you the forgiveness of sins; and by him all that believe are justified from all things, from which they could not be justified by the law of Moses. Yet may there for some space of time after this, not determinable by any man, be wanting a seal upon earth to this pardon; and the believer continue not so fully acquitted in the court of his own conscience, as to be assured of forgiveness till the Lord hath taught him by experience to see and acknowledge, that assurance of pardon is a free gift of his, as well as faith, or pardon itself.

§. 7. In the third place, To be followers of God as dear children, tender-hearted, forgiving one another, even as God for Christ's sake hath forgiven us. We should

First, Forgive one another. The equity and necessity whereof are both exceedingly pressed by our Savior, to the end we might not look at it either as unreasonable, or as arbitrary. The former by his parable in the eighteenth of Matthew. The wrongs we suffer compared to the sins we commit, are but as an hundred pence to ten thousand talents; great odds both in number and weight: for number, ten thousand to one hundred; and for weight, the one sort are talents, the other pence. What more equal then that we who have so many talents forgiven us, should be ready to forgive so few pence? The latter in an express declaration annexed to the Lord's prayer. If ye forgive men their trespasses, your heavenly Father will also forgive you; But if ye forgive not men their trespasses, neither will your Father forgive your trespasses. Whence it followeth, that persons addicted to revenge, so oft as they repeat that petition Forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive them that trespass against us, do in effect make a dreadful imprecation against themselves; and fetch down a curse from heaven instead of a blessing. For he that saith with his tongue, Lord, I pray thee forgive me, as I forgive others; but meanwhile saith in his heart, I cannot, I will not forgive such an one, doth he not by consequence say to God, Forgive not me? doth he not pronounce himself unworthy of pardon, and in effect subscribe to the sentence of his own condemnation? Yet alas how common a sin is revenge! As the heart in the natural body is the first member that liveth, and the last that dies: so revenge in the heart is a lust that soonest appeareth in children, and is often longest ere it be healed in the regenerate. Molanus telleth us that the Christians of old in Austin's time, were wont to beat upon their breasts in a deep sense of their sins, at the Nobis in the beginning of the forementioned Petition, Forgive Us: well may the most of men nowadays beat their breasts for grief, and hang down their heads for shame at the Nos in the latter clause, As we forgive. For how few are there that do it aright? Seeing that,

§. 8. Secondly, we should forgive others, as God for Christ's sake hath forgiven us. to wit,

First, Heartily without dissembling. Christ denounceth a terrible threatening against such, as do not from their hearts forgive everyone his brother. It is not a making a fair show in outward carriage, not binding up, as it were, the broken bones of peace with good looks and sweet words, that God accepteth, if the heart be full of wormwood and gall. Joab kissed, and stabbed, Judas kissed and betrayed. Hail Master, said the one to Christ; Art thou well my brother? said the other to Amasa. How hateful is such dissimulation to God and man? Forgiveness is a fruit of love: My little children, saith S^t John, let us not love, so say I, let us not forgive in word and tongue, but in deed and in truth.

Secondly, Speedily without delay. Be like God, ready to pardon. As in bestowing, he doubleth his benefit that giveth betimes: so in pardoning, he forgiveth twice that forgiveth with speed; his forgiveness receiveth a double welcome, and shall have a double reward. It is not for Christians to harbor animosities in the course of their lives, and think to salve it by saying we forgive all the world, when they lie upon their death beds. For that may be applied to pardoning, which Divines usually say of repenting, True forgiveness is never too late, but late forgiveness is seldom true. Wherefore let not the sun go down upon your wrath, as Paul adviseth his Ephesians. If that which was but a mote at first, be watered and cherished with the fresh suspicions of some few days, it will turn to a beam, and go near to put out the eye of love.

Thirdly, Frequently without stint or limitation. God multiplieth pardon; so should we. When ye stand praying, forgive, saith Christ; and Paul bids us Pray continually. We should therefore be inclined to forgive continually; and to make actual performance whensoever there is an opportunity. Peter thought he had offered fair when he asked, How oft shall my brother sin against me, and I forgive him? adding till seven times, as making account that surely that was often enough. But our Savior maketh nothing of that number; would by no means have him stay there. Jesus saith unto him, I say not unto thee till seven times, but until seventy times seven: putting a certain definite number for an indefinite, and thereby intending to teach that his followers should forgive Toties quoties so oft as they shall be trespassed against.

§. 9. Fourthly, Thoroughly, as without excepting, so without remembering any offense. God excepteth not any of our sins when he affordeth us pardoning grace. But if we confess, he is faithful & just to forgive us our sins, & to cleanse us from all unrighteousness. Should he reserve but one unforgiven, that one would sink our souls to hell. It is our duty to imitate him herein. Forgive, saith Christ, if ye have ought against any. Whoever the person, and whatever the thing be, you must forgive. One of the Evangelists setteth down the petition thus, in our Savior's form of prayer, Forgive us oursins, for we also forgive everyone that is indebted to us. It must then be performed without excepting any either person or essence. As also without remembering any. God doth so forgive our sins as not to keep a register of them. I, even I am he, saith the Lord, that blottethout thy transgressions for mine own sake, and will not remember thy sins. Yet with us what more frequent then saying, I forgive such a man, such a wrong; but shall never forget it or him? A distinction that came not out of Christ's school, but Satan's mint. Paul was of a different spirit; witness that remarkable passage of his to the Galatians, Brethren, I beseech you be as I am, for I am as ye are; ye have not injured me at all. Where he seemeth to desire that every member of the Church in Galatia would be to him as an Alter ego, another self, seeing he was affected as another self to each of them. But had they not injured him? yes very much, in preferring the false Apostles before him, questioning his doctrine, yea becoming his enemies, and that for telling them the truth; yet behold him professing here, Ye have not injured me at all, because these wrongs were as no wrongs in his estimation, it was not his purpose to impute them; he speaks as one that had really forgotten them by reason of his resolution to forgive them. There is I confess, a kind of remembrance not inconsistent with true forgiveness, when prudent men remember offenses and offenders in cautelam, so as to beware for the future of exposing themselves to the like injuries: But Christians ought not to remember in vindictam, so as to revenge themselves upon the delinquents for wrongs done in time past. I say to revenge; for otherwise a Christian may seek to right himself in a legal way, yea and to bring offenders to condign punishment; still retaining a charitable mind towards them: even as God, though he have forgiven justified persons, may notwithstanding and often doth chastise them with his fatherly corrections.

EXERCITATION 5. The latter clauses of Exod. 34. 7. so translated and expounded as to contain an eighth branch of divine goodness, viz. Clemency in correcting. Equity in visiting iniquities of the fathers upon the children. Clemency in stopping at the third and fourth generation. A lesson for Magistrates. A speech of our Q. Elisabeth. God's proclamation in Exod. 34. Improved by Moses in Numb. 14.

§. 1. THE following clauses have somewhat more of difficulty in them then any of the former, as being variously rendered and expounded by Interpreters. The most read as we do, That will by no means clear the guilty, visiting &c. But amongst these that do agree in the translation there is some difference about the meaning of the words. The major part of that combination apply them wholly to the Justice of God in taking vengeance upon obstinate sinners. Some few (whereof M^r Ainsworth is one) respecting the scope of the whole context, which is to set forth the Goodness of God, consider this also as relating to that. His words are these.

This his Justice upon the wicked is a part of his goodness towards his people, as it is said, The just shall rejoice, when he sees the vengeance. Heshall wash his feet in the blood of the wicked.

A gloss that may receive confirmation from certain passages in Psalm one hundred thirty six. Where the destruction of opposite Princes is recorded as an evidence of God's mercy to his Church. He slew famous kings, for his mercy endureth forever. Sihon king of the Amorites, for his mercy endureth forever. And Og the king of Bashan, for his mercy endureth forever. As also from that in the first of Nahum, The Lord is good, a strong hold in the day of trouble; and he knoweth them that trust in him: But with an overflowing flood he will make an utter end of the place thereof, that is, the oppressing city Nineveh, and darkness shall pursue his enemies.

§. 2. But the learned Critick Ludovicus de Dieu, considering that in other places, by name Zechar. 5. 3. the word Nakah signifieth to make void, and to cut off, by altering the translation of these words, puts them into a posture of looking directly at the goodness of God, and not with an oblique glance. He renders them thus, Evacuating, cutting off or destroying, he will not evacuate, cut off, or destroy; visiting the iniquities of the fathers upon the children, unto the third and fourth generation: making this the sense,

So great is God's goodness, that even when he is angry and punisheth, yet he will not utterly overthrow: He visiteth indeed the sins of the fathers upon the children, but it is to the third and fourth generation only, not forever.

Now according to this interpretation (which for ought I know may well be received) the expressions import an eighth branch of divine goodness, to wit, Clemency in correcting, here set forth by a general declaration, and by a particular instance.

First by a general declaration in these words, VENAKKEH LO IENAKKEH, destroying he will not destroy, that is not altogether, not so destroy as to make a full end, according to the expression in Jeremy. Thus in like forms of speech, Delivering thou hast not delivered, that is, say our Translatours, Neither hast thou delivered this people at all. Redeeming he cannot redeem, that is, say they, None of them can by any means redeem his brother. Proportionably here, Destroying he will not destroy, that is, God will not at all, he will not by any means utterly destroy his people, however he may correct and chasten for some time. Suitable whereunto is that in Amos his Prophecy, Behold the eyes of the Lord God are upon the sinful kingdom; and I will destroy it from off the face of the earth, saving that I will not utterly destroy the house of Jacob, saith the Lord.

§. 3. This sense is exceedingly favored by a parallel place in Jeremy, I am with thee, saith the Lord, to save thee. Though I make a full end of all Nations whither I have scattered thee, yet will I not make a full end of thee; but I will correct thee in measure. Then followeth, VENAKKEH LO ANAKKECA, which Pagnin rendereth, And destroying I will not destroy thee. It may further, and yet more strongly be confirmed by a passage in the fourteenth of Numbers. The hand of faith having once fastened upon God, will not readily let go his hold. Moses had taken fast hold of that discovery, which the Lord was pleased to make of himself in this place of Exodus, and accordingly upon occasion improveth it, by pleading with him for Israel's preservation from a total ruin; which was then deserved and threatened, making use to that end of those very terms the discovery was made in, and among others of those now under debate, as most argumentative in the sense contended for. It is as if he had said,

Wilt thou, O Lord, bring an utter destruction upon this whole people? What shall then become of that goodness of thine which it pleased thee to proclaim to thy servant in Sinai? If thou beest resolved to punish them, yet remember what thou hast said, Destroying he will not destroy. If their iniquities must be visited upon their children, O let it not be forever, Lord, but only to the third and fourth generation, as thou hast spoken.

Whereas from the words in that other sense, which is commonly received, Moses could not possibly have drawn so strong a plea. For if God will by no means clear the guilty; all Israel having at that time contracted a deep and deadly guilt, what inference could be made from thence, but that all Israel were of necessity to perish?

§. 4. Secondly by a particular instance contained in the last clause, Visiting the iniquities of the fathers upon the children, and upon the children's children, unto the third, and fourth generation. For the clearer explication whereof, it will be requisite to demonstrate that God in so doing exerciseth both equity, and clemency, lest either should be doubted of. Concerning the former; Although by an express law Magistrates be forbidden to put children to death for their parents sins; yet God, who is author of life and death, hath reserved to himself a liberty of so doing, whensoever it pleaseth him, by reason of his supreme dominion over all: and therefore for him to inflict inferior temporal punishments in that case, cannot but be accounted just. The rather if we take into consideration that children may be accounted part of the parents themselves: for as a man's wife is himself divided, so his children are himself multiplied. However they are undoubtedly part of their parents goods, and so esteemed. When God had once said concerning Job, Behold, all that he hath is in thy power, Satan by virtue of that Commission slew not his cattle and servants only, but his sons and daughters. And when he had determined concerning Achan, Lethim, and all that he hath be burnt with fire, the Israelites in obedience to that command burnt his children, together with his other substance.

§. 5. As to the latter, God's visiting on this wise will be found an act of clemency, as well as of equity, if it be considered,

First, That it is but to the third and fourth generation, not to all generations, and forever, according to the Psalms expostulation, Wilt thou be angry with us forever? wilt thou draw out shine anger to all generations? Not to do thus is mercy, witness that in Nehemiah, For thy great mercies sake thou didst not utterly consume them, nor forsake them: for thou art a gracious and merciful God.

Secondly, That all sorts of sinners are not so punished, but only or mainly such as are guilty of the most heinous provocations; chiefly Idolaters and worshippers of false God's. For the second commandment (which is the first place of Scripture wherein we meet with this expression) hath it thus, I the Lord thy God am a jealous God, visiting the iniquities of the fathers upon the children, unto the third and fourth generation of them that hate me. that is, of them that manifest their hatred of me by committing spiritual adultery with Idols, which, as some affirm is the most proper and only notion of that phrase throughout the Scripture.

Thirdly, That it is seldom done, but where children tread in their fathers steps, and are guilty of the same sins with their progenitours. Then no wonder if what we find in Isaiah's prophesy be accomplished to the full, Behold, it is written before me; I will not keepsilence, but will recompense, even recompense into their bosom your iniquities, and the iniquities of your fathers together, saith the Lord, which have burnt incense upon the mountains, and blasphemed me upon the hills: therefore will I measure their former work into their bosom.

Fourthly, that it is never done but with merciful intentions; namely to restrain men from sin upon this ground, because their children, whom they affect so dearly are like to smart for it. He is a truly miserable heir that inheriteth his fathers sins with his lands: the one will quickly eat out all, and more then all the comfort he can expect from the other. Now there is scarce any penalty more grievous in Chrysostom's opinion, then for a man to see misery brought upon his offspring, and that for his sake.

§. 6. Rulers should imitate God herein, by not dealing against malefactors to the utmost of rigor, but exercising clemency in their corrections: not writing all their laws in blood, as Draco of old is said to have done; not dismembering where a plaster will suffice, nor applying scorpions where a rod will serve the turn. Humanity is a manlike, cruelty a diabolical principle. In wrath God always remembereth mercy, so should they of whom it is written, I have said ye are God's. The sword of his justice is always furbished with the oil of loving kindness; so should theirs. Our Queen Elizabeth is reported to have professed, That next to the Scriptures she knew no book, which had done her so much good, as the often reading of Seneca's treatise De clementia.

§. 7. To shut up this so long discourse with a review of Moses his example touched upon before in the third paragraph; Look as some kind of artificers after long poring upon a piece of black work, finding a dimness in their sight, are wont to take an emerald, or some other green thing, by the verdure whereof their eyes may be refreshed and their spirits cheered: so believers, when puzzled & dulled with the consideration of sad events, should for their spiritual relief make use of this glorious proclamation made by God himself concerning his goodness and the several branches thereof; which are all cheering to faith. Moses did so in the fourteenth of Numbers. The spies were then newly returned with their dismal report; the people fallen into their two epidemical diseases, rebelling and murmuring, excepting only Caleb and Joshua. Hereupon God being highly provoked threateneth to disinherit them, verse. 12. to kill them all as one man, verse. 15. It was now time for Moses, who loved them as his own soul to bestir himself, to become their advocate, and beg pardon on their behalf, as he doth in the 17, 18 and 19 verses, grounding his plea upon two topicks: the former God's power in these words, I beseech thee let the power of my Lord be great. Let it be, that is, be manifested, and appear to be great. But what hath power to do with pardon? Much every way. Forgiveness is an act of potency as well as of clemency. We know that in all Civil states pardoning such as the law hath sentenced is a prerogative belonging to the Supreme Power. His second topick is God's truth engaging him to make good what had formerly been proclaimed by himself concerning his goodness in Moses his hearing. To an active believer, such as Moses approved himself in his whole course, every revelation of God is like a clear and distinct voice uttered in an arched vault, which resoundeth again and again. God hath spoken once, saith David, twice have I heard this, that power belongeth unto God. Accordingly Moses, as he heard this admirable discovery of divine goodness, when the Lord first uttered it on mount Sinai: so now he heareth it over again, and upon this signal occasion maketh a due improvement of it, by founding his plea for Israel upon it. According as thou hast spoken saying, The Lord is longsuffering and of great mercy, forgiving iniquity and transgression, &c.

EXERCITATION 6. Job 11. 7, 8, 9. expounded of divine Greatness. Three reasons of that Exposition, with the resolution of a question about it. The height of God's universal, unaccountable, omnipotent Sovereignty proved and improved.

§. 1. Zophar in Job, being about (as I now am) to set forth the greatness of God, premiseth this interrogation, Canst thou by searching find out God? to imply the truth of what is elsewhere clearly expressed by the Prophet David, Great is the Lord, and greatly to be praised; and his greatness is unsearchable. It could not otherwise be His. For as one saith well, Non esset Deus magnus, si non esset major captu nostro. Such is the shallowness of man's understanding, that God should not be really great if he were not greater then our capacities. The description he maketh thereof followeth in these words. It is as high as heaven, what canst thou do? deeper then hell, what canst thou know? The measure thereof is longer then the earth, and broader then the sea. Where by height Zophar seemeth to understand the Omnipotent Sovereignty, by depth the omniscient wisdom, by length the everlasting duration, by breadth the omnipresent immensity of God. The grounds of this interpretation are chiefly three.

First the dimensions here enumerated are those whereby we are wont to estimate the greatness of things: and I find all the forementioned Attributes spoken of as branches of divine greatness in other places. Omnipotent Sovereignty; Great is the Lord, and of great power. Omniscient understanding. God is greater then our heart, and knoweth all things. Everlasting duration; Behold, God is great, and we know him not, neither can the number of his years be searched out. Omnipresent immensity; Great is our God above all gods. Who is able to build him an house, seeing the heaven and heaven of heavens cannot contain him?

Secondly, each particular dimension is elsewhere applied to these very attributes, though some with more clearness then others. Height to God's Sovereignty. He that is higher then the highest regardeth, and there be higher then they. Depth to his Omniscience. O the depth of the riches both of the wisdom and knowledge of God! Length to his Eternity. He asked life, and thou gavest it to him; even length of days forever and ever. Which Calvin and the Chaldee paraphrase, apply to Christ, understanding thereby the eternal duration of his kingdom. Lastly breadth to his Omnipresence, but covertly in that of Isaiah, The glorious Lord will be unto us a place of broad rivers and streams; to signify that protection and safety, which his presence with his Church in every place affords to all the members thereof, like a broad river encompassing a fenced town on every side.

Thirdly, Me thinks there is somewhat expressed in Zophar's speech which as to the two former particulars, tends to this interpretation. For having said, It is as high as heaven, he presently adds, What canst thou do? meaning perhaps what are thy weak abilities to his omnipotence? He in regard of his Sovereign power can do all things; but thou, alas! what canst thou do? And after affirming, It is deeper then hell, he subjoineth, what canst thou know? as if he had said, what are thy shallow apprehensions to the depth of his thoughts? He in regard of his omniscient understanding knoweth all things, but thou, poor man, What canst thou know?

§. 2. If it be asked, why I expound all these clauses of God, seeing the particles It and Thereof (It is high as heaven, The measure thereof) seem to relate unto somewhat else. My answer is, that Expositors differ much about this very thing, and according to their several apprehensions translate the words after a different manner. The vulgar Latin and our old English translations carry all to Almighty God, who was mentioned in the verse before, Canst thou find out the Almighty? reading it thus, He is higher then heaven, what art thou able to do? His length exceeds the length of the earth &c. Others considering that divers words in the original text being feminine will not agree in construction with Eloah and Saddai, whereby God is there expressed, have therefore looked back to the sixth verse for an antecedent, where they meet with 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 Wisdom, and expound all of it, inserting the word Sapientia into their Latin translations, as Oecolampadius and Junius do. But for my part, there is I conceive a word nearer hand, which will serve the turn better, and that is 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 Perfection. Canst thou find out the Almighty unto perfection? It, that is, the Perfection of God is as high as heaven &c. And herein I join with Castellio, whose translation is fully squared to this sense; for so he readeth the place, Tunc Dei intima pervestigat, aut ipsam adeo perfectionem Omnipotentis invenias? Quae cum coelum altitudine adaequet, quid ages? &c. Now I interpret the words, as before, because however they be read, whether God, or wisdom, or Perfection be taken for the antecedent, it cometh to one and the same issue, for the Wisdom of God is himself; and his Perfection comprehends not Wisdom only, but all his other excellencies whatsoever; insomuch as Lessius entitleth his book concerning the Attributes, De perfectionibus divinis. The way thus cleared, I now proceed without further interruption to single out the particular dimensions, and discourse of them in their order.

§. 3. Seeing all divine perfections far transcend human capacities, the safest way, as I humbly conceive, for us to make a due estimate concerning the height of God's sovereignty is to compare it with that of earthly potentates, which is within the compass and reach of our understandings. Verily it is not without cause that S. Paul styles him the blessed and only potentate, the King of kings and Lord of lords; that Moses, Melchizedek and Abram, entitle him the most high God four times in one chapter. For upon search it will appear that his Sovereignty excels that of the high and mighty ones upon earth in point of Extensiveness, of Unaccountableness, and of Almightyness.

I. In point of extensiveness His kingdom ruleth over all. The whole earth and sea, which make but one globe, is to the Universe but as a little central point; the mightiest potentate hath no more but his share in that little. Whereupon Seneca bringeth in his wise & virtuous man with this censure and sarcasme in his mouth. Is this that Point, which so many Nations of the world do so strive to divide among themselves by fire and sword? O how ridiculous are the bounds of mortal men! All that in which they sail to and fro, manage their wars, and set up their petty kingdoms is but a Point. Whereas the Sovereignty of God extendeth itself to the whole earth and sea, yea to heaven; and the heaven of heavens, giving laws not only to the visible host of sun, moon, and stars, but also to the invisible host of Angels, who are said to excell in strength, and to do his commandments, hearkening unto the voice of his word. Yea there is not a Devil in hell that can go beyond the length of his chain, for even those legions of darkness are, though much against their wills, subjected to the empire of the father of lights.

Yea whereas the dominion of worldly Potentates reacheth but to the outward man, and their laws cannot directly oblige the conscience, so as to bring upon it a guilt binding over the soul to death; his do. And in this respect S^t James telleth us that there is one law-giver, one and but one, who is able to save and to destroy. The style which Paul giveth earthly governors is masters according to the flesh; but Moses calleth God, the God of the spirits of all flesh; to imply that however there be many, who lord it sufficiently over the flesh and outward man, there is no Lord of our spirits but God alone, who only is greater then our hearts, as S^t John speaketh. This made the good Emperor Maximilian the second say, That whosoever assumed to himself a power over the consciences of men, set himself down in the throne of God. His son Rodolphus who succeeded him in the Empire resolved to walk in his fathers steps, yet was once unhappily wrought upon by the subtlety of the Jesuits to give way to the passing of an Edict for shutting up the Protestants Churches during some time. But that very day news was brought him that Alba Regia the chief city he had in Hungary was taken by the Turks. Whereupon in great astonishment he is reported to have said, I expected that some such mischief as this should befall me; seeing this day I began to usurp the government belonging to God, which is of consciences.

§. 4. II. In point of unaccountableness. The greatest Princes upon earth do, or should govern by laws, to the making whereof others concur as well as they. But our God is a law to himself. He only can write upon his imperial Edicts, My reason for it is my will. Yet because of the holiness of his nature his will is always most just; so as he never enacted anything, but what is in itself equal and reasonable, although perhaps to our shallow understandings it may appear otherwise: as to our eyes turrets and steeples how upright soever, if their height be exceeding great, do often seem crooked, and look as if they stood awry; which should deter us from censuring any of his Decrees, or Dispensations, as some great but unhallowed wits are wont to do; of whom Luther maketh this sober and sad complaint,

They require that God act jure humano, according to what the sons of men do commonly account right and just, or otherwise that he would cease to be God. Tell not them of the secrets of his Sovereign Majesty; let him render a reason of his being God, if he speak, do, or will anything, but what appeareth equal to men. Proud flesh cannot vouchsafe the God of heaven so much honor as to believe anything to be good or right, which is spoken or acted above what the Codex of Justinian, or the fifthbook of Aristotle's Ethics defineth to be just.

I confess indeed that God often condescendeth in his holy word to give men a reason of some proceedings, and to clear them up to our understandings: but it is more then he needeth to do, more then we ought to expect in all cases. It will therefore be our wisdom to forbear playing the Critics upon his decrees and administrations; considering that he alone is < in non-Latin alphabet › , unaccountable, not to be called in question for any of his doings: and always remembering that of Paul, Nay but, O man, who art thou thatrepliest against God? Hath not the potter power over the clay? Together with that of Job, God is greater then man: why dostthou strive against him? for he giveth not account of any of his matters.

§. 5. Thirdly, In point of Almightyness. In the Princes of this world ‹ in non-Latin alphabet › and ‹ in non-Latin alphabet › , Authority and Power are often severed: their authority may be great, when their power to manage it is but small. David was King, yet could not act as he desired, for the sons of Zerviah were too strong for him. But in God they always go hand in hand for the accomplishing of what his wisdom hath designed. Therefore I called it Omnipotent Sovereignty. I know, saith Job, that thou canst do everything, and that no thought can be withholden from thee, meaning that God cannot be hindered in the execution, or bringing to pass of whatsoever he hath in the thoughts and purposes of his heart. The Angel to Mary, With God nothingshall be impossible, Paul to the Ephesians, He is able to do exceeding abundantlyabove all that we ask or think. Other Scriptures may seem opposite to these, but are not. God that cannot lie.He cannot deny himself, saith S^t Paul. For answer to these and the like instances, we must distinguish of Impossibles. They are of two sorts, Impossibilia naturae, and Impossibilia naturâ. First there are divers things impossible indeed to nature, such as in the ordinary course of secondary causes cannot be done, which yet to God are most feaseable; for example, working of miracles, giving sight to such as were born blind, raising up children to Abraham out of the very stones in the street. Secondly, Some other things are impossible not to nature only, but in nature; and that either in reference to the nature of God, when they are such as argue imperfection in the doer, as to sin, and to die: or in respect to the nature of the things themselves, when they are such as imply contradiction, as for a creature to be made independent. The former of these God himself cannot do; not through want, but through height and abundance of power. He cannot sin, lie or deny himself, and that because he is Omnipotent: it is for impotent creatures to be liable unto such kind of imperfections as these are. Neither can he do the latter: yet is it not through any defect of power in God, that such things cannot be done, but through want of capacity in the things, which are simply impossible. So then, when we ascribe Almightyness to God, the meaning is, that where ever divine Understanding can be a principle of direction, and divine will a principle of injunction, there divine power can show itself an able principle of execution. Or in plainer terms, That God can do whatsoever he will: and the only reason why things that do either argue imperfection, or imply contradiction fall not within the compass of his power, is because they are such, as for want of goodness or entity cannot become objects of his will.

§. 6. Now if the perfection of God be so very high in regard of his Omnipotent sovereignty, think of thine own lowness, (O man, or rather, O worm, and no man) and be confounded within thyself, upon comparing thy servile condition by nature with his Sovereignty; thy imbecility with his Omnipotence. Adam indeed, so long as he stood, was an universal Monarch, having dominion both over himself, and over the creatures: But every man since the fall is a slave born, a servant to divers lusts and pleasures: Neither is there any way for getting out of this estate, but getting into Christ, who restoreth all such as close with him to a spiritual Sovereignty, Making them kings to God and his father; and upholding them with his royal Spirit, as some read that in the Psalm. Till then what are whole Nations of men, but, to speak in the Prophets language, as the drops of a bucket, which in their fall are so licked up by the dust of the earth as they are no more discernible; or as the small dust of the balance, which is of no moment at all towards turning of the beam one way or other? And if Nations be so inconsiderable, what shall we say of particular persons? I will suppose a mighty Prince, but an unbeliever styled your Highness, or your Majesty at every word; and be bold to present him upon this occasion with Zophars interrogatory, What canst thou do? When God leaveth thee to thyself, how impotent are thy best abilities, as to the things of a better world? Seeing they are such as no natural man can either receive, for they are foolishness to him, and must be spiritually discerned; or close with when they are discovered: for the carnal mind is enmity against God, it is not subject to the law of God, nor indeed can be.

May these and the like considerations work so kindly upon us, as Canutus his not being able to set bounds to the ocean did upon him. It is an history worth the remembering. This Canutus was one of the ancient kings of England, who really to refute the flatterers by whom he was told that all things were at his command, caused his royal Pavilion to be set upon the sands, when the tide was coming in, then said to the sea, Thou belongest to my dominion, and this earth which my throne standeth upon is mine. I charge thee therefore not to flow in upon my ground, nor to wet the feet of thy Sovereign Lord.

But in vain, for the tide kept its course, and came up to his feet, without doing him any reverence. Whereupon he removed further off, and said,

Be it known to all men in the world that the power of Princes is but a vain empty thing, and that none fully deserveth the name of a Sovereign Lord, but he at whose beck heaven and earth yield their obedience, who can say to the sea, hitherto shalt thou come, but no further; and here shall thy proud waves be staid. It is also reported that after this he never put on his crown more.

O that all the sons of men would accordingly learn from this branch of divine greatness never to boast more of their own abilities! but to throw down all their crowns at the feet of Christ, who, though omnipotence be incommunicable, leaveth upon such as receive him by faith some impressions and footsteps of it. For whereas divine Almightyness standeth in two things especially, to wit, in God's being able to do all things that are regularly possible, and his not being able to do any sinful thing; there are some prints of both upon Christians, I can do all things, saith S^t Paul, through Christ that strengtheneth me. And whosoever is born of God, saith S^t John, cannot sin, because he is born of God.

EXERCITATION 7. The depth of divine Omniscience seen in discerning the deep things of man, yea of Satan, yea of God. Our Nescience discovered and acknowledged. The longitude of God's perfection stated. Eternity proper to him. Not assumed by, or ascribed to men without blasphemy.

§. 1. The second dimension is the depth of God's Omniscience, which appears in that he is able to found and fadome the deepest things, whether of man, or of Satan, or of the Divine essence and will.

First, There are deep things of men. Their words are deep: and again, The words of a man's mouth are as deep waters. Their hearts and counsels much more. Both the inward thoughts of everyone of them, and the heart is deep. So David of the churches enemies. Counsel in the heart of man is like a deep water. So Solomon of wise sages. who are therefore compared by a learned writer to coffers with double bottoms, which when others look into, being opened, they see not all they hold on the sudden and at once. But these are no depths to God, to whom David said, There is not a word in my tongue, but lo, O Lord, thou knowest it altogether. And elsewhere, The Lord searcheth all hearts, and understandeth all the imaginations of the thoughts. Neither is it the least act of God's goodness to mankind, that he is pleased to reserve the searching of hearts to himself, as part of his own prerogative royal, because if men were able to dive into one another's thoughts, there would be no quiet in the world; no peaceable living one by another, in regard of that hidden hypocrisy and malice which lurks in the most.

§. 2. Secondly, Deep things of Satan, spoken of in the Revelation; As many as have not this doctrine, and which have not known the depths of Satan, as they speak. Seducers are wont to boast of their mysterious tenets, and to speak of them as great depths, not to be fadomed by common Christians. Christ in that Epistle of his to the church of Thyatira, makes use of their own term, Depths as they speak; but so as to brand them for Depths of Satan fetched from hell, whereas they perhaps held them forth as new truths, glorious lights and revelations from above. Thus popery is a mystery, but a mystery of iniquity, as Paul styleth it, and Socinianism a depth, but a Depth of Satan. There is not a serpentine winding or turning in any of those corrupt opinions, which pester and poison the Church of Christ at this day, but God seeth and knoweth it, how hard soever it be for his servants to discover and refute. To these may be added all those other hellish designs which go under other names in the Scripture, as The wiles of the devil, and his devices; all which dark secrets are not in the dark to divine understanding. And he that now sees them all will one day reckon with Satan for them, yea, and sink him so much the deeper into hell, by how much his depths have done more mischief upon earth. I say into hell, where he shall have those agents and factours by whom he now carrieth on his cursed work, for his cursed companions to eternity, according to that in the Apocalypse, The devil that deceived them was cast into the lake of fire and brimstone, where the beast, and the false prophet are; and shall be tormented day and night forever and ever.

§. 3. Thirdly, Deep things of God, of the divine Essence and Will, concerning which the Apostle saith, The Spirit searcheth all things, yea the deep things of God. Things which the clearest understandings of men and Angels entertain with amazement: we cannot but bewray our balbutiencie when we treat of One in Three, and Three in one; such a mysterious gulf is the Trinity: so when we discourse either of the Personal Union, or the Theandrical acts of Christ. And no wonder, seeing we meet with such secrets and depths even in God's revealed Will, The greatest divines have acknowledged many 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, Things hard to be understood; yea, diverse 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, knots that cannot be untied, till there either come further light into this world, or we be translated into a better. Such as every modest Christian will be ready to say of, as the learned Cajetan did concerning the reason of that difference, which in the Hebrew Text is observable betwixt the title of Psalm 121. and those other Psalms of Degrees, Reservo Spiritui Sancto, I reserve the solution of this and that doubt to the holy Spirit. For to him and the other Divine Persons such things are no riddles; though to us they be dark and Enigmatical, yea, perhaps unsearchable. Although we ever and anon meet with cause of crying out as Saint Paul once did, How unsearchable are his judgments, and his ways past finding out? Let us always remember and believe that of S^t. James, known unto God are all his works from the beginning of the world.

§. 4. Well may the prudent consideration of what hath been said concerning the depth of Divine Omniscience put the wisest of men in mind of their Nescience; keep them from leaning to their own understandings; and give them just occasion to think of an answer to Zophars question, What canst thou know? If the secrets of nature do so puzzle thee, what canst thou know concerning those much greater secrets of grace and glory? of which Luther very excellently, Philosophy receives them not, faith doth. The authority of Scripture is greater by far then the capacity of our wit; and the Holy Ghost then Aristotle. Well may the depth of Divine understanding, which the Psalmist saith is infinite, Great is the Lord, and of great power; his understanding is infinite, cause us to reflect upon the shallowness, the finiteness, yea, the folly of our own. For if the foolishness of God be wiser then men, as the Apostle telleth us it is, what is his wisdom? Add if the wisdom of this world be foolishness with God, what is its folly? No wonder if one learned man wrote a book of the vanity of Sciences, others of the Nullity, Quod nihil scitur. If the wise heathen professed, the only thing he knew was this that he knew not anything at all. If Frier Paul of Venice the judicious author of that excellent history of the Council of Trent was wont to say. The more we study, the more we see how little or nothing we understand; yea, if more knowing men then any of these abounded in acknowledgements of their own ignorance. Asaph, So foolish was I and ignorant; I was as a beast before thee. Agur, Surely I am more brutish then any man, and have not the understanding of a man. I neither learned wisdom, nor have the knowledge of the holy. So true is that of our great Apostle, If any man think that he knows anything, he knows nothing yet as he ought to know.

§. 5. Next followeth the third dimension, which is Longitude, in this expression, The measure thereof is longer then the earth. For the better stating whereof let it be considered, that whereas the word here translated Measure relateth not to extension only, but also to duration; and the earth hath a double longitude, one of space, the other of continuance; which the Scripture taketh special notice of in other texts, as in that of Ecclesiastes, One generation passeth away, and another generation cometh: but the earth abideth forever. I conceive the latter may here be alluded to, viz. the earths long continuance, as in some low proportion fit to resemble that everlasting duration of God, which cannot be adequately represented by any creature. Sure I am by the Ancient of days in Daniel the eternal Jehovah is described; by length of days in wisdoms right hand, of which in the Proverbs, many Interpreters understand the blessings of Eternity: And this very place of Job is expounded by Gregory in this sense. His words are, Terrâ longior, quia creaturae modum perennitatesuae Aeternitatis excedit.

All creatures had an original, all but some few shall have a dissolution. Of the Creator, and of him only is that of the Psalmist verified, From everlasting to everlasting thou art God. He gave beginning to all things, but was himself without a beginning; is the end for which all things were made, but himself without end. The best of men, alas! are but of yesterday, and know not where they shall be tomorrow, according to that of Bildad, We are but of yesterday, and know nothing, because our days upon earth are a shadow. His being God from everlasting to everlasting should encourage us to walk in the way everlasting, having this everlasting consolation and good hope through grace, that he will save us with an everlasting salvation; because he wanteth neither power to effect it, for his strength is everlasting; nor will, for his mercy is so too, as David testifieth, The mercy of the Lord is from everlasting to everlasting upon them that fear him.

§. 6. The more to blame were some overweening sons of Adam for daring to assume unto themselves, and ascribe to other persons and things this incommunicable perfection of God. Of old the heathenish people of Rome were wont to style their Emperors, yea and their city Eternal. Concerning which practice of theirs, two ancient writers, Jerome and Prosper interpret those names of blasphemy mentioned in the Revelation. They accounted such no less than blasphemers as called Rome the Eternal city, and saluted the Emperor thereof by the title of your Eternity. A thing usually done among them. Yea this Calenture had taken the brains of some even amongst the Christian Emperors: so exceedingly contagious are words and examples that contain blasphemy in them. Ammianus Marcellinus reporteth of Constantius an Arian Prince, that being puffed up by the ostentation of his flatterers, and the prosperous success of his affairs, he was come to that height of insolence as to presume he should never die, and in his writings to style himself Our Eternity. His words are these, Immunem se deinde fore ab omni mortalitatis incommodo fidenter existimans, confestim à justitia declinavit ità intemperanter, ut Aeternitatem meam aliquoties subjeceret ipse dictando. Yea Justinian himself feared not to say concerning some of his Edicts, Nostra sanxit Aeternitas.

EXERCITATION 8. Divine Immensity shadowed out by the breadth of the Sea. Divine Omnipresence cleared and vindicated. The proposal hereof as an antidote against sinning in secret. Five practical Corollaries from the greatness of God in general.

§. 1. THE fourth dimension is still behind in that clause, Broader then the Sea. It may be thought to relate unto divine Omnipresence and Immensity; which is, though not set forth to the life, yet some way shadowed out by the breadth of the Sea: In that the vast ocean stretcheth its arms far and near (so we call them arms of the Sea) to the embracing of certain shores, very much distant each from other; and is in that respect in a manner omnipresent with the several parts of the earth, which it is united to in one Globe. So, and much more then so, the Immensity of God's essence is such as to render him actually, and at all times present with every creature in the upper and lower world; for which cause he is said to fill the heaven and the earth. To a certain Philosopher, who asked one of our profession, Where is God? the Christian answered, Let me first understand from thee where he is not, to intimate his being present everywhere. Which he is, not only by his power and providence, as some would confine it, but also by his essence; according to the true meaning of that which Paul said at Athens concerning God, He is not far from every one of us. For in him we live and move, and have our being. He said not (as Chrysostom observed) By him we live and move, but in him; to note the intimacy of his presence, and that with all sorts of things, whether they be such as have life, or motion without life, or barely Being without motion. Yea where-ever they be, whether in heaven, or earth, or hell, as the Psalmist expressly, If I ascend up into heaven, thou art there; if I make my bed in hell, behold thou art there; If I take the wings of the morning, and dwell in the uttermost parts of the Sea; even there shall thy hand lead me. To which accords that of Seneca, Turnthy self which way thou wilt, thou shalt there see him meeting thee. There is not anything void of him, He filleth whatsoever he hath made.

§. 2. This truth having been so fully acknowledged by a wise heathen, it will argue but too much weakness in any Christian to stumble (as some notwithstanding have done) at this sorry cavil against it. It seems unworthy of God, say they, to afford his presence with all things, even the least and filthiest. Neither do we see how he can possibly do it without receiving some defilement from them. For if God were not lessened by creating the meanest things, then surely he is not by affording his presence to them after they were made. As for defilement, there can be no fear of that. Can the sun shine upon dunghills and worse places without being thereby defiled? and shall not God's essence, which is infinitely purer than the light, preserve itself from contracting filth from anything it cometh near unto! The soul of man united to a sickly and leprous body, doth notwithstanding retain its purity. Much more God in the forementioned case. Be we therefore careful, in spite of all heretical cavils firmly to believe the truth of divine Omnipresence and Immensity; for the clearing up whereof to our understandings, Divines have invented sundry comparisons; two whereof I shall instance in. One out of Austin, The whole world, saith he, is so in God, as a little sponge in a vast ocean. The Sea besides its encompassing the sponge on every side, doth also thoroughly penetrate, moisten, and sustain the whole substance within, and every part of it. Another out of Lessius. He compareth the world to a crystal Ball hanging in the light of the Sun. In which case the light would intimately pierce the whole Ball, and also extend itself far and near, round about it. Such and so intimate is God's presence with every creature in every place.

§. 3. The contemplation whereof should be effectual for the preventing of all sins, especially such as are usually committed in secret, upon this grand presumption, which the Prophet denounceth a curse against the subjects of, saying, Woe unto them that seek deep to hide their counsel from the Lord. and their works are in the dark, and they say, Who seeth us? and who knoweth us? a presumption that there is none by to take notice of them. Suppose it were so; yet men are bound to reverence themselves: That of Ausonius is excellent advise, When thou art about to act anything unseemly, be afraid of thyself, although there be no other witness. But so it is not; for conscience is by; concerning which Lactantius produceth an admirable speech out of Seneca, O thou mad man! what will it profit thee to have none conscious of thy crime, so long as thou hast a conscience that is? But that thou wilt say is part of thyself. True: wherefore I add, God is by; of whom the Apostle emphatically saith, If our heart condemn us, God is greater than our heart, and knoweth all things. Conscience we are wont to say, is a thousand witnesses; and let it be withal considered, that God is as a thousand consciences; both for intimacy of presence, and perspicacity in discerning. It is worth observing how the mention of God's immensity is brought in by the Prophet in that forecited place of Jeremy, where the whole verse runs thus; Can any hide himself in secret places, that I shall not see him, saith the Lord? Do not I fill heaven and earth, saith the Lord? Our most secret sins are, in reference to God, no more secret, in regard of his Omnipresence, then if committed in the most open light. Witness that in Moses his prayer, Thou hast set our iniquities before thee, our secretsins in the light of thy countenance. Jacob once said of Bethel, God was once in thisplace, and I knew it not; How fearful is it? Let every place be a Bethel to thee, O watchful Christian, a place of fear, and in some sense an house of God, be it market, or shop, or field; be sure the Lord is in that place, not present only, but looking on; nor only looking, but weighing and pondering, whatsoever thou doest there in all the circumstances and aggravations thereof, as Solomon testifies, The ways of manare before the eyes of the Lord, and he pondereth all his goings.

§. 4. Having already made improvement of the several branches, let me now for a conclusion draw certain Corollaries from the greatness of God in general; in number five.

First, Let him be greatly praised for this by all mankind. 'Tis the Psalmists inference, Great is the Lord, and greatly to be praised. The world is wont to commend greatness both in persons and things. Great Princes have had Panegyricall Orations made in their praise, as Trajan by Pliny; great cities, as Grand Cair; great monuments, as the Colossus are greatly extol'd by writers and travellers. How much more should the great God? whom the Prophet accordingly magnifies, saying, Behold, the nations are as a drop of a bucket, and are counted as the small dust of the balance: behold he taketh up the isles, as a very little thing. And Lebanon is not sufficient to burn, nor the beasts thereof sufficient for a burnt-offering. All nations before him are as nothing, and they are counted to him less then nothing and vanity. The drop of a bucket is nothing to the whole ocean, nor the dust of the balance to the whole earth: no more is the whole earth with all the inhabitants of it to God. In so much as if he were to be sacrificed to, proportionably to his greatness, all the beasts in Lebanon would not suffice for a burnt offering, nor all the wood thereof for a fire, nor all men in the world for a priest to offer it.

§. 5. Secondly, Let him be greatly confided in by all his people. That of S^t. John, Ye are of God, little children; and greater is he that is in you, then he that is in the world, should be made use of by the Saints as a precious receipt against the most deadly poison that can at any time be administered to them. The Church indeed is very often put upon renewing Jehosaphats complaint, and crying out, We have no might against this great company (perhaps both of wicked men, and wicked spirits) that comes against us; neither know we what to do. But so long as she can add, as he there doth, Our eyes are upon thee; this contemplation of her great God and Savior may support her against the fear of them all. The devil is mighty, I confess it, said Luther, but he will never be Almighty, as my God and Savior is. upon these grounds a believing Christian, living up to his principles, may well say, Shew me a danger greater then my God, a Destroyer, greater then my Savior, I will then fear it and him. Till then pardon me if I do not let my confidence go. what though Jacob be small, as the Prophet speaks, By whom shall Jacob arise? for he is small. Yet arise he shall in spite of opposition, and that because Jacob's God is great.

Thirdly, Let the world learn to seek after interest in him. Many, saith Solomon, Many seek the rulers favor. And reason good; because he is able to protect the persons, and reward the services of his followers. Behold here a Ruler indeed, whose favor was never sought in vain, if sought in time; one that can protect from hell, and bestow heaven; yea that which is the heaven of heaven, the fruition of himself. Being great with great men is a thing much affected by some, although in experience it often becomes not a burden only, but a mischief: whereas the love and favor of the great God, and our Savior, always proves, (shall I say, beneficial? that's too little) it proves, and that always beatifical.

Fourthly, Let such as have obtained interest from him look for great things from him. To Baruch it was once said, Seekestthou great things for thyself? seek them not: because he sought them in the creatures; but if we seek them from and in the great Creator, we may lawfully seek great things, neither shall our doing so be attended with disappointment. For open thy mouth wide, saith the Lord, and I will fill it. We are wont either not to open our mouths at all, or not wide enough; and therefore it is that most of us continue so empty. Ye have not, because ye ask not; so the Apostle: let me say, ye ask perhaps, and yet have but little, because ye do not expect much. O Consider, as Samuel once bespake the men of Israel, how great things God hath already done foryou, that so your experiments may be your encouragement, to expect yet greater: remembering that of our blessed Savior to Nathaniel, Believest thou? thou shalt see greater things then these.

He in whom ye trust, O believers, is a great God, and loves to do all things like himself. Wherefore look for great things from him, great assistances, great enlargements, great deliverances: yea the forgiving of great sins, and the obtaining of great salvation.

§. 7. Fifthly, Let such as have received great things from God, maintain a certain greatness of spirit suitable to their interest in him. I do not mean an haughty spirit, swelled with pride, for that is altogether unsuitable to a saving interest in God, who beholds the proud afar off; but an humble spirit greatned by continual converse with the great God; who by raising up his servants hearts to the contemplation and fruition of higher objects, maketh them too big for this world. It is reported of Moses, that when he was come to years, or according to the original, when he was waxed great, (in spirit perhaps, as well as in stature) he did overlook the preferments, pleasures, and riches of the world, which are all there intimated, yea the menaces of it too: for it is there also said, He feared not the wrath of the king, but endured, as seeing him who is invisible. His conversing with the great God, had made all these to appear to him as petty things. To a soul truly great no worldly matter hath any true greatness in it: As if one could take a station in heaven, whatsoever is here below would appear but small in his sight by reason of its distance. It is accounted by some a great matter to have the frowns and ill word of a great man: But S^t John, whose conversation was in heaven, made nothing of it. Speaking of Diotrophes his malignancy and reproachful speeches he phraseth it thus, prating against us with maliciouswords. The term properly signifieth trifling. Though Diotrophes were a great prelate, and his words very malicious; yet the Apostles spirit was raised so far above them, that with him all were but trifles, and by him contemned as such.

APHORISM V. The Goodness and Greatness of God are both abundantly manifested by his decrees of Election and Preterition, together with his works of Creation and Providence.

EXERCITATION 1.How predestination cometh to be treated of here. Election described from the Nature, Antiquity, Objects, Products and Cause of it. Rom. 11. 33. 2 Tim. 1. 9. with Tit. 1. 2. Ephes. 1. 4. with Matth. 25. 34. opened. Of Acts supposing their objects. Of Acception of persons, what it is, and that Predestination doth not import it. Acts 13. 48. Expounded and vindicated. Whether one Elect may become a reprobate? The negative maintained, and 1 Cor. 9. 24, 25, 26. cleared. Ephes. 5, and 11. enlightened. Concerning the good pleasure of God's will and the counsel thereof.

§. 1. I Durst not wholly wave the doctrine of Predestination, (no not in this Treatise of Principles) after I had duly pondered that grave admonition of Ambrose, or according to others of Prosper, Such things as God would have kept secret must not be pried into by us; nor such denied as he hath openly declared: lest we be found in the former attempt unlawfully curious, in the latter damnably unthankful. And also laid to heart the endeavors, not of foreiners only, but of certain late English writers to possess their readers with vehement and strong prejudices against the long-received truth in those points. One of them telleth us, It is sacrilegious to grant that God hath from eternity elected a certain number of men personally unto salvation, whom he purposeth to bring thereunto infallibly &c. Elsewhere styling it, That capital error of personal Election and Reprobation. Another speaking of preterition, or negative reprobation hath these words. This is one of the 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 which have been infamously invented to disguise and palliate the frightful rigidness of their doctrine. Not long after he calleth it canting, (pretends the lamentable distinction (as it is there by him styled) to be no more then a trick insufficient to buoy up a sinking cause) and in another book of his The dream of absolute preterition. Mean while where alas! is the reverence and submission due to Scripture, that only card and compass by which we are to sail in this ocean, that only clue by the help whereof this labyrinth is to be traversed? It directly opposeth Electi and Reliqui, the elect and such as were passed by, in that saying, The election hath obtained, and the rest were blinded. In it we read of a book of life containing the names of all those whom God hath chosen, and of others whose names were not written in that book. Of some whom the Lord knoweth for his, and others to whom he will say, I never knew you. Of Christ's sheep given to him by the father, and of such persons as were not his sheep, nor accordingly so given to him. This, I hope, is no canting; there is neither Error nor Trick in all this, but to proceed.

§. 2. Election (as to our purpose which concerns the choice of men only, not of Angels) is that secret unsearchable decree of God, wherein he did from everlasting single out of the rest of mankind a definite number of particular persons, ordaining them infallibly unto the attainment of holiness here, and happiness hereafter, according to the counsel and good pleasure of his Will. Which description offers to the readers consideration as things material, and not unfit to be treated of, provided it be soberly done, the Nature, Antiquity, Object, Products and Cause of Election.

First, The Nature of it. It is a secret unsearchable decree of God. The two principal emanations of God's Will respecting intellectual creatures, are his Decrees, and his Commands. They differ, as in sundry other things, so, in point of perspicuitie. The Commands are plain; he that runs may read his duty in them; the Decrees abstruse: Our destinies cannot be so easily read, as our duties may. And whereas divers secret things may yet be discovered upon diligent search, according to that Proverb of Solomon, Counsel in the heart of man is like deep water:but a man of understanding will draw it out. The Decrees of God are so secret, as to be withal unsearchable. Whence the Apostle, O the depth of the riches both of the wisdom and knowledge of God! How unsearchable are his judgments and his ways past finding out! where by Judgments it is, as I conceive, most proper to understand the Decrees of his Will; by Waies, the Administrations of his Providence in order to the execution of those Decrees. Some innovatours there are indeed, who have so modelled the mysterious Doctrine of Predestination, as to leave little or nothing of mystery in it. Our Remonstrants think themselves able to wade, where our Apostle was past his depth, and forced to cry out, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 ! Their way pretends to give a clear reason why one is elected, another reprobated, one converted, another not, but for my part I had much rather with S^t. Paul be ignorant still then over-learned, (that I say not oversawcie) with Arminius and his followers.

§. 3. Secondly the Antiquity. 'Tis from everlasting: An eternal Decree. So Paul, According as he hath chosen us in him before the foundation of the world. This expression notes eternity. The kingdom we are elected to, is said to have been prepared 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 , from the foundation. Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world; in reference to the third heavens, that place where the kingdom is to be set up and inherited, which was in the beginning of time created by the builder and maker of it, as God is styled. But the Decree whereby we were designed thereunto, to have been 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 , before the foundation of the world. That is, from everlasting; as may be further gathered from other phrases in the writings of our Apostle; this by name, Who hath saved us, and called us with an holy calling, not according to our works. but according to his own purpose and grace, which was given us in Christ Jesus, before the world began. This both Erasmus and Calvin interpret of predestination. Compare we it with another speech of the same Apostle to Titus, In hope of eternal life, which God that cannot lie, promised before the world began. The meaning whereof will no longer be obscure, if it be considered that the first-born of election was Christ himself (who applied to himself that which God said of old by the Prophet Isaiah; Behold my servant whom I have chosen, my beloved in whom my soul is wellpleased.) That certain persons were from eternity given to Christ, whom the Father had constituted Head of all his elect, to be his members, & by him brought to eternal blessedness, according to what we read in S^t. Johns Gospel, Thou hast given him power over all flesh, that he should give eternal life to as many as thou hast given him. That in this transaction there passed promises from the Father to the Son in the behalf of himself and all his members. And that this is the grace which was given us in Christ Jesus, these the Promises of eternal life before the world began, spoken of in the forecited places to Timothy and Titus: upon the latter whereof I meet with the same Gloss from a Reverend Scottish writer, whose name and words are here presented in the Margin. I shall add no more concerning the antiquity of this Decree, save only a brief saying of Austin, Intra mundum facti sumus, & ante mundum electi sumus. We were made within the world but chosen before it.

§. 4. Thirdly, the object of election is a definite number of particular persons singled out of the rest of mankind. We learn from S^t Luke that the Elect cry unto God day and night: And S^t John in his Apocalypse telleth us what one of their principal cries is, They cried with a loud voice, saying, How long, O Lord, holy and true, dost thou not judge and avenge our blood? As also what answer they had from heaven, It was said unto them that they should rest yet for a little season until their fellow-servants and their brethren that should be killed as they were, should be fulfilled. From the collation of which texts it may be inferred that their number is set, and shall in due time be completed; for that is the thing related to in the word 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 shall be fulfilled. It is then a definite number, and that of particular persons, whose names are elsewhere said to be written in the book of life, Names in Scripture being often put for persons; as in the Acts, The number of names together were about one hundred and twenty. and in the Revelation, In the earth-quake were slain of men seven thousand; it is in the original, Names of men. They do certainly shoot beside the mark, who so confidently teach that predestination is terminated not upon persons, but qualifications; and that not this or that man in particular is elected or reprobated, but only in general, whosoever believeth and persevereth belongeth to election, whosoever continueth in unbelief, to reprobation; and that so as the same person may be today under the one, and tomorrow under the other decree, according to the change of his qualifications. But if so, it would not in likelihood have been said, The foundation of God standeth sure, having this seal, The Lord knoweth who are his, but rather, what kind of men are his. Nor to the Romans, I will have mercy on whom I will have mercy. And again, He hath mercy on whom he will have mercy, and whom he will he hardeneth (which doth clearly relate to persons) but rather, what sort he will.

§. 5. Against what hath been said in this and the former paragraph there are two principal objections; whereof neither is to be waved, lest it should be thought unanswerable. The first is borrowed from philosophy, and runs thus. Acts suppose the being of their objects; The decrees of God are divine acts, and therefore could not pass upon men's particular persons before the world was, because there were then none in being. I answer that whereas the Acts of God are either Immanent abiding within, or Transient passing from him, and terminated upon somewhat without himself; His transient Acts do either suppose, or produce the being of their objects; suppose it as his Rewarding and Punishing, produce it, as his creating acts. But those that are immanent (of which rank his Decrees are) do not necessarily require the preexistence of their objects in esse reali in a way of reality; for it sufficeth that they have it in esse cognito, in the foreknowledge of God. Jesus Christ our Mediator is styled a Lamb foreordained before the foundation of the world; yet had he no existence as such till after his incarnation. God who had designed Josiah to special services, called him by his name, and foretold what should be done by him, full three hundred and thirty years before he did it. So elsewhere (Cyrus is named, and hath a service allotted him in the foreknowledge of God one hundred and forty years before he was born. It is reported by Procopius that when Misdates king of Persia was dead without issue, but had left his wife with child; the Persian nobility set the crown on the Queens belly before she quickened, thereby acknowledging her issue that should be for their lawful Sovereign. So as Sapores (which was afterwards the childes name) began his reign before his life. If such acts when done by men seem not irrational, why should any think it strange for the only-wise God to set the crown of election upon the head of certain persons, while as yet they have no being, save only in the womb of his decree?

§. 6. The other objection is taken from such places of Scripture as deny God to be an acceptor of persons, which they say he must needs be, if considering mankind in an equal condition he chose some to life, and passed by others.

In order to the solution hereof, I shall first Distinguish between Acceptation and Acceptation of persons. We find them both mentioned by S^t Peter as it were with one breath, in that short saying of his, (Of a truth I perceivethat God is no respecter of persons: But in every nation he that feareth him and worketh righteousness is accepted with him) the one as attributable to him, the other as not. Were it not for his acceptance of persons, woe and nothing but woe to the sons of men. It is the joy of their hearts to consider that there are certain men of his good will; as some read that in the Angels song: and to remember that the Church is by her head and husband styled Hephzibah that is my delight is in her; because the members thereof are, as Paul speaketh, accepted inthe beloved. Next Declare the true notion of Prosopolepsie or acceptance of persons in Scripture-dialect.

Besides the prime importance of these words 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 in Greek, and Persona in Latin for an individual intelligent substance, (so, The gift bestowed upon us by the means of many persons is the blessing of recovery granted upon the prayers of sundry men and women) They have a secondary importance, and are sometimes put to signify a vizard, property or counterfeit resemblance assumed by any such individual. So in Seneca, Nemo potest personam diu ferre, that is, None can play the hypocrite long: and in the Epigrammatist a gray-haired man having put on a black periwig to conceal his age, is told of it thus,

—Inveniet Proserpina canum,

Personam capiti detrahet illa tuo.

Now because these vizards and properties are things external, not at all belonging to the Essence of the party assuming them, hence it cometh to pass that these words at the next remove signify such relations, accommodations and and accomplishments as being external to the essence of a man, as also to the merit of his cause, ought not to incline a Judge to pronounce a sentence on his behalf, or in the distribution of justice to regard him above others to whom such helps are wanting. He who is swayed in judicial proceedings by such outward things is in the Scripture said to be an acceptor of persons. So in Leviticus, Ye shall do nounrighteousness in judgment: thou shalt not respect the person of the poor, nor honor the person of the mighty; but in righteousness thou shalt judge thy neighbor. And in the New Testament these two terms 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 righteous judgment, and 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 accepting of persons are directly opposed. Divines have received it for a maxim. That acceptance of persons is not found in gratuitis, in acts of bounty, wherein the doner is at liberty to dispose his free gifts as pleaseth himself, but in debitis in acts of justice and right, wherein there lieth an obligation upon him that distributeth to give every man his due. Hereupon they conclude that in divine predestination Almighty God, who is no debtor to any of his creatures, and who acteth therein not as a Judge, but as a Sovereign Lord and liberal benefactor, chooseth some and passeth by others, as without injustice or wrong to any, so without any show of that which the Scripture properly calleth Acceptation of persons, because he was not moved by any external thing in doing so.

If any Reader think it not safe to credit this upon my single testimony, behold in the margin further security, to which it were easy to add. much more, if need were.

§. 7. Fourthly, The products of Divine Election are chiefly two. First, Holiness here. God is said to have blessed us with all spiritual blessings in Christ, according as he hath chosen us in him before the foundation of the world, that we should be holy. Where spiritual blessings are pointed at as the streams, and election as the fountain from whence they flow. It as the root, and holiness as the fruit. So elsewhere, We are bound to give thanks always to God for you, brethren, beloved of the Lord, because God hath from the beginning chosen you to Salvation, through Sanctification of the Spirit, and belief of the truth. Here we find not only Sanctification in general, but faith, which is the flower of holiness, derived from Election. The same Apostle stiles it, The faith of God's elect. And S^t. Luke in the Acts, speaking of the success which S^t. Paul's preaching had among the Gentiles, saith expressly, As many as were ordained to eternal life, believed.

A Text which the soundest divines look at, as a most pregnant place to prove a causal influence of Divine Predestination upon the work of saving faith. Others, I know, there are, (and they not a few, nor inconsiderable) who have strongly endeavored to turn the edge and strength of this place another way, by rendering the word 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, not (as we do) Ordained, but Disposed, or well-affected to eternal life. Unto whose corrupt Gloss, I oppose the following considerations.

First, If it were to be so read, then all that heard the Apostles Sermon there recorded, even all and everyone without exception should have believed, seeing there is not a man in the world, and therefore none in that congregation who was not disposed, and well-affected to the reward of eternal life (the will of man being necessarily carried to the desire of blessedness, which none are so brutish as not to affect) for that unto which these are said to be 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, is not conversion, but life eternal.

Secondly, Disposedness in their sense doth not always precede faith, nor faith always follow it. When Saul was in the full career of his persecuting madness against the Saints, what disposedness was there in him unto conversion, unless fury be a disposition to faith? yet then did he first believe. In that young man who came to our Savior, of whom it is testified, That he was not far from the kingdom of God, which of their dispositions was wanting? yet he went away sorrowful, and believed not.

Thirdly, Faith itself is the first saving disposition that any man hath, because it first lays hold upon Christ, and of life by him; in so much as none is formally disposed to eternal life till he have believed.

Fourthly, S^t. Luke doth nowhere use 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 . & 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 , either in his Gospel, or in the Acts for disposedness, but for ordination and constitution divers times, therefore our reading here, As many as were ordained to eternal life, is to be retained.

§. 8. But learned Grotius will by no means allow of this interpretation. They (saith he) who apply this Text to Predestination, Nihil vident, see nothing at all. Yet by his favor, a man that saw as far into the Mysteries of Divinity, as also into the idioms of the Greek tongue, as Grotius himself (be it spoken without disparagement to his great learning) Chrysostom I mean, applies it so in his Commentary upon the place. And his 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 , by which 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 is expounded Erasmus translates Praefiniti à Deo, Predestinated of God. Three things are alleged by Grotius, for overthrowing of this sense; but all in vain. His first plea is, that 'tis not usual for all of a city, a congregation that are predestinated, to believe at one and the same time, therefore that which we assert is not like to be the meaning here. For answer, I acknowledge it is not usual; no more is it to have three thousand inhabitants of one city brought in to God on one day. But what if God willing to glorify his Gospel, and the power of converting Grace, as he called three thousand Jews in one day, by Peters Ministry, Acts the second; so here by S^t. Paul's, at his first solemn undertaking to preach unto the Gentiles, Acts the 13. were pleased to work upon as many in that congregation as did belong to the election of grace? shall any man dare to prescribe, and plead custom to the contrary? His second Argument runs thus. All that truly believe are not Predestinated unto life. Therefore that for which we contend is not to be thought a proper sense. Answer. This reason is founded upon a grand mistake, viz. That faith is common to all, whether elect, or non-elect, although Paul style it, the Faith of God's elect, as before; and Christ tells the Jews, Ye believe not, because ye are not of my sheep. He argues in the third place, from S^t. Luke's unacquaintedness with the secrets of God. It was not in his power to tell who of that company were elected, who not; therefore by his 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 , he must not be conceived to have understood such as were in that sense ordained to eternal life. I answer, Although the pen-man did not, the inditer, viz. the Holy Ghost did exactly know whose names were written in the book of life, and whose were not. Now he it was that in the history of the Acts suggested and dedicated to his secretary both matter and words.

§. 9. The second product of election is happiness hereafter. Accordingly the objects of this Decree are those whom God hath not appointed unto wrath, but to obtain salvation by our Lord Jesus Christ. Salvation is that which they are said to be chosen to; and that wherein their names are written, called, The book of life. For as in military affairs, Commanders have their Muster-rolls, wherein are contained the names of all the soldiers whom they have listed, whence the phrase of Conscribere milites; and in Common-wealths there are Registries kept wherein are recorded the names of such as are chosen to offices of trust and other preferments, whence the title of Patres conscripti ascribed to the Senators of Rome. So the Scripture condescending to our capacities and speaking of God after the manner of men, attributeth to him a book of life, wherein it supposeth a legible writing and Registering the names of all those persons whom he hath irreversibly predestinated to life everlasting. I say, irreversibly, for if that of Stoics be true, In sapientum decretis nulla est litura, In the decrees of wise men there will be no blotting and blurring; how much more may it be asserted concerning those eternal Decrees of the only wise God? If it became Pilate to say, What I have written I have written, it would certainly mis-become the great God to blot so much as one name out of the Lambs book of life written by himself before the world was. We may take it for granted that this book will not admit of any Deleatur, or of any Expurgatorie Index, whatever some pretend to the contrary, whose arguments have been elsewhere sufficiently answered. I shall only here propound, and endeavor to satisfy another objection, whereof no mention is there made. Paul knew himself to be a chosen vessel, for Ananias had told him so from Christ's own mouth: yet speaks of himself as of one in some danger, at least in some possibility of becoming a Reprobate, in these words, I keep under my body, and bring it into subjection: lest that by any means, when I have preached to others, I myself should be a castaway, or, as other translations have it, a Reprobate. Ergo, the decree of Election is not irreversible.

Resp. To prepare the way for a full answer, let it be considered, 1. That the places cited in the objection are not fitly opposed; because the former is not necessarily to be understood of election to salvation, but may probably be limited to Paul's being chosen an Apostle: Neither is the latter infallibly meant of that reprobation, which is contradistinct to the said election, but of somewhat else. Yea although it be true, and may strongly be inferred from other texts, that Paul knew his own election to life eternal, the reprobation spoken of in the end of the verse is not to be taken in the most rigid sense, but in a milder. 2. That our Apostle, (according to his custom in sundry epistles) was in the end of this chapter fallen upon the use of terms agonistical, borrowed from the Olympick and other Grecian games in that age; as appeareth in the foregoing verses. Know ye not that they who run in a race &c. Every man that striveth for the mastery &c. I so run, not as uncertainly. So fight I, not as one that beateth the air. And that in the last verse he hath no less then four allusions to these exercises. One in 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 to cuffing, wherein the combatants were wont with their blows to make one another livid under their eyes; so did he by acts of mortification beat himself as it were black and blue. A second in 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 to the exercise of wrestling, wherein the antagonists mutually strove to cast each other to the ground, and to keep them under. So he, the better to subdue his body of sin, was careful to keep down his body of flesh, which if pampered, is apt to rebel. A third in 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉. We read in the second to Timothy chapter the second, verse the fifth, of their striving lawfully, that is, according to the rules and laws prescribed for that game respectively, in which they were to strive for the mastery. The officer by whom these laws were propounded to the combatants was called 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, Paul in allusion thereunto saith of himself 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, because in the discharge of his Apostolical office he had acquainted them with the rules & laws of Christianity. A fourth in 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 unapproved, a term of disgrace put upon those whom such as were to judge and pass sentence upon the combatants disallowed. Whereas those whom the judges rewarded were called 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 approved ones. 3. That this unapprovedness may either relate to God himself, or to good men. If to God the supreme judge, then whosoever carrieth himself amiss in any particular course of living, offendeth the Lord, falleth under his fatherly displeasure, and is as to this particular, a person disallowed and rejected, how firm soever his station may be as to the main. If to good men, who are subordinately to judge of their preachers doctrine and conversation, a teacher is then said to be unapproved of them, when upon observation of some unfaithfulness, or looseness in his demeanour, some sensuality or unlawful indulgence to his body, they begin to disesteem him, in comparison of what they did before, yea perhaps to cast him out of their affections, and of their prayers, of which till then he was a partaker.

These things premised, let it now be observed whether the meaning of the place contested about be not clearly this, or to this effect.

I Paul well remembering what I am, a member and minister of Jesus Christ, am and shall continue careful to exercise myself in all the duties of mortification, not making provision for the flesh to fulfill the lust thereof: lest I who by mine office am bound to declare unto others the grand rules of Christian practice, particularly of temperance, which I urged but now, saying, Every man that striveth for the mastery is temperate in all things, should by any sensual demeanour of mine own, not only prove a castaway as to the esteem I formerly had in the hearts and consciences of good people, and to the interest I enjoyed in their devotion; (which I should account a loss far exceeding that of honor, or estate) but also fall under the wrath and fatherly displeasure of my God, and be cast out of fellowship with him, though but for a short space of time; which to me who have lived in the sense of it, under the constant light of his countenance, and found his loving kindness better than life, would be worse than any death.

And if this really be the utmost importance of the text, (as for ought I know it is) without extending it to further or other kind of reprobation, I hope the objection built upon it will not need any further or other kind of answer.

§. 10. Fifthly, The Cause of divine election, about which the world is so filled with disputes, is not to be found in anything without God himself. the disputers indeed of this world lay out many thoughts, and put out many books concerning such contrivements as our corrupt reason would perhaps better allow, and our corrupt wills better affect: but holy Scripture resolveth all into the sole will of God; the good pleasure and Counsel whereof the Apostle celebrateth as the causes of our predestination. Having predestinated us unto the adoption of children by Jesus Christ to himself according to the good pleasure of his will. And again, Being predestinated according to the purpose of him, who worketh all things after the counsel of his own will. Words so very plain and full as would certainly have put an end to altercations, and silenced disputes in these points; but that corrupt reason is extremely talkative, and the wisdom of flesh direct enmity against God, and therefore such as will never yield, till its corruption be removed; for enmity cannot be reconciled, the enemies may. Whence that excellent speech of Melancthon, worthy to be had in everlasting remembrance, Dulcescet nostra de predestinatione sententia, ubi impiae rationis iudicium Spiritus Dei stultificaverit. Then and there only will our doctrine of predestination have a sweet relish, when and where the Spirit of God shall have befooled the conceits of wicked reason. That which Paul celebrateth as the true cause of our election is,

1. The good pleasure of God's will, according to which he disposeth both of persons and things arbitrarily, as himself liketh best. And in this our reason would better acquiesce were it thoroughly defecated by grace: That of Christ, which never had any corruption in it, fully did: as appeareth by that famous address of his to God the father; I thank thee, O father, Lord of heaven and earth, because thou hast hid these things from the wise and prudent, and hast revealed them unto babes. Even so, Father, for so it seemed good in thy sight.

2. The counsel of his will. Although God may be truly said to act arbitrarily, yet he never doth anything unadvisedly, but according to the counsel of his will, which is always rational, though our shallow reason in this state of degeneracy and mortality be not able to fathom the depth of its contrivements, and thereupon ready to cavil at, and call in question the equity of them. Such as do so; (if any such shall cast an eye upon these papers) must give me leave to say unto them, as one of our ancient writers did to their forefathers.

The Apostle (saith he) having discoursed of these mysteries acknowledgeth their depth and adoreeth the wisdom of God in them. Dignare & tu ista nescire. Concede Deo potentiam sui Nequaquam te indiget defensore. Be thou also willing to be ignorant of such things. Leave God himself in the modelling of his decrees and dispensations. He will be sure to do it so, as not to stand in need of any apology or defense of thine.

To which let me add a saying of Luther, and with it conclude this Exercitation.

Reason (saith he) thou art a fool, and dost not understand the matters of God.

Wherefore be not obstreperous, but hold thy prating; make not thyself a judge of these things, but attend to the word of God and believe.

EXERCITATION 2. Preterition described. The term defended. Ephes. 1. 4. compared with Revel. 17. 8. Ephes. 1. 9. and Rom. 9. 13. expounded. God not bound to any creature, except by promise. The parable in Matth. 20. urged. The three consequents of negative reprobation. D^r Davenants Animadversions against M^r Hoards book recommended. The goodness of God manifested in Election, as in a most free, peculiar, ancient, leading, and standing favor.

§. 1. HAVING so fully discoursed of Election, (by which the Decree of preterition is to be measured) there will be less need of enlarging much upon that. Take only this description of it; after a brief explication whereof, I intend, if God will, to proceed unto other concernments. Preterition or negative Reprobation is an eternal decree of God purposing within himself to deny unto the Non-elect that peculiar love of his, wherewith election is accompanied, as also that special grace which infallibly bringeth to glory: Of which negations, permission of sin, obduration in sin, and damnation for sin, are direct consequents. This description carries in the face of it a clear reason, why the thing described goeth under the name of Negative reprobation, because it standeth mainly in the denial of those free favors which it pleaseth God to bestow upon his elect. As for the term of preterition, we neither are, nor ought to be ashamed thereof, however some bold writers have jeered it, because it is very significant, and hath been made use of by their betters. Prosper by name, and that both in verse and in prose. For in one of his Poems he recordeth this as a Pelagian tenent

—Quod gratia Christi

Nullum omnino hominem de cunctis qui

generantur

Praetereat.—

That of all mankind the Grace of Christ passeth by none. And in his Treatise de Vocatione Gentium he beginneth the thirteenth chapter of his first book with this saying, Quod si aliquos Salvantis gratia praeterierit &c. If saving grace have passed by any, it is to be referred to the unsearchable judgments of God, and those ways of his which are past finding out by us in this life. This premised, let us take a transient view of the chief particulars in the description.

§. 2. It is First an eternal decree, coeternal with that of election; for the very choosing of some to salvation implieth a passing by of such as were not chosen. Let the Reader compare that passage in Ephes. 1. 4. He hath chosen us before the foundation of the world, with that parenthesis Rev. 17. 8. whose names were not written in the book of life from the foundation of the world.

Secondly a decree which God purposed in himself. We read in one place of the purpose of God according to Election, and in another of God's good pleasure, which he hath purposed in himself. The like may be said of preterition. His good pleasure is the sole fountain of both. The root of both is within himself and not in anything without him; as hath been well observed by Calvin.

Thirdly, the eternal purpose of God was to deny the Non-elect that peculiar love, wherewith his election is accompanied; in which respect he is said to hate them. Jacob have I loved, but Esau have I hated. A term by which some Divines are willing to understand no more, than his not being willing to bestow everlasting happiness upon them: because Hatred in Scripture is often put to signify a less degree of Love. We may not believe that Leah was odious to her husband; yet the text saith, God saw that Leah was hated, which is certainly to be expounded out of the verse foregoing, where it is said of Jacob that he loved Rachel more than Leah. He loved Leah perhaps less than he ought, surely less than he did her sister, and in that respect is said to have hated her. That to the Romans concerning Esau, some interpret in proportion to what is there said concerning Leah, and among the rest Aquinas. God (saith he) loveth all menin as much as he willeth some good to all; but in as much as he doth not will to all men the chief good, viz. eternal life, he is said to hate and to reprobate them.

§. 3. Fourthly, His purpose was to deny unto the non-elect that special grace, which brings infallibly to glory those whom God bestows it upon. No creature can challenge effectual grace at the hands of God, as a due debt either to his nature, or to his labor. There be many that speak and write of God saucily, as if he were bound to give this and that and the other grace, even where they can produce no promise by which he hath made himself a debtor. I cannot but commend the zeal of Peter Lombard against such men. To me (saith he) this word He ought, or he is bound seems to have much poison in it; and cannot be properly applied to God, who is no debtor to us, save only in those cases wherein he hath passed some promise. Sure I am, our Savior telleth his Disciples plainly, It is given to you to know the mysteries of the kingdom of heaven, but to them it is not given, Matth. 13. 11. And the householder in the Parable stops the mouths of those murmurers that repined, as expecting more from him than it was his pleasure to give, with the sole consideration of its being his will to have it so. Friend, I do thee no wrong. Take what isthine, I will give to this last even as unto thee. Is it not lawful for me to do what I will with mine own?

Fifthly, The consequents of the forementioned denials, are, 1. Permission of sin, particularly of unbelief. John 10. 46. Ye believe not, because ye are not of my sheep. 2. Obduration in sin. Romans 9. 18. He hath mercy on whom he will have mercy, and whom he will, he hardeneth. 3. Condemnation for sin, Revel. 20. 15. Whosoever was not found written in the book of life, was cast into the lake of fire. This last is that which by Divines is usually styled Positive Reprobation, and is clearly distinguishable from the Negative, in that the one is an act of punitive justice respecting sin committed and continued in. But the other an absolute decree of God's most free and Sovereign Will, without respect to any disposition in the creature. I call them consequents, not effects; because, though Negative Reprobation be antecedent to them all, it is not the proper cause of them. This difference between the decrees Aquinas long since took notice of.

Election (saith he) is a proper cause both of that glory which the Elect look for hereafter, and of that grace, which here they enjoy. Whereas Reprobation is not the cause of the present sins of the non-elect, though it be of God's forsaking them; but their sin proceeds from the parties themselves so passed by and forsaken.

But I am under a promise of brevity, and therefore shall add no more but only advise the English Reader, who is desirous of further information in these deep points, to procure and peruse that excellent piece of the profound Doctor Davenant printed at Cambridge, Ann. 1641. under this Title, Animadversions written by the right Reverend John Bishop of Salisbury upon a Treatise entitled, God's love to mankind: where he will not only meet with the doctrine of Predestination modestly handled, but also with ample satisfaction to most of those wicked cavils which flesh and blood have been wont to suggest against it.

§. 4. Having thus finished that preamble, which the daring Heterodoxie of some modern writers put me upon a necessity of, I proceed to the making good of two Assertions, tending to clear the former part of our present Aphorism, viz. That the Goodness of God is abundantly manifested in his Decree of our Election; and his Greatness no less in that of Preterition. In order to a demonstration of the former, I desire to have it considered, how free, how peculiar, how ancient, how leading, how lasting a favor Election is.

First, A free favor. It is therefore called Election of Grace; and spoken of as tending to the praise of the glory of free grace. The Lambs book of life (so named, because the Lamb Jesus stands there enrolled in the head of it, as the head of all the Elect, and the Captain of that salvation whereunto they are chosen) is a book of love. Behold, my servant whom I have chosen, my beloved, in whom my soul is well pleased. It was so said of Christ, and may be applied to all the Elect in their measure. Hence Paul styleth his Thessalonians, Brethren, beloved of the Lord, because God had chosen them to salvation: and God expresseth the Election of Jacob, by Jacob have I loved, to show that free love on God's part is the fountain of this favor. We love persons or things, because they are lovely. God loveth them first, after makes them lovely, then loves them more for being so. The cause of our love is in the objects; of God's, in himself: we are predestinated after the counsel of his own will, not after the good inclinations of ours.

Secondly, A peculiar favor. Rarity much enhaunceth a benefit. Immunities and privileges are therefore much valued and stood upon, because they are not common to many, and are therefore more rejoiced in, because but few partake of them. There were but eight persons saved from the Deluge of waters in Noah's time, who is accordingly said to have found grace in the eyes of the Lord, in that he and his were preserved when all the world beside perished. And in regard the Deluge of fire that came upon Sodom and Gomorrah swept away all the other inhabitants, but Lot only, and his nearest relations were exempted from it: God is said to have magnified his mercy toward them, as Lot acknowledged, saying, Behold thy servant hath found grace in thy sight, and thou hast magnified thy mercy which thou hast shown unto me. We should all have perished in the Deluge of fiery indignation, had not God elected some few whom he hath not appointed to wrath, but to obtain salvation by our Lord Jesus Christ. They are but few, as Scripture tells us again and again, Many are called, but few chosen. The goodness of God is therefore to be more acknowledged in so peculiar a favor.

§. 5. 3^{lie}. An ancient favor. Old things, if evil, are so much the worse for that; Old leaven is to be purged out, and the old man to be put off. But every good thing is commended by its antiquity. One said well that Old wood is best to burn, old friends best to trust, and old books best to read. What price do Scholars put upon an ancient Manuscript? Doubtless the oldest of all Manuscripts, is the book of life: and the writing of our names therein the firstborn of all God's favors. If God so value the first-fruits of our services, as he doth; how careful should we be to magnify the first-fruits of his goodness? If old charters be of so great esteem as they are in the world, how great an estimate should we set upon the most ancient Magna Charta of our Election, having this seal, The Lord knows who are his.

Fourthly, A leading favor. Those are the most valuable blessings that have influence upon sundry others, which they draw infallibly after them. Such is Election. Paul makes it the first linck of his golden chain, and shows how introductive it is of all the rest. whom God did predestinate, them he also called; and whom he called, them he also justified; and whom he justified, them he also glorified. Here is a chain which God lets down from heaven that by it he may draw up his Elect thither. The first linck of it is Predestination, taken in a restrained sense for the Election of grace. The next Effectual Vocation; into this the former hath a causal influence according to what the Lord once said by his Prophet Jeremy, chap. 31. 3. I have loved thee with an everlasting love, therefore with loving kindenes, have I drawn thee. Election having once pitchit upon a man, it will find him out, and call him home, where ever he be. Zacchaeus out of cursed Jericho; Abraham out of idolotrous Ur of the Chaldeans; Nicodemus and Paul out of the College of the Pharisees, Christ's sworn enemies; Dionysius and Damaris, out of superstitious Athens. In what dunghill soever God's jewels be hid, Election will both find them out there, and fetch them out from thence. The third linck is Justification; the dependence thereof upon Election may be gathered from that passage in the same chapter to the Romans, Who shall lay any thing to the charge of God's elect? It is God that justifies. As also from the vision in Zechary, where Joshua the high priest representing the people, appeared clothed with filthy garments in sign of guilt by them contracted, till God had commanded, saying, Take away the filthy garments from him. Behold, I have caused thine iniquity to pass from thee. Whereupon there was a fair Miter put upon his head, and he clothed with change of garments, in reference to their change of condition from guilt to free justification; the spring whereof is hinted to in that speech, The Lord said unto Satan, The Lord rebukethee, O Satan, even the Lord that hath chosen Jerusalem rebuke thee. The Fourth and last is Glorification, That takes in both the beginnings of glory in sanctification (of which Paul in his second to the Corinthians the third chapter and last verse, We all with open face beholding as in a glass the glory of the Lord, are changed into the same image from glory to glory, even as by the Spirit of the Lord: and of which he telleth us elsewhere, that all the graces of which it consists proceed from this prime grace of Election, (saying, God hath blessed us with all spiritual blessings in Christ, according as he hath chosen us in him) and the consummation of glory in heaven; the foundation whereof is by our Savior clearly laid in the Fathers giving us to him by Election at first, This, saith he, is the Fathers will which hath sent me, that of all which he hath given me I should lose nothing, but should raise it up again at the last day. So true is that of a Modern writer, Election depends upon God alone, all other blessings upon Election.

Fifthly, A standing favor. The favors of men may be suddenly changed into frowns; as those of King Ahasuerus towards Hamon were: who but he over night in the Kings esteem? next day he will not endure the sight of him. But God's are immutable. All the blessings of the Covenant of grace are sure mercies, according to that by the Prophet Isaiah, I will make an everlasting covenant with you, even the sure mercies of David; Election in a special manner. Our Apostle accordingly intimates in one place, that the purpose of God according to election must stand: and affirms in another, that this foundation of God standssure, having this seal, The Lord knows who are his. In which few words, we have no fewer then three grounds of its stability; a Foundation, a Seal, and a Science. Election is the Foundation of God; a firm Foundation that stands sure. With us things founded upon a rock, have great stability; the rock of ages, as he is called, even God himself, his good pleasure and counsel is that upon which our Election is founded. With us, writings once sealed receive a confirmation thereby, and become unrepealable. God hath set his seal to this Decree. With us, knowledge or science is of things certain and unalterable, not as opinion, which being of things only probable may be changed; The seal here is, The Lord knows who are his. No wonder then if the Lord be forever found to make good that which he said by his Apostle, God hath not cast away his people whom he foreknew. If having named Election in the foregoing verse, he presently subjoins, The gifts and calling of God are without repentance.

EXERCITATION 3.

An Introduction to Romans 9. Most part of that chapter expounded, together with sundry passages in chapter 10, and 11. for proof of these two conclusions. 1. That Paul in Rom. 9. doth upon occasion propound and prosecute the doctrine of Predestination. 2. That he derives the Decree of preterition from the Sovereign greatness of God. A Consectary showing how useful the said doctrine is to sober minds.

§. 1. FOR a full proof of our second Assertion, That the greatness of God is abundantly manifested by his decree of Preterition, we must of necessity have recourse to the ninth chapter of Paul's Epistle to the Romans, as unto the proper seat of that argument; although divers from abroad, and some at home by foreign interpretations, forced Glosses and strained Paraphrases, have endeavored to carry the sense quite another way; against the poison of whose endeavors our people may perhaps stand in need of an Antidote.

It shall be my care, by Divine assistance, (which is always needful, especially in the debating of such mysteries) to present them with one: and in as calm a way as may be, without provoking, however without reproaching such as are contrary minded, to demonstrate these two Conclusions, viz. That Paul in the ninth to the Romans doth upon occasion propound, and prosecute the doctrine of Predestination. And that he plainly derives the Decree of Preterition from the Sovereign greatness of God. But before we enter upon so great a depth (which I do with fear and trembling) let it be observed that our Apostle from the end of the eight, to the beginning of his twelfth chapter, continues a profound complicate discourse wholly about the main concernments of his countrey-men the Jews; and that the best help we have for enlightening certain clauses in the ninth, ought to be fetched from passages in the tenth and eleventh Chapters: the neglect whereof, I verily think, hath occasioned the miscarriages of so many in their interpretations of that Scripture. I shall hope to improve the Observation to good purpose.

§. 2. Concerning the former of our Conclusions, there will be no need of going far to seek the occasion of Paul's falling upon this Doctrine. He had carefully and continually preached faith in Christ, as the only way of salvation, in opposition to all others. This, however embraced by divers Gentiles, could by no means find entertainment with the Jews. Be pleased to compare Chapter 9. 31, 32, 33. Israel which followed after the Law of righteousness, hath not obtained to the Law of righteousness. Wherefore? because they sought it not by faith, but as it were by the works of the law: for they stumbled at that stumbling stone. As it is written, Behold I lay in S•on a stumbling-stone, and rock of offense: and whosoever believes on him, shall not be ashamed, with Chapter tenth, verse 2, 3, 4. I bear them record that they have a zeal of God, but not according to knowledge. For they being ignorant of God's righteousness, and going about to establish their own righteousness, have not submitted themselves to the righteousness of God. For Christ is the end of the law for righteousness to everyone that believeth. This their stumbling at Christ, as they generally did, caused a great stumble in the thoughts of considering men, who could not but stand amazed to see, that whereas God had set up but one only way to be laid hold upon, for the attainment of blessedness, his own only people in the eye of the world, should almost universally decline that, and venture their souls upon another. Yet this they did, even they who are here so magnificently described, Chapter 9. verse 4, 5. Who were Israelites; to whom pertained the Adoption, and the glory, and the covenants, and the giving of the law, and the service of God, and the promises: Whose were the fathers, and of whom as concerning the flesh Christ came, who is over all, God blessed for evermore, Amen. Hereupon some were apt to cry out,

All is undone, The word of God itself hath taken no effect. The Promise to Abraham is fallen to the ground. All Sermons and other Ordinances have been but a sso much rain upon rocks that glides off and leaves no impression.

Our Apostle to recover them out of these dumps, leads them by degrees into the knowledge of Divine Predestination, as the root of all this: giving them first to understand, that all who bore the name of Israelites, and enjoyed the Ordinances, were not indeed such children of God, as belonged to the Election of grace, and therefore did not close with Christ in the use of them▪ as some few did, upon whom the word of grace was effectual, and in whom (as few as they were) God's promise to Abraham was preserved. As for those unto whom his Gospel was hid, they were as he elsewhere tells the Corinthians, a sort of lost men and women. For this see Chapter 9. verse 6, 7, 8. Not as though the word of God hath taken none effect. For they are not all Israel, which are of Israel. Neither because they are the seed of Abraham are they all children. But in Isaac shall thy seed be called. That is, They which are the children of the flesh, these are not the children of God; but the children of the promise are counted for the seed. Where the Elect people of God (who only are accounted the spiritual seed, and who only in the conclusion will concur to constitute Christ Mystical) are styled children of the Promise, perhaps in reference to that grace and Promise of eternal life, given to them in Christ Jesus before the world began, to which I have spoken before in this Aphorisme, Exercitation the first, Paragraph the third: however in allusion to the birth of Isaac, who was produced above the power of nature, by virtue of a promise declaring God's will and pleasure to have it so; for the Elect in the respective hours of their conversion, are all of them born again not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God Who of his own will begetteth them with the word of truth, that they should be a kind of firstfruits of his creatures.

§. 3. Having thus given a more obscure intimation of some few elect ones complying with the Gospel, although most part of the Jews were recusants as to that interest; he goeth on to profess it more openly in the beginning of the eleventh chapter, God hath not cast away his people which he foreknew verse the second, the infallible meaning whereof may be gathered from that in Peter, Elect according to the foreknowledge of God the Father. And more plainly yet in verse the seventh and eighth of the same chapter, The Election hath obtained, and the rest were blinded; According as it is written, God hath given them the spirit of slumber, eyes that they should not see, and ears that they should not hear unto this day. But to return to our ninth chapter. Who can advisedly read that passage in his discourse about Jacob and Esau, That the purpose of God according to Election might stand, and consult the circumstances of of it (viz. the children's not yet being born, nor having done good or evil; as also a choice no way founded upon him that willeth, or upon him that runneth, but upon God alone who showeth mercy) and not reflect upon that election by me described in the first Exercitation under this Aphorism §. 2.? Add hereunto those Apostolical distributions of men into those on whom the Lord will have mercy, and those whom he will harden in verse the eighteenth, that is in other terms, Elect and Reprobate. Also into vessels of mercy, and vessels of wrath verses 22, 23. What if God willing to show his wrath, and to make his power known, endured with much longsuffering the vessels of wrath fitted to destruction. And that he might make known the riches of his glory on the vessels of mercy, which he had afore prepared unto glory? Where I desire to have it punctually observed that the vessels of wrath are only said to be fitted to destruction, without naming by whom, God, Satan, or themselves; whereas on the other side God himself is expressly said to have prepared his chosen vessels of mercy unto glory. Which was purposely done (as I humbly conceive) to intimate a remarkable difference between election and preterition; in that Election is a proper cause not only of salvation itself, but of all the graces which have any causal tendency thereunto; and therefore God is said to prepare his elect to glory: Whereas negative reprobation is no proper cause, either of damnation itself, or of the sin that bringeth it, but an antecedent only; wherefore the Non-elect are indeed said to be fitted to that destruction which their sins in the conclusion bring upon them, but not by God. I call it a remarkable difference, because where it is once rightly apprehended and truly believed, it sufficeth to stop the mouth of one of those greatest calumnies and odiums which are usually cast upon our doctrine of predestination, viz. that God made sundry of his creatures on purpose to damn them: a thing which the rhetoric of our adversaries is wont to blow up to the highest pitch of aggravation. But is as soon blown away by such as can tell them in the words of the Excellent D^r Davenant,

It is true that the elect are severally created to the end & intent that they may be glorified together with their head Christ Jesus: But for the Nonelect we cannot truly say that they are created to the end they may betormented with the Devil and his Angels. For we may then say, God maketh such a thing for such an end, when he giveth the thing a nature and qualities fitted for such an end.

(e. gr. that he made the sun to enlighten the world, because he filled it with lightsomeness.)

Now no man is created by God with a nature and quality fitting him to damnation. Yea neither in the state of his innocence, nor in the state of the fall and his corruption doth he receive anything from God which is a proper and fit means of bringing him to his damnation. And therefore damnation is not the end of any man's creation.

§. 4. We have seen our Apostle propounding the doctrine of predestination in this his discourse; see how he prosecutes the same more ways then one.

I. By producing certain instances. The persons he instanceth in, if not as solemn examples, yet, as types and figures are at least, of election Isaac and Jacob; of reprobation, Ishmael and Esau.

It is the grand privilege of God's elect to have his covenant established with them in special manner. The Messias, saith the Angel in Daniel, was cut off, but not for himself; And he shall confirm the Covenant with many. The word is Larabbim with those excellent ones, by whom Piscator understandeth the elect, those Many whom God's righteous servant is said to justify, Isaiah 53. 11. where we meet with the same word. If so, who more fit to figure out them than our father Isaac? concerning whom the Lord said to Abraham, I will establish my Covenant with him for an everlasting Covenant, and with his seed after him. Again, the style of all those who are written in heaven, that is, of the Elect, is the general Assembly, and Church of the $\langle \phi \rangle$ stborn. If so, who more fit to typify them than Jacob, a man of all others most famous for procuring a primogeniture in an extraordinary way? As for reprobation, the objects whereof are castaways, well might Ishmael stand for a figure of them, because of him Sarah said unto her husband, Cast out this bondwoman and her son, for the son of the bondwoman shall not be heir with my son, even with Isaac. And her word was ratified by God himself, saying to Abraham, In all that Sarah hath said unto thee, hearken unto her voice, for in Isaac shall thy seed be called. As also Esau, who here falleth under two sad characters; One of God's hatred, then which nothing more dreadful, Jacob have I loved, but Esau have I hated, verse 13. the other of servitude, verse 12. The elder shall serve the younger. Concerning which, M^r Ainsworth hath these words, Servitude came in with a curse and figureth reprobation, Gen. 9. 25. John 8. 34, 35. Gal. 4. 30, 31. Therefore from hence the Prophet teacheth that God loved Jacob, and hated Esau, and the Apostle gathereth the doctrine of election and reprobation, Romans 9. 10, 11, 12, 13. So he.

§. 5. The main exception, which our adversaries hitherto have been wont to take at this and the like expositions, ariseth thus. Jacob and Esau are considerable in a double capacity, the one Personal, as they were this and that individual member of mankind; the other Patriarchal, as they were heads of several Nations, Jacob of the Israelites, Esau of the Edomites or Idumeans. They suppose we cannot safely apply the oracle delivered to Rebecca unto their persons, seeing Malachi long since expounded it of their posterity in these words, Was not Esau Jacob's brother? saith the Lord? yet I loved Jacob, and I hated Esau, and laid his mountains and his heritage waste for the dragons of the wilderness &c.

My conceptions concerning this matter (which as I would not impose upon any, far be such presumption from me, so I would have no Reader contemn, till he have considered them) are as followeth. According to their double capacity, the answer of God to Rebecca about them seemeth to have had a double aspect: One to their posterity regarding temporal things especially, of which Malachi speaketh, another to their persons eying chiefly their spiritual concernments; and of that Paul treats in Romans 9. as the context importeth. Nor can this be wondered at by such as consider how usual it hath been with God, as to discover himself by degrees (witness that in Deuteronomy, The Lord came from Sinai, and rose up from Seir unto them, he shined forth from mount Paran) so to reserve more spiritual discoveries for Gospel times.

§. 6. Whereas it is further objected that the Elders serving the Younger was never verified in the person of Esau, who did never servilely submit to Jacob; I answer. 1. He that should go about to prove that negative, would find an hard task; but suppose it proved, yet in point of right Esau as having sold his birth-right became servant to him that bought it. For in this respect it is said to Cain the elder brother concerning Abel, Unto thee shall be his desire, and thou shalt rule over him. 2. In point of fact, time was when Esau became a very humble suppliant to Jacob for a mess of pottage. Feed me▪ I pray thee, with that same red pottage, for I am faint. Now The borrower, saith Solomon, is a servant to the lender. How much more he that craves to him that giveth? Besides if the word serve be taken in a large sense, Esau served Jacob well-nigh all his life long, and brought him much nearer to God by vexing him. Non obsequendo, sed persequendo, as one saith, not by obeying, but by opposing. Which put me in mind of that story in Bromiardus concerning an apprentice that had served an hard master, by whom he had been often sore beaten. These blows the Lord had made a means of the man's conversion; whereupon, lying upon his death-bed, and his master standing by, caught fast hold on his hands and kissed them, saying, Hae manus perduxerunt me ad paradisum, These hands have helped to bring me to heaven. 3. The Patriarchal capacity doth not exclude, but comprehend the Personal; for Jacob and his Israelites, Esau and his Edomites make a Nation. In which respect, when David put garrisons in Edom; throughout all Edom put he garrisons, and all they of Edom became David's servants; Esau himself in his offspring might not unfitly be said to have served Jacob in his. Lastly, If no more can be had then this bare acknowledgement that our exposition must be confined to their posterity, even that will go nigh to serve our turn, and to suit with the Apostles scope, if it be considered, how exceeding fit the Israelites were to typify election, of whom God said, Thou art an holy people unto the Lord thy God, and the Lord hath chosen thee to be a peculiar people unto himself, above all the nations that are on the earth. The Edomites to figure out reprobates, seeing of them it is said by the Prophet, They shall call them the border of wickedness, and the people against whom the Lord hath indignation forever.

§. 7. 11. By resolving certain queries. The first whereof is that in verse 14. What shall we say then? Is there unrighteousness with God? God forbid. Had the doctrine of predestination which Paul taught been the same with that of our modern Remonstrants, viz. God's electing upon foresight of men's being in Christ by faith, and reprobating upon foresight of their final unbelief and impenitence, there would then have been no occasion for the query; for reason how corrupt soever would soon have closed with the equity of such decrees to render par pari, like to like. It is God's awarding paribus imparia unlike destinies to men of like conditions considered in the same lump, and doing this arbitrarily, according to the good pleasure and counsel of his own will, that setteth it on crying out of iniquity in God's proceedings. But what doth Paul answer? He abhorreth the thoughts of such a thing. God forbid, it is as if he had said, far be it from everyone that pretends to a rational being, much more then every Christian to entertain the least thought of a possibility of injustice in any decree of God, whose will is the supreme rule of righteousness. The judgments of God (as Austin hath said truly of them) can neither be fully comprehended, nor justly reprehended of any. Let me desire such as are so very apt to be cavilling at them, to swallow and digest by a serious consideration, those admonitions and reproofs which a late Belgic Contra-remonstrant hath handed to their fellows.

Calceati Deum aditis &c. You draw near (saith he) with shoes on your feet to him that dwelleth in an unaccessible light, and presuming upon certain Axioms of crooked and distorted reason, pass sentence upon the decrees of God.—we blame you in this regard especially, for intruding yourselves into things which ye have not seen, and giving answers about the secrets of heaven with so much confidence, as if ye sate at God's counsel-table. You examine his counsels by the rules of human proceedings; and if anything concur that suits not with your preconceived opinions about free-will expunge it quite out of the number of God's designs as unworthy of him.

Yea, Our Apostle not content with a bare expression of abhorrency, goes on to free the decrees of God from all iniquity, each by itself. Election, because it is an act of mere bounty & free grace, in performing whereof God cannot possibly be unjust, as being under no law, but at absolute liberty to dispose of his free undeserved favors according to the good pleasure and counsel of his own will, to which purpose that is cited out of Exodus 15. For he saith to Moses, I will have mercy on whom I will have mercy, and I will have compassion upon whom I will have compassion and that inferred v. 16. So then it, that is the purpose of God according to election, of which before v. 11. is not of him that willeth, nor of him that runneth, but of God that showeth mercy. As for reprobation rightly stated, no iniquity will be found therein, if the grand laws of the universe be duly heeded, which is that all creatures be subservient to their makers glory according to the proverb. The Lord hath made all things for himself, yea even the wicked for the day of evil: Seeing the end of reprobating any is mainly this, that God may thereby be exalted, as Paul tells us here v. 17. in the instance of Pharaoh. For the Scripture saith unto Pharaoh, even for this same purpose have I raised thee up, that I might show my power in thee, and that my name might be declared throughout all the earth.

§. 8. The next Query is that in v. 19. Thou wilt say then unto me, Why doth he yet find fault? for who hath resisted his will? He had said concerning God in the words immediately foregoing, He hath mercy on whom he will have mercy, and whom he will he hardeneth. Corrupt nature catching at the latter clause, is ready to impute unto God himself, (as injustice before, so from hence) rigor and cruelty, for that notwithstanding his own willing in a sense the hard-heartedness of Reprobates, he yet finds fault with them for it. yea, and damns them in the conclusion, although his will be irresistible. The substance of this cavil, namely what influence the Will and Providence of God hath into men's induration, and how guilty themselves are of it, shall hereafter be made to appear (if the Lord will) in explication of the following Aphorism. Meanwhile, it is carefully to be observed how S^e. Paul, as provoked by the malapartness of men, who though conscious to themselves of their own hardening themselves, will be laying the blame upon God, strikes in with his Apostolical authority, and gives them this severe check, Nay, but O man, who art thou that repliest against God? Qui ex adverso respon•as Deo, as it is well rendered by Beza in reference to the continual and manifold burlings up of carnal reason against divine dispensations and decrees, that which our English Proverb calls chopping Logic with god. A vice which our very being men should suffice to wean us from.

So as the word, O man here seems to carry an emphasis in it, which Austin long ago observed in sundry passages of one and the same set of his Sermons.

Ask me not an account (saith he) of Divine dispensations, why things are carried so and so, towards this and that person. I am a man of whom thou askest; thou that enquirest art a man. Let us both attend to the man that said, O man! Who art thou that repliest against God? Let man hear, lest man perish, for whose sake God himself became man. And again: mind it well who he is against whom thou repliest, and who thou thyself art that repliest against him. He is God, thou art but a man.

And yet again most fully.

Thou askest a reason of this and that, I will tremble at the depth; thou arguest, let me wonder. Do thou dispute, I resolve to believe. I see the depth, but the bottom I cannot reach.

§. 9. His third way of prosecution is, by alleging certain testimonies out of Moses and the Prophets. I shall only fix upon one, namely that in Romans 9. 27. Isaiah also crieth concerning Israel; Though the number of the children of Israel be as the sand of the sea, a remnant shall be saved. Who so list, may see this and the following verses expounded to our purpose by the learned Ludovic. de Dieu of God's, Decrees, yea which (is more) Paul himself interpreting the remnant of God's Elect in Rom. 11. 2, 3, 4, 5. where the conclusion is, Even so then at this present time also, there is a remnant according to the Election of grace.

And now, Reader, judge I pray thee between us; and tell me after all this, that hath been produced, whether a vehement agitator in these points, had any just cause to say as one did,

That to him who shall narrowly and attentively weigh and consider the tenor, and process of the Apostles discourse, Romans 9. from verse 6. to the end, it will be found as clear as the light at noon day, that there is nec vola nec vestigium, neither print nor footstep, neither little nor much of any such thing, as either Election or Reprobation in it.

Meaning (as he there expresseth himself) a peremptory Election and Reprobation from eternity of a determinate number of men, under a mere personal consideration.

§. 10. As for the proof of our second Assertion, those words in verse 20. 21, 22. Shall the thing formed, say to him that formed it, Why hast thou made me thus? Hath not the potter power over the clay, of the same lump to make one vessel unto honour, and another unto dishonor? What if God willing to show his wrath, and to make his power known, endured with much longsuffering the vessels of wrath fitted to destruction? clearly hold forth to my apprehension the Sovereign greatness and power of God, as the fountain of Negative Reprobation; and contain a direct allusion to that in Isaiah, 45. 9. Woe unto him that striveth with his maker. Let the potsherd strive with the potshards of the earth. Shall the clay say to him that fashioneth it, What mak'st thou? or thy work, He hath no hands? Now if the Prophet and Apostle, or rather the Holy Ghost by them, do rightly infer the silence and submission of the clay from its relation to the Potter; much more may the quiet submission of Non-Elect persons to the disposing will of God, be from hence concluded; (as Lessius demonstrates) seeing mankind hath much more dependence upon the Sovereign Lord of all, then a Potter can challenge over any vessel whatsoever: and this notwithstanding they are not yet fully convinced of the reason of all God's proceedings with them. Such as still expect that, and therefore fly in the face of God for want of satisfaction in this and that particular, must give me leave to send them to the Morals of Gregory for the learning of better manners. Man (saith he) considering himself, holds his peace, and he that acknowledgeth himself but dust, is afraid to discuss the judgments of God. For him to seek a reason of God's secret Decrees, is nothing else but to rise up proudly against the counsel of his Will. Wherefore when the cause of any fact of his is not discerned, it calls for our silence and humility; for the sense of flesh sufficeth not to pierce into the secrets of Majesty. So as he that sees not a reason of that or that Divine dispensation, by considering his own infirmity, sees a clear reason why he sees it not.

§. 11. But, say Gregory what he can, yea and Paul himself what he will, the fault is not like to be mended so long as carnal minds have to do with these points. We are all by nature Enemies in our minds, as our Apostle tells the Colossians: yea, the carnal mind, or the wisdom of the flesh (as he speaks to the Romans) is enmity against God: for it is not subject to the law of God, neither indeed can be: whence it is that one or other of the great Masters of Reason (as they would be accounted) although they be not unwilling to yield an independent Sovereignty and Arbitrary working to some men, as in the Eastern parts of the world most do to their absolute Monarchs as at this day, and the Roman Senate did of old to Augustus Caesar, witness DionCassius in his history; The Senate, saith he, freed him from all the necessity of law, so as he might do or not do what he list, as having both himself and the law at his disposal: yet out of their deep enmity and malignity against God, deny him the like prerogative, and will therefore be always found opposing his Decrees, and those most, that are most Arbitrary. This hath been the root of that notorious piece of opposition in laboring that the decrees of God should be wholly silenced, and either not studied, or if studied, not disputed, or if disputed, not preached of. Some such there were in Austin's time, against whom he bends his discourse in the 14, 15, and 16. Chapters of his book, De Bono Perseverantiae. And some there are at this day that rank the points of Predestination among Fruitless and Sapless Speculations.

Holy Bucer was of a far different judgment. He in one of his first Lectures at Cambridge upon the epistle to the Ephesians, after published by Tremellius. Si hujus electionis &c. If the memory and meditation of God's election were taken from us, good Lord, how should we resist the Devil! For so often as Satan tempts my faith, which he is ever tempting of, then do I always betake myself to free election &c. A little after he asserts the doctrine of election as a principle ground not of solid comfort only, but of solid piety, and of true love to God; in which regards he would by all means have it preached in coetu fidelium, in the open congregation. Verily this famous University is likely to continue famous, so long as it continueth orthodox. We may expect to share in the Apostles benediction, and hope that the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, the love of God, and the fellowship of the Spirit will be with us, so long as we teach, to the praise of the glory of free grace, the love of God in electing freely what persons he will; the grace of Christ in dying freely, and with a special intention for those whom the Father had elected; and the communication of the Spirit in freely converting and finally preserving those whom the father had so chosen, and the Son so died for. Sure I am our blessed Savior once said to his Disciples, In thisrejoice that your names are written in heaven; and that nothing doth more inflame a Christians love then a firm belief of his personal election from eternity, after he hath been able to evidence the writing of his name in heaven, by the experience he hath had of an heavenly calling, and an heavenly conversation. When the Spirit of God (whose proper work it is to assure, as it was the Fathers to elect, and the Sons to redeem) hath written the law of life in a Christians heart, and therewith enabled him to know assuredly that his name is written in the book of life; he cannot then but melt with flames of holy affection, according to that most emphatical speech of Bernard, God deserveth love from such as he hath loved long before they could deserve it. And his love to God will be without end, who knoweth that God's love to him was without any beginning. I confess indeed that the book of life, like the tree of life in paradise, hath a tree of knowledge growing hard by which cannot with safety be tasted of. There are some nice and needless questions started about it that might be spared, and should be forborne. But these high walls and sons of Anak should by no means prevail with us to play the unworthy spies, and bring up a bad report, or give way to any brought up by others upon a land that floweth with so much milk and honey as the doctrine of predestination doth. Surely for men to silence it, were to stop up those wels, which the Prophets and Apostles, especially Paul, have digged in their writings for the refreshing of thirsty souls; yea to endeavor the cancelling of that first and great charter of our salvation.

EXERCITATION 4.

Creation what. Pythagoras and Trismegist. Hebr. 6. 3. opened. Scripture-Philosophy. Ex nihilo nihil fit, how true. Creature what. God's goodness in works of creation, particularly in the framing of Adam. The consultation upon which, pattern after which, parts of which he framed. Two histories, one of a Priest, the other of a Monk. The original of body and soul improved.

§. 1. The word Creation hath divers acceptions. It is taken either largely, for the production of anything remarkably good or evil; so magistrates in a Common-wealth, and Graduates in an University are said to be created, God is said to create a cleanheart, and we are called his workmanship created in Christ unto good works: and for evil, Moses in Numbers speaking of the remarkable judgment inflicted on Kora and his complices useth this expression, Si creationem creaverit Deus, if God created a creature: the radix is 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 Or limitedly, with some restraint; and that either strictly, for the generation of living creatures in a natural way, so in Horace, Fortes creantur ortibus & bonis, and in Virgil, *Sulmone creatos quatuor h*c juvenes*. Whence also, procreare, or more strictly, for the making of a thing out of some praeexistent matter, but such as is naturally indisposed and unapt for that production, whereas in generation there is always materia habilis & disposita; as when God created man of the dust of the earth, and woman of man's rib, or most strictly, for the production of a thing without any praeexistent matter at all out of mere nothing; we are to speak of it in the two latter senses, for so it belongeth to God alone. Thussaith the Lord thy Redeemer, and he that formed thee from the womb, I am the Lord that maketh all things, that stretcheth forth the heavens alone, that spreadeth abroad the earth by myself. Yea so necessary was the confession of this truth with the utmost hazard to distinguish God from Idols, that to the end the Jews, who were then captives in Babylon, might not be wholly to seek for a profession of their faith, they had this verse in the Hebrew Bible written then, and so still in Chaldee letters, Thus shall ye say unto them, The God's that have not made the heavens and the earth, even they shall perish from the earth, and from under these heavens. Not unsuitable whereunto is that of Pythagoras long since cited by Justin Martyr, Whosoever would from henceforth challenge any Diety to himself, must be able to show such a world as this, and to say in truth, This is of my making. and that of Trismegist (an heathen too) in one of his books; There are mainly three to be considered; God, the World, and Man: the world made for man, and man for God.

§. 2. But we have a more sure word of Prophecy, and to that let us take heed: It will show us, First, How we Christians by faith understand that the worlds were framed by the word of God, so that things which are seen were not made of things which do appear. Well might a late writer conclude his Discourse of Creation with this Epiphonema, Quantum est quod nescimus! The truth is it is but little that we can learn from Philosophers, even concerning Creation itself, (the only Article of the Creed which they speak fully too) unacquainted with Scripture. Which made Maximilian the first to say, that the Ethnics were to be heard not as singing Nightingales, but as croaking frogs: And two great Physicians betake themselves to the study of Scripture for understanding the secrets of Nature. One Sennertus, who findeth much fault with those who perverted the text of Moses, and interpreted him out of heathen writers, ausu infelici, (saith he) & non tolerando by an unhappy and intolerable undertaking. The other Vallesius, who in the Preface to his Sacra Philosophia telleth us that whereas he had in the former part of his life commented upon all Aristotle's Acromasticks, and many pieces both of Hippocrates and Galen, he was resolved to devote the remainder of his days to the study of the holy Scriptures, and to seek his Philosophy out of them for time to come. By faith we understand. A Christian firmly believes those truths concerning the time and manner of the worlds creation, because he hath Scripture testimony for them. That the worlds were framed, speaking after the Jewish mode, though there be indeed but one world, in the plural number; for the Hebrews then were wont to mention a three-old, viz. an inferior, a middle, and a superior world, as Cameron telleth us. Framed by the word of God, saith this place. When Solomon was to build a magnificent Temple, he needed many workmen, and they many tools. Not so God, who did all without any coadjutour, any instrument, by the sole word of his command. By the word of the Lord were the heavens made, and all the host of them by the breath of his mouth. Let them praise the name of the Lord, for he commanded, and they were created. Art can work, if Nature first afford it some complete matter: Let an artificer have a stone, he can make a statue, otherwise not. Nature can work if there be a principle to work upon, though incomplete; Let there be seed, it can produce a plant, let there be spawn, a fish. But to work without praeexistent matter, so as to bring forth the first plant without seed, the first fish without a spawn, yea the first principles of these and all things else out of nothing, by his sole word, is proper to God. So that things which are seen (as it followeth here) were not made of things which do appear. That Rule, Ex nihilo nihil fit, holds in natura constituta, now that God hath set nature in a course of working by secondary causes enabled to produce effects like themselves; but in natura constituenda: it was otherwise, when God wrought by his word of command, and is therefore called Elohim by Moses two and thirty times in his history of creation, as Mercer observeth.

The Schoolmen for the most part express that which is here called, Things that do not appear, by the term Nothing, either simply Nothing, or No such thing, as it appeared to be at first: yet when they speak of Non-ens, they take not the word materially, as if meare Nothing were the matter of which any Being were framed; but Terminatively, as the term from which the Creator moved. For example, the Angels, they say, and the souls of men, together with the Essential forms of natural bodies were not then educed ex potentia materiae, (as they are since in the ordinary course of generation by particular agents;) but induced in materiam by God himself the universal cause, and had an immediate Production by the Creator: whereas some other things, as the Sun & Mans body, had a mediate creation, as being produced ex non-ente tali from such things as of themselves could not have caused such effects, but by virtue of God's creative word. Doctor Hall hath given us the true notion of this in a compendious saying of his, God made something out of nothing, and of that something, all things. So as if all things be run to their first Original, they will be found to come up out of the womb of Nothing, from whence nothing but Almightiness could have fetchit them.

§. 3. That although the creatures be now subject to vanity, yet the goodness of God did shine forth in their first production, and is still abundantly manifested in them. The creature, saith Paul, speaking of its present state, was made subject to vanity. Whatsoever thing had any being of itself, and was not forever, but did receive a being in time, and that from God, is a creature, saith Daneus well: thereby excluding the Divinity of Christ which was from everlasting, as the Angels were not, but produced by God in time; and sins of all sorts, because though God be someway an actor about, yet he is no author of them; as also works of art, for which God enables men, but produceth them not. The vanity which all such things are subject to, is partly Negative, a non-ability to serve man as they did before the fall; after it the Lord said to Adam, Cursed is the ground for thy sake; in sorrow shalt thou eat of it all the days of thy life. Partly Positive; whence that of Solomon, Behold, all is vanity and vexation of spirit. Yet if any shall hereupon conclude, that it was so from the beginning, Moses will expressly confute him, by whom we are told, that when God at the very end of his creation Saw everything that he had made, and behold it was very good; which to me is a demonstration that the Angels were not then fallen. Yea if any shall deny that the goodness of God is still visible in them, let that saying of the Psalmist stop his mouth, The earth is full of the goodness of the Lord. What he predicates of the earth, I am not afraid to extend to the sea, and to all other parts of the Universe, They are all at this day full of the goodness of the Lord: the sea especially, which we Islanders are especially bound to take notice of by way of rejoicing, and to glorify God for, according to these direct places, Glorify ye the Lord, even the name of the Lord God of Israel, in the isles of the sea. And in the Psalms, The Lord reigneth, let the earth rejoice, let the multitude of the isles be glad thereof. Well may the earth rejoice herein, because if the Lord did not so reign as to set bounds to that (whose natural place is above the earth, as Psalm 104. informs us) it would all quickly be overflowed. Well may the multitude of the isles be glad thereof: for what are they in regard of the Ocean that surrounds them, but as so many nutshells in a great vessel of water; how suddenly drowned, if God did not reign so as to restrain that element?

§. 4. But I must not allow myself too much scope, I shall therefore restrain my future discourse upon this head to the sole creation of man, and show how goodness appeared in it. It is reported as the speech of Favorinus; That in the vast world of creatures, there is nothing truly great except the little world of man. Surely, next to the knowledge of God, there is nothing of more concernment to us; and therefore let none wonder at me, who cannot go over all, for singling out his creation to be insisted upon: concerning which I intend to show out of certain texts in Genesis, the consultation upon which, the pattern after which, and the parts of which he was made at first.

For the first, It is the manner of Artificers to deliberate much, and to put themselves to more then ordinary pains about their Master-pieces. Man was to be the Master-piece of this visible world, and accordingly Moses speaking of God according to the manner of men, brings him in consulting about so prime a piece. God said, Let us make man: whereas most other things were made with a word speaking, Let there be light, and there was light. Let the earth bring forth, and it was so. Here the Creator calls as it were a solemn Council of the sacred persons in Trinity, when he is about to proceed to the making of man. Which is to be taken notice of, both because other Scriptures use the plural number where man's creation is spoken of (as in Eccles. 12. 1. Remember thy creator: according to the Original, Creatours; and Job. 35. 10. Where is God my maker? Hebrew, Makers: and because it should restrain us from deriding any man's deformity, for fear of our reproaching his Maker. To which purpose that history is very remarkable. An Emperor of Germany came upon a Lordsday morning unattended to a poor country Church, where, pretending himself a soldier, he was present at Mass, which was said by the parish Priest, a man so deformed, that he was saith mine Author, Poene portentum naturae, almost a monster in nature. And as the Emperor wondered with in himself, that God, (whose beauty and Majesty is infinite) would be served by so deformed a creature, it came to pass that the Priest reading the hundred Psalm, which was in the course of his Liturgy to be rehearsed upon that day, pronounced the second verse thereof, Know ye that the Lord he is God, it is he that hath made us and not we ourselves, in such a different tone and voice from that which he before used, that the Emperor apprehended it as a thing ordained by Almighty God to meet with and answer his present cogitation, and began to entertain so reverent an opinion of the Priest, that having informed himself after Mass of his great virtue, he made him Arch-Bishop of Colen, much against the good man's will: who notwithstanding behaved himself in that great charge with singular commendation, and left a most sweet savor behind him.

§. 5. For the second. The pattern after which man was made, is sometimes called Image alone. So, God created man in his own image, in the image of God created he him; sometimes likeness alone, In the day that God created man, in the likeness of God made he him. Sometimes both, Let us make man in our image, after our likeness: which makes a wise interpreter think that when they are joined, it is by Hendiadys, and that the Holy Ghost meaneth an Image most like his own, ad imaginem & similitudinem suam, that is, ad quàm simillimam sui imaginem. It is exceeding much for man's honor, that he is an Epitomie of the world, an abridgement of other creatures, partaking with the stones in being, with the stars in motion, with the plants in growing, with beasts in sense, and with Angels in science. But his being made after God's Image is far more. As great men are wont, they often erect a stately building, then cause their own picture to be hung up in it that spectators may know who was the chief Founder of it: so when God had created the Fabric of this world, the last thing he did was the setting up his own Picture in it, creating man after his own image. Now there is a threefold sense of this phrase: for the image of God is taken, first, in a large sense, and so it is applicable unto all men in regard of the substance of their souls, which are invisible, incorporeal. and intelligent, as God is. Whoso sheddeth man's blood, by man shall his blood be shed, for in the image of God made he man. And again in James, Therewith curse we men which are made after the similitude of God. We read of the Emperor Theodosius, that having exacted a new tribute from the people of Antioch, there arose a commotion, in which the people broke down the Statue of the Empress Placilla his late wife. He in a rage sent his Forces against the city to sack it. One Macedonius a Monk interceded thus. If the Emperor be so much, and so justly offended that the image of his wife was so defaced, shall not the king of heaven (said the Monk) be angry at him if he shall deliberately deface and break the image of God in so many men as are like to perish in this Massacre. What a vast difference is there betwixt reasonable creatures, and that brazen image? we for that image are easily able to set up one hundred, but the Emperor with all his power is not able to restore so much as an hair of these men, if once he kill them. upon which admonition Theodosius, it is said, forbore his design. Secondly, in a strict sense. So 'tis applicable only to Christ, who is the image of the invisible God; the brightness of his glory, and express image of his person. For all the three things that go to make a perfect image, viz. Likeness, Derivation, and Agreement in nature are concurrent here. The kings image is in his coin, and in his son, but after a different manner. In his coin there may be likeness and derivation, but not identity of Nature, which is also added in his son. In Saints there are the former; they are like to God in their qualities derived from him; but in Christ all three. Thirdly in a middle sense, neither so largely as to extend to all men, nor so strictly as to be restrained unto Christ alone, but between both. So taken, it is nothing else but that conformity to God from which all men fell in the first Adam, and unto which none but Saints are restored by the second.

§. 6. For the third, The parts of which man consisteth, are body and soul; Moses at first speaks to both, The Lord God (saith he) formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life: and man became a living soul. God had before made Spirits by themselves, and bodies by themselves, some celestial, others terrestrial; now on the sixth day for a conclusion of his works, he frames a creature consisting of a spirit and a body joined together, in whom he includes the choice perfections of all the former. One observes that God hath joined all things in the world by certain Media. The earth and water are coupled by slime; the air and water by vapors; Exhalations are a middle between air and fire; Quick silver a middle between water and metals; coral between roots and stones, so man between beasts and Angels. Manilius hath comprehended much in few verses,

—Quid mirum noscere mundum

Si possint homines, quibus est & mundus in ipsis,

Exemplúmque Dei quisque est in imagine parva?

In English thus,

—What wonder if men know the world

Since they themselves the world epitomize,

Yea everyone a medal of God is?

Where he doth in effect call his body 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 a little world, and his soul 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 a little God. In the pursuance of the former, the Stoics were wont to say, That it was better being a fool in an human shape, then being wise in the form of a beast. Yea Solomon himself in the twelfth of Ecclesiastes findeth in his head both Sun, Moon, and Stars. Well therefore may his head resemble the heavens where these lights are (as our eyes also are in our upper parts) without which the world would be a dungeon; his heart the fire, it being kept hot by continual motion, and conveying natural heat to the whole body; his blood and other humors the water; his spirits the air; and his flesh and bones the earth. In prosecution of the latter, Tully a Platonist goeth so far as to bid a man take notice that he is a God, and some Divines find a resemblance of the Trinity in man's soul. The understanding, will and conscience, three faculties, but one soul; as Father, Son, and holy Ghost, three persons but one God: Let us all mean while, taste and see how good the Lord is in preparing us such bodies, and infusing such souls into us: but withal so as to consider and improve the Original of both.

§. 7. Seeing Adams body had its original from the dust of the earth, the consideration hereof should be an antidote against pride in all his posterity. Art not thou the son of Adam? was not he the son of dust? was not that the son of nothing? when the Lord would humble Adam after the fall he put him in mind of his being dust. In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat thy bread, till thou return unto the ground; for out of it wast thou taken: for dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return. And when Abraham would be low before God, he styleth himself dust and ashes, Behold now I have taken upon me to speak unto the Lord, who am but dust and ashes. Why art thou proud O dust and ashes? saith Siracides, and Bernard, Cùm sis humi limus, cur non es humilimus? Why art not thou most humble, O man, seeing thou art but the dust of the earth. As for the soul, that was purely from God, Divinae particula aurae as an ancient Poet calleth it, for God saith Moses, breathed into his nostrils the breath of life; and man became a living soul. This should render us restless till that Image after which Adam was made be renewed in us by regeneration. The relics of it found in men unconverted what are they but magni nominis umbra, the mere shadow of a great and glorious name. How unlike are natural men to God for all them? Our Queen Elizabeth once in her progress observing some pictures of hers hung up for signs to be very unlike her, caused them to be taken down and burnt. Burning must be the end of those that continue unlike to God; whereas such as are by converting grace changed into the same image (as Paul speaketh) from glory to glory shall at length arrive at that perfection of glory, which is also the image of God, as David hath it, As for me, I shall behold thy face in righteousness; I shall be satisfied when I awake with thy likeness.

EXERCITATION 5. The same and other attributes of God declared from his providential dispensations, the interchangeableness whereof largely discoursed of and applied from Ecclesiastes 7. 14. A gloss upon Isaiah chap. 10. 11. Cheerfulness a duty in six respects; Crosses how to be considered.

§. 1. THE vicissitude of divine dispensations (which I am to treat of next) is exactly recorded by Solomon, saying, In the day of prosperity be joyful, but in the day of adversity consider: God also hath set the one over against the other, to the end that man should find nothing after him. It is most clear from hence, that there is an intermixture of dispensations, adverse and prosperous, in the course of divine Providence, and that we may see much of God therein. It will appear in six particulars.

There are times. I. Wherein things go very ill with a man in reference to his private affairs, yet well with the public, which keepeth him from sinking into despondency. Mephibosheth was cheated by Ziba of half his lands; yet Let him take all, said he, for as much as my Lord the king is come again in peace unto his own house. The woman of Sparta, whom we read of in Plutarch, being told that all her five sons were slain in the battle, but withal that the enemies were worsted, and her countrey men victors, uttered this Heroic speech. Lugeant ergo miserae; Ego victrix patria beatam me esse judico. Let such as are miserable lament; I cannot but account myself happy now that my country hath had the better.

II. Wherein a man's personal comforts are multiplied, but the Churches misery damps his mirth. Nehemiah was much in favor at the king of Persia's Court, yet his countenance could not but be sad when he heard that the city the place of his fathers sepulchers lay waste, and the gates thereof were consumed with fire. We read of Terentius an orthodox captain under Valens an Arian Emperor, who having done some eminent service was willed by the Emperor, who intended him a just recompense, to ask of him what he would. He preferred a petition in behalf of the orthodox Christians, that they might have a Church allowed them by themselves to worship God in. Valens displeased, tore the petition and threw it away. He gathered up the scattered pieces, and professed that seeing he could not be heard in the cause of Christ, he would make no suit for his own advantage. That of Isaiah, Rejoice ye with Jerusalem &c. that ye may suck and be satisfied, is both preceptive and argumentative. Jerusalem is compared to a nursing mother, believers to her sucking children; If the Nurse be in health, the Child hath cause to rejoice in that, and shall fare the better for it: If she be distempered, the child will go near to suck the disease from her.

§. 2. III. Wherein long prosperity followeth after much adversity, as in Joseph's case. He had been envied, sold, imprisoned; His feet were hurt in the stocks, the iron entered into his soul. Yet afterward, Pharaoh giveth him his own ring, arrayeth him in vestures of fine linen, putteth a gold chain about his neck, maketh him ride in the second chariot he had, caused the people to cry before him. Bow the knee, and appointed him Ruler over all the land of Egypt, in which height of honor he lived and died.

IV. Wherein adversity treads upon the heels of long prosperity, as in Job's case. The candle of God had long shined upon his head, and the secret of God been upon his tabernacle. His children then were about him, he had washed his steps with butter, and the rock poured him out rivers of oil. His root was spread by the waters, and the dew lay all night upon his branch. His glory was fresh in him, and his bow renowned in his hand, which are his own expressions Job 29. But ere long, his servants are slain with the edge of the sword, his castle taken away by the enemy, all his children killed at once with the fall of an house in which they were feasting, he himself afflicted in body, vexed in spirit, grieved by his comforters, in a word brought from the throne to the dunghill, so as to give just occasion to the proverb, As poor as Job.

Fifthly, Wherein crosses and comforts take it by turns, so as a man goes out of one into another, in a succession of vicissitudes. Thus it fared with Ezechiah. After his coming to the Crown for divers years the Lord was with him, and he prospered whithersoever he went forth. But in the fourteenth year of his reign, the tide of prosperity begins to turn. Sennacharib comes up against him with a most formidable host, and took his fenced cities. He betakes himself to prayer, and the Lord delivers him by a miracle, sending an Angel to destroy one hundred eighty five thousand of his enemies in a night. But the next news we hear, is that Ezechiah was sick unto death; yet he dies not, but had fifteen years added to his life, and was assured by a sign from heaven of his recovery. Yet presently after all this he receives a sad message from thence concerning the loss of all his treasure, and the woeful condition of all his posterity. See what a strange succession is here; after glorious victories, comes the loss of his fenced cities, and an alarm given to Jerusalem itself. After that a miraculous deliverance, then a mortal sickness, then a cheering sign, but e're long a Message of very sad concernment.

§. 3. VI. Wherein pleasure and sorrow, joy and grief are so interwoven one with another, as a man may seem happy and miserable both at once. Jacob is at once scared with hearing of Esau's four hundred men, and cheered with the sight of an host of Angels sent to gaurd him. He doth at once receive an hurt in the hollow of his thigh, and a blessing from the Angel that wrestled with him. David at once is hated by Saul, and loved by Jonathan. Ahasuerus at once enjoys the glory of an absolute Monarch, and is slighted by his own wife. Haman at once swims in an ocean of Courtdelights, and is tormented for the want of Mordechai's knee. As one the one side, Out of the strong comes sweetness; when the spirit of glory and of God rest upon a suffering Saint, because he is a Saint and a sufferer: so on the other, Even in laughter the heart is sorrowful.

—Medio de fonte leporum

Surgit amari aliquid, quod in ipsis floribus angat.

That is,

Some bitter thing from midst of sweetness breeds;

And that which vexeth from the flowers proceeds.

§. 4. This God doth for divers good ends and purposes. As first to manifest his wisdom in compounding passages of Providence, so as one shall qualify another: prosperity allay the sowreness of adversity; & this asswage the swellings of that. As the painters skill appears in tempering bright colors, and dark shadows; the cooks in mingling sweet & tart ingredients; the musicians in raising harmony out of discords; Orators in making up curious sentences by a fit opposition of contrarities.

II. To magnify his goodness. The frame of our spirits is such, that if prosperity were continued without interruption, we should be apt to swell and presume; if adversity without intermission, to sink and despair. Our weakness such, that we should never give a due estimate to blessings, were we not sometimes taught by experience what it is to be under pressures. We learn by sickness to prize health, & by restraint to value liberty. A calm is much more pleasing to us after a tempest; and the shining forth of the Sun after an elipse. It is therefore an act of much mercy in God thus to intermingle favors & crosses, lest by a constant course of the former, we should grow wanton and effeminate, or by continuance of the latter, sottish and stupid.

III. To keep up and maintain his respect in the world. God will be known to be the Sovereign Lord of all persons and things; the great disposer of all affairs in such a way as seemeth best to himself, & therefore gives out blessings and crosses interchangeably, so as man shall be at no certainty what to expect, but live in a constant dependence on him, who keeps the disposal of prosperity and adversity in his own hands, to the end that man should find nothing certain but this, that there is a great uncertainty of future events. Wherefore, §. 5. First, take notice from hence what we are to look for in our pilgrimage here. viz. vicissitudes and changes from one condition into another. If Solomon had nowhere said, There is a time to weep, and a time to laugh, experience would soon have forced us to acknowledge that our whole course is chequered with prosperity and adversity; that most of a Christians drink in this life is Oxymel, most of his food, Bitter-sweets. Whilest Israel marched throughout the wilderness, the blackest night had a pillar of fire, and brightest day a pillar of cloud: so in this world, things never go so well with the Israel of God, but that they groan under some affliction; never so ill, but that they have some comfort afforded them.

Secondly, Learn to maintain in ourselves a mixture of affections suitable to this mixture of Divine dispensations. Rejoice with trembling. Leaven and Honey were both excluded under the Law from offering by fire: Leaven for its excessive soureness; Honey for its excessive sweetness; To show (saith Ainsworth) that in Saints there should neither be extremity of grief, nor of pleasure, but a mediocrity. We should be careful in time of prosperity to fear affliction with a fear of expectation, though not of amazement; with such a fear as may cause preparation, but no discouragement. Look at a very fair day, as that which may prove a weather-breeder, and usher in storms. On the other side, in time of adversity hope for refreshment. The Psalmist did so, All thy waves are gone over me, yet the Lord will command his loving-kindness.

Thirdly, Observe the difference that is between this present, and that other world. Dying Aristotle is reported to have said, I rejoice that I am now going out of a world of contraries. This indeed is so. But that which dying men go into is without such mixture. All tears shall be wiped from the Saints eyes; & impenitent sinners shall have judgment without mercy. Briefly, in this militant Church, as in the Ark of old, There is a rod, and a pot of manna Here upon earth we have little Manna without some rods, little welfare without some sharp affliction; few Rods without some Manna, not many afflictions without some measure of consolation: whereas in Heaven there is nothing but Manna, in Hell nothing but Rods, or Scorpions rather.

§. 6. IV. Keep we ourselves in a frame of cheerfulness, that we may be always prepared in the day of prosperity to rejoice. This will appear a duty which we are bound to,

I. Because God doth not only approve and like it. (He loveth a cheerful giver, so a cheerful thanks-giver and worshipper. Nehemiah was afraid to be seen sad in the kings presence. Mordechai durst not go into the court gates with his sack-cloth on: dejected looks, and the sack-cloth of an uncheerfull carriage do ill become the servant of the king, the followers of the court of heaven:) But also require and command it, Serve the Lord with gladness. The Jews of old were commanded to rejoice in their solemn feasts: which were accordingly to be kept in the most cheerful seasons. The Pass-over at the first ripening of corn, Pentecost at the first reaping, and the Feast of Tabernacles at the end of Harvest.

II. Because Jesus Christ was anointed to give us the oil of joy for mourning, and the garment of praise for the spirit of heaviness. He himself indeed was anointed with the oil of gladness above his fellows, but such as are received into fellowship with him should, and shall, if the fault be not in themselves, partake with him in some degree of the same unction.

III. Because the Spirit of Christ is a spirit of cheerfulness. His two first fruits mentioned Galat. 5. 22. are Love and Joy. Yea when it is said, Grieve not the holy spirit of God, Heinsius thinketh this to be part of the meaning. Be cheerful after an holy manner. Let none offend that great guest, the spirit of God by overmuch sadness. And Drusius telleth us in the Preface to his Praeterita of an usual saying among the Hebrews, Spiritum sanctum non residere super hominem moestum, that the holy Ghost is not wont to reside upon a sad-spirited man.

IV. Because our adversary the Devil, being a melancholy spirit himself, delighteth in our sadness. The prince of darkness loves to see the servants of God in a dark condition. He is gratified and gets advantage by our uncheerfulness. Therefore Paul writeth to his Corinthians concerning the incestuous person, that upon his repentance they would comfort him and prevent his being swallowed up with overmuch sorrow, lest Satan, saith he, should get an advantage of us, for we are not ignorant of his devices.

V. Because if we look to ourselves, cheerfulness is advantageous both to our bodies, therefore compared to the best food, such as men use to have at feasts. He that is of a merry heart hath a continual feast. and the best physic too. A merry heart doth good like a medicine: but a broken spirit drieth the bones. And also our spirits. Uncheerfulness maketh the soul of a man drive heavily, as the chariots of Pharaoh did in the red sea; but the joy of the Lord oyleth the wheels. Cheerfulness suppleth the joints of our hearts, and so rendereth them nimble and active in holy performances. See Nehemiah 8. 10.

VI. Because if we cast our eyes upon others, the uncheerfulness of professors often bringeth a bad report upon the profession; and maketh the world ready to believe that Christians serve a bad master, or have but an hard service of it, whereas their rejoicing in the ways of the Lord would help to bring others in love with religion, See Acts 9. 31. and Esther 8. the two last verses.

§. 7. Fifthly, Endure afflictions so as in the day of adversity duly to consider the Nature, Author and Ends of Crosses.

I. The Nature of those afflictions that befall men in Christ. They are not from vindicative justice, which is wholly removed from such by the mediation of him in whom they have believed, and so not formally punishments: but from fatherly discipline, whereby it cometh to pass that although the matter be the same, there is as much difference between the sufferings of believers, and of ungodly persons out of Christ, as there is between the cords wherewith an executioner pinioneth his condemned malefactor, and those wherewith the indulgent Surgeon bindeth his patient; the ones design being to kill, the others to cure. They are crosses indeed which believers undergo, but no curses, and have no such malignity in them as the world imagineth.

II. The Author, Well might Eliphaz say, Trouble springs not out of the ground, for it cometh from heaven, and that out of love. As many as I love, saith Christ, I rebuke and chasten. How bitter soever the cup be, which I am to drink, and by whomsoever it is handed to me, the comfort is, it was of my heavenly fathers mixing, who I am sure would not put any poisonous, although he do put some displeasing ingredients into it. I will therefore say, Christ enabling, as Christ himself did; The cup which my father hath given me, shall I not drink it?

III. The Ends, Which are specially three. 1. The mortifying of our corruptions. By this shall the iniquity of Jacobbe purged, and this is all the fruit to take away his sin. All the harm which the fiery furnace did the young men in Daniel was to burn off their cords; our lusts are cords, cords of vanity in Scripture-phrase; the fiery trial is sent on purpose to burn and consume them. Afflictions help to scour off this kind of rust. Adversity like winter-weather is of use to kill the vermin; which the the summer of prosperity is wont to breed. 2. For the enlivening and quickening of our graces. I spake unto thee in thy prosperity and thou saidst, I will not hear. But elsewhere, Lord introuble have they visited thee; they poured out a prayer when they chastening was upon them. These two places compared show how apt prosperity is to make men Gallio's, adversity to render them Zealots. As bruising maketh aromatical spices to send out their savor; and collision fetcheth fire out of the flint, which was hid before; so pressures excite devotion. The cold water of persecution is often cast in the Churches face to fetch her again when she is in a swoon. 3. For the furthering of our glory. Christ went from the Cross to Paradise; so do Christians. He was made perfect through sufferings; so are they. It became him to suffer, and to enter into his glory: It becomes them to tread in their masters steps. When the founder hath cast his bell, he doth not presently hang it up in the steeple, but first try it with his hammer, and beat upon it on every side, to see if any flaw be in it. Christ doth not presently after he hath converted a man, convey him to heaven, but suffers him first to be beaten upon by manifold temptations, and after advanceth him to the crown spoken of Jam. 1. 12. Blessed is the man that endureth temptations, for when he is tried he shall receive the crown of life which the Lord hath promised to them that love him. this crown the cross makes way for;

although no cross can merit it but that of Christ. Yet as law is said to work wrath occasionally. So Our light afflictions which are but for a moment work for us a far more exceeding & eternal weight of glory.

APHORISM VI. Providence extends itself, not only to all created beings, and to all human affairs, especially those that concern the Church: but even to the sins of Angels and men.

EXERCITATION 1. Introduction concerning the contents of this Aphorism. Providence over all created beings. Preservation of men to be ascribed to God himself, not to good men, yea not to good Angels, in whom heart-searching and patience wanting. Providence reaching to human affairs: Oeconomical, Civil, Military, Moral and Ecclesiastical. Anastasius his design frustrate. Rome and our nation instanced in. I. G. castigated.

§. 1. THIS Aporisme requireth a clear demonstration of these propositions. 1. That divine providence extends itself to all created beings. 2. That it reacheth to all human affairs. 3. That it is especially seen in such affairs as concern the Church. And 4. That although God be not the author of sin, yet his providence is an actour in it. Unto these when I shall have added an answer to objections, and from each proposition an inference, the whole will be completely handled.

The first proposition, which I am to begin with, is, Divine providence extends itself to all created Beings. Well may we strike in with the Levites in that form of acknowledging God, wherein they went before the people, saying, Thou even thou art Lord alone. Thou hast made heaven, the heaven of heavens with all their host, the earth, and all things that are therein, the seas and all that is therein; and thou preservest them all. David bringeth it down a little lower, Thy judgments are a great deep, O Lord, thou preservest man and beast. Job lower yet, What shall I do unto thee, O thou preserver of men. As God made all things by the word of his command, He commanded and they were created, so he upholds them all in being by the word of his power. Heaven, earth, sea, man and beast, especially man. It is not with God, as with carpenters and shipwrights, who make houses for other men to dwell in, vessels for others to sail in, and therefore after they are made look after them no more; God who made all things for himself, looks to the preservation of all. It is accordingly said of Christ, All things were created by him and for him, and by him all things consist. The creatures are all as vessels, which if unhooped by withdrawing of God's manutency, all the liquor that is in them their several virtues, yea their several Beings would run out, and they return to their first nothing. Schoolmen compare God to the sun, creatures to the air. The sun shines by its own nature, the air only by participation of light from the Sun. So whatever good the creatures have, is by derivation from Jehovah, the fountain of Being. Take away the light of the Sun, the air ceaseth to shine, and so it is here. As things Artificial are preserved in their being by the duration of such natural things as they consist of v. g. an house by the lasting of stones and timber: so things natural which depend upon God by the continuance of that Divine influence by which they were at first made.

§. 2. It is not in good men to preserve themselves or others. They derogate from God exceedingly that ascribe too much in this kind to any man, as some luxuriant French wits did to Cardinal Richelieu: of whom they said, That God Almighty might put the Government of the world into his hands. That France in God's and the Cardinals hands was too strong; that what the soul was to the body, the same was he to France. Si foret his nullus, Gallia nulla foret. Yea one frivolous pamphleter profanely and ridiculously called him, The fourth person in the Trinity. Yea, not in good Angels themselves; Whothough they be all ministering spirits, sent forth to minister for them who shall be heirs of salvation? yet are none of them governing spirits, appointed to provide for mankind the utmost rewards and punishments. They are wanting in two qualifications which should enable them hereunto; one is the knowledge of men's hearts where the truth of grace, or venom of sin lieth: the other patience, whereof no Angel hath enough to bear with men without destroying them for their continual provocations. Whereas in God there is a meeting of both these. See for the former, Jerem. 15. 9, 10. The heart is deceitful above all things, and desperately wicked, who can know it? I the Lord search the heart; I try the reins, even to give every man according to his ways, and according to the fruit of his doing: And for the latter, Hosea 11. 9. I will not execute the fierceness of mine anger: I will not return to destroy Ephraim, for I am God and not man: we may add and say, God, and not Angel.

§. 3. The second proposition follows, viz. That Divine Providence reacheth to all human affairs: which we may for methods sake subdivide into Oeconomical, Civil, Military, Moral, and Ecclesiastical. Humane affairs are,

I. Oeconomical, such as do belong to a Family. For example, Riches and Poverty, Preferment and Debasement, which in Hannah's song are ascribed to the sole Providence of God. The Lord (said she) maketh poor, and maketh rich: he bringeth low, and lifteth up. He raiseth up the poor out of the dust, and lifteth up the beggar from the dunghill, &c. yea, to instance in blessings highly prized by Christian Families, Grace and Peace, which are the things prayed for by the Apostles in most of their benedictions. We read of Saints in Caesar's household, Phil. 4. 22. Nero, that monster of men, was Caesar then; he that had published a bloody law, That whosoever professed himself Christian, should be apprehended as an enemy to mankind, and put to death without any further defense. Yet even in his house the Providence of God hath so wrought, as to convert and preserve such men as were men of grace; Saints indeed, not only in his Empire, and under his Government, but in his Family, and under his Roof. As for Peace, that of the Rabbins, although it be somewhat a quaint, yet, may be an useful observation. Take the first letter (say they) of God's name, out of the name of the man, and the last out of the woman's name, and there remains nothing but fire; implying, that there is like to be nothing but the fire of contention and strife, jealousy and heart-burnings between man and wife, where they come not together in God's name. Whereas if wisdom make the match, as it doth when people marry in the Lord, happy are they who are so met, For her ways are ways of pleasantness, and all her paths are peace.

II. Civil, such as belongeth to Kingdoms, Republics, Corporations, or to men as combined in such Societies. Many are the contrivements of men to work themselves and others into places of Government: but when all this is done, that of the Psalmist is most true, Promotion comes neither from the east, nor from the west, nor from the south. But God is the judge: he pulleth down one, and setteth up another. And that of Daniel, He changeth the times and the seasons; he removeth kings, and setteth up kings. Witness this history: Anastasius a Grecian Emperor having no Male issue to succeed him, was desirous to transfer the Throne to one of his three Nephews, whom he had bred up; and not being able to resolve which of them he should take, put the thing to lot thus. He caused to be prepared three beds in the Royal-Chamber, and made his Crown to be hanged within the tester of one of these beds, called the Realm, being resolved to give it to him, who by lot should place himself under it. This done, he sent for his Nephews, and after he had Magnificently entertained them, commanded them to repose themselves, each one choosing one of the beds prepared for them. The eldest accomodated himself according to his fancy, and hit upon nothing; the second did the same. He then expected the youngest should go directly to the Crowned bed; but he prayed the Emperor that he might be permitted to lie with one of his brothers, and by this means not any of the three took the way of the Empire, which was so easy to be had, that it was not above a pace distant. Anastasius, much amazed, well saw God would transfer the Diadem from his race, as he did afterward to Justine. Who can read and consider such examples without saying as he did,

Ludit in humanis Divina potentia rebus.

That is,

Divine power often dares

Desport itself in men's affairs.

Remember Daniel's four beasts, and the seven heads of that beast in the Apocalypse, conceived by interpreters to resemble the seven forms of Government which Rome was to undergo successively; from a Common-wealth to Kings; from Kings to Consuls; from Consuls to Dictatours; thence to Decemvirs; thence to Tribunes of the people; thence to Emperors; thence to Popes. Reflect upon this Nation of ours, which hath been governed at first by Britain's, then Saxons, then Danes, then Normanes: one while in the way of an Heptarchy, another while of a Monarchy, and now of a Republic; and, if thou canst, refuse to cry out, O the depth!

§. 4. III. Military, such as belong to the managing of Wars. It is not for nothing that God is so often styled, Lord of hosts in the Old Testament. We find him so called no less then one hundred and thirty times in two of the Prophets, Isaiah and Jeremy. Because in ordering of Martial affairs, he in a manner doth all. Captains, and superior Officers may, and do consult, but God determines. They throw the dice, he appoints the chance; they set their men as it pleaseth them, he in the issue plays the game as it pleaseth him. Hear David in that Psalm of his which he made in the day that the Lord delivered him from the hand of all his enemies, and from the hand of Saul, speaking of his own experiments, and celebrating God as assisting him both in the field, and at sieges, By thee I have run through a troop, and by my God have I leaped over a wall: giving him strength, activity, skill. It is God that girdeth me with strength. He maketh my feet like hinds feet. He teacheth my handsto war, so that a bow of steel is broken by mine arms. Yea, success and victory. Thou hast girded me with strength to the battle; thou hast subdued under me those that rose up against me. Thou hast also given me the necks of mine enemies, that I might destroy them that hate me. In the New Testament, we seldom or never meet with that title. That which comes nearest it is, Lord God Almighty; and this occurs twice in the Revelation, when mention is made of the victories which it pleaseth God to give to the Reformed Churches against Anti-Christ and his adherents, once in these words, We give thanks, O Lord God Almighty, which art, and wast, and art to come; because thou hast taken to thee thy great power, and hast reigned. And again in these, Great and marvelous are thy works, Lord God Almighty, just and true are thy ways, Thou King of Saints.

IV. Moral, such as belong to good manners. or in more Gospel terms, To living soberly, righteously, and godly in this present world. The two former I well know are pretended to by men unregenerate, yea, by heathens. Socrates (they say) lived so soberly, as not to be discomposed by any outward emergency, to show himself always the same man. Fabritius so righteously, as that it was commonly said of him, To turn the Sun out of its course would be found more easy, then to turn him from the way of justice. But for godliness, which is the third, it were hard, if any should pretend to that without strong impressions from God in Christ, yet the Pelagians of old did, asserting those virtues which appeared in Moral men, who had not received Christ Jesus the Lord, nor known what it was to walk in him, for true graces: for which very fault, as S. Austin tells us, above all others, the Christian Church did most detest them: yea, a Christian Minister of late hath in print dared to collect from that saying of Paul, All men have not faith, an implication,

That men who act and quit themselves according to the true principles of that reason which God hath planted in them, cannot but believe, and be partakers in the precious faith of the Gospel.

But we have been taught, and must teach that it is not in the power of any inferior creature so to improve it's faculties, as to raise up itself to a superior rank. No tree can make itself a beast, no beast a man, no man a Saint by the bare improvement of his reason, whence he comes to be a man. Moral principles prove to such as rely upon them, and seek no further, Mortal principles. We believe that of Prosper where the chief good is wanting—but false virtue in the midst of the best manners.

The whole life of an unbeliever is sin. Neither is there anything good,

V. Ecclesiastical, such as belong to the Church, and the legitimate members of it. In that Song of Loves, Psal. 45. 9. Upon thy right hand did stand the Queen in gold of Ophir, is meant the Church. Look as an indulgent Prince, besides the common affection he bears, and protection he gives to all his subjects, hath a peculiar respect to, and converse with his Princess: so there is a peculiar providence of God toward his Church; the handling whereof at large I refer to the next Exercitation.

EXERCITATION 2. Deuteron. 11. 12. opened. God's care over the Church proved from the provision he makes for inferior creatures. From Israel's conduct. From the experiments and acknowledgements of saints in all ages. Experiments of the Virgin Mary, Rochellers, Musculus, acknowledgements of Jacob, David, Psalmist, Austin and Ursin. From God's causing things and acts of all sorts to cooperate unto the good of the saints. Isaiah 27. 2, 3. explained. The Church preserved from, in, and by dangers.

§. 1. Our third proposition is, That divine Providence is seen more especially in such affairs as concern the Church, and the members thereof. In order to the clearing whereof, I intend to insist upon two places of Scripture. The first is that in Deuteronomy, 11. 12. Where Moses describing the land of Canaan, saith of it thus, A land which the Lord thy God careth for: The eyes of the Lord thy God are always upon it, from the beginning of the year, even unto the end of the year. That land was then the only habitation of God's Church, and besides, a lively type of the Catholic Church which was afterwards to be spread over the whole face of the earth, whence it is that believers in all places were styled inward Jews, and the Circumcision.

This continual care of God over his Church and the members thereof appeareth,

I. From the provision made by him for inferior creatures. So our Savior argueth. Behold the fowls of the air: for they sow not, neither do they reap, nor gather into barns, yet your heavenly father feedeth them. Are ye not much better then they? They have no caterers to bring in provision from them; no barns to fetch provision out of; yet want it not, but go cheerfully on, chirping continually, because God feedeth them: and that sometimes in a way little less then miraculous, if that be true which is reported by some good writers, namely, that when the young ravens are forsaken of their dams and left bare, out of their own dung there ariseth a worm which creepeth to their mouths, and becomes nourishment to them.

§. 2. II. From the conduct of Israel after the flesh in former times. A breviat of that Nations story will presently let us understand how they were brought into that land, (whereof this place in Deuteronomy speaketh) and cared for there by a thousand providences. Time was when Joseph was raised up to be a nursing father to them, & that by a most remarkable dispensation. He had been formerly sold into Egypt, was imprisoned without cause, cast as Junius thinketh, into that prison whereunto such were put as had most highly offended the king, to be sure into one where his feet were burt in the stocks, and he laid in irons. Had not his prison-house been so bad it is like he should not have had opportunity to make himself known to butler and baker of Pharaoh, who were his fellow-prisoners. The butler being restored to his place according to Josephs interpretation of his dream, forgets to acquaint Pharaoh with him till all other means had been used to quiet the kings mind, and none found effectual: then he speaketh, and then is Joseph speedily advanced. Being so he becometh a preserver of the Church in his father, brethren and their families. Afterwards when there was risen another generation that knew not Joseph; and the king of Egypt had set himself by force and art to extinguish Israel, the bush, although burning was not consumed in the midst of the fire: their burdens were increased, yet their persons multiplied; and Moses ere-long raised up to deliver them out of their bondage. A man preserved by the daughter of that Pharaoh, whom he was called to destroy, and by that means brought up at court, yea instructed there both in the Art and Government, and in all the learning of the Egyptians. Under his conduct God did for them (as one Prophet speaketh) terrible things which they looked not for. Puls them out of Pharaohs bosom in spite of his heart, at their departure sendeth them laden away with the jewels and treasures of Egypt; maketh a passage for them through the sea, and accompanieth their hosts into the wilderness. There providence fetcheth them water out of a rock, then which nothing drier; and bread from heaven, which is wont to grow out of the earth. There their food is Manna & Quails; a cloud and pillar of fire their guides, when this servant of God was dead, up steps Joshua in his room, bringeth them into and settleth them in the promised land; which proved to them after their settlement by lot, an habitation of righteousness and mountain of holiness. A land flowing not only with temporal, but also with spiritual milk and honey, after Solomon had erected a magnificent Temple for them, which was the wardrobe of those ceremonies wherewith God was then to be served. Then were they (as the Psalmist hath it) abundantly satisfied with the fatness of God's house, and made to drink of the river of his pleasures.

But their sins having at length cast them out of that good land, and occasioned the burning of their Temple, God left them not destitute of his help, but ordained for them sundry refreshments in the time of their captivity. This among others in Esther's time. King Ahasuerus under whom they then were in a state of captivity had his sleep taken from him, would spend the time not in this or that exercise but in reading; of all books, calls for that of the Chronicles; of all places hath that read to him which concerned a good service done by Mordechai a Jew; doth not only take notice of it, but enquire what reward had been given him; understanding he had received none causeth Haman his favourite to be called; putteth him upon doing singular honor in the view of all men to this Mordechai, giveth his wife Queen Esther occasion of implending this Haman, discovering his plot against all the Jews, and preventing that massacre of them, which should speedily have been executed. Yea providence went on to work so happily in the hearts of those Monarchs, who then held them captives, as not long after to proclaim their deliverance, and liberty for them to rebuild both Jerusalem and the Temple; which they also attempted.

Whilst the second Temple was building by Herod, not so magnificent as the former, yet in some respect more glorious: if Josephus misinform us not, for the space of almost ten years it never rained all that while in the day time, the providence of God so ordering it, lest the work should be interrupted. Yea so remarkable was the power and greatness of God in assisting the builders then, that we find him in Haggai and Zechary, their Prophecies, which were both written about that time, frequently styled by that name, The Lord of hosts, particularly five times in four verses of Haggai. Thus saith the Lord of hosts, yet onceit is a little while, and I will strike the heavens, and the earth, and the sea, and the dry land; And I will shake all nations, and the desire of all nations shall come; and I will fill this house with glory, saith the Lord of hosts. The silver is mine, and the gold is mine, saith the Lord of hosts. The glory of this latter house shall be greater then of the former, saith the Lord of hosts: and in this place will I give peace, saith the Lord of hosts. That which raised the glory of this second above that of the first Temple was the personal presence of Jesus Christ in it. His coming, preaching, suffering, so ripened the sins of this people (who began again to degenerate after their return) as hot weather doth the corn, that ere long they and their Temple became a prey to the Roman Eagle.

§. 3. III. From the experiments and acknowledgements of godly persons in several ages. The Blessed virgin Mary after her journey to Bethlehem, and lying in of her child there, may be probably thought to have been straitened in her means, as being but poor, and not to have sufficient for the maintenance of her child, herself and Joseph in the journey they were to take presently after into Egypt. See how God provideth; hard before that, he sendeth the wise men from the east, and they bring costly presents with them, gold among others, which was certainly of no small use for defraying their ensuing charges. In the year 1573 when the Protestants were besieged in Rochelle by the French kings forces, God sent them in daily with the tide an infinite number of small fishes: such as before that time were never seen within that haven, and presently upon the end of the siege retired again. We read of Wolfgangus Musculus, a late Germane Divine, that having received by Luther's books, the light and sense of the Gospel, he forsook his Monastery and married: that after this he was so poor, as to let his wife go out to service, and betake himself to work with a weaver, who proved an Anabaptist. That during his abode there, he solaced himself with this distich,

Est Deus in coelo, qui providus omnia curat:

Credentes nusquam deseruisse potest.

That is,

There is a God in heaven, who such as cleave

T' his providence on earth, can never leave.

That the Anabaptist within a while turned him off, and he being then to seek for maintenance, was hired to work at Strasbourg about the town ditch, which was then to be new cast and enlarged, and to have begun the next morning. That Bucer having notice hereof, and of his parts, prevailed over night with the Consul to give him a call to the work of the Ministry, which he gladly embraced.

Suitable to these and the like experiments are the following acknowledgements. Jacob, I am not worthy of the least of all thy mercies, and of all the truth which thou hast shown unto thy servant: for with my staff I passed over this Jordan, and now I am become two bands. David, Thou hast been my help, leave me not, neither forsake me, O God of my salvation. When my father and my mother forsake me, then the Lord will take me up. Another Psalmist, Psalm, 71. 5, 6, 7. Thou art my hope, O Lord God: thou art my trust from my youth. By thee have I been holden up from the womb. Thou art he that took me out of my mothers womb: my praise shall be continually of thee. I am a wonder unto many; but thou art my strong refuge. Austin again and again to this purpose.

The Lord hath so looked after me, as if he had in a manner forgot the whole creation, to consider me and my ways. He so careth for every Saint, as if he cared for none besides;

so for all, as if he had but one to care for. And Piscator in Ursins life reports, that he, to wit, Zacharius Ursinus was wont to say, I had often lain in the streets, had not the Providence of God been mine hostess, and afforded me a lodging. Nisi hospita fuisset divina providentia.

§. 4. IV. From the effects of care ascribed to God, when Scripture speaks of him after the manner of men. For example, we men are by our cares made solicitous and thoughtful about the person or the thing cared for. So the Psalmist saith of God, I am poor and needy, and the Lord thinketh upon me. Thou art my help and my deliverer, make no tarrying, O my God. We are rendered inquisitive what to do for them. So the Scripture brings in God, saying, How shall I do for the daughter of my people? O Ephraim, What shall I do unto thee. We are grieved if they miscarry. Of God it is said, His soul was grieved for the misery of Israel. We are not content till we have taken a particular survey of whatever concerns them. So of God it is said, That he numbereth their hairs, bottleth their tears; hath a book of life for their names, a book of providence for their members, and a book of remembrance for their discourses. Lastly, as men endeavor the good of such as they receive into their special care, and do what they can to make things operate to that end; so we know (saith S. Paul) that all things work together for good to them that love God; to them who are the called according to his purpose. Make me this assertion good, and the abundance of his care will be presently visible to any man. Now this may be done by showing how God makes use of things, and of acts of all sorts to this end.

§. 5. I. Of all sorts of things, whether Natural, or Artificial, Necessary, or Contingent, Real, or Imaginary. The reflection of the Sun-beams upon water is a natural thing; If Providence orders so, as the Moabites taking it for blood, conjecture a mutiny in the armies of the king of Israel and Judah, come up disorderly, and perish. So this deceptio visus in them, wrought for the Churches deliverance. Those Trumpets, Pitchers and Lamps in the seventh of Judges were things artificial, no way able of themselves to produce such an effect, as the defeat of an huge host: yet the Lord so disposeth of the sound of the Trumpets, breaking of the Pitchers, and burning of the Lamps, as by them to strike a terror into the great army of Midian, and make them fly. That the fire should burn, and the sea keep it's channel according to the order of nature, were necessary things: yet did providence so over-rule in the case of those three Worthies in Daniel, that the fire, though it burnt up their accusers, should not so much as scorch them; and semblably in the Israelites case, that the sea, though it swallowed up the Egyptians, their enemies, should afford a safe passage to the Hebrews. What more contingent then that Pharaoh's daughter should go with her maids to wash in the river at that very place where Moses was exposed? that seeing an infant, she should imagine it an Hebrew, be moved into pity towards it, adopt it for her own son, and light upon the child's own Mother to be it's nurse? yet upon this did Israel's redemption much depend. There were such real alterations in the heavens, that the stars are said to have fought against Sisera in their orders. Elsewhere an imaginary noise was so apprehended by the Syrians, as to make them fly, and leave their tents, whereupon followed great plenty after a famine.

II. Acts of all sorts, whether voluntary, or involuntary, gracious or sinful. Augustus his taxing the Roman Empire, & requiring everyone to repair to his own city, was a voluntary act on his part to enrich himself: but ordered by Providence to further ends: for hereby the virgins Mary comes to Bethlehem, and Christ was there born in the place so long before prophesied of. Austin was once out in his Sermon much against his will; but providence disposed it to the conversion of a soul. The story is this. That holy man fell one day in the pulpit upon a large discourse against the Manichees, contrary to his purpose and intention when he came thither. At his return home spake of it, asked Possidonius and others whether they did not observe it. Their answer was, they did, and wondered. Whereupon he said, God I believe hath made use of my oblivion and error to cure someone or other of the people.

Some two days after one Firmus a merchant comes to him, and falling down at his feet with tears, confesseth he had been nursed up for many years together in the heresy of the Manichees, but was that day by his Sermon rightly informed, truly converted, and made a Catholic: which Austin and others then hearing, glorified and admired the profound counsel of God in converting souls when he will, and by whom he will, whether the Preacher know of it or not.

How gracious acts, such as Obadiah's hiding and feeding the Prophets, Ebed-melech's helping Jeremy in and out of prison, are subservient to Providence in procuring the Churches good, is easy to discern. It is so even in sinful acts themselves. Such was the Philistines invading the land of Palestine, yet there was a time when their doing it was so disposed of, as to be a means of preserving David and his men. Saul was then ready to seize upon his prey, but was diverted by this news, coming in that very nick of time. Saul went on this side the mountain, and David and his men on that side of the mountain: and David made hast to get away for fear of Saul, for Saul and his men compassed David and his men round about to take them. But there came a messenger unto Saul, saying, Haste thee, and come, for the Philistines have invaded the land: wherefore Saul returned from pursuing after David, &c.

§. 6. The second Text I have made choice of to insist upon, is in the Prophecy of Isaiah, Chapter 27. verse 2, 3. In that day sing ye unto her; A vineyard of red wine. I the Lord do keep it, I will water it every moment: lest any hurt it, I will keep it night and day. The Prophet had said before of this vineyard, that God looking it should bring forth grapes, it brought forth wild grapes. But it being since purged, here he calls it a vineyard of red wine, that is of the best, according to that in Solomon's Proverbs, Look not thou upon the wine when it is red, when it gives his color in the cup, when it moves itself aright. So as we are here by it to understand a reformed Church. Such at this day are the Protestant Churches come out of Popery: For we may distinguish a four-fold face of the Christian visible Church spoken of by Divines. The first fair, in the Apostles time, she was then a virgin undefiled: the second Spotted, in the succeeding age of Fathers and Heretics, wherein traditions began to prevail, she was then a Wanton: the third Deformed, when Popery overspread all; she was then an Whore: the fourth Reformed, since Luther's time: she is now a Matrone, and may expect, so far as it shall be for her good, and her keepers glory, that continual irrigation, and constant custody, which is here spoken of. Such as wish and project (as some have done the total and final ruin of the visible Church) must effect it in a time that neither belongs today nor night: for the Lord hath here promised to keep it, lest any hurt it, yea, to keep it night and day.

There is a three-fold preservation, which it, and the members of it may look for from Divine Providence. One from, another in, and a third by dangers. First, from dangers, according to the promise in one of the Psalms, Because thou hast made the Lord which is my refuge, even the most high, thy habitation: There shall no evil befall thee, neither shall any plague come nigh thy dwelling.

Austin had appointed to go to a certain town to visit the Christians there, and to give them a Sermon or more. The day and place were known to his enemies, who set armed men to lie in wait for him by the way which he was to pass, and kill him. As God would have it, the guide whom the people had sent with him to prevent his going out of the right way mistook, and led him into a by-path, yet brought him at length to his journey's end. Which when the people understood, as also the adversaries' disappointment, they adored the Providence of God, and gave him thanks for that great deliverance.

II. In dangers. So in Job 5. 19, 20. He shall deliver thee in six troubles, yea in seven, there shall no evil touch thee. In famine he shall redeem thee from death; and in war from the power of the sword. In time of famine the widow of Sarepta's store was made to hold out. The Providence of God was with Daniel in the lions den, shutting up the mouths of those furious beasts; & with the men in the fiery furnace, giving a prohibition to the fire that it should not burn, when they were in the jaws of danger, yea of death. The Church hath always been a Lily among thorns, yet flourishes still. This bush is yet far from a consumption, although it have seldom or never been out of the fire.

III. By danger. there is a preservation from greater evils by less. No poison, but providence knoweth how to make an antidote; so Jonah was swallowed by a whale, and by that danger kept alive. Joseph thrown into a pit, and afterwards sold into Egypt, and by these hazards brought to be a nursing father to the Church. Chrysostom excellently, Fides in periculis secura est, in securitate periclitatur. Faith is endangered by security, but secure in the midst of danger, as Esther's was, when she said, If I perish, I perish. God preserveth us, not as we do fruits that are to last but for a year, in sugar; but as flesh for a long voyage in salt, we must expect in this life much brine and pickle, because our heavenly father preserveth us as those whom he resolveth to keep forever, in and by dangers themselves. Paul's thorn in the flesh which had much of danger and trouble in it was given him on purpose to prevent pride, which was a greater evil. Lest I, said he, should be exalted above measure through abundance of the revelations, there was given me a thorn in the flesh, the messenger of Satan to buffet me, lest I should be exalted above measure. Elsewhere, having commemorated Alexander the copper-smith his withstanding and doing him much evil, yea Nero's opening his mouth as a lion against him, and the Lord's delivering of him thence, he concludeth as more than a conqueror. And the Lord shall deliver me from every evil work, and will preserve me unto his heavenly kingdom; to whom be glory forever and ever, Amen.

EXERCITATION 3. Hard-heartedness made up of unteachableness in the understanding, untractableness in the will, unfaithfulness in the memory, unsensibleness in the conscience, and unmoveableness in the affections. metaphors to express it from the parts of man's body, stones and metals. A soft heart. Mischief, searedness, and virulency attendants of hardness. God concurring thereunto by way of privation, Negation, permission, presentation. Tradition to Satan. Delivering up to lusts, and infliction.

§. 1. OUR fourth proposition is still behind, viz. Divine providence is an actour even in sin itself. I shall single out hardness of heart, a sin common to all sorts of men, though in different degrees, intending to declare, I. What hard-heartedness is. II. That it is a sin. III. That God is an actour in it.

For the first, This word Heart is of various acceptions in the Scripture. Sometime it signifieth the understanding, as when it is said, God gave Solomon largeness of heart, as the sand. that is, He had an understanding full of notions, as the sea-shore is full of grains of sand. Sometimes put for the will, as when Barnabas exhorteth the Christians of Antioch to cleave to the Lord with purpose of heart. that is, with the full bent and inclination of their wills. For as to know is an act of the understanding, so to cleave is an act of the will. Sometimes for the memory, as when the blessed Virgin is said to have laid up all our Savior's sayings in her heart. that is, kept them under lock and key, like a choice treasure in her remembrance. Sometimes for conscience. So the Apostle speaketh of a condemning and not condemning heart. Now God's deputy in point of judicature is conscience; which Nazianzen therefore calleth 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, a domestical tribunal, or a judge within doors. Lastly, Sometimes for the affections. So the Prophet Ezekiel saith of people, that when they sate hearing the word, their heart went after their covetousness. that is, their fears, and hopes, their desires, love and other affections were upon shops, ships, land and other commodities even while they were busied in the worship of God. Each of these faculties called Heart in the book of God is liable to its peculiar indisposition and distemper. All put together make up the hard-heartedness, of which we are treating; the particular ingredients whereof are these that follow.

I. Unteachableness in the understanding. Scripture joineth blinding of eyes and hardening of hearts as near a kin. He hath blinded their eyes, and hardened their heart, that they should not see with their eyes, nor understand with their heart, and be converted. It is proverbially said, Lapidi loqueris; One had as good speak to a stone as to an unteachable man: and we are all so by nature. Whence that of Paul, The natural man receiveth not the things of the spirit of God, for they are foolishness unto him; neither can he know them because they are spiritually discerned. Such are often present at Sermon, so are the pillars of stone in the Church, and they understand both alike.

§. 2. II. Untractableness in the will. There was reason enough spoken to Sihon by Moses his messengers; but all would not incline him to yield a passage to the army of Israel in an amicable way, because he was hardened. Sihon king of Heshbon, saith Moses, would not let us pass by him, for the Lord thy God hardened his spirit, and made his heart obstinate, &c. So was there enough said and done to Pharaoh but still the burden of his story is this, He hardened his heart and would not let Israel go. Steep a stone in oil, it continueth hard still. Pharaoh had sundry mercies shoven him, being delivered from one plague after another upon Moses his prayers; but the oil of mercy could not soften him. Beat upon a stone with an hammer, it is a difficult thing, and in some cases impossible to make an impression. The hammer of God's word in the mouth of Moses and Aaron, held as it were by the handle of ten notable miracles, gave ten mighty blows at Pharaoh's will; yet could make so little impression, that after the ten plagues his heart was ten times harder then before.

III. Unfaithfulness in the memory. Pertinent hereunto is that upbraiding passage of our Savior to his Disciples, Have ye your heart yet hardened? do ye not remember? they seemed to have at present forgotten two of Christ's miracles, and are therefore charged with hardheartedness. Let water fall upon flesh it moisteneth it, upon earth it soaketh in and rendereth it fruitful: let it fall upon a rock it runneth presently off and leaveth no footsteps behind it. Where hardness of heart prevaieth (as here it did not, and therefore the disciples a little awakened by Christ's interrogations were able to give an account of his miracles) there is commonly no more of a chapter, sermon or pious discourse remaining in the hearers memory, then there is moisture upon a rock after a good shower of rain.

IV. Unsensibleness in the conscience. S^t Paul speaketh of some past feeling, and of others that had their consciences seared with an hot iron, without all sense as a member once cauterized. Smite a stone as long as you will, beat it while you can stand over it, it complaineth not; lay a mountain upon it it groaneth not. Such are some men's consciences. Let God beat upon them with sermon after sermon, cross after cross; let them have worlds of oaths, lies, cheats, & other sins to answer for, they feel not the load of these mountains, complain not of them, but perhaps with Judas go out from the Sacrament to play the traitor, and with king Ahaz sin yet more in their distress. Although temperance, modesty, and the like dispositions be in some measure quite extinguished, yet if conscience, like Jobs messenger be still left to report the story of this desolation, there is some hope; but if, as David sometime dealt with the Philistines, all be slain, and none left alive to bring the tidings, if not only all ingenuity be banished, but the very mouth of conscience also stopped, the case is desperate.

V. Unmoveableness in the affections. See an instance thereof in king Zedekiah, of whom it is said, He did that which wasevil in the sight of the Lord his God, and humbled not himself before Jeremiah the prophet, speaking from the mouth of the Lord. And he also rebelled against king Nebuchadnezzar, who had made him swear by God: but he stiffened his neck and hardened his heart from turning unto the Lord God of Israel. Zedekiah's heart was so obdurate, as not to have his affections moved with anything that Jeremiah could say or do. Let a man go about to make an oration to a stone, be it never so eloquent and pathetical, the stone is not affected with it; No more are many hard hearts with the voice of God's word or rod. Tell them of the beauty of Christ, they are not persuaded to love him; of the ugliness of sin they are not induced to hate it; of the torments of hell, they are not moved to fear and shun it. Such is the nature and composition of hardheartedness, which was the first thing to be spoken to.

§. 3. The second particular is, the sinfulness of that frame, which appeareth from the expressions, the opposites, and the attendants of it mentioned in holy Scriptures.

I. From the expressions, which are borrowed some from the bodies of men liable to a double 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, others from metals, and others from stones. 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 signifieth not only the thick brawny skin that groweth over the laborers hand, and travellours foot, rendering that part insensible: but also among Physicians that knottiness which groweth upon the joints in some diseases as in a long-continued gout, by them called nodosa podagra, and pronounced incurable by physic, Tollere nodosam nescit medicina podagram. Hardness of heart is expressed by this, Mark 3. 5. John 12. 40. Elsewhere from metals, as in that of Isaiah, Thou art obstinate, thy neck is an iron sinew, and thy brow brass. When men will no more stoop to the precepts of Christ, then a beast would to the yoke, if his neck were of iron: sinews are instruments of motion, they all go down from the head to the body by the neck; if the neck should be stiff and the sinews of iron it would not be possible for the head to bow down. Such is the state of obstinate persons. Yea and further, the Prophet here ascribeth to them a brow of brass. The brow is that place where shame is wont to discover itself; this is said to be of brass to note their impudency. An hard heart is frequently accompanied with a brazen face. And in other places from stones. (An hard heart is usually called an heart of stone) Yea the hardest of all stones, the Adamant. They made their heart as an adamant stone lest they should hear the law &c. stones are drier, and more inflexible then metals themselves. Chymicks can distill metals, and alter the shape of them to serve their turns. But Moses could not, without a miracle, fetch water out of a rock, nor can men by the help of fire, change the shape of a stone and render it flexible.

Well might one of the Fathers cry out by occasion of what befell at our Savior's passion, O the hearts of the Jews harder then rocks! the rocks rent, but their hearts were further from rending then before. The earth quaked, but their hardness continued unremoved, almost unmoved. As in Jeroboams time when the Prophet cried, O altar, altar, thus saith the Lord, It heard and rent; Jeroboams heart was harder then the very stones and rent not.

§. 4. II. From the opposites of hard-heartedness; the chief whereof is spiritual Evangelical tenderness, promised in the covenant of grace, where it is said, I will give them one heart, and I will put a new spirit withinyou: and will take the stony heart out of their flesh, and will give them an heart of flesh: that is a soft and tender heart. I do not mean that natural tenderness, caused by constitution or education, of both which it is true, that it softens the manners, and keeps them from fierceness, ascribed to Rehoboam, of whom it was said, He was young and tender-hearted and could not withstand the children of Belial. Such men are fitly compared to ripe plumbs and apricocks, which however soft and smooth on the outside, yet have an hard stone within: like a brick, at first soft when the clay is fashioned, and continues so till the Sun have hardened it, yea, by pouring on of water, softened again; but if once baked in the brick-kill, no fire will melt it, an whole sea will not moisten it afterwards. So it fares with sundry men formerly tender-hearted, when once hardened by conversing in the world, and baked, as it were, in the kill of custom. That which I intend, is Spiritual tenderness, ascribed to Josiah, Because thine heart was tender, and thou didst humble thyself before God: and didst rend thy clothes, and weep before me, I have even heard thee also, saith the Lord God. As metals are melted with the fire before they be cast in a new mold, so must every heart be melted and softened, before it come to be molded anew. The new creature is always a tame and tender creature. This is that temper which hardness of heart is opposite to, and therefore sinful.

III. From the attendants thereof. Divers have been already mentioned. I shall instance in some few more. Hethat hardeneth his heart shall fall into mischief. Who hath hardened himself against God and prospered.? Crying sins are commonly answered with the Echo of roaring judgments. Hardness being in genere culpae one of the greatest evils, there must needs be mischiefe due unto it in genere penae. Hereunto may be added stubbornness; for when hardness is risen to an high degree, both senses of discipline are obstructed; the ear, They resisted to hearken, and pulled away the shoulder, and stopped their ears that they should not hear; yea, they made their hearts as an adamant stone. The eye, He hath blinded their eyes, and hardened their hearts; that they should not see with their eyes, and understand with their hearts. Also searedness with an hot iron, which is the next door to hanging; such as are formerly burnt in the hand, if they fall again into the hands of justice, are commonly denied their book, and sent to the gallows. Notorious malefactors are stigmatized, so are hard-hearted sinners.

Lastly, virulency or bitterness of spirit against the ways and people of God. When divers were hardened, and believed not, but spake evil of that way before the multitude. No such bitter enemies to religion as those that after some relentings return to their former frame of hard-heartedness: as the worst travelling is when it hath freezed after a thaw: so the worst conversing is with men of that spirit.

§. 5. I am now to show in the third place, that the providence of God is an actor even in this sin, and that both in partial hardness, which often befalls the elect of God, according to that, O Lord, why hast thou made us to err from thy ways? and hardened our heart from thy fear? Return for thy servants sake, the tribes of thine inheritance. And from that which is total and final, found in Reprobates of whom Paul therefore saith, Whom he will he hardeneth; and again, The election hath obtained, but the rest were blinded or hardened. Now this is done divers ways.

I. By way of Privation. As when the sun departs, darkness followeth; yet the Sun is no cause of darkness, but the absence thereof: so when God departs in that, be it never so little, suppose but restraining grace, hardness followeth, yet God is not the efficient of it. Time was when Pharaoh had restraining grace, while it lasted there were no violent hands laid upon Moses and Aaron, by whose ministry all the plagues were brought upon him. He is no sooner deprived of that, but his cruelty is let out to the full; Moses threatened with death the last time he saw his face, and all pursued with a bloody intent. Pharaoh's heart had somewhat of softness, and malliableness in it all the while this fire remained, upon the removal whereof, it returned to it's own hardness and coldness, as metal would. As when a man holds a staff in his hand, let him but take away his manutencencie, the staff falls immediately to the ground by its own poise.

II. By way of Negation. As when God either refuseth to give a people softening means, or denieth his blessing upon them. So when Moses called to all Israel, and said unto them. Ye have seen all that the Lord did before your eyes in the land of Egypt, unto Pharaoh, and unto all his servants, and unto all his land. The great temptations which thine eyes have seen, the signs and those great miracles: yet the Lord hath not given you an heart to perceive, and eyes to see, and ears to hear unto this day. In so doing, God himself is said to harden (as S. Austin hath it) when he softens not, and to blind when he enlighteneth not. As the Sun freezeth and congealeth the water, not by imparting coldness to it, but by not imparting heat, and shining upon it with fervent beams. So it is (saith the same Father) in God's hardening, who doth not do it by imparting malice, but by not imparting grace. Neither doth this denial affix any unlawfulness upon him; as the like would do upon a good man that had to give, and to spare what his neighbor stood in absolute need of; for it is not the same cause throughout, betwixt God and man: there is a mutual tie of the creatures one to another. All men are made of one blood, (as in the Acts) they are therefore bound by the law of nature to mutual helpfulness. Not so between God and the creature: for the dependence, and consequently the tie is not mutual. We depend upon God, not he upon us; therefore for us not to do what he requireth, is absolutely sinful, but no law bindeth him to give whatsoever is needful for us; therefore not to give, it is no sin. If he please to indulge it, it is grace, and not debt; if not, the clay must not contend and find fault with the potter.

§. 6. III. By way of Permission. Hard-heartedness is one of those evils, which God permitteth, but approveth not, and accordingly included in that speech, God in times past suffered all nationsto walk in their own ways. Therefore the School-men upon those Texts, Deus non volens iniquitatem, tu es, and Quod non volui elegerunt, have founded a notable distinction between Velle, Nolle, and Non velle, which is not inconsiderable here. God is said to Will a thing, when he so approves it, as to effect it. To Nil a thing, when he so dislikes it, as to prohibit it; Non velle, not to will it; when he so dislikes, as not to prohibit, yea, and not to effect it, yet permits it to be for good ends. Of the Lord, it is truly said, That he wills an heart of flesh, and that he nills a heart of stone; as for hardheartedness, although he frequently permit it, yet we must say he is not altogether willing to have it, however willing to suffer it. Our temper must be that of Austin, In a wonderful and unspeakable manner even that which isdone against his will, is not done without his will; for it would not be done, if it were not permitted; neither doth he permit it without, but with his will. And again, He is so good as that he would never suffer evil, if he were not so Omnipotent, as to bring good out of evil.

IV. By way of presenting objects of which our corruptions make a bad use. Isaiah his Evangelical Ministry made the heart of that people fat, and made their ears heavy, and shut their eyes. The hotter the Sun is wont to shine, the more the dunghill is wont to sent. Men grow hardest under the most Gospel ministry. So under mercies of all sorts. He that observeth the passages of Pharaohs story, shall find that his corruptions took many occasions from the carriage of things to harden him yet more and more. After he had been freed from two or three several plagues by Moses his prayer upon his hypocritical relentings, he might perhaps begin to think that the God of Israel was such an one as might be deceived with fair shows, and so fear him less. It pleased God not to strike Pharaoh himself with any plague by the hand of Moses; nor to suffer his people to rise up against him and free themselves by main force. This might happily tend to his further hardening, and put him upon saying,

If he be so great a God, why doth he not smite me in mine own person, or carry out his people without me?

Besides, the same plague was never twice inflicted: he saw that, and might think when one plague was over, that would not come again, and there could not come a worse then that: the God of Israel had surely done his worst already. Come we to the last scene of his Tragedy after Israel was departed, things were so carried as to cram his corruption, andto make his heart fatter then before. The Hebrews are all found in a place with the sea before them, and great mountains on each side. Their being so pent, encourageth Pharaoh and his host. The sea is ere long divided for Israel; the waves stand as walls on either side, the people pass through as on dry land. Why should not the sea, might he think, make way for me as well as for them? The prey is now in view, let go this one opportunity, they are gone forever. If the waves stand up but a while longer (as they have done a good while already) the day is ours. They pass on, and perish.

§. 7. V. By way of tradition to Satan. Who although he have not any power of enforcing, yet hath a notable slight of persuading, and by this means of hardening. No doubt but Pharaoh being deluded by the Magicians, who were suffered to counterfeit the same miracles which Moses did, was thereby hardened through the operation of Satan. We read of an evil Spirit from God troubling Saul, and after that of many hard-hearted pranks by him plaid, such as never before: and of the devils having put into Judas his heart to betray Christ, after which he was restless till he had done it; As they must needs go, our Proverb saith, whom the devil drives. 'Tis strange how that man's spirit declined into further, and yet further degrees of hardness; but less strange if we consider that the devil was entered into him. Judas was first a cunning dissembler; the disciples suspected themselves as soon as him, and therefore said, Master, is it I? Afterward a secret thief; for he bare the bag and filched: then a bold traitor, What will ye give? and Hail Master. In the conclusion, a desperate self-murderer, as the most interpreters judge, in making away himself.

VI. By way of delivering men up to their own lusts. Hear God of his own people. My people would not hearken to my voice: and Israel would none of me. So I gave them up unto their own hearts lusts; and they walked in their own counsels: how much more is this true of God's enemies? Pharaoh by name. See how these three lusts of his, Idolatry, Ambition, and Covetousness concurred to the making of him so hard-hearted towards God; so hard to be prevailed with by Moses. As an Idolater, he was loath to receive a message from the God of Israel, whom he knew not. Who is the Lord, said he, that I should obey his voice to let Israel go? I know not the Lord, neither will I let Israel go. As an Ambitious Prince it went to his heart to have Moses control him in his own dominions, and to admit the commands of any superior Lord, Thus saith the Lord, Let my people go, was as fire to his bones, and enraged him, who would not hear of any lord over that people but himself. As a Covetous man, he was loath to have so fat a collop cut off his flank, to hear of parting with a people by whose pains in making bricks he had such daily comings in.

VII. By way of infliction and penalty. One sin is often made the punishment of another, and hardness the punishment of many sins oft reiterated. When Pharaoh saw that the rain and the hail, and the thunders were ceased, he sinned yet more, and hardened his heart, he and his servants. The harder they were the more they sinned, and the more they sinned, the harder they were. Affected hardness is frequently followed with inflicted hardness. Men by customary sinning make their hearts as an adamant stone (so the phrase is in Zechary) of which it is said,

Incidit gemmas, sed non inciditur ipse;

Hircino tantum sanguine mollis erit.

That is,

It cuts all stones: It self is cut of none;

It softened is by blood of goats alone.

Unregenerate persons of hard hearts usually grieve their godly friends, who are cut at the heart to see their obstinacy, as Christ grieved for the Pharisees hardness. At non inciditur ipse. But such an one cannot heartily grieve for himself. His heart till it come to be steeped in the blood of Christ, who is that Scapegoat in Leviticus, relenteth not, or not to purpose. It were easy to add much more: but I shall now shut up all concerning this proposition God hardeneth, with the saying of Hugo de sancto Victore concerning that, God willeth evil. This is irksome to the ear, and a pious mind doth not easily receive it; but the reason is not because what is said is not well said, but because what is well enough said is not half well understood.

EXERCITATION 4. Objections against, and Corollaries from the foregoing propositions. The least things provided for. Luther's admonition to Melancthon. Maximilians address. Pliny's unbelief. The Psalmists stumble at the prosperity of the wicked. His recovery by considering it was not full, was not to be final. The superintendency of Providence over military and civil affairs in particular. The Churches afflictions. Promises cautioned. Duty of casting care upon God. He no author of sin. The attestation of this State, and of this writer.

§. 1. TWo things are still remaining, viz. Objections against, and Corollaries from the forementioned propositions: to which in their order.

Objection against the first. Some think the extending of divine Providence to all created beings, how mean soever, unsuitable to the perfection of God, whom, they say, it doth not become to stoop so low. Epicurus is cited by Lactantius, as speaking to this purpose, and after him Horace.

Answ. They speak like heathens, not knowing the Scripture, nor the power of God. The Psalmist otherwise, Who is like unto the Lord our God, who dwelleth on high? Who humbleth himself to behold the things that are in heaven, and in earth. He raiseth up the poor out of the dust, and lifteth the needy out of the dunghill. He maketh the barren woman to keep house, to be a joyful mother of children. Of his care and providence it is believed and asserted by divines, that it is neither deceived nor tired, & that as the greatest things do not overburden it, so least things do not escape it. That of our Savior to his Disciples is a most express assertion. Are not fivesparrows sold for two farthings, and not one of them is forgotten before God? But even the very hairs of your head are all numbered.

Wherefore, by way of Corollary from hence, let God himself alone be acknowledged the Preserver and Governor of all things. Let no man think by his strength of parts, or extremity of pains to take the work out of his hands.

Melancthon was beyond measure solicitous about Church-affairs in that age wherein he lived: insomuch as Luther once wrote to his neighbor-ministers that they should do well to give him a serious admonition not to attempt the government of this world any longer.

That of Maximilian the Emperor in the time of Pope Julius the second, was an honest acknowledgement. Deus aeterne nisi vigilares,quàm male esset mundo! quem regimus nos; Ego miser venator, & ebriosus ill ac•sceleratus Julius! O eternal Lord God if thou thyself shouldst not be watchful, how ill it would be with this world, which is now governed by me, a miserable hunter, and by this drunken and wicked Pope Julius!

§. 2. Against the second proposition it hath been objected that there is no such thing as the providence of God superintending human affairs, especially considering the great prosperity which is enjoyed by wicked men. Pliny the great Naturalist speaketh of it, as a thing to be entertained with laughter rather than belief. And the Psalmists words are these, As for me, my feet were almost gone, my steps had well nigh slipped. For I was envious at the foolish, when I saw the prosperity of the wicked. Behold,these are the ungodly, who prosper in the world; they increase in riches. Verily I have cleansed my heart in vain, and washed my hands in innocence.

Answ. That which then satisfied him, should now suffice to answer us. He went into the sanctuary of God, then understoodhe their end. Surely thou didst set them in slippery places, thou castedst them down into destruction. Their prosperity was not full, was not to be final. I. Was not full. The places wherein they stood were slippery: their felicity varnished over, but rotten within. That in S. John and only that is perfect prosperity, when the inward and outward man thrive together, I wishabove all things (saith he to Gaius) that thou mayest prosper, and be in health, even as thy soul prospereth. With them it is quite otherwise. They have, it may be, fat bodies, but lean souls; full purses, but empty heads and hearts; blest in their estates, but cursed in their spirits. Have houses and lands worth many thousands, but hearts little worth, according to that The tongue of the just is aschoice silver: the heart of the wicked is little worth. Call you this prosperity? It is in truth nothing less. It is unhappiness rather, and there are those who have not stuck to name it so. II. Was not to be final. Thou castedst them down into destruction. The world came in fast upon them one way; and the wrath of God came as fast another. This fair day of theirs is but a weather-breeder; as a calm before an earthquake. Tome belongeth vengeance and recompense, saith the Lord, their foot shall slide in due time: for the day of their calamity is at hand, and the things that shall come upon them make haste. David expresseth it most emphatically, I have seen the wicked in greatpower: and spreading himself like a green bay-tree. (A tree that retaineth its viridity and freshness even in winter when fruit-bearing trees have cast their leaves) yet he passed away, and lo, he was not: yea I sought him, but he could not be found. Let such an one be sought in his counting-house, which was wont to be the temple, wherein he worshipped his God Mammon; he is not there. At Court where he was so magnified, and almost adored; he is not to be found in the lodgings there. He that would find him, must seek him in hell. For there he is. This is the end of such worldly prosperity as cometh from God, and yet defieth him.

§. 3. The Corollary from hence is, let the superintendency of divine providence over all human affairs, in particular over Military and Civil be humbly acknowledged. I. Over military. Those French-men were undoubtedly to blame, who in their flattering applauses of Richelieu, did ascribe the reduction of Rochelle solely to him, insomuch, as one of their Chroniclers writeth, That in the taking of that town, neither the king, nor God Almighty had a share in the action, but the Cardinal himself. How much safer is it for us to follow the tract of Scripture? which to show how effectual the influence of divine providence is upon actions of that nature, is wont to compare God unto whatsoever is necessary to secure a city besieged, for example, unto weapons, walls, fortifications, watchmen and soldiers. To weapons both offensive and defensive. Happy art thou, O Israel, who is like unto thee, O people, saved by the Lord, the shield of thy help, and who is the sword of thy excellency. To walls, I saith the Lord, will be unto her a wall of fire round about, and will be the glory in the midst of her. To fortifications, We have a strong city, salvation will God appoint for walls and bulwarks. If besides bulwarks a city be compassed about with a river, chiefly if with the sea itself we account it strongly fortified. Hear the same Prophet, The glorious Lord will be unto us a place of broad rivers and streams. To watchmen, Except the Lord keep the city, the watchman waketh but in vain. Lastly to soldiers, The Lord is a man of war: yea the Lord is a whole army of men, both Van and Reer, The Lord will go before you, and the God of Israel will be your re-re-ward.

II. Over civil affairs. I have been told that during the late treaty of a match between the Prince of Wales that then was, and the Infanta of Spain, the Earl of Bristol, then Ambassador at Madrid, when things went exceeding cross to his designs, fell into a deep perplexity, could not rest for divers nights, till a Gentleman that lay in his chamber took the boldness to speak to him and said, My Lord, I have observed much perplexity, and thereupon much restlessness in you. I humbly beseech your Lordship to consider that the world was well governed five thousand years and more before you were born, and will be so when you are dead. I pray you therefore be not troubled at anything, but refer the issue to God. Whereupon he is said to have fallen to rest.

Our way to be quiet is to do the like upon all occasions; to drive up things to divine Providence, and there to rest. Time was when Daniel's head and heart was filled with the visions of God; by which the great changes that were to happen in the government of the world had been newly made known to him: viz. the wheeling about of Monarchy from the Babylonians (who then were in the highest of their power) to the Persians, thence to the Grecians, and thence to the Romans; from an head of gold, to a breast and arms of silver, from them to a belly and thighs of brass, and from them to legs of iron, and to feet part of iron, part of clay; yea in the end to a little stone cut out without hands, which brake the whole image in pieces. He notwithstanding quarrelleth not with Providence for intending so notable, so destructive changes to the government then in being; goeth not about to demand any account thereof from God of such alterations, but betaketh himself quietly to the praise & admiration of him, by whose wisdom and power they were all in their seasons to be accomplished. Then Daniel blessed the God of heaven. Daniel answered and said, Blessed be the name of God forever and ever. For wisdom and might are his: And he changeth the times and seasons; he removeth kings, and setteth up kings. We should do well, however things go, to make Austin's resolution ours; Let the world sink or swim, be ruined or prosper, I will still bless the Lord who made the world. As for the late wheelings of Providence here in this Island, and alterations thereupon. I for my part say with Anselm once Archbishop of Canterbury. If any be able to understand them, let him give thanks to God: if any be not, let him however bow down his head to worship God; not lift up his horn by way of debate and ventilation.

§. 4. An objection against the third proposition, concerning God's special care and providence over the Church, and the members thereof, may be formed thus. The Church of all Societies, the Saints of all men, are the most in sufferings. Yea some Churches, by name those seven in Asia, which we read of in the Revelation, have been extinguished. From whence some are apt to infer want of care, and providence rather.

Answ. Be it granted that the militant Church is for the most part in a suffering condition, and that Christ our head, being a man of sorrows, typified by the brazen altar upon which the fire was continually burning, a wife of pleasures did not become him, nor members used to overmuch delicacy. That every vessel of mercy must expect scouring in order to brightness; and however trees in the wilderness grow without culture, trees in the orchard must be pruned in order to fruitfulness, and corn-bearing fields broken up, when barren heaths are left untouched; yea that in some particular instances the candlestick hath been removed and the place unchurched, yet the inference is not solid, because first, All afflictions are advantageous to the godly. They often help to make bad men good, always to make good men better. David could say, It is good for me that I have been afflicted. Of the godly captives of Judah the Lord saith, He had sent them out of that place into the land of the Chaldeans for their good. Secondly, because the promises made concerning the Churches preservation (such as I insisted upon above in the second Exercitation of this Aphorism) are for the most part misunderstood, and consequently misimproved. Learn we for the future to embrace them with these three cautions.

§. 5. I. That they do in especial manner concern the Church Catholic, not this or that particular Nation or Congregation. If that in the beginning of Isaiah the twenty seventh were to be considered as a National Church, we all know it hath been ruined long since notwithstanding the promise there made, which must therefore be understood of it as a type of the Church universal; that is so watered and kept as to be inexpugnable. Look as by virtue of the Covenant made with Noah that the whole earth should never be again overflowed with a general deluge, we may be sure it never shall: yet there have since, and may still be divers inundations, whereby some parts of the earth have been, and may be laid waste: so by virtue of God's promises, we may be confident that the gates of hell shall never prevail against the whole Church of Christ; yet may divers particular Churches be ruined (as those in Asia have been). No man knows how many more may have the same line of Desolation drawn over them. Mean while the Catholic Church, still, not only continues, but thrives, because like the sea, it wins in one place, what it loseth in another; like the Sun, it riseth to the Antipodes, when it sets to our Hemisphere.

II. That a particular Church in case it degenerate, cannot challenge such interest in them, as it might, if it had continued pure. There was to be a time when the vineyard in Isaiah should afford red wine; then it might look for watering every moment, and being kept from all hurt. But there was also a-time when it degenerated, and instead of red wine, brought forth wild grapes; when instead of keeping it, the Lord threatened to take away the hedge, and pull down the wall thereof: instead of preserving it from hurt, to let it be eaten up, broken down, and laid waste; instead of watering, to command the clouds that they rain not upon it. Who knoweth but the Lord hath said of us in this Nation, as concerning the old Jewish Church? Their vine is of the vine of Sodom, and of the fields of Gomorrah: their grapes are grapes of gall, their clusters are bitter. Their wine is the poison of dragons, and the cruel venom of asps. Sure I am, he hath already begun to cut our Vine till it bleed; and if repentance step not in to turn away wrath, may be provoked to say of England as he once did of Palestine. I had planted thee a noble vine, holy, a right seed: How then art thou turned into a degenerate plant of a strange vine, unto me? May the spirit of Reformation pass through us all! So shall not iniquity be our ruin, as it otherwise may and will.

III. That they use not to be fulfilled all at once, but by certain periods, so as to have their gradual accomplishments. I shall instance in that of Isaiah formerly mentioned. Piscator and Scultetus upon the place interpret it of that preservation which God vouchsafed the Jewish Church under Ezra, Zerubbabel, and Nehemiah in a state of peace and purity, notwithstanding the opposition made against it. Others expect a further accomplishment thereof, when the Jews shall be called in a glorious manner, and when the deliverer shall come out of Zion, and turn away ungodliness from Jacob. So Justus Heurnius in his Evangelical Embassie to the Indians toward the beginning of the fourth Chapter. And the Author of an English Treatise concerning the calling of the Jews, published by D^r. Gouge, in the year 1621. But the fullest accomplishment of it, is reserved for that period, after which, time shall be no more; when all the Israel of God shall be watered with that pure river of life, clear as Crystal, proceeding out of the throne of God, and of the Lamb, spoken of in the last of the Revelation. Of this period, I find the place expounded by popish Commentatours, by name Sanctius, Cornelius à Lapide, and Tirinus, the last whereof understands by the vineyard of red wine, Ecclesiam beatorum, the Church Triumphant: yea, and by some also of our own writers, Oecolampadius in particular, who saith, The things there spoken of, have respect to the day of judgment.

§. 6. The Corollary from hence should be that of S. Peter, a serious lesson of casting all our care upon God, for he careth for us. This hath been by experience found the only best way of obtaining Christian tranquility of mind: witness that of Wenceslaus, King of Bohemiah, who after the rooting and flight of his Army, being himself taken captive by the enemy, and asked how he did, answered, Never better; for heretofore when I had all my men about me, I could find but little time to think of God. Now being stripped of all them, I think only of him, and betake myself wholly to his Providence, who I am sure will hear me when I call upon him.

That of Bishop Hooper (in a consolatory letter to certain godly Christians) taken in Bow-Church-yard at prayer, and laid in the Counter.

Let us (saith he) now we be called, commit all other things to him that calleth us. He will help the husband, he will comfort the wife, he will guide the servants, he will keep the house, he will preserve the goods.

Above all, that of our Father Abraham, who when Isaac had said, Behold the fire and wood, but where is the sacrifice for a burnt-offering? readily answered, My son, God will provide himself a burnt-offering: and when he beheld a Ram unexpectedly provided, to be offered up in lieu of Isaac, called the name of the place Jehovah-jireh, That is, In the mount of the Lord it shall be seen. See we imitate him who is the father of the faithful, in casting all our care upon God, both for ourselves, and our posterity.

I. For ourselves. Behold a sure warrant for that from the pen of David, Cast thy burden upon the Lord, and he shall sustain thee: he shall never suffer the righteous to be moved: Yea, from the mouth of Christ himself; The very hairs of your head are all numbered; fear ye not. Thou (saith Austin) that shall not lose one hair, how comes it to pass that thou art afraid of losing thy soul?

II. For our posterity. There be many that seem to rest upon Providence for themselves, who do yet macerate their hearts with carking and caring for their children, with thoughts what will become of them when they are gone. As Philip once said, Two hundred peniworth of bread is not sufficient for them, that everyone of them may take a little. And Andrew, There is a lad here which hath five barley loaves and two small fishes, but what are they among so many? So do these men say in their hearts, What is my small estate divided among so many children? I am not like to leave enough for everyone to take a little. O fools, and flow of heart to believe! have ye forgotten what God said to your father Abraham? Read, and recall. I am the Almighty God: walk before me, and be thou perfect. And I will establish my covenant between me and thee, and thy seed after thee in their generations, for an everlasting covenant, to be a God unto thee, and unto thy seed after thee. Why may not this God be trusted with thy children too? Sure I am he should. Tell me, Who provided for them before they were born? Who put care and tender affections into their mothers heart, milk into their nurses breasts? Did not God? Is not he that made provision for them all before they came into this world, and hath comfortably maintained them ever since, fit to be trusted with them still, though thou beest gathered to thy fathers, and seest Corruption? Doubtless he is.

§. 7. The better to help us in the performance of so important a duty as this, take along with us the following directions.

I. Get and keep assurance of a peculiar interest in the love and favor of God in Christ. We neither trust known enemies nor doubtful friends with what we account precious. They that know God to be their enemy, they that doubt whether he be their friend or no, cannot with confidence cast their whole care upon him. But he that can groundedly say with David, I am thine, may go on as he doth, Lord, save me. He that can say with assurance of faith, The Lord is my shephard, may confidently add, I shall not want. The spouse may go leaning upon her beloved with all her weight, when she hath first been enabled to say, My beloved is mine, and I am his. I am my beloveds, and his desire is towards me.

II. Continue in well-doing. Let them that suffer according to the will of God (saith S. Peter) commit the keeping of their souls to him in well-doing, as unto a faithful Creator. Look how much care a man hath to please God, so much confidence may he have to cast all his care upon him. Whilst the people of Israel went up to the place of God's public worship, all the males that were of age, thrice in a year, leaving none but women and children at home, so giving the enemy fair opportunity for invasion: God undertakes they shall not so much as desire or think of such a thing. Neither shall any man desire thy land, when thou shalt go up to appear before the Lord thy God, thrice in the year.

III. Treasure up the promises, chiefly such as are made on purpose to assure us of God's caring for us: that in particular, Let your conversation be without covetousness, and be content with such things as ye have, for he hath said, I will never leave thee nor forsake thee. Where there is in the Original an accumulation of many negatives to make the assertion as strong as may be, it is as much as if he had said, I will never, in no wise, in no case forsake thee. We are wont to call the bills and bonds of able men, good security. The promises of God all-sufficient are certainly so.

IV. Reflect upon former experiments, and let them be encouragements for time to come. The Psalmist did so when he said, I have considered the days of old, the years of ancient times—I will remember the years of the right hand of the most high, I will remember the works of the Lord; surely I will remember thy wonders of old. Some enquire why David when he asked for a sword, and Abimelech told him there was none at hand but that of Goliath, called for it, and said, There is none like to that: it is probable he might have found some of better metal, or as good: and some perhaps fitter for his strength, but yet prefers this above all because of his experiment. God had formerly blest him in the use of that.

§. 8. Against the fourth and last proposition of Providence her activity even in sin; it may be objected, and usually is, that this tenet cannot be maintained without making God the Author of sin, which opinion is an abhorrency to the minds of all sound Divines.

I answer, so it is, and ought to be; neither doth that assertion want the attestation of this State. Witness a modern, but pregnant occurrence, yet not generally known, and therefore inserted here in perpetuam rei memoriam. In the year of our Lord, 1645. there was published in London an English book, wherein God was expressly made the Author of his people's sins, though not without some limitations. The Assembly of Divines then sitting at Westminster, took offense at this, (though some of them, being acquainted with the man, whose name it bore, were ready to say of him, as Bucholcerus did of Swenckfeldius, He had a good heart, yet without a well regulated head) made complaint of it to both houses of Parliament. They both censured the said book to be burnt by the hand of the common hangman; and the Assembly of Divines agreed upon a short Declaration, Nemine contradicente, by way of detestation of that abominable and blasphemous opinion, which was also published under that Title, July 17. 1645. and in which we meet with these among other expressions;

That the most vile and blasphemous Assertion, whereby God is avowed to be the Author of sin, hath hitherto by the general consent of Christian Teachers and Writers, both ancient and modern, and those as well Papists as Protestants, been not disclaimed only, but even detested and abhorred.—Our Common adversaries, the Papists, have hitherto only calumniously charged the Doctrine of the Reformed Churches with so odious a crime (in the mean time confessing that we do in words deny it, as well as they themselves) now should this book be tolerated, might insult over us, and publish to the world, that in the Church of England it was openly, and impudently maintained, That God is the Author of sin, then which there is not any one point, whereby they labor in their Sermons and popular Orations, to cast a greater Odium (though most injuriously) upon the Reformed Churches.—We are not, for the Reverence or estimation of any man's person, to entertain any such opinions as do in the very words of them asperse the honor and holiness of God, and are by all the Churches of Christ rejected.

This premised, I now assert positively and considerately (yet without obliging myself to make good every phrase that hath fallen unadvisedly from the pen of every writer) that what Protestant Churches say in their public Confessions, and allowed Protestant writers in their books, concerning God's having a natural influence into the sinful acts of creatures, but without a moral influence into the sinfulness of their acts; his inflicting hardness of heart as a punishment to former sins; his directing and ordering great sins to great good, as Joseph's vendition to the Churches preservation, yea, the crucifixion of Christ, to the salvation of the Elect, do neither really, nor in due construction amount to the making of God the Author of sin. To what hath been elsewhere further said of this copious argument, I refer the capable reader to my Tactica Sacra, Lib. 1. Cap. 1. §. 5. & ibidem cap. 6. §. 4.

FINIS.

P-JA2-3. England's Eben-ezer, or, Stone of help set up in thankful acknowledgment of the Lord's having helped us hitherto : more especially for a memorial of that help which the Parliaments forces lately received at Shrewsbury, Weymouth, and elsewhere : in a sermon preached to both the honorable Houses of Parliament, the lord mayor and aldermen of the city of London being present, at Christ-Church, London, upon the late solemn day of thanksgiving, March 12 - Arrowsmith, John, 1602-1659.

Die Jovis, 13. Martii. 1644.

IT is this day Ordered by the Lord's in Parliament assembled, that this House doth give thanks to Master Arrowsmith, for his great pains taken in the Sermon he preached on the 12 of this instant March in Christ-Church London, before the Members of both Houses of Parliament: and giving thanks to Almighty God for his blessing to the Parliament, for their late good success at Shrewsbury and Weymouth. And that the said Master Arrowsmith is hereby desired to print and publish his Sermon, which is not to be printed or reprinted by any, but by authority under his hand.

John Brown, Cler. Parl.

Die Jovis, 13. Martii. 1644.

ORDERED by the Commons assembled in Parliament that Master Solicitor and Master Nicholas, do from this House return thanks to Master Arrowsmith, and Master Vines, for the great pains they took in the Sermons they preached at the entreaty of both Houses at Christ-Church yesterday (being a day appointed for public thanksgiving) and that they do entreat them to print their Sermons. And it is Ordered that none shall presume to print their Sermons, but whom they shall license under their hands writing.

H. Elsynge, Cler. Parl. D. Com.

I appoint Samuel Man to print my Sermon.

John Arrowsmith.

ENGLANDS EBEN-EZER OR, STONE of HELP.

Set up in thankful acknowledgment of the LORD'S having helped us hitherto.

More especially, For a memorial of that help, which the PARLIAMENTS Forces lately received at Shrewsbury, Weymouth, and elsewhere.

IN A SERMON Preached to both the Honorable Houses of PARLIAMENT, (the Lord Major and Aldermen of the City of LONDON, being present) at Christ-Church LONDON, upon the late solemn day of Thanksgiving: March 12.

By JOHN ARROWSMITH, B. D. Published by Order of both Houses.

Hos. 13. 11.

O Israel thou hast destroyed thyself, but in me is thine help.

2 Chron. 14. 11.

Lord, it is nothing with thee to help, whether with many, or with them that have no power. Help us O Lord our God, for we rest on thee: and in thy name go we out against this multitude. O Lord thou art our God; let not man prevail against thee.

LONDON, Printed by ROBERT LEYBURN, for SAMUEL MAN, dwelling in PAULS Church-yard, at the sign of the SWAN. 1645.

To the right HONORABLE, the LORD'S and COMMONS Assembled in PARLIAMENT.

THE Glorious Temple had a beautiful gate. Such is a Gratulatory Epistle to a Sermon of Thanksgiving. Our Estates and Liberties bless your Honors. Religion and Learning do no less: I shall therefore here mention a few of the many good offices done for them.

Whereas the public worship of God was much embased, you have been careful to take away the glittering tin of specious Ceremonies, together with the ugly dross of known Superstition. Let popish Spirus bewail the want of making a fair show in the flesh, which so many desire; let them cry out, and say, There is not so much State and bravery in the service of God, as heretofore: I dare be bold to tell the World, that much more holiness will be found in your brazen Serpent, then ever was in their golden Calf. It is not long since Christians of the greatest zeal were injured by certain Sons of Levi even as of old the sons of Eli, with their flesh-hock of three teeth, offered violence to the people, when they came to offer sacrifice. You have wrested from them their flesh-book, and broken the three teeth thereof, which were illegal Canons, ensnaring Oaths, and rigorous High Commission-censures. Not long since Professors in England, Amnon-like, were lean from day today, by reason of the love they bare to Romish fopperies, as he to Tamar, (many affecting the garb of Rome in their most solemn worship, as Amnon pretended to lorg for meat of Tamars dressing: Others proceeding, as he did with her; to a carnal knowledge of that Whore.) But after your happy assembling, the hand of God wrought an happy change in their hearts, and made them generally hate this Tamar, as much and more then ever they loved her. You have now not only turned her out, but boulded the door by an holy Covenant, to endeavor the extirpation of Popery and Superstition. Not long, since there were many pens and tongues fully employed in decrying the Lord's day, and disputing against the morality of the fourth Commandment. An employment to be forever abhorred; because as Noah took to himself clean beasts by sevens, six for propagation, the seventh for sacrifice, which was accordingly offered up, at his coming out of the Ark: So the Lord who allows us six da•es for civil affairs; would have the seventh sacrificed to himself as an whole burnt offering. Yet, as Antiochus took away the daily sacrifice, these men had almost taken from us the Sacrifice of days; but you have restored it, by a most pious and wholesome Ordinance, according to the good hand of God upon you. And whereas one of the breasts of our common Mother▪ hath been dried up of late, or rather yielded much blood instead of milk; you have already made some, and (we hope) are about to make further provision for the other, lest the coal which is left us be quenched, as the woman of Tekoah said to David; lest Cambridge become as a cottage in a vineyard, as a lodge in a garden of cucumbers.

After such high and holy services, be it far, exceeding far from you all to dishonor him who hath said ye are God's, by an ungodly conversation: If it be not, if any root of bitterness, do spring up hereafter in either House, I shall crave leave to represent the danger thereof as in a parable. A certain Priest having to do with a great man that was resolute in sin, yet desirous of absolution, and perceiving he did not understand the latin tongue, instead of absolving him, said as followeth. Dominus Noster Jesus Christus, te absolvat, si vult; & remittat tibi peccata tua, quod ego non credo; & perducatur te ad vitam aeternam, quod est impossibile, My Lord's and Gentlemen, the parable be to them that hate you, and the interpretation thereof to the sworn enemies of Jesus Christ. That not so much as one of you, who continue members at this day, will at anytime prove a stone of offense, by the errors of his judgment, or irregularities of his life; that everyone will become an Eben-Ezer, a stone of help, in that sense wherein Joseph is called the shepherd, the stone of Israel, is the hope, and shall be the prayer of

A worthless but willing servant of Christ, his Church, and your Honors John Arrowsmith.

A SERMON Preached to both HOUSES of PARLIAMENT, at Christ-Church London, upon the late solemn day of Thanksgiving, Mar. 12. 1644.

1 SAM. 7. 12.

Then Samuel took a stone, and set it between Mizpeh and Shen, and called the name of it Eben-ezer, saying, Hitherto hath the Lord helped us.

Great conjunctions of heavenly bodies are usually attended with notable changes. I am full of hope (right Honorable and worthy Senators of the Kingdom, and of the City) that your present conjunction will operate much to our future advantage. Verily, tis a blessed sight, now when England is melting in a furnace of civil war, to behold the Parliament and London running thus into one wedg, and meeting to magnify God together. It put me in mind of what we read in Psal. 122. 3, 4. Jerusalem is built as a City that is compact together, whither the Tribes go up, the Tribes of the Lord unto the testimony of Israel, to give thanks unto the name of the Lord. This is our Jerusalem, hither are the Tribes come up today, the representative Tribes of the Land, and that for no other end but to give thanks; to prepare an habitation for him who is said to inhabit the praises of Israel, Psal. 22. 3.

I have pitched upon a Text affording many choice materials for such a structure, if a wise Master-builder had it in hand. But the plain truth is, tis a work more fit for Angels then men: praising of God is their trade; we are all but bunglers at it. Yet because even the little children to whom John writes have leave to lisp & stammer out the praises of their heavenly Father; in obedience to his and your commands I shall set upon the duty, hoping for assistance from him, and attention from you.

Satan's first design is to hinder men from holy duties, his next to create disturbances in them. Israel being here met to fast and reform, Satan stirs up the Lord's of the Philistines, to bring into the field against them a formidable Army. The Lord of Hosts fights for his people, puts their enemies to the rout, and enables them to pursue the victory.

Then Samuel took a stone, to wit, after the men of Israel had gone out of Mizpeh, the place of their abode when the enemy set upon them, and pursued the Philistines, & smitten them until they came under Bethcar, the place of their retreat: ver. 11. And set it between Mizpeh and Shen, Junius reads it between Mizpeh and that rock, conceiving Bethcar (of which before) to be the proper name of a Rock, and knowing Shen to be elsewhere taken in such a sense, 1 Sam. 14. 4. And called the name thereof Eben-Ezer: Eben, signifies a Stone, Ezer help. To the end, that if Israel should be silent, this stone might speak the goodness of God, this lapis adjutorii, remind them of the mercy received between these two places, Samuel not only imposes the name, but adds the reason of it, saying, hitherto hath the Lord helped us.

So as here we have

- 1 The Monument, a stone set up in a fitting place, and named Eben-ezer.
- 2 The Motto, Hitherto hath the Lord helped us.
- 3 The manager of the work, Samuel the Prophet, and Judge of Israel at this time.

Which three parts, will naturally yield three observations suitable to the present business.

- 1 That the Churches help is from the Lord.
- 2 That the Churches duty is to commemorate help received.
- 3 That principal men, are to have a principal hand in the duty of praising God for his help.

The truth of the first of these observations, viz.

That the Churches help is from the Lord, appears by Psal. 121. 1, 2. I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills, from whence cometh my help, my help cometh from the Lord, which made heaven and earth. It comes two ways.

1 Immediately, from himself alone. The Lord often raiseth help to his people, as he framed the world, out of nothing; and is therefore said to create it. Be ye glad and rejoice forever in that which I create: for behold, I create Jerusalem a rejoicing, and her people a joy, Isa. 65. 18. Whom had Christ to cooperate with him in the work of our redemption? He alone helped us out of hell, of which some understand that in Isa. 63. 5. I looked and there was none to help, therefore my own arm brought salvation. This stone which the builders refused is the true Eben-ezer, not a monument but an efficient of help, such help as no created strength could have administered; for should all the Angels of heaven bring their perfections into one, it would not make a ransom sufficient for one soul. The Holy Ghost in like manner, when we know not what to pray for as we ought, is graciously pleased to help our infirmities, Rom. 8. 26. when we stick fast in the mirie dungeon of sin and ignorance, he vouchsafeth to let down drawing cords of love for the helping of us out, as Ebedmelech did to Jeremiah. The work of conversion is wholly his. He first breaths a good will into the soul causing it to be, then breathes upon that will in the soul causing it to move, works it first, and then works by it. Hence is it that some of those who assert the efficacy of his grace, entitle their books de Auxiliis, of helps. Yet, me thinks, the word comes far short of expressing it fully, the Spirits concurrence being such, as is not only assistant to us, but operative of all in us. A consideration that moved Lactantius to tax the heathens, for giving the chief of all their gods no higher title than of Jupiter, resolving it into Iuvans pater, a helping father. That man (saith he) understands not the influence of God, that looks at him only as an helper.

But so scant is the language of man, when applied to the things of God (whom to apprehend is difficult, to utter impossible) that for want of a better term, even we Christians, must be forced to content ourselves with this of help.

2 Mediately by the creatures whether visible or invisible, or of a mixed and middle nature. The Lord helps by all these.

1 By visible creatures. As when he rained hailstones from heaven upon the Amorites, slaying more with them then the children of Israel did with the sword: when the stars in their courses fought against Sisera, and the river Kishon swept his soldiers away, that ancient river, the river Kishon. When the sea gave way, the rock gave water, and the heavens gave bread to Israel. When both fire, and water, and air, took our part against the Spaniards in 88, which furnished the General of their forces at his return (after the defeat of that Armado, which by themselves was styled Invincible) with this excuse, That his master sent him to combat not with elements but with men.

2 By invisible. Such are the Angels, whom the Lord hath appointed to encamp round about them that fear him, and to become ministering Spirits to the heirs of salvation. O the bowels of our God! The Father sends his Son to redeem us, the Father and Son send the Holy Ghost to comfort us, and, that whole heaven may be set on work for the Churches help, the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost send the good Angels to watch over us. Manifold are the good turns which these invisible helpers do us, though we take notice but of few. If Daniel be to be rescued from the hungry Lions, an Angel stops all their mouths; Lot from the flames of fire and brimstone, the Angels hale him out of Sodom. If Elisha be in danger of being surprised by a great host of men, a greater host of Angels appears in his defense; Peter of having the work of his Ministry at a stand by his being kept in hold, an Angel opens the prison door, and sets him at liberty. If Jacob be in his way home wanting protection against Esau, the Angels of God meet and guard him; Elias in the Wilderness wanting meat, an Angel turns Sewer and serves it in; Paul in a storm wanting comfort, an Angel stands by and cheers him. If Lazarus give up the ghost, the Angels take his departing soul, and carry it into Abraham's bosom. Suppose the son and heir of a King returning from his travel in foreign parts, the Master of the Ceremonies meets him at the Port where he landeth, conducts him to Court, and leaves him in his fathers presence: So it fares with a dying Saint; he hath been travelling in this world as in a strange country, is now returning back to God; 'tis a part of the good Angels helpfulness to meet him at the port of death, so to convey him home from thence to the enjoyment of his Father, and of full beatitude in him.

3 By creatures of a mixed and middle nature. Such are men, visible in their bodies, invisible in regard of their souls. Now there is no sort of men that contributes not more or less to the help of the Church; either freely, or against their wills by an over-ruling providence, turning that to the Saints advantage, which was intended for their harm. But two sorts are especially noted in Scripture for their helpfulness.

1 Godly Magistrates. When David was set up to be King, his Inauguration is thus expressed, Psal. 89. 19, 20. I have laid help upon one that is mighty; I have exalted one chosen out of the people: I have found David my servant, with my holy oil have I anointed him. Before Moses his pious government, Israel was as an helpless child without a nurse: he is compared to a nursing Father carrying that people in his bosom as a sucking child, Numb. 11. 12. Have I conceived all this people? have I begotten them, that thou shouldst say unto me, Carry them in thy bosom (as a nursing father beareth the sucking child) unto the land which thou sawest unto their fathers? No nursing father ever had a more froward child than Israel was, yet Moses held out; and might be held forth as a pattern to you, Lord's and Commons assembled in Parliament, had you not made him so already. I remember Austin in his Confessions praiseth God for furnishing his nurse with milk; and for giving her an heart to impart it to him, who had perished without it. Well may this whole Assembly join with me upon this solemn day of thanks in blessing God for enabling you to do the work of nursing Fathers so well, & so long: as also for inclining your hearts (though you daily meet with frowardness more then enough) to undergo with so much patience the manifold troubles of Church and State-nursery. May it still be continued to us! may fresh supplies of the Spirit of Christ be vouchsafed to you when ever ye meet! that gasping Ireland, trembling Scotland, bleeding England may all have help from the Honorable Houses.

2 Godly Ministers. The Prophets in Ezra 5. 2. were Fellow-helpers with Zerubbabel and Ieshua. Theu rose up Zerubbabel the son of Shealtiel, and Ieshua the son of Iozadak, and began to build the house of God which is at Jerusalem: and with them were the Prophets of God helping them. Paul styles himself and his Fellow-laborers in the Ministry, helpers of the Corinthians joy, 2 Corinth. 1. last. The request put up to him in a Vision by the man of Macedonia was no other but this, Come over and help us, Acts 16. 9. When he goes about to draw as it were an Inventory of the Churches goods in 1 Corinth. 3. end. her well-gifted pious Teachers are made the Inprimis of it. All things are yours, whether Paul, or Apollos, or Cephas. Time was when such were very highly esteemed in love for their works sake, and had in honor for their helpfulness. Insomuch as when Chrysostom was like to be silenced, the people cried out, We had better want the shining of the Sun than the preaching of Chrysostom. When Nazianzen was taking his leave of Constantinople, where he had been Preacher, an old man was observed to fall into passion, and heard to cry, saying, Go father if you dare, and take away the Trinity with you, as if God would not stay after he was gone.

Yea, there was a time here in England some few years since, when the whole religious party throughout the Kingdom reckond upon their able and conscientious Pastor's as a principal part of their treasure, till some of late began to make it a piece of Religion to throw dirt in the face of our Ministers, even of the most godly among them.

As when Sfetigrade in Epirus was besieged by the great Turk, a Traitor within (knowing how much the Garrison soldiers abhorred the tasting of whatsoever they deemed unclean) threw a dead dog into the well which furnished the inhabitants with water; upon the discovery whereof the soldiers chose rather to die than to drink: and so the City was yielded up. In like manner, now when the Church is so straitly besieged on every side, many otherwise well affected, begin to refuse the water of life held out in the public Ministry; only because of that noisome carrion of exceptions and aspersions, which some have treacherously cast upon the persons, the calling, yea, the Doctrine, of most of our best and ablest Preachers: The good Lord send some happy hand, by which this dead and deadly dog may be removed, and all lovers of truth and peace brought to drink as before; that so the giving up of a goodly City into enemies hands, may be timely prevented.

Having done with the proof, I shall now in the application hereof present you with matter of Encouragement, of Terror; and of Advice.

1 Of Encouragement to the people of God. We have an Almighty helper on whom we may rely with confidence how many soever our extremities, how strong so ever our adversaries be, We may boldly say, The Lord is my helper, I will not fear what man can do unto me. Heb. 13. 6. The keys of Rome will show themselves more potent than the gates of hell, if ever they finally prevail against the Church. Take a City besieged by Land, if the sea be open it may be relieved: block it up both by sea and land, yet so long as heaven is open, it may receive help from thence. That's the Churches case when she is at her worst. To one that supposed the Emperor would with all his Forces fall upon the Duke of Saxony, (who was the chief protector of Protestants) and demanded saying, Where will Luther be then? That man of God returned this quick answer, Aut in Coelo aut sub Coelo, either in heaven or under heaven; because he expected protection from heaven so long as he lived, and knew he should have possession of heaven when ever he died.

2 Of Terror to the Churches enemies. Know ye (if any such be here) that the league betwixt God and his people is both defensive and offensive, they have the same common friends and foes. If any shall set themselves against God, his people strike in to help the Lord against the mighty, if against them, God strikes in, and appoints salvation for walls and bulwarks. When salvation it self can be destroyed, then may you that are opposers of Christ and his ways, hope to find a successful issue of your undertakings. But if these walls be too high for your scaling ladders, these Bulwarks too strong for your batteries; then Malignants go and get you some other trade, for believe it, you will never thrive upon this: You may for a time like Samsons foxes, carry firebrands sufficient to burn the corn in God's field: but remember how it fared with those foxes. Were not they themselves burned together with the come which they set on fire? The course you take will certainly tend to your own ruin. for when you shall have endeavored all you can to undo the people of God, the God and helper of that people will be sure to find out a way of undoing you, according to Zephan. 3. 19. Behold, at that time I will undo all that afflict thee.

3 Of Advice to this Honorable Auditory in two particulars. If the Churches help be from the Lord, Then

1 Let the Lord be acknowledged in all the help that we of this Nation have received. The holy Ghost speaking of Victories is wont to ascribe them wholly to God, and though mention be made of the instruments, to carry the praise of all to him. Thus Judge. 4. 15, 23. it is not said that Barak and Israel defeated Iabin and his host before the Lord, but the Lord discomfited Sisra, all his chariots, and all his host, with the edge of the sword, before Barak. And God subdued on that day Jabin the King of Canaan, before the children of Israel, Also in Judge. 7. 18. where we read of the sword of the Lord and of Gideon, the sword of the Lord is set before the sword of Gideon, as that which both gave the commission to Gideon's sword, and enabled it for execution. Vain men may imagine themselves able by their prowess and policy to help and save a sinking State: but what saith Job. Chap. 9. 13. If God will not withdraw his anger, the proud helpers do stoop under him?

Remarkable is that reproof which was fastened upon Pope Adrian the sixth. He having built a fair College at Lovain, caused this inscription to be written upon the gates thereof in letters of gold, Trajectum plantavit, Lovanium rigavit, Caesar dedit incrementum (i.e.) Utrecht planted me, there he was born; Lovain watered me, there he was bred up in learning; Caesar gave the increase, for the Emperor had preferred him. One to meet with his folly and forgetfulness, wrote underneath Hic Deus nihil fecit, Here God did nothing: because all three, planting, watering, and giving increase were ascribed to creatures. Beloved in the Lord, take we heed of saying in such successful seasons as this is, the Parliament hath planted by their Counsels, the City watered by their supplies, the Armies given increase by their valor; lest we also be charged with an Hic Deus nihil fecit, God hath done nothing in all this: because indeed, beside what he acts of himself alone, whatsoever is well performed is his work, though creatures have a hand in it. Lord, thou wilt ordain peace for us: for thou also hast wrought all our works in us. Isa. 26. 12.

2 Let the Lord our God be depended upon, and sought to in his own way for the further help we have need of. Let us come boldly unto the throne of grace, that we may obtain mercy, and find grace to help in time of need. Heb. 4. last.

Here I shall endeavor to show you three things.

1 That we of this Nation have need, great need of further help. It appears thus. There would not be so much struggling as there is in the womb of this Kingdom; so much roughnes, both of the sword and of the pen, if there were not Esau's in it as well as Jacob's. As when the Jews were employed in building the second Temple (the glory whereof was to be greater then the glory of the former) though the structure were not so magnificent, because of the personal presence of Christ, who appeared and taught in it) there was a Sanballat, a Tobiah, and other adversaries to the work: So now at the raising of this second reformation (which is like to have more of Christ in it, though less of outward pomp and state) many thousands are found to oppose it by force of Arms, beside the swarms of pernicious Sects, that like great heaps of rubbish lie in the way, and hinder the setting up of that building which in likelihood would have prevented them, had it been erected sooner.

2 That the help we need, is much more then the best of men are able to afford us. Well may England cry to God as David doth, Psal. 68. 11. Give us help from trouble for vain is the help of man. The Parliament hath already done what lay in them for the making up of breaches by the faithful endeavors of their Commissioners in the late Treaty. The Assembly doth what they are able towards healing the saddest of all divisions, I mean those that the servants of Christ are engaged in one against another. Yet may it be said at this day, as in Ier. 8. 15. We looked for peace but no good came, and for a time of help, but behold trouble. Trouble not like to be removed by human power and diligence; because all the forces Satan can raise, are resolved to continue it, if they can. Luther preaching upon that in Ephes. 6. 12. We wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against Principalities against powers, &c. hath a passage to this purpose, Were we to deal only with men, though they were all Kings and Emperors, we should quickly overcome them by the Ministry of the Gospel, and be able to convert an whole world in the compass of one year. Divine truth would soon captivate human reason, were it not for those obstructions made in men's understandings and wills, by the workings of Satan, who hath more craft and subtlety in one of his fingers, then the world hath in its whole body.

3 That we are to seek help from God in his own way. Be entreated, right Honorable, to consider the nature of the work you have in hand; and to remember that the grapes of Reformation can never be kindly, and thoroughly ripened, but by beams of the Sun of righteousness: the moon-shine of created abilities is too weak for such a production. Seek we therefore to God for help; and see we do it in that way which Israel in this Chapter took, and whereby they obtained the help in the Text: which I shall not wander from, so long as I fetch all my directions out of the bowels of this Story. Do it.

1 In away of real amendment. Samuel here verse. 3. exhorts them to that as they hoped for deliverance; they accordingly put it in practice, ver. 4. Then the children of Israel did put away Baalim and Ashtaroth, and served the Lord only. By Baalim Sanctius understands their He-God's, by Ashtaroth their She-Deities. Be they hees or be they shees, God's or Goddesses, which had formerly been worshiped, all are now put away. Israel gives them a bill of divorce, saith, Get ye hence, what have I to do anymore with Idols? We also have had our Baalim and Ashtaroth; our prelatical innovations, popish corruptions, Arminian subtleties, Socinian blasphemies. It concerns us so to put them away, as to serve the Lord only for time to come: which how any Nation can do that gives an universal liberty to all kinds of worship, is not easy to conceive; though one of late have made his address to both Houses of Parliament in behalf of such a liberty. I must profess for my own part that this proposition laid down by him, viz. It is the will and command of God, that since the coming of his Son the Lord Jesus, a permission of the most Paganish, Jewish, Turkish, or Antichristian consciences and worships, be granted to all men, in all Nations and Countries, was to me one of the greatest scandals I ever yet met with in print. O bloody Tenent! O speedy way of embroyling states, of massacring Churches, of erecting a Pantheon in every City! That of Omnium Deorum among the Romans, of Omnium Sanctorum among the Papists, offended me less than this of Omnium Sectarum from the pen of a Protestant. Sure I am One God, one mediator, one faith, was Catholic Doctrine in Paul's time; and that Religion is so dainty as not to admit of such mixtures. Be you also well assured, Beloved Christians, that in this case every variation from unity is a step to nullity: that if ever England (which God forbid) came from one Religion to all, she will quickly run from all to none.

2. Of solemn humiliation. Such was theirs, Vers. 6. They drew water and poured it out before the Lord, and fasted that day, and said there, we have sinned against the Lord. These actions of drawing and pouring out water are by some thought to be hieroglyphicall. Emptie a vessel of any other kind of liquor, it leaves some relish or color or smell behind it; as when honey, wine, or oil is poured out. Not so upon the effusion of water: which is therefore fit to signify the pouring out of men's hearts in such a manner as to leave none of their sins unconfest, unrepented of. To make it more solemn, fasting is added to their humiliation, as that which helps devotion to wings. Chrysostom saith, that Prayer without fasting, is a soldier without a sword; able to do but little service. And yet of the two, fasting may be the better spared. I shall not be afraid to assert, that fasting ing without prayer is a sword without a soldier, able to do no service at all. With Israel here we should confess, as well as fast. A Nation or person become speechless is near unto death. If we desire to have the Lord cover our sins by his pardoning grace, we must discover them in humble acknowledgments.

3 Of earnest supplication. I will pray for you unto the Lord saith Samuel to the people ver. 5. and they to him ver. 8. Cease not to cry unto the Lord our God for us, that he will save us out of the hand of the Philistines. 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 is the phrase that is used concerning Elias, Jam 5. 17. He prayed in his prayer: we translate it, he prayed earnestly: as if that which is not earnest were no prayer. They in Jonah 3. 8. are directed to cry mightily unto God. A whispering devotion is seldom answered with a loud echoe from heaven. Ask (saith Christ) and it shall be given; seek and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you. Ask, seek, knock, there will be need of all three. Do you want ablessing ask it of God, have you asked, yet still continue to want • seek it out, have you sought, yet cannot find: knock, and the treasury where it lies shall be opened to you. Was there evermore need? hath not peace taken her leave? doth not truth look towards the threshold? It would be most strange and ominous if the Church should not be found upon her knees, now when Rome and hellare conspiring against her: if when three Kingdoms are beleagur'd by Popish confederates, they should not be garrison'd with praying Saints.

4 Of lively faith in Christ, without which all the former are invalid. Samuel here verse. 9. took a sucking lamb, & offered it for a burnt-offering wholly unto the Lord▪ thereby turning both his own and the people's eyes upon the Lamb of God, which was to come and to take away the sin of the world. Whensoever you approach the throne of grace let it be your principal care to exercise faith in the Lord Jesus: out of whom all our learning is but duncery, all our duties but drudgery, all our devotion but formality; yea idolatry, if Luther may be believed. Incense of old was a type of his intercession; blood a type of his satisfaction, one of these was to cover the mercy seat, the other to be sprinkled upon it Levite. 16. 13, 14. He shall put the incense upon the fire before the Lord, that the cloud of the incense may cover the mercy-seat, And he shall take of the blood of the bullock, and sprinkle it with his finger upon the mercy-seat, &c. to intimate that from God no mercy is to be expected but through the satisfaction and intercession of Jesus Christ; no help to be sought at any time without eying of these.

The second observation, which I am now to undertake, runs thus.

The Churches duty is to commemorate help received. See it both required and practiced.

1 Required, Exod. 17. 13, 14. Joshua discomfited Amalek and his people with the edge of the sword, and the Lord said unto Moses, write this for a memorial in a book. Psal. 102. 16, 18. When the Lord shall build up Zion, he shall appear in his glory. This shall be written for the generation to come, and the people which shall be created shall praise the Lord. Should Scripture be silent, nature itself would read a lecture to this purpose. Hear one of her high priests; He is an unthankful man that denies a benefit received; so is he that dissembles it, together with him that requites it not: but of all the rest he is most unthankful that hath forgotten it.

2 Practised. Behold, Saint Paul recording his deliverance, from the teeth of that roaring lion Nero, in 2 Tim. 4. 17. The Lord stood with me and strengthened me, and I was delivered out of the mouth of the Lion. David his preservations, Psal. 31. 21. Blessed be the Lord: for he hath shown me his marvelous kindness in a strong City. It will be needless to multiply instances out of the Psalms: seeing Hosanna, and Hallelujah, Benedic, and Benedicatur, God bless, and blessed be God, prayer and praise epitomize that whole book. I shall rather choose to hint you to some of those courses which the Saints of old took for the registering of mercies.

They had

1 Their festival days. Such were the Purim, viz. the fourteenth day of the month Adar, and the fifteenth day of the same; kept yearly as the days whereon the Jews rested from their enemies, and the month which was turned unto them from sorrow to joy, and from mourning into a good day. These were made by them days of feasting and joy, and of sending portions one to another, and gifts to the poor. Hest. 9. 21, 22, 26. in memory of what the Lord had done for them, in breaking that snare, which the malice, pride and power of Haman had twisted for the whole Nation.

2 Their Eucharisticall Songs. As in Exod. 15. for the overthrow of Pharaoh, in Jud. 5. for the defeat of Jabin and Sisera, in 1 Sam. 18. for the slaughter of Goliath. Out of all which instances if it be noted, that women were wont to bear a part in such songs (for we read of Miriam in the first, of Deborah in the second, in the third of women out of all the Cities of Israel) that observation will lead us to the right understanding of a place in Psal. 68. 11. mistaken by some, as if it allowed women to preach; because the word there rendered Preachers according to the old translation, God gave the word, and great was the company of Preachers, is a word of the feminine gender. Whereas the true meaning of God's giving the word is his affording matter of joy and glad tidings in the course of his providence; and the Preachers spoken of are nothing else but the company of women that published the same in their songs: as may be further cleared by a passage in the same Psalm ver. 25. The singers went before, the players on instruments followed after; amongst them were the damosels playing with timbrels.

3 Their significant names. Which were sometimes imposed upon persons. This course Joseph took to perpetuate the memory of mercies received by him in Egypt, Gen. 41. 51, 52. He called the name of his first-born Manasseh: for God, said he, hath made me forget all my toil, and all my fathers house. And the name of the second called he Ephraim: for God hath caused me to be fruitful in the Land of my affliction. The like was afterwards done by Moses in reference to what befell him in Midian, Ex- 18. 3, 4. He had two sons by Zipporah, the name of the one was Gershom, for he said I have been an alien in a strange Land. And the name of the other Eliezer; for the God of my father, said he, was my help, and delivered me from the sword of Pharaoh. Sometimes upon places. Thus Abraham, when his Isaac had escaped, and a ram been accepted instead of his son, called the name of that place Jehovah-jireh, as it is said to this day, in the mount of the Lord it shall be seen. Gen. 22. 13, 14. And Jacob when he saw the Angels of God that met him, said, This is God's host: and he called the name of that place Mahanaim, i. e. two hosts: either because the Angels appeared in two companies, one on each side of him, for his better security; or because there was now an host of Angels added to that former host of men women and children, which he carried along with him. Sometimes upon peculiar monuments erected on purpose. Such was Jacob's El-Elohe-Israel, Gen. 33. 20. Such Moses, his Jehovah-Nissi, Exod. 17, 15. Such also Samuel's, Eben-Ezer in my Text.

Enough hath been said to convincemen of this duty, as also to inform them about it. The most proper way (as I conceive) to enforce the practice of it at present, will be to parallel the mercies of this story and Text, with those of this age, and day.

The first mercy we meet with here is the conventing of Israel at Mizpeh in a National assembly, ver. 5, 6. Samuel said, Gather all Israel to Mizpeh, and they gathered together. Interpreters are of opinion, that the Philistines whom they were subject to had so tyrannized over them, as to hinder all such conventions; least being ouce gathered together they should consult how to free themselves: that Samuel notwithstanding had now called a Parliament, and got them to meet. What devices have been used in former times, one while to keep off, another while to break off Parliaments here in England, he's a stranger in our Israel that doth not know. I had almost said he's an enemy to it, that is not affected with deep sense of the goodness of God in calling, and confirming (this which you all have the happiness to behold, and I the honor to speak unto) this blessed Parliament; fastened by a late Act, and made as a nail in a sure place, for the Kingdom to hang all her vessels upon, from the vessels of cups, even unto all the vessels of flagons, as the Prophet Isaiah speaks. Wherefore here, before we go further, let us set up one Eben-Ezer saying, Hitherto hath the Lord helped us.

A second mercy which this story acquaints us with, is, The Lord's hearing the prayers that were then put up for Israel, ver. 9. Samuel cried unto the Lord for Israel, and the Lord heard him. Hath he not done the like for us? was he ever a God hearing prayers more then of late? Our devotion hath not had a miscarrying womb, but been fruitful in deliverances: neither have her breasts been dry; for three Kingdoms all this while have been nursed up in the bosom of prayer. The Jews were wont to stand when they prayed, and from thence men learned to say, Sine Stationibus non subsisteret mundus, The world could not stand but for this standing in prayer. But for it, Ireland perhaps by this time had not been at all, Scotland had been all in blood, and England giving up the ghost. Each of these Nations may say for it self as the Psalmist doth, Verily God hath heard, he hath attended to the voice of my prayer: Blessed be God that hath not turned away my prayer, nor his mercy from me. Psal. 66. 19, 20. We may in reference to them all erect a second Eben-Ezer; for herein also the Lord hath helped us; both helped us to pray, and helped us to speed.

A third mercy is the Lord's defeating their enemies, and that so, as to make Israel instrumental for its own preservation, in the 10. and 11. verses, The Philistines drew near to battle against Israel: but the Lord thundered with a great thunder on that day upon the Philistines, and discomfited them, and they were smitten before Israel. And the men of Israel went out of Mizpeh, and pursued the Philistines, and smote them, &c. We are assembled this day to praise God for showing the like favor to us in more then one or two places.

It may be observed out of Scripture that the Lord hath still been delighted in taking to himself a denomination from some fresh and recent mercy. In one of the first ages of the world he is styled the possessor of heaven and earth; as having not long before made the one for his throne and the other for his footstool. After he had revealed himself by many promises to the Fathers he is frequently called, the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob. When he had newly broken the yoke which Pharaoh had put on his people's neck, then, I am the Lord, saith he, that brought thee out of the Land of Egypt, out of the house of bondage. Having at another time delivered the same people from Babylon, he renews in his style the memorial thereof, Jer. 16. 14, 15. The days come, saith the Lord, that it shall no more be said, the Lord liveth, that brought up the children of Israel out of the Land of Egypt; but the Lord liveth, that brought up the children of Israel from the land of the North. After the Word was made flesh, the amiable Title which the New Testament gives him, is this, The God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ. It is not long since he was pleased to crown the endeavors of our men of war with a triple victory, that so with a threefold cord of love he might draw us to thankfulness. Let him therefore be styled, at least for this day, The God of our Parliament and of their forces at Scarborough, at Shrewsbury, and at Weymouth.

I am not able to parallel our success with theirs in all things. The chapter tells us of a defeat occasioned by miraculous thunder; here was none such: only an artificial thundering on both sides, and that on ours blest to the discomfiting of our enemies. Yea our three Commanders in chief, in those three fore-mentioned places, what were they else, but (to use the Poets expression) Tria fulmina belli? yet in two particulars they may be compared.

1 Israel's victory, which the Text relates to, was unexpected. They were met together at this time to consult, and not to combat; not to fight and kill, but to fast and pray; to reform, and not to embattail themselves. Yet now doth God give up their enemies into their hands. Tell me, was not the gaining of Shrewsbury unexpected by all men here? the regaining of Weymouth a thing which but few of us had in our hopes? Hath not the Lord in both these, yea, and at Scarborough, done terrible things which we looked not for? Have we not received Weymouth especially, as Abraham did Isaac, even from the dead? may we not say upon this occasion, mutat is mutandis, as the man in the parable did of his son, Luk. 15. 32. It is meet that we should make merry and be glad: for this thy brother was dead, and is alive again; was lost and is found?

2 Israel got the victory, though the Philistines had the advantage. It seemeth by the tenor of the story, that full men set upon such as were fasting; armed men upon such as were naked: Israel for ought we read, being furnished with no other weapons but their prayers and tears, and sacrifices. Only when the Philistines were discomfited by the thunder they ('tis thought) took up the weapons, that fell from their amazed enemies, and with them did execution in the pursuit. 'Tis easily found which side the advantage was on at Weymouth. Were not our numbers inconsiderable? were not the few men we had well-nigh spent, and worn out with watching and other military duties? yet did they prove more then conquerors, by getting, not only victory, but booty; recovering what they had lost before, and withal possessing themselves of what the enemy had laid in. Let us therefore bestow another Eben-ezer upon this; and say once more, Hitherto the Lord hath helped us.

I hasten to the third and last observation, viz.

That principal men are to have a principal hand in the duty of praising God for his help.

Climbe we up to the full explication of this truth by certain steps: which are these. Every creature is made to praise God in its kind; Men are more bound to this duty then other creatures; Christians more then other men; Professors eminent for their places in Church or State more than other Christians.

1 Every creature is made to praise God in its kind. Praise ye him Sun & moon, praise him all ye stars of light, praise him ye heavens of heavens, and ye waters that be above the heavens: Praise the Lord from the earth, ye dragons, and all deeps, Fire and hail, snow and vapor, stormy winds fulfilling his word, mountains and all hills, fruitful trees and all Cedars, beasts and all cattle, creeping things and flying fowls. Psal. 148. 3, 4, 7, 8, 9, 10. They do it accordingly, Psal. 19. 1. The heavens declare the glory of God; and the firmament showeth his handy work.

2 Men are bound to this duty more then other creatures.

O that men would praise the Lord for his goodness, & for his wonderful works to the children of men. Let them exalt him also in the congregation of the people, & praise him in the assembly of the Elders. Psal. 107. 31, 32. The whole world is a musical instrument; every string is so tuned, as to be fitted for resounding the great Creators praise: But man of all visible creatures is the only musician that knows how to play upon this instrument. The rest can praise God but Objective, by being the objects of man's meditation. They do all bring, as it were, their several sacrifices unto him, and lay them down at his feet: he is the Priest that must offer them up for the whole Creation.

3 Christians more then other men.

That place in Psal. 65. 1. deserves more then ordinary consideration. Praise waiteth for thee ô God in Zion. The Saints pour out their hearts today in thanksgiving to God; the next day, yea it may be the next hour there comes a shoale of new mercies: he must be acknowledged also in them; and therefore praise is said to wait, till the blessing arrive, as being at hand, ready to be tendered upon all occasions. According to the Original, Praise is silent for thee ô God:

perhaps to imply that when the Saints set themselves to pay this tribute, they are struck into a silent admiratiō of that rich bounty and grace, which supplies all their wants; wondering that the Sun of righteousness should vouchsafe to shine upon dunghills, and wanting words to express the goodness of their Master to such unprofitable servants. Praysewayts, silently wayts, and that in Zion. 'Tis due from all Quarters of the World, but it waits for God only in Zion: None have it in a readiness for him but the members of that Church, whereof Zion was a type. All thy works shall praise thee ô Lord and thy Saints shall bless thee, Psal. 145. 10. Unto him be glory; but where? in the Church, by Christ Jesus, Ephes. 3. 21. Great reason there is why it should be so. For the Church is more indebted to God, than all the societies in the world. They receive but drops of blessing to her showers. Ezek. 34. 26. I will make them, and the places round about my hill (meaning his holy hill of Zion) a blessing; and I will cause the shower to come down in season, there shall be showers of blessing. No wonder then if the Spouse have doves eyes, Cant. 1. 15. Behold, thou art fair my love, thou hast doves eyes; lifting up themselves to heaven, when ever she either eats a grain or drinks a drop: while the rest of the world have hogs eyes; devouring the acorns that fall from the tree, without so much as looking up, or ever considering whence they come.

4 Professors eminent for their place in Church or State more than other Christians. I gave them the name of principal men in reference to Micah 5. 5. where we read of God's raising up against the Assyrian seven shepherds and eight principal men, i. e. a competent number of Office-bearers to withstand the fury of the enemy, under Christ, who was their peace. Such are to have a principal hand in this duty.

1 In regard of the depth of their interests. They as being more concerned in the public well-fare than Christians of a more private station, are bound to observe the wheelings of providence more than others; and to acknowledge the hand of the Lord in every turn. Hence are Church-officers called upon so expressly, with so much importunity, both in the beginning, and in the end of the 135. Psalm. Ye that stand in the house of the Lord, in the Court of the house of our God, praise ye the Lord, for the Lord is good; sing praises to his name, for it is pleasant, ver 2, and 3. And again, in the 19, and 20. verses, Bless the Lord ô house of Aaron; bless the Lord ô house of Levi. Beza gives a good reason why that clause, for his mercy endures forever, is so often repeated; no less then six and twenty times in one Psalm. 'Tis done, saith he, to make it appear that we may not content ourselves with acknowledging mercy in the lump, but should take a distinct view of each single favor: as the Psalmist there begins with the goodness of God in general, O give thanks unto the Lord, for he is good. Psal. 136. 1. but afterwards descends to particulars, and to everyone of them annexeth the fore-mentioned clause. For example, it well becomes us at this time, not only to say in the language of that Psalm, O give thanks to the Lord of Lord's, to him who alone doth great wonders, who remembered us in our low estate, and hath redeemed us from our enemies, ver. 3, 4, 23, 24. but more distinctly, To him that blest our forces at Plymouth, for his mercy endures forever; and prospered them at Scarborough, for his mercy endures forever: Who delivered Shrewsbury into our hands, for his mercy endures forever; and gave us our lost Weymouth again, for his mercy endures forever. This if men of the deepest interests shall neglect, who then will be found to do it? will not God be a looser by this omission? yea, will not they be losers themselves, whose engagements to the Common wealth, or to the Church, are such as that they must needs stand or fall with it, whatever becomes of other men? The Jews have a saying, that the world stands upon three things, The Law, holy worship, and retribution. Now we can make retribution to God no other way but by thankful acknowledgements, which we therefore have cause to be punctual in. What shall I render unto the Lord for all his benefits towards me? I will take the cup of salvation, Psal. 116. 12, 13. he alludes to the cup of blessing used in their peace offerings, which were always accompanied with solemn thanks to the most High for his saving health. Have you a mind to take the shortest cut to ruin? be unthankful. Expect showers of blessings from heaven no longer then we continue to send up vapors of praise: for as trumpeters delight to sound where they may be answered with an ecchoe; so doth God delight to give where he is answered with thanksgiving.

2 In regard of the height of their relations.

Who was the sweet singer of Israel, but David the man that was raised up on high? 1 Sam. 23. 1. The higher he was raised the more sweetly did he sing, and warble out the praises of God, insomuch as, if the penmen of Scripture should come to be differenced by their characters, Solomon haply would be styled The Preacher of wisdom; Jeremiah the Prophet of lamentation. Saint John the Disciple of love, and Saint Paul the Apostle of grace: but the style of the sweet singer of praises must be reserved as due to David, more than to any of them all. 'Tis a maxim in divinity, Beneficium postulat officium. Those whom God calls to the highest places, he calls withal to the highest services: and such is this of thanksgiving. Prayer is an high and holy duty, but (if it be lawful to compare them) praising will be found to excel it in some respects. As the martyr said when she was at the stake, Now farewell hope, and welcome love because she was then going to heaven, where hope being swallowed up in fruition, was to have no longer being (For hope that is seen is not hope, Rom. 8. 24.) so may a dying Christian say, Now farewell prayer, and welcome praise, for in heaven there will be no use of prayer; because all wants shall be supplied without asking, or rather because there shall be no want of anything the soul can wish: but of praise there will be use to all eternity. Salvation to our God which sitteth upon the Throne, and to the Lamb shall be the song even of those, that have obtained salvation to the utmost, by the Lamb with him that sits upon the throne. David accordingly seems to have plyed this somewhat more then the other duty, though he was abundant in both. He tells us in Psal. 55. 17. of his praying thrice aday, Evening and morning and at noon, will I pray and cry aloud. But as on purpose to put his soul in tune here, that in heaven it might make the better music; he multiplies praises even to seven times in a day, Psal. 119, 164. Seven times a day do I praise thee, because of thy righteous judgments.

The Application hereof followeth.

What now remains, (O ye principal men, Lord's, Commons, and Citizens) but that you be exhorted to have a principal hand in this duty of praising God for his help; and called upon to do what ye ought, both for the substance of the work, and manner of performing it?

1 For the substance of the work. Know and remember that God must be praised with your hearts, your parts, your lips your lives, and your estates.

1 With your hearts. Psal. 103. 1. Bless the Lord, ô my soul, and all that is within me bless his holy name: The deepest springs are wont to yield the sweetest waters: they are the sweetest thanks that proceed from a depth within. For as Seneca well, the value of thanks resolves it self wholly into the frame and disposition of the heart.

2 With your parts. You are men of great and vast abilities; ô consecrate them all to God. The Spirit of man, Solomon saith, is the candle of the Lord, Prov. 20. 27. Suffer not your bright candles to burn downwards; employ not your parts in the things of this world altogether, not at all in the things of hell; lest they sweat quite away, without doing any considerable service to God or man. Great parts are like great Ordnance: if the Fort wherein they are planted be yielded up to Jesus Christ, they'r of excellent use against the Serpent and his seed. But so long as Satan holds the Fort, no men more mischevous to the Church than those that have the best natural and acquired abilities; yea none in so dangerous a condition in reference to their own souls. I must be bold to tell such, as abuse their wits and other endowments in the service of Satan against the truth, that their lightsome candles will but serve to light them to hell; and their large parts to enlarge their condemnation there.

3 With your lips. Psal. 51. 15. O Lord open thou my lips, and my mouth shall show forth thy praise. The tongue is called a man's glory, partly because speech is a thing wherein men excel beasts; and partly because it is given him to glorify God withal. Praise and thanks should be offered up when ever we draw near to him in any duty, particularly when ever we pray. Phil. 4. 6. Be careful for nothing: but in everything by prayer and supplication with thanksgiving, let your request be made known unto God, with thanksgiving. Expect no acceptance of those prayers wherein there is not some spice of that. Prayer without praise is a censer without burning coals, from which there can no sweet savor ascend.

4 With your lives, for therein lies the life of thankfulness. He is the most thankful that is the most fruitful Christian. There must be Gratiarum actio a doing of thanks. Else if our thanks be not accompanied with obedience, we do but play Jews-play with Christ; saying, Hail King of the Jews, and smiting him. Physicians judge of the heart by the arm; feel the pulse, that they may know the state of the vitals. How beats the pulse of thy conversation? according to that will God judge of the soundness, or sickliness of thy constitution. Would you render real thanks? Remember what you have lately sworn, namely, to go before each other in the example of a real reformation. The Lord had caused the Land to pass under a rod, a rod that fetched blood at every lash, before we would be brought into the bond of that Covenant Believe it, he that whipt us to it, will whip us for it, if it be not kept. The curses ingrost in that flying roll Zech. 5. will be sure to over-take us, for swearing falsely by the name of the Lord.

5 With your estates: Honor the Lord with thy substance, Prov. 3. 9. Christ will never trust Judas more. The Saints are now his purse-bearers; and from them it is expected that they should willingly disburse, when ever the Lord hath need in his members: This is the duty of every day; especially solemn days of thanksgiving. Eat the fat and drink the sweet, and send portions unto them for whom nothing is prepared; for this day is holy unto our Lord: neither be ye sorry, for the joy of the Lord is your strength. Nehem. 8. 10. That joy which enlargeth the heart at such a time should take away straitness of hand. Thanksgiving days should be giving days. Upon the first day of the week, let everyone of you lay by him in store as God hath prospered him, saith Saint Paul, prescribing an order concerning the collection for the Saints, 1 Cor. 16. 1, 2. Why upon the first day of the week? Chrysostom hints to this reason▪ because then in the use of those Ordinances that were dispensed on the Lord's day, the spirits of Christians resenting the goodness of God more then at other times, would be more ready to give the Saints a taste of theirs. You that have this worlds good, shut not up your bowels now, from those of Melcomb, Weymouth, and Plymouth, that need so much; and deserve so well. Let the consideration of those late mercies we have received be a means to open all obstructions of heart and purse, and to procure mercy from you, for those persons by whom, and places where we have received them.

2 For the manner. This great work of praising God must be performed unanimously and cheerfully.

1 Unanimously. We should all glorify God with one mind and with one mouth, Rom. 15. 6. which is utterly impossible so long as through difference in opinion and affection, that event is looked at as a cross by one, which appears a rich blessing to another. There will hardly be one mouth, where there is not one mind: God will hardly be glorified, where there is not a sweet conjunction of both. Cleopatra dissolved an union of great price, and drank it in an health to Marcus Antonius. Divisions are Satan's Drink-offerings: No such drinkers of health to hell as dissolvers of union. If my soul might have its wish, I should not desire, what Austin did, to see either Paul in the pulpit, or Rome in its pomp: but the thing I would beg should be Union. Next to a full and clear sight of its own union to Jesus Christ; my soul should long for nothing more in all the world, than union of the King to his Parliament, & of the godly throughout the Kingdom among themselves. Who ever lives to see these things may sing his Nunc dimittis with Simeon, Lord, now lettest thou thy servant depart in peace, for mine eyes have seen thy salvation.

2 Cheerfully, Psal. 149. 5, 6. Let the Saints be joyful in glory; let them sing aloud upon their beds; let the high praises of God be in their mouths. The birds chirp most in the fairest weather; successful seasons are joyful seasons to thankful Saints.

Yet because, as poison conveyed in flowers is most dangerous, in that it presently takes the brain, so there is nothing more deadly than poisoned joys: to the end your cheerfulness may be kept within Scripture bounds your rejoicing be such and none but such as becomes the Gospel, I shall here present you, before I conclude, with a short character of Christian joy. 'Tis a spiritual affection that hath the Holy Ghost for its Father, Faith for its Mother, Prayer for its Midwife, the Word for its Nurse, Sincerity for its Keeper, and trembling for its Handmaid.

1 The Holy Ghost for its Father, we find it called joy of the Holy Ghost, 1 Thes. 1. 6. They in Nehemiah kept the dedication of the wall of Jerusalem, with gladness, and thanksgivings; they offered great sacrifices and rejoiced, for God had made them to rejoice with great joy; Cap. 12. ver. 27. 43. Light is sown for the righteous, Ps. 97. 11. Spiritual joy is a light shed from heaven, it springs not out of ones own bowels, as the carnal joy of worldings doth; but is as seed cast in from without, and the Seeds-man is the Holy Ghost.

2 Faith for its Mother. Joy of Faith, so 'tis called, Phil. 3. 25. Believing ye rejoice, saith Peter, with joy unspeakable and full of glory. 1 Pet. 1. 8. In the ring of graces, faith is the diamond; joy the sparkle of the diamond. Hear Saint Paul, We are the circumcision which worship God in Spirit, and rejoice in Christ Jesus. Holy men have their rejoicing only in Christ; they are made partakers of Christ only by faith. Such as desire to have joy as a flower blown in their hearts, must be careful to water the root of faith; for from thence it springs.

3 Prayer for its Midwife. John 16. 24. Ask, and ye shall receive, that your joy may be full. Rejoice evermore, 1 Thess. 5. 16. and presently after, pray without ceasing. as if he had said, Cease to pray, you will cease to rejoice; pray without ceasing, so shall ye be able to rejoice evermore. The cheerfulest Christians are usually those that are fullest of Prayer. After Hannah had poured out her soul before the Lord, her countenance was no more sad. 1 Sam. 1. 15, 18.

4 The word of God for its Nurse. Prov. 12. 25. Heaviness in the heart of a man makes it stoop; but a good word makes it glad. A soul sick of sorrow is directed by the Word of grace to an able Physician. Upon Philip's preaching Christ, there followed great joy in the City of Samaria, Acts 8. 5, 8. Then Philip went down to the City of Samaria, and preached Christ unto them. And there was great joy in that City. Where the Priests are clothed with salvation, there the Saints shout aloud for joy. Psal. 132. 16.

5 Sinceritie for its Keeper. 2 Cor. 1. 12. Our rejoicing is this, the testimony of our conscience, that in simplicity, and godly sincerity, not with fleshly wisdom, but by the grace of God, we have had our conversation in the world. They are the upright in heart for whom the light of gladness is sown, Psal. 97. 11. It comes up in no other soil. Any kind of sin may nip joy in the bud, hypocrisy kills it at the root. True joy can never breathe in an heart obstructed with by-ends. In the transgression of an evil man there is a snare (such a snare as will be sure to strangle his joy; that appears by the opposition there made) but the righteous doth sing and rejoice, Proverbs 29. 6. They in 1 Chron. 29. 29. were able to rejoice in the service then in hand; why? because with perfect hearts they offered willingly to the Lord.

6 Trembling for its Hand-maid. Psal. 2. 11. Serve the Lord with fear, and rejoice with trembling. Do you lend an ear to this, who are members of the Honorable Houses; for the Psalmist speaks it to such as are Rulers of the earth, Verse 10. Your affections should be proportioned to God's dispensations. His manner is to feed the Church with bitter-sweets: her care should be to mingle trembling with her joy. Be pleased to reflect upon the war which yourselves have managed, and consider whether providence have not seemed to delight, as it were in checkerwork; a white and a black, a success and a blow, whether for the most part, ye have not had a white in the North, for a black in the West; or a black in the North (as at this day) to tremble at, when ever you had a white in the West. Wherefore rejoice in the Lord at present; and again I say rejoice: but do it with trembling to think of provoking the eyes of his glory, whose power is able to confound us in a moment. Tremble, but with rejoicing to think how many places the Lord of hosts hath appeared for us in of late, as glorious in holiness, fearful in praises, doing wonders.

Now unto him that is able to do (and hath done for us) exceeding abundantly, above all that we ask or think, according to the power that worketh in us; Unto him be glory in the Church by Christ Jesus, throughout all ages, world without end. To him that hath helped, and doth help; in whom we trust, that he will still help us more and more, to him be praise, and thanks, and dominion, forever and ever. Amen.

FINIS.

P-JA2-4. Theanthrōpos; or, God-man: being an exposition upon the first eighteen verses of the first chapter of the Gospel according to St John. Wherein, is most accurately and divinely handled, the divinity and humanity of Jesus Christ; proving him to be God and man, coequal and coeternal with the Father: to the confutation of several heresies both ancient and modern. By that eminently learned and reverend divine, John Arrowsmith, D.D. late Master of Trinity-College in Cambridge, and Professor of Divinity there. - Arrowsmith, John, 1602-1659.

ΘΕ'ΑΝΘΡΩΠΙΟΣ; OR, God-Man: BEING AN EXPOSITION Upon the first Eighteen verses of the first chapter of the Gospel according to S^t JOHN.

Wherein, is most Accurately and Divinely handled, the Divinity and Humanity of Jesus Christ; proving him to be God and Man, Coequall and Coeternall with the Father: To the confutation of several Heresies both Ancient and Modern.

By that Eminently Learned and Reverend Divine, JOHN ARROWSMITH, D. D. Late Master of Trinity-College in Cambridge, and Professor of Divinity there.

The Lord possessed me in the beginning of his way, before the works of old.

I was set up from everlasting, from the beginning, or ever the earth was.
Prov. 8. 22, 23.

Quid est Deus? Men's universi. Quid est Deus? Quod vides, totum, et quod non vides, totum. Sic demum Magnitudo sua illi redditur, quia nihil majus excogitari potest. Si solus est omnia, opus suum & extrà, et intrà tenet, Seneca.

London, Printed for Humphrey Moseley, and William Wilson, and are to be sold at the Prince's Arms in S^t Paul's Church-yard, and in Well-yard near S^t Bartholomew's Hospital. 1660.

TO THE READER.

WHat was said to the highest praise and Commendations, out of the mouth of Truth it self, concerning John the Baptist, John 5. 35. may not unfitly be spoken of the Learned Author of this mysterious Treatise, That 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 , He was a burning and a shining Light; who by his indefatigable and unwearied study in the sublime mysteries of the Gospel, did spend and waste himself to the socket and utmost end of his last breath, to explicate the darkest places of the sacred Scriptures; that he might give light to others in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. And though this Piece be a Posthumus, yet it speaketh the living praise of its departed Author. And cannot but discover its self to be the product of so holy and learned a Divine as the Author was. The matter it self declareth the excellency of his worth, and the largeness of his capacity in the right apprehending and dividing of the word of truth, to the confuting of heresies and damnable errors. It may well be said of him, as of Athanasius of old; Maluit sedem, quàm fidei syllabam mutare, He had (while he was) rather have lost whatsoever profits and preferments were cast upon him, than to have altered or forsaken the least syllable or Iota of his Christian-faith: who after he had fought a good fight, kept the faith, and finished his course with joy, is accepted into glory. Our loss, and the Churches deprivation of him, became his gain, his advantage. For the Prophets do not live forever. Zach. 1. 5. which may give us just occasion to wish Jeremiah's wish, Oh that our heads were full of water, and our eyes fountains of tears, that we might weep day and night for the Prophets that are taken away from us. And, amongst them, for this Prophet of whom I may say the Poets words, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 . That he was one of a Thousand. With what diligence, and with what study and pains, with what good conscience, with what integrity and uprightness he did carry himself in the constant course of his life, those that were most intimate with him cannot but testify. All that knew anything of him, knew the truth of all. His manner of Preaching did show indefatigable great pains and labor, being one of the most hard courses that could be undergone, which was by way of Paraphrase, and Explication of the most mysterious and obscure Texts of the Sacred Scriptures. Great dexterity, good judgment, and profound and admirable learning were everywhere manifested in his Ministry. He was noted in the University for one of prime wit, and sharp conceit, plain in the delivery of the word, yet so, that any one might discern there was both judgment, much learning, and wisdom mixed therewith. He had a soul that aspired after much more, than so weak, and sickly a body was able to undergo. He put forth his strength beyond his strength to do good. Even as a Taper, that doth wast itself to give light to others; so did he exhaust himself, & strenght and vital parts to give light to all. Nothing made him, for some time before his death, to give off his Ministry, but weakness, & disability of body. So that he must have this testimony, that he did service to God, and his Church, as long as God would have him to do service to him on earth. And many have cause to weep, though not for him, who is now translated to glory, yet for themselves in the loss of so faithful and careful a dispencer of the word of God. I dare say no more, lest, while I endeavor to declare his worth, and dignity, I should do him wrong. Had he lived to have supervised this work, no question but it would have passed his hand with more politenesse, and authority. I now desire thee, not only to read, but thoroughly to weigh, and consider the worth and excellency of the heavenly matter contained therein; That that God, that causeth light to shine out of darkness, may cause the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ to shine in all our hearts more & more to the perfect day: Which at the Throne of grace shall be continually prayed for, by him that is,

Thine in the Lord, T. A.

ΘΕΑΝΘΡΩΠΙΟΣ. OR, GOD made MAN.

JOHN 1. ver. 1.

In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God.

ANcient Records tell us, That before the first Writing of this Book, The Churches of God set upon the Work of Fasting, and Prayer, by the Appointment of St. John; That so they might seek Divine assistance. How much more need have I, at this time, to beg your Prayers before

I begin (and all the while I shall continue) to expound this Glorious Gospel. It is therefore my hearty and humble request to you all, that your Prayers may neither be denied, nor sparingly put up for me; That, as Augustine prayed for himself in reference to the whole Scriptures; Domine, sint Castae deliciae meae, Scripturae Sanctae. Lord let thy holy Scriptures be my chaste delight. Nec fallar in iis, nec fallam alios ex iis. Let me neither be deceived in them, nor let me deceive others out of them. So, that you would pray on my behalf; That I may neither myself be deceived in the mis-understanding of the sublime places of this Book, not mis-guide you by giving you either false, or impertinent Interpretations of them. What progress I shall make herein, God only knoweth. But in the Confidence of His assistance, not in mine own strength, (which I acknowledge to be far below many others) I shall enter upon this first Chapter, after I have premised, by way of preface, something concerning

- The Title
 - of this sublime book.
- The Writer
- The Occasion
- The Scope

And likewise, something concerning the Difference, between it and the other Three Gospel's.

First for the Title. It is a Gospel. The Gospel according to St. John. 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 . The word signifieth Glad-tidings, good news. No tidings in the world so good as those that impart Salvation by Christ. And that Message was never so clearly delivered as under the New Testament; though under the Old it was, but more obscurely. Therefore though there were Gospel in the Old Testament, yet ye do not find it called 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 , but 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 , the Promises. But, in the New Testament, this message goeth under a new name of 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 , namely the Gospel, Rom. 1. 1. Paul a servant of Jesus Christ, called to be an Apostle, separate to the Gospel of God. The four first Books of the New Testament, because they do most lively hold forth to you the History of Christ's Incarnation, and Conversation, and Passion, and Resurrection, and Ascension, and his Sermons, and Miracles; Therefore they are called peculiarly by this name of Gospel. All the other Books they do but enlarge, and apply, and illustrate these four Evangelists. Even as all the Prophets under the Old Testament, were but as so many Commentators upon Moses. Now, if it be lawful to compare Scripture with Scripture, for some kind of difference there is. As in pieces of Gold, though all be pure Gold, yet some have a clearer stamp then others: So all divine truths in Scripture, are divine truths; yet there is a clearer truth in some places, then in others. Therefore you may call this of John, The Gospel of Gospel's; as Solomon's Song was called, the Song of Songs. If it be lawful to compare Scripture, with Scripture. He that brings glad Tydings, we say, He may knock at any man's door; Here are glad Tydings indeed! The Gospel, what is that? Certainly, glorious things are spoken of Thee, Oh Thou Gospel of God, as he said of the City of God. Glorious things, &c. It is called the Glorious Gospel of the Blessed God.

Such a phrase you have, 1 Tim. 1. 11. according to the Glorious Gospel of the Blessed God, which is committed to my trust. It is called, else where, The Gospel of the Kingdom. There is no coming to Heaven, but by the Gospel, Math. 4. 23. Preaching the Gospel of the Kingdom. It is called the Gospel of Peace, Rom. 10. 16. How beautiful are the feet of them that Preach the Gospel of peace, and bring glad Tidings of good things? It is called the Gospel of the Grace of God, Acts 20. 24. That I might finish my Course with joy, and the Ministry which I have received of the Lord Jesus, to testify the Gospel of the Grace of God. Would you then have Glory, or Peace, or Grace, or Kingdom, listen then to the Gospel. So much for the Title.

Secondly, for the Writer of this Book, The Penman of it; It is John. The Gospel according to John. Matthew, [2] Mark, Luke, and John, these four drew the Chariot in which Christ rid all the World over. And amongst them four, John hath a kind of preeminency. The Ancients are wont to compare these four, to those four beasts in Ezekiel, who had the faces of a Man, of an Ox, of a Lyon, and of an Eagle: and they make John the Eagle, because he soareth aloft more than all the rest in the Contemplation of Christ's Divinity. The Eagle maketh his Nest on high, as it is in Job. The Eagle can do that, which the other fowls of the air are not able to do. It can look upon the Sun in its highest beauty. Behold the Eagle of the Gospel looking upon Christ in his Divine nature, and expressing that more then all the other Evangelists. They that are given to Divine speculation, know the flight of this Eagle. You that would be heavenly-minded, listen to what John telleth you. John whom the Lord loveth. That is his Title. There was leaning on Jesus Bosom one of his Disciples, whom Jesus loved. The likelier man to reveal secrets; who was in the Bosom of Christ. We are wont to communicate our secrets to our friends, to those whom we love most. You may expect to hear of Christ's secrets from the Disciple whom Jesus loved. And therefore, saith Augustine, John drew out of the bosom of Christ, the very Heart of Christ, what he was about to make known to the World. The King sendeth a messenger to you, and by his Favorite; you expect to know the whole mind of the Prince, because his Favorite is the messenger. Here is the Disciple whom Christ loved. And not only so, but John the Son of Thunder, that is a true Title of his, which only he and his brethren shared in, Mark 3. 17. James the son of Zebedee, and John the brother of James. He nameth them Boanerges, which is, the sons of Thunder, to rouse men from security. Here is Thunder in the Gospel. So many Words, so many Thunder-Claps. John was now to deal with desperate Heretics, That denied the Divinity of Christ; and here is Thunder for them, enough to affright them all. Junius was not able to stand before the force of this Thunder-clap. He himself telleth us, That in his youth he was given to Atheism, and drowned in Cursed principles; and the first thing that brought him to the Knowledge of a God, was the beginning of this Chapter of John; He cast his eyes upon these words, and professed, that he was not himself of a long time after; he saw so much Majesty therein beyond all human Rhetoric, that he was not himself of a long time after. This, Junius (that Translated the Bible) speaketh of himself. There is a mistake amongst people, as if there were no powerful preaching, but that which is Clamorous preaching. As if the goodness of a man's Sermon were to be made out of the goodness of his Longues, and not out of the matter; by the goodness of the delivery, and not by the sublimity of the Doctrine. Here is John, the meekest of the Disciples, the most beloved Disciple of them all, a Man of a meek spirit, as we read in his Story, yet this John hath something of Thunder in him. How? By the effect of his Doctrine, not by the height of his voice. As it is said of Pericles, a great and famous Orator in Athens; He Thundered, and rattled in his speech. And so John in his Doctrine; the son of Thunder in that respect.

Thirdly, you must Consider the occasion of John's writing this Gospel. When the Pastor was absent, the Wolves broke in upon the Flock. When John was banished into Patmos by Domitian, Ebion and Cerinthus, and other Heriticks there were, that denied the Divinity of the Lord Jesus Christ, and this occasioned John, as they say, to write this Gospel, wherein he asserteth the Godhead of Christ; And so, by the way, occasionally ye see what use even Heriticks are made of to the Church of God. We had lost this Gospel, if Ebion and Cerinthus had not broached their heresies. God suffereth desperate opinions to be vented for the purging of his own Truth. The Truth of God is compared to Silver. The words of the Lord are pure, yea, as Silver tried in a furnace of Earth, purified seven times. Every corrupt opinion that cometh to be vented against any Truth of God, that is a new furnace; and the truth being cast into that furnace, it cometh out the purer for it. Purified seven times. As it is with Passengers of quality and note, were it not for some evil inveterate Currs in the street, they might pass, and never be observed; the very barking of the Dogs maketh them to be noted. So these evil inveterate Corrupt Heretics, by their barking, have occasioned the taking notice of that truth of the Divinity of Christ. Had not they barked, John had not Written. This was the occasion. And this should encourage you to attention; because the same Heretics are with us now: we have our own Ebions, and Cerinthusses to this day, that deny the Divinity of Christ, and say, He had no being till he took it from the Virgin Mary.

Fourthly, we come to the Scope of this Book, which is to hold out the Divine nature of Christ, as the object of our Faith, to set forth Christ as the Son of God, that we believe in Him, so, as to have Salvation by Him. And This St. John telleth you, to have been his aim, Joh. 20. 31. These are written, that you might believe, that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God, and that believing you might have Life through Him. He desires to set forth Christ to us as our Redeemer, and therefore laboreth so much, both in the beginning of his Gospel, and throughout, to hold forth the Godhead, and Divine nature of Christ, That so it might appear that he is a sufficient Redeemer. If He had not been God, He could not have gone through with the purchase. As the Eagle trieth her young ones, by holding them against the beams of the Sun; and, if they be able to look upon them with a steadfast eye, she owneth such: So John bringeth his Readers to the Sun of the Divinity of Christ, and such as will not acknowledge that, are bastard-Christians, and not Saints.

Fifthly, One thing yet remaineth, by way of preface; [5] which is the difference between this and the other Gospel's: which lieth especially in two things.

First, whereas the three former Evangelists, insist especially upon things done by Christ, after John was cast into Prison; [1] and so principally relate the acts of Christ, in the last year of his Ministry: St. John taketh in here the acts of his two former years: what Christ did, and what Christ said, before John was cast into Prison: which the other touch but sparingly upon.

Secondly, whereas the other Evangelists insist mainly upon what Christ did; Saint John relateth especially what Christ said. They are much more large in recording his Miracles, John in recording his Sermons, and Prayers, as Chap. 15. Some Miracles indeed he relateth to us, but they are such, as wake may either for his Discourse with the Disciples, or for his disputation with his Adversaries. So still he seemed more to take notice of what Christ said, then what he did.

I now prepare you to be attentive: for I begin to close with the first Chapter, and with these first words of the Chapter, which are of so great importance, That, as I told you before, they had a most extraordinary force upon Junius his spirit; and besides, upon one Numenius, a Heathen Philosopher. That falling upon this Gospel, cried out in a kind of indignation, This Barbarian, saith he; (for so the Greeks call the Jews) hath concluded more in a few lines, than our great Philosophers have in all their Books; He was so taken with the mystery of these words! For they are words which the most quick-sighted Christian can be hardly able to see through. And throughout, I shall endeavor to make it as plain, as God shall enable me. Only ye must not take it amiss, if some things shall be left obscure. Augustine saith, I will not defraud those that are able to understand, for fear of being irksome, to them, that are not able. Do but think yourselves at a feast. When many guests are invited to a feast, They are of several Constitutions, and like several dishes. But now, Shall a man that seeth such a dish before him, to which he hath no stomach, presently rise from the Table? No, he will perhaps think with himself, Other men may like this dish: So it should be taken here. Suppose something be too hard for thee, it may perhaps be clear to another. Paul is a debtor to the wise, and to the unwise; therefore let none arise and go away, but let every man expect his portion. Do you hope, that whatsoever difficult passages there are in the Scriptures, yet there will be some full of Light and Comfort. To close then, with the first verse.

In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God.

YE have here the Subject, and the Predicate, which are laid down in three Propositions. The subject in every proposition is the same, the Word. And there are in these three propositions, three things predicated of this Word.

First, an eternal existency, and that in the first Proposition. [1] The Word was in the beginning.

Secondly, a Personal Co-existency of Christ with the Father. [2] The Word was with God, namely, as a distinct person from God. That is the second Proposition.

Thirdly, a divine Essence. The Word was God: a distinct [3] Person, indeed, therefore said to be with God; but of the same Nature, therefore said to be God. Mysteries have more need of Adoration than Locution.

The first thing we are to understand, is, a discourse of the Subject of these three Propositions. The Word. And for the clearing of that, three Queries we shall resolve.

First, what Person is here meant by the Word? [Quarie: 1]

I answer clearly, The second Person in the Trinity. Of [Respon.] whom; ye shall find him called not only by St. John, but by St. Luke, and Paul too. Jesus Christ is called by St. John, The Word, 1 John 5. 7. There are three that bear record in Heaven, The Father, the WORD, & the Holy Ghost. Here the Word cometh in, in the second place, between the Father, and the Holy Ghost, to denote the second Person, Revel. 19. 13. He was clothed in a vesture dipt in Blood, and His Name is called the Word of God. Neither is John the only man that calleth Him so, though, by the way, St. John himself, above all the Apostles, got the name of 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, John the Divine. (A word too much scorned now a days) 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, why? because he did set forth 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉. He is called Divine, because he held forth the Divinity of the Word, namely of Christ. Others did it as well as He. But not so much. Ye shall find Luke calling Christ the Word in that place, though not often, yet worthy your noting, Luke 1. 2. Even as they delivered them unto us, which from the beginning were eye witnesses, and Ministers of the Word. What is that? not Preachers of the Gospel, but 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 followers of Jesus Christ. St. Luke had that relation from the Apostles themselves, who were eye-witnesses of Christ; and from the Seventy Disciples, who were likewise servants of the Word. And, in all reason, this must be the sense, that, by Word here, Luke should mean the Lord Jesus Christ, because it suiteth so well, with what the other Apostles said. As John begins his Epistle. He telleth them, he would speak to them, of whom they had heard and seen, of the Word of Life, 1 John 1. 1. That which was from the beginning, which we have heard, and seen with our eyes, and have looked upon, and have handled, of the Word of Life. So Luke telleth them, he spake what he received from the Ministers of the Word. Which suiteth with that place, 2 Pet. 1. 16. We have not followed cunningly devised fables, when we made known to you the power and coming of Jesus Christ, but we were eye-witnesses of his Majesty.

But if this be not the meaning, then consider, How much wanting doth Luke seem to be to his Readers. He intendeth to write of Jesus Christ, and to make a Preface of Christ, and fully mentioneth him whom he intendeth to write upon. Ye shall find Paul calling Christ the Word, in that fare-well-speech of his to the Church of Ephesus, which is recommended, Act. 20. 32. Now, brethren, I commend you to God, and to the Word of his grace, which is able to build you up, and to give you an inheritance among all them which are sanctified. I know, this place is commonly interpreted of the Gospel; and, that the Gospel is called the Word of Grace, in another place of the Acts of the Apostles: but yet, they question, whether that be the meaning here or no; and that upon this ground, because that Word is here meant, to which the Saints are commended. Now, the Gospel is commended to the Saints, but the Saints are not commended to the Gospel. But, some other Word is here meant, that is, Christ: I commend you to God, namely, to God the Father; and to the Word, namely, to Christ. Indeed, for the Gospel to be commended to the Saints, is an usual thing; 2 Tim. 1. 13, 14. Hold fast the form of sound words, which thou hast heard of me, in faith and love, which is in Jesus Christ. That good thing which was committed to thee, keep by the holy Ghost, which dwelleth in us. And so, in the second Chapter of that Epistle, verse. 2. The things that thou hast heard of me amongst many witnesses, the same commit thou to faithful men. Here is the Gospel committed to the Saints. But where do you find the Saints committed to the Gospel? To God, ye find them committed again and again: Act. 4. 26. Having commended them to the grace of God. Here are men commended to God.

And so in that sense I take it here. I commend you to God, and to the Word of his grace, to Jesus Christ, who is called, The Word of his grace, here; because it is Christ, that God is reconciled to us by. He is the Author of all that grace, and reconciliation, and favor, which we have with God. So understand the Word of grace, as you understand the Word of life, that is Christ, clearly: What we have heard and seen, of the Word of life; that is, Christ, the Author of that. Ye shall find Paul calling Christ by the name of the Word, in another place, which is commonly otherwise interpreted; Heb. 4. 12. The word of God is quick and powerful, and sharper than any two-edged sword, piercing even to the dividing asunder of soul and spirit, and of the joints and marrow, and is a discerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart. Neither is there any creature that is not manifest in his sight, but all things are naked and open to the eyes of him, with whom we have to do. The Word, clearly, here is a Person; I say, a Person: for, the Word of God is quick. All things are manifest in His sight. All things are naked, and open in the eyes of Him. He, and Him, and His; these imply, that the Apostle speaketh of a Person: not of the Word revealed, but of the Essentiall vord of God, which is Christ. Not but that something may agree to the revealed Word, because it hath the stamp of Christ upon it; but something cannot be given to it. The Word is a Revealer of the thoughts of the heart, when it is powerfully Preached. But, Who can properly say of the word, that every creature is naked and open before the word of God. Before Christ, every creature is open. Christ is called, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, the searcher of all hearts, in a proper sense. Take the end of the thirteen Verse, All things are naked and open to the eye of him, the word namely, with whom we have to do. Our Translation readeth it thus, which the Original doth very well bear, All things are open to the eye of him, to whom we must give an account. 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉; not, With whom we have to do; but, To whom we must give an account: 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 there, signifieth Account, compared to Rom. 14. 12. So then, everyone of us shall give an account of himself to God, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉; the same word that is in Heb. 12. To whom must we give account? to the revealed Word? No, but to the Word, that is, to Jesus Christ: We must all stand before the judgment-seat of Christ, Heb. 12. 13. The very word that is in this place, speaks expressly of Christ, Seeing then we have a great high Priest that is passed into the heavens for us, let us do so and so. The Word is the same with the High Priest.

The second Quere, then, is this. Why is Christ rather [Quaere. 2] called by this term, The Word, than by the name of the Son of God, here in the beginning of this Gospel? why doth not John rather say, The Son of God was in the beginning, and was God, and was with God? But, In the beginning was the Word. Why, for this reason probably, because he would not at first alienate the hearts of his Readers. John knew, neither Jews nor Gentiles would endure the term of the Son of God; They could not endure to hear of a sonship in the Deity and Godhead: but, with this term Word, applied to the Godhead, they were well acquainted, both Jews and Gentiles. But John had often met with it in the Old Testament in this sense, for the second person in the Trinity. I shall show you a place or two. Psal. 33. 6. By the Word of the Lord, were the Heavens made; and all the hosts of them by the breath of his Mouth. Here is JEHOVAH the Lord, and the Word of the Lord, for the Second Person, and the Spirit of his Mouth for the Third. The Creation is ascribed to the whole Trinity. So here is Word. In the same sense ye shall find Jesus Christ is called the Word, 2 Sam. 7. 21. in that speech of David; For thy Word's sake, and according to thine own Heart, hast thou done all these great things. What is that? For thy Word's sake, 1 Chron. 17. 19. Compare these two places, O Lord for thy Servant's sake, and according to thine own Heart, hast Thou done all these things. Thou hast done them, for thy Word's sake, saith Samuel. Thou hast done them, for thy Servants sake, in the Chronicles; And who is that Servant, but Christ? My servant whom I have Chosen, and in whom I delight, &c. There is a place in Haggai, that calleth Christ the Word, Haggai 2. 4, 5. Yea, now be strong, Oh Zerobbabel, saith the Lord; and be strong, Oh Joshua son of Josedeck the High Priest; and be strong all ye people of the Land-saith the Lord, and work, for I am with you, saith the Lord of Hosts: according to the Word that I Covenanted with you, when ye came out of Egypt, so my Spirit remaineth amongst you; fear ye not. Here is JEHOVAH, and Word, and Spirit: (according to) ye may see by the Character, is not in the Original, it is in another Letter in our Translation of it. Therefore, thus according to the Original, or more nearly, I am with you saith the Lord of Hosts, with that Word, in whom I covenanted with you. In quo vobiscum pepegi, I am with you together with that Word, in whom I covenanted with you, when ye came out of Egypt. So that, God promiseth the Church deliverance in the Name of God the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost. Well then, the Jews you see were well acquainted with this term of Word, applied to the second Person in the Trinity; They had it in the beginning, and in the Chaldee Paraphrase, (which is applied to JEHOVAH) it is rendered, the Word of God. What JEHOVAH is said to do, they translate it, The Word of God did it; applying the Word of God to Christ. Yea the very Heathens (whom John would likewise take, and therefore baiteth his hook accordingly) the Heathens had a strong notion of the Word. They said, There was an eternal Mind, from which proceeded 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 a Word, which was the Creator of all things. Ye have it in Plato, Trismegistus, and divers of the Philosophers; yea the very Oracle. Pheuros the King of Egypt, sendeth to the Oracle to know, Who should be the greatest in the World, hoping the Oracle would have named him. But he received this answer, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, expressing the whole Trinity clearly and expressly: First God, saith the Oracle, then the Word, and together with them, the Spirit. So then this term Word being known, and applied to God, both by Jews, and Heathens; and St. John knowing that Ebion, and Cerinthus were better versed in this Philosophy, than in the Scriptures of God; he, to win them, baits his hook with this expression of the Word: whereas the expression of the Son of God would have angered them. In this sense, John practiseth, what St. Paul confesseth, to become all things to all men. He setteth forth Christ under the term of 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, the Word, which they would better receive.

Whence the third Quaerie doth arise, which is the main; How doth it appear, that Christ is fitly called by this [Quaerie. 3] term, The Word?

We must distinguish. There is a twofold Word: There [Response.] is 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, A word conceived in the mind. I pray you set you selves to understand it. As, when ye read, The fool hath said in his heart, There is no God. Here is what the fool thought, He said; that is, within himself. When the mind speaketh to a man's self, that is a word conceived.

Secondly, there is 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, a word delivered; that is twofold, either verbum quod, or verbum quo. The word delivered is either that word, which is one's mind expressed; that is, the thing which he hath spoken. Then it is said, he keepeth his word, when he hath done the thing uttered. And then, there is the verbum quo; that is, that thing by which a man's mind is expressed. Yet, more plainly, take it thus.

There is a three-fold word.

Verbum mentale.	A word conceived.
Verbum reale.	A word uttered.
Verbum orale.	A word uttering.

The word conceived, verbum mentale, is the Apprehension [1] that a man hath in himself, which we call a Notion, or a Conception.

The word uttered, verbum reale, is the thing that is spoken. [2] In the Original, see Luk. 1. 37. With God, nothing can be impossible; 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 , with God, no word shall be impossible. So in the Original. There is nothing that God hath spoken, but it shall come to pass. Ye have a very clear place for that, Matth. 4. 4. Man doth not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God. As I take it, the most proper meaning of that place is. By every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God, we understand, every creature which God hath ordained for food. And ye will be of that mind, too if you see Deuter. 8. 3. He humbled thee, and suffered thee to hunger, and fed thee with Manna, which thou knewest not, nor thy fathers before thee; that he might make thee know, that man doth not live by bread only, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God. Whatsoever the word of God maketh food, whatsoever God appointeth to be instrumental, as he did Manna here; There is verbum reale.

Then, verbum orale, the word uttering, is the expression by which that thing is delivered. That is the end, why God [3] hath given us speech. If we were to deal only with God, we should need no tongue or speech, because God knoweth the thoughts of our hearts. If we were to deal only with ourselves, we should need no speech; for every man knoweth what himself thinketh. But because we are to deal one with another, therefore God giveth us the use of speech, that there might be a word uttering and declaring to one another, what one another thinks, Psal. 139. 4. There is not a word in my tongue, but lo, O Lord, thou knowest it altogether.

Now, Christ is therefore called the Word, because he resembleth all these. He resembleth the word conceived, as being the express Image of his Father's Person; even as our conceptions are the image of our minds.

Again. He resembleth the word uttered, as being that Thing, which is the very substance of all his Father's Revelations and Promises.

And again. He resembleth the word uttering, as being the Interpreter of his Father's will, in all Ages. In all these three respects, Christ is called the word.

First, in reference to a word conceived. Look as the word conceived in the mind, is the image of the mind, or conception, or notion; it representeth our understanding to the full: So, the Lord Jesus Christ, He is the Image, the express Image of his Father's Person, Heb. 1. 3. therefore his Father's word. There is no such representation of a man, as his conception. No such representation of God, as Christ, the express image of his Father's Person. Mark that, I pray you. There is a great deal of difference to be put between a Shadow, a Picture, and a Statue. A Statue, to which this expression seemeth to refer. He is the engraven image of his Father's Person. A Shadow, that is a kind of a sleight representation of a body, but not a clear one; and such a representation of God is all the Creatures. We see something of God even in the Grass and Trees, and Beasts of the field. A Picture, that representeth him a great deal more lively than a Shadow can; it hath usually a man's feature and complexion, which a Shadow hath not. And there is a kind of Picture of God, drawn upon the Souls of Men and Angels.

But there is a further representation than either of these, that is, in a Statue: A Character that representeth further than a Picture; a Picture may show but half the face, or half the body, to the middle; but a Statue, that represents the whole man, Cap à pe, from top to toe. Whereas a Picture; (though you may have one drawn more fully, yet) is, for the most part, so framed, as to represent, though the whole body, yet not in its full proportion; not the limbs so big as in a living man. That also Statues have above Pictures, they represent not only the shape, but the proportion of every limb: Christ is the Character of his Father's Person. Thus he doth not only hold forth God, but whole God, altogether. Christ is Omnipotent, as the Father; and Omni-present, as the Father; and Omniscient, as the Father. And thus he is fitly called the Word, in reference to the word conceived, as being the express Image of his Father's Person.

Secondly, In reference to the word uttering, to the verbum orale; because Christ is the Interpreter of his Father's will. Look, as we express ourselves one to another, by our words; so God, in all Ages; hath expressed himself to the world, by his Son. The great Interpreter of His will, in all Ages, hath been Christ. Matth. 11. 27. All things are delivered to me of my Father, saith Christ. And no man knoweth the Son, but the Father; neither knoweth any man the Father save the Son, and he to whomsoever the Son will reveal him. God; that dwelleth in the light inaccessible, had been forever hidden to the eye of the world, and unknown to them, if the Lord Jesus Christ had not been the word to reveal him. Joh. 1. 18. No man hath seen God at any time, but the only begotten Son in the bosom of the Father; he hath declared him. All the knowledge we have of God in the world, we may thank Christ for it; He hath declared him. We should never know one another's minds, if we had not the use of speech to declare ourselves. Christ is the word, by which God declareth himself to man. He it was, that was the word uttering. The first Promise that ever was, that which was made to Adam in Paradise, Theseed of the woman shall break the serpent's head. He it was that delivered the Law to Moses, and that spake by the Prophets, and in them; 1 Pet. 1. 10, 11. Of which salvation, the Prophets have inquired and searched diligently, who prophesied of the grace that should come unto you; searching what, and what manner of time, the Spirit of Christ, which was in them, did signify, &c. It was the Spirit of Christ in the Prophets, that signified whatsoever they foretold. And so in the Apostles after them, Christ was the Speaker in them: 2 Cor. 13. 3. Ye seek a proof of Christ speaking in me, which to you-ward is not weak, but is mighty in you. This word in the Text, as it is the Church's Orator to God, so he is God's Orator to the Church. He speaketh to God for the Church, and to that end he sitteth in Heaven, at the right hand of God, interceding for us. And he speaks from God to the Church, and in all Ages hath made known the will of the Father. And so resembleth the word uttering.

Christ is resembled by the word uttering, the verbum orale, as being the substance of all his Father's Revelations and Promises; the sum of all that God hath uttered, since the beginning of the world, and the Product, Christ himself to be the summa totalis of all God's Revelations. What was the thing promised to Adam in Paradise? The seed of the woman. What to Abraham? Christ, who was the seed, in whom all nations should be blessed. All the Types of the Ceremonial Law, What was the substance of them? Christ. Indeed, the Ceremonial Law was the Jews Gospel. Every thing pointed to Christ, the substance of all those Revelations of God. To him give all the Prophets witness. The Prophets and the Law both. It is the speech of Nathaniel, Joh. 1. 45. We have found him, of whom Moses in the Law, and the Prophets did write, Jesus of Nazareth. The sum of all Divinity is the Scripture, the sum of the Scripture is the Gospel, the sum of the Gospel is Christ: He is the word uttering in all. What is the world, but God unfolded? What is the Scriptures, but Christ unfolded? As the Prince of Antwerp, one of that House; a Prince, and yet a Preacher by Profession: It is said to be his expression, Scripturae sunt faciae, in quibus involutus est puer Jesus: All the Scriptures are but swaddling-clothes, in which Christ, the Child Jesus, is wrapped up.

So he is likewise resembled by the word uttering, as being the substance of all his Father's Revelations and Promises. For, in him (Christ), all the promises are Yea and Amen, 2. Cor. 1. 20. This for Explication of that term, [The Word,] which ye have twice in this Verse.

Let us now Apply it, before we come to any of the Predicates.

First, In that Christ is here called the Word, in reference [Use 1] to the word conceived, as being the express Image of his Father's Person; as our thoughts are the image of the mind: Let us learn from hence,

First, to be helped here, to understand something of that Eternal Generation, What the Son of God is, who, of himself is inexpressible: Who can declare his generation? Isa. 3. This may help us to conceive better of it, than any expression in the world. When we compare Christ with the conception of our own hearts; there is nothing cometh so near the nature of that eternal generation of the Son of God. The understanding that conceiveth a notion, without difficulty, without passion, without agitation and stirring. There is no conception, no procession of anything, so purely inconcrete, and simple, and unmixed, as the proceeding of the thoughts of our Understanding. Such is the generation of the Son from the Father; at least, this, of all things we can take into our imagination, is the fittest to express Him. And indeed, if it were possible for a man to contract all his notions into one; mark it, if it were possible for him to conceive at once, whatsoever he apprehendeth; then that Conceit, that he conceiveth in his understanding, it would be that man's wisdom, and that man's truth, because it containeth whatsoever he hath in his heart. Such a word is Christ, in reference to his Father: Whatsoever there is in the Father, of wisdom, it is expressed there; whatsoever excellency is in God, it is in the Son. Thence it is, that Christ is so frequently called Wisdom, and set forth by that name, Prov. 8. And he is called Truth, I am the way, and the truth, and the life. And there would be the whole of a man's wisdom in that notion, which will contain all his apprehension at once. So it is in Christ, which is the wisdom of his Father. That is one thing. It may help us something in conceiving, the unconceivable and inexpressible Generation of the Son from the Father.

Secondly, It may help us to conceive of the Father, according to what we read of the Son; and to conceive of the Son, according to what we read of the Father; because the Son is the express Image of the Father's Person. Therefore it is of great use for poor penitent sinners, that, with the Publican, stand afar off, and dare not lift up their eyes to Heaven. For howsoever they conceive some hope in regard of Christ, yet they are afraid, God the Father will never pardon them. They look at Christ, as a Savior all of Bowells. Many poor souls have strange apprehensions of God the Father, as if he were altogether a consuming fire, therefore no pardon to be expected from him. But here is for thy comfort:

Christ, whatsoever he is, is the express Image of the Father's Person; therefore, what thou findest in Christ, thou mayest find in the Father. Was Christ so full and free-hearted, as to be ready to help every poor soul, in the days of his flesh? He is but the Father's Image, and thou mayest find the same disposition in the Father. Thou mayest go to God, as to Christ if he were here in the flesh. On the other side, If any man be a stubborn and presumptuous sinner, that dareth go on to walk in the lust of his eyes, and pride of his heart, and flatter himself with these thoughts, [Lord have mercy upon me, will save him on his death-bed: Howsoever there may be some rigor expected from the Father; why, Christ will have mercy upon him, Christ died for him, and will save him: And he needeth make no question of the love of Christ, of his affection, and readiness to help him, though he walketh in the stubbornness of his wicked heart:] Let such a one know, That God, as he will by no means clear the guilty, so nor will Christ too. Mark that place for this, Exod. 23. 20. Behold, (saith God there) I send an Angel before thee, to keep thee in the way, and to bring thee into the place which I have prepared. That Angel was Christ; for it is said, that they provoked Christ in the Wilderness. Therefore it was Christ. Now mark, Beware of him, and obey his voice; provoke him not, for he will not pardon your transgressions. Why? for my name is in him. Christ is just as I am, saith God the Father here, and as severe to sinners as I am: Therefore provoke him not, he will not pardon. Kiss the Son, lest he be angry. The Son can be angry as well as the Father. Though he be the Lamb of God, yet that Lamb will turn Lion against them that disobey him, and refuse to obey the Gospel of Christ. The Lamb will be so angry, as to make the great ones of the earth to cry, Who shall deliver them from the wrath of the Lamb? Rev. 6.

Secondly, In that Christ is called the Word, in reference [Use 2] to the word uttering, because he is the Interpreter of his Father's will, and declareth the Father's mind to the sons of men: Let us learn from hence to bless Christ; for all the knowledge we have of God, and the things of God, it is from him we have it, he is the Word that hath declared it: The only begotten Son in the bosom of the Father, he hath declared him, Joh. 1. 18. If men think themselves so much beholding to their Tutors, and School-masters, that discover to them the hidden things of Arts and Sciences; If Alexander was so much bound to his Master, his School-master, Aristotle, his Instructor; that he made a question, Whether he were more bound to him, for his teaching of him, than to Philip his father for begetting of him: Then, what do we owe to Jesus Christ, the great Tutor, to whom we owe all our Learning, Tutors, and Fathers too? for all Relations meet in him, and all Duty is due to him. And if He be the word uttering, let none be ashamed of that work of the Ministry. Some Gentlemen think it scorn to make their sons Ministers; God the Father made his Son a Minister, ye see; and setteth the Lord Jesus Christ, his only Son, to be a revealer of his will to the sons of men. And if so, something else may be learned from it.

Let us all take heed to what we hear. It is Christ that is the word uttering. What we find in Scripture, and hear delivered according to the Scripture, it is the word of Christ: Let the word of Christ dwell in you richly, in all wisdom, Col. 3. 16. Ye must give me leave to tell you, when men speak Scripture to you, rightly interpreted, and ye refuse to hear; ye do not refuse men, that speak from the Pulpit, but him that speaketh from Heaven, which is Christ himself; according to what we read, Heb. 12. 25. See that ye refuse not him that speaketh. For if they escaped not, who refused him that spake on earth; much more shall not we escape, if we turn away from him that speaketh from heaven. Christ speaketh from Heaven in every Sermon, wherein truth is delivered unto you. He saith to the drunkard from Heaven, Become sober; and to the wanton he saith from Heaven, Become chaste; to the unbeliever, Lay hold on Christ. It is said from Heaven, when it is said from the Pulpit. If men will go on in sin in spite of Heaven, God will confound them in spite of the world; they must to Hell in spite of the world: Though hand join in hand, they shall not go unpunished. If men will not hear him speak on earth, they must not expect to have him to hear, when they would have Heaven. That is the third thing. Christ is called the word, in reference to the word uttering; because he is the substance of all his Father's Revelations and Promises.

Let us therefore learn from hence, to grow in the knowledge of what we read, and whatsoever we hear from the word of God, because he is the substance of all. Thus, take any Scripture, gage it, and you will find Christ in the bottom of it: If it be a Precept, it leadeth you to Christ for strength to perform it: If it be a Threat, it leadeth you to Christ for grace to escape it: If it be a Promise, it clearly conveyeth Christ; In him all the promises are Yea and Amen, and therefore called, Pretious promises; not that they have anymore price in them, of themselves, than any other Truths have; but precious promises. That is a precious Box, that hath a rich Jewell in it. Every Promise is precious, that hath Christ in more latitude, than other places of Scripture have. Therefore let us labor to find Christ in everyone. The old World had but one Promise, for a great many years together; from Adam to Abraham, we read but of one Promise which God made to Adam in Paradise; and yet Adam a holy man, and Enoch a holy man; and yet but one Promise. Now, we that have so many Promises, cannot we find Christ in some of them to rely upon? Having therefore these promises, dearly Beloved, let us cleanse ourselves. Let us seek for Christ, and Cleansing, in the Promises. I have done now with the Subject of these three Propositions, The Word.

The first thing that is predicated of the Word, is, that [Proposition. 1] which we meet with in the first Proposition, namely, His eternal Existency, In the beginning was the word. The other Evangelists, especially Matthew and Luke, they have spoken fully of the temporal Generation of Christ. So Matthew beginneth, The book of the generation of Jesus Christ, the son of David, the son of Abraham. Now John, whose aim was to insist upon those things, that concern the Divinity of Christ, he beginneth with his Eternal Generation.

In the Beginning was the Word.

Beginning and was, saith Basil, these two terms are like two Anchors, which the ship of a man's soul may safely ride at, come what storms will come. None of those Heresies that deny the Divinity of Christ, shall be able to shame that man, that layeth hold upon these, In the beginning, and Was. There was a Beginning, when other things received their Being; I, but Christ was in that Beginning, and so before the things had received their Being. Much ado there is amongst Interpreters, to little purpose, to find out several senses of this word [Beginning]. I will not trouble you with them: That of Mark will clearly give you the meaning of it, In the beginning of the Creation of God, Mar. 13. 19. Such as was not from the beginning of the Creation, which God created. Here is the thing clear. The beginning of the Creation that God created, is the same that Moses meaneth, Gen. 1. 1. In the beginning God created heaven and earth. It is something remarkable, that Moses, with whom God spake face to face; and John the Evangelist, who lay in Christ's bosom, should both of them have one Exordium; In the beginning, saith Moses; and, In the beginning, saith John. It is thought, that John doth allude to Moses, only with this clear difference; Moses speaking of the Creation of the World, saith, In the beginning, God made heaven and earth. He speaks of a World that was made. John speaking of a Word that was not made, saith, In the beginning was the word. He doth not say, He was made, as if Christ were a creature; but, when all other creatures were made, Christ was. Christ had a Being, when they did but begin to be; therefore he was before them. That which was in the beginning must needs be eternal; Why? Why, because, before the creatures began to be, there was nothing but God.

What was before the Beginning? Let that be the question. [Quest.]

It will lead you into the Abyss of Eternity, what may [Answ.] be before the Creation. Here Faith may enter into the darkness of Eternity, where it may lose itself, and can see nothing, but God before all, and God after all, and God in all. Before the Creation, nothing but God. Christ was before the Creation; when they began to be, he was. Therefore Christ was Eternal, there was no beginning before that Indeed, there was God before the Creation, but God hath no beginning. Though there be principium ordinis, there is not principium temporis; as, the Father first, and Son secondly, and the holy Ghost the third. Here is principium ordinis, Order; but no Time, wherein the Father, Son, or holy Ghost began to be. So, Christ was in the beginning, had a being then. There was no beginning till the Creation, Therefore Christ was from all Eternity.

This may be confirmed with more strength, because the holy Ghost, throughout the Scripture, when he would express Eternity, useth to do it thus; Such a thing was before the world; that is, it was Eternal. Psal. 90. 1, 2. Lord, thou hast been our dwelling place in all generations. Before the mountains were brought forth, or ever thou hadst formed the earth or the world, from everlasting to everlasting, thou art God. How proveth he that? Because he was, before the Mountains or Earth was made. Christ was before the world, therefore God from everlasting to everlasting. Joh. 17. 5. Now, O Father, glorify thou me with thine own self, with the glory which I had with thee before the world was. That is, from Eternity▪ Take a clear place (for those that clearly apprehend Christ to be meant by Wisdom, as undoubtedly He is) Prov. 8. 22. and so forward to the 30 verse; a place, to which our Evangelist is thought to have alluded here, and it is fully parallel; where Wisdom saith, The Lord possessed me in the beginning of his ways: Just as in the Text, In the beginning was the word. The Lord possessed me in the beginning of his ways, before his works of old. I was set up from everlasting, from the beginning, or ever the world was. When there were no depths, I was brought forth; when there were no fountains abounding with water. Before the mountains were settled, before the hills were brought forth, &c. Another testimony ye have of Christ's Eternity: it is in the Type of Melchizedek, Heb. 7. 2, 3. King of Righteousness, and King of Salem, which is King of Peace. Without father or mother, or without descent; having neither beginning of days, nor end of life, but made like the Son of God, which abideth a Priest continually. What cause have we to adore, as Tertullian speaketh (not only to admire, but to adore) the fullness of the Scriptures? The very silence of the Scriptures speaks deep Mysteries. The Apostle arguing from the Scriptures the Eternity of Christ, speaketh nothing of Melchizedek's father or mother. Moses speaking of the Worthies in Scripture, he is wont to speak of their parentage, when they began, and when they died. But the Apostle, when he speaks of this Priest, saith, He was without father or mother. Another place, of the Eternity of Christ, ye have, Mich. 5. 2. where he speaketh both of the temporal and eternal Generation of the Son of God; Thou Bethlehem Ephrata, though thou be little amongst the thousands of Judah, yet out of thee shall he come forth unto me, that shall be Ruler in Israel: Out of thee shall he come forth. That is, of his temporal Government. Here he speaketh of his eternal Generation, Whose goings forth have been from everlasting. In the beginning was the word. That is, Christ was from everlasting. He had a being, before the greatest began to be. And this may serve briefly, for the Explication of that Proposition.

I now come to the Application, because I intend to be as brief as may be. What ye have heard of Christ's Eternity, of having a being before the creatures were made, will afford you,

- First, matter of Comfort.
- Secondly, matter of Duty.

First, Matter of Comfort from hence: because this lets [Use 1] us see, that our happiness standeth upon an everlasting foundation, upon one who was in the beginning, before any creature began to be: And what shall overthrow that Building, whose foundations are laid in Eternity? Shall the Creatures, which are but of yesterday? What can they do, to undo, what the eternal God hath ordained before the world was? That is the foundation of all, Ephes. 1. 4. According as he hath chosen us in Christ, before the foundation of the world, that we should be holy, and without blame before him, in love. Our salvation beareth date before the world was; therefore there is nothing in the world shall prejudice it, much less overthrow it. It resteth upon him who was in the beginning, and who will be after the end; upon him, who is Alpha and Omega; more ancient than the beginning, and more lasting than the end of the creatures.

Alas, poor creatures! time was, when they were not, but then was He, In the beginning was the word; and there will come a time when they shall not be; but no time, wherein it can be said, Christ is not. The Devil is a creature, Shall he be able to undo, what the Eternal hath appointed? He was not when Christ was; and though he shall now live forever to be in torment, yet the time shall come, when he shall not be a Tempter. Then Christ shall be a Savior, be sure. Hab. 1. 12. See what a spring of consolation doth arise from this consideration of Christ's Eternity; Art thou not from everlasting, O Lord my God, my holy One, art thou not from everlasting? we shall not die. Certainly, we that have an everlasting Savior, shall be freed from everlasting death, we shall not die. This is the lot of as many, as lay hold on him by faith. Our eternal Savior loveth to do all things like himself. Lest you should fear either want of love or might, both his love and power are eternal, even as Himself is. He hath everlasting kindness in him, and intendeth to show it unto us, Isa. 54. 8. In a little wrath I hid my face from thee for a moment, but with everlasting kindness will I have mercy on thee, saith the Lord thy Redeemer. And his Power is as everlasting as his Love, Isa. 20. 4. Trust ye in the Lord forever, for in the Lord JEHOVAH is everlasting strength. The consideration of these two, should fill us with everlasting consolation, as Paul speaks, 1 Thess. 2. 16. Everlasting consolation, and good hope through grace. He that was in the beginning, will be with us to the end; I, and in the end of our days too. It is a great comfort, when a man cometh to die, to think, Whom my Salvation dependeth upon; why, upon an everlasting Redeemer, that dieth not.

There is a time when we must go out from all the creatures, and have no more to do with those things, that are so pleasing to us in the world. There is a time when we must go into Eternity; and there is Christ. The creatures we delighted in, they remain not; I, but the God we go to, He remaineth; From everlasting to everlasting, thou art God. Here is a living Comfort for a dying Creature.

Secondly, Here is matter of Duty, as well as matter of [Use 2] Comfort. If Christ were in the beginning, before all the creatures, then let him not come after any of them in our esteems. That is one Lesson we learn from hence. It is expressly said of Christ, Col. 1. 17. He is before all things, and by him all things consist. He is before all things, in regard of his own being: Let him be before all things, and above all things, in our esteem. He was before all the creatures, O let him not come after them in our hearts. In the beginning was the word, when no wealth, no profit, no pleasure, no preferment, such as men now dote upon. Christ is before all these things, Why should he go after them in the esteem of men?

As it was amongst the Heathens, they placed their happiness in the exercise of virtue; and yet some of them cried, Virtus post nummos, quaerenda pecunia primùm. Let virtue come after wealth. They first labored to get a good estate, and then looked after good qualities and dispositions. So it is with many Christians, who, in their Doctrines and Professions, place their happiness and fellowship with Christ after riches; let Christ come after. Which of us doth not wonder, and cry shame of the Gadarenes, that preferred their swine before Christ, rather let him go out of their coasts, than part with their herds. Certainly, we, in effect, do the same, when we prefer our swinish lusts, before the embracing of, and yielding obedience to, our blessed Savior. We are ready to defy the Jews for crying, Not him, but Barabbas; and yet our actions cry as loud, Not Him, but the world; not Him, but the flesh. Rather imitate good Tremellius, who was himself a Jew born: and after, when he turned Christian, in reference to what his Country-men, the Jews, had once said, Not him, but Barabbas; he made this his Motto, Non Barabbam, sed Christum; Not Barabbas, but Christ; to intimate, his having renounced all, for the Lord Jesus Christ. Let it be thine: Not the world, but Christ; not the creature, but Christ; not the flesh, but Christ. He was before all, and shall be before all in my esteem. Whom have I in heaven but thee? Psal. 73. 25. That is one Duty we are to learn from hence.

Secondly, Seeing Christ is Eternal, trust him for Eternal things; expect such from him, that is an everlasting Father, Isa. 9. 6. Do you think, an everlasting Father will lay up none but temporal blessings for his children? He that was from the beginning, hath provided something that shall be after the end, for everlasting for you, if ye will seek after him. Remember what the Apostle saith, 2 Cor. 4. ult. While we look not at the things which are seen, but at the things which are not seen; for the things which are seen are temporal, but the things which are not seen are eternal. Oh! look at those eternal things, trust in an eternal Savior, who hath purchased them first, and since provided them for you. He is gone before, to provide heavenly things for you. Grace is a thing, which hath something of eternity in it. The way of holiness, the Scripture calleth it, the everlasting way, Psal. 139. ult. Lead me in the way everlasting. Seek to Christ for that. For your everlasting Savior will give you that which hath an influence into eternity; so Grace hath. It is an immortal seed, that begets its glory, and that is everlasting too. Ye have a Promise, Isa. 45. 17. Israel shall be saved in the Lord with an everlasting salvation. He that was before the world, hath happiness world without end, for all that believe in him. So much for the first Proposition, namely, In the beginning was the word.

The second is that, that concerneth the Personal Coexistency [Proposition. 2d] of the Word with the Father; and it lieth in these words, The word was with God.

By the Word, we still understand the same Person, Jesus Christ. By God, in this Proposition, ye are to understand the Father. For you must know, this term [God] is taken two manner of ways in this Verse. Sometimes the term [God] is taken essentially, and so it is applicable to all the Persons in the Trinity; as when it is said, God is a Spirit; God there is taken, so as to signify the Nature of God, and the Essence of God, which is common to all the three Persons. And so it is taken in the last clause of this Verse, The word was God.

But otherwhile it is taken Personally, and so it signifieth not the whole Essence, but someone Person in the Trinity: As when it is said, God was in Christ, reconciling the world to himself. The Father in the Son. When it is said, Joh. 3. 16. God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son. Here is God loving the world, and giving Christ. So in the second Proposition, The word was with God; that is, with God the first Person. This implieth at once, a Nearness, and a Distinction. A Nearness to God, The word was God; and yet a Distinction from him, for it was but with him. Now, that which is with another, doth imply a person distinct. We do not say, a man is with himself, but Peter is with Paul, or Paul with Peter. So here, The word was with God. Take two or three places to help you to understand this. Joh. 1. 18. No man hath seen God at any time; the only begotten Son, which is in the bosom of the Father, &c. Here is the Son in the bosom of the Father, that is, the Word with God. Here is a nearness, and yet a Personall distinction. Nearness, for it is in the bosom; and yet a Personal distinction, it is the Son in the Father's bosom. One more clear, that is fully parallel with the Text; that is, 1 Joh. 1. 2. *The life was manifested, and we have seen it, and bear witness, and show to you that eternal life which was with the Father. Eternal life is a Person here. By Eternal life ye must understand the very self-same Person, who is called the word of life, in the first verse. Eternal life is something that was seen, and born witness to, namely, the Lord Jesus Christ, of whom, saith he, verse. 1. they have seen him, and looked upon him, and have handled the word of life. So that it is no new thing for John to call Christ, the Eternal life. He saith, This is the true God, and eternal life. What doth he say of this Eternal life? Why, that we have seen it, and bear witness: That is, of that Eternal life which is with the Father. Take another, which is parallel to the Text, Prov. 8. 29, 30. where, by Wisdom is understood Christ, which saith of itself, Then I was by him as one brought up with him, and was daily his delight▪ Rejoicing always before him, rejoicing in the habitable part of his earth, and my delights were with the sons of men. Where Christ is spoken of, as a son, in the presence of the Father. He is said to be with him, as here in the Text. Take notice of two Praepositions, there used, in reference to Christ; In, and With; 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 , and 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 . It is said, Joh. 14. 10. Believest thou not? (saith Christ to Philip) He that hath seen me hath seen the Father. And then he saith, I am in the Father, and he in me. Here Christ is said to be in the Father, and, in my Text, with the Father; with this difference, [in] that noteth Unity; [with] that importeth Distinction: [in] that falls upon the Essence, [with] that falleth upon the Person. So as, in plain terms, Christ is in the Father, in regard of the Unity of the Essence, which is the same with that of the Father. Christ is with the Father, in regard of the Distinction of his Person. So as between the Son and the Father, there is alius & alius, but not aliud & aliud, as Divines say: That is, The Son is another Person from the Father, but not another thing from the Father. The Father and the Son are Unum, but not Unus; the Father and the Son are one Thing, but not one Person. Ye may truly say, The Son is with the Father, as my Text hath it; but ye cannot say, The Son is the Father, because there is distinction of Persons, and yet a personal Co-existency, The word was with God. So ye have the meaning of that Proposition.*

Let us now make Use of it.

First, Take notice, here, of the distinction of Persons in [Use 1] the Godhead, a distinction without their Divinity. Here is the Son, the word with God, and the Son with the Father, not divided from him. And yet one Person with another, and so distinct one from another. With him, not without distinction; and in him, without division. As in the night-time, if a man set up three Candles in a room, all these concur to the lighting of the room; yet there is but one light: So, but one Essence in the Divinity. Yet here are three Candles that give that Light, but no man can say, that this light is peculiar to the First Candle, and this to the Second, for all shine together; and yet the light of the second Candle is with the first, but the light is all one. But O the depth! It is no wading here, farther than a man hath footing out of Scripture, for fear of being past our standing, and be drowned. The Word of God is with God, and one Person with another; but, the manner How, as Basil said, when he met with some knots of difficulty in this Mystery, I believe, saith he, I do not busy myself in searching over far; what we cannot make out in plain reason, we must make out in believing, where we have the Scripture for our bottom; only take notice of such a thing. Certainly, there is a distinction of Persons in the Trinity. Here, is One with Another. The word was with God.

Secondly, Learn from hence to worship God, according [Use 2] to a distinction of Persons. Learn we to worship, and look at Christ, as a Person distinct from the Father, and the holy Ghost; or else we worship not Christ, but our own fancies. If we conceive him not as he is, as he is distinct. This is the great difference, between the Christian and the Turkish Religion, I might say, the Jewish too; for, the Turks and Jews agree, in that they hold one God, but deny a distinction of Persons in the Godhead. We Christians, according to Scripture, acknowledge that too; There are three that bear record in heaven, the Father, the Word, and the Spirit and these three are one. And some kind of necessity appeareth, in a way of reason, which we may take notice of, for the strengthening of our faith in this great Mystery, that there should be a distinction of Persons. God the Father was the Person offended. Reconciliation was to be made. None but God hath enough in him to satisfy God. Therefore it was requisite there should be a Person, to satisfy the Person offended. That, the second Person, the Lord Jesus undertakes, and goeth through with it. But how shall this be made known? Poor man is as far off as ever he was, if he be left here; he hath no power in his own nature to reach this. Therefore there is a Third Person, the holy Ghost, who discovereth this, and applieth it. So that the Salvation of Man, is by the concurrence of the whole Trinity.

But I must here again take off myself, with, O the depth! as Bernard did, Hoc magnum est Mysterium, This is a great Mystery, a Mystery rather to be adored, than searched into. Well, saith he: Quomodo esset Pluralitas in Unitate, & unitas in Pluralitate; How there should be a Plurality in Unity, and how a Unity in Plurality; three Persons, and yet but one Essence; Scrutari temeritas est, It is rashness to search too far into it. Credere pietas, it is piety to believe it. Cognoscere vita aeterna, It is life eternal to know it. We can never have a full comprehension of it, till we come to enjoy it.

Thirdly, This may serve to Answer that Question, which some make, What was God a doing before he made the [Use 3] world? [Object.]

It might suffice to Answer them, as Augustine did in [Answ.] the same case, with a short Answer, He was a making Hell for such as put these Questions. But there is a fairer Answer in the Text, which telleth you, That the Word that was in the beginning, before the Creatures were made, that Word was with God. God was delighting himself in his Word. God and his Word were a contriving the Redemption of Mankind, and had thoughts of peace towards the Elect from all Eternity. That place, Prov. 8. speaketh something to it, When he appointed the foundations of the world, verse. 30, 31. then I was by him, as one brought up with him; or, as a Nourisher, in Intention or decreeing of the Creatures, that were to be made; or out of the Church, that was to be gathered out of the world. I was daily his delight, rejoicingalwaies before him. This God was a doing before the world was made, he was delighting in his Son; this Text saith so, clearly. So saith Peter, 1 Pet. 2. 19, 20. The precious blood of Christ, as of a Lamb without blemish, and without spot; who verily was fore-ordained before the foundation of the world, but was manifested in these last times for you. Before the foundations of the world, what was God a doing? Plotting

(as I may speak with reverence) the work of man's Redemption; projecting my Redemption and thine. Before we were, he had thoughts of peace and mercy towards us. Therefore we may trust him as long as we live. When we think little of him, he thinks much of us.

The fourth Use we may make of this, is this; It should [Use 4] teach us, and I pray God we may all learn, infinitely to prize the love of Christ; I say, to prize and adore the love of Christ; Who, though he were from all Eternity, the Word with God, yet was pleased, in the fullness of time, to become Emmanuel, God with us. What an act of respect and love was it in Moses, to his Country-men the Jews, poor Hebrews, in sore bondage; and he in Pharaoh's Court, brought up in all the learning of the Egyptians, adopted by the King's daughter, full of honor (some say, Lord Treasurer of Egypt; and they build their conjecture upon that, because it is said, He forsook the treasures of Egypt): It was a great thing for him to leave the Court, and sort himself with poor Laborers at Brick-kilns; yet, that he did. Here is an act of great condescension in Moses, of much respect to his Country, and love to the poor Hebrews. But what is this of Moses to that of Christ, who was with God in the Court of Heaven, taken up with the mutual delights, which the blessed Trinity had in each other? To leave this, all this, for a time, and to come to be Man with us! To leave his Mansion, which was Heaven, and to pitch his Tent upon Earth, as the word signifieth, Joh. 1. 17. He dwelt amongst us, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 ; that is, as in a Tent or Tabernacle. Do but consider the difference of these two states; that which Christ left, and that which Christ took: The former was a state of incomprehensible glory, In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God. What was the state of the Word? See, Joh. 17. 5. Now, O Father, glorify thou me with thine own self, with the glory which I had with thee before the world was. I had with thee glory before the world was. Here is the Word with God, in the state of glory. From this state of glory he is pleased to descend: To what? To take shame. It is emphatically said, for that is one half of Christ's sufferings, Shame is. Heb. 12. 2. Looking to Jesus, the Author and Finisher of our faith; who, for the joy that was set before him, endured the cross, and despised [the shame]. He came to be buffeted, and spit upon, and reviled, and called a friend of publicans and sinners, a wine-bibber; yea, the prince of devils. They called Christ Beelzebub. Before he came into the world, he was in a state of Joy, as well as of Glory. The Text saith, He was with God; and wheresoever God is, there is joy; as the Psalmist saith, In thy presence is fullness of joy, and at thy right hand are pleasures for evermore. What is that Christ took instead of joy? He came to sorrow; sorrow, and deadly sorrow, surrounded his soul on every side. From that eternal joy, he is pleased to descend to those intolerable sorrows, to be a man of sorrows, acquainted with grief. Blessed Savior! may we well say, What a change hast thou made, for thy love to us? of being with God, to be with Man; from the Father's Bosom, to the Virgin's Womb; from Heaven, to Earth; from Glory, (as ye have heard) to Shame; and from Joy, to Grief: And all this, for our sakes. Ye know the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, (saith the Apostle) who though he were rich, yet for your sakes he became poor, that ye, through his poverty, might become rich. How should this fire and inflame our hearts with love to Christ! He, who was the delight of his Father from all Eternity, had his delight with the sons of men; How should the sons of men have their delight in him? Hath Christ left Heaven for me, and shall not I leave the world for Christ? Hath he thus emptied himself for me, of his Joy and Glory, for a time; and shall not I deny myself for him, in my pleasures, and profits, and ease?

What a poor sorry joy is that, which the world affordeth us, to that which Christ hath first given us? Let us love him, who loved us so, as that he was pleased to become Emmanuel, God with us. So, The Word was with God.

This is that which concerneth the Personal Co-existency of Christ, with God the Father.

In the Beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God.

There is hardly any place of Scripture more abused, in a way of superstition, than the beginning of this Gospel. It was a common thing in times of Popery (and I would to God it were abolished wholly at this day) to write these words in certain Characters, and to tie the paper or parchment about people's necks, as a Charm against Agues; or as a Spell, to prevent some other mischief. We shall, I hope, make better use of them, by how much this Scripture hath been wronged by others. These words are a Charm indeed, but it is against Heretical Opinions, and carnal discouragements. The Deniers of Christ's Divinity, never had such a Charm as this is, Joh. 11. We have made some of them to that end, and hope to make more, as we do proceed.

The Fifth Use from hence, is, that this very Proposition, [Use 5] that the Word was with God, holdeth forth Comfort to us: For he that was with God in the beginning, is with him still, and will be with him for everlasting; with God then, and with God now, and with God to all eternity: And that under the notion of our Advocate, 1 Joh. 2. 1, 2. If any mansin, we have an Advocate with the Father (So the phrase is here, With the Father) Jesus Christ the righteous; and he is the propitiation for our sins. He is there as an Advocate to plead a cause: And what cause? His own as well as ours. We know, when a Counselor is employed in a Cause, that concerneth himself as well as his Client, he is wont to be exceeding active in that business, more than in other; he will neglect no opportunity in such a Cause. So, Christ is such an Advocate, as to be a Propitiation for our sins. And Christ should lose the price of his own Blood, if our Cause should miscarry before God the Father, with him, where he appeareth for us; Heb. 9. 24. Christ is not entered into the holy places made with hands, which are the figures of the true; but into Heaven itself, to appear in the presence of God for us. Observe that, [With God] and, [For us]. He appeareth there as an Advocate appeareth for his Client; when such a Cause is called upon, he pleadeth that Cause as an Advocate. So, Christ appeareth for us as our Proctor; He is God with us, and for us; and therefore able to save to the uttermost all that come to God by him; because he liveth to make intercession for them, Heb. 7. 25. Never fear, that anything shall be wanting to thy salvation, Christ will be sure to perfect it. He will save to the uttermost, because he liveth forever. Well may Satan's accusations trouble us on Earth, they shall never trouble us in Heaven, for Christ appeareth there for us. He is ever with the Father.

I pass now to the third Clause of this first Verse, which concerneth the Divine Essence of Christ.

The Word was God.

So with God a distinct Person from the Father, as to be God, of the same Essence with the Father. The word, [God] is taken essentially for the Father, the First-Person in the Trinity. This is a point of high concernment, that Christ is God; so high, as whosoever buildeth not upon this, buildeth upon the sands. This is the Rock of our salvation, The Word was God. But there will be frequent occasion in this Gospel of meeting with it, and therefore I shall speak now but briefly of it. Take a few clear places, such as our enemies know not how to evade; that in Rom. 9. 5. Of whom, as concerning the flesh, Christ came, who is over all, God blessed for evermore. Christ is here himself called, God blessed forever. So, Tit. 2. 13. Looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearance of the great God, and our Savior Jesus Christ. Who is it that shall appear at the last Day in the Clouds, but Christ, who is called the great God, and our Savior? God blessed forever, saith Paul to the Romans; The great God, saith Paul to Titus. And lest any Heretic should hope to shift it off (as they are as full of shifts, as the Serpent is of turnings and windings) and should say, Why, Angels are called gods, and Magistrates are called gods. To stop their mouths, St. John telleth you, He is the true God; I, and God properly so called, The true God.

You know what they use to object against this, as if the [Object.] Father were only called the true God. And the place seemeth to have some color in it, Joh. 17. 13. This is life eternal, that they know thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent. Jesus Christ seemeth to be made a different Person from the true God.

I answer, There is no necessity of limiting this phrase, [Answ.] [The only true God] to the Person of the Father, the First Person in the Trinity. It is true indeed, that the word Thee in the third Verse, referreth to the word Father, in the first Verse, These words spake Jesus, and lifted up his eyes to heaven, and said, Father, glorify thy Son, &c. And, this is eternal life, that we know thee the only true God. Ye must know, the word Father is taken two manner of ways in Scripture: First, Sometimes it is taken for the First-Person in the Trinity. And Father is taken for the Divine Essence, or rather for an Attribute that is common to all the Persons in the Trinity: Everyone is Father, in this sense. So, Christ is Father as well as the First Person. He is called, The everlasting Father; and, The Prince of peace, Isa. 9. 6. Father, in that sense, is no more than, God in his Essence. Mal. 2. 10. Have we not all one Father? hath not one God created us? There is a concurrence of all the Persons in this great work of Creation, and so in this Relation of Father. That, Jam. 1. 27. True religion, and undefiled before God and the Father. Father here belongeth to all the Persons. 1 Pet. 1. 17. We know that all judgment is committed to Christ. So that Father is taken here essentially, and belongeth to all the Trinity. If ye understand it so here, then the Objection is of no force.

But Christ is conceived here as Mediator, and as Man praying to the whole Trinity, under the name of Father, and [1] saying, This is eternal life, to know thee only true God, and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent. So that, 1 Tim. 2. 5. is parallel, There is one God, and one Mediator between God and man, the man Christ Jesus. Nothing is so familiar in Scripture, as to distinguish Christ as Mediator from God, taking the word essentially, for all the Persons in the Trinity.

Secondly, Suppose the word [Father] Joh. 17. be taken Personally, for the First Person in the Trinity; yet the [2] word [Only] is not here to be limited to the First Person. I pray you observe that, This is eternal life, that they know thee the only true God. It is not, Thee only, the true God, as if the Father only were the true God. Indeed, the 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 is not to be tied to the saying, [Thee only] but, [Thee, God] is to be tied to the word [Only] To know thee the only true God. So as 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 , the word, [Only] is not exclusive from the other two Persons, the Son, and the holy Ghost; but only exclusive from the Creatures, who are improperly called gods, as sometimes Angels, and sometimes Magistrates, are called so; and Idols so called, falsely. The only true God, excluding Idols, but not the Son and the holy Ghost. You may as well argue from that place, 1 Cor. 8. 5, 6. that God the Father is not Lord, as argue from this, that Christ is not the true God; for it is said there, Though there be that are called gods both in heaven and in earth, as there be gods many, and lords many. But to us there is but one God, the Father, of whom are all things, and we in him; and one Lord, Jesus Christ, by whom are all things, and we by him. But one Lord Jesus Christ. May men from hence argue, and say, The Father is not the Lord Jesus Christ? But many argue and say, That Christ is not God, because he saith, There is but one God the Father, of whom are all things. I will not hold you long upon this, because I hope there are not many here, that need solution in this point, though the error be spreading. Consider that place, Matth. 11. 27. All things are delivered to me of my Father, saith Christ. And, None knoweth the Son but the Father; neither knoweth any the Father save the Son, and he to whom the Son will reveal him. None knoweth the Son but the Father. Why, doth not the Son know himself? doth not the holy Ghost know the Son? Yes. It is said, The Spirit searcheth the deep things of God. Neither knoweth any the Father save the Son. Doth not the Father know himself? and the holy Ghost, both the Persons? Yes. But this none excludeth Creatures, from the other Persons. So the true God is distinguished from Creatures and Idols, not from the other Persons in the Trinity.

I will make Use of this, to meet with such Heretics as [Use 1] deny this: Would to God I could say, there were none in this City; but mine ears have heard a man, stiffly to deny the Divinity of Christ, and dispute against it, and blaspheme that great truth, without which, I think, a man may safely say, there is no possibility of salvation. I wonder, that of all the old Errors, swept down into this latter Age, as into a sink of time, this of the Socinians and Arians should be held forth amongst the rest. Let us beware of their doctrines, shun their meetings and persons, that come to us with the denial of the Divinity of Christ in their mouths. This was John's doctrine, and his practice. Irenaeus tells us, that after he was returned from his Banishment, and came to Ephesus, he came to bathe himself; and in the Bath he found Cerinthus, that said, Christ had no being, till he received it from the Virgin Mary: Upon the sight of whom, John skipped out of the Bath, and called his companions from thence, saying, Let us go from this place, lest the Bath should fall down upon us, because Cerinthus is in it, that is so great an enemy to God. Ye see his Doctrine, see his words too, 2 Joh. 10, 11. If any come to you, having not this doctrine, receive him not into your house, neither bid him God-speed: for he that biddeth him God-speed, is partaker of his evil deed. What the Doctrine was, ye may see to be the Doctrine of the Divinity of Christ. This is one word to Ministers, to confute the gainsayers; but it is not the main: I will not therefore stand upon it in this Auditory. As it is with the Angels that are ministering Spirits, for the good of the Church; so it should be with the Ministers, that are called, the good Angels of the Church. The Angels are fometimes put upon conflicts with the Devil, they have many combats with the wicked Spirits, as may be gathered out of Daniel. But, this is but in order to their ministering for the good of the Elect. They conflict with evil Spirits, that they may be serviceable for the good of the Church. So should Ministers conflict with evil Angels, but in reference to the good of the Church. Speak comfortably to Jerusalem, saith the Lord to the Angel. Therefore I shall pass to another Use of Consolation.

The Word was God.

Beloved, If this be not true (say Heretics what they [Use. 2] can) if this be not true, That Christ was God, our Preaching is in vain, and your Faith in vain; ye are yet in your sins. Who can forgive sins but God? Ye expect forgiveness of sins by Christ. What soul can get to Heaven, if Christ be not God? He hath promised eternal life to all that love him, and believe in him; How shall a man have this Promise made good, if He be not God? If a man that hath never a foot of land in England, shall make his Will, and bequeath to thee such and such Houses, and Land, in such a Town and County, whereas he was never the owner of any such Houses or Land: Certainly, this Deed is null, thou art never a whit the nearer enriching thyself with such a Legacy. If Heaven be not in Christ's dispose, how can we have it as his gift? If Christ be not God, we cannot have Heaven. If Christ be not God, we are all still in our sins. For, the Justice of God expects satisfaction to be made, for the sins of men; we cannot make satisfaction, but our Surety must. Christ is our Surety. If Christ be not God, our Satisfaction is null; for, an infinite Justice offended, must have an infinite Price paid. A man may satisfy the Justice of man, but what man can satisfy the Justice of God? Will God accept the first-born of thy body for the sin of thy soul? No, he will not. Yet he will accept His First-born for the sins of the world, for in him he is well pleased. There lieth a great deal of strength upon that place, it is a special foundation of faith; Act. 20. 28. Over which the holy Ghost hath made you over seers, to feed the Church of God, which he hath purchased with his own blood. The Church of God, which he hath purchased with his own blood. This must needs relate to Christ. And Christ is here called God, and Christ's Blood is called the Blood of God. Christ could never have gone through with the purchase of the Church, if the Blood he shed had not been the Blood of God. Whatsoever the Justice of God can exact, that the Blood of God can discharge. The blood of man would not have done it; the blood of men or Angels would not have done it. Man sinned, and Man must satisfy. Therefore the Human Nature must be assumed by a Surety, for a man cannot do it. If an Angel should have assumed Human Nature, it would have polluted him; Human Nature was so defiled by sin, that it could not be assumed by any but God. Now Christ being God, the Divine Nature purified the Human Nature, which he took, and so it was a sufficient Sacrifice. The person offered in sacrifice was God, as well as Man. This is a ground whereupon a Believer may challenge Satan to say his worst, and do his worst! Let him present God, as terrible; Let him present me, as abominable in the sight of God, by reason of my sins; Let him aggravate the height of God's displeasure, and the height, and depth, and length, and breadth, of my sins; I grant all. And, against all this, I oppose this infinite Satisfaction of Christ. Though the Justice of God cannot be bribed, yet it may be satisfied. Here is a proportionable Satisfaction; here is God answering God.

The Word was God.

This Word was He that laid down his life, and shed his blood for us. And now let Satan urge the Justice of God as much as he can. The Justice of God maketh me sure of Salvation, Why?

Because his Justice obligeth him to accept of an adequate Satisfaction, of his own appointing. The Justice of God maketh me sure of mine own happiness: because, if God be just, that Satisfaction should be had; when that Satisfaction is made, Justice requireth, that the person for whom it is made, shall be received into favor. I confess, that unless God had obliged himself by Promise, there were no pressing his Justice, thus far, because Noxa sequitur caput. There was mercy in the Promise of sending Christ out of mercy, to undertake for us; otherwise we cannot say, that God was bound, in Justice, to accept of Satisfaction, unless he had first, in mercy, been pleased, to appoint the way of a Surety. Justice indeed requireth Satisfaction, but it requireth it of the person that sinneth. Here cometh in Mercy, that a Surety shall be accepted; and what he doth, is, as if the person that offended should have done it himself. Here is Mercy and Salvation surely bottomed upon both. So much sweet comfort floweth from this consideration, That Christ is God. I come now to the second Verse.

Vers. 2. The same was in the beginning with God.

What the Evangelist had affirmed in the former Verse, The Word was with God; he now confirmeth in this second Verse, The same was in the beginning with God. There is a Repetition, but with some Illustration. It may be thought, that some, or all of these three things, may be aimed at.

First, it may be thought to aim, at showing us that these words, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 , In the beginning, are to be referred to all the three Clauses and Propositions, in the first Verse, whereas they are there annexed but to one of them; In the beginning was the Word, saith he, verse. 1. Now the second Verse, knitteth the same words to the second Proposition, The same, in the beginning, was with God, and the same was God. So that ye must put both into that Proposition, which concerneth the eternal Existency of Christ, and to that which concerneth the Personal Coexistency, The Word was with God; and the divine Essentialnesse with God, The same was God.

Though he were with God in the beginning, may some say, yet it is questioned, whether he were God then. This addition will prevent such mistakes, to show you, the words, In the beginning, is to be put to every Proposition. That may be one aim.

Secondly, There may be another: In the former Proposition. [2]The Evangelist had told you of Christ's Co-existency with the Father, when he said, The Word was with God; and he addeth, The same was in the beginning with God. Here he telleth you of his Co-working with God, as well as of his Coexistency with God. In the beginning, As he was then a Person distinct from the Father, and coexistent with him; So, so soon as the Father began to work, He began to work. All things were made by him. He was so with him, as to work together with him, in the work of Creation in all things.

Or perhaps, neither of these are intended. But the Repetition [3] aimeth at a third thing, which is, To show the great necessity of the aforesaid Truth. This ye may take with you, as a rule to help you in the interpretation of Scripture: Repetitions have divers uses in Scripture; we find them frequent both in Prayer and Prophecy, in Threatenings and Precepts, and in the laying down of Truths. Repetitions have their several uses in all these.

1. In Prayer. Repetition serveth to note frequency in the same things, said over again with new affections; as, O Lord hear, O Lord forgive, O Lord hearken, and do. Take the instance of Christ; we read of his fervency and earnestness in prayer, especially in his Agony, Luk. 22. 44. Being in an agony, he prayed more earnestly. How doth he express this earnestness? Matth. 26. 44. He went away the third time, praying the same words, Father, if it be thy will, let this cup pass from me. So the second, and the third time, it is said. This Repetition serveth to note Christ's earnestness in Prayer.

Secondly, in Prophecies. Repetition serveth to note the certainty of them, together with their celerity and speed. That reason is given by God himself, Gen. 41. 32. For that the dream was doubled to Pharaoh twice, it is because the thing is established by God, and he will surely bring it to pass. The doubling doth note the certainty of the thing.

Thirdly, in Threatenings. Repetition noteth unavoidableness, and, perhaps, suddainness. Ye have, Ezek. 21. 27. I will overturn, overturn, and it shall be no more. Twice, I will overturn, to show, that their overthrow should be unavoidable.

Fourthly, in Precepts. Repetition serveth to note a necessity of performing them. So, Psal. 47. 6. Sing praises to God, sing praises to our King; sing praises, sing praises. Four times, to show the necessity of that duty.

And lastly, to our present purpose, in Truths. Repetition serveth to show the necessity of believing them, and of knowing them. So, in that great Truth of Regeneration, ye see, Christ repeateth it thrice with one breath, in his Sermon to Nicodemus, Joh. 3. 3. Except ye be born again, ye cannot see the Kingdom of God. Vers. 5. Except a man be born of Water, and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God. And, Marvel not I said unto thee, Ye must be born again, verse. 17. So here, the Evangelist repeateth this great Truth, to show the absolute necessity of our knowing it, and believing it. In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God. And the same that was in the beginning, was God.

That which we are to note from hence, is this: First, in general, The usefulness and lawfulness of repeating the same things: To me, (saith Paul) it is not burdensome; for you, it is safe, Phil. 3. 1. We are all by nature, as Christ said of his Disciples, fools, and slow of heart to believe this great Mystery of God, Luk. 24. 25. Then said he unto them, Oh fools, and slow of heart to believe all that was spoken. Slow of heart, they had therefore need to be switcht and spur'd again and again; had need to have the goad thrust in, a first, second, and third time. That is the expression, Eccles. 2. The words of the wise are as goads, and as nails fastened by the masters of the assemblies. So necessary are Repetitions of Truths. It is in this case, as with Peter, in his vision of the Sheet, when all sorts of Beasts came down, clean and unclean. Upon the first letting them down, when it was said, Arise, Peter, kill, and eat. Not so, Lord, saith Peter; he could not think it lawful, when it was prescribed at the first; but the Sheet was let down a second time, and a third time; then he was convinced, which at first he was not. So, a man may hear a truth at first, and may say, Not so, Lord; he cannot relish this for a truth: but, it may be, at the second, or third time, he may relish it. It is not with Truth as with Flowers, which we use to smell at for an hour or two, and so throw them away. But for necessary Truths, they will not die in your hands: they are not like Flowers; they are like Gems, precious Stones, that keep a luster from year to year, they are always shining and bright. Ye may wear them while ye live, and not be weary of them. This in general.

But then in Special: From this Repetition which the Evangelist maketh, observe, That the Eternity, the Personality, the Divinity of Christ, are of necessity to be believed. Because we cannot rightly worship God, without the belief of these Truths; namely, That the Word was in the beginning, and that the Word was then God, and was with God from everlasting to everlasting. For we must worship the Son, even as we worship the Father; so saith Christ himself, Joh. 5. 23. And that, unless we acknowledge the Eternity of Christ, and the Divinity of Christ, the Second Person; as well as of God the Father, the First Person; we honor neither Father nor Son. And this is it that excludeth both Turks and Jews: who, though they both acknowledge one God, yet they deny the Distinction of Persons, deny the Son of God, and so the Divinity of the Lord Jesus Christ, as also of the holy Ghost. We see now, what miserable case such men are in, as deny Christ thus. It is remarkable, that in Ephes. 2. 12. if you compare the beginning with the end, At that time ye were without Christ, being Aliens from the Common-wealth of Israel, having no hope, and without God in the world. Without Christ, and without God. He is an Atheist that knoweth not Christ; whatsoever he may hold of God. There can be no true knowledge of God, where there is not a true knowledge of Christ. Ye were without Christ, and without God in the world. Wherefore, my Brethren, pray, that ye may understand these things; for, indeed, they are things that depend upon Revelation, therefore they call for prayer. Saith Bernard, of the Mystery of the Trinity, The best way of seeking it, and the easiest way of finding it, is, not to enter upon Disputings, but Prayer. To Prayer, add the use of the best Means, reading the Word of God, in which these Mysteries are revealed, that concern the Eternity, and Personality, and Divinity of Jesus Christ, Scripture will help you more then Reason here.

There are two sorts of things. Some things there are which we do first understand, and then believe; Others which we first believe, and then come to understand. If ye go to natural things, first ye understand them, apprehend the inside and outside of them, and then believe them, because ye understand them. But now, in these great supernatural Mysteries, that ye may understand them, you must first believe them. For this there are two rules.

If ye will first set Reason on work, believe no more then [1] ye can find out in these Mysteries; That will hinder Faith; But if, after ye have believed them, ye will set reason a work, that may help faith. The Arians of old that denied the Divinity of Christ, they got a great deal of advantage, especially over Women, by putting questions for grounds of reason to them: They were wont to come to Women, and ask them. Hast thou born a Child, say they? Yes. And art thou not older then the Child thou hast born? why, yes, say they. And yet, say they, our Adversaries, They tell us, that God hath a Son, and that the Son is Co-eternal with the Father. Athanasius goeth to work to confute them, thus; I ask you a question. Canst thou build a house without Timber, and Stone, and other Materials? no: yet God made the World without any of these things. If God's building be not as an Artificer's, God made the World without Materialls. He hath his Son from Eternity, but not as a natural parent, for who can declare his generation? If ye will ask a question, Ask the Sun, if ever it were without its beams. Ask the Sun, if it did not shine as soon as it was Created. And ask the Fountain, if ever it was without its streams. As the Sun was never without its beams, nor the Fountain without its streams, so God was never without his Son: In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God, both Co-existent, and Eternal.

Vers. 3. All things were made by Him, and without Him was not anything made, that was made.

Who is here meant by Him? the fore-going verses tell you? namely, the Word. And, who is meant by the Word, ye have heard at large, namely Christ. Whose Divinity the Evangelist had affirmed, verse. 1. The Word was God, confirmed in the second verse, The same was in the beginning with God. And here he proveth it by a new argument, from the Creation of the World.

All things were made by Him, and without Him was nothing made, that was made.

Now the Apostle telleth you, Hebr. 3. 4. He that built all things is God, Christ built all things, saith my Text, Therefore Christ is God. The argument lieth fair and undeniable. But whereas, the Apostle Paul speaks of a new Creation; we are hinted to think of a double Creation, There is the old Creation, and the new Creation. Now some Heretics make a question, which of the two is here meant, There is the old Creation spoken of by Moses in Genesis, In the beginning God Created Heaven, and Earth. And there is the new Creation spoken of by Paul, 2 Cor. 5. 17. If any man be in Christ, he is a new Creature: old things are past away, behold all things are become New.

The question is, which of these the Text is meant of, All things were made by Him. Socinus, who denieth the Divinity of Christ together with his Satisfaction, maketh it to lay hold upon the latter of these, and saith, that in the Text ye must understand the new Creation, As, In the beginning was the Word. He understandeth the beginning of the Gospel, not of the World, All things were made by Him, that is, all things were made new when Christ was born of the Virgin Mary. These are the all things meant in the Text, saith Socinus.

As this is not true, so it will not serve his turn. It is not true, nor consonant to the Text, which doth not say, that all things were made new by Him, but that all things were made by Him; and undeniably spoken of the Creation of the World.

Neither will it serve his turn. He hopeth by this evasion to avoid the dint of this argument, taken from the Creation of the World, to prove the Divinity of Christ, but it faileth him; for take that which he granteth. By all things, here, we must mean the new things, the new Creature; If this be the thing, we will prove Christ to be God in spite of Socinus. For who can turn a heart of stone, into an heart of flesh? who can work faith, and love? faith in an unbelieving heart, love in an hating heart, and meekness in a passionate heart? who, but God! Do not these things declare an Almighty power? This by his own Confession, proves him to be God.

But we are to understand it, of the old Creation of the World, which Moses telleth us of. All things were made by Him, that is the proposition. An illustration of it in the following words, without Him was nothing made, that was made. In the proposition, observe two things.

- First the Effect. All things were made,
- Secondly The Efficient. By Him.

This is an excellent help, and of great Concernment, The making of all things, is the first lesson that God Almighty teacheth us in the Bible; In the beginning, the Lord made Heaven, and Earth. Therefore, worthy the dwelling a while upon, and making inquiry into these five things, for the clearing of these words.

- First, What are the things here meant?
- Secondly, In what Order?
- Thirdly, In what space of time?
- Fourthly, In what manner?
- Fifthly, To what end were they all made?

When these are done, we shall come clearly to show that the Lord Jesus Christ had an influence, as the Efficient cause of all these. All things were made by Him.

First, What things are here meant? All things. These are words of a vast Comprehension, but you shall find them all reduced to four heads, by God himself. In the fourth Commandment, Exod. 20. 11. In six days, the Lord made Heaven, and Earth, the Sea, and all things that are therein. These are the heads of the All things.

First, the Heaven: Heaven is a fair building, a glorious Fabric of three Stories, the first, second, and third Heaven. So Paul teacheth us to distinguish, when he speaks of his being wrapped up into the third Heaven. Therefore there is a second, and first, as well as a third. And these three Heavens were sweetly resembled, by those three Courts in Solomon's Temple. There was the first Court, the outward Court, and the Court of the Gentiles, which was common for all sorts of people to come into; So is the first Heaven here below, Men breathe in the air, birds and beasts they live and breathe in the air, which is the first Heaven. The second Court was something more hidden: In that the golden Candlesticks were, which were the Lights, that lighted the Temple. So are the Sun, Moon, and Stars in the second Heaven. The third Court, was the Holy of Holies, into which entered none, but the high Priest. And the third Heaven, is the Heaven of Heavens, into which Jesus Christ the high Priest is entered, to prepare a place for all his Members. All these Heavens were of Christ's making, Hebr. 110. Thou Lord, in the beginning, hast laid the foundations of the World, and the Heavens are the work of thy Hands.

The second head, is the Earth, the Circle of the World, the pavement of this glorious Fabric, the footstool of the most high God. Of his making it, you have an excellent expression in Job, Job 38. 4, 5, 6. Where wast thou, when I laid the foundations of the Earth? saith God, there; declare, if thou hast understanding, who hath laid the measure thereof, if thou knowest? or who hath stretched out the line thereof? wherein are the foundations thereof fastened, or who laid the Corner-stone thereof? God hath so made it, as to make it admirable to our understandings; that such a vast body, as the Earth is, of a round figure, and so fit for motion, should be still immovable! a body so heavy, should yet be able to hang, as it doth, in the midst of the air! Why, God hath fastened it by a Word of his own power, Job 26. 7. He stretcheth out the North over the empty place, and hangeth the Earth upon nothing. Which of us can hang a ball in the air, without some support? God, He hangeth the Earth; how? upon nothing, but upon the air without side of it.

Then Thirdly the Sea, Psal. 95. 5. The sea is his, and He made it, so, as to make all men rejoice in the thoughts of it, Psal. 97. 1. The Lord reigneth, let the Earth rejoice, let the multitude of the Isles be glad thereof. It is with an Emphasis: All sorts of men, that dwell in Islands, have much cause to rejoice, because God reigneth. For if He did not Reign, and Rule, and bound the Seas, with which they are compassed, they would quickly be destroyed. If God did not reign, the natural place of the Sea is above the Earth, and how should we in this Island be overflowed in a moment, if He bounded not the seas? Ye shall see an elegant comparison in Job 38. 8, 9, 10. Who shutteth up the Sea with doors, when it breaketh forth, as if it had issued out of the Womb, when I made the Clouds the garments thereof, and thick darkness a swaddling band for it, and brake up for it my decree'd place, and set bars, and doors. Here he compareth the sea to a Child, breaking out of the Womb of his Decree; to a Child swaddled, as it were with a Cloud. That is the expression, Thick darkness hath swaddling bands for it. And it is rockit, as it were, in a Cradle of Providence.

The fourth head, is, These All things, (as that place in Exodus telleth you) are the things that are within this Heaven, and Earth, and Sea. And all things therein. Which Paul reduceth to two heads.

- Things Visible, and
- Things Invisible, Col. 1. 16.

By Him were all things Created that are in Heaven, and Earth, visible, and invisible. Zanchius addeth a third branch to this distinction, and maketh it more plain, by saying, That all things that were made, are either visible, or invisible, or mixed. Visible things, as the Stars, and Fouls, and Clouds of Heaven, the fish in the sea, and beasts upon the earth. Invisible things, as the Angels, they also were made. They were not the Makers of the World, as some Heretics have thought. Then there is a third sort of Creatures, which are of a mixed nature, partly visible in regard of their bodies, and partly invisible in regard of their souls, and those are Men. And so you have, The all things. Not to stand upon that, I will pass to another head.

Secondly, let us Consider. In what order these things were made, That so we may learn the more to magnify the Creator. This ye shall have under sundry Considerations. No way more profitable.

First, all things were made so, in such an order, as that Heaven, a place of blessedness, was made before the Earth, the Stage of vanity. In the beginning, God created Heaven, and Earth; To teach us, that we should begin our search, and desires, and love, where God began his Work first, at Heaven; and then at Earth. It is a Praeposterous course, that is taken, to begin with earth: God did not so, He first made the Heavens; First, seek the Kingdom of God, Math. 6. 33. And yet, through the Corruption of men's souls, Curvae in terras animae, Coelestium inanes, The most are bowed down to the Earth, and few look up towards Heaven. There are in the Militant Church some dead, and some living Children; some true, and some false Professors. Suppose a Woman should have a dead, and a living Child together in her Womb. The dead Child would make no way for his birth, the living would; so it is here, such as are dead Professors in the Womb of the Church, they do not make forward towards Heaven. But every living soul that is born for Heaven, and ordained for Heaven, will to Heaven. Every soul that is baptized with the Holy Ghost, and with Fire, hath a fire in it, that will carry it up Heavenward.

Secondly, as in order to the Creation, Things of less perfection, were made before things that are more perfect, as if ye come to the visible World especially; not, that otherwise the invisible Heavens are more perfect then anything we see. But I say the visible World. God in the work of Creation went from things less perfect, to those that had more perfection in them. First he made the Elements, then the mixed bodies compounded of them; and, amongst them, such as had life, before those that had sense; and such as had sense, before those that had reason. A thing profitable to observe, that so ye may look at God's method, both in Nature, and Grace. His method is to begin with the lowest and so go upward; to begin with less perfection, and so go on to more. Do we aim at the top of Grace? We must climb up by certain steps; The New Creature goeth on as the Old Creature dieth, from the less perfect, to the more perfect. Never expect Love, and Fear, and Joy, and all at the first: God's work will be going on still, from less, to more perfection.

Thirdly, as to the point of order in the making of all things, God he made the Essentiall part of the World before he made their Ornaments. As ye know, he made the the Heaven, and Earth, and Sea, before he made their furniture; before He furnished the Heaven with Stars, and the Earth with Plants and Beasts, and the Sea with Fishes. To teach us to look, in the point of Grace too, for the like proceeding. There are Essentiall Graces, and Graces that tend to Ornament. Essentiall Graces that go to the Constitution of a Christian: Such are Faith, and Love. And accessory graces that tend to his Ornament, and well-being: Such are joy, and assurance. Observe now God's method, He first begins with the most essential happiness: but he that by faith layeth hold on Christ, and by love cleaveth to Christ, it may be God will make him stay some time for his Ornaments, before he furnisheth him with full Assurance; even as a Heaven, before stars to furnish it.

Again, It may be observed in order of God's Creation. That he made some things, which now depend upon others, before the things upon which they depend. For instance, the light ye know dependeth upon the Sun, the Sun being removed, we shall have no light; but yet God made the light before any Sun. The light was the work of the second day, and the Sun not made till afterwards. The growing of Plants, and Fruits now depend much upon the husbandry of men, and upon showers and rain; yet God made them before any rain, or any man to till the ground, Gen. 2. 5. Every plant of the field before it was in the earth, and before it grew, for the Lord had not caused it to rain upon the earth, and there was not a man to till the ground. To teach us thus much, That all the Creatures though they be subordinate one to another, do yet depend more upon God, the first Cause, then upon any second Cause. And to let us understand, That we have reason to depend upon God, though we see no means. He that can maintain a light without a Sun, and cause things to grow without rain, he can maintain grace in thy heart, though thou hast no means, or but small means of thriving in that way. I do but hint these things by the way, as profitable Observations from the Creation of the World.

Lastly in point of order, God made Man last of all. He, ye know, was the workmanship of the sixth day, and that to the end we might see both his wisdom and his goodness; a great deal of wisdom in this, That after God had raised such a glorious Fabric as the world is, he should do as sometimes men are wont to do. A man that buildeth, (suppose) a Library, or Exchange, or some such Monumentall place; It is usual for such persons to send their Pictures thither, and to have them hanged up therein, that all may know at whose charge that was done. So God made the World, and furnisheth it, and then sendeth his own Picture, and maketh man after his own Image, and putteth him into the World. And at such a time as the Wisdom of God had provided it, and furnished it. That man should be so made as to let him see, that he was made to serve God, as other things to serve him: Therefore he is not created, till the latter end of the sixth day, immediately before the Sabbath; that so the first work which he takes in hand, might be the worship of God that made him. Here is wisdom, and goodness, in this, abundant goodness! God would not invite man unto bare walls, but first he buildeth, and furnisheth a house, and then bringeth his guest into the house, that Man at first might taste and see how good the Lord was. And that all men might learn forever to trust him. He that provided for us a being, will he not, now he hath given us a being, maintain us? These things I observe to you, from the Order.

Thirdly, Let us inquire into the space of Time; wherein all these things were made. I do it the rather to let you see what Doctrine may be sucked out of these first Principles of Religion. In six days the LORD created Heaven and Earth, the Sea, and all things therein. Here are divers Considerations to be deduced from hence.

1. God could have done all things in a moment, yet it pleased him to be six days about this great work. Days, and not Moments. First, to teach us the necessity of Deliberation in all matters of Consequence. We understand God could have done all in a Moment; but he was pleased to take time about it, that he might thereby inform us, of the necessity of taking time, when we undertake things of Consequence. Many a man doth that in haste, that he repenteth him of at leisure, whereas he should not have had cause to repent, if he would have taken leisure in doing of it: Dan. 2. 16. He required time of the King, when he had a hard task.

Secondly, days and not years. Here is an observable difference between the work of Creation, and the work of Redemption. The one was finished in six days; but it cost Christ three and thirty years pilgrimage upon earth, before he came to say, It is finished. So much more noble is the one work, than the other. So much do we owe more to God for his having Redeemed us, than for his having Made us. There is not one of us, but oweth himself to God for his Creation. If we had a thousand, yea ten thousand selves, we should owe them all to Christ for our Redemption, because that is the greater work; it took God a longer time.

Thirdly in point of time. All things were made in six distinct several days; That so God might help us the better to understand this great work. It is too vast for us to comprehend at once, The making of all things. Therefore God was pleased to cast it into six several days, that so he might follow his work in our meditations. Moses saith, Such a day was such and such a Creature made; that we might run through all the Creatures, as it were, by these several stages, and let our affections go on, as God went on in working.

Fourthly. But six days. De Posse, God might have done it in a moment. But defacto, he did it in six days. We see how great a thing God can do in a short time. That which men and Angels could not have done, though he had given them a thousand millions of years to have perfected it. Thirteen years was Solomon a building the first Temple. And forty years were the Jews a building the second Temple. Here in six days, Heaven, and Earth, and Sea, and All things therein are made. Therefore trust God, be thou never so low in thy estate, or name, or body, or Soul: He that raised the World out of nothing in six days, how soon is he able to raise thee to a Competencie of these things?

Lastly, Six days, and no more. God cast it so, as we may think, on purpose, to limit us a time of working, and a time of resting. He himself wrought six days, and rested the seventh day from all his works. To teach us, That we should have six days to labor in, and keep the seventh as a Sabbath, Levite. 23. 3. Six days shalt thou labor, but the seventh day is the Sabbath of rest, an holy Convocation: ye shall do no work therein, It is the Sabbath of the Lord, in all your dwellings. That is the third thing. Ye have heard what these All-things are. In what order they were made. And in what space of time they were created. See now next, In what manner they were created.

Fourthly, In what manner were they made?

They were made by the sole word of God, without instruments, without materials, merely by the word of Command, Psal. 148. 5, 6. Praise him ye Heaven of heavens, and ye waters that be above the Heavens, let them praise the name of the Lord; for he commanded, and they were created. He hath established them forever and ever, he hath made a decree which shall not pass. You read of no Instruments. Solomon could not make a Temple, but he must have a thousand of Tools. God doth but speak the word, and the earth was made. You read of no materials out of which he made the world. What can men make, if you give them nothing to work upon. Let a Smith have Iron, and a Mason Stone, and they can make some Work: but here God maketh all out of Nothing, saith the Apostle, Heb. 11. 3. Through faith we Understand that the World was framed by the word of God, so that things which are seen, were not made of things which do appear.

Briefly, God made Something of Nothing, and then out of that Something, made All things, as one well expresseth it. That which (Gen. 1.) is called the earth, and the water, and the deep, that first matter, it was made out of mere nothing. There is something out of nothing, and then out of that first-Matter were all things framed. There is all things out of something; so as, mediately or immediately, all the Creatures come out of Nothing. There is Non-ens negativum; And so the first matter, cometh out of nothing. There is, Non-ens privativum; And so the other things, they came out of that which is, Non-ens tale, a thing that had no natural disposition to receive such a form. And here is the omnipotency of God seen in both. For it requires as much power to produce such and such forms, as to produce that first matter out of Nothing; and yet, This, God hath done. And this should teach us both Obedience, and Humility, The consideration of the manner of making all things. He made them all by his word. Who are we, that we should disobey the word of God, which every Creature was framed by. It is a shame for a man to be the worst thing in his house. All the World is a house made for Man; and man approveth himself the worst thing in the World, if he disobey the Word of God. Fire, Hail, Ice, Snow, fulfill thy Word, saith the Psalmist. He did but say, Let there be light, and the light presently shined; How many words have we had? Ten words of the Law, as the Ten Commandments, all comprised in two Words under the Gospel. Repent, and Believe, and how many are unbelieving and disobedient still? The Creatures cast shame upon us in this particular, As they were made without Instruments, by a sole word of Command, so they were made of Nothing; This should take down our Pride: shall we be proud of the Creature? That is to be proud of Nothing. Proud of our parts, or gifts? Who art thou? the Son of Adam? who is Adam? the Son of dust. What is that dust? The Son of nothing. All resolveth itself into Nothing. And certainly he that hath brought something out of nothing, can quickly reduce our something, to nothing again, if we begin to be proud of it. As he did the parts, and power of Nebuchadnezzar, when he took away his understanding, and turned him to eat grass with the beasts of the field. Some thing ye have heard about the Things, and the Order, and the Manner, and the Time.

Fifthly, See now, the End for which all things were made. Solomon telleth you in one word, That they were all made for the glory of God, Prov. 16. 4. The Lord hath made all things for himself. The Heavens declare the glory of God. The firmaments show his handy works. Therefore this is the great improvement, we should make of all the things that are made, to read something of God in them. And this is a duty that lieth especially upon man. Man as he is the most considerable part of the visible World, so the only Creature that can consider the rest: and it lieth as a more strong engagement upon him, to Glorify God above all, because no visible Creature can do it, if man deny it. And it lieth as a more strong obligation upon Ministers to Preach the Word, because Regularly none but they can Preach. And also upon Kings to govern, and Merchants to trade, because none can govern, none can trade, in such things as they. No, none but Men can consider, and praise God, for what he hath done in the World. Therefore every man should look at this great book of the Creature, as that which is written all over, with something of God.

Beloved, There is many a man cast away for not reading, when he is put to this book: a Non legit, here, may destroy a man; for not reading the book of the Creature. Though some of us take it but for a moral fault. Observe that, Psal. 28. 5. Because they regarded not the works of the Lord, nor the operation of his hands, he shall destroy them, and not build them up. Why, Should God set before us such a glorious piece as this is, and shall not we consider it with a Contemplative eye? An Artist thinketh himself neglected, when he hangeth forth a Picture to be viewed, and nobody give it the beholding. All creatures are active upon the stage of the world; but Man is a Spectator as well as an Actor; therefore they should observe, not themselves only, but whatsoever God doth in other creatures; and towards other creatures, as well as in and towards themselves.

To this end, God hath fitted them with Sense; to let the consideration of him into their Understandings; and set them in such a place of the world, as that they are compassed about, both with lasting works of Creation, Sun, Moon, Stars, Beasts, Plants, and the like; and also with transient works of Providence, that pass over their heads daily. O therefore, that men would praise the Lord, and glorify him in and for all these things that he hath made! That is the Use we should make of it. Rev. 4. ult. Thou art worthy, O Lord, to receive glory, and honor, and power; for thou hast created all things: For thee they are, and were created. Rom. 1. 20. Therefore give him the glory of his power. Who, but God, could have created such a Palace as Heaven? and Pond, as the Sea? and Pavement, as the Earth? Give Him the glory of His wisdom: O Lord, how manifold are thy works? In wisdom hast thou made them all.

It requireth wisdom to manage a great Family; much wisdom to martial a great Army. What wisdom is it in God, not only to make, but to govern all the host of all the Creatures? In wisdom hast thou made them all, in wisdom dost thou govern them. Let all therefore give Him the praise of his Goodness; for the next words there say, The earth is full of thy riches; namely, of his goodness to the sons of men; because, for us were all these things made, and we were made for God, as ye heard before. And therefore made after his own Image.

Now, my Brethren, What doth God expect from us, in a way of requital for all these things, but that, as they serve us, so we should serve him? That seeing we are made after his own Image, we should represent him in our dispositions and carriages towards the sons of men, in being holy, and meek, and loving, even as God himself is. Whose image and superscription is this, (will God ask one day) that is upon thy soul? Is it God's, after which thou art made? or is it Satan's? If the Devil's, give to Satan that which is Satan's. God will give the Devil his due, one day. If he findeth his own Image spunged out of us, and the Devil's stamped upon us, woe be to us. As it is said of Queen Elizabeth, that, passing by the streets, and seeing some of her Pictures hang for Signs, that were not made like her, she was angry, and caused them to be pulled down, and thrown into the fire. Brethren, I speak it with trembling: Should any of you carry souls about you, that do not look like God, they must be thrown down, and cast into the fire. Thus have I run over a sort of Considerations, from the great and glorious work of the Creation. The next thing is to discourse of Christ, as the Maker, the Efficient.

Vers. 3. All things were made by him, and without him was made nothing that was made.

Vers. 4. In him was life, and the life was the light of men.

The Divinity of Jesus Christ, under the term of the Word, hath been asserted in the former Verse, In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God. And this our Evangelist proveth, by an Argument taken from the Creation.

First, Generally, from the Creation of all things, All things were made by him, and without him was not anything made that was made.

Secondly, More Especially, from the Creation of living things, living Creatures; In him was life.
And Particularly from the Creation of Man; The life was the light of men.

That part of the Argument which is most General, lieth in the third Verse.

Where ye have two things.

- The Argument, first, Propounded.
- And secondly, Illustrated.

Propounded, All things were made by him.

Illustrated, Without him was not anything made that was made.

In the Proposition are two things.

- Here is the Effect, All things made.
- The Efficient, By him.

Of the Effect, I have spoken already.

I proceed now to the Efficient. Christ, the Eternal Word, was the Maker of them, All things were made by him. The Eternal Word was the Creator of all things.

Ye shall have this truth established in the mouth of two or three witnesses. Ephes. 2. 9. Who created all things by Jesus Christ. The Epistle to the Hebrews will afford two pregnant testimonies, Heb. 1. 2. He hath in these last days spoken to us by his Son, whom he hath appointed heir of all things; by whom also he made the worlds. This may seem something difficult, because he speaketh of Worlds, whereas we acknowledge but one. Let it be considered whom he writes to, the Hebrews, whose custom it was to style God, Rabboni, Dominus mundorum; The Lord of the Worlds. They were wont to speak of three Worlds, the lower World, the higher World, and the middle World. The lower World containeth the Elements, Earth, and Water, and Air, and Fire. The higher World, that containeth the Heaven of the Blessed: And the middle World, that containeth the Starry Heaven. We now being acquainted with this Language, and the Apostle writing to them, he saith, That God by Christ made the Worlds, those worlds, which they were wont to speak so frequently of.

And whereas one scruple might arise from this expression in the Text, By him were all things made; that, in the Ephesians, God created all things [by] Jesus Christ; this, to the Hebrews, By whom he made the worlds. As if Christ were only an Instrument in the Creation, and not the principal Efficient.

Therefore another place in this first Chapter will clear it, which speaketh of Christ as the principal Efficient of all things, Heb. 1. compare the 8th. and 10th. Verses together, To the Son he saith, Thy throne, O God, is forever and ever. And, Thou, Lord, verse 10. hast laid the foundation of the earth, and the heavens are the work of thy hands. Namely, thine; that is, the Son, which he spake of before. There is no great distinction here in all Objections; for this Praeposition 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, doth not always signify an Instrument, but sometimes it noteth a principal Agent. It is said of God, Of him, and through him, and to him, are all things: 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, Rom. 11. 36. by him, which we render, through him. Ye will have a more clear place, Gal. 1. 1. Paul an Apostle, not of man, neither by man, but by Jesus Christ, and God the Father; 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉. Who was the principal Efficient? not Paul the Apostle, then certainly Jesus Christ, and God the Father; he is said to be an Apostle, by Them. So then, Christ is the principal Efficient of the Creation. And in this sense it is said, By him were all things made, not as by an Instrument, but as by the chief Efficient. No more of the Proposition, By him, till I come to make Use of it.

I come now to the Illustration of this, And without him was not anything made that was made.

These words are considerable three ways.

- First, as an Hebraism, a manner of speech, borrowed from the course of the Hebrews, in their Writings.
- Secondly, As an Addition to what Moses had said, concerning the works of Creation.
- Thirdly, As an Explication of the former Clause, By him were all things made.

First, Look at them as an Hebraism, which this Evangelist is full of. Ye must know, that, amongst the Hebrews, there was nothing more usual, for the heightening of an expression, then to join an Affirmative and Negative together in one sentence; when they had first affirmed a thing positively, then to join another clause, that should deny the contrary. I will give you an instance or two, to make it clear; that in Isa. 39. 4. Hezekiah answered, All that is in mine house have they seen; there is the Affirmative. There is nothing in my treasures that I have not shown them; there is the Negative: and both make up one complete sense. Jer. 42. 4. And it shall come to pass, that whatsoever thing, the Lord shall answer you, I will declare it to you, there is the Affirmative. I will keep nothing back from you, here is the Negative. And the sense is enforced by it. Just as it is here. All things were made by Him, and without Him was not made anything that was made.

Secondly, If ye look at them, as an Addition, to what Moses had mentioned concerning the Creation. He had [2] made an express mention of all things visible. Our Evangelist intending to carry the Efficiency of Christ, to the making of all things that receive a being, whether visible, of which Moses speaks, or invisible; therefore, he contenteth not himself by saying, By Him were all things made, but addeth further, without Him was not made anything that was made. The former clause hath reference to what Moses said: The latter carrieth it further, All things visible, and invisible, Colos. 1. 16. By him (speaking of Christ, who is the Image of the invisible God, by Him) were all things created, that are in Heaven and Earth, visible and invisible, whether Thrones, or Dominions, or Principalities, or Powers; All things were created by Him.

Thirdly, These words are considerable, especially as an [3] Explication of the former clause. By him were all things made, wherein are two things to be noted; The Efficient, and the Effect. Here is something to explain both.

The Effect, first. These words, without him, was not anything made, that was made. Any thing that was made, [1] helpeth to explain, That these words limit All things in the former clause, to all created things; all things that receive a being: whereas, otherwise, God himself, God the Father, the Lord Jesus Christ, and the Holy Ghost, these are in the number of all things. The three Persons in the Trinity, have the most excellent Being. But some have brought desperate arguments from this Text, That Christ is a Creature, because in the number of all things. Now, say the next words, without him was not anything made, that was made. Ye must limit the first words, All things, that receive a being, not that have a being. As the Apostle argueth in another Case, so we may reason in this, 1 Cor. 15. 27. He hath put all things under his feet, but when he saith, All things, are put under him, it is manifest; That he is excepted, that put all things under him. So, all things are created by Him. But when He saith, All things are Created by Him, it is manifest, that he is excepted, by whom all things are Created.

Secondly, Here is something to explain the Efficient, from these words, without him was not anything made. It implieth a kind of Co-partnership in the work of Creation. Christ alone, doth not make all things. But Christ, together with the Father and the Holy Ghost, yet so as without the Word, without Christ was nothing made, by any of the other Persons. This wisdom challengeth, as the Prerogative of the Son of God, Prov. 8. from the 27 verse. to the 31. When He prepared the Heavens, I was there; when He set a compass upon the face of the deep, and stablished the Clouds above, when He gave to the Sea his decree; then I was by Him, as one brought up with Him, and was daily His delight, rejoicing always before Him. It excludeth only Creatures, not the Co-operation of the other Persons in the Trinity, to what was made, without Him was not anything made. It is an usual distinction amongst Divines, God hath two sorts of works, some Opera ad intra, works terminated upon some Person in the Trinity, works within. And these are done by someone person, not by another. So the Father begetteth. That work is terminated upon the Son, he is begotten, the son begetteth not. The Holy Ghost proceedeth, the Father doth not. That is a proper work, Ad intra. But works Ad extra. Works without God. And these are all common to all the three Persons. The Father createth, and the Son createth, and the Holy Ghost createth, and yet but one Creator, because it is a work that proceedeth from the Will of God, and the will of God is the same in all the three Persons, and accordingly, though the work be ascribed to every Person, yet they make but one Creator, because all Three have but one Essence. But because, they have different Subsistencies, the Father a distinct Person from the Son, and the Son from the Holy Ghost, therefore, they have a distinct manner of working, even in this business of the Creation. In all things, the Father works. All matters of Inchoations are ascribed to the Father, of Dispensations to the Son; of Consummations, to the Holy Ghost. But I will no longer dwell upon that: you see the meaning of these words.

Let us now come to apply them. All things were made by him, that is, by Christ, and without him was not anything [Use] made, that was made. To pass from more knotty difficult matter, to what may, I hope, come home to the conscience: Here are both Instructions and Consolations, and Directions to be borrowed from hence. Three Instructions, four Consolations, and five Directions I shall give you from this truth, That Christ is the Creator of all things, and without him was made nothing, that was made.

First, It instructeth concerning the Divinity of Christ, which is the very end for which they bring this argument. The builder of all things is God: Heb. 3. 4. Christ was the builder of all things, saith my Text. Therefore Christ is God.

In the beginning, God Created Heaven and Earth, and Sea, and all therein, saith Moses.

Christ created Heaven, and Earth, and the Sea, saith my Text.

Therefore Christ is God.

To bring things together that are infinitely distant requireth an infinite power.

The distance which is between Being and No-being is infinite.

Therefore, He must needs be God that can bring all things out of nothing; and he that Createth, doth so.

This exalteth God above all Idols. None of them can make a World. So the Apostle argueth, Act. 14. to turn them from Idols to the living God. 15. verse. We are men of like passion with you, and preach to you, that you should turn from these Idols to the living God, which made Heaven, and earth, and all things therein. Justin Martyr quoteth two Greek verses out of Pythagoras, to prove there is but one God, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, &c. saith Pythagoras. If any will assume to himself, and say, I am God, except only one, let him lay such a World as this is to stake, and say, This World is mine; then I will believe him, otherwise not. He is God that made the World. Christ made the World. Therefore he is God.

Secondly, It instructeth us concerning the Excellency [2] of Christ above all things. By him were all things made. Therefore he himself must needs be better then all things, for he made them. The cause is better then the effect. The Carpenter better than the house, and the Shipwright then the ship. Look whatsoever excellency is in the Creature it came from Christ. Therefore he hath a greater excellency, than the Creature hath. Yea whatsoever are in the Creatures, they meet in Christ. Therefore it is, that there are names borrowed from all the most excellent Creatures, to decipher Christ by, in Scripture; to show that all their excellencies are eminently in Him, from whom they have their being. Amongst things in earth, that have barely a being, the most excellent are Jewels, and precious Stones; Christ taketh a name from thence. He is called the Corner-stone, elect, & precious, 1 Pet. 2. So, Isa. 28. he is the great precious stone, the Jewell of Jewels. Amongst Vegetables, Plants, and Trees, the most excellent is the Vine and Olive: Christ is the true Vine, Joh. 15. and the good Olive-tree, Rom. 11. Amongst Beasts that have sense, the most excellent amongst wild Beasts is the Lion, and amongst tame Beasts the Lamb: Christ taketh name from these; The Lamb of God, that taketh away the sins of the world, Joh. 1. The Lion of the tribe of Judah, as in the Revelations.

And so, if ye look up into Heaven, the most excellent Quality is the Light, the most excellent Luminary is the Sun: Christ hath names from both these, This is the true light, that lighteneth every man that cometh into the world. And, The Sun of Righteousness, with healing under his wings, Mal. 4. So as it showeth to us, in the second place, the excellency of Christ above all things.

Thirdly, It instructeth us, concerning the primitive good of all the Creatures; they are all of Christ's making, and therefore must needs be good; good in themselves, and good to us. For he is so good, as that he can make nothing ill. He beareth such affection to us, as that he will do us no harm. He that in fullness of time, was made for us of a Woman, made under the Law, will make all things useful for us that he undertakes to create. It is true, many things are now become hurtful to man; Whence cometh this? Not from Christ. It is said by Moses, in the end of the Creation, God looked upon the works of his creation, and behold they were all good. If anything be evil now in the end of the world, we may thank ourselves and the Devil for that; for they came all good from Christ. Therefore let not us play the Balaam, and beat the Ass, when we are in the fault, as he did. Jude telleth you, verse. 15, 16. of a generation of men, (and the world is full of them) that are Murmurers and Complainers, men that always find fault with what God hath made their lot. This very consideration might help us to complain of ourselves, not of God, not of the Creator. As Physicians sometimes do, when a man bleedeth excessively at the nose, they open a vein in the arm to divert the blood. If we will be complaining, here is a diversion: we should complain of our sin, that hath brought all this misery; kill sin, and all is good. Nothing more frequent, then for a man to deal with God, as Hiram did with Solomon. 1 King. 9. 11, 12, 13. It is there said, that Solomon gave Hiram twenty Cities in the land of Galilee, and he came out from Tyre to see the Cities which Solomon had given him, and they pleased him not; and he said, What Cities are these, which thou hast given me? and he called them, the land of Cabul to this day; which signifieth, Dirty. Solomon had bestowed Cities upon Hiram, and in all likelihood they stood in very fertile places: only they had this Inconveniencie with their fertility, they were Mire and Dirty, therefore he was displeased at them. God hath bestowed many blessings upon us; and yet, if there be any dirt goeth along with the fruit, (many times the fattest soil is liable to that,) we are apt to call them Cabul, never looking at God that gave them. Let us remember that all creatures, as they came from God, are good. Therefore if we will be finding fault, find fault with ourselves.

I now come to the Consolations. [Use]

First, here is matter of Comfort in case of the want of the Creatures. When men are destitute either of temporal blessings, or spiritual blessings that belong to the new creature, Let them solace themselves in this, Though the creatures be wanting, if faith be not wanting, they have Christ that made them all, and they may have the comforts of all in Him. Thus the Psalmist comforteth himself in such a case, Psal. 146. 5, 6. He had said before, Put not your trust in princes, nor in the sons of men, in whom there is no help. His breath goeth forth, he returneth to the earth: in that very day his thoughts perish. Here he speaketh against the creatures, the greatest men, Princes, they are gone. What followeth? Happy is he that hath the God of Jacob for his help, whose hope is in the Lord his God, who made heaven, and earth, and the sea, and all that is therein. When creatures fail, and men are wanting, Happy is he that trusteth in God, saith the Psalmist. Beloved, God himself is All-sufficient, and needeth not the help of any creature; therefore he never made all these things for Himself: that is clear. For, if he had need, How could he have endured to be without them, till within these 5672 years. I say, If God had needed them himself, he would not have been without them till then. Therefore, certainly, he made them for some other end. Not for his enemies; his friends have an interest in them. If Christ made all these things, he made them with a special reference to them, that have the greatest interest in his favor. Therefore despair not. For God hath promised to withhold no good thing from them, that walk uprightly. I speak now of temporal blessings: It is much more true of spirituals. That which is good, and good for me at this time, I shall have it, God will not withhold it. He may indeed withhold something that is good, but, it may be, it is not good at this time, or in this estate I am in. Water is good, one of the most useful Elements; but not for a man in the height of a Feavour, though good for him at another time. None of those things that God hath made, will he withhold from his servants, when they are fitted to receive them. Ye have a great experience of this, how God provided for his Apostles in this case, in the want of the creatures, Luk. 22. 35. Christ saith to the Disciples, When I sent you without purse, or scrip, and shoes, lacked ye anything? And they said, Nothing. Here were men as poorly provided for, as one could imagine, sent to travel without any shoes upon their feet. Here is want of apparel without. No meat they could carry along with them. When I sent you without scrip, and without any money to buy any food or raiment with; I sent you without purse, as well as without food or shoes: And yet, lacked ye anything? And they said, Nothing. The Maker of all things so disposed, that though they carried nothing with them, they had some that bestowed all things upon them, that were necessary. As that reverend Divine, Vrfine, whose Catechism you have amongst you at this day, was frequently heard to use this expression, being a poor youth, I had many and many a time lain in the streets, if the Providence of God had not been mine Hoste, taken me in, and given me a lodging.

Well; But are they spiritual blessings that thou wantest? All these thou mayest have from the Creator of all things, if thou believest. Dost thou want Grace? Fetch it from him: Create in me a clean heart, O Lord, and renew a right spirit within me, Psal. 51. 10. Dost thou want Peace, peace of Conscience? Have ye that? Whence cometh it? Christ, who is the Creator of all things, is the Creator of that; I create the fruit of the lips, peace, peace, to him that is afar off, and to him that is near, saith the Lord. Go then to Christ, as the Centurion did, when his servant was sick, and say, Speak the word, and my servant shall be whole: Lord, speak the word, and my soul shall be whole. It is but as at the Creation, He said, Let there be light, and there was light: Lord, let there be light in my understanding, and there shall be light: Let there be peace in my conscience, and there shall be peace there. It is as easy for him to make thee righteous, as to make thee at first. Therefore trust Him.

Secondly, Here is comfort in case of Scruple, about right to the Creature, which is a very usual case, and that many times with the dearest servants of God. They think, they have no right to the least bit of bread they put into their mouths; and therefore some have starved themselves, out of scruple. Who is the maker of all these things? Is not Christ? and art not thou his? All are yours, if you be Christ's, and Christ is God's. The Apostle resolveth that case clearly, 1 Cor. 3. latter end, Whether Paul, or Apollos, or Cephas, or principalities, or powers, or things present, or things to come; all are yours, and ye are Christ's. If ye be Christ's, all are yours. Whatsoever question may be made, of what right unregenerate men, out of Christ, have to the creature; yet, it is out of all question, thou, that art a Believer, hast a right. The ungodly have the right of a servant, but thou hast the right of a son. Take this comparison. A maid-servant, while she liveth in a family, hath a right to the good things of that house; but now, put case, (as it often happeneth) that the Master of the family marry that Maid, and make her his wife; she hath a farther right now to the same things, an higher right, and a more comfortable right than before. So, when a soul cometh once to be married to Jesus Christ, to have a sanctified use of all the creatures, as part of her Joynture; All is yours, and ye are Christ's.

Thirdly, Here is Comfort, in case of fearing harm from the Creature. Are they not all of thy Savior's making? are they not all thy Father's servants! Shall a son and heir be afraid to converse in his Father's own family, and fearful of those that serve him, whom he calleth Father? The creatures are more; they are not only servants to Christ, but they owe their being to Christ. Ye see, great men, when they raise men, they are wont to call such a one their Creature. What are the servants of the family? have they been raised up from nothing by the Master of the family, and shall the son fear to be amongst them? I will lift up mine eyes to the hills, from whence cometh my help. My help standeth in the name of the Lord, who made heaven and earth. He speaketh nothing of help from the creatures, because he trusted in the Lord that made them. Ye have it, Isa. 54. 16, 17. God himself suggesteth this consolation to his people, Behold, I have created the smith, that bloweth the coals in the fire, and that bringeth forth an instrument for his work. And I have created the destroyer to destroy. No weapon that is formed against thee shall prosper. Therefore fear not. He that made all these things, hath them at his command; and if he speaks the word, they shall do thee no harm. Without him was nothing made, and without him can nothing hurt. If God speaketh a word in a dream to Laban, and saith concerning Jacob, Hurt him not; Laban shall have no power to do him mischief, when God rebuketh him. If God say to the creatures, even when they are armed against us, as David to the Captains, when they went out against Absalom, See ye do the young man no harm; Plague, Fire, Sword, see ye do no hurt to him, they shall not be able to do any.

Lastly, here is comfort in case of parting with the Creatures, as we must all do at death. Consider, how mean they are. I do but go at Death, if I am a Believer, from inferior beings, to the superior Being; leave the creature, but go to the Creator of all things, to Him that putteth all the goodness, all the sweetness, into the creatures, which I find in them, or can expect from them; and hath infinitely more goodness and sweetness in himself. Shall I then complain of a Loss by death? No, I shall be a Gainer: I leave the Stream and Rivolets, and go into the vast Ocean of all bliss and comfort. Shall a man that hath wandered and travelled all night by Star-light, which can hardly help him to see his way, complain, when the Sun ariseth, that is a better guid? All the creatures, they are but Stars, they cannot all make a day; put them altogether, it is but a dimn light you have from thence. Let no man complain, that he is hardly dealt withal, that dieth in Christ; then the Sun riseth, and he shall go to a higher light; from the fruition of the creature, to Him that made him, even to God himself. Therefore he may comfortably commit his soul to God, as to a faithful Creator, as Peter saith.

Because God will find his own Image upon that soul, and accordingly will own it for his own. He may comfortably commit his body to the grave, in assurance of the Resurrection, upon this ground, because Christ made all things; and he that made the body of man out of the dust, can raise the body of man out of the dust. Our remainders after death cannot be so little, as our being was before the world. Cannot that God, who fetched all things out of nothing, repair our bodies out of something, out of ashes, out of dust? Therefore when a man most needeth comfort, here is consolation from hence, even in case of parting with the creatures at death. Ye have had the Instructions and Consolations.

I come now to the Directions, in point of Practice; and of them briefly.

First, Seeing Christ is the Creator of all things, and not [Direct. 1] any one thing was made without him, Learn we from hence, First, to stand in awe of him, upon this ground. Psal. 33. 6, 7, 8. By the word of the Lord were the heavens made, and all the hosts of them by the breath of his mouth. He gathereth the waters of the Sea together as an heap, he layeth up the depths in a storehouse. Let all the inhabitants of the world fear him. All must fear him, because he made all. If they were at his making, then they must be disposed of by him. As we carry ourselves to Christ, so shall the creatures carry themselves to us, serviceably; or, if we walk contrary to him, no wonder if we find the creatures walking contrary to us. Amos. 3. 12, 13. Thus (saith he) will I do to thee, O Israel. And because I will do this to thee, prepare to meet thy God, O Israel. For lo, he that formed the mountains, and created the winds, that dwelleth upon the high places of the earth; the Lord of hosts is his name. He created all, therefore prepare to meet him in a way of fear and reverence; because, if the Creator of all things be offended at us, he will arm all things against us; it is but giving the creature a commission, and how soon is man destroyed? If Christ say, Take him, Plague, and consume him; take him, Fire, and burn him; take him, Water, and drown him; Earth, open, and swallow him; Hell, be enlarged, and dispatch him; it must be so. Therefore stand in awe of him.

Secondly, Learn we from hence, to commit our souls [Direct. 2] to him in well-doing, as to a faithful Creator. That ye have, 1 Pet. 4. ult. Let them that suffer according to the will of God, commit the keeping of their souls to him in well-doing, as to a faithful Creator. If a Watch had understanding, doubtless, it would commit the keeping of itself to none, but to him that made it; because when it is out of frame, he best knoweth how to set it right again, because it is his own workmanship, therefore he will have more regard to it, than any other man will have. Christ hath been the Creator of our souls, let him have the keeping of them; Cast all your care upon him, for he careth for you, saith Peter. Shall not he that made thee, be able to keep thee? Doth not the Artificer love the work of his own hands? He that hath given so much power to many creatures (as to the Angels) hath he not reserved much more power to himself, who is able to keep, and to keep to salvation? Ye are kept by the power of God, through faith, to salvation. How secure do men think themselves, if some excellent creatures do but take care of them? Suppose a great Prince should say to any of us, that have a great many children, Take no care for such and such a child, send him to me, I will take care for him; How would such a person think himself at rest concerning that child? With what security may we build upon the love of God in Christ, if we commit our souls to him in well-doing, as to a faithful Creator.

Thirdly, Learn we to get an interest in him, as a Redeemer; otherwise, we shall have no more show for Salvation, [Direct. 3] than the brute beasts have, for he is their Creator as well as ours; All things were made by him. He gave life to other creatures as well as to man. Believe it, whosoever thou art, an Ox or an Ass may be saved, as well as a Man or a Woman, if that Man or Woman will not believe in Christ. Thou art the workmanship of his hands; true, so is the brute beast. It is not enough to be Christ's creatures, we must be Christ's Members before we can get to Heaven. Do not say, He that madens will save us. What saith the Prophet? Isa. 27. 11. It is a people of no understanding, therefore he that made them will not have mercy upon them, and he that formed them will show them no favor. It is not our being framed creatures by Christ, but his framing the new creature within us, to help us in the way to Heaven. Give up yourselves to Prayer, as David doth, Psal. 119. 73. Thine hands, O Lord, have made and fashioned me; give me understanding, that I may learn to keep thy commandments. He resteth not in his being made by God, but, Give me understanding to keep thy commandments.

Fourthly, seeing all things were made by Christ, Learn [Direct. 4] from hence to consider the works of the Creation. It is a dishonor to Christ, to have the works of the Creation neglected, and no man to look after them in a way of Admiration. As it would be a dishonor to a curious Poet, that hath framed an excellent Comedy, and brought it upon the Stage, to have no spectators. God hath laid out a great deal of his Wisdom in the works of the world, and calleth upon men to behold the works of his hands; How ill will he take it, if we consider them not. If he hangeth out such a Master-piece as the world is, and we go as swine, and never behold it, we do much neglect the Lord. See how ill the Lord taketh it, and how ill men fare, and from this very sin, Psal. 28. 5. Because they regard not the works of the Lord, nor the operations of his hands, he shall destroy them, and not build them up. He will destroy them for want of considering the works of his hands.

Lastly, Seeing Christ is the Maker of all things, Let all be improved in his service to his praise; that is the end he [Direct. 5] made them for. Rev. 4. ult. Thou art worthy, O Lord, to receive glory, and honor, and power, for thou hast created all things. He is worthy to receive honor and glory, because he created all things. Col. 1. 16. All things were created by him, and for him. Not only by him, as the Efficient; but for him, as the End. Therefore we should employ our strength, and parts, and means: whatsoever we have, employ it to the service of Christ, because from him we had it. Take along with you this Rule, That is a vain thing that misseth its end. That is a cursed thing that crosseth its end. That which misseth its end, which it was made for, is a vain thing. For instance, Christ hath given me a tongue to glorify him withal; I have my tongue in vain, if I do not speak of Christ with it; as David did, who made his tongue as the Pen of a ready Writer. But, if I shall not only speak of Christ, but against him, blaspheme him, deny his Divinity, and Satisfaction, as the Socinians do; here is a curse upon my tongue, here it crosseth the end of its creation. And so it is, when a man employeth his wits to scoff against God and goodness with it; when he groweth proud of his wealth, or parts, or apparel, or anything that God hath given him; when he abuseth his strength to intemperance or luxury. Here the end of his Making is crossed, and here is a curse upon his parts and all other gifts; his blessings are a curse to him. I conclude with Col. 3. 17. Whatsoever ye do in word or deed, do all things in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ, giving thanks to God and the Father by him. So I have done with the third Verse, and proceed to the fourth.

Vers. 4. In him was Life, and the Life was the Light of Men.

An Argument of Christ's Divinity, taken from the Creation, considered in general, in the making of all things. He cometh now to speak more specially, of things that have life; and then more particularly of Himself, and Man, In him was life, and the life was the light of men.

Three degrees of Communications there are from Christ, as a Creator, Esse, Vivere, Intelligere. To some things he giveth a being, as to Stones and Stars; to other things he giveth life as well as being, as to Plants, and Birds, and Fish, and Beasts; some whereof have the life of Vegetation, others, both of Vegetation and of Sense. And then there is a third degree of Communication, that is, Intelligere, Understanding; that God giveth to men and Angels. Of the first degree, he had spoken before; of all things that are made in general: now he speaketh in special manner of the second degree of communication, which is giving of life to all the creatures; that is in these words,

In Him was Life.

In Him; namely, in the Word. For he had spoken, that in Christ, life was two ways, Formaliter, and Causaliter. Life was Formally in Christ, as in the Subject of it. Life was Causally in Christ, as in the Fountain of it.

Ye may give me leave to speak of both, though the second, haply, be principally intended. In him was life, as in the Subject of it. Take from hence an Observation, That Christ ever liveth, and is the giver of all life. He ever liveth, life is in him, as the Subject. He is the giver of all life, life is in him as the Fountain.

First, He ever liveth; that is, He is the living God; according to that, Joh. 5. 26. As the Father hath life in himself, so hath he given to the Son to have life in himself. There was no time wherein Christ did not live, he liveth from all eternity, had life in himself, even as the Father had. If any question be, it must be at that time, wherein his Soul was parted from the Body, when the Body lay in the grave? Yet even then, Christ lived. One of his last words upon the Cross, was to the Thief, To day shalt thou be with me in Paradise. He had his Soul and Divinity in Paradise, even while his Body lay, and was housed in the Grave. Christ lived in Heaven, though his soul parted for a time from the Body; neither was the Hypostatical union dissolved. So, the life was not lost.

But the main thing intended is the Second, In him was life (Causally) as in the Fountain of life. When he created all things, life was originally in him, and from him derived to certain creatures, which he then made. Hence it is, that Christ is called, The Word of life, The Prince of life, The Life of life. Because, as he is the End, so he communicates life to all things that partake of it. He is called The Word of life, 1 Joh. 1. 1. which we have looked upon, and our hands have handled of the Word of life. He is called, The Prince of life, Act. 3. 15. They killed the Prince of life, whom God raised from the dead, whereof we are witnesses. He calleth himself, The Life, Joh. 14. 6. I am the War, the Truth, and the Life. And because his is not only life in himself, but life to us, therefore he is called, Our Life, Col. 3. 4. When Christ, who is Our Life, shall appear, then shall we also appear with him in glory. All this is to show, that whatsoever life is communicated to the creature, it cometh from Christ, it is in him as in the Fountain, With thee is the fountain of life, Psal. 36. 9.

So as here now, in consideration of this, it may be of Use to us diverse ways; as,

First, Take it to pieces again, In him was life, as in the Subject. This should serve as a Canon to fear, which we find called for in Daniel, in this respect, Dan. 6, 26. I make a decree, saith Darius, that in every dominion of my kingdom, men tremble and fear before the God of Daniel, for he is the living God. Let all fear and tremble before Christ, for in him is life, he is the living God. What saith Paul, Heb. 10. 31. It is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God. O therefore, tremble before him. There are hands of God, into which it is a comfortable thing to fall. There are merciful hands of Christ, which he stretcheth forth to poor sinners, to invite them, and call them in to himself: but if we refuse the Call which he now maketh to us; if all the benefits, which those bountiful hands of his spread out amongst us, scattered in our Congregations, and in our Houses; if all these allure us not, then remember what followeth, It is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God: one will follow upon the other. If this merciful hand cannot win us, this destroying hand will be sure to reach us. This maketh it fearful, because His is the living God. Every death is the more fearful, by how much the more terrible the immediate Executioner of it is. For a man to be drowned is more gentle, than to be burnt; Why? Because Water is not so operative, and active, and quick, as Fire; Fire is a more raging element. The wrath of God is the immediate Executioner of damned souls. And what so terrible as that is? If God live, such souls must die. And because God liveth forever, such souls must die forever, as fall into his revengeful hands. Fear and tremble to offend Christ, because such as fall into the hands of the living God, must be miserable as long as he is happy; and die, as long as he liveth.

Secondly, The consideration of this truth, That in Christ is life, as in a Fountain, from whence all sorts of life are derived to the creatures, according to their several kinds, may serve as a ground of faith.

First, to put us upon trusting in Christ, and seeking to him, and depending upon him for all kinds of life: Psal. 36. 7th. and 9th. verses compared together, The children of men put their trust under the shadow of thy wings, verse. 7. and the reason is rendered, verse. 9. For with thee is the fountain of life. Therefore our trust should be in him, because life is in him, as in the Fountain. Whither should he, that wanteth water, go, but to the Fountain? Carry Faith, as the Bucket; and then, according to the bigness of thy bucket, shall be the proportion of thy water thou drawest from thence. Life cometh in, as Faith draweth from Christ. Trust him for temporal life, when we are sick, and in dangers; though means may be used, and ought to be used, there is no relying upon Physic. Our utmost confidence must be in him, from whom all life cometh. Deut. 32. 39. I, even I am he, and there is no god with me. I kill, and I make alive; I wound, and I heal; there is none that can deliver out of my hand. And so for spiritual life: when the pulse of Grace beateth slowly, and unevenly, Who shall we then depend upon for life, but upon him that is the fountain of it, the second Adam, whom God hath made a quickening Spirit?

Secondly, as it may be a ground of Faith at all times, so a ground of Martyrdom at any time, when a man is called, to seal the truth of his profession with his blood. Now this being considered, that life is in Christ as in the Fountain, and derived from him to us; this is a special ground to prevail with the soul, to suffer itself, even to be laid down for Christ. Now he calleth for that life, which he himself first gave; we had it from him, and now we are called to restore it to him: the best husbandry that can be. But to be provident of our lives in this case, and to be over-thrifty, is the way never to thrive, as Christ saith, Mar. 8. 35. Whosoever will save his life shall lose it. Whosoever will lose his life for my sake and the Gospel's, the same shall save it. It is no such great matter: Life is as common to brute beasts as to men; and therefore when Christ calleth for it, there is reason to part from it, because he gave it. It must be given up as a tribute to Nature. What is it to part with it a little sooner, as a sacrifice to Christ, as a seal of our profession, and as a pledge of our thankfulness? It is not so much parting with it, as restoring it to the Owner.

Thirdly, it may serve as a ground of Encouragement. Life is in Christ as in the Fountain, therefore let all that wait upon Christ be encourag'd to expect life in abundance. A great deal of complaining there is of dead hearts, and dull spirits; no life in the soul, in duty or service. Exercise Faith, go to the Fountain for all, and you shall have life, and have it in abundance. Christ doth not use to give niggardly, when he is sued to. It is said of Araunah, All these things Araunah gave as a King. Christ giveth as a Savior, in this very particular, Joh. 10. 10. I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly. He giveth so, as to give it in abundance. It will not be amiss to spend some time, in clearing of that, that Christians may go away with encouragement. Whether we speak of the several sorts of life, of Spiritual life, (for I will not speak of Natural) or to the several blessings, that accompany every sort of spiritual life, which is all derived from one fountain. I take them together, that I may speak the more briefly of them.

There are five sorts of Spiritual life, which are proper to Saints; besides a Natural life, which is common to all men.

First, There is a life of Reconciliation, which standeth in opposition to the wrath of God. The wrath of God, that killeth, but in the favor of God there is life, saith the Psalmist, Psal. 30. 5. Thy anger endureth but for a moment, but in thy favor is life. This life is from Christ, because it is he in whom he is well-pleased, and through whom he is well pleased with us: God was in Christ, reconciling the world to himself. If any Reconciliation, it is in Christ. Here is one sort of spiritual life that Christ giveth, and that in abundance; I came that they might have life, and have it more abundantly; because, where God is reconciled, he beareth abundance of good-will to such a soul. In thy favor is life; and that favor aboundeth so much, as that God loveth every reconciled soul with the same love, wherewith he loveth Christ himself; Joh. 17. 23. That the world may know that thou hast loved them, as thou hast loved me, faith Christ. That showeth abundant love. All love falleth first upon Christ, as the head, Divine love doth; and so descendeth to the skirts of his garments. It falleth upon us from Christ, and through Christ.

Secondly, there is a life of Justification, which standeth in opposition to the guilt of sin; and of this the Apostle speaketh, Rom. 5. and telleth you, what abundance of righteousness accompanyeth it, Rom. 5. 15, 17. If through the offense of one many be dead, much more the grace of God, and the gift by grace, which is by one man Jesus Christ, hath abounded unto many. For if by one man's offense, death reigned by one; much more they which receive abundance of grace; and of the gift of righteousness, shall reign in life by one, Jesus Christ. It is called, Justification of life, there, verse. 18. Even so, by the righteousness of one, the free gift came upon all men to Justification of life.

Thirdly, There is a life of Sanctification, that standeth in opposition to the power of sin, as that of Justification did to the guilt of sin. This is likewise from Christ; and of it Paul speaketh, Gal. 2. latter end, I through the Law am dead to the Law, that I might live to the Lord. I am crucified to the world, notwithstanding I live; yet not I, but Christ that liveth in me. This cometh in from Christ in great abundance. Hence are those expressions, 2 Cor. 8. 17. Therefore as ye abound in everything, in faith, and utterance, and knowledge, and all diligence, and your love towards us, see that ye abound in this grace also. Rom. 9. 8. God is able to make all grace abound towards you. This is that that Christ saith, That he giveth life, and more abundantly.

Fourthly, There is a life of Consolation, which standeth in opposition to the discouragements that arise, both from the power of sin, and the guilt of sin, that strike the soul dead. And therefore a soul that is glad, is said to live; Psal. 69. 32. The humble shall see this, and be glad, and your heart shall live. So you see, that to be glad, and to live, is all one. This is founded in Christ, and there is abundance of this communicated to believers. See that 1 Cor. 2. 15. As the sufferings of Christ abound in us, so our consolation also aboundeth by Christ. Here is consolation, abundant consolation, and both by Christ.

The last thing is a life of Glory, which standeth in opposition to that misery, that ariseth from all the former, from the wrath of God, and the guilt and power of sin, and the discouragements that arise from thence; all these bring misery after the soul's death. Now, there is a life of Glory, that freeth the soul from this, that is hid in Christ: You are dead, but your life is hid with Christ in God. When Christ, who is our life, shall appear, then shall we also appear with him in glory. There is a glorious life for believers, but it is now hidden, like the sap in the root in the winter-time. It is hidden in Christ, who is their glorifi'd Head already. This they shall have, and have it more abundantly, because of that abundant happiness, which accompanieth this life of Glory, They shall be abundantly satisfied with the fatness of thy house, and made to drink of the rivers of thy pleasures. For with thee is the fountain of life, Psal. 36. 8, 9. When there is but a little small Brook, and a whole Army cometh to drink at it, they are ready to emulate one another, because there is not enough to serve them all. As he said, Xerxes's Army drunk up whole Rivers. But where there are Rivers of pleasure, there is enough for all comers; there needs be no emulation, all shall be satisfied: They shall be abundantly; and, Thou shalt cause them to drink of the Rivers of thy pleasures. Thus ye see, what strong Encouragement ariseth from hence, that life is in Christ as in the Fountain. So I have done with that Clause of the fourth Verse, In him was life. The next is,

And the Life was the Light of Men.

Vers. 5. And the Light shined in Darkness, and the Darkness comprehended it not.

We proceed to that which concerneth the Creation of Men in particular, The life was the light of men. That is, as I take it, The Life which was originally in the Eternal Word, and conveyed to the creature, according to their several ranks and degrees, was a life of Vegetation in Plants, and a life of Sense in Brutes, and a Life and Light of Men. It was so in the Angels as well as in Men. But the Evangelist, because the Scripture was made for the use of Men, and not of Angels, contenteth himself only to mention them; The life was the light of men.

By Light, I am soath to understand only Knowledge, as some do; or only Grace, as other some: I rather take in both, and add a third thing, which is the result of both, namely, Joy. For all these three come under the notion of Light. Then make this our Observation, That man was created by God at first in a state of light: The life was the light of men.

Do but compare this place with that, Joh. 8. 12. for the understanding of the phrase; Then spake Jesus again to them, saying, I am the light of the world. He that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life. The light of life, and the life of light, is all one, and both come from Christ, without any great difficulty. Next the life, was the light of men, And he shall have the life of light, saith Christ here; but that he speaketh of Conversion. My Text confineth me to what was in the Creation. Christ is presented to us, as the Maker of all things. So then, Man was created by Christ at first in a state of light; that is, in a state of Knowledge, of Holiness, and of Joy; for these three things come under the notion of Light in the Scripture.

First, Knowledge. See in that 2 Cor. 4. 6. God, whocommanded the light to shine out of darkness, hath shined in our hearts, to give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God, in the face of Jesus Christ. This light of knowledge was eminently in Man, at his first creation. Therefore the light of God is said to stand in knowledge; Having put on the new man, which is renewed in knowledge, after the image of him that created him. And whereas there are three sorts of beams of light, by which the understanding seeth things; and these were all eminent in Adam at the first Creation. There are Direct beams, and Reflect beams, and Refract beams, so they are wont to call them. Thus, a man seeth another man, whom he looketh upon face to face, by a direct beam. The same man, when he seeth his own face in a glass, it is by a reflect beam. Let him look into the water, see a staff in the water; that is by a refract beam, because the species is broken, by reason of the thickness of the water, through which he seeth. Now, Adam saw by all these, and, by them, in a way of perfection: He looked, by a direct beam of light, upon all the creatures; he saw the inside and outside of them; he knew all their Natures so plainly, as that he was able to give them all names, according to their several kinds. He looked upon himself by a reflect beam of light, he was able to apprehend all his own notions and apprehensions, and all the duties God required at his hands, and that without any oblivion; which, since the Fall, we cannot do. We have power to reflect, indeed, upon ourselves; but what we do one day, we forget another. But now, with Adam, in this state of light, he could neither forget evil, nor forget good. He could forget no evil, for there was no evil to forget; and he could forget no good, for it had been evil to have forgotten it, for he was without all evil. And then, for a Refract beam of light, he looked upon God with such a beam, because he saw God in them through a thick Medium. He could not see God in his Essence, but through the Medium of the creature, and through those Revelations, which he was pleased to make of himself before the Fall. Herein stood that light of knowledge, wherewith Adam was at first created.

Secondly, Man was created in a state of Light; that is, in a state of Holiness: 1 Joh. 1. 6, 7. If we walk in the light, as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another; that is, in Holiness. Ye were sometimes darkness, but now are ye light in the Lord: that is, holy, and sanctified persons. Holiness was stamped upon Adam there, in an eminent measure; it was a deep stamp, and a clear one, because the Image of God was not only in knowledge, as before, but in righteousness and true holiness, Ephes. 4. 24. insomuch as there was no irregularity in Adam's soul. He was an Instrument, new made by the finger of God himself, well strung, and well tun'd, not a jarring string in the whole Instrument. A Glass filled with pure crystall-water, no mudd at the bottom, no defilement in the water, stand it never so much. His Body was subject to his Appetite, his Appetite subject to his Will, his Will subject to his Reason, his Reason subject to God. One Faculty sweetly subordinate to another, and all to the Divine Majesty. This I have found, (saith Solomon, Eccles. 11. ult.) that God made man upright, and that he hath sought out many inventions. If man would have contented himself with that happiness, that God made him in at first, he might have been happy. He was at first created in light of Holiness.

Thirdly, Man was created in a state of Light; that is, of Joy, which cometh under the notion of Light in Scripture; Hest. 8. 16. The Jews had light, and gladness, and joy, and honor. Light is sown for the righteous, and gladness for the upright in heart, saith the Psalmist. There was nothing wanting, to make Adam's condition comfortable to him. For his Body, he had a Paradise; all the delights and pleasures, that are found in all the several places of the world at this day, put together, they could not make such a Garden as Eden was, nor such a pleasant place as Paradise. For his Soul, he enjoyed the chiefest good; the more he knew God, the more God loved him; and the more he loved him, the more he praised him; and the more he praised him, the more he delighted in him. There was overflowings of joy in Adam's soul. Then, in reference to God, and so the Creatures; It could not but add exceedingly to the light of joy in Adam's heart, that all the creatures were willingly subject to him. God had made him Master of them all, and not one of them that refused to be subject. Indeed, afterwards, since the Fall, the creatures became formidable to him. Moses, when his Rod was turned into a Serpent, he fled from it, and was afraid; but so was not Eve, when the Serpent came to her in Paradise. The Image of God was so perfectly stamped upon Adam then, that every creature bare him reverence, and stood in awe of the face of Man. And so they did to Jesus Christ, in whom the Image of God was fully renewed. That is a passage observable, though, haply, not much heeded, Mar. 1. 13. it is a clause brought in by St. Mark, which the other Evangelists (as I think) have not spoken of; Christ's being in the Wilderness, He was there forty days tempted of Satan, and was with the wild beasts of the field. The other tell you of his being tempted, but St. Mark only putteth in these words, And he was with the wild beasts, which was as great a miracle as any of the other. It was a miracle, that Christ fasted forty days and nights; but it was as great a miracle, that all the beasts did homage, and gave reverence to him, even as they had done to Adam in Paradise. Thus ye have heard, for Explication of this Truth, That Man was created at first, by Christ, in a state of Light; that is, in a state of Knowledge, of Holiness, and of Joy.

First, The Use shall be general, to all the sons and daughters of Adam, that they would seek to Christ, that they may be restored to this state of light. He, who himself is the Image of God, the express Image of his Father's Person, Heb. 1. who at first made man after that Image of God; He only it is that can restore him. He, from whom life was the light of men, he it is, that must give that light of life; and he hath promised to give it to such as follow him. Certainly, this is worth the seeking after, Joh. 8. 12. I am the light of the world, he that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life. That which we lost in the first Adam, we shall have restored in the Second; there is no other way to come by it, but this. The Mint, in which Knowledge, Holiness, and Joy, are coined, it goeth in Heaven, and nowhere else: Christ is the Master of that Mint.

That you may be encouraged to seek to Christ for this, set me tell you, Beloved, That if the Lord Jesus Christ be pleased to renew this Image in you, and restore you to this state of light, you shall have a sweeter Knowledge, ye shall have a surer Holiness, and a more lasting Joy, than Adam himself had in Paradise. The light that the second Adam giveth, is better, in some respect, than the light which the first Adam lost.

Ye shall know that which Adam never knew, the heighth, and depth, and breadth, and length, of the love of God in Christ. That which did not come within the compass of Adam's knowledge, to know what belonged to a Redeemer; but that is made known to the Saints, in whom the Image of God is renewed: Ephes. 3. 17, 18, 19. That Christ may dwell in your hearts by faith, that ye being rooted and grounded in love, may be able to comprehend with all Saints, what is the breadth, and length, and depth, and heighth; and to know the love of God which passeth knowledge, that ye might be filled with all the fullness of God. Adam knew much of the love of God, as a Creator; but now, we know the love of God as a Redeemer. This must needs be a sweeter knowledge, because this second is a greater love. The misery of the person to whom love is shown, heightneth the love. That which God, in Christ, showeth to man fallen, is love in mercy; love, joined with mercy, is greater love, therefore the knowledge of this is sweeter knowledge.

And as ye shall have sweeter Knowledge, so surer Holiness; I do not say, a purer Holiness: Adam was more pure in the state of Innocency, than any man on this side Heaven; he had no corruptions stirring in him. But surer Holiness. That Holiness which Adam had, he was capable of losing it, and did lose it. That which Christ restoreth to them, in whom this Image is renewed, it is not left to their own keeping, He himself keepeth it for them, and no man shall take them out of his hand, Joh. 10. 28. They shall never perish, neither shall any man pluck them out of my hand. As it fareth sometimes with a man that hath broke his leg or arm, if he light upon a good Surgeon that setteth it well again, the arm or leg is stronger, than before the breaking of it; and we say, He fell into the hands of a good Surgeon. So, we were broken in Adam, but we have by Christ a stronger Holiness, than we had at first.

And so you shall have a more lasting Joy, than you could have in the first Adam: It was a joyful state, as ye have heard, but how long endured it? The Psalmist saith, Sorrow endureth for a night, but joy cometh in the morning. Here, joy endured for the morning, and sorrow came at evening. Some think, Adam did not stand in his integrity a whole night; sure, he did not stand long, but lost his joy presently. That joy which is given, to whom this Image is renewed, is such, as no man or devil can take from them: Joh. 16. 22. You all shall rejoice, and your joy shall no man take from you. Bernard saith, Gaudium est in fine, sed Gaudium sine fine. It shall be joy in the end, but it shall be a joy without end; which Adam's was not. This is the General Use.

There is another more Particular, that is to such, as are restored to this Image of God, and a new state of life, from which Adam fell, that they might walk as children of the light. How is that? The Exhortation ye have, Ephes. 5. 8. Ye were sometimes darkness, but now are ye light in the Lord; Walk as children of the light. That is, Walk knowingly, walk piously, walk cheerfully; for light includeth all these three.

Hath Christ restored you to what ye fell from?

First then, Walk knowingly, have a care to see your way before you; whatsoever ye do, it upon warrantable and good grounds; take up no Opinion upon trust, follow no Principles, without a warrant from the Scripture: He that walketh in darkness, faith Christ, Joh. 12. 35. knoweth not whither he goeth. And so, Prov. 4. 19. The way of the wicked is as darkness, they know not at what they stumble. So long as a man is in the dark, he knoweth not whither he goeth, nor at what he stumbleth; he reeleth sometimes this way, and sometimes that way, runneth his head against a post, or falleth into a ditch, into this error, or that. He stumbleth now upon a mad Principle, and then upon a bad Principle, because he knoweth not whither he goeth. In the dark there is no discerning of colors, all things are alike fair. So it is with men in the state of unregeneracy; there is no difference between civility and grace, between formality and truth, between faith and fancy. He that will walk as a child of light, must discern of things that differ; for, It is light that maketh manifest:

Secondly, As he must walk knowingly, so Piously: Put on (saith the Apostle) the armor of light, and let us walk honestly as in the day, Rom. 13. 13. Would you know how? Cast your eyes upon Ephes. 5. 8, 9, 10. Walk as children of light. For the fruit of the Spirit is in all goodness, and righteousness, and truth; proving what is acceptable to the Lord. This place showeth you, that the light of holiness, which is in the souls of the Saints, it is a Prolificall Light, which bringeth forth fruit: Walk as children of the light. For the fruit of the Spirit is in all goodness, and righteousness, and truth. It is the light of the Sun that begeth creatures, which the light of a Candle doth not. Many Creatures have no other father, but the Light, as Philosophers say, Putredo mater, Sol pater; Putridity is the mother, and the heat of the Sun, that is the father of them. So it is with all inferior Lights, they are like the light of a Candle; the natural light of Reason, and the utmost improvement of natural abilities; this light, make the best of it, till it come to be supernatural, and to have infusion from Christ, it hath no quickening power in it, it will not reform a man's life, it begets no work truly good. Whereas the light of Holiness, like the light of the Sun, it engenders, and bringeth forth good works: The fruit of the Spirit is in all goodness.

Then there will be a proving of what is acceptable to the will of God. Men will not go blind-fold to work, but will prove what is acceptable. The word in the Original is, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, which is a Metaphor taken from Goldsmiths, that prove their Mettle by the Touchstone, not by the color only, or tinnitu, by the jingling of the Mettle only; but bring it to the Test: if it will not bear that, they disallow it. Many things have a fair color to the eye, that seem good and beautiful, fit to be practiced by a Christian; and some things that sound well to the ear, as of good report in the world: but here is not enough, bring them to the Test; believe neither color nor sound, if they will not bear the touchstone of the Word; A man that walketh holily will endure the proof it.

Thirdly, He that walketh as a child of light, must walk Cheerfully, for there is a light of Joy too. Such a phrase ye have in the Psalms, Blessed is the man that heareth the joyful sound, they shall walk in the light of thy countenance. Here is now one walking as a child of light, that walketh in the light of God's countenance cheerfully and joyfully. Serve the Lord with gladness, and come into his presence with singing, Psal. 100. 2. This is acceptable to God, and creditable to Religion. God liketh it well, that his servants should walk in the light of his countenance joyfully. The Apostle telleth you, this is acceptable to God, Rom. 14. 17, 18. The kingdom of God standeth not in meat and drink; but in righteousness, and peace, and joy in the holy Ghost. He that in these things serveth Christ, is acceptable to God, and approved of men. This is one of the things wherein we must serve Christ; joyfully, in the holy Ghost. Christ doth not like to be served uncheerfully. They that make conscience of serving Christ in righteousness, and of serving Christ in peace, dare not be the Authors of division. Why do not people make conscience of serving Christ, in joy too? He that in these things, namely, in righteousness, and peace, and joy, serveth Christ, is acceptable to God, and approved of men. The Saints of God like it well, when they see men go cheerfully on in the way to heaven; otherwise, they bring a bad report upon the good Land, and make men to suspect, that the service of Christ is not so acceptable, when men walk so droopingly, that stand in relation to him. You know what Jezebel said to Ahab, who had a mind to Naboth's Vineyard; and because he could not compass it, he walked droopingly. She came to him, and said, Why is thy spirit so sad? Dost thou now govern the Kingdom of Israel, and be so sad? Implying, how ill it became a King, that hath the world at will, to walk droopingly and uncheerfully. Everyone in whom this Image is renewed, is made a King; Christ hath made him a King to God, and his Father. What! a King, and droop! One that hath such a nearness, and so near a relation to God, and yet so full of discontent! Let me yet say to every child of God, as the Apostle, Phil. 5. 4. Rejoice in the Lord always: and again I say, Rejoice. So I have now done with that Verse, In him was life, and the life was the light of men.

Vers. 5. And the light shined in darkness, and the darkness comprehended it not.

Ye have heard in what estate man was created, it was in a state of Light; and the next news ye hear is of Darkness, The light shined in darkness, and the darkness comprehended it not.

First, here we find man fallen, and Christ's demeanour [1] towards him in that estate.

Secondly, his inability to receive that light, which Christ [2] shed abroad.

Thirdly, Here is a supposition of the Fall, intimated by [3] that word, Darkness.

Fourthly, Here is a declaration, what Christ did to man [4] thus fallen; He still sendeth forth light, The light shined in darkness.

And fifthly, Here is a manifestation of man's carriage towards [5] Christ, in reference to this communication of his, And the darkness comprehended it not.

The first thing to be observed from hence, is, That Man, [Observ. 1] by his fall from the state of light, became dark, yea, darkness itself.

The second Observation is, That light from Christ hath [Observ. 2] continued to shine, ever since the Fall. The light shineth in darkness. It is something emphatically uttered; for it is not in the Praeter perfect Tense, as before; it is not, The light shined in darkness, or, hath shined: but it is, The light shineth, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 ; to show, that the light continueth to shine. There is no time since the Fall, wherein it could be said, The light shined not. This was always an approved Proposition, ever since man became dark: The light shineth in darkness.

Thirdly, We must imagine, That it is natural to man, [Observ. 3] since the Fall, not to comprehend the light of Christ. The light shineth in darkness, and the darkness comprehendeth it not.

Here ye have a supposal of Man's Fall, and a declaration, both of man's carriage towards him, and of his carriage towards Christ since the Fall. I shall but touch upon the first, which is this.

First, That Man fell from a state of light, and became dark, yea, darkness itself. Light was the life of men, by Creation, and since, the light shineth in darkness.

By darkness, understand the persons of unregenerate men; all the world, before the Lord Jesus Christ enlighteneth them savingly, with the light of life, come under this notion of darkness. Therefore Satan, who is elsewhere called, The prince of the world, is said to be the ruler of the darkness of this world; that is, of unregenerate men, Ephes. 6. 12. Ephes. 5. 6. Ye were sometimes dark, but now are ye light in the Lord; therefore ye were sometimes unregenerate, but now ye are sanctified. Ye were sometimes dark. That which predominateth, useth to give the denomination: that is the reason, why the natural man is called darkness in the abstract, because darkness hath a predominancy in their minds. As, when a man is extremely vicious, we call such a man, Vice: Non est invidiosus, sed invidia; He is not envious, but envy and malice itself. Non est vitiosus, sed vitium; He is not vicious, but vice itself. The Papists call the Pope, of Holy His Holiness, in the abstract, because they would have the world to believe him to be exceeding holy. Dark, in the abstract, is exceeding darkness, in regard of the dominion of a threefold darkness: the darkness of Ignorance, opposed to the light of Knowledge; the darkness of Sinfulness, opposed to the light of Holiness; the darkness of Misery, opposed to the light of Joy. This three-fold darkness accompanieth the state of nature, even in all men, as long as they continue in it.

First therefore, that of Ignorance, Ephes. 4. 18. Having the understanding darkened, being alienated from the life of God, through the ignorance that is in them, because of the blindness of their hearts. Some natural men may have a deep reach in the things of the world, but there is a darkness upon the face of the deep, a spiritual darkness upon the deepest wits of natural men; something they know, but nothing as they ought to know, as the Apostle saith, 1 Cor. 8. 2. If any man thinketh he knoweth anything, he knoweth nothing yet as he ought to know. They may perhaps know, that God is a Spirit, but as long as they do not worship him in spirit, they know him not as they ought to know him.

Secondly, A darkness of Sinfulness lieth upon them: 1 Joh. 1. 6. If we say that we have fellowship with him, and walk in darkness, (that is, in sin) we lie, and do not the truth. He that hateth his brother is in darkness, which is an expression in that Epistle. How easily are men cheated in the dark, having bad wares put into their hands? They vent falsities instead of truths, they vent formalities instead of holiness, they put off anything to men in the dark. So, the deceitfulness of sin comes to rule over them, because they are in a state of darkness.

Thirdly, Darkness of Misery; ye shall find that called darkness, in Lament. 3. 1, 2. I am the man that have seen affliction, by the rod of his wrath; he hath put me into darkness, but not into light. Darkness there, is misery. Such is the condition of all natural men, though all be not alike sensible of it. Adam▪ no doubt, was exceeding apprehensive, after his fall, of the change of his condition; but his posterity are not so. It is in this case, as it fareth with a Nobleman, punished with banishment into a foreign country, and there forced to live in a mean condition; he himself will be exceeding sensible of his alteration, from the Court, in which he lived before, to the Cottage, in which he liveth now. But his children, that were born in that condition, would not be sensible of the misery they were in. Adam found what it was, to enjoy communion with God in Paradise, and what it was to be in a state of life; therefore his fall went to his heart. But we, that are born in a state of misery, are not sensible of it, because we know no better. Enough hath been said, to cause everyone to make haste out of the state of Nature, because it is a state of darkness. How formidable is darkness? It is said of Abraham, there fell upon him the horror of a great darkness, Gen. 15. 12. Lo, a horror of great darkness fell upon him. Darkness useth to be accompanied with horror. And so it is with Nature; and yet this darkness of nature is not formidable. How miserable would men be, if they knew their condition? how much more miserable, because they do not know it? That in Egypt was palpable darkness, which might be felt; here is that which aggravateth this darkness, it keepeth itself from being felt; men feel not their ignorance, and sinfulness, and misery. Ye know the story of Jeremiah, when he was in the dark dungeon, and his feet stuck fast in the mire; Ebedmeleck letteth down cords to draw him up: What a mad-man had he been, if he would not have fastened the cords under his arm-holes, and suffered himself to be drawn up. Yet, so are the most in the world; the Ministers of the Gospel find them dark and filthy, in a darkness of ignorance, and mire of lust: Now God, by the Ministry of his Word, letteth down cords of love, to draw them up; so senseless are men, as to refuse these offers, and there to lie and die, before they will come to Christ, that they might be saved. This being supposed, I pass that, and go to the second thing.

The Light shineth in Darkness.

Shineth, in the Present Tense, because there was no moment [Observ. 2] of time, wherein this was not true, The light shineth. The Point then is this, That light from Christ hath continued to shine in all ages, since the Fall. Look, as there are for the body two great Luminaries, which God hath made, The Sun to rule by day, and the Moon to rule by night; so are these two Luminaries for the soul, the Sun, and the Moon; the Works of God, and the Word of God: Christ, by the light of these, hath shined in all Ages, since the fall of Adam.

First, He shineth in the works of Creation and Providence, and therefore these works are said to witness for God, Act. 14. 17. Notwithstanding, he left not himself without witness, in that he did good, and gave us rain from heaven, and fruitful seasons, filling our hearts with food and gladness. The heavens have declared the glory of God, ever since they were made, and the firmaments have shown his handyworks. The beauty and bigness of those vast Bodies, show to the world, that none but the hand of a God could make them. Every creature is a kind of Professor, that readeth man a Lecture concerning God, of his Wisdom, and Power, and Goodness. Man is the Master of all the creatures, and yet man is become a Scholar to all the creatures; the Serpent may teach him wisdom, and the Dove innocence; and the Ant industry, Go to the Ant, thou sluggard, Prov. 6.

There is a light besides this, that shineth from Christ in the Word; that is called his Testimony, as the former is called his Witness, 1 Cor, 2. 1. I, brethren, when I came to you, came not with excellency of speech, and wisdom, declaring to you the Testimony of God; that is, the Word of God, because that testifieth what God is, and what he hath done, and what he requireth. It is true, there was not always a written Word since the Fall, but a Word there was. God revealed his Will by Visions, and Dreams, and other Intimations, in a way of Revelation to Adam, and so to Noah, and to Abraham, and to the rest of the Patriarchs. It was a Word unwritten till Moses his time. And then, as at the Creation, Light was the first thing that was made, and yet ye read of no Sun till the third day. But all the light which was scattered throughout all the great frame of the Universe, upon the third day, was gathered together, and united in the body of the Sun. So here, Truths were scattered before, now a little and then a little, by Dreams, and Revelations, and Visions; but in Moses his time, all the Truths that had formerly been revealed this way, God gathered together, and united them in a written Word; then began the Scripture, and from that time forward it hath been enlarged. After Moses, came the Prophets; after them, the Evangelists and Apostles. So as this Age enjoys the benefit of all the light, that former times have had. Thus you see it is made good, that a light from Christ hath continued to shine in all Ages, ever since the Fall. This letteth us see, that ignorant persons, in all Ages, have been inexcusable; they cannot say, but that God sent them light, more or less. Rom. 1. 20. The invisible things of him, from the creation of the world, are clearly seen, being understood by the things that are made, even his eternal Power and Godhead; so that they are without excuse. No age can plead anything for itself, by way of excuse, if it looketh not after God; and this age least of all; for Christ, who hath continued to shine in all ages, shineth out most gloriously now. They had but, as it were, the Star-light before Moses; afterwards (I will take in all that under Moses too) it was but a Star-light in comparison. In John the Baptist's time, they had, as it were, the light of the morning peeping out; he was the Lucifer, the Morningstar, that came before the Day. Then came the Day-spring from on high to visit us, the Lord Jesus Christ himself, in the Ministry of the Gospel, he being both the Subject and the Preacher of the Gospel. Then, the Sun arose, and so the light shined more and more to the perfect day. He sent forth his Apostles, and endowed them with infallibility of spirit, And the holy men writ, as being moved by the Spirit of God. So as in the ages since, God hath been pleased to make good that, which was Prophecied of old, by Isaiah first, and afterwards by Habbakuk, The time shall come, when the earth shall be filled with the knowledge of the Lord, even as the waters cover the sea, Isa. 11. 9. Former times had but poor Ebb-tydes, in comparison; there are now Spring-tydes since the coming of Christ into the world. The earth is full of the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea.

You may see, if you will, a little, by what degrees Light came in: Heb. 1. 1. God revealed himself 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 , in several ways, and at several times: 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 , by piece-meals, in many parts, which the word implieth.

As for instance, He first made known to Adam, that he would send Mankind a Mediator, that should be born of a Woman; there is the light with him, The Seed of the Woman shall break the Serpent's head. And that manifestation goes no further. After, cometh a further light, that is to Abraham, where he telleth him, In thy seed shall all the nations of the world be blessed. And to him is given Circumcision, as a seal of this covenant of Grace. A further light came in Jacob's time, and discovered the time when Shiloe should come into the world, Gen. 49. 10. After him, the Prophetical Office of Christ is revealed to Moses, A Prophet liketo me will God raise up to you, of your brethren, him shallye hear, Deut. 18. 18. Then cometh in another Sacrament, the Passover, and all the Ceremonial Law, which was the Jews Gospel; everything there pointed at Christ. Afterwards clearer manifestation still: Isaiah telleth you, what kind of Mediator he shall be, not descended of a pompous way, but as a man of sorrow. He telleth you of whom he shall be born, A Virgin shall conceive and bear a Son. Micah telleth you the very place where he shall be born, Thou Bethlehem, out of thee shall come forth to me, him, that shall be the Ruler in Israel, Mich. 5. 2. And so by degrees light came in. How much is this Age of the world bound to God, for the enjoyment of all the light of former Ages; so as if still we are ignorant of Christ, we are of all men most inexcusable. It was but a little that our forefathers enjoyed, in comparison. Look but back a few years to Henry the Eighth's time, and to Queen Mary's days; the Protestants then had but little light, in comparison of what they have now.

As it is in Reason, our Reason should answer our Light; so it is in Nature, when the Sun appeareth at noon-day, then it is hottest. Naturalists say, Calor & Lux concrescunt, Light and heat increase together. But alas, notwithstanding the light in our heads, what a coldness is there in the most of our affections? Let me say this to you, Our fathers, in those days, they walked to Heaven, as it were, by Candlelight: But Oh! if we shall now post to Hell by daylight, What will become of us? how inexcusable will our guilt, and insupportable will our condition be? I have done with the second Observation, The light shineth in darkness. It followeth,

The Darkness comprehended it not.

The Point from hence is this, That it is natural to man, [Observ. 3] since the Fall, not to comprehend the light of Christ. The Apostle speaketh in plain terms, 1 Cor. 2. 14. The natural man perceiveth not the things of the Spirit of God, for they are foolishness to him; neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned. It is not with this Metaphoricall light; as it is with the Natural; the natural light scattereth the darkness where it cometh: Let the Sun arise, Darkness giveth way. But here, the Metaphoricall darkness will not give way; that resisteth the light when it cometh, and prevaieth against it. Thus, in St. John's language, It comprehendeth it not. Job 24. 13. These are they that abhor the light, they know not the ways thereof, nor abide in the paths thereof. They are of those that rebel against the light. For the light that shineth in the works of God, darkness comprehendeth it not. God hath gloriously appeared in the works of Creation, but with what issue? 1 Cor. 1. 21. Seeing the world by wisdom knew not God, in the wisdom of God, it pleased God, by the foolishness of preaching, to save them that believe.

There was a great deal of wisdom appeared in the works of Creation, In wisdom hast thou made them all, saith the Psalmist, of the works of God; and yet the world by wisdom knew not God. All that appeared of God by the creatures, could not bring man to a taking knowledge of him. Therefore you see, God is put upon another way of saving man, (viz.) The foolishness of Preaching, as this place telleth you. Something men did apprehend of this light, but they comprehended it not fully: The light shineth in darkness, but the darkness comprehendeth it not.

Again, This light shineth in another light, a better and higher light, The light of the Word. How speedeth that? Why, darkness comprehendeth not that neither. See what the Prophet Hosea saith of the Law, Hos. 8. 12. I have written to them the great things of thy Law, but they were counted as a strange thing. If a Master shall deliver his will to his Servant, he expecteth obedience if he do but speak the word; but if he should give the servant his mind in writing, then he taketh it extremely ill, if the errand be not done, the servant's neglect is inexcusable. God hath not only declared his will, manifested his Law, but written his Laws; and they were counted as a strange thing, people regard them no more, than if they were things that nothing concerned them, strange things, which they had nothing to do withal.

It may be, the Gospel had better entertainment, surely It deserved better: Why, no; Darkness comprehended not the light of the Gospel neither: Rom. 10. 16. They have notall obeyed the Gospel, for Isaiah saith, Lord, who hath believed our report? Isaiah complaineth, Paul complaineth, both in the same words, Who hath believed our report, or to whom is the arm of the Lord revealed? Not, but that some did entertain the Gospel in all ages; but that doth not invalidate the truth of the Point, because it was not by Nature that they did it, but by an over-powering work of Grace. The darkness is said, not to comprehend it, because there were very few in all ages that entertained the Gospel, in comparison of them that refused it. It is said by John, What he hath seen and heard, that he testifieth, and no man received his testimony. None? Yes, some received his testimony; the Apostles, and the Virgin Mary, in those days received it; yet it is said, No man received it: that is, few, or none, in comparison. Thus, in all ages, though the light did shine in darkness, yet the darkness comprehended it not. If so, let not Ministers be discouraged to find it so at this day, It is bred in the bone, and it will never out of the flesh. It is natural with man so to do, not to comprehend the light, though it shine upon him never so clearly. If Isaiah complaineth, and Paul complaineth, Who hath believed our report? what wonder is it, if Ministers have the like occasion to complain nowadays? Are they more Evangelical Preachers than Isaiah? and more wise than Paul? Nay, did not Christ himself complain, I have spent my strength in vain? they are his words, Isa. 49. 4. Yet, if any such be here, let me speak to them for encouragement, If thou art a Minister of Christ, imitate Christ, continue to let thy light shine, though the darkness comprehend it not; so did Christ. As a late faithful Minister said, If men repent not upon my Preaching, however, it shall not repent me that I have preached to them: though my Doctrine be not a sweet savor of life to them, I myself shall be a sweet savor to God, even in their damnation. I have done with this Verse, and pass to the next that followeth.

Vers. 6. There was a man sent from God, whose name was John.

Vers. 7. The same came for a Witness, to bear witness of that Light, that all men through him might believe.

The Evangelist beginneth to confirm, what before he had asserted, namely, That the light of man was originally in Christ, and derived from him, the true Light: And this he doth by the testimony of John the Baptist, whom he describeth here,

1. From his Nature, There was a man.
2. From his Calling, sent from God.
3. From his Name, whose name was John.
4. From his Office, The same came for a witness, to bear witness of that Light, that all through him might believe.

In all likelihood, some of these are hid in this very term of Man. There was an opinion amongst the Jews, that there should come some Angel to be the Fore-runner of the Messias, which was grounded upon that place in Malachi, Mal. 3. 4. Behold, I send my Messenger, and he shall prepare thy way before thee. The same word signifieth both Messenger and Angel. Therefore they looked for an Angel to come, before the Messias came. When John the Baptist came, Men that understood what Circumcision was, and saw him circumcised; men that considered the austerity, and strangeness of his course of life, began to imagine, there was something in him more then man: They knew not what to make of him, as ye may see by their questions, Joh. 1. 21, 22. When they had heard him say, I am not the Christ, they asked him, What then? Art thou Elias? He answered, No. Art thou that Prophet? He said, No. Who art thou, that we may give an answer to them that sent us? What sayest thou of thyself? He telleth them what he was. There was a man sent from God whose name was John.

Let us not pass it without some Observation, namely, That God hath ordained the ministry of men to be used amongst [Observ.] men. An Observation of some use, and worthy of our consideration. It is the great Ordinance of God, that men should teach men, that men should bear witness to Christ. And this God hath done, partly in respect to his own Glory, and partly in respect to our Necessity.

First, Partly in respect to his own Glory, which ye have the Apostle clearly telling you, 2 Cor. 4. 7. God shineth in our hearts, to give the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ. But we have this treasure in earthen vessels, that the excellency of the power might be of God, and not of us. If God should teach men by Angels Language, Creatures more noble than themselves, the Messengers would go near to shame them they are sent to. But God hath put treasures purposely into earthen vessels, that the excellency of the power might be of God, and not of us. Poor earthen vessels, crasie men! a feavour cometh, and breaketh the earthen vessel in pieces. Such is the best of men, earthen vessels. Yet, how much treasure doth God put into some of them, whom he intends to make instruments for his glory? Why? That the excellency of the power may be of God. It is God's carriage to make use of weak vessels, that the praise may be for himself. As men that have a Jewell, they put it into a box of Crystall, that it may be seen through the Case, that the radiancy of the Jewell may appear through the transparency of the Glass. So, God putteth his Word into earthen vessels, that the excellency of the power may appear through the meanness of them: He therefore purposely maketh choice of such Instruments. If the Devil be to choose an instrument to work by, he will commonly choose one of the subtlest, some cunning-pated man, some Machiavel, to be his instrument; if he choose another creature, it shall be a Serpent. But, when God chooseth, when God hath a mind to confute Balaam, What creature doth he choose? An Ass, the silliest of all the creatures, because he would have his power to appear, in the simplicity and silliness of the instrument. That is one reason, He doth it in respect to his own Glory.

Secondly, In respect to our Necessities. The truth is, we were not able to bear the Ministry of Angels, much less to hear God himself speaking to us from heaven. It was the usual preface of the Angels, when they appeared to men, Fear not, Fear not; because their very appearing was always formidable to them that had Visions. Ye know the story of Manoah's wife, and Zacharias, and the Virgin Mary herself; they could not bear the presence of God without horror. Therefore the Israelites said to Moses, Speak thou to us and we will hear, but let not God speak to us, lest we die. Therefore he is graciously pleased to make choice of men, to speak to us by them, that are flesh and blood like ourselves. Let us learn, not to despise this Ordinance of God, to content ourselves with it; not to talk of voices from heaven, when God hath ordained the voices of men, like ourselves, to be the instruments of our conversion. There is a voice indeed, but what voice? the voice of the Teacher, Isa. 30. 20, 21. Yet shall not thy Teachers be removed into a corner anymore, but thine eyes shall see thy Teachers, and thine ears shall hear the word behind thee, saying, This is the way, walk in it: Namely, the Word from the mouth of the Teacher. It is true indeed, there is a motion made, Luk. 16. of sending of some from the dead to teach the living; but the motion was made in hell, it was the motion of the Rich man in hell, to desire of Lazarus, that he would beg of Abraham, to send somebody from the dead. God hath put this treasure in earthen vessels, that the excellency of the power might be of him, and not of us.

There was a Man sent from God.

His Calling next offereth itself. That is a main thing, a thing that the men of God have been careful to make good; they first-showed their Commission, before they began their business, for the most part: Isaiah telleth you of a Coal from the Altar, wherewith his lips were touched. And Jeremiah telleth you, how God touched him with his hand. And Paul telleth you, in every beginning of his Epistles, Paul an Apostle of Jesus Christ, by the will of God. And so St. Luke the Evangelist telleth you, John was a man sent from God. Then take this Observation, Such as have a [Observ.] lawful Calling to the Ministry, are sent from God. Howcan they preach except they be sent. Ye know the Gradation, Rom. 10. How can they call upon him on whom they have not believed? and how can they believe if they have not heard? and how shall they hear without a Preacher? and how can they preach except they be sent? The Ministers are Christ's Ambassadors, We are Ambassadors of God, and beseech you, as sent from God. Let men so account of us, saith the Apostle, as the stewards of God, dispencers of the mysteries of God, 1 Cor. 4. 1. Shall any man thrust himself into a Nobleman's house, to be his Steward, that hath not a calling to it? Let no man take this honor upon him, but he that is called of God.

Three things concur to a lawful Calling.

- 1. Ability.
- 2. Inclination.
- 3. Separation.

First, Ability. It is not every man's work to be a Witness of Christ, in such a way as John the Baptist was, in a way of Office. He that is Un-gifted, I dare be bold to say, he is Un-sent. 2 Tim. 2. The things that thou hast heard of me amongst many witnesses, the same commit thou to faithful men, who shall be able to teach others also. Ability fitteth men. It is not enough for a man to be godly, but he must be able to teach others. Not that there is the same measure of ability required of all: God proportioneth men's gifts and parts, to the places he calleth them to. Ye shall have a Skiff do as well in a River, as a larger Vessel, perhaps better. God giveth ability, suitable to the places he calleth men to, when they are sent of God.

Secondly, There must be Inclination to that, above all other works, that must go to make a true Calling. 1 Pet. 5. 2. Feed the flock of God which dependeth upon you, taking the oversight thereof not of constraint, but willingly. There must be a willingness as well as skill; not for filthy lucre, but out of love to Christ, whose sheep the Minister is sent to feed. Peter, lovest thou me? Feed my lambs. Lovestthou me? Feed my sheep. God is my record, saith Paul, how much I long after you all in the bowels of Jesus Christ. And, My hearts desire is, that Israel might be saved.

Thirdly, To all this, there must go a Separation. Act. 13. 2. As they ministered to the Lord, and fasted, the holy Ghost said, Separate me Barnabas and Saul, for the work whereto I have called them. Here is a Calling, but it is with a Separation, which is sometimes made immediately by God himself, so Paul was called from heaven by God in Christ; and sometimes mediately by the ministry of men, so Titus was called by Paul, and others by Titus, For this cause left I thee in Crete, to ordain Elders in every City, as I had appointed thee Tit. 1. 5. Now, that the Man in the Text, John, was sent of God, it appeareth in all these three respects: he had Ability, and Willingnesse, and Separation to the work. His Ability and Willingnesse, both appear in that expression, which Christ himself giveth of him, Joh. 5. 35. He was a burning and a shining light. Shining, in regard of his ability; burning, in regard of his zeal and desire to do good to the souls of men. And for his Separation, he had an immediate Call by God himself, in an extraordinary way, Luk. 3. 2. Annas and Caiaphas being the high Priests, the word of God came to John the son of Zachariah in the wilderness. As it was wont to do to the Prophets of old, who were extraordinarily called to that service. Thus ye see, why a Man, and in what respect, he was sent of God.

I come now to insist upon the Duties, that concern People from hence.

First, Seek God, in case you want Ministers; for they must be of his sending. The Stars, they are in Christ's right hand, and therefore they set in one place, and rise in another, even as he disposeth and appointeth them. This lesson Christ teacheth you, Matth. 9. ult. Pray the Lord of the harvest, that he would send forth Laborers into his harvest.

Secondly, Bless God in case you have them, for they are tokens sent from Heaven. Hezekiah thought himself exceedingly honored, that the King of Babylon should send him Ambassadors: What an honor is it then for people, to have a Minister sent from God? It is an act of high expression, The Lord God of their fathers sent to them by his Messengers, rising up betimes, and sending, because he had compassion upon his people.

Lastly, Entertain them as men sent from God. Trample not the gifts of God under your feet. The Galatians had learned this, and accordingly Paul saith of them, Gal. 4. 14. My temptation which was in my flesh ye despised not, but received me as an Angel of God, even as Christ Jesus. Remember, they are Messengers, and let them have their errand; give them audience, and then give them dispatch. The errand God sends them about, is, to stir men up to repent and believe. No more of that point.

There was a man sent from God, whose name was John.

He is here named, to add some honor to his testimony, because he had this name imposed upon him by the Angel, before he was born; which is an honor done to few in Scripture, Luk. 1. 13. The Angel said to him, Fear not, Zachariah, thy prayer is heard, and thy wife shall bear a son, and thou shalt call his name John. It is the rather added, because of the sense of the name, which is from Jochen, which cometh of Chen, which signifieth Grace, The grace of God, which the name importeth. And it well became that person: both because he was given to his parents as a favor from God, for Elizabeth was barren, they were both old, and had no children; God giveth them John, as an act of grace and favor to them. And because he was to be a Preacher of the grace of God in Christ; therefore he carrieth grace in his name, because he came to point at the Lamb of God, that came to take away the sins of the world. Because he was endowed with grace from the womb, yea, and in the womb, therefore might well have the name of the grace of God given him then, before he was born. Or, because he himself received a great deal of grace and favor from God, even in that which he was sent about, to be the Fore-runner of Christ. The voice of one crying in the wilderness. Here is the Voice, the Fore-runner of the Word. John was the Morning-star, which was the fore-runner of the Day. As the break of day is the fore-runner of the rising-Sun; so was he of the Sun of Righteousness. As it is in Trees, the blossom is the fore-runner of the fruit; and by the sweetness of the blossom, the expectation of man is raised to look for deliciousness in the fruit. So were men's expectations raised, to look for something in John more than in others, because of his grace and favor with God. I I go on.

The same came to bear witness of the Light, that all men through him might believe.

Here ye have his Office described to you directly, from the proper Act of it, and the End of it.

The proper Act, He came to bear witness of the Light.

There are two special ways of bearing witness to Christ, the one by Teaching, the other by Suffering.

First, By Teaching Christ. And thus all the Apostles were his Witnesses, Act. 26. 16. Arise and stand upon thy feet, for I have appeared to thee for this purpose, to make thee a minister and a witness; even a Witness and Minister to teach Christ.

Secondly, there is another Witness-bearing, that is, by Suffering for Christ, sealing his witness with his blood; and those are properly called Martyrs, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 is the Greek word, that signifieth Witness. This name is given to Antipas under that notion, Rev. 2. 13. I know thy works, and where thou dwellest, even where Satan's feat is; and thou holdest fast my name, even in those days wherein Antipas was 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, my faithful martyr and witness. Now John the Baptist bore witness to the truth, in both these ways, in Teaching Christ, and in Witnessing too, in Suffering for him, he was beheaded; and so there was something of Martyrdom in his death. The Observation from hence is this, That men sent from God, as John was, will bear witness to the Light, as John did. God and Christ never left themselves without witness, God hath not left himself 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, (saith Paul to the men of Lystra, Act. 14. 17.) without witness, in that he giveth rain and fruitful seasons. As he hath witnesses in his works all the world over. So, Christ hath not left himself without a witness in his Word, ever since there was a written Word in all ages. The Fathers before the Flood, the Patriarchs after the Flood, the Prophets after them, under the Law; the Apostles under the Gospel; they all bare witness to the Light. Noah, he received the doctrine of the Gospel from the Fathers before the Flood, and transmitted it to the Patriarchs after him; and him ye will find called by the name of a Preacher of righteousness, 2 Pet. 2. 5. He spared not the old world, but saved Noah the eighth person, a Preacher of righteousness. The very righteousness of Faith, which we preach in these days, Noah preached in those, sent forth by the Messiah to come, and righteousness to be by him. And after him, cometh Moses the Law-giver. And whom does he bear witness unto? Surely, to Christ, as it is clearly said in John; He bore witness to me, saith Christ, Joh. 5. 46. There is one that accuseth you, even Moses, inwhom ye trust. For had you believed Moses, you would have believed me, for he wrote of me. After him, came the Prophets, and witnessed of Christ. After them, the Apostles, Act. 1. 8. Ye shall be witnesses to me, both in Jerusalem, and in all Judea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost parts of the earth. So they all witnessed to the light, though not all with the same clearness, As, a Light carried in the midst of a company of men, they that go before the light see something of it, but not so much as they that come after. The Fathers, Patriarchs, and Prophets, they went before the Light, and so saw things less clearly; the Apostles, they came after it, and so are able to speak more distinctly of his Passion and Resurrection, and the things that concerned him. So as, to this day, it is the work of God, that Ministers should bear witness to the Light; therefore they are called Witnesses, Revel. 1. that is the name given to them, that publish the truth of the Gospel, against the incroachments of Antichrist. They are called two Witnesses, two Olivetrees, two Candlesticks. But two Witnesses, to import, that those that bear witness to the light in the days of Antichrist are but few, if ye compare them with them that went the wrong way. And yet, two Witnesses, that is, a sufficient number in all ages, to hold forth the truth, because two witnesses would serve to give testimony under the Law, In the mouth of two or three witnesses shall the truth of everything be established. Though but two, yet two in the worst times. And thus, Two Olive-trees, because God, by them, conveyeth the oil of grace into the hearts of his people. And two Candlesticks, because they hold forth the light of the truth.

Now, this may serve as a touch-stone, to discern between true and false Churches, and true and false Ministers. They that are sent of God, they bear witness to the light, they set up Christ in their Ministry; they are content themselves to stand in the crowd, and to lift up Christ upon their shoulders; content, not to be seen themselves, so Christ be exalted. They lift him up, as the Serpent of old was lifted up upon the Pole, in the Wilderness. Men, in this respect, are like Trees, that receive their influence from Heaven, and raise up their tops towards heaven in a way of acknowledgment, whence they had their growth. Men sent from God, and having received all from Christ, return all to Christ in their dispensations.

But now, look into false Churches, for instance, that of Rome: Popery is, in effect, nothing else, but an under-hand close witness-bearing against Christ. Antichrist opposeth Christ in all his Offices; under show of witnessing for him, he doth indeed witness against him, both as King, and Priest, and Prophet.

As King, because the Pope maketh himself the Head of the Church, which is proper only to Christ. One that sat in that Chair, was not afraid to call himself, Sponsum Ecclesiae, the Husband of the Church.

As Priest. In that Office to which belongeth Satisfaction and Intercession, see how they go against Christ, who offered himself once for all; their Priest must offer him up daily in the Mass, and unbloody Sacrifice. So in his Intercession, they bear witness against him too, because they join other witnesses with him (as they acknowledge them) Saints.

As Prophet. In that Office, they add Traditions to the Word; and the Council of Trent saith, they are to be received, eâdem devotione, with the same devotion, that Scripture is to be received with. This touch is but by the way, to fill your hearts more and more with detestation, against that way of Popery. If it be a dangerous thing for a man to bear false witness against his Neighbor, What is it then to bear false witness against his God?

Now the End why he was sent, is, That all men through him might believe.

There is no more in the Original, but, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, That all might believe; but [men] is put in into the Translation. How should all men be saved by John's Ministry, if it did not extend itself to all men? His Ministry was confined to the Land of Judea, he preached only to the Jews. Therefore Men not being in the Text, certainly the universal term is to admit of some restraint. I shall interpret it unto you, in that of Matth. 21. 26. which is something parallel, where the debate was concerning the Baptism of John, Whether from heaven, or of men. If we shall say, From heaven, he will say to us, say they, Why did ye not then believe him? But if we shall say, Of men, we fear the people; for all hold John as a Prophet. What, All the world? No, there were millions, and millions of millions, that never heard of John. But, All that were acquainted with his Ministry, they all held him as a Prophet. That all through him might believe, that is, All his hearers. All believe, and, through him: not, in him, as the Object of their faith; but, through him, as the Instrument of their faith. That all. The meaning is, That all his hearers, through him, might believe in Christ. Through him, but In the other. You have it clearly expressed, Act. 19. 4. John verily baptized with the baptism of repentance, saying to the people, That they should believe on him which should come after him; that is, on Jesus Christ. Here is through whom, and on whom; through John the Baptist, and on Jesus Christ. John the Baptist's Office was, to make a way for Christ. As the custom is amongst great Princes, when they are to go to any place, they send before them their Harbingers to prepare the way, to tell the people who it is, that cometh to them, and what is expected at their hands, Gen. 45. Joseph, when he was advanced, and went in the streets, a man went before him, crying, bow the knee, And so Hester 6. There was a man went before Mordecai; and proclaimed before him, What shall be done to the man, whom the King delighteth to honor? So it was done to Christ by John, And so shall it be done to him, whom God delighteth to honor, To the Mediator, whom God delighteth to seal. He came, thus preaching Christ, that all hearers might believe through him in their Stations: which affords us this observation, That the end of good Ministers witness-bearing to the light, is, that all the hearers through them might believe in Christ.

That was the end of the Prophets-Ministry in the place afore cited, Acts 10. 43. To him give all the Prophets witness, that, through his Name, whosoever believeth in Him, should receive remission of sins. That was the end of the Apostles both Preaching, and Writing, Joh. 20. ult. These things are Written that ye might believe, that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God, and that ye might have life through his Name, That is the end of our Ministry to this day.

Me-thinks, Our work is something like that of Abraham's servant, when he was sent to get a Wife for his Master's son. He goeth on his errand, and telleth them of the family he came to, and where he found Rebecca, that his Master was a great potent Prince, that he had an only son Isaac, whom he made heir of all his Estate, and that he was sent on purpose to persuade Rebecca to come over, and be espoused to this son. Such is our work: we are sent to woo souls for Christ. We tell you, What God is, and how glorious in himself, and all his attributes; and that he hath an only Son, the Son of his Love, the Lord Jesus Christ, who is the heir of all things, The Father hath committed all judgment to the Son; And our errand is, to beseech you, to go over, and leave your own father's house, and forsake all your lusts, and worldly Correspondencies, and be married to this Jesus. This is the end of our Ministry, to persuade men to believe in Christ; because we know, there is no other Name under Heaven, by which we can be saved, Acts 4. 12. Neither is there salvation in any other, No, there is no other Name given under Heaven, by which men must be saved.

We might tell you, as they do in the Church of Rome, of Pardons, Indulgences, and Pilgrimages; but this is, but to still Children with rattles. We might tell you of your own works, of praying, and reading, and giving of Alms: but this is, but to send you to Hop•er, and Arpad, the Rivers of Damascus; for there is no salvation to be had, but by Him. Therefore the end of our Ministry is, that all might believe in him; because, As there is no other Name but his, by which we must be saved; So no other way to lay hold upon him, but by believing. The just they live by faith. The Righteousness of God is revealed from faith, to faith. Ye know how it was with the Woman in the Gospel, that came to Christ in the crowd, and got healing from him. No question, in such a crowd, many touched Christ, (for He was in the midst of the throng) as well as that Woman. But none received healing, but that woman, because she believed, that if she could but touch him, she should be healed. So it is here, There is a crowd of Professors, that seem to come to, and follow after, Christ; but none receive healing, but those that believe indeed; and to them cometh a healing virtue. Well then, if this be the end of all Ministers witness-bearing; that through them their hearers might believe in Christ.

First, learn from hence, to look at these Ministers, as public blessings: here is one, John the Baptist, A man sent from God, that all through him might believe. All that were within the compass, and reach of his Ministry, if they were not wanting to themselves, might be the better for him. That all through him might believe.

It is no small matter, this, whatsoever people may make of it, the Apostle happily setteth a high price upon it. All are yours, who? in the first place, whether Paul, or Apollos, or Cephas. He reckoneth up the Minister as a great part of their goods there. Ephes. 4. 11, 12. speaking of the Ascension of Jesus Christ, and setting Him forth as a great Prince, he telleth you, what gifts He gave. Princes are wont in the days of their Coronation, to give largely to their Subjects, Christ was Ascended, and Crowned with Glory, He led Captivity Captive, and was in his Triumph, He ascended up on high, and gave gifts to men, what gifts? He gave some Apostles, some Prophets, and some Evangelists, these were gifts indeed. They were men of infallible spirits; But, he gave Pastors, and Teachers, and Ministers, for the edifying of the Body of Christ.

Secondly, seeing this is the end of their witness-bearing; learn to give heed to their Testimony, because they are sent by God, on purpose, that you through them might believe. They are Instruments, as of your faith, so of your happiness. Faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the Word of God, Rom. 10. 14. The Philosophers, make hearing the sense of Discipline. The Apostles make it, the sense of faith. Faith cometh by Hearing. Those that cry out of too much preaching, are as if they were afraid of too much faith. Faith cometh by hearing, and hearing, by the Word of God. It is the great ordinance that God hath appointed, to beget faith in the hearts of men. Unbelief came by hearing, by Eve's harkening to the Serpent. So God will have faith come by hearing, that we might beat the Devil at his own weapon. Eve heard the serpent, and was drawn aside from God. We by hearing of the Ministry of the Gospel, are brought home to God. As Calvin saith, sweetly, That, we who were deceived by the subtlety of the serpent, might be saved by the foolishness of God; (so the Scripture calleth the preaching of the Gospel) 1 Cor. 1. 21. It pleased God, by the foolishness of preaching, to save them that believe. This is not an arbitrary business, that ye may take or leave, without danger, or loss to them that teach you rightly. It must cost you dear. For out of the witnesses mouths cometh fire, to devour their Enemies, Revel. 11. 5. If any man would hurt them, fire proceedeth out of their mouths, and devoureth them. These Sermons which are so slighted at present, may be as fire in your consciences another day.

It was the manner under the Law, for the Witnesses, before a Malefactor was stoned, to lay their hands upon his head; they were the first men that stoned him, Levite. 24. 14. Bring forth him that is to be stoned without the camp, and let all that heard him lay their hands upon his head, and then let all the congregation stone him. This the Witnesses did, to make it appear, that they translated all the guilt from off themselves, and laid it where it ought, upon the head of the Malefactor. So may Ministers do, that come to be Witnesses to the Light; they may say as Paul did, I have declared to you the whole counsel of God, I am free from the blood of all men. They that have faithfully preached Christ in any place, may safely say, We have delivered our own souls, and done what in us lieth to deliver yours, if you would believe. We come to bear witness to the truth, that all men, through us, might believe. So I have done with his Office, as it is directly laid down.

Secondly, It is laid down in opposition to a false conceit, that the Jews had of John, as if he had been the Messias. To meet with this, He was not that light, saith the Evangelist here. This conceit of theirs ye shall find, Luk. 3. 15. As the people were in expectation, and all men mused in their hearts of John, whether he were the Christ or no. Now to meet with this, and to clear it, saith the Evangelist here, He was not that light. He was a light indeed, but not that light. He was, as Christ himself saith, a burning and a shining light; he said so of John the Baptist, Joh. 1. 7. He was a burning and a shining light, and ye were willing, for a season, to rejoice in his light. There may be a Candle that is not lighted; a Candle may be lighted, and burn, and yet give but a small light: But here, John was a burning light, and a shining light too. Therefore the greater wonder, perhaps, why it is said here, He was not that light. But the wonder will be over, if ye consider, that though these two are eminent lights; yet, to be that light was a farther business. John was the light enlightened, but Christ was the light enlightening: In him was light, and the light was the life of men. John had light by participation, Christ had light, and was light originally. John shined for a while, then his light was put under a candlestick, when he was beheaded; but Christ shineth forever, he hath shined in darkness, and will shine to the end of the world. John was a light, Instrumentaliter; Christ a light, Efficienter: John, Instrumentally conveyed light into others by Christ; but Christ, the light Efficienter. Who of himself, and by himself, by his own power, conveyeth light by way of infusion into the hearts of his servants. Therefore, to put the difference, it is purposely said, He was not that light. We may note from hence, That God cannot endure to have that ascribed to any man, which is proper to Christ. Therefore I will here show, Where the holy Ghost setteth himself to advance John the Baptist, yet he would not have him raised too high; he would not set him in the Throne: He doth purposely prevent all imaginations, of his deserving what is Christ's due. He was not that Light.

Look through Scripture and History in all ages: Ye shall find how ill God taketh it at the hands of men, whensoever they come to usurp anything out of the hands of Christ. As in old time, where there rose up a Seducer, an Impostor, that gave himself out to be that Star, which Balaam prophesied of, which was a prophecy of Christ; Now this fellow called himself, Ben-chomar, The son of a Star; this man professed himself to be Christ: but he was slain with thunder and lightning from heaven. And then the Jews called him, Ben cosmar, which signifieth, The son of a Lie. Ye have it said, It is the voice of God. It is proper only to God. Never man spake like this man, as they said true of Christ. But if Herod will take this to himself, when the people cry out, The voice of God, and not of man, Herod shall pay for it, it cost him his life, Act. 12. He was eaten up with worms. If ye look into the beginning of that chapter, Herod had, before this, imprisoned Peter, and slain James with the sword. God putteth up this, but if he will come to usurp what is proper to Christ, God will put it up no longer, then the worms devour him. Herod might safelier take-away the liberty of one, and the life of another, than the glory due to the Son of God. This is to be considered by them, that take too much upon them; and by them, that ascribe too much to men. Some take too much upon them, even so much, as Christ himself can take no more. It is said of the man of sin, that he sitteth in the temple of of God, as God; and some of the Popes sat down so, as Pope Martin the fourth. When the people of Cicily had given some offense to the See of Rome, and in an humble manner sent their Ambassadors to make their peace, it is frequently known in History, that those Ambassadors deprecated in these very words, Thou Lamb of God, that takest away thesins of the world, have mercy upon us. Was not this a wicked, cursed, blasphemous thing, for the man of sin to have this spoken to him? All power, saith another Pope, is given to me in heaven and in earth. It is wonderful patience, that God should suffer the man of sin so long, now he hath usurped what belongeth to Christ.

On the other side, some there are that ascribe too much to men, even that which is Christ's due, and ought to be reserved for him; as, when people, in trouble of conscience, go to this or that godly Minister, or Friend, and do expect they shall have peace spoken to them from such a mouth. Here is a great deal of dishonor done to Christ. That man, whatsoever he be, is not that light; therefore they that go with this expectation, ascribe too much to man. God, many times, sendeth men away without comfort, because they come in expectation of more than is in man: They come (as Mr. Greenham was wont to say) not as to Ministers, (who have nothing but what is derived) but as to Magicians, as if men could conjure for comfort. Who is it that hath the keys of David, that shutteth, and no man openeth; and openeth and no man shutteth? This is Christ's prerogative. If he open the conscience, all the devils in hell cannot shut it; and if he shut the conscience, all the Angels in heaven cannot open it. As for Ministers, they are Instruments through whom ye believe, yet they are but Instruments; therefore are ready to say to all men, upon such occasion, even as Peter and John said to them, when they had healed the lame man, Act. 3. 12, 13. Ye men of Israel, why marvellye at this, or why look ye so earnestly on us, as though by our own power and holiness we had made this man to walk? The God of Abraham, and of Isaac, and of Jacob, the God of our fathers, hath glorified his Son Jesus; it is He that hath done it. Look not on us, but look to Christ. We are not that Light. I conclude this, with that of the Apostle, purposely, 1 Cor. 3. 5, 6, 7. Who then is Paul, or Apollos, or Cephas? but ministers, by whom ye believe, even as the Lord giveth to every man. I have done with the declaration of John the Baptist's Office, save only for what followeth in the end of the Verse, which is nothing else but a repetition of what went before; namely, He was sent to bear witness of that Light.

Vers. 8. He was not that Light, but was sent to bear witness of that Light.

Vers. 9. That was the true Light, which lighteth every man that cometh into the world.

Let us consider what is said of this eighth Verse, He was sent to bear witness to that light. Amongst other diverse ends of Repetition in Scripture, this is one, to set on a commendation: Exod. 6. 26, 27. These are that Moses and Aaron, to whom the Lord said, Bring up the children of Israel from the land of Egypt. These are they that spake to Pharaoh King of Egypt. These are that Moses and Aaron. Here is thrice, These are they, these are that Moses and Aaron. The Repetition heightneth the Commendations. So, The same came to bear witness of that light. And, Was sent to bear witness of the light. To teach us this, That to bear witness of the light, and to testify of Christ, is a most [Observ.] honorable employment. Of all that are born of a woman, as our Savior telleth us, there was none greater than John; excepting Christ, who had not a natural generation; Matth. 11. 11. Verily I say unto you, Amongst them that are born of a woman, there hath not risen a greater than John the Baptist. This great John, the first.

What is his Employment? Certainly, so honorable a Person, must be called to some honorable service. It is, To bear witness to the light, than which, no service is more honorable: It is that, which Angels have not disdained; They, ye know, bare witness to Christ's Incarnation; they tell the shepherds, That to them is born in the City of Bethlehem, a Savior, which is Christ the Lord. And then they bore witness of his Resurrection, to women at the Sepulcher. God the Father, and the holy Ghost, thought it no disparagement to them, to bear witness to Christ; God the Father at his Birth, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am wellpleased; and at his Transfiguration in the Mount. And it is the great work of the holy Ghost, in all his negotiations to the sons of men, to testify of Christ: Joh. 15. 26. When the Comforter shall come, whom I will send to you from the Father, even the Spirit of truth; he shall testify of me. There is his work. I will not insist long upon this. Let us learn only from hence, everyone in his and her place, to bear witness to Christ; Ministers by preaching Christ, as Paul did, who desired to know nothing amongst his people, but Christ, and him crucified; therefore he is called a Chosen vessel, Paul is. But to what end? Act. 9. 15. The Lord said to him, Go thy way, for he is a chosen vessel to me, to bear my name before the Gentiles, and Kings, and children of Israel. Here is the Minister's work, to bear Christ's name before the people, like those Pitchers of Gideon, Judge. 7. earthen pitchers indeed, and so earthen vessels, as Paul calleth them; but they have a Lamp in them, and are chosen vessels to bear the name of Christ, to witness to this truth. And so, Believers, in their conference, should bear witness to Christ, by telling one another, what great things he hath done for their souls; discoursing of him, as the Disciples in the way to Emmans, their talk was of Christ. As people, when they come from Market, they tell of their penny-worths. When people come from Sermons, they speak what they have heard, and what a good bargain Christ is. All, of all sorts, are called to witness for Christ, by their living; and if they be called to it by their dying, living to him, dying for him; there is witness born to Christ both these ways. All are not, indeed, called to Martyrdom, and so to testify of Christ by their death; but all are called to Testifie of Christ by their Life. As ye read of some that professed God in their works, so some confess Christ in their lives, those that show forth the grace of Christ, as Peter speaketh, who are called out of darkness, into his marvelous Light. Those that can carry themselves meekly towards the malicious, and humbly towards the proud, they may hereby, by their Carriage, bear witness to that meekness, and humility, which they receive from Christ, as the head and fountain of it. Whosoever hath received Christ Jesus the Lord truly, he will walk in him; not only talk of him, but confess him, not only with his mouth, but his life. Here is a way of witnessing to him! That ye may be encouraged to witness for Christ, take two Considerations.

First, If we do not witness for Christ now, Christ will one day witness against us, Mal. 3. 5. I will come near to you in judgment, and I will be a swift witness against such and such sinners, as he there mentioneth. Christ himself will be a witness against us, if we be not witnesses for him, and a swift witness too. And now beloved, Consider with yourselves, what astonishment seized upon the souls of Joseph's brethren, as soon as he stepped up to witness against them, and said, I am Joseph, whom ye sold into Egypt. And yet he did this merely to inform them, and not to affright them. Who can tell the horror, and amazement, which will fall upon the souls of men, when Christ will, at the last day, say, I am Jesus, whom ye Crucified, and whom ye refused to believe, and whose Word, and Gospel, ye have trampled under your feet.

Secondly, Consider, That if we do witness for Christ, we shall have Three, witnessing for us; in whose Testimony we shall receive abundance of Comfort.

First, We shall have a witness without us, and a witness within us, and a witness above us. Without us; That is the Testimony of men, that fear God. If we witness for Christ, They will witness for us, even the Consciences of wicked men will be enforced many times to witness for us, when their words witness against us. But though they should not, yet by faith the Elders obtained a good report, Hebr. 11. 2. The Saints will have a good report amongst them that are Saints, like themselves. Jonathan will witness for David, though he incur Saul's displeasure for so doing.

Secondly, We shall have a witness within us. That, is the Testimony of our Consciences. Though there should be storms without, yet there will be a calm within. And it is the wind within that maketh the Earth-quake. And the wind within, that maketh the soul to quake. Conscience is a witness within us.

Thirdly, God is greater then our hearts. He is a witness for us: so saith Job, Job 16. My witness is in Heaven, and my Record is on high. Though men upon earth should witness against him, and though he should not at all times have the peace of his Conscience, speaking good things for him, yet he hath a witness above all, His witness is in Heaven, and his Record on high. As Augustine saith, Deus major Conscientia; & pro nostra Conscientia testator. That is one end, why God will have men witness for him, because he might have occasion to witness for them, if time serve; what a comfort is here to have him witness for us, who is our Judge, whose sentence will never Certainly go against his Testimony. I have done with that, and proceed now to another argument, which the Evangelist useth to prove, That Christ is the Fountain of Light, namely, from the effect of Illumination, general Illumination.

Vers. 9. That was the true Light, which lighteth every man that cometh into the World.

Here is both the Agent, the Act, and the Subject. The Agent, Christ, under the name of true Light. The Act, Lightning. The Subject, Every man that cometh into the World.

That was the true Light. Light ye know was the first distinct Creature that God made. And as it was the first, so it is the most Excellent of the visible Creatures, and putteth an excellency into other things. What is it that maketh precious stones and Jewels, of so much value; but because they are so light-some, above other things? The Sun, Moon, and Stars, differ one from another in glory, but all are glorious, because all Lightsome. Therefore light is fit to set forth Christ by, who is Excellently super-Eminent. He delighteth to compare himself to such things, as, to the Sun, to the bright Morning-star, to precious stones; and is often called the Light, in scripture. Only in this place, there is an Epithite given to the Light, That is, The true Light, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 . The true Light, in four respects.

- First, because Undeceiving
 - Light.
- Secondly, because Real
- Thirdly, because Underived
- Fourthly, because Supereminent

First, The true light, because undeceiving, in opposition to false, and deceitful. In that sense, ye find the word used by Joseph's brethren, when they came into Egypt, and were taken for spies, Gen. 42. 11. Joseph had said, ye are spies; to see the nakedness of the Land, ye are come. No, say they, we are all one Man's sons, we are true men, thy servants are no spies. True, in opposition to deceitful. So Christ is called the true light, in opposition, to all the false lights of the Gentiles. They had their Idols, and Balaam's. And so all natural men to this day have their Lights, but they be false ones. The natural man's light is, the Ignis fatuus. It is lightsome indeed, but he that followeth the light of it, is lead into ditches, and bogs, such is false light which the Creatures afford, it leadeth to sorrow. Man may hope for cheering, but he shall lie down in sorrow for all that, Isaiah 5. ult. Behold all ye, that kindle a fire, and compass yourselves about with sparks, walk in the light of your fire, but ye shall lie down in sorrow, because these are deceitful lights. But Christ is the true Light, because, whosoever followeth him, is lead to everlasting happiness, Joh. 8. 12. I am the Light of the World, he that followeth me, shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of Life.

Secondly, True light, because a Real light. True in opposition to Ceremonial types, and shadows; As, true, that is, undeceiving, in opposition to the false light of the Gentiles: So, true, that is, real, in opposition to the Ceremonies of the Jews. So it is opposed to Ceremonies, 1 Joh. 17. The law came by Moses, grace and truth by Jesus Christ. Where it is commonly thought, that Grace is opposed to the Moral Law, and Truth to the Ceremonial. The Jews had their light; much light shined in Ceremonies and Types of old. But Christ was the true light, because he was the Substance of all these, Col. 2. 17. which are all shadows of things to come, but the body is Christ.

Thirdly, The true light, because underived. True is sometimes opposed to Borrowed, Communicated, Participated from another. Thus, Christ is called, The true God; and so God. The true God, in opposition, not only to Idols, that have no Deity in them; but to Magistrates, who are called gods, by derivation of their Authority from another. 1 Joh 5. 20. We know that the Son of God is come, and hath given us understanding, that we may know him that is true; and we are in him that is true, even in his Son Jesus Christ. This is the true God; but Magistrates, they are gods, but gods by derivation, and so not true gods. But Jesus Christ is the true light in this respect, because he borroweth not his light. Some of authority, they say, are light, Ye are the light of the world, Joh. 5. Ephes. 5. Ye were darkness, but now are ye light. How? Light in the Lord. Christ hath light in him. You are a borrowed light, he is an underived light; and so, The true light.

Fourthly, True, because super-eminently true, in opposition to ordinary and common. So he saith, Joh. 6. 55. My flesh is meat indeed; it is, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, truly meat: and my blood is 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, truly drink; that is, not ordinary, not common, but super-eminently meat and drink. Joh. 15. 1. I am the true Vine, not an ordinary common Vine, but a super-eminent one, because his Blood is more cherishing than Wine. And so, The true Light, a super-eminent light, more excellent than the natural light in many respects. If the natural light be cheering, why, Christ is so much more; light refresheth the eye, Christ refresheth the soul more abundantly. Doth the natural light penetrate, and search into the most secret corners? Christ doth more search into the heart and spirits of men, to discover what is hidden there. The hidden things of darkness are made manifest by light. The hidden things of God are manifested by Christ, even the great mysteries of the Gospel. Is the light of the Sun able to shine upon dunghills, and not receive defilement from them? Christ doth so much more: He searcheth into filthy hearts, and receiveth no defilement from them. Therefore the true Light, because not ordinary. What shall we learn from hence? Why, to make out after Christ, and that upon this ground, because he is the true light. Who is there, that is not desirous of light? Truly (saith Solomon, Eccles. 11. 17.) the light is sweet, and a pleasant thing it is for men to behold the Sun. Christ is light, true light. Christ is sweet, truly sweet. A pleasant thing it is for men to lay hold upon the Sun of righteousness; no true pleasure can be had anywhere else. If we find a dark room in a house, we say, This is a melancholy room. It is the saddest condition in the world, for men to want this light, nothing is worth the grieving for, in comparison of this, being out of Christ, or having lost fellowship with Christ. A sad condition it was for the Egyptians, to be three days in a palpable darkness; and for Paul and his fellows, to be diverse days and nights, without the light of the Sun, and Moon, and Stars. What is it for men and women to continue for many years, without God and Christ in the World? Suppose a room were never so full of the most curious Pictures, if there be not windows to let in light, the Pictures lose their luster: So, let men have beauty, strength, and never so good parts; all these, without the light of Christ in their souls, are neither beautiful nor lovely, nor of any worth at all.

Ye should therefore learn to thank God for this great Gift, that he hath bestowed his Son upon us, that we might not sit in darkness, but wait for him, as they that wait for the morning. Men that have most business to do, and cannot do it without light, How do they watch for the morning? Ho! the morning! ho! they cry out. Phosphore, red diem. Jesus Christ is that morning Star, and yet gave himself; therefore wait upon him for him. It is observable, that Rev. 22. 16. he calleth himself the morning-Star, I Jesus have sent mine Angel to testify these things to the Churches. I am the root and offspring of David, and the brightmorning-Star. And Rev. 2. 26, & 28. He promiseth to give the morning-Star, He that over cometh, and keepeth my word to the end, I will give him the morning-Star. What is that? I will bestow myself upon him. Other Commanders, they give their soldiers some little pay; other masters, they give their servants some little wages: But, he that overcometh, and keepeth my word, I will give him My self, I will give him the morning-Star.

That was the true Light, that lighteth every man that cometh into the World.

Some difficulty is in this Clause: therefore, for the fuller explication of it, there are two Conclusions to be cleared, and two Queries to be resolved.

First, two Conclusions to be cleared.

The first is this, That whatsoever any man receiveth, he [Conclus. 1] hath it from Christ. That was the true light, that lighteth every man. Indeed, in this sense, many take it; as if one should say, Such a Schoolmaster, he teacheth every boy in the town. This were true, though every boy in the town did not go to school. The meaning is this, That everyone that is taught, is taught by such a Master. And so, though every man, and every mothers son, should not be enlightened; yet, it may truly be said, that Christ enlighteneth every man that cometh into the world, because every man that is enlightened, hath his light from him. There is truth in that, but that is not all the truth. Thus far it is undeniable, that whatsoever light any man hath, he hath it from the Lord Jesus Christ, who is therefore called, The Sun of righteousness. The Sun, that is the well-head of light; whatsoever light is in the Moon, or Stars, or inferior Orbs, it is derived from the Sun. So, all light, whatsoever it is, it is derived from Christ. [Conclus. 2]

The second Conclusion is this, That every man and woman that is born into the world, is enlightened by Christ some way or other. Not only everyone that hath light hath light from him; but, Everyone hath some light from him. I say, everyone that cometh into the world, is some way <1 page duplicate> <1 page duplicate> or other, enlightened by Christ. But that is the importance of the expression in the end of the Text, Every man that is born into the world; therefore [every man] cannot be restrained, because born into the world is too large an expression. Every man that cometh into the world. Ye may say, What meaneth coming into the world? Joh. 18. 37. To this end I was born, and for this cause came I into the world. Born, and coming into the world, is all one. And so, dying, and going out of the world, is all one: Naked came I in, and naked shall I go out. We brought nothing into this world; namely, when we were born: and we shall carry nothing out, namely, when we die. So that man's coming into the world, is, Every man and woman that cometh by natural generation into this world, is born into it.

Come we now to resolve two Queries, of more importance.

First, Whether the same measure of light be communicated [Quaerie. 1] from Christ to all men, yea, or no?

To that, the Answer must be Negative; He doth enlighten every man that cometh into the world, but not every [Response.] man alike. To that end ye must know, there is two sorts of light, a Natural, and a Supernatural Light; and each of these comprehend three several things under it.

The Natural light, that comprehendeth the light of the Sun, the light of Reason, the light of Conscience.

First, The light of the Sun, that makes all other things visible, Psal. 74. 26. Thou hast prepared the light, and the Sun.

Secondly, The light of Reason, a natural light; In him was light, and the light was the life of men, Joh. 1. 4. where the meaning is, That the light of Reason cometh from Christ to every man.

Thirdly, The light of Conscience, which is to be found even in every man by nature, by which he is prompted to good, and taken off from evil, and able to discern between right and wrong, more or less. And thus I understand that of Prov. 20. 27. The spirit of man is the candle of the Lord, searching all the inward parts of the belly. The spirit, it is often put for conscience; The things of a man knoweth noman, but the spirit of man which is in him. Now this is called the Candle of the Lord, because it lighteth and directeth all men. We all, by our Fall in Adam, lost not only our Supernaturalls, but forfeited even our Naturalls. All the light we had, was blown out by that Fall; therefore, what we have now, we owe to Christ. The Natural light we have, it is the Candle of the Lord.

Supernatural light, that comprehendeth three things.

- The light of the Word.
- The light of Grace.
- The light of glory.

The light of the Word, Thy Word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light to my paths, Psal. 119. 105.

The light of Grace, Ephes. 1. 18. The eyes of your understanding being enlightened, that ye may know what is the hope of his calling, the riches of his glory.

The light of Glory, Col. 1. 12. He hath made us partakers of the inheritance of the Saints in light. One of these maketh way for the other, the light of the Word for the light of Grace, and the light of Grace prepareth way for the light of Glory. The light of Grace, that is the fruit of the Word engrafted; and the light of Glory, that is the crown and reward of Grace.

In all, there are six sorts of Light, three Natural, and three Supernatural. The First and Last of these, cannot be understood in the Text; the light of the Sun is the first, and the last is the light of Glory, which is not understood here. Though it may be affirmed, that the world continueth for Christ's sake. That cannot be understood here, because the Evangelist speaketh of a Sun proper to man; whereas that is common to all the world, to brute beasts as well as men; It enlighteneth every man. The last of these, the light of Glory, cannot be understood here, because no man partaketh of that, till he be gone out of the world; and, here, is light spoken of, given to them which come into the world. But the other four sorts of light that remain, they are all taken in, the light of Reason, the light of Conscience, the light of the Word, and the light of Grace. These are the several Lights that come from Christ.

But I must show you, That these are not divided amongst mankind, nor communicated in a like measure to all; that so I may answer the first Query.

It is true, That all do partake of the light of Reason, and [Resp.] the light of Conscience: but yet there is a difference, and inequality, even in that light, because Reason and Conscience are more vigorous in some, then in others. What shall we say of Infants, and of Idiots; we must say, Even these have some light from Christ, but not like to other men. Infants have the gift of Reason, though not the use of reason; that gift they have from Christ. Idiots have the use of reason in some lower degrees, I, and of Conscience too, in some lower acts, though neither Reason nor Conscience, be so vigorous in them, as in other men.

To go on. The light of the Word, that is not equally dispensed to all, as appeareth, Psal. 147. two last verses. *He shown his word to Jacob, his statutes, and judgmentsto Israel, he hath not dealt so with any Nation, as for his judgments, the Heathens have not known them. Israel had the word, when the Heathens had none. He that causeth it to rain upon one City, and not upon another, sendeth the word to one City, and Nation, and not unto another. He causeth the Word plentifully in some places to dwell, as in this City, at this day; but in other places, there is a famine of the word. So as the light of the word is not equally dispensed now amongst them, that do enjoy the light of the word. The light of grace is dispensed, but not in a way of equality. Many enjoy the light of the word, that never enjoyed the light of grace, both before, and since the Incarnation. Before the Incarnation, The Hebrews in the wilderness had the light of the word, yea, and confirmed to them by many miracles, and yet the light of grace withheld from them. Therefore, it is said, Deut. 29. 3, 4. The great temptations which thine eyes have seen, the signs, and those great miracles; yet the Lord hath not given you an heart to perceive, and eyes to see, and ears to hear unto this day. Here were means, but no grace to improve them. They had not an heart to perceive, nor eyes to see, nor ears to hear. And since the Incarnation, ye have Christ testifying, Matth. 3. 11. He answered, and said unto them, namely to his Disciples. It is given to you, to know the Mysteries of the Kingdom of Heaven, but to them it is not given; given to some, not given to others. So have you the resolution of the first Query.*

The second Query is. Whether sufficient light be given [Query. 2] to everyone, yea, or no?

Here we are to distinguish both of Sufficient, and of Light.

Sufficient, is Considerable two ways,

- First, in reference to Inexcusable,
- Secondly, in reference to Salvation.

Light is twofold.

- Convincing Light.
- Converting Light.

Now the Resolution of the Query, will lie in these two [Response.] Propositions.

- First, That Christ doth dispence convincing light, sufficient to leave everyone without excuse.
- Secondly, Christ doth not dispence converting light to everyone, sufficient to bring him to salvation.

First, Christ doth dispence Convincing light to everyone, sufficient to leave him without excuse. So much the Apostle saith: Among the heathen which had no other light, but that of nature, no other knowledge of God, but that which flowed from the works of Creation, and Providence, Rom. 1. 20. The Invisible things of him, from the Creation of the World are clearly seen, being understood by the things that are made, even the eternal power and Godhead; So that they are without excuse. If the very Gentiles had enough to leave them without excuse; then much more such, as live under the dispensation of the Gospel; because there goeth a Clearer light with the word, then doth accompany the works of darkness. As the Sun-beams discover a great deal more, then the Moon shine, because it is a stronger light; so the light of the Gospel, and Word, being stronger then the light of nature, are more convincing then the other; so as everyone, be he Jew, or Gentile, be he Heathen without the Word, or a Professor of Christianity under the word, hath light enough to convince him, and to clear God in his proceedings against him. I say, not only to convince him; but to clear the Justice of God: because there is no man that walketh up to the utmost of his Life. No man may go to God, saying, I have done all I was able to do, and therefore, I challenge a reward at thy hands. This to be sure; He hath enough to convince him, and to leave him without excuse.

Secondly, Christ doth not dispence to everyone Convertinglight, sufficient to bring him to Salvation. There is no light sufficient to bring to salvation, but that which Christ calleth the light of Life, John 8. 12. I am the Light of the World; he that followeth me, shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of Life. Every man by nature, is not only blind, but dead, dead in sins and trespasses; and therefore, must not only have life, but such a life, as may quicken him, The light of life. Indeed, if light alone will serve the turn, any kind of illumination; then, acceptation of the will, and illumination of the understanding, and moral persuasion might prevail, to bring a man to God. Hic opus est medela, suadela non sufficit. Here is need of quickening, therefore light will not serve the turn. It must be a quickenning light, that sufficeth to Conversion; This, Christ doth not dispence to everyone; for if He did, everyone would come home to Christ. No man can have possession of Christ, that is not over-powered to believe. Sufficient grace, and over-powering grace, is all one. Till a man be over-powered, he can never close with Christ for salvation, Now because, this over-powering grace is not bestowed upon everyone, therefore it is clear, that sufficient grace, the Life of light is not dispensed to everyone that cometh into the World. Without Christ no salvation, without faith, no closing with Christ. All have faith, saith the Apostle. That is, all might have faith if they would, say some, Therefore God doth to everyone give sufficient light, remotely sufficient; because, say they, He giveth them such light, as, if they would follow it, He would give them faith. This is commonly said. But I could never yet see it proved. Wheresoever there is an improvement of natural life, men say, there shall certainly be an addition of super natural discoveries of Christ, and so power to believe. If there be no such thing, the connection between the improvement of what a man hath, and the donation of what he standeth in need of, for to bring him to salvation, must depend either upon the merit of man, that doth so improve his nature, or upon the promise of Christ, that whosoever doth improve his natural abilities, shall have grace vouchsafed to him. But it dependeth upon neither of these. Therefore no such thing.

First, it doth not depend upon the merits of man, nor upon his utmost improvement of natural abilities; so long as we are out of Christ, all our abilities are but natural, they cannot deserve the grace of Christ. No creature can raise itself to an higher kind, by improving of what belongeth to it in a lower sphere. As for example. Take creatures that only have sense in them, it is possible, by art and industry, to bring them to a great exactness, in the exercise of their science; as, an Horse to dance, an Elephant to write, and a Parrat to speak; but none can bring them to Reason, because that is a thing of an higher sphere. So, take a Man, that is natural; by the improvement of nature, he may go on a great way: but he cannot, by all the improvements of nature, deserve grace at the hands of God. The Papists call this the Merit of Congruity; if a man improve what he hath, he deserveth, ex Congruo, that God should give him more. But, if so, then the heavenly Call, upon which Salvation dependeth, to such a man it will be of works, and not of mere mercy; contrary to that of the Apostle, 2 Tim. 1. 9. Who hath saved us, and called us with an holy calling; not according to our works, but according to his own purpose and grace, which was given us in Christ Jesus before the world was. Thence followeth Calling from Election, not from improvement of our abilities in our own works. Might such a man say, I am called; and why? why, according to my works and improvements. How then shall that of the Apostle, Rom. 9. 15, 16. be overthrown? I will have mercy on whom I will have mercy, and compassion on whom I will have compassion. According to this way, in the merits of Congruity, it will be of him that willeth, and runneth, and not of mere mercy. Then it cannot follow from the merits of man. But perhaps it followeth from the promise of God, That is the Arminian way. Let such a promise be produced, and how gladly will men submit to it? That which the Arminians pitch upon, is this, To him that hath shall be given; a speech of Christ, which is annexed to two several Parables, to the Parable of the Sower, and to the Parable of the Tares: To him which hath shall be given. Therefore, say they, if a man improve his Naturalls, he shall have Grace; if his Reason, he shall have Christ. But there is a great mistake in this; for the utmost that this Promise will bear, is, a reward for them in the same kind, for an improvement of what one hath, and useth aright. He that useth his natural wit aright, shall have more natural wit; he that useth his parts, shall have more parts; and he that useth his graces, shall increase his graces. And in this sense, To him that hath, shall more be given. A man may as well say, He that useth his wealth well, to him health shall be given; and he that useth health well, to him wealth shall be given; as to say, He that useth his reason well, to him grace shall be given; for here is a transition, or passing into another kind of thing; whereas the promise runneth, for the increase of a thing of the same kind. This may suffice to clear that second Quary, namely, Whether sufficient light be given to everyone. In these two Propositions, Christ doth dispense to everyone light sufficient, to leave him without excuse. Christ doth not dispense to everyone Converting-light, sufficient to bring him to Salvation. I have done with the Explication of the Point.

For the Use of it, briefly. If Christ doth thus lighten every man that cometh into the world, let us learn from hence these four Lessons.

- 1. To see Him.
- 2. To seek Him.
- 3. To serve Him.
- 4. To bless Him.

First, Learn to see Christ, and to acknowledge him in [Use 1] all the light, which we ourselves and others have, even as ye see the cause in the effect; in Christ, as the Author of all that light. When ye see men, knowing men, men of great understanding, there is much of the light of Reason; strict men, there is much of the light of Conscience; holy men, there is much of the light of Grace. Admire Christ in all these, for all cometh from him. Think, how holy, and how understanding Christ is, in whom all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge are. We are many times apt to admire men, and to overlook Christ; this should not be. Suppose a man, that were kept in a deep dungeon all his days, and were brought out at midnight, when the Moon shineth; this man would be apt, when he looketh upon the Moon, to think it to be the most glorious creature that he seeth, to be the spring of all light; for it is the most glorious creature that ever he saw. But, let him but stay till morning, when the Sun ariseth, and he will be ashamed of his mistake. If we see men that shine as the Moon, think how much more glory there is in Christ. This is the way to see him, in all the light dispensed by him to the creatures.

Secondly, We should learn hence to seek Him, for the [Use 2] increase of light; for, He is the Father of lights, so saith James, Jam. 1. 17. Every good and perfect gift is from above, and cometh down from the Father of lights. Some men are of a foolish conceit, that men derive their understandings from such Constellations at their birth, and that maketh them wise. No, it is not the light of heaven, but it is the Father of lights. It is Christ that conveyeth all understanding to men: He is not only the Author of all the light we have, but the Father of it. He is the Author of many things, that bear his Image; He is called the Father of lights, because all the light we have, hath a clear impression of the night, of and upon it, even, that of Reason, which is like Mephibosheth; it is lame, but yet it is of the Blood-Royal. There is much in the light of Reason, much more in the light of the Word, and of Conscience, and of Grace. Do we want light, as who doth not? Seek to him that is the Father of light; he is the Father of Supernatural light as well as of Natural. Seek him, but in a way of humility and sincerity; otherwise, little hope of finding him. It is an excellent speech of Bernard: saith he, Superbo oculo non videtur veritas, sincero patet; Truth is not seen by a proud eye, it openeth itself to a sincere one. Humility sitteth lowest in the School. Take out thy Lesson in the School of Christ, seek it sincerely. Painted Glasses hinder the light from coming into the room. He that will too much paint, that is, play the hypocrite, hinders the light from entering his soul. It is the sincere heart that receiveth the light of the truth.

Thirdly, Let us hence learn to serve him; for all light tendeth to some work. The Sun ariseth, saith the Psalmist, [Use 3] Psal. 104. 22, 23. and man goeth forth to his work and labor till the evening: God showeth man light to work by, and that is the end of the light; that, Christ scattereth abroad in the world, not to loiter by, but to do service with. The spirit of a man is the candle of the Lord, searching the inward parts of the bowels. Christ hath set up a candle in everyone of our hearts, not to play by, as children use to do, to play by the candle that they should go to bed by, and go to bed in the dark, when they have done. Many men misspend their time which God hath given them, and so lie down in darkness. Some men, God giveth wit to, and they employ it to the dishonor of Christ, and the reproach of the Gospel: for the true end of the light is, that we may do service. If ye give light to your servants to work by, ye expect, they should do more and better work, than they that go to work in the dark.

Fourthly, Bless him, for he it is from whom we have all our light, those four lights, I told you of. The light of [Use 4] Reason is that, that distinguisheth us from beasts; it is that, which, though it cannot find out the deep things of God, yet, when they are revealed, it may help to confirm them. As, when men go to plant a Vine, first, they take out the earth, and make way for the root; but when they have planted the Vine, they put in the earth again, and that better confirmeth the growth of the Vine. There are some kind of mysteries of faith, that a man must take away his reason before he goeth to believe them, he must not first dispute, and then believe; but when faith is once planted, lay to it reason, and it helpeth to confirm the excellency of faith itself. If so much in the light of Reason, how much more in the light of Conscience, which God hath set as a Schoolmaster in every man's bosom, to teach him, what is good, and what is evil. It is said to be a bridle to keep from evil, to restrain a man, that is to commit evil, from the evil. And for the light of the Word, it is the crown of a Nation. The Church is represented to us, Rev. 12. as a Woman, with a Crown of twelve Stars upon her head; the Doctrine of the twelve Apostles is the Crown of the Church. And the light of Grace, Peter telleth you what that is, 1 Pet. 2. 9. It is a marvelous light. Therefore may every true Convert say, Bless the Lord, O my soul, and all that is within me bless his holy name.

I now proceed to the tenth Verse of this Chapter.

Vers. 10. He was in the world, and the world was made by him, and the world knew him not.

Let me give you first the Connection of these words, and then the Explication of them, and so come to some Observations.

Look back a little into the fourth and fifth Verses, there ye shall find these three Assertions laid down by the Evangelist.

- First, That Light cometh from Christ, Light was the life of men.
- Secondly, That this Light from Christ shineth in darkness.
- Thirdly, That the darkness comprehendeth it not.

Now the Verse that followeth, serveth to make good all these three Assertions.

First, That light cometh from Christ. That is proved two ways.

First, By the testimony of John the Baptist, who was a man sent from God, to bear witness of this light.

Secondly, By the effects of general Illumination, That was the true light, which lighteth every man that cometh into the world.

Our Evangelist goeth on to prove the two other Assertions, namely these, Light shineth in darkness, and it comprehended it not.

- First, in reference to the Gentiles.
- Secondly, in reference to the Jews.

In reference to the Gentiles, in this tenth verse. He was in the World, and the World was made by Him; There is the light shining in the World. And the world knew Him not. There is the light, not comprehended of darkness.

In reference to the Jews. Light shined there in darkness, but the darkness comprehended it not, for his own received him not.

For the meaning of the words, let us take them as they lie.

He was in the World, He was present in the World.

There is a threefold presence of Christ.

- 1. A general presence
 - of Christ.
- 2. A special presence
- 3. And a singular presence

First, a general presence of Christ, by which he is with all the Creatures, preserving them, and upholding them; according to what is said, Hebr. 1. 3. Who being the brightness of his glory, and express Image of his person, hath upheld all things by the word of his power. Which is likewise spoken to, Col. 1. 17. He was before all things, and by Him all things consist. He was in the World, which He himself made, as a Carpenter is in a house, which he himself hath built. A Carpenter buildeth an house to dwell in, and then keepeth it in repair. Christ so made the World, not as to leave it, but so as to keep in it, and preserve it, as well as to make it. As suppose a man, that were both a Ship-wright, and a Ship-master: He first maketh the ship, then goeth to Sea in it himself. Christ hath so made the World, as to preserve the World, which he made; as to look after it, and everything in it. He was in the World, and the World was made by Him. These words are added, to show that he was not in the World, as part of the World, but as the Maker of it. He was not in the World, as a Creature, but as the Creator of all things. According to what the Evangelist hath taught us before, By Him were all things made, and without Him was nothing made, that was made. He was in the World, and the World was made by Him; and the World knew him not. Ye have here the World in another sense. The world in the beginning of the verse, is taken for the whole Fabric of Heaven, and Earth, as Aristotle saith, The World is a Mass, made up of Heaven, and Earth. In this sense it is said, He was in the World, the World was made by Him. Now in the latter Clause of the verse, The world knew Him not, The World there, is put for the Inhabitants of the earth, for the men of the World, Rom. 5. 12. The World, and Men, are all one. By one man's disobedience, sin entered into the World, and death by sin, and so death passed over all-Men. Here is the World, and all men. The world was made by Him, and the world, that is, the men of the world, knew him not. It is a Rule in Divinity, Verba Cognitionis, affections important, &c. Words of knowledge, import affections, and operate suitably. So, to know, carrieth more then mere speculation. When Christ is said to know us; The Holy Ghost telleth us, It is more then barely to take notice of us: It is to take care for us, Joh. 10. 14. Christ knoweth his sheep, that is, he taketh care of his Elect. And he is known of his, that is, He is served, and obeyed, and worshipped, and believed on by them. So the world knew him not, that is, the World worshipped him not, as God; The world did not own Him, and serve Him, as became their Creator. So as now, the words thus opened, The observation lieth clear before us, namely. That, notwithstanding Christ's [Observ.] being in the world, and the world being made by Him, the men of the world knew him not. Take a place, or two, to clear up this, especially in reference to the Gentiles, for to them properly it belongeth. I should have told you, that the word, World, is sometimes confined to them. If the fall of them be the diminishing of the world, and the fall of them the riches of the Gentiles. He came to his own, and his own received him not. That is, did not know him, 1 Joh. 2. 1. Therefore the world knoweth us not, because it knew not him. There is yet a clearer place, 1 Cor. 1. 21. After that, in the wisdom of God, the world by wisdom knew not God. All the wisdom the Heathens had, could not raise them to a due knowledge of God; The world by wisdom knew not God. Christ was in the world, but the world knew him not. A threefold ignorance of Christ was found in all the Gentiles.

First, They knew him not, as the second person in the Trinity.

Secondly, They knew him not, as Mediator.

Thirdly, They knew him not, as Creator, which is properly here spoken to. He made the world, and the world knew him not.

Let me run over these briefly: first, They knew him not as the second person in the Trinity; so they are said to have been without Christ, and without God in the world, Ephes. 2. 12.

speaking there of the Gentiles, saith he; At that time ye were without Christ, being aliens from the Commonwealth of Israel, and strangers from the Covenants of promise, having no hope, and without God in the World. They had the great book of the Creatures to read, but that did show them nothing of Christ, as the second person in the Trinity. Natural reason could never find out that Mystery in it self. Therefore men, when they go to find out this great mystery of the Trinity, they are at their wit's end; They might find out a God, and that he was Good, and Great, and that he was One: but to find out a Trinity of Persons, a Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, This they could not. Take a curious piece, a well drawn Picture, he that seeth it may be able to say, that he that drew it, was a skillful, and exact Painter. But whether an English man, or a Spaniard, or a Dutch man, or an Italian, that he cannot tell by the Picture, why? because he made this piece, as an Artist, but not as a German, or English man. Therefore he discovereth his Art by the piece, but not his Country. So God made the World, not as Father, Son, and Holy Ghost. Three in one, and one in three; All the works towards the Creatures, works ad Extra, are common to all the persons in the Trinity. God, as God, made the world. Therefore by the sight of the world, men may be able to know, that it is a God that made it, and that this God is good, because he made so many things useful in the world; & this God is wise, because of the variety of the creatures; and this God is One, because of the order of things: But to say, This God is Three in One, the Creation of the world doth not bear this. If the works be ad Intra, as Generation, these are the works of someone Person; but the works ad extra, they represent the Godhead, but not the Persons.

Secondly, They did not know Christ as Mediator, therefore they raised up many Mediators: 1 Cor. 8. 5, 6. Though there be that are called gods, whether in heaven or in earth, as there be gods many, and lords many: But to us, there is but one God; the Father, of whom are all things, and we in him; and one Lord Jesus Christ, by whom are all things, and we by him. The Apostle doth here clearly allude to the custom of the Heathens, who had two sorts of gods, they had their dii Coelestes, their supreme heavenly gods, which they worshipped, as the Sun, Moon, and Stars: and then, besides these, they had their dii Terrestres, inferior gods, gods on earth, who were men that lived upon the earth, which were afterwards canonized, and made gods. That is the true meaning of this, There be many that are called gods, whether in heaven or in earth. So, there be gods many, and lords many; gods many, those are their supreme gods; lords many, those are their inferior gods, Baalim, as they called him, who was the first King of Babel, and the first that was made a god; and all those kinds of gods therefore after him, were called Baalim; as Caesar, being the first Emperor, all Emperors after him were called Caesar's. Now, saith the Apostle, To us is but one God, not many; but one Lord, not many; but one Mediator, Christ Jesus.

Thirdly, They knew him not as Creator; therefore Paul, when he came to Athens, found them ignorant of this. Greece was the Eye of the world, and Athens was the Eye of Greece; yet, even at Athens, Paul found an Altar, To an unknown God; and that same God was the God that made the world, God the Creator, Act. 17. 23, 24. saith Paul, For as I passed by, and beheld your devotions, I found an Altar, with this inscription, TO THE UNKNOWN GOD; Whom therefore ye ignorantly worship, him declare I unto you. God that made the world, and all things therein, seeing that he is Lord both of heaven and earth, dwelleth not in Temples made with hands. No wonder if the Heathen did not know Christ as the Creator; for the Jews, after Christ was come in the flesh, and began to put forth a creating power in their sight, yet would not own him as Creator of the world. To make him see that was born blind, and to raise him that was dead, requireth no less strength, than the same power that made the world. This Christ putt forth to the Jews. Lazarus cometh out of the grave, even as the world came out of the Chaos at first, at the commandment of Christ. He then said, Let there be light, and there was light; He now saith, Let there be life, and there is life: And yet he was not owned as the Creator. The world knew not him as the Second Person in the Trinity, neither as Mediator, nor as Creator.

I now proceed to the Application of this.

First, By way of Admonition. It teacheth us all to take [Use 1] heed of being ignorant of Christ. You see, it is laid to the charge of the Gentiles here, that they knew him not; and how much more heavy will the charge be against us, that enjoy other kind of means than the Gentiles had: They, indeed, had he works of Creation and Providence; We have them too, and a greater light than so: we have the Word to be a light to our feet, and a lamp to our paths.

They had the Oracles of the Sybbils, we have the Writings of Moses and the Prophets, of the Evangelists and Apostles. Therefore, such as refuse to use the means of knowing Christ as a Savior, they must certainly expect to know him as an Avenger: For, He will come ere long, saith the Apostle, with his mighty Angels, in flaming fire, to render vengeance, to whom? to them that know not God, and obey not the Gospel of Jesus Christ, 2 Thess. 1. 8.

Indeed, God will not reckon with men for their Negative Ignorance, that is, for their bare not knowing, what they are not bound to know; but for their Privative knowledge, for not knowing what they ought to know, and what God giveth means to them to know; for that, he will be sure to reckon with them: And those that continue willfully ignorant in such things, must be miserable against their wills. Wherefore, to the end ye may all thirst after the knowledge of Christ more and more, I shall propound to you two things.

- The Excellency and
 - of this Knowledge.
- The Necessity

First, Consider the Excellency of the knowledge of Christ, of which ye read, Phil. 3. 8. I eount all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of the Lord Jesus, my Lord, for whom I have suffered the loss of all things, and account them dung, that I may win Christ. All is but dross and dung to Paul, in comparison of the knowledge of Christ. How is it, that amongst us, men run after dross and dung, and neglect the knowledge of Christ, as preferring that before him? For the excellency of the knowledge of Jesus Christ my Lord. Nothing in the world so excellent as knowledge, no knowledge so excellent as that of Christ. Other knowledge may, perhaps, make a man famous, this only can make him holy and happy; other knowledge can give him the esteem of a learned man, this only can make him to be a Saint. Therefore an excellent knowledge.

Secondly, There is a necessity of this knowledge, whether you look to

- Justification,
 - There is a necessity of the knowledge of Christ.
- Sanctification, or
- Salvation.

First, If ye look to Justification: By his knowledge shall my righteous servant justify many, Isa. 53. 11. His knowledge, that is, not cognition suâ, but cognition suî; not by that knowledge which is inherent in Christ, but by that knowledge which we have of him. By his knowledge, that is, by the knowledge of Him, shall my righteous servant justify many. Here knowledge is put for faith, which justifieth; because there is such a necessary connection between faith and knowledge. Amongst men, some are better known than trusted; it is not so with God, for according to our knowledge of him, so there will be a proportionable trusting in him: Psal. 9. 10. They that know thy name will put their trust in thee. No knowledge, no faith; and according to the measure of our knowledge, so will the measure of our faith be. Thus, you see a necessity of knowledge, in point of Justification

Secondly, In point of Sanctification, which may be gathered from that of the Apostle, 1 Joh. 2. 3, 4. Hereby we know him, if we keep his commandments. He that saith, I know him, and keepeth not his commandments, is a liar, and the truth is not in him. Where there is a fatherly knowledge, there will be obedience; for this knowledge of an Object so amiable, will ingender love, and that love will be the fulfilling of the Law.

Thirdly, It is necessary in point of Salvation. Not to insist long upon these things, Hence it is, that all these three things, namely, the state of salvation, the ministry of the Gospel, and the knowledge of Christ, come under one and the same notion in Scripture, under the notion and name of Eternal life. The everlasting state of Happiness, that is called Eternal life, Matth. 25. ult. They shall go away into everlasting punishment, but the righteous into life eternal. The Ministry of the Gospel, that is called Eternal life; Act. 13. 46. It was necessary (saith Paul to Barnabas there) that the word should first be spoken to you; but seeing you put it from you, and judge yourselves unworthy of everlasting life, we turn to the Gentiles. They that reject the Ministry of the Gospel, are said to account themselves unworthy of everlasting life. Thirdly, the knowledge of Christ is called so, Joh. 17. 3. This is life eternal, to know thee the only true God, and Christ Jesus whom thou hast sent. What is the reason of this? Because these make way for the other; the Ministry of the Gospel, that maketh way for the knowledge of Christ; the knowledge of Christ maketh way for the state of Bliss and Glory. Therefore all cometh under the notion of Eternal life.

We come to a second thing. Notwithstanding Christ's being in the world, and the world being made by him, the inhabitants of the world knew him not.

Secondly, This lets us see, by way of Information, the unthankfulness of the world, the patience of Christ, the [Use 2] happiness of Christians.

First, See the unthankfulness of the world. If one should build an house for a man, then furnish it, and afterwards put the poor man, that was harbourlesse before, into it, and put a stock into his hands to trade withal, and keep his house in repair for him, and require no other Rent, but some small acknowledgment: Would not all the world cry shame of this man, if he should not be thankful? It is our case: God hath made a world for man, and furnished it before he brought man into it; Jesus Christ, he hath been in the world ever since the Creation, upholding all things by the word of his power. And yet such is the unthankfulness of men, that they know not Christ: He was in the world, the world was made by him, and the world knew him not, therefore did not acknowledge him as their Creator and Preserver. Such is the madness of men, that they are over-apt to bestow divine honor upon those it belongeth not to, and to deny it to Christ, to whom it appertaineth. When Paul and Barnabas had cured the Creeple, Act. 14. 11. they had much ado to stave off the people from making gods of them; Now when the people saw what Paul had done, they lifted up their voices, saying in the speech of Lycaonia, The gods are come down to us in the likeness of men. And they called Barnabas, Jupiter; and Paul Mercurius. The Priests of Jupiter offered sacrifice to them. Christ doth a great deal more than this cometh to, and yet men own him not. Do ye thus requite the Lord, (as Moses said) O foolish people and unwise?

Secondly, It helpeth to clear God, and to magnify the patience of Christ. He made the world, the world knows him not; and yet he letteth the world stand for all this. He hath let the world continue almost six thousand years, notwithstanding all this ingratitude of the world. We may well, upon this occasion, call to mind that which the Prophet Hosea recordeth, Hos. 11. 8, 9. How shall I give thee up, Ephraim? how shall I deliver thee, Israel? how shall I make thee as Admah? how shall I set thee as Zeboim? My heart is turned within me, my repentings are kindled together. I will not execute the fierceness of mine anger, I will not return to destroy Ephraim. For I am God, and not man, the holyOne in the midst of thee, and I will not enter into the City. For I am God, and not man. Here is a great evidence, that Christ is God, and not man; otherwise, the world had been made as Admah and Zeboim, long ere this. Suppose Moses himself, (the meekest man upon earth) to be endowed with that power, that Christ had in his hands from the beginning of the world; and suppose him to have hated sin, as Christ doth: It would have been impossible, even for Moses, to have held his hands. He that cried out at the Rock, Ye rebels, shall I bring water out of this Rock to you? would certainly have cried out, Ye rebels, I will send down fire upon you from heaven, to consume you. What an high provocation is this, when Christ hath done so much, to have all slighted? Men take it ill, when there is any competency of worth in them, to be neglected. Not to speak of the worth of Christ as Redeemer, look to his works of Creation; see what glorious Attributes shine in them; do but compare them with the works of men: If a workman doth many things, surely they are not great; for one great thing will take up a great deal of time: If he produceth a great piece, he doth not make many such; if many and great, commonly they are but great Torrasses, things of no worth, or, both botchingly and bunglingly done. Now here, in the work of Creation, is both Mercy and Greatness; here is Comeliness and Usefulness kissing each other: And yet all this slighted by the sons of men, and that for so many years together; and yet the earth standeth. Oh! the Patience of God, notwithstanding all this provocation.

Thirdly, Ye may see the happiness of Christians. Though the world knoweth not God, there is a certain sort of Men in the world that do: 1 Tim. 3. 16. God manifested in the Flesh, justified of the Spirit, seen of Angels, preached to the Gentiles, believed on in the world. Believed on in the world! This is the great privilege of us Christians. The poor Gentiles knew there was a God, and might come to the knowledge of some of his Attributes; but when their consciences flew in their faces, they were then at a great stand: They had learned that God was, and was merciful, and that he would pardon sin; but they had not the knowledge of a Mediator, nor how to make a friend to God. This God hath made known to them, that live under the means of grace, and hold the Ministry of the Gospel. He hath let them see what ways they have, to make to God. The Lord Jesus Christ hath held forth the ways of Truth, and Life. No man goeth to the Father, but by Him. Therefore, if that Philosopher, of whom we read, thought he had so much cause to bless God, that had made him not a Barbarian, but a Grecian, and amongst Grecians, an Athenian; amongst Athenians, a Philosopher. Certainly, we have cause to magnify the grace of God, that we are born not Pagans, but Christians, in regard of an outward Covenant; and not Papists, but Protestants, and amongst Protestants, English men. Because this Island of ours, hath by the grace of God been the Goshen, wherein this light of the Gospel hath shined, more than in any Kingdom of Christendom. I have done with that verse, and proceed to the Eleventh, which concerneth the Jews especially.

Vers. 11. He came to his own, and his own received him not.

He came, two ways. There are many sorts of Christ's coming, which will be needless to repeat to you. He came.

- First, In his Ordinances.
- Secondly, In the Flesh.

First, Christ is said to come amongst a people, whom He blesseth with his Ordinances, according to that, Exodus 20. 24. In all places where I record my Name, I will come to thee, and bless thee. The Gospel never cometh to a place, but Christ cometh with it.

Secondly, He came in the flesh. This is a faithful saying, and worthy of all men to be received, saith Paul, 1 Tim. 1. 15. That Jesus Christ came into the World to save sinners. Thus he came, He came to his own, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, the word is, and may be rendered thus. He came to his own home. So the word is rendered, Acts 21. 6. When we had taken leave of one another, we took ship, and they returned home again, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉. The same word in the Text. He came to his own home, Though the earth be the Lord's, and the fullness thereof; yet the Land of Judea, was Christ's home in a special manner, He dwelt there, in a more remarkable way. As it is said, Psal. 76. 1, 2. In Judah is God known, his Name is great in Israel, in Salem also is his Tabernacle, and his dwelling place in Zion; where Christ's home was. And accordingly it is said, Isai. 31. ult. He shall pass over to his strong hold for fear, and his Princes shall be afraid of the Ensign, saith the Lord, whose fire is in Zion, and his furnace in Jerusalem. It is a Metaphor taken from them that keep fire in their dwelling houses. It is a sign that the house standeth not empty, where fire is kept; Now saith he, The Lord's furnace is in Jerusalem, He dwelleth there. Therefore he is said to come to his own, when He came to them, He came to his own, that is, the Jews, who are said to be his own in a special manner, Psal. 33. 12. Blessed is the Nation, whose God is the Lord, and the people, whom He hath chosen for his own Inheritance. Here it is spoken of the Nation of the Jews. And his own received him not. That is, believed not in him. So the word is interpreted in the very next verse, To as many as received him, that is, believed in his name. Received him not, that is, believed not in his name; so as here, that which we are to observe, is briefly this. Though Christ came to his own, he was not received, no, not by them.

First, He came to them, in his Ordinances; They had the Ministry of the word. He hath not dealt so with every Nation, Psal. 147. ult. Neither have the Heathen knowledge of his ways, but he showeth his word to Jacob, and his statutes, and judgments to Israel. Christ came in his word. The Scripture is but the shell, Christ is the kernel; The Scripture is the Cabinet, Christ is the Jewell. Scripturae sunt fasciae, in quibus involutus est puer Jesus. This the Prince of Antwerpe was wont to say. The Scriptures are the swaddling Cloaths, in which Christ is wrapped. So Christ came in the word, in a great many personal types, that did fore-signify him. He came in Melchizedek. He himself being the true King of Righteousness, the King of peace. He came in Joshua, he being the true Leader of men into the heavenly Canaan. He came in Isaac, he being the true Son of Laughter; The cause of his people's joy, bearing his own Cross, as Isaac bore the Wood. So in all other personal Types, He came in the Sacrifices under the Law, they all signified Him. Therefore they offered the Morning, and Evening Sacrifice. The Evening sacrifice was offered at the same hour, in which Christ was after nailed to the Cross. And he did so purposely to make it appear, that He came to fulfill all those Sacrifice. He came in the Sacrament, the Lamb slain. The pass-over was a Type of Christ. Christ our pass-over, was sacrificed for us. Manna, was a Type of him. And so the water in the Rock, that was Christ. So he came in his Ordinances to the Jews, but they did not receive him. Let two Prophets answer that, Isa. 8. 12. I have written to him, speaking of Ephraim, the great things of my Law, but they were counted as a strange thing; Christ came in the Word, and they looked at the word, as if it concerned not them, they accounted it as a strange thing: this for the Law. And for the Gospel, whereof Isaiah was a Preacher in that age, the most Evangelical of all the Prophets, see what he saith, Isa. 53. 1. Who hath believed our report, and to whom is the arm of the Lord revealed? Here is Christ, comes to his own in his Ordinances, and not received; the report of him, not believed; his Law accounted, a strange thing.

Secondly, Christ in the flesh, The word was made flesh, and dwelt amongst us; He conversed in the land of Judea, This was an act of special favor. For one to receive a man into his house, is a favor: What was it for Christ to become man himself, to assume the Manhood into one and the same Person, into the Godhead? yet this he did. He came to his own, did they receive him? Search the Scriptures, some kind of reception there was, when He was born. But what? Here is a King born, where is his Palace? The stable for beasts, is his Court. His Chamber of presence, a Manger. Before He can go, He is forced to fly to Egypt in his Mothers arms; and at his return, what entertainment findeth he? The Gadarenes prefer their swine before him, the Jews cry out, Crucify him, crucify him: Not him, but Barabbas: Which is excellently set forth in that Parable of the Master of the Vineyard, wherein Christ telleth us, How the Master of the Vineyard, after other Messengers sent, sendeth his own Son; And the husbandmen said, This is the heir, let us slay him. This was the entertainment Christ found, when he came to his own. This, for the Explication of it.

In the first place, it hinteth us to a considerable Parallel between Christ and Antichrist, in regard of their Entertainment: Christ came, and was to be received; Antichrist was to come, and to be shunned. The Scripture had foretold, that Christ should come, when the Scepter should depart from Judah. Therefore, about that time, they began to look for the Consolation of Israel, as Simeon and the rest did. 2 Thess. 2. 7. When that which withholds is taken out of the way, then the man of perdition shall be revealed. Accordingly, Christ came at his time, and Antichrist came at his time; and yet neither was Christ received, nor Antichrist shunned, as he should have been: and all upon a false surmise. They looked not at Christ at that time, but as a temporal Monarch, therefore they received him not, because he came in a mean condition. Antichrist came in his time: up-starts the Pope, when the Emperor went down. But they looked for Antichrist as a Tyrant, that should with fire and sword over-run the world; but he came in sheep's clothing, as a Lamb; therefore they shunn'd him not, upon this mistake only. As some godly Jews, when Christ came, gave him entertainment as the Messias; so when Antichrist came, some believers were stirred up to cry out, that the Pope was Antichrist, and so to write against him from his first rise. After Antichrist had been in the world a while, people began to smell him out, and discover him; and whole Churches fell from him, as many of these Western Churches have done. So, a time is coming, that Christ shall be discovered to the Jews, and they shall mourn over him. Thus the Parallel, you see, runneth throughout. That, by the way.

Secondly, We may here see our own Pictures, in the Jews carriage towards Christ: As face in water answereth face, so the face of man to man, saith Solomon. Just such are we to Christ as they were. He is come to us, and we have not received him; he comes in his Ordinances, and we receive him not. We cry shame of the Jews, and we ourselves are as bad. We have our Gadarenes, that prefer their swine before Christ, their base swinish lusts before our Savior. We have them that cry out, Not Christ, but Barabbas; not Christ, but the world. Never let men, that walk in ways of disobedience, pretend their receiving of him. They say, perhaps, What would you have? We are baptized in the ways of Christ, and come to the Lord's Table, and hear the Word Preached. But what do we more than many of the Jews did, who are said, not to have received him? They flockt after Christ, but it was to see his Miracles; whole troops flockt after Christ, and yet they received him not: Why? Because they obeyed him not, nor believed in him. It is not all our formalities and profession, that will make us to pass as receivers of Christ, if we do not obey hit Gospel. If a Sovereign Prince shall send his Agent or Ambassador into some part of his own dominions, he will expect, that this Agent of his should have a fair acception: It will not be enough for the people to suffer him to land, to provide a fair house, and to make good entertainment for him, and give him respect; no, they are not said to receive such an Agent from the King, unless they obey the commandments that he bringeth them from his Sovereign. So, we are not said to receive Jesus Christ, unless we yield obedience to him. As a man taketh adultery a great deal worse in his wife than in his kinswoman, than in his daughter, because she is married to him, and because he is nearer to her. The Churches that profess Christ, they are the Spouse of Christ; and for a Spouse to play the harlot is far worse, than for them that are at a greater distance from him. If Israel sin, yet let not Judah transgress. If Spain and France commit Idolatry, and sin, yet let not England play the harlot. Let us not act the parts of the Jews with Christ.

There is a word of Comfort also here, to such as are rejected by their own for Christ's sake; that is an usual case, it is that which Christ foretold, Matth. 10. 35, 36. I am come to set a man at variance against his father, and the daughter against her mother, and the daughter in law against her mother in law, and a man's foes shall be they of his own house. Here is a division made by Christ's coming. Whence it cometh to pass, that those of his own household, many times, do not receive him, after he hath received Christ. It is the case of many a poor soul to be frowned upon, and to meet with hard usage, because of his going after the Lord Jesus Christ in his Ordinances. Here is comfort, It is that which befell Christ, His own received him not. Therefore if thy own reject thee, it is no such wonder. It is said of our Savior's friends, and near kinsfolk, Joh. 11. 5. Neither did his brethren believe on him. They were those of his nearest kinsmen; Mary's sister's sons, James and John, they were believers indeed; but the rest of his kindred, many of them, even his very brethren, believed not in him. Nay, so far were they from believing in him, that, as we read it, they were mightily mistaken about him; When his friends heard of it, they went out to lay hold on him, for they said he was besides himself. The words well bear another interpretation; but, according to this, his very friends had a conceit, that Christ was mad, as many nowadays. Saith the unbelieving husband, I think my wife is mad; and saith the unbelieving wife, I think my husband is besides himself, when he goeth after the ways of God. Let us be content to lose ourselves, to be conformed to Christ. As Bernard said, Risu ludentes, & joco, &c. Those that spend their time in laughing and jollity, they cannot accompany the tears of Christ. They that affect the high places, cannot be accompanied with the humility of Christ, for his humility comforteth the lowly. And he being not received of his own, comforteth those which are comfortless for Christ's sake.

I have done now with this Verse. The next cometh in by way of an Answer to an Objection, thus: If the world knew him not, and his own received him not, then Christ came in vain. No, saith the Evangelist, there were some that received him, and to purpose too; for they became the sons of God by receiving of him.

Vers. 12. But as many as received him, to them gave he power to become the sons of God, even to them that believed on his Name.

Three things you have in this Verse.

- First, the Benefit, Power to become the sons of God.
- Secondly, the Benefactor, The Lord Jesus Christ; He giveth them this power.
- Thirdly, The Persons gratified, they upon whom this benefit was bestowed, As many as received him:

Who are described two ways.

By their Believing, in the end of this Verse;

And by their Birth, in the next.

By their Believing, Even to them that believe on his Name.

And then by their New birth, Which are born, not of blood, nor of flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God.

First, For the Benefit, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 . The Papists catch at this, and from hence they would gladly infer Free-will, which they contend so much for, as the great Diana, both of Papists and Arminians; He gave them power to become the sons of God. And therefore, say they, they have power to become or not become, to receive Christ or not receive him. If they will receive him, they have power to become the sons of God. But this I shall have occasion to include in the next Verse, Born, not of the will of the flesh; for the Text shall show you, it will not serve their turn.

First, If the Holy Ghost had meant to lay a foundation here for Free-will, he would not have said, He gave them power to become, but, to make themselves the sons of God; not, Potestatem fieri; but, facere scipsos.

Secondly, There is no necessity of translating the word 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 , by this English word Power; for it rather signifieth, as the Margents of your great Bibles have it, Right, or Privilege; or, as the Geneva hath it, The Prerogative.

What is this to the Point, of the Power against Free-will? Read it so, and the color for their pretence is taken off; and so the word 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 often signifieth Right and Privilege, as in that, 1 Cor. 9. 5, 6. 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 , Have we not power to eat, and to drink, and to lead about a sister a wife as well as other Apostles? and have not we power to forbear working (that is, right and privilege) as well as the rest?

Thirdly, Suppose we should read it, Power to become the sons of God, as our Translation hath it; yet this Power will imply no more, than the word Privilege doth. As if a man should say, That the Pope had a special eye to those Bishops, that wrought for him in the Council of Trent, and gave them all power to become Cardinals; that is, he gave them this privilege to be so. What is this to Free-will?

Lastly, read it Power, and suppose it to imply some liberty of will; yet it serveth not their turn neither: For the power here spoken of is a power received by those, that formerly believed in Christ. What is this then to the power of of them, that are yet in the state of nature? To as many as believed in him, to them gave he power. It is not Free-will, if not set free by Christ. But, to avoid all ambiguity, we shall take it for a Right, or Privilege, or Prerogative, which indeed is the better reading. And so I ground this Observation from hence, That for the sons of men to become the sons of God is a very high privilege. To as many as received [Observ.] him, to them gave he this privilege, this right, this prerogative, to become the sons of God. When God would set forth his favor towards David to the height, in that goodwill which he would bear to his son Solomon; mark, 2 Sam. 7. 14. I will be his father, and he shall be my son; he could not promise him a greater prerogative than this. When Saul would encourage some of his Army, to undertake the Duel with great Goliath, that defied the Host of the living God; What is the motive? I will give him my daughter to wife, and he shall be the King's son in law. When God will encourage men to fight it out against the world, and to separate from the sins thereof, he useth this motive, I will make them sons, and daughters, if they do so, and so. He holdeth that forth as the great prerogative, 2 Cor. 6. 17, 18. Come out from amongst them, and separate yourselves, saith the Lord, touch no impure thing, then will I receive you, and I will be unto you instead of a Father, and ye shall be to me instead of sons, and daughters, saith the Lord, that is Almighty. This will appear to be a very high prerogative, If we consider, first, The estate from which we are raised to become sons; secondly, The state to which we are raised, by becoming sons.

First, this Sonship will appear to be a great privilege, if we consider, from what estate we are raised, That we may become sons; from a state of bondage, and death, misery, and slavery, from being sons of perdition, Children of wrath, as the Apostle calleth it, Ephes. 2, 3. We are by nature the children of wrath, even as others. For God to take children of wrath, and make them children of love; Heirs of perdition, and make them heirs of Heaven, what a rise is here? It was a great matter for Pharaoh's daughter to cast an eye upon poor Moses, when he lay in the Bullrushes, ready to be drowned in the water, and to adopt him for her own son; The Scripture speaketh of it, as a great privilege, and therefore raiseth the commendations of Moses. By faith, Moses refused to be called the son of Pharaoh's daughter; yet this Adoption of hers, would not have made him heir to the Kingdom. Here is an higher privilege: men are taken, not out of the water, but out of Hell-fire, that is our portion by nature, and deputed to be heirs to the King of Heaven, and so as that they are made heirs to a Crown of Glory; for all deputed children are heirs of the Kingdom, Matth. 13. 38. The good seed are the children of the Kingdom. If sons, then heirs, heirs of God, joint-heirs with Christ, Rom. 8. 2. It will appear to be a high privilege, if ye consider that estate to which we are raised, by being sons. It is a wealthy, and honorable, and free, and sweet, and safe estate; All this raiseth the price of it in our esteem.

First, It is a wealthy state, God doth not adopt us to a poor Inheritance, but to a rich, as the Apostle speaks, Ephes. 1. 18. That you may know what is the hope of his Calling, and what the riches of the glory of his Inheritance in the Saints; Here is riches in this Inheritance. So, many times, riches, when there is no honor. Ignoble spirits scrape a great deal of Wealth together, in which they place their happiness: but here is not only wealth, but Glory to, and he Glory of a Kingdom. There is not such an honorable incorporation in the World, as this, to have God the Father, for his Father, and Jesus Christ for his Head and Governor, and all the Saints for his Members; a body politique, that hath the eternal spirit of God, for the soul of it. The society of Saints, is an honorable Society. Here is both wealth, and honor, which may sometimes be, where there is no liberty. It is but Splendida servi-us, a glittering slavery for men to be rich, and honorable, and yet in slavery. But here ye read of, a glorious liberty of the Sons of God, not only riches, and honor, but a glorious liberty, Joh. 8. 31. If the Son hath made us free, we shall then be free indeed, from the service of sin, and bondage of Satan; free from Temporal afflictions, and free from the danger of eternal wrath. There may riches, and honor, and freedom, meet in someone person; who yet cannot have content, nor doth he live a Comfortable life for all that. Therefore, this in the fourth place is a Sweet state, as well as wealthy, and honorable, and free. There lieth a great deal of sweetness in the name of a Father; when the soul can say, howsoever things go in the World, I can look up to Heaven, and say, doubtless, Thou art our Father: there is so much sweetness to be found in this Relation, as to take away the bitterness of all other dispensations, and providences, though in other respects very averse. Our Chronicles tell us of King Edward the first, when he was in foreign parts, news was brought him at once both of the death of his father, and of his son. The King was exceedingly struck into sadness at the relation, but especially at the death of his father. For, saith he, I may have more sons, but never another father. We may have more friends, and more estates, if we lose our friends, or estates: but we can have no more fathers; if we once lose our God, we shall never have such a Father as he; lose him once, and all is gone. Am not I, (said Elkanah to Hannah) better to thee, then ten sons? Well may God say to us, Am not I better to you then ten thousand sons, and ten thousand times ten thousand estates? All sweetness centers in this Relation, God is our Father, we are his Children.

But there may be a great deal of wealth, and honor, and freedom, and sweetness, and yet no safety may attend this condition. This is a safe estate: that is the commendations of it. This honor, and riches, and freedom, and sweetness, they shall all continue. The servant he abideth not in the house forever, but the son abideth ever, saith our Savior, Joh. 8. 35. Therefore fear not little flock, saith Christ, It is your Fathers pleasure to give you the Kingdom. Nothing shall intervene, so as to hinder a son from the Inheritance. It is his Fathers good pleasure, and his will shall stand, to give them a Kingdom in the issue. So it is clear, that this is an high privilege.

What use shall we make of it?

First, examine whether we be thus preferred, yea, or [Use. 1] no. It is that, which almost everyone in the visible Church pretendeth to be, a son, and daughter of God. It is therefore, worth the while to try, whether the Lord Jesus Christ hath made us partakers of this privilege. It is a use both for the assurance of the Saints, and for the discarding of Hypocrites, that are but pretenders to it. They favor even those men, of whom Christ saith, You are of your father the Devil. They pretend sonship to God, Joh. 8. 41. We, say they, be not born of fornication, we have one Father, even God. And yet Christ saith to them, ye are of your father, the Devil. We are of God, say they: ye are of your father the Devil, saith Christ. One way to try this, and the only one that I will name, is by the spirit of adoption. If we be sons, then God hath sent forth into our hearts the spirit of adoption, by which we cry Abba, Father. This ye have expressly laid down in so many words, Gal. 4. 6. Because ye are sons, God hath sent forth the spirit of his Son into your hearts, crying, Abba father. Wheresoever there is sonship, there will be crying, Abba Father. Crying implieth fervency of spirit; as, Why criest thou to me? faith God to Moses, when he was in a great strait at the Red-sea. Because both the profane persons, and formal professors, will put on for a share; before we can break the children's bread, we must discard them from the comforts of this. If crying, Father, and if praying, argue my sonship, then I am a son, saith the profane person; for I say my prayers ever and anon. Alas, what is this to the purpose? Thy praying is but craving, yea, thy praying is but houlung in God's esteem, Isa. 7. 14. They have not cried to me with their hearts, when they howled upon their beds. How irksome is the howling of dogs to the ears of men? such is that, which profane persons call Praying, in the ears of God. The truth is, their praying is but a driving of contradictions, because their life, all the while, giveth their tongue the lie. Our Father (saith the profane person) which art in heaven; and in the mean while, he serveth his father the devil which is in hell. Hallowed be thy Name; so say his lips, but in the mean time, he dishonoreth God in swearing, and lying, and whoring, and drinking, and profaneness. Thy kingdom come; and in the mean while, he opposeth the Kingdom of Christ in his heart, and in the lives of his Saints, and doth what he can to hinder the coming of it. Thy will be done in earth as it is in heaven; and in the mean while, he doth the will of Satan, that will which the damned do in hell. Give us this day our daily bread; seemingly acknowledging, that he receiveth all, even his outward mercies, from God; and in the mean while, perhaps, sacrificeth to his own net, commending his own skill for the estate he hath gotten. Forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive them that trespass against us; and in the mean while, he goeth on in malice and envy, sinning to his very hour of death, as it were. Lead us not into temptation; in the mean while, he tempteth the devil to tempt him. He crieth, Deliver us from evil, and delivereth himself up to evil while he saith so: He layeth the reins upon the neck of his lusts, that run away with him into all mischief. Call you this praying? I but, saith the formal professor, I pray, and that frequently; not in distress only, but, haply, keep a constant course of prayer. Surely I must go for a child of God.

That we be not deceived, let us consider, It is one thing to draw nigh with the heart, and another thing to draw nigh with the lips. You know the complaint of Isaiah, compare two places together, Isa. 1. 15. When ye so read forth your hands, I will hide mine eyes from you; and when you make many prayers I will not hear you. And yet he complaineth of them by Isaiah, Isa. 4. They make many prayers, and yet none heareth that prayer: Why? Because, Isa. 29. 13. This people draw near to me with their mouths, but remove their hearts far from me. Therefore they pray, and their prayers are no prayers, because their hearts are not in them. I will not deny, but many a formal professor may have attained to the gift of prayer, but that which I make an argument of Sonship, was a spirit of prayer, the spirit of adoption, by which we cry, Abba Father. What that is, ye may see, Zach. 10. 12. I will pour out upon Jerusalem the spirit of grace and supplication. How worketh that? They shall look upon me whom they have pierced, and mourn for me, as one mourneth for his only son. Wheresoever the spirit of prayer is, there will be a looking up to Jesus Christ in all our devotions. The spirit of Adoption, that cometh from the Son, guideth to the Son, and taketh us along with him in all our addresses to God. They that would have their voices to resound, will make choice of Rocky places, which send forth the best Echo. This Rock, the Lord Jesus Christ is he, that maketh our prayers to return with a blessing into our own bosoms. You shall have many men that go to devotion, and leave Christ behind them; What a poor devotion is here? The spirit of prayer is always accompanied with Evangelical humility, with a mourning that floweth from our looking to Christ. I know, there is a great deal of legal sorrow in formal professors. Men may go blubbering to hell, without true repentance. But here is a mourning, that floweth from a looking up to Christ. Where there is a spirit of Adoption, men will speak from feeling, which floweth from the apprehension of Christ, and the certainty of God's grace in him. Now, this spirit of Adoption argueth Sonship.

But then cometh in the poor weak Believer, and saith, [Object.] I am undone. The other plead for themselves without a cause, and he pleadeth as much against himself without a cause. I cannot find such enlargement in prayer: Surely the Spirit of Adoption is not in me; if it were, I should cry Abba Father with more importunity.

All Believers are not alike gifted, there may be a gift of [Answ.] prayer, where there is not a spirit of prayer; and a spirit of prayer, where there are but poor gifts. Haply, thou canst only chatter with Hezekiah like a Crane and Swallow; yet consider, whilst thou canst not speak, there are two Spokes-men for thee, the consideration whereof, may render thee confident of success, even in thy devotions, how weak soever they be. The lispings and stammerings of a child, God liketh better, then all the Oratory in the world. The Spirit of God is in thee, and the Blood of Christ is for thee. We know not what to pray for as we ought, but the Spirit maketh intercession in us. And God knoweth the meaning of the Spirit, and heareth the least whispers of his own Spirit, in the soul of a poor Believer. And then, The Blood of Christ, that speaketh better things than the blood of Abel. As Christ saith of himself, it may be said of this Blood, Father, I know thou hearest me always. But I pass now from matter of Trial, and

I come now to matter of Exhortation. All Dignity, ye [Use 2] know, calleth for Duty. Such as are partakers of this Privilege of being the children of God, they are obliged to certain Duties that flow from hence.

First, Obedience. The sons of Jonadab, they were obedient to the commandment of their father, Jer. 35. I set before the sons of the family of the Rechabites, pots full of wine, and cups; and I said unto them, Drink wine. But they said, We must drink no wine; for Jonadab, the son of Rechab, our father, hath forbid us, saying, Drink no wine, you nor your sons forever. Neither build houses, nor sow seed, nor plant ye vineyards; but dwell in tents all your days, that ye may live all your days upon the face of the earth, where ye are inhabitants. So we have hearkened to the voice of Jonadab, the son of Rechab, our father, in all that he commanded us. So we drank no wine all our days, we, nor our wives, nor our sons, nor our daughters. When God hath said, Drink not of the world's cup, taste not of the world's dainties, lest you surfeit on them; it becometh an obedint child to say, My Father hath commanded me, I dare not drink, when he is tempted to the enjoyment of any unlawful pleasures. Mal. 3. 17. Ye read there of a son that serveth. Indeed, the best service God hath done him, is by his sons; all other services are little worth in comparison. I will spare him, as a man spareth his own son that serveth him. The son goeth naturally and ingenuously about his father's work; he doth it kindly, much more kindly than a servant will, that doth it only for his wages. Therefore of old, they were wont to set their children to the work. The chief work lay in husbandry. We read of Rachel's keeping her father's sheep, and so of Jacob keeping his father in law's sheep. Would we approve ourselves children of God, we must do the works of God. Our Savior beateth off the Pharisees from their plea, upon this ground; We are the children of Abraham, say they. If ye were, saith Christ, then would you do the works of Abraham. Abraham believed in me. No man can ever approve himself the child of God, that doth not abound in the work of the Lord.

The second Lesson is for Imitation, Ephes. 5. 1. Be ye followers of God, as dear children. It is natural to children to imitate their parents; look what the father doth, the child is apt to learn the same. If we be dear children, we must be followers of God, and walk in love, as Christ hath loved us. Blessed are the merciful, they shall be called the children of God. Why? Because that maketh it appear, they follow God. And so, Be ye holy, saith Peter, 1 Pet. 1. 15, 16. As he which hath called you is holy, so be ye holy in all manner of conversation. Because it is written, Be ye holy, for I am holy.

Thirdly, We should learn from hence this Lesson, that is, of Dependency. Children hang upon their parents, so should we upon God, if we will carry ourselves as becometh sons. This Argument Christ useth, Matth. 6. 22. Take no thought, saying, What shall we eat, and drink, and becloathed with, for your heavenly Father knoweth you have need of all these things. Leave the care of all these to your Father. If ye were Orphans, and had no father; or if your father were not willing, or not able to supply your wants, then ye might be careful; but seeing you have an heavenly Father, that knoweth all these things, cast all your care upon him, for He careth for you. Doth not he tell us, That he that provideth not for his own family, is the worst of Infidels? Ye are of God's family, therefore be sure, He will provide for you, if ye trust Him.

Fourthly, It teacheth us a lesson of Patience, Hebr. 12. 5. Forget not the exhortation which speaketh to you, as Children. My son despise not thou the Chastisements of the Lord; For whom the Lord loveth, He chastiseth. Faint not under the correction of a Father, and, because it is from a Father that will lay on no more, no longer, than the Child standeth in need of it. Herein, that of our Savior should be often in our thoughts, Joh. 18. 11. The Cup which my Father hath given me, shall I not drink it? Why, every affliction that befalleth me, is a Cup out of my Fathers hand, and from Him I should take it, and drink it, because it is mixed by Him, who will be sure to put no poison into his Children's Cup.

Fifthly, It should teach us a lesson of reverence, If I be a Father, Mal. 1. 6. A son honoreth his father, and a servant his master; If then I be a father, where is mine honor? The children that will be playing the waggis happily together; if the father come into their presence, he husheth all the noise; and the respect they bear him, taketh them off from their vanity. The Reverence we owe to God, should take us off from all unseemly Carriages. It was a report made of Luther, by one that lived much with him, and observed his devotion; Tanta reverentia cum Deo, & Tanta fiducia cum Patre. He goeth to God, saith he, with so much reverence, as a man that cometh to a Lord above him; but with so much confidence, as a man that goeth to a Father,

Lastly, It should teach us a lesson of separation from the folly, and iniquity of the World; This ye have in that place, 2 Cor. 6. and the two last verses. Come out from amongst them, and be ye separated, and touch no unclean thing, and I will be a father to you. God expecteth a great deal of holiness in his Children, that they should nor run into the like excess of Riot, with the men of the World. We should all be separatists in this sense, namely, from the pollutions of the world; we should not behave ourselves unbecoming the sons and daughters of God. It was an excellent advice given by a Philosopher to a young Prince under his Tuition, and Care. The Prince was to go abroad into a place, where he knew he should meet with some naughty Company; he desired his Tutor, to teach him how he should govern, and behave himself. He giveth him this rule. Memento, te silium esse Regis; Remember, Thou art a King's son: when thou comest there, do nothing but what becometh the son of a King. Could we always carry this Memento along with us, how pure would our Conversations be? Thou art a son and daughter of God, be sure to do nothing unbeseeming this relation, and thou wilt do well enough. Is this thy son's Coat, say they to acob, when they brought it home imbrew'd with blood? When we see a man's Carriage defiled with lust, and scurrility, and bitterness, is this the Coat of a Son? is it the badge of an heir of Heaven, and Child of God? He that will do nothing unworthy of this relation, must be sure to walk unspotted of the World. Thus, I have run over the Observations, that flow from the first particular of the Text, namely, The benefit; The power, or privilege, or prerogative to become the sons of God.

Secondly, The next thing is, The Benefactor, that is Christ. He gave them power to become the sons of God. Sons of God, in a special way, not only sons by Creation, so all men are, Mal. 2. 10. Have we not all one Father? Hath not one God created us? Nor only sons by profession; so all the members of the visible Church are, Gen. 6. 2. The Sons of God saw the daughters of men. Nor only sons by Deputation; So all Magistrates are, according to that, Psal. 82. 6. I have said ye are God's, and all of you sons of the most High. But sons of God by adoption. That which the Apostle telleth us of, Gal. 4, 5. That we might receive the Adoption of sons.

Of which there are two sorts;

- A natural Adoption. and
- A personal Adoption.

A natural adoption. That belonged properly to the Jews, who were in that respect called the first-born sons of God, Exod. 4. 22. Thou shalt say to Pharaoh, Thus saith the Lord. Israel is my son, my first-born. Therefore the Adoption is said to belong to Israel, Rom. 9. 4. Who are Israelites, to whom pertaineth the Adoption, namely this natural Adoption.

Secondly, There is a personal adoption, that of which I told you, out of Gal. 4. 6. As many as received Him, gave He the privilege to become the sons of God. Here is the benefit, and the Benefactor. He gave it, it is the gift of Christ, He made us adopted Sons.

Thirdly, The Persons on whom the Father doth bestow the gift of Christ, being described by their faith. I shall wrap up all in this one Observation, which will take in all the remainder of the verse; namely that, It is given to all such, as truly receive Christ by faith, to become the sons of God, by adoption. For the explication whereof, four things are to [Observ.] be demonstrated.

First, That Christ should be received. To as many as received Him.

Secondly, That to the true receiving of Christ, there must be a special concurrence of Faith, Even to them that believe in his Name, saith the Text.

Thirdly, That all such as do receive Christ by faith, are adopted ones. To them gave He power to become the sons of God, as many as received Him.

Fourthly, That this sonship is a free gift. He hath given them power to become the sons of God.

These all lie clearly in the words: when I have explained them, I shall come to apply them.

First, Jesus Christ should be received, Col. 2. 6. As ye have therefore received Christ Jesus the Lord, so walk ye in him. Walk in him, but receive him first. Therefore it is, that Christ is compared to such things in Scripture, as do import a receiving of him, conveying of him to men's souls. He is called the Bread of life, Joh. 6. 35. If bread be not eaten, it nourisheth not; if Christ be not received, he saveth not. We are said to put him on as a garment, As many as have received Christ, have put on Christ. A garment must be taken and applied to the body, or it cannot warm it, to sense it from the weather. He is said to come with healing under his wings, Mal. 4. 2. Christ bringeth medicines with him, salves for sores, medicines for diseases. But the salve must be applied to the sore, else the salve healeth not; and the medicine to the disease, else it cureth not. Christ is the husband of our souls, Thy Maker is thy husband. By marriage, there must be a mutual receiving of each other, else it is no marriage. All these expressions imply the receiving of Christ; and not to receive him, is the greatest folly and madness in the world. As, Who would not think that man besides himself, that, having a violent disease upon him, when the best medicine in the world shall be offered him, and which will infallibly cure him, shall refuse to take it? That is our case. We are all sick, sick to death; and the Lord Christ is offered to us in the Gospel? Is it not madness to refuse him? If a poor woman, that were deep in debt, should have a Serjeant come upon her, and arrest her, and be dragging of her to prison; and, at the same time, should have a good march offered to her, a rich husband, that will pay all her debts; Were not she an unwise woman, if she would not take him for her husband? It is our case: We are all deep in God's debt, ready to be dragged to the prison of hell, there to lie and die, and rot forever. Now the Lord Jesus offereth to take us, and to be married to us: And for us to refuse him, who will pay all our debts, and advance us to an high and glorious condition; Is it not madness? And yet there is no greater, and more common and frequent sin in the world, than this. The not receiving Christ, it is the great damning sin. It is this that argueth the profaneness of man's heart, as Esau is called profane; Why? Because he sold his birth-right for a mess of pottage; the brand of profaneness is fastened upon him in this respect. So, profaneness is in the hearts of all the ungodly, they sell their birth-right for some mess or other of the devil's pottage, for pleasures or profits. They let Christ go, Not him, but Barabbas; not Christ, but credit; not Christ, but wealth and estate. Therefore still the Lord hath occasion to complain of men, that they would not receive him: Ye would not come to me, that ye might have life, and sonship. This is laid for the first ground, Jesus Christ should be received. If he be not, it proceedeth from the folly of men.

Secondly, To the true receiving of Christ, there must be a special Concurrence of Faith. As many as received him. Who are they? Believers, That believed in his Name. In his Name. Name, in the Scripture, is often put for Person, as, Rev. 3. 4. Thou hast a few names in Sardis, which have not defiled their garments; that is, a few men and women, a few persons. The Receivers of Christ are said to believe in his name, because the direct object of their faith is the Person of Christ, for this or that purpose. That Christ died for all, or for me, or for the elect only, It is not the believing of any of these Propositions, that saveth; but in Christ. The Person of Christ, his Name is the object of faith. Believed in his Name, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 . It is a known distinction amongst Divines, that of Credere Deum, Credere Deo, & Credere in Deum. It is one thing to believe that there is a God, that is, Credere Deum; so the devils believe, and tremble. And another thing, Credere Deo, to believe God, that is, what God saith, to be true. But that which saveth is, Credere in Deum, to believe in God. That is, Cedere credendo in Deum; By believing to pass into God, and cleave to him, and close with him. So the same may be said of Christ, It is one thing, credere Christum, to believe that Christ is; and another thing, credere Christo, to believe what Christ hath said in the word of truth; but another thing, credere in Christum, to believe in Christ. Joh. 14. 10, 11, 12. ye shall find all these, Believest thou not that I am in the Father, and the Father in me? Here is credere Christum, to believe that Christ is, and what he is; that he is in the Father, and the Father in him. Vers. 11. Believe me, that I am in the Father, and the Father in me. That is, credere Christo, because he hath said it. Vers. 12. Verily, verily I say unto you, He that believeth on me, the works that I do shall he do also. Here is credere in Christum, that is the faith in the Text, that is required to the true receiving of Christ,— believed in his Name. Believing on him, that is, relying upon him. Faith lieth in recumbency, therefore faith, the act of faith, is often expressed in Scripture by acts of relying, and staying ourselves upon God; 2 Chron. 16. 7. 8. because thou hast relied on the King of Assyria, and not on the Lord thy God; therefore is the host of the King of Assyria escaped from thy hands. Were not the Ethiopians and the Lubims a great host, with very many chariots and horsemen? Yet, because thou didst rely on the Lord, he delivered them into thy hands. Here is believing expressed by relying on the Lord. That in case of a temporal deliverance, faith exerciseth the same kind of act, as, towards God, in spirituals: Isa. 10. 20. It shall come to pass in that day, that the remnant of Israel, and such as have escaped of the house of Jacob, shall no more again stay upon him that smote them, but shall stay upon the Lord, the holy one of Israel, in truth. Here is believing in his Name, relying upon, and staying on Christ. And God hath been pleased to make faith the instrument of receiving Christ, for two reasons, intimated by the Apostle, Rom. 4. 16. Therefore it is of faith, that it might be by grace, to the end the promise might be sure to all the seed.

First, Faith is chosen out from all other graces, to be the instrument of receiving Christ, to Justification, and to Salvation, that it might be of grace, that the free grace of God might more appear in this way of dispensation. If God should have chosen Love, or Zeal, or Hope, or any other Grace; this would carry some show of worth and merit in it, and bring something to God with it: Whereas Faith is an emptying Grace, bringeth nothing but an empty hand, that God might fill it. And therefore it is of faith, that it might be so much the more of grace; because faith is a mere naked Receiver. In point of Sanctification, faith is a purger and worker; but in point of Justification, it is a mere receiver: And that magnifieth the grace of God so much the more, that it might be of grace.

Secondly, That the Promise might be sure. Should God have hanged our Salvation upon any other Condition than of faith, Believers could never have attained that assurance, which they may now arrive at, by the help of the Spirit of grace: Why? Because God requireth nothing of us now, but the taking of Christ, as to point of Justification. Should the Condition have been our Obedience, as under the first Covenant of works, Do this, and live; Though God had treated with us upon very low terms, Never be drunk in thy life, and thou shalt be saved; Forbear adultery and murder, and thou shalt be saved; the Promise would not have been sure, no man durst have trusted himself, no, not in this thing. We know how David, and other servants of God, have been seduced and fallen. But take and receive Christ, and he will be thy Savior; here is the way for assurance. As, put case you come to a beggar, and say, Do such a piece of service for me, and thou shalt have such a reward; there ye put him upon a greater difficulty, than to give him so much money. So God dealeth with us. Believe, and thou shalt be saved; Receive, and thou shalt be saved.

Thirdly, All that truly receive Christ by faith, are adopted ones; To as many as received him, gave he power to become the sons of God: Not by Creation only, as all men are; nor by Profession only, as all the Members of the visible Church are; nor by Deputation only, as all Magistrates are, I have said, Ye are gods, and the sons of the most high: But by Adoption, that ye might receive the adoption of sons. All that receive Christ are thus adopted: For which ye have a clear place, Gal. 3. 26, 27, 28, 29. For ye are all the sons of God in Christ Jesus. For all ye that are baptized into Christ, have put on Christ. There is neither Jew nor Grecian, there is neither bond nor free, there is neither male nor female; for ye are all one in Christ Jesus. And if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs by promise. It is said by the Apostle, Rom. 9. speaking of the Jews, that to them belonged the adoption, speaking there of a National adoption, that belonged to the Jews, the only peculiar Nation of the world, that God had then picked out, to glorify himself among. But hereupon the Jews were apt to conceive, that none had right to be the sons and daughters of God, but those of their Nation. What was true of National adoption, they used to apply it to Personal, and called themselves the children of God, because they had Abraham to their father. Now, saith the holy Ghost here, All, without any difference, that have received Christ, they are sons, as well as the sons of Abraham by a natural generation, because they are all of Abraham's faith, and so come to be heirs of Abraham's seed. He telleth them here, There is neither Jew nor Greek. A believing Greek is as true a child of Abraham, yea, of God, as a believing Jew; and much more than an unbelieving Jew, that braggeth so much of being Abraham's seed. There is neither Jew nor Greek nor bond nor free. Christ findeth men in a state of bondage, and leaveth them so, haply, in worldly respects, but he maketh them free in respect of God: If the Son maketh you free, then are ye free indeed. There is neither male nor female. In some Common-wealths, Females are excluded from the chief Dignity, as by the Salique Law in France, no Woman can inherit a Crown. In all Common-wealths, they are secluded from many Offices, which are proper only to men. But when you come to speak of the Dignity of Adoption, Females come in as well as Males. Every Believer is a partaker of this high privilege, of being the child of God. That is the importance of this word in the Text, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 . As many as received him. All, and everyone that receiveth him, become the sons of God.

Fourthly, The Adoption of sons is a free gift: As many as received him, to them it is given to become the sons of God; 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 , He gave them power to become. It's an Ingredient into the very essence of Adoption, It must be free. So the civil Law defineth Adoption, Gratuita est assumptio, non habentis jus; It is a free Assumption of a person, that hath no right to an Inheritance, to the partaking of that Inheritance. As, what right had Moses, a poor Hebrew child, that was thrown out in an Ark of Bulrushes, ready to perish; what right had he to that Estate that belonged to Pharaoh's daughter, till she adopted him, and gave him that? So Mordechai adopted Hester.

There are three things that go to make up a Civil Adoption, and you shall find them all in this Divine Adoption.

First, There must be an Inheritance, which the party is adopted to; It is a vain thing to adopt one to nothing. To take one, and leave him to the wide World, when he hath done. Adoption supposeth an inheritance. That is here, even the Kingdom of Glory, an Inheritance with the Saints in light. Hence it is, that, that blessedness, which the Saints shall enjoy in the state of Glory, is called by the Apostle, The adoption, because it is that, which we are adopted to. And so I understand that phrase, Rom. 8. 23. where Adoption is taken in that sense, waiting for the Adoption; We which have the first fruits of the spirit, we ourselves groan within ourselves, waiting for the Adoption. That is, for that glory, we are adopted to, for that Inheritance, which God hath promised us. Otherwise, men which receive the first fruits of the spirit, they receive Adoption in this sense. But here is a further thing, which they have not yet, but wait for, which is called Adoption, even the Consummation of all their hopes, the Inheritance in glory.

Secondly, As in every adoption there must be some Inheritance; so adoption must be of a party, that hath no right to that Inheritance. A man is not said to adopt his own son, because nature giveth him a right to his father's estate. But if he adopteth, it is a stranger. Moses was a stranger to Pharaoh's daughter. Hester, though she were akin to Mordecai, yet was not his natural daughter, and therefore was adopted by him. We are all by nature strangers, and a great deal worse, enemies to God, as well as strangers, we have no right, no show of right to the Inheritance, for we all have sinned, and come short of the glory of God, Rom. 3. 23.

Thirdly, It must be Gratuita Assumptio. A free assumption of a person that hath no right, and the having no right, showeth it to be free. And that we are sure, is to be found in this Divine Inheritance. It is an act of God's free grace, nothing moved him but his own free love. God loveth, because he loveth; and hath mercy on whom, he will have mercy. See this proceeding from free grace, Ephes. 1. 5, 6. Having predestinated us to the adoption of Children, by Jesus Christ to himself, according to the good pleasure of his Will. Here is the good pleasure of God's will, the only ground of our adoption. Thus I have run through the four things, which I undertook for the explication of this point.

Come we now to apply it. [Use.]

First, let us all learn from hence to extol, and magnify, and adore the goodness and bounty of our Lord Jesus Christ; in giving the poor sons of men, so great, so excellent a gift as this of adoption is. To them that receive Him, to them gave He power, dignity, privilege, prerogative, to become the sons of God. You see it is a free gift. Look to all the progress of salvation, from first to last, and you shall find free grace running through every passage of salvation, even as blood runs through every vein in the body of a man. Christ himself is the great gift of God, and all other things are the gift of Christ; God together with him, giveth us all things else. Have we any newness of heart in us? It is He that giveth it. He taketh away the heart of stone, and giveth an heart of flesh. Have we Ministers after God's own heart? It is God that giveth the increase. Have we anything to suffer, or to do? To you it is given to believe, and to suffer. To the first, This great privilege of Adoption. What but free, and undeserved love could have moved Christ, to bestow such a favor upon us? He himself was the only begotten Son of God, and might have contented himself with this dignity forever, and yet He is pleased to become the first begotten of many Brethren. The natural Son of God made way for the poor sons of men, that they might receive the adoption of sons. It is a greater favor than any Adam had, to thank God for, this, that we receive from Christ; Adam was rather in the condition of a servant, then of a Son. He lived under the Covenant of works; Do this, and live. And therefore it was, that Adam was in a possibility of falling from his happy Condition, as ye know he did, and of being turned out of the house, The servant abideth not in the house forever, but the son abideth forever, Joh. 8. 35. If ye will say, he was a son, as indeed he was, it was but a son by Creation. He bore the Image of God, had the divine stamp upon him, but here is a further sonship by adoption. There is a mystical union of believers to Christ, as their head; which Adam had not. But if ye will distinctly see the height, and excellency of this privilege, that so we might know, what we have to bless, and magnify Christ for, so much the clearer; Let us compare this Divine adoption with Civil adoptions, which are in use amongst the sons of men. And see how far this Excellency reacheth, in four or five particulars.

First, in Civil adoption, there is always some need on the Adopter's part. No man will go, and take a stranger's son; and adopt him, unless he want a son of his own; or unless his own son be so unworthy, as he thinketh him not fit to be trusted with an estate. But it is seldom done, but in case of *Orphan*y, where there wanteth Children. The law saith, That adoption is, Actus lega is, naturam sequens, &c. A legal act, Imitating nature, Invented for the comfort of them, that have no Children of their own. But now look to this spiritual adoption, and ye shall find God had no need, he had a son of his own. The Son of his bosom, the Son of his love, the Son of his delights, in whom he did take pleasure from all Eternity, and might have taken pleasure to all Eternity; though there had been no such Creature as Man, made in the World. And yet He was pleased to adopt the sons of men, not because He wanted a son, but because we wanted a Father. And therefore, in this respect, we have great cause to say as the Apostle doth, Behold, what manner of Love, the Father hath shown us, that we should be called the sons of God? 1 Joh. 3. 1.

Secondly, there is commonly on the Adopted his part, some worth. As there is some need on the part of the Adopter, so some worth in the Adopted. When men make their choice, either they have regard to some excellency, or some relation, or something that is a motive to their affections, to pitch upon such a child, rather than another, to adopt for an heir. When Pharaoh's daughter adopted Moses, it is said, Moses his beauty moved her; the Text giveth you that hint, Act. 7. 20. Moses was exceeding fair. When he was cast out, Pharaoh's daughter took him up, and nourished him for her own son. The very beauty of the Child had an operation upon the Lady's heart. So Mordechai adopted Hester: What was the reason? First, she was near akin to him; then, very beautiful, Hest. 2. 7. He brought up Haddassah (which is Hester) his uncle's daughter, for she had neither father nor mother; and the maid was fair and beautiful, whom Mordechai, when her father and mother were dead, took for his own daughter. So, here is something in the Adopted, that moveth the Adopter: But what is in us to move God? unless we speak of moving him to indignation. Beauty we have none, for we are defiled all over with sin, over-spread with a leprosy; all our faculties are in sin, and all sin is in our faculties; our very Righteousness is as a menstruous clothe, What then are our Abominations? Our Civilities and Formalities are but as dung, as the Apostle accounts of all for Christ: If they are but as dung, What then are our oaths, and lies, and prophanenings of the Lord's day? The truth is, we have nothing lovely in us, and yet behold, we are called the sons of God: What love is here?

Thirdly, The adopting father may leave an Estate, but he cannot convey a disposition to him, whom he adopteth, to enable to manage it aright; therefore is there often mistakes: they think they pitch well, and it proveth ill. Such as are adopted, they come leightly by their estates, and they set leightly by them. But herein lieth a further and higher excellency of this divine Adoption, God, together with an Inheritance, conveyeth a Disposition, that rendereth one fit for the managing of such an estate. Ye have an expression that soundeth that way, Col. 1. 12. Giving thanks to the Father, which hath made us meet to be partakers of the inheritance of the Saints in light. He doth not only give us an inheritance, but maketh us meet to be partakers of that inheritance. Our adopting Father stampeth his own Image upon every adopted son. He maketh every believer Patrizare, to imitate his Father which is in heaven, which the other cannot do.

Fourthly, In Civil Adoption, the Adopted son cannot enjoy his father and the inheritance both at once; till the adopting father be dead, what is left him by the Adoptor doth not come into his hands. But now, herein lieth another excellency of this Spiritual Adoption, Every believer may at once enjoy both the Inheritance and the Father, because he that adopteth him liveth forever; yea, because his Father is his Inheritance. So the truth standeth. He that adopteth us to an Inheritance, Himself is that Inheritance which he adopteth us to; for we are adopted to the fruition of our God. Psal. 16. 5. The Lord is the portion of mine inheritance. So that here is Father and Inheritance joined both together, because the Father is the Inheritance.

Lastly, In Civil Adoption, it is but some petty Inheritances which men are adopted to, by their adopting fathers, some poor things; it may be, a Farm, or Lordship, or Manor; What if it be a Kingdom? It is, in comparison, but a poor thing, to that Inheritance which Christ hath adopted us to, which we shall find described to the life, 1 Pet. 1. 4. To an inheritance incorruptible, undefiled, that fadeth not away, reserved in heaven for you. Here are the super-excellent properties of that Inheritance, the consideration of which, will exceedingly inhaunce this privilege of Adoption.

First, It is 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, an incorruptible inheritance. Whatsoever Inheritances we have here below, they are liable to corruption. If a man's estate lie in Mony, that may rust, or the thieves may break through and steal it; If in Cattle, they may die; if in Houses, they may be burnt; if in Lands, an enemy may invade them. But here is an Inheritance that cannot be corrupted, because it lieth in God: For the Father is our Inheritance, and the immortal God is not liable to any corruption.

Secondly, It is 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, an Inheritance undefiled. There are few inheritances here below, but some defilement sticketh to them; they are either ill got, or ill kept. An Inheritance may be got by oppression; or, if not so, yet there may be defilement in the keeping of it. He that cometh to inherit it may behave himself oppressively. If, when riches increase, the heart cometh to be set upon them, there will be defilement with the inheritance. But here is an Inheritance undefiled. No unclean thing shall enter into heaven, not so much as a Serpent, to tempt in that Paradise that is above. Mahomet telleth his followers of a defiled inheritance, wherein there shall be a great deal of filthiness: But Christ hath provided another kind of Inheritance for his, which is without sin, undefiled.

Thirdly, It is 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, an Inheritance thatfadeth not away; a Metaphor taken from flowers: The beauty of a flower, and the sweetness of it, is quickly gone, withereth in a moment, and fit for nothing then but to be cast away. So it is with all other temporal Inheritances, they lose their glory after a while; they cease to minister that content, which a man hoped to have found in them, which may be had at the first possessing of them; yea, all the glory of the world is like the flower of the field, that fadeth away. But herein lieth the excellency of this Inheritance, it fadeth not away. It is a flower that never withereth, their joys are always flourishing: a continual spring of flourishing consolations, ariseth from the enjoyment of God, and every day sweeter and sweeter.

Fourthly, It is 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, an inheritancereserved. We cannot say so of temporal inheritances, they may be gone. A trick at Law may put a man out of his estate, he may be wrangled out of it by some device or other, an enemy may come and spoil him of it, he can have no assurance. Though men purchase houses and lands, for themselves and their heirs forever; alas, how soon are some men dead and gone? and, it may be, the next generation knoweth no such houses or lands, nor no such men. But here is an inheritance reserved: All the Devills in hell shall never wrangle a man out of This Possession reserved.

Lastly, It is 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, an inheritancc reservedin heaven; which is still a farther addition. Whatsoever is in Heaven, is excellent. Many fading things are on earth. The least thing in heaven is above the best things in the world. And it is a consideration that addeth much to the sweetness of the Inheritance, to consider where it lieth: As, Who would not rather desire to have a small competency of land in England, amongst his own friends, where he was born, than to have much in the Indies, amongst strangers. It is an Inheritance reserved in heaven, which is our Country, the Believer's home; Every man is born from above, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉; his kindred live in Heaven, his Father is there, and his Mother there. We are strangers upon earth, therefore our inheritance is in heaven, which is much more worth than our inheritance below. So excellent is this Inheritance. Therefore how great is this love of Christ, in giving us this privilege, to become the sons of God?

Secondly, Let us learn from hence to judge of our estates, how things stand between God and us, whether we be sons and daughters, yea or no; nothing concerneth us more. Therefore time spent in this scrutiny will be profitable. Our Sonship is evidenced two ways.

- By way of Testimony, and
- By way of Inference.

First, By way of Testimony. So we come to know our selves to be sons and daughters, by the witness of the Spirit, which ye read of, Rom. 8. 16. The Spirit itself beareth witness to our spirits, that we are the children of God. This Spirit it is, that keepeth the Records of Heaven. The holy Ghost is conscious to all the secrets of God, knoweth what names are written in the book of life; therefore he is able to make them known to us. None but the Son of God can Redeem, and none but the Spirit of God can Assure, so as to make your Evidences clear, and infallible, and above all doubt and fear. But this doth not now lie so clear in my way.

Secondly, It is therefore evidenced by way of Inference, Vers. 8, 9. Our Sonship dependeth upon our receiving Christ. It may be inferred from hence, As many as received him, to them gave he power to become the sons of God. Therefore every son of God hath received him; and everyone that hath received him, may know himself to be the Son of God. This I shall insist upon, hoping you will excuse me, though I be a little large in it. To help you in your search, I shall endeavor to show, what it is to receive Jesus Christ aright, because your sonship hangeth upon the having, or not having, Jesus Christ.

Give me leave therefore to tell you,

- First, What it Supposeth.
- Secondly, What it Includeth.
- Thirdly, What it Produceth. That by laying all together, ye may come to some estimate of your own condition.
- First, It Supposeth certain Acts of the Understanding.
- Secondly, It Includeth certain Acts of the Will.
- Thirdly, It produceth certain Effects, to bear witness to the truth of the former Acts.

First, Receiving Christ supposeth certain Acts, of men's understanding their Graces. Father, sanctify them through thy truth, thy Word is truth. I say, certain acts of the understanding; namely, certain due apprehensions concerning diverse particulars I shall name to you, which, in an ordinary course, we come to have the knowledge of, before we come to receive Christ. I speak not, what the work of God hath in the souls of Infants, when he conveyeth Christ to them; but in an ordinary course, when men and women come to years, there are certain precedent apprehensions of the understanding.

First, Concerning the Person and Office of Jesus Christ. No man receiveth he knoweth not what. We receive not Christ till we desire him, Ignoti nulla cupido; and we desire him not, till we know him. The soul first cometh, by the Spirit of Christ, to have some apprehensions wrought concerning the Person of Christ; to know him as God-Man, the Word made flesh. The Man-God, only Suffering as Man, Satisfying as God. There lieth much in this, in the right apprehension of Christ's Person, which is the object of our faith, as it justifieth. As they say of marriage-contracts, If there be a mistake of the person, the Contract is not valid; as, if by some way of deceit, when the Contract cometh to be made up, another woman be brought in the habit and room of that party, to whom the man intendeth to contract himself, here is an error of person. As it was with Laban, that gave, to Jacob, Leah under color of Rachel, and that made void the marriage. How can a soul be married to Christ, and mistake the person? and not know what Christ is, nor acknowledge his Godhead? Here is an error of the person. Christ is another kind of person, than they take him for. As there must be knowledge of the person of Christ, so of his office too.

We must know him as the great Priest, our sacrifice. No other sacrifice would have served our turn, and none could have offered that sacrifice but himself. The Eternal spirit offered himself without spot to God.

- The Priest sacrificing, and
- The Priest interceding.

These are the two great parts of his Priestly office.

And so know him as our Prophet, guiding us by the Word. This is my beloved Son, hear him, guiding us by his spirit, We shall be all taught of God. And as King, ruling us, and subduing our Enemies under his feet.

Secondly, It supposeth due apprehensions about the nature, and danger of sin. For till men have some consideration about this, they do not use to look out for a Savior. Therefore the first thing the spirit of God doth, when he cometh to convert, is to convince, He shall convince the World of sin, because they believed not on me. To let men see sin, as for its nature extremely odious. That there are two great evils in it, Aversion from God, and Conversion to the Creature, Jer. 2. 13. Ye have committed two great evils; by forsaking Me, the fountain of living waters, and hewing to yourselves Cisterns, yea broken Cisterns, that will hold no water.

And for the danger of it; It is such as exposeth men to eternal death. And till this be seen, there will be no looking out for Remedy; where Justice is, wages must be paid. Now God is just, therefore sin is dangerous.

Thirdly, It supposeth due apprehensions about the necessity of a Savior, which followeth upon the sight of sin, Acts 16. 30. The convinced Gaoler cried out, Sirs, what shall I do to be saved? Till men come to be sensible of their spiritual drought, they never look out for the waters of life. It is not every cut-finger that causeth a man to send to the Surgeon; nor every head-ache, that maketh him to go to the Physician; but when he is wounded, when he is sick to death, then send for the Surgeon, for the Physician; when sin lieth heavy upon the soul, then they make out for Christ. Those that scoffed at Noah, all the while he was building the Ark, when the Deluge was come indeed, when they saw no other shift; then they cried out, A World for an Ark. When we are ready to be turned over the Ladder, pardon then, is pardon indeed.

Fourthly, It supposeth some due apprehensions about the utter impossibility of obtaining salvation by anything, or by any person, but by Christ alone. That which Peter taught, Acts 4. 12. Neither is there salvation in any other, for there is no other Name under Heaven, given amongst men, by which we must be saved. If there were another way open for salvation, then there were no such necessity of receiving Christ; but seeing this is not only a way, but the only way of God's appointment: seeing, as Naomi once said to her daughters in Law, when they would needs follow her. Why, saith she, Ruth. 1. 11. Have I anymore sons in my Womb, that they may be your Husbands? So, Hath God anymore sons in the Womb of his Eternal decree, but Christ alone, that they may be Mediators for us; Seeing there is no Savior, but He, therefore there is an utter impossibility of obtaining salvation by any other person, or thing besides. When the soul cometh to see this, it maketh way for the receiving of Christ. As for all the Creatures, David saith, No man can by any means redeem the soul of his brother from death, he must let that alone forever. There is no man, or means, or ordinances, but all say of salvation, as Job bringeth them in, speaking of wisdom, Job 28. 13, 14, 15. Where shall wisdom be found? where is the place of understanding? Men know not the price thereof, nor is it found in the Land of the living. The deepsaith, It is not in me, and the sea saith, It is not with me; It cannot be got for Gold, neither shall Silver be weighed for the price thereof. So may I say of Salvation, Who knoweth the price thereof? where shall salvation be found? where is the place of happiness? The Law saith, It is not in me. Duties say, It is not in us. Ordinances say, We cannot give it. Why? It must come only from Jesus Christ. Therefore the spirit of God usually letteth souls see an utter impossibility of salvation, by any other, than by Christ.

Fifthly, It supposeth after all this, a due apprehension of a probability of obtaining pardon, and grace, in and through Christ. And this setteth the soul a moving towards him, and is an inducement, as to the humble soul, Lament. 3. 29. To lay its mouth in the dust; if so be, there may be hope. As to those Mourners in Joel, Joel. 2. 14. Who knoweth, if God will return, and repent, and leave a blessing behind him? Here is endeavor arising from probability. So the Ninevites in the prophesy of Jonah, Jonah 3. 9. Who can tell if God will turn, and repent of his fierce wrath, that we perish not? Faith putteth it to the venture, and putteth it self upon the free grace of God in Christ for mercy; as having a probability, founded upon these four grounds of obtaining pardon.

First, Upon the abundant goodness of God, of which you read, Psal. 130. 7. Let Israel hope in the Lord: Why? for with the Lord is mercy, and with him is plenteous redemption. There is abundant mercy, and plenteous redemption with God, therefore Israel may hope. This appeareth to be the mercy of an Infinite God, therefore he can pardon, and take away the sins of a finite Creature; here is one ground.

Secondly, Probability of success: It is founded upon thepowerfull Mediation of Jesus Christ, Hebr. 7. 25. He is able to save to the uttermost, those that come to God by Him, seeing he ever liveth, to make Intercession for them. His blood like a mighty Ocean, is able to overflow, as it were, the mighty Rocks, as well as the lowest Sand. The Sun of Righteousness is able to scatter the thickest Clouds, as well as the slenderest mists.

Thirdly, Upon the free and gracious breathings of the Holy Ghost, Joh. 3. 8. The wind bloweth where it listeth, thou hearest the sound thereof, and knowest not whence it cometh, nor whither it goeth. So it is with the Spirit. It hath breathed in others, and may breathe in thee, when it pleaseth him. And therefore the soul resolveth hopefully to wait on God, till the Spirit shall be pleased to breathe upon him; and to that end, it seeketh him in all the means, wherein he is wont to breathe; because the soul knoweth, it is just that the Spirit of God should not breathe in any, if he be not sought in all. If they neglect someone means, the influence of Grace may be withheld. If any one of the Pipes be cut, the water cometh not home to the Cistern. And God is wont to convey grace to us, by so many Ordinances, as by so many Pipes; if one Ordinance be neglected, it is just with God to withdraw his grace. If a soul will hear, but not pray; if he neglecteth any one Ordinance, God may refuse to breathe. Therefore the soul groundeth probability upon the free breathings of the Spirit.

Fourthly, Upon the example of many that have been converted before. It seeth the example of the perishing of a multitude of sinners, in the story of the Ninevites; and of a multitude of sins, in the story of Mary Magdalene; and knoweth the story of mercy, Such were some of you; but ye are washed, and cleansed, and sanctified, by the Lord Jesus Christ, in the Spirit of God. These are the apprehensions which our Savior Christ supposeth. All these, more or less, in an ordinary course, taken with limitation.

Secondly, There are certain acts of the Will, which the receiving of grace includeth, which are specially these two: First, a present choosing of Christ, upon Conjugall terms. Secondly, a trusting on him forever after.

First, Receiving of Christ includeth in it a present chusing of Christ for our Husband, upon Conjugall terms. I take that Metaphor, as most easy to express it by, because he is received under many notions, and under this amongst others. As a Wife receiveth the Man in marriage, so the Soul receiveth Christ. It is a Choice, and present Choice, and a present Choice upon Conjugall terms. This is an act of the Will; Choosing belongeth to the Will. When the Will is enabled by the Spirit of Christ, to choose him for his All in all, and to make a present choice of him; they are terms, not of the Future, but of the Present Tense, that make a Marriage. It is not, I promise to make thee my Wife in time to come, that maketh a Contract; but, I do take thee to my Wife, this is to make a Marriage. It is not to take Christ when I am rich, or older; but it must be a present choosing of him, that maketh the Match: And it must be upon honorable terms, such as a woman taketh the husband upon, so as to forsake father and mother, and cleave to the husband. Christ did so for us, and we must do so for Christ. Christ forsook his Father, in some sense, and came and emptied himself; forsook Heaven, and came down to us. The Word was made flesh, and dwelt amongst us, that so he might be wedded to his Church upon earth. There is something like that, we have to do for Christ; the Soul must forsake all for Christ. As it is said of the Spouse, Psal. 45. 10. Hearken, O daughter, and consider, and incline thine ear; forget also thine own people, and thy father's house. So shall the King desire thy beauty. There must be a forsaking of our former lusts, and former ways, and former carelessness; a leaving of all to cleave to Christ. That you may understand it better, allude to that of Hos. 14. 3. Ashur shall not save us, we will not ride upon horses, neither will we say anymore to the works of our hands, Ye are our gods. For in thee the fatherless findeth mercy. Ephraim shall say, What have I to do anymore with Idols? So, when the Soul cometh to close with Jesus Christ, The Law shall not save us, we will not rest upon our own Duties, our services shall not be our Savior's, the means of grace shall not be our Mediators: What have we to do anymore with Idells? and the lusts of our former ignorance, and intemperancy, and wantonness, &c? Here a choosing of Christ supposeth a separation from all things else, and a cleaving to him: Being joined to the Lord, we are one spirit, as the Apostle's phrase is; cleaving to him, so as to be subject to him, that is, on conjugal terms, on which Christ is to be received. Ephes. 4. 24. Therefore as the Church is subject to Christ, so let the wives be to their own husbands in everything. We should choose his Yoke as well as his Crown; his Spirit to guide us, as well as his Blood to redeem us; to be subject to him, as well as to be protected by him. This is the first thing included in the receiving of Christ, namely, a present choosing of Christ upon Conjugal terms.

Secondly, Trust in him forever after, as our God; so saith the Text, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 , to trust, that is, Continue to believe in his name; because everyone that hath received him, continueth to believe, continueth to trust, and to rely upon him, and stay himself upon his God, and to lean upon his Beloved, as the phrase is in the Canticles. As a woman that hath got an husband, hath one to trust to for provision, and direction, and protection. If David's wives be taken away, he will rescue them; if Ahasuerus his wife be in danger of Haman's plots, her husband will relieve her. The Soul, before marriage to Christ, was liable to all old debts, the Law had a saying to her, the Devil had a plea against her; but now she is married, all is laid upon Christ. No action lies against the wife. Now the soul hath an husband, and accordingly she trusts in Christ, and sendeth the Devil to Christ her Husband for an answer. Thus you see what it Supposeth and Includeth.

Thirdly, See what it Produceth, namely, Certain Effects, that bear witness to the truth of the former Acts, to make it appear, there were true Apprehensions in the Understanding, and true Acts in the Will; and they are diverse.

First, The true receiving of Christ, wheresoever it is, it produceth a Prizing Love, in the first place. It is impossible, but that the soul which hath received Christ indeed, should prize him and love him, because of the beauty and excellency in him, 1 Joh. 4. 16. compared with verse. 19. We have known and believed the love that God hath given to us. Then followeth, We love him, because he first loved us. Where there is a knowing and believing of God's love to us, there will be a reciprocal love from us to God. To him that believeth in Christ, Christ is precious. It is not only a love, but a prizing love. 1 Pet. 2. 7. To you therefore which believe, he is precious. They that have received Christ indeed, will set a price upon him, howsoever others value him. Judas, though he did converse with him, not having received him by faith, What a price setteth he upon him? the price of a Slave, thirty pieces of silver, the very price that was to be given by a man, that had bought a slave to be his servant: a goodly price. The Jews that bought him, and Judas that sold him, make no more of Christ but thus. Now take the Soul, which hath indeed received him, and knoweth what is in him; such a soul will not set Christ to sale, no, not upon any terms. Offer her Preferments, Estates, and Kingdoms, and Worlds; A goodly price for Christ, the soul will say! No, he is infinitely more worth then all these. To you that believe, Christ is precious, because ye have received him.

Secondly, It produceth a watchful Fear. Whenssoever the soul receiveth Christ, it will be afraid to lose him. Having received a Kingdom that cannot be moved, saith the Apostle, Heb. 12. ult. let us have grace to serve God acceptably, with reverence and godly fear. One would think, all fear were now over. No, fear so much the more. The Gospel, that is the Kingdom of Heaven, which is often so called in Scripture; and it is a Kingdom that cannot be moved. The Law, that was taken away; but the Gospel, that cannot be moved, no alteration of that: We must never look for another Gospel, than what is evidently laid down in Scripture. A man that hath received this Gospel, hath received Jesus Christ in it. For this Manna cometh down in the dew of heaven, Christ in the ministry of the Gospel. And having received this Kingdom, we shall not be moved. Having received Jesus Christ, let us serve him with reverence and god'y fear, saith the Scripture. There will be a fear, where there hath been a receiving of Christ; Kiss the Son. Serve him with fear, and rejoice with trembling, Psal. 2. 11, 12. I will allude to Act. 3. 11. ye read there in the foregoing Verse, of a Creeple, that was healed by Peter and John, And immediately his feet and ankle bones received strength, and he stood up and praised God. What doth the man mean now, to leave his leaping and skipping, and come and clasp about Peter and John? In all likelihood, because he was afraid, when they were gone, his lameness would return again to him. Such a disposition there is in every soul that receiveth Christ, it is sensible of its having received health, and strength, and comfort from him: Now, lest his former lameness should return, lest the lusts of his former ignorance should again prevail, and those terrors of conscience under which it lay, should come again; the soul is desirous to hold Christ so, as never to let him go. Not that a soul that hath once received Christ, can lose him forever; but because, though it cannot wholly lose his presence, yet it may lose a great deal of its comfortable communion, which it had with Christ, and God in him. Therefore there will be a watchful fear, lest we should lose those sweet embracements which we have had from Christ.

Thirdly, This receiving of Christ in truth, produceth a spirituall life. He that hath the Son hath life, he that hath not the Son hath not life, 1 Joh. 5. 12. Men are now other kind of creatures than before, they have motion from another principle then they had before. As, where there is life, the soul setteth the body a working. So, when the soul hath Christ, it receiveth life, and motion, and appetite, and sense, and growth from him. This, true receiving of Christ, produceth.

Fourthly, As there is a prising Love, a watchful Fear, and a Spiritual life; so, It produceth fruit to God. Every soul that hath received Christ, is more or less a fruitful soul; and doth not render fruit to itself as formerly, but to God, aiming at him and his glory in what it doth. And this followeth upon the former. I told you, It was receiving of Christ upon Conjugall terms, as a woman receiveth an husband. And this you must know, that Christ hath always issue by his wives; The Lord Jesus hath no barren Spouse. Everyone that receiveth Christ for an husband, he hath issue by her; that soul bringeth forth fruit to God, as the Apostle's phrase is; and it followeth upon the marriage, in that expression, Rom. 7. 4. Wherefore ye also are become dead to the Law in the body of Christ, that ye should be married to another; to God, in that marriage.

Again, It produceth society with Christ, Conjugall society, when he hath been received upon Conjugall terms. Husbandsdwell with your Wives, saith Peter, 1 Pet. 3. Christ dwelleth with such a soul, such a soul converseth with Christ. As it is said of Isaac and Rebecca, Gen. 26. 8.

Abimelech King of the Philistines looked out at a window, and saw, and behold Isaac was sporting with Rebecca his Wife. And he concluded from thence that she was his wife, because he saw her sporting with him, in private. The soul that hath truly received Christ, will solace it self with Christ in private; not only enjoy him in public Ordinances in the sight of the World, but in private Communion with him, even in the private duties of his worship. There will be a society with him.

Lastly, *There will be an expectation producing all goodthings in him, and through him, and from him. For he that hath not spared his own Son, but gave him to death for us all, how shall he not, together with him, give us all good things? Rom. 8. 32. He that hath Christ, hath got the Fountain, His blood is a fountain opened, in Zacharias. He that hath the fountain, may have what water he standeth in need of; be it more, or be it less, be it a dish full, or a paille full, or a Cistern-full: as long as he hath the fountain, he may have what he wanteth. So it fareth with the soul that hath Christ, the soul expecteth all things from him, for this, and a better life, only with this caution; That she must make account to him. Expectation implieth a waiting that foll weth upon belief, Isai. 28. 16. Behold, saith the Lord, I lay in Zion a corner stone, a precious stone, a sure foundation: he that believeth shall not make haste; Christ now being received, is full of grace. In Him are all treasures, both of wisdom, and knowledge, and of grace, and pardon; suppose some of these be not immediately communicated, he that believeth maketh not haste. It is in Him, in Christ, therefore I may be content to wait, I shall have it when he seeth his own time; Waiting is a spiritual expectation of believers; as believing is, of having received. As put case, a place is void at Court, and two men are suitors for it. One rideth, Day and Night, and tireth Horse after Horse, and maketh more haste than good speed, for fear the place should be gone. The other he taketh his leisure, goeth to the Court, but slowly, Why? because he hath had the Prince's promise before, and he knoweth he hath such, and such friends at Court, that will put the King in mind of it; Which of these two hath the better hope? Not he that maketh the most haste, but the other. He confideth, the place shall be his, because he trusteth to the Prince's promise, and relieth upon his friends at Court. I see at length, we have got to an end of this particular; I beseech you, bring your souls to this touch-stone. Try yourselves, whether you have received Christ, or no, and whether ye be sons, and daughters or no, by what ye receive of Christ. Suppose, we say. Hast thou ever had any due, and serious apprehensions of the person, and office of Jesus Christ? Hast thou been convinced of the nature and danger of sin? and, upon such conviction, made to see the necessity of a Savior? The utter impossibility of obtaining salvation, by anything, or person, but Christ alone? And hast thou after this, seen a probability of having pardon and grace from Christ, because of the abundant goodness of God, the Father, and the powerful mediation of God the Son, and the free and gracious breathings of God the Holy Ghost? Hast thou now thrown thyself into the arms of Christ, or laid thyself at his feet, and sayest, if I die, I will die there: as the poor Lepers said, when they went to the Camp of the Assyrians. If we stay here, we must perish; if we go thither, we can but perish. Certainly, if we stay in this condition, we must be damned, we will put it to that, to go to Christ, he can but damn us. We have heard, that the Kings of Israel, are merciful Kings, and therefore, Benhadad saith, we will put ropes about our necks, and go to him? Hast thou acknowledged, that it is just with God to damn thee, and yet hast hope in* Israel's God? Hast thou said with Hester, I resolve to go to him, and lay hold upon the golden Scepter, and if I perish, I perish? Better perish in a way of expectation, then to do, as I do. Try it, by what this receiving of Christ includeth. Was there not a time, wherein thy Soul made choice of Christ for her Husband, with resolution in the attendance on Christ to forsake all, and cleave to him; and subject to him in all things? To receive Jesus Christ, as Lord, not only as Jesus, to deliver thee from the wrath to come, but as Lord, to be ruled and governed by him? Hast thou learned to trust in him for the payment of all thy debts, and discharge of all thy sins? to send Law, and Devil to Christ for an answer? Try, what this receiving of Christ is, by what it produceth. Where is thy prizing love to Christ? Is it more to thee, then thousand worlds? where is thy watchfulness? If thou hast a Jewell about thee, thou wilt take heed, what Company thou comest into. A man that hath treasure about him, will be more careful to avoid the society of Robbers, then such as have no money in their purses; If thou hast received Christ, thou hast a Treasure. Oh take heed of coming into such company, as may occasion the with-drawing of Christ from thee. Where is thy spiritual life, if thou hast received him? Dost thou grow, as living things do? Hast thou an Appetite to the word? Dost thou desire the sincere milk of the Word? What fruit doest thou bring forth? Is it fruit to God? Hath Christ any Issue by thy soul? what society hast thou with Christ? Is there any solacing thyself in Meditation, and Prayer, and secret Communion between Christ, and thy soul? And then, doest thou expect all things from him? And canst thou wait till God's time cometh, to make good all his promises, which are all yea, and amen, in Christ? I shall leave these things with you, Consider them, And the Lord give you understanding in all things.

Let us now go on to a further use of Consolation from hence, and after that, to the next verse. As there were no going to sea for any man with Comfort, if there were not some Havens, and Harbours to strike into, in a storm; so no living in the World, if there were not some comfort to be fetched from Heaven. Look through all the Scriptures, and ye will hardly find a safer harbor than this, The relation between God, and believers. He is their Father, they his Children. They receive Christ, and so become sons. This will afford comfort to us in several Cases, which I shall briefly run over.

First, In case of weak abilities and performances, when they shall think that God is their Father, and therefore is willing to bear with them, though their performances be but weak, and their abilities small; according to that, Psal. 102. 13, 14. Like as a father pitieth his children, so the Lord pitieth them that fear him. For he knoweth our frame, he remembereth that we are but dust. God consider; what mould we are made of, that we are Men, and not Angels; sinful men, and not men in a state of Perfection. Therefore when we follow on to know him, and go lamenting after the Lord, as it is said of the men of Israel, Jer. 9. though God discover a great deal of weakness in our services, yet we find a great deal of acceptance in him, when he looketh upon us as children. The truth is, though our faith be weak, our God is strong; and from thence cometh our safety. As, when a father carrieth his little child in his arms, the Infant, with his little feeble arms, layeth hold upon the father; but the safety lieth in the father's holding him, and not in his clasping about the father. So, we hold Christ by the feeble arm of our faith, but Christ holdeth us more strongly by his Spirit, and our safety cometh from thence. It is true, our faith is weak, and so our services are accordingly weak; but still look at God as a Father. Suppose a man have a son in foreign parts, sent abroad for his education; before he hath well learned the Language, he writeth a Letter home to his father. He is but a scribler, what he writeth is written but in broken language, and badly writ. But it cometh from a child, and therefore the father taketh it well, and passeth by all the faults. The father biddeth the child shoot at such a mark; the child draweth the bow, and letteth go; the arrow falleth a great deal short of the mark; yet he is encouraged by the father, because he hath done his best. As men are in a condition of belief, so accordingly in a condition of comfort. If I can but go to God as a Father, though with a great deal of infirmity, I may hope to find success. Indeed, Lord, Lord, is often sent away without a blessing; they cried, Lord, Lord, and had no blessing. But, Father, Father, that always proceedeth from the Spirit of Adoption, by which we cry Abba, Father; that is never sent away without an answer. Deus non negavit sua petentibus, saith Augustine sweetly; God, that freely offereth himself to those that ask not for him, will be sure to give his good things to them that ask him, because he is their Father.

Secondly, As in the first place; it ministereth comfort thus, in case of weak abilities and performances; so, In case of sinful failings. We are not only weaklings, but sinners in what we do. But yet, Look at God as a Father, and consider that, Mal. 3. 13. I will spare them, as a father spareth his own son that serveth him. If we be sons, servicing-sons, that go on to serve our Father, according to what we have received from him; he will spare us, as a man spareth his son that serveth him. Doubtless, many are here, that know the bowels of parents; let those that do not, consider David's carriage towards his sinful son Absalom. Absalom taketh up arms against his father, and endeavoreth to deprive him of his Estate, Crown, and Life. An Army cometh against him, and messengers come and tell David, that Absalom is overthrown. What enquiry doth David make? How fareth it with the Host? No, but, Is the young man Absalom well? And when a second messenger came, and told him, Absalom was slain, How do his bowels break out at his mouth! My son Absalom, my son, would God I had died for thee. Let us judge, by this, how God looketh at a failing child, whose bowels are infinitely much more large, than those of David's. Ye know the Parable of the Prodigal, Luk. 15. he had run a wild course; but resolving with himself to take up, I will go to my father, saith he, and say unto him, Father, I have sinned against heaven, and before thee. He doth so. And this word [Father] breaketh the heart of him, to whom he made his address, as ye know the story, He fetched the robes, and the ring, and killed the fatted calf. Though a prodigal, yet a son still. Our Savior knew the comfort of this Relation, and therefore directeth us to make use of it in his Prayer, Our Father which art in heaven, for give us our trespasses. That is a melting word, and therefore this must needs be a comfortable Relation.

Thirdly, This affordeth Comfort to Believers, In case of temporall sufferings, and want, and losses, and dangers. Whatsoever our sufferings be, they come from a Father. And the holy Ghost calleth upon us again and again to consider that, Deut. 8. 5. Thou shalt also consider in thy heart, that as a man chastiseth his son, so the Lord thy God chastiseth thee. The father will call for a rod to correct his son, but will not turn him out of doors. Ye have it at large, Heb. 12. from the 5th. verse to the 11th. Ye have forgot the exhortation which speaketh to you as unto children, My son, despise not thou the chastening of the Lord, nor faint when thou art rebuked of him; for whom the Lord loveth he chastiseth, and scourgeth every son whom he receiveth. For they verily for a few days chastise us at their pleasures, but he for our profit, that we might be partakers of the holiness of God. All chastisements tend, to make men partakers of the holiness of God. As for the wants of Believers, whatsoever they be, here is comfort for them, they do not want a Father. It is the great consolation that Christ gave to his Disciples, when he was to depart from them, in regard of his corporal presence, Joh. 14. 18. I will not leave you comfortless, but I will come to you: That is, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, as the word in the Original signifieth; I will not leave you orphans, or fatherless. A child, though he be a son and heir, yet in his minority is often kept short; a servant, haply, the steward of a family, hath as good allowance as he. The children of Christ here are in minority, therefore they are in some wants; but here is their comfort, they have an inheritance laid up for them, and that is a rich one. They are now in their nonage, when they come to heaven, they shall have enough. In all dangers let it be considered, what care their Father taketh for them, because they are his children. Are they not all ministering spirits, sent forth to minister for them who shall be heirs of salvation? An heir of a great family, what shall he need to fear, so long as he is conversing among his fathers servants? All the creatures are such to God; and thou being a child, thou art amongst thy Father's servants, and therefore needest to fear no danger from them.

Fourthly, In case of spiritual faintings, and fears, and desertions. The soul of a believer sometimes fainteth away for fear; David saith, My heart and flesh fail me. Here is now a swoounding child, consider what fathers are wont to do in such cases, how they send out for help presently; all the house is little enough to look after a child in such a condition. God himself pitieth his swoounding children, and sendeth his Ministers, yea, his own Spirit, to speak comfort to such, and to administer some Aquavitae to them, some water of life, that he may fetch them again out of their faintings. Sometimes fear possesseth a child of God, perhaps of falling into desertion, as, it is possible, such may befall the dearest of God's Saints, as with Heman, who thought himself free amongst the dead. God sometimes doth this, but still as a Father. As a father, that seeth his child ready to run into a river, or into the mire, he will take the child, and make him believe he will throw him in, but it is to make him fearful of being thrown in. So, God makes his children believe, that he will throw them into hell itself; but it is for this very end and purpose, that they may never come there, for this fear will keep them from the ways of hell. Yea, sometimes God is pleased to desert his own children, Zion saith, My God hath forgotten me, as it is in Isaiah; but then it is no more, but as when a father goeth behind a door, and suffereth his child to cry after him, and hideth himself on purpose to try the affections of the child, to make him the more eager in the pursuit of his father; which done, then he discovereth himself. Just so it is with God, He withdraweth the light of his countenance, not on purpose to keep it so forever, but to make it more endeared to his children. As the Prophet speaketh, In a little while I hid my face from thee for a moment, but with everlasting kindness will I have mercy on thee, saith the Lord thy God, and thy Redeemer.

Lastly, Here is comfort in case of approaching death, a time when men stand much in need of comfort, when they are to leave all their outward comforts in this world; therefore they had need of better. Now if a man can say in assurance of faith, as Christ did, Father, I commend my spirit into thy hands; Here is an everlasting consolation, a Fort that all the devils in hell cannot batter. A man that in his life-time hath got acquaintance with God, may, with confidence, commend his soul to God as to a Father, when he dieth. Other people may leave an estate behind them, and men may look after that. A man may commend his estate to his friend, and his body to the grave, and some may have so much charity as to interr that: But whom shall he commend his soul to? It is not for every man to think, to commend his spirit to God with confidence: Upon what acquaintance, will God say, can you do this? Will we trust our Jewels to any, but our best friends? will we put them into the hands of those, that we never saw in our lives? No. But a man that hath known God for his Father, he will with confidence say, Father, into thy hands I commend my spirit; I do not only lay my Jewell at thy feet, but put it into thy hands, that so it may be safe in thy custody. I commend it into thy hands, out of which, all the devils in hell shall never be able to pull it. With this confidence, Paul believed. Happy is that soul that is able to say, as our Savior did, before his Ascension, to his Disciples, I go to my Father, and to your Father, and to my God and your God. When a man is able to look his friends in the face, though with a dying look, and shall say, Be of good comfort, I shall be no loser; I go to my Father, and your Father. Blessed are the people that are insuch a case. Blessed are the people whose God is the Lord. Blessed are the people that have received Jesus Christ aright, and so are become sons of Adoption. I have now done with that Point, and shall go on.

Vers. 13. Which were born not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God.

This verse containeth a further description of them that received Christ. They were described in the 12 Verse by their faith. And in this 13 Verse, they are described, by their birth. To them that believe in his Name, which were born not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God.

Their birth: concerning which, we are here told,

- First, what is not the efficient Cause of it.
- Secondly, what is.

First, what is not the efficient Cause of it.

Three things are here removed.

- 1. Blood.
- 2. The will of the flesh.
- 3. The will of man.

Secondly, what is: God, and God only. I shall take the Clauses, as they lie in order.

- First, I shall show; That Believers, as such, are not born of blood.
- Secondly, That they are born, not of the will of the flesh.

- Thirdly, not of the will of man. But,
- Fourthly, they are born of God.

First, Believers, as such, They are not born of blood, what is that?

Ye know in our ordinary manner of speech, we are used to make mention, of base blood, Noble blood, blood Royal; and accordingly, they are said to be born of blood, to intimate, that they have not grace from their Ancestors. It doth not come to them by descent. We say of many diseases, that such, and such, come of a blood, because they are derived from parents. They are not born of blood; to show that the work of grace is not derived from one's Ancestors.

Therefore the word in the original is, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, we are not born of bloods. We may think it on purpose to be put in, to meet with that mistake of the bragging of the Jews, who still boast to be the sons of Abraham, Joh. 6. Now because, they did not so much bear themselves upon their immediate Progenitors, as upon their Fore-fathers far remote; Therefore the Apostle saith, not of blood, of immediate parents, nor of parents long before born: It came from neither of these. It is an usual manner of speech. As he speaketh of a man, that bragged of his birth, Longo sanguine sincere, To fetch Commendations from the blood of our Progenitors, of the blood of many generations together. So that the meaning of this phrase is, That the new birth cometh not by propagation, Grace cometh not by descent, Not of blood. If it had gone along with the Kindred, Certainly, so holy a Virgin as Mary was, yea, the holy One himself, Christ Jesus, would not have had any unholy people of his Kindred. And yet such there were, John 11. 10. Neither did his Brethren believe in Him.

I shall give you three Demonstrations to make it appear That believers, as such, are not born of blood.

First, Because many good parents, have bad Children, as well as good ones. Adam had Cain, as well as Abel. And Abraham, Ishmael, as well as Isaac. And Isaac, Esau, as well as Jacob. And Jacob had Simeon and Levi, as well as Joseph and Benjamin.

Secondly, It appeareth, because sometimes good parents have bad Children, and bad parents have good Children, in a line. Look into the Chronicles, ye shall find that bad Ahaz had good Hezekiah, good Hezekiah had wicked Manasseh, so he was for a great part of his life. And wicked Manasseh, had good Josiah; and good Josiah, had wicked Jehoaz. Good parents, bad Children, and bad Children, good parents.

Thirdly, It appeareth, because the younger many times hath the greater share in spiritual things, whereas, if grace were a natural privilege, the greatest share would go to them first. The first-born in all natural privileges, hath a double portion. But the Scriptures, and many times our own experiences will show, that the first-born hath the least share here; therefore, this is not a natural privilege. God accepted Abel the younger, and not Cain. Isaac findeth more acceptation than Ishmael. God loved Jacob the younger, and hated Esau the elder, and so in many other instances. Grace doth not come by propagation, Believers are not born of blood.

Whereas, it may be objected, that Parents beget Children [Object.] after their own Image, It is said of Adam, Gen. 5. 3. He begot a son in his own Likeness, after his own Image. Therefore it should seem, that godly Parents must needs have godly Children; otherwise, how do they beget them, after their own Image?

The answer is easy. They beget Children, as men, not, [Answ.] as Saints. It is a certain Rule, Personalia non propagantur. Things that are personal, are not propagated. Now grace is a personal thing, not a natural thing. A learned, and a godly man, begetteth a son, that is a man; but neither learned, nor godly, because learning is an acquired habit, and godliness is infused. And a man conveyeth what is natural, not what is acquired. He that is begotten of him, is not a Scholar, much less a Saint; because holiness is supernatural, beyond him. As it is with the Corn; it is threshed, and severed from the Chaff, before it is sown, but then it bringeth forth the blade, and husk, and afterward the ear of Corn. The Circumcised parent begetteth a Child, that is born uncircumcised, because his Circumcision is not propagated. So it is here, a father that is free from the power of sin▪ and guilt of sin, by the work of grace upon his heart; yet begetteth a Child, that is contrary to both these.

How then is it said, That if the Root be holy, the branches [Object.] are holy? That is a further Objection, that ye have, Rom. 11. 16. If the first-fruits be holy, the lump is also holy. If the root be holy, so also is the branches?

This is to be understood not of a personal holiness, [Answ.] which is an inherent quality; But of a federal holiness, which is of Relation, for that the root was holy. The Jewish parents were in the outward Covenant of God, being members of the visible Church, therefore their Branches were partakers of a faederall holiness; but it doth not follow as to personal holiness. A man may at once be a child of wrath, in regard of the common condition of man in Adam; and yet be holy, in regard of the Covenant made in Abraham, That God would be his God, and the God of his seed. Well then, if it be thus, that believers, as such, as are not born of blood; Let it serve to take men off, from their boasting of their Ancestors and Descent, of coming of this or that Family and Blood: It were worth the bragging of, if Grace came by Propagation. But seeing it doth not, Non sanguine, sed virtute nitamur, Let us not rely upon Blood, but upon Virtue, saith the Heathen. Let me say, Upon Christ, and, in that sense, upon Blood, There is one Blood we may rely upon, but it is the Blood of Christ, the Blood of the everlasting Covenant; otherwise, there is no great difference in point of Blood, between men and men. Act. 17. 26. God hath made of one blood all nations of men, that dwell on all the face of the earth. All men out of one blood. The poorest Beggar cometh from Adam, who was Lord of all the world, as well as the greatest Potentate upon earth; so as there is no glorying in any blood, but in the Blood of Christ; he that hath a conscience sprinkled with that, he hath cause of glorying; He that glorieth, let him glory in this, that he knoweth me. Saith Prudentius, Sanguis Christi facit hominem esse nobilem; That which maketh a man noble; is, to have Christ's Blood in him, it is to be one of Christ's followers. It was that that ennobled the Beroeans, Act. 17. 11. These (speaking of the Beroeans) were more noble than those in Thessalonica, in that they received the word with all readiness of mind, and searched the Scriptures daily. The word in the Greek is, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, These were better born than those of Thessalonica. He is well born that is new born. Here is a Blood to confide in. This is a Blood that cannot be tainted. The best blood may be tainted, Great men may become Traitors, and so taint their blood. Here is a Blood without possibility of tainture, that washeth white wheresoever it cometh.

Secondly, Believers, They are not born of the will of the flesh. By the will of the flesh, I understand, the will of a man in the state of corruption, as long as he is nothing but flesh; That which is born of the flesh, is flesh, Joh. 3. And then the meaning is, That no man can attain Grace, or the Newbirth, by the utmost improvement of his own free-will, while he is yet in the state of corruption. No man, by the utmost improvement of nature, can raise himself to grace. No man, that is yet in the flesh, by the improvement of the will of the flesh, can become a spiritual man. No creature can raise itself to an higher rank of creatures; a Stone cannot make itself a Tree, to have growth and life; nor can a Tree make it self a Beast, to have Sense; nor can a Beast make itself a Man, to have Reason; nor can a mere Rationall man make himself a Saint, by the improvement of his own Free-will, as the holy Ghost telleth us, Rom. 9. 16. So then, it is not of him that willeth, nor of him that runneth, but of God that showeth mercy. Not of him that willeth, by desiring; nor of him that runneth, by endeavoring; but of God that showeth mercy. He will have mercy on whom he will have mercy. He will have mercy on Zion, therefore he putteth forth grace to make it free, otherwise it would be in bondage forever. This is the great question between the Arminians, at this day, and us Protestants. The will of man doth never attain grace by its own liberty, but the will of man attaineth liberty by grace. It is so far free, that the grace of God will make it free; otherwise, it hath no freedom at all to God, much less is it free to raise itself to a state of grace. As we are not born of blood, so not of the will of the flesh.

That man is not able to do anything that is good, by the power of his own free-will, I shall demonstrate it, by an argument taken from the impotency of the will of the flesh. The Apostle saith expressly, While we are without Christ, we are without strength, and so unable to do any spiritual good, Rom. 5. 6. When we were yet without strength, in due time Christ died for the ungodly. No supernatural strength in a natural man. The will of the flesh can but follow the guidance of the wisdom of the flesh; now, the wisdom of the flesh, saith Paul, that is enmity against God. Therefore the will of the flesh never riseth to friendship with him. Rom. 8. 7, 8. Because the carnal mind, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, the wisdom of the flesh is enmity against God, for it is not subject to the law of God, neither indeed can be. So then, they that are in the flesh, cannot please God. This is a deep mystery, this of the free-will of man: but I am not willing to wade into the depth of the Controversy; only I shall say something by the way to you.

Know therefore this, that at the first, the freedom of the will in intelligent creatures, Angels and Men, stood in an Indifferency to good and evil; yet so, as look what way the will betaketh itself, to that it shall be confined for time to come. If it choose good, it shall be permanent in choosing good; if evil, it shall be able to choose nothing else. The good Angels chose that which was good, and the bent of their hearts will continue the right way; therefore now they are confirmed in goodness, and are free to nothing else. The bad Angels, they chose what was evil; therefore they are now left to the obduration of their own hearts, and can do nothing, nor will nothing, but what is evil. Man, who though made in an holy state, yet was mutable; and having a will subject to change, fell upon the worst part, chose evil, whereas he might have chosen good; and ever since, all his posterity by nature are able to do nothing else. Radix peccati, libertas; this freedom of will was the very root, from whence the first sin sprung. Therefore, ever since the first fall, the will hath been deeper in evil than the understanding. The will is more a verse from choosing good, than the mind from defiring good; as she said,—video meliora, proboque Deteriora sequor—Many things which our judgments are against, our affections are inclined to. So that now, no man hath farther freedom of will to do good, than his will is made free by grace; so much free grace as is communicated, so much free-will a man hath, and not a whit more. The flesh contributeth nothing to the free-will, to do good. Not of the will of the flesh.

True indeed, in natural things, as eating and drinking; and civil things, as buying, and selling, and marrying, and giving in marriage; there is a freedom of will to do this or that. It is true also, that in the outward acts of Religion, the free-will of man, assisted by common-grace, may choose what is good. A man may will to go to Church, rather than stay at home; and when he is there, he may listen to what is said, and meditate of what he hath heard; and when he is come home, repeat it. A great deal of use men may have of this freedom, as to the outward act of Religion. It is for want of improving that power, which God giveth to men in such acts, that they perish. But neither have men abilities, by the improvement of them, nor free-will, to do any of those acts, (when a man, by nature, cannot turn himself to to any spiritual duty) in a spiritual way; That requireth an assistance of special grace. Neither have they abilities to do those more supernatural acts, which immediately accompany salvation, in any measure, by the power of their own free-will; they cannot do any outward act of Religion well: The Bonum and Bene cannot be done, without special grace. As, Take an Hatchet that is sharp; this, in the hand of a common man, will cut, because it hath a capacity that way; but to make a Table, or Stool, or Statue, that, requireth influentiam Artificis; it is not a common hand that can do that, there must be the hand of an Artificer. So, though the free-will of man may do an outward act, in the worship of God; yet, to do this act well, requireth a further influence, than the common providence of God, assisting all his creatures. So it will be found much more, if we come to those acts upon which salvation dependeth. Turning to Christ, and believing in the Lord Jesus Christ, and loving God for himself; these, the will of man improved, cannot rise to. No man can repent, till he be turned, Jer. 39. 19. After that I was turned, I repented; first turned, and then repented; not, I turned myself first, and repented afterwards. As it was in the first Creation, ye know what is said of Adam, Gen. 2. 23. The Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and man became a living soul. Here is a dust-heap, Can that become a man? No, unless God breathe the breath of life. Here is an unregenerate man, Can that man become regenerate? No, unless the same power goeth forth, to make a new creature here, that went forth in the first Creation. Ephes. 2. 10. We are his workmanship, created in Christ Jesus unto good works. Creation was out of nothing, nothing in corrupt nature will serve for the new building. There are the faculties and substance of the soul, that God makes use of; but the qualities, not one of them will serve. Old things are done away, all things are become new, saith the Apostle, 2 Cor. 5. 17. So as, when God createth grace in the soul, he doth something answerable to what he did, when he breathed life into that dust. Only with this difference, God made Adam at first in his full stature, a perfect man; whereas, when the new creature is framed, there must be a growing up to perfection. There is a perfection of parts indeed, in the first draught of the new creatures; not only a new heart, but a new tongue, a new hand, and a new understanding, and will, but there wanteth a perfection of degrees, which was in Adam. Therefore the Apostle speaks of growing up to a full stature. But as to the thing in hand; There is an utter inability in nature, to raise it self to grace, as in that dust, to make it self a man.

Many Intricacies are in this point. As I am loath to handle them, so, loath am I, to wave them altogether; Only, because something haply may not be fit for this Auditory, let us content ourselves with this. That the same power, which made man at first, a Creature, must go to make him a new-Creature. There is none of that power in corrupt nature; therefore, men may not be born of the will of the flesh, Ephes. 1. 19. speaking of a mighty power, working in them that believe. What is the exceeding greatness of his power to us-ward, who believe, according to the working of his mighty power, which he wrought in Christ, when he raised Him from the dead. The same power that went to the Creation of man, the same power that went to the Resurrection of Christ, must go to man's Conversion; Faith cannot be wrought without it. Therefore it is called the faith of the operation of God, Col. 2. 12. Ye are risen with Him, through the faith of the operation of God. Faith can neither be begotten, without much power, nor continued without much power, 1 Thes. 1. 11. Fulfilling all the good pleasure of his goodness, and the work of faith with power. So then, not to entangle ourselves in this Controversy, let us make use of what hath been said.

Learn from hence, To detest all the dictates, and Tenants [Use 1] of the Adversaries of the free grace of God; all those Doctrines that ascribe our new birth, either in whole, or in part, to the will of the flesh. The first great Heretics that were, struck all at the disparagement of God, and their Heresies were against the Trinity of Persons, or against the Divinity of Christ, or against the proceeding of the Holy Ghost; something that concerned God. And when the Devil was beaten from this Hold, he betook himself to a new one. He would not now disparage God, but advance Man; as the Pelagians do. As if man by his own will, and liberty might make choice of Christ. Hence it is, that the proud Dutch man, when he was urged with that place of the Apostle; Who hath made thee to differ? dared to return this abominable speech (for I can call it no other) Who hath made me to differ? Why, Ego feci meipsum. I have made myself to differ. God gave me a power to will, but my will determined itself, to lay hold on Christ. Thus to teach, That God giveth a Posse velle, to have power to do good; but, when grace hath done all it can, a man is left to his own liberty, to choose, or refuse; What is this, but to ascribe salvation to ourselves, more than to God.

Secondly, The willing of good, is good. And a greater [Use 2] thing, then having power to will what is good. If I have only power to will from God, and have the will of what is good myself, I give more to Will, than what is due to Grace. God doth not only enable us to will, if we please, but maketh us willing, Phil. 2. 13. It is God which worketh in you both to will and to do, of his good pleasure. Therefore, while others do cry up the great Diana of the Pelagians and Arminians, Great is the Free-will of Man, enabling to do great things for us; Let us, that profess ourselves Disciples of grace, rather cry as the builders of the second Temple, Zach. 4. Grace, Grace, Great is the Grace of God. We are born not of the will of the flesh, but of God.

Thirdly, As not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, so not of the will of man. Some obscurity is in this phrase. It is something hard to clear it, if we look only to our English expression. But know that both in Hebrew, and in Greek, and Latin, are two words for Man. The one whereof is raised much higher in its signification, than the other. In the Hebrew, Ish, and Adam. In Greek, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 , and 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 . In Latin, Vir, and Homo, Adam, and 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 , and Homo, These terms are put for man in his lowest condition; when they are distinct one from another. I will not deny, but they may sometimes be used, without that difference in Scripture. But now, Ish, and 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 , and Vir, import men of note, Eminent men. The word in the Text is 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 , not of the will of man. As before, he had excluded our own wills, from being able to bring us to grace; so here, he excludeth the will of others, be they never so eminent. Ish is put for men of eminency, Gen. 45. 11. saith Jacob to his Children, Carry down the Man a present. That is, the Governor of the Land, Joseph. But above all, an undeniable place is in the Prophe, where ye have both Ish, and Adam. The mean man boweth down, and the great man humbleth himself. Adam is the mean Man. The great man, that is Ish. So for Homo, and Vir. It is a known story of Diogenes, that went in the day time, with a Candle, and Lant-horn in the streets, and being asked, Whither he went? saith he, I go to seek a Man. The reply was, There were enow in the Market place. Nay, saith he; I see many people, but I cannot find a Man amongst them all. As in English, we say, Such a one, showeth himself a Man, that is, exceeding worthily. So then, we are not born of the will of men, that is, Men, how Eminent soever, be their fathers never so godly, or Pastors never so able, or the Masters of the family, never so Eminent. As our own wills cannot bring us to grace, so the will of others cannot, how eminent soever they be. Men may wish us well, but they cannot convey grace to us. This I take to be the meaning of this phrase, It is a truth, that no man is born of the will of men. We may pray for one another, and instruct one another, and spend many words, and tears, and prayers, for one another; and yet cannot bring one another to grace for all this. Neither is it in vain, that the Evangelist inserteth this Clause: Because it is the common deceit of men; And all they have to show for the hope of salvation, is, that they live in a good family, and have a godly Father, and a religious Mother, or a careful Pastor, that taketh a great deal of pains amongst them. Micah, what a glad man was he, though he had been a Thief, Judges 2. 17. For he had stolen eleven hundred shekles of Silver from his Mother, and he was an Idolater, Vers. 5. For he worshipped moulten gods: yet when he got a Minister to his mind, Certainly, saith he, now know I, that the Lord will do me good, seeing I have a Leviteto my Priest, as if the will of this man could have helped him to the new birth.

But ye will say, one may be born of the will of men. [Object.] Doth not Paul himself say, he had begotten them. Though ye have many Teachers, ye have but one Father, saith he, for I have begotten you in Christ through the Gospel, 1 Cor. 4. 15. Though ye have ten Thousand Instructors in Christ, yet have ye not many fathers. Therefore one may be born of men.

But for that, it is a matter of no great difficulty. The [Ans.] Corinthians were indeed begotten of Paul, but yet they were born of God. Paul was but God's Instrument, but a Remote Agent, the man that brought them the Gospel: but that which begot them, was the Spirit that came along from God in the Gospel. Paul begot them Instrumentally, God Efficently. Though Paul was a powerful Minister, whence he had all his power, you may see. He that wrought effectually in Peter, the same was mighty in me towards the Gentiles. Paul's ministry was mighty. How came this to pass? Why, Christ wrought effectually in Peter, and was mighty in Paul. Ministers may preach out their Lungs, and spend their strength in vain, if God strike not in; They may fish all night, and take nothing, as Peter did. It is Christ, that standeth at the door, and knocks, as it is in the Revelations, yea, and openeth the door, as well as knocketh; God opened the heart of Lydia. Till Christ speaketh Ephata to the ears of men, all the preaching in the World will do them little, or no good. Be the Charmer never so wise, the deaf Adder stoppeth his ear, till Christ speaketh Ephata.

Come therefore, Let men learn from hence, not to presume under the means by which they live, as if means of grace, should be Authors of grace to them, as if they could be born of the will of men. Parents may put up many prayers for their Children; and it is their duties so to do. These prayers may be a ground of hope to the parents. As Ambrose told Monica, when she acquainted him with the many tears, and prayers, she had put up for her son-Augustine; He said, Be of good Comfort, It can hardly be, that so many prayers, and tears should perish. So a child cannot be born of the will of the father, be the father never so good a man; Though this may do much, as Samuel told the men of Israel he would do his duty. God forbid, saith he, that I should cease to pray for you, and to watch over you, 1 Sam. 12. 23, 24. But I will teach you the good and the right way: only fear the Lord, and serve Him in truth with all your hearts; for consider, how great things He hath done for you. But if ye shall still do wickedly, ye shall be consumed both you, and your King. For all his instructions, and prayers, they shall be consumed in their wickedness; It is a great advantage to live in a godly family, but can this bring a man to grace? we read of Hypocrites in David's family, Thoumy friend, and familiar, with whom I took sweet Counsel, It was he that betrayed him. Was there not a devil in Christ's family? I have chosen you twelve, and one of you is a Devil. What a powerful Minister was the Prophet Isaiah, the most Evangelical of all the Prophets; and yet see how he crieth out of the unprofitableness of his Ministry, as to his people's souls, Isa. 49. 4. I said, I have labored in vain, and spent my strength for naught, and in vain. So Paul, though he labored more abundantly than all the Apostles; he was afraid, he had lost all his labor amongst the Galatians. Therefore saith he, I am afraid, lest I have bestowed on you labor in vain. I may say to you of this City of London, as it was said to the Rich man of his brethren that were upon the earth; They have Moses, and the Prophets, let them hear them. Ye will all assent to this, if a man will say, This City had never more of Moses, and the Prophets, then at this day: but will this bring you to grace? Can ye be born of the will of your Ministers, though they wish you never so well, and take never so much pains for you? No, you must join your own endeavors, with the Minister's labors, else they will be ineffectual; yea, God himself must join his blessing, both to your Indeavours, and our labors; else ye can never be born again. It must not be of the will of man, but of God; Which I now come to.

Fourthly, All believers are born of God, and only of God, All believers are new born; This we must clear to you. There is an inseparable Connection between faith, and the new birth. So it runneth in the Text, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, To them that believe in his Name, who were born of God. Faith, and the new Creature, are so inseparable, that Paul putteth the one, for the other. If ye compare these two places in the Galatians, Gal. 5. 6. with Gal. 6. 15. In Jesus Christ, neither Circumcision nor uncircumcision availeth anything, but Faith which worketh by love. What is that? see the fifteenth Verse of the sixth Chapter, Neither Circumcision, nor uncircumcision, but a new Creature. New Creature, and Faith, is all one; where faith is, there is a new Creature. So then, All believers are new born, and new born of God; because, as ye have heard already, (which will save me a labor to exemplify this.) It requireth a Divine power to beget a man to Christ, Jam. 1. 18. Of his own will begot he us with the Word of Truth, Of his own will begot he us. To make a man partaker of godliness, there must go Divine power, as Peter saith, 2 Pet. 1. 3. According to his Divine power, He hath given us all things pertaining to Life, and Godliness; Such a power as went to the Creation, yea, a greater power then went to the Creation, if a greater can be. God putteth forth a further act of power in Regeneration, then in Creating men, and the whole World at first; because there was then nothing to resist. God spake the Word, and there was no opposition made. Let there be light, and there was light, Let the waters be gathered together, and they were gathered together into one Channell. But when God cometh here to Convert, all is up in arms, Corrupt nature strugglenth for it self, and the Devil, likely to be thrown out of his hold, maketh the best of it that he can, and musters all his forces to maintain his possession; here is required a greater power, because of resistance, which was not in the former work. Would not a man say, if he should go into a Potters shop, or Glassehouse, that a man might sooner make a thousand pots, or glasses, then when a pot or glass is broken all to pieces, to make it whole again; That is a much greater work. This is the case here: In the Creation, God brought all things out of nothing. Here is but one single work. But when he comes now to regenerate, he findeth men's hearts broken to pieces, and he must make them sound again. That is a further work, a double work. He must pull down the old building, and set up a new frame, none of the old, not a stick will serve. Old things are done away, all things are become new. Therefore it is, that all the works of the Creation, though an Almighty work, is but the finger as it were of God. When I consider the Heavens, the work of thy fingers. The works of man's Redemption, and Conversion, require the whole arm. So speaking of God, after the manner of men, for to him all things are alike easy, Luk. 1. 51. He hath shown strength with his arm, speaking of the work of our Redemption by Christ. Who hath believed our Report? To whom is the arm of the Lord revealed? That which is manifest in the Gospel, that telleth us of our Redemption, saying, It is the arm of God. At the first, it was but a word. Let there be light, and it was so. The work of our Redemption cost not only words, but tears, and sweat, and blood, and the Life of our Savior. God breathed the breath of Life into man, that he might revive him, and become a new Creature. So that this work considered, one cannot be born again of any, but of God.

I proceed now to the Application. If believers are born [Use 1] of God, then it calleth upon them to be thankful to God for their new birth. They have received that from the hands of God, that the rest of the World are strangers to. They are better born then others; that is the word, the Apostle useth, Acts 17. 11. We stand engaged to the whole Trinity for this blessing. Behold what manner of love, the Father hath shown unto us? We owe our new birth to God the Father. And to the Son too, Isai. 9. 6. The name of Christ is the Everlasting Father. And, to God the Holy Ghost, Joh. 3. 5. Except we be born again of Water, and of the Spirit, born of the Spirit; To thend, we may be the more sensible of this inestimable blessing, consider the graces and privileges that accompany this new birth. I will name but three.

First, Is likeness to God: We are so born of God, as to bear his Image, to be righteous, as he is righteous, 1 Joh. 2. ult. If ye know that he is righteous, ye know that everyone which doth righteousness, is born of him. It is true of all the Creatures, They are made of God: But it is true only of Saints, They are born of God. Therefore, though every Creature hath something of God in him; yet a Saint hath more: All have the foot-steps of God, but Believers have his Image. They represent him, as a man's son represents his father. There may be the Image of a man taken in a Picture, that may show something of him; and his Image in a glass, that showeth more, that representeth his motion, which the other doth not; But his Image in his son, that is the most lively of all, that representeth his disposition. Such an Image of God is in every Saint, it represents the quality of God, and the disposition of him. He is made partaker of the Divine nature.

Secondly, There is in him a love to God, and to the Saints, which is another adjunct of the new birth, of which, 1 Joh. 4. 7. compared with, 1 Joh. 5. 1. verse. Beloved, Let us love one another, for love is of God, and everyone that loveth, is born of God, and knoweth God, Chap. 5. 1. Whosoever believeth that Jesus is the Christ, is born of God, and everyone that loveth him that begetteth, loveth him that is begotten of him. First, here is love to God, the Common father of all the Saints. It is true in this Case, Amor descendit, sed non semper ascendit. Love amongst men descendeth, It goeth down from the Parent, to the Child; but it doth not always ascend from the Child, to the Parent. But here, as there is a love descending to us, so from us ascending to God. As the Iron that is touched with the Load-stone, hath an inclination of following the Load-stone: So when God hath touched the soul with Love, it leaveth an instinct behind it, of following after God. As everyone that is new born, hath a love to God, so hath he also to the Saints. He that loveth him that begetteth, loveth him also that is begotten of him. Look as it is in nature. Light ye know is the prime object of sight. It is the principal visible object, and the more of light in anything, the more visible that thing is. So Christ is the principal object of a Christians love; and the more of Christ is in any person, the more lovely that person is, in a Christian's eyes. The object that standeth most in the light, is most seen; and the Saint, that hath most of Christ in him, is most beloved by everyone that is new-born, when they come to discern that amiableness in him.

3. The third thing that accompanieth this new-birth, is, Victory over spiritual enemies, which doth exceedingly raise the privilege of being born of God. Victory over the world, and victory over the devil, ye have them both, 1 Joh. 5. 4. Whosoever is born of God, overcometh the world. It is true, Regenerate persons may get many a blow and knock from the world, and many times be foiled too; and from the frowns and flatteries of the world, a Saint may be worsted. As it is, when a thief setteth upon a man in the highway, and aimeth at his purse;

he may stand in his own defense, and haply receive some wounds, or blows; but yet, the thief is not able to take his purse from him. Here a man cometh off a conqueror, though not without blows. So, Whatsoever is born of God, overcometh the world, because, in the issue, Grace getteth the upper-hand. Though he that is born of God may be conquered; yet, That which is born of God cannot be conquered. It is not, Whosoever is born of God; but, Whatsoever is born of God. There is an Emphasis in that. As a victory over the world attendeth this new-birth, so a victory over the devil too: 1 Joh. 5. 18. We know, that whosoever is born of God, sinneth not. But he that is begotten of God, keepeth himself, and that wicked one toucheth him not. He sinneth not, so as to be touched by that wicked one. Take them together, that is, He sinneth not against the holy Ghost; sinneth not, so as to be devillified. He that is once a child of God, never becomes a child of the devil. That is the meaning of that, That wicked one toucheth him not: Not, but that That wicked one, the devil, may annoy a Saint, and foil him many times; but not with that which the Schools call, Tactus qualificativus, such a touch as altereth the nature of a thing. As for example, Men that speak of the Philosopher's Stone, they suppose it to have such a property in it, as when it toucheth the metal, it turneth it into Gold. Such a property the Spirit of God hath upon the soul of man; when it toucheth the soul, it putteth a divine nature into it. Now, saith the Apostle, The wicked one toucheth him not, so as to alter him, and to turn him into his own nature, and make him as very a devil as himself; which they, that have sinned against the holy Ghost, do. Because, even as very a devil as Satan is, he that is once made partaker of the divine Nature, cannot be touched so, as to be made partaker of the diabolical nature.

Secondly, This may serve in the next place, To undeceive carnall Professors, that stand so much upon their faith, and have no new birth to show; that say, They have believed ever since they were born; when as indeed, no man can believe till he be born again. There is an inseparable connection between these two, Faith, and the New-creature; the Evangelist John putteth them together, To those that believe in his name, who are born of God. Wheresoever Christ is received by faith, there he doth renew the soul, as well as save it. He bringeth with him plasters, that do not only hide sin, but heal it; not only cover it, but cure it. He bringeth with him not only pardoning mercy, but purging mercy, and renewing grace. And therefore it is in vain for men to call themselves believers, if they be not new-born. Some pleas indeed they have, which I will briefly answer.

First, They are baptized, and therefore born again; their baptism is the Laver of Regeneration. That is all some have to show.

Whether that place, Tit. 3. 5. According to his mercy he saved us, by the washing of the new-birth, and the renewing of the holy Ghost, be meant primitively of Baptism, yea or no, may be disputed. But I wave that.

Secondly, Those that ascribe most efficacy to Baptism, they say, That Infants Elect, and only they, do in baptism receive a Regeneration. But what kind of Regeneration? whether Potential, Habitual, or Initial, they know not; not such as will serve their turn, when they grow up to years; for then they must have an Actual and farther Regeneration, before they can be saved. Peter telleth us expressly, that the outward washing with water saveth none, there must go a farther work to that, 1 Pet. 3. 21. Wherefore the baptism that now is, answering that figure, (which is not the putting away of the filth of the flesh, but a confident Demanding, which a good conscience maketh to God) saveth us also, by the Resurrection of Jesus Christ. That, no man can have, that is not new born. There cannot be a good conscience, till there be a sprinkling of the blood of Christ. For we are sprinkled from an evil conscience, Heb. 12. 24. Now a man that is new-born, when Satan putteth in a Plea against him, he can put in his Answer against Satan's Bill; he is able to plead Sincerity, when he is accused of Hypocrisy, and to make an apology for himself, against the accusations of the Law. If this satisfy not, consider one or two places more, to show the vanity of this plea, Gal. 6. 15. In Christ Jesus, neither circumcision availeth anything, nor uncircumcision; but a new creature. Baptism is, what Circumcision was. Baptism availeth not, but a new creature. Baptism, without new-birth, can bring no man to salvation. One may be a kind of baptized Turk, as there were circumcised Ellemites in Jerusalem; that is, Men circumcised in the flesh, and yet Heathens in their dispositions. Ezek. 18. 31. Cast away from you all your transgressions, wherein ye have transgressed; and make you a new heart, and a new spirit; for why will ye die, O house of Israel? They must die, unless there were a new spirit, and a new heart within them: Nothing but death without the new creature, though an Israelite.

When men are beaten from this, they fall to a second plea, and pretend to a New-birth; Why? Because they are not so bad as they have been; some duties they neglected before, but now perform them; some errors they committed before, but now abstain from them. Therefore surely they are born of God.

To make Answer to this Plea, we must know, wheresoever this new-birth is, there is a farther thing then restraining grace; there is holiness of life: Ephes. 4. 24. That ye put on that new man, which after God is created in righteousness and true holiness. Now holiness goeth farther, than to the abstaining from some evil, and doing of some good. Holiness reacheth to the mortification of lust; where there is a new man, created after holiness, lust will be pursued, not only to imprisonment, but to death. The Woolf is not only tied up, but turned into a Lamb; the Sow is not only put into a pasture, but changed into a Sheep. A woolf tied up, doth not so much mischief as before; a Sow in a pasture is not so swinish and filthy, as when it walloweth in the mire: but their natures still remain. So it is in restraining grace, their natures are the same, if not some change in their conversation. Where the new-birth is, there is a change of the heart, and a new nature wrought; therefore men do duties with delight, and constantly. Men look at lusts now, not as David did at Absalom, but as Joab did at Absalom, that I may use that comparison. Asolom, he rebelled, ye know; David and Joab, they both set themselves against him; but so, as David, though he could not but be displeased with Absalom's rebellion, yet he carrieth affection towards him, and desireth, that the young man may be dealt gently withal. On the other side, Joab, when he getteth an opportunity, throweth dart upon dart, and never leaveth till he hath slain him. So, ye have many a man, that hath some work of grace upon his heart, that yet hath a months mind, and longing after sin: he would have his sin suppressed, as David would have Absalom, but yet Absalom must live, though a rebellious son. Many would have sin suppressed, that it may not expose them to hell and damnation; but all this while their sins must live. But the new creature is carried out with hatred against sin, therefore it is not content without its destruction. Mortify your earthly members, saith the Apostle. Such a sin, saith the regenerate soul, will have my death, therefore I will have its death; I will not be content till it be crucified with the lusts and affections thereof. I shall now proceed to the 14 Verse.

Vers. 14. And the Word was made flesh, and dwelt amongst us; and we beheld the glory thereof, as the glory of the only begotten Son of the Father, full of Grace and Truth.

Heretofore the Evangelist having proved the Divinity of Jesus Christ, he cometh now to tell us of his manifestation in the flesh, and of the glory of his Person, consisting of both Natures. So as this Verse calleth to us for attention, because it holdeth forth the Object of our faith, the Person of Christ, in both his Natures. And certainly, every soul that is married to Christ, will be affected with his Person, and therefore desirous to hear of that. The difference between a wife and a harlot is, The wife desires, and loveth the husband's person, therefore careth not for his tokens, unless his person be enjoyed: The harlot loveth the token, and careth not for the person. It is the property of the Spouse, not to be content with the Love-tokens of Christ, but with the Person of Christ. And concerning him, ye have four things laid down here.

- First, The Incarnation of Jesus Christ, The Word was made flesh.
- Secondly, His Conversation on earth, And dwelt amongst us.
- Thirdly, Here is a special manifestation of his glory, And we behold his glory, as the glory of the only begotten of the Father.
- Fourthly, The singular Qualifications of his Person, Full of grace and truth.

First, I shall begin with the Incarnation of Christ, in these words,

And the Word was made flesh.

A Clause, out of which, Bees may suck honey, and Spiders may gather poison. These words have been a stumbling-block to many Heretics; and, on the other side, a sure and strong hold to many Saints. Some think, that when the children of Israel were in the land of Goshen, and had some Egyptians mixed with them; at the same time the Hebrews drew wholesome waters out of the fountains, and the Egyptians bloody water at the same springs; and that it was dark to the Egyptians in the same house, and light to the Hebrews. If so, methinks, It affordeth that which may lead us into the Consideration of this, and the like places of Scripture. Heretics have darkness, and Believers light. The one draweth bloody waters, and the other wholesome waters out of the same Text of Scripture, as ye shall hear in the application, what use may be made of this Clause. Apollinarius saith, That because the Word was made flesh. Therefore, Christ took upon his flesh, the body, but not the soul of a man.

Three things are here to be declared to you.

- First, Who is meant by the Word.

- Secondly, What is meant by the Flesh.
- Thirdly, In what sense the word was made Flesh.
- First, The divine nature of Christ is in the Word.
- Secondly, The human nature of Christ, The Flesh.
- Thirdly, The personal union, The Word made Flesh.

These are mysteries, by some more spoken of, and less understood. Things that we cannot be ignorant of, without danger; nor discourse of, without all Reverence. Things that no Eloquence of man can reach, no soul of man apprehend in the full latitude of them; Yet something we shall speak hereof by God's assistance.

First, Who is here meant by the Word? I answer, the second person in the Trinity so called, in that known place, There are three that bear witness in Heaven, the Father, and the Word, and the Spirit; and these three, are one, 1 Joh. 5. 8. The same person that is called the word, in the beginning of this Chapter, is said, to be with God. I shall not speak of that, because heretofore I have been large in it, but come to the second.

Secondly, What is here meant by Flesh? Flesh signifieth the whole man in diverse places of Scripture. Man ye know consisteth of two parts, which are sometimes called flesh, and spirit, and sometimes called soul, and body. Now by a Synecdoche, either of these parts may be put for the whole; sometimes the soul is put for the whole man. As when it is said, there were so many souls in the ship with Paul. And seventy souls went down into Egypt with Jacob; sometimes flesh, or body, is put for the whole man, Rom. 12. 1. I beseech you brethren, by the Mercies of God, offer up your bodies a living sacrifice. That is, offer up your selves. And sometimes, flesh, which is the word in the Text, Rom. 3. 20. Therefore, by the deeds of the Law, shall no flesh be justified in his sight, Compare that with, Psal. 143. 2. where it is said, In thy sight shall no man living be justified. No flesh, saith Paul. No man, saith David; So flesh is the whole man.

To clear this, some Queries would be resolved. [Queries.]

First, whether Christ assumed the nature of man, or the person of a man, the whole man. He did assume the soul, as well as the body, both under the term, flesh. And indeed, unless, he had assumed the whole man, the whole man could not have been saved, saith Damazen. That which was not taken, could not be healed. If Christ had not taken the whole man, He could not have saved the soul.

To the first Query, Whether the nature of man, or the person of man?

I answer, The nature of man, and not a single person. [Response.] It will be dangerous to mistake here. If Christ had only taken the person of a man, then there must have been two persons in Christ; a person assuming, and a person assumed. Yea then, that only person which Christ assumed, should have been advanced, and saved; He should have saved that person, and no other, if he had assumed the person of a man. With us, the soul, and body, being united, make a person. But in Christ, the soul and body were so united, as to have their subsistence not of themselves (as in us) but in the Godhead. No sooner was the soul united in the body, but both soul and body had subsistence in the second person in the Trinity. So, not the assuming of a person, but the nature of a man, common to all the sons, and daughters of Adam, and Eve. Therefore he took not the nature of the Angels, but the seed of Abraham, Hebr. 2. 16. Seed, the first element of our nature, before our persons come to have any subsistence.

Secondly, Why did Christ take the nature of man? [Query. 2]

I answer, That he might be a fit Mediator. That lesson the Apostle giveth you, Hebr. 2. 14. Because the Children were partakers of flesh and blood, he also took part [Resp. 2] of the same, that through death he might destroy him, that had the power of death, that is, the Devil. His taking the nature of man, conduced to his being a Priest; For if he had not been man, he could not have died. And that he might be a fit Prophet: A Prophet will God raise up to you, like to me saith Moses. It was fit, and convenient for them to have a man Prophet, because they were not able to hear Angels, unless they died. And that he might be a fit King: The head of one nature, and members of another, make a Monster, Hebr. 2. 11. Both he, that sanctifieth, and they, that are sanctified, are all of one nature. Christ is of the same nature with those, that are sanctified and governed by Him.

Thirdly, The third Query is, whether did Christ take [Query. 3] our nature in its Integrity, and perfection, as it was before the fall, or our nature clothed with infirmities, as after the fall?

I answer, He took our nature clothed with infirmities, as after the fall; which is implied in the word Flesh. There [Response. 3] is a Reason, certainly, why the Holy Ghost rather chose to say, Why, the Word was made flesh, then why, the Word was made man; because it is according to the phrase of Scripture, when it would speak contemptibly of man, and show him to be the lowest Creature, to call him, flesh, when it would set forth the weakness, that man is subject to. To give you one, or two Instances, instead of many, Psal. 56. 4. I will not fear what flesh can do unto me, that is, weak and infirm frail man; what Flesh can do unto me. And again, Psal. 78. 39. He remembereth that we are but flesh, a wind that passeth away, and cometh not again. So then the word was made flesh, that is, took not only man's nature, but man's infirmities; which are expressed in that word flesh. And that he did take our nature, with the infirmities thereof, appeareth by, Isai. 53. 4. Surely he hath born our griefs, and carried our sorrows, our infirmities.

4. The fourth Query is, Whether Christ did take all the [Quaer. 4] infirmities of our flesh, yea or no?

I answer, No. Our infirmities are of two sorts; some penal and painful infirmities; others sinful and culpable infirmities. Those that are culpable and sinful, Christ did not take; for the Prince of this world came, and had nothing in [Response. Negative.] him. But those that were penal infirmities, those he took; but not all of them neither: for they are of two sorts, either Personal, proper to some few men and women, as to be inclined by birth to the Stone, or Gout, or Strangury, or Leprosy, or some other hereditary disease; or Natural, common to all the sons and daughters of Adam, as to be subject to pain, and grief, and sorrow, and hunger, and thirst, and cold. The former of these Christ did not take, because they would have been impediments to him in his Function; but the latter of these he did take.

5. The fifth Query is, Why did Christ take these infirmities, [Quaer. 5] implied in the word flesh?

I answer, For diverse ends, which I will but name, and have done. He took these infirmities of our nature, as well as the nature itself, To show the truth of his Humanity. He [Response.] had a nature that could hunger, and thirst, even as other men could. He took them, that he might sanctify them to us. Whatsoever Christ took, that he sanctified. Saith Luther, Christ enriched poverty, by becoming poor; and glorified shame, by enduring shame for us. 2. He took our infirmities, That he might set us an example of an holy life. Had not Christ been subject to passion, he could never have set us an example of meekness or patience, if he himself had not been liable to passion, yet without sin. Lastly, He took these infirmities, That we might confide the more in him, and have access to him with boldness. Consider him an High Priest, that was subject to infirmities as well as ourselves. We have not an high Priest which cannot be touched with the feeling of our infirmities, but was in all points touched as we are, yet without sin. Let us therefore come boldly to the throne of grace. Thus ye see who is meant by the Word, and what is meant by Flesh.

I now proceed to show you, in what sense the Word is said to be made flesh.

First, We must remove a false sense; then, assert the true.

The Word was made flesh. (Take it in the phrase of Athanasius his Creed) Not by conversion of the Godhead into Man, but by the taking of the Manhood into God. Quod erat permansit, quod non erat assumpsit; They were wont to sing so in an ancient Liturgy. Christ remaineth without any change in him, as God. I speak according to the meaning of that old Aenigmaticall Verse:

Sum, quod eram; quod eram, non sum; nunc dicor utrumque.

It is said in the Person of Christ, I am what I was, to wit, God still; I was not what I am, to wit, Man; I am called both, to wit, God-Man. To clear it by the application of the Text, The Word was made flesh. Christ is called the Word, particularly in reference to that internal word and conceptions, that are in a man's heart. Now if a man manifest his own conceptions, What doth he do? He assumeth a voice, as it were, and, by that voice, makes men to hear what his conception is. This Word was that that it was before, yet it was manifested in the flesh, without any change of what he was. Here ye have the false sense removed.

Let the true sense now be asserted. The Word was made flesh; that is, He assumed the Human Nature into the union of his person. He that was God before from everlasting, doth now take man into the unity of his Person; only there is this difference in it, The phrase seemeth to import something more, because it is said, The Word was made flesh. And that some Heretics catch at, because, they say, One thing cannot be made another without some [Object.] change. As at the marriage in Canaan, water was made wine, and then it ceased to be water; so, say they, If the Word be made flesh, it must cease to be the Word, for it is now made another thing.

For Answer to this, first, There is no necessity of translating [Answ. 1] it, Made; 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 , The Word became flesh. So, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 , 1 Cor. 9. 20. Unto the Jews I became as a Jew, saith Paul; 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 , I became. So, the Word became flesh, by a voluntary assumption of the Manhood. So then, the Objection is waved, for it lieth wholly in the Translation, The Word was made flesh.

Secondly, Let the Translation stand, yet it will not overthrow [Answ. 2] what hath been said; because everything that is made another, is not infallibly changed itself. Let us therefore distinguish of a Natural change; and a Civil change; a Physical change, and a Political change. When one thing indeed is made another by a Physical change, then it ceaseth to be what it was before, as when the water was made wine. But one person may be made another, in a way of Political change, and yet continue what it was before: As, When one that is invested with Titles and Royalties of an higher nature, is pleased, out of condescension; to assume some lower Title to himself; as, When a Sovereign Prince is pleased to be made or created Knight of the Garter; when an English Earl is made a Gentleman of Venice: Here is the King made a Knight, and the Earl a Gentleman, and yet continue what they were: They have assumed a lower dignity, without disparagement to what they were before. And some of our Kings have been made free of this City of London, in some Companies: and it was an honor to the Company, not a disparagement to the Prince. So it is with Christ, He honored that Nature he assumed, and not lost that Nature which he had. Thus you see the meaning of this Clause, The Word was made flesh. Let us now see what Use may be made of it.

First, We shall apply the whole Clause, and then draw [Use 1] some instances from particulars.

The whole Clause may be of use, for the confutation of many Heretics. Our Evangelist here aimed at the confutation of Heretics, when he writ this Gospel; and this one Clause knocketh many of them in the head. It hath been the lot of the Church of Christ, to be always conflicting, more or less, with that kind of men. For the first three hundred years after Christ, the great thing then was by Persecution; but after God had stirred up Constantine, the Devil leaveth playing the Lion, and turned to the Fox; what he could not obtain by force, he now seeks by fraud; and instead of Persecution, raiseth up Heresies. And look as nowadays, that which should unite all Christians together, namely, the Lord's Supper, which we therefore call the Communion, is made the greatest matter of Contention in the world. The Lutherans and Carvinists fall out about Consubstantiation, Lutherans and Papists about Transubstantiation. The Lord's Supper is made a mere matter of quarrel, by the subtlety of Satan. So of old, this Personal Union, of which I have spoken all this while, the two Natures, God and Man, in one Person, was the great matter of division in the Churches of Christ. Many Heretics struck at this, and this Text meeteth with many of them; I shall instance in four, but not trouble you long about them; but a little is fit to be said, that we may know what was done in former ages. Great use is of Evangelical History. There is the Heresy of

- The Arians,
 - All confuted by this Clause.

- The Apollinarians,
- The Nestorians,
- The Eutychians,

The Arians held, That Jesus Christ was not true God. This Text calleth him the Word, and maketh him a Person in the Trinity. It saith, The Word was with God, and the Word was God, and that Word was made flesh.

The Apollinarians acknowledge him to be God, yea, and Man too; but they held, That he took only the Body of a Man, not the Soul of a Man; but they say, His Divinity supplied the room of a Soul. We interpret the word [Flesh] rightly, for the whole human nature. Therefore the Apollinarians are confuted here too.

The Nestorians grant him to be both God and Man; but then they say, The Godhead made one Person, and the Manhood another Person. We interpret the word [Made] rightly, according as it holdeth forth an Hypostatical Union. and remember what was said of Christ's assuming, not the person of man, but the nature of man. That Heresy is then confuted. Here is God and Man, two Natures, but one Person.

The Eutychians held but one Person in Christ; then they confounded the Natures. They say, That the Godhead and Manhood make such a mixture, as to produce a Third thing. Here they are confuted, by the right understanding of the Hypostatical Union. I will not perplex your understandings with these things; only see the care of the Church of God of old. It met with all these sorts of Heretics in four Adverbs; the old Councils brought in the word 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, Truly, to oppose the Arians; that implieth, that Christ was true God. The word 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, Perfectly, to oppose the Apollinarians, to show, he was perfectly Man, consisting of a Soul, and of a Body. The word 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, Undividedly, to oppose the Nestorians, to show, that his Natures were not divided. And then the word 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, Unmixtly, to oppose the Eutychians, who so mingled the Natures, as to make a third thing out of both.

We now come to what remaineth in the Particulars: See what they will afford us.

First, That which concerneth the Divinity of Christ, the Word; what hath been said of that, may serve to fill us all with admiration, of the love and wisdom of our God, in ordering so, that his own Son, the Second Person in the Trinity, the Word, should be made flesh for our salvation. God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son. Here is love indeed! Hardly will a man part with an only son, yet God doth; He spared not his own Son, but gave him to death for us all. And yet, haply, a man may have such a son, that he careth not for; But what saith the voice from Heaven? This is my beloved Son. And yet he so loved the world, as to part with his beloved Son. One may have a son that he loveth, and yet be displeased with him, as David was with Absalom; but this Son did please the Father, and yet this Son is given to die. O the admirable love of God, shining in this, that the Second Person in the Trinity, is set on work to procure our Redemption! Though Reason could never have found out such a way, yet, when God hath revealed it, Reason, though but shallow, can see a fitness in it; because there being a necessity, that the Savior of man should be Man, and an impossibility, that any but God should save him; and one Person in the Trinity being to be Incarnate: It suiteth to reason, that the first Person in the Trinity should not be the Mediator; For who should send him? He is of none, and therefore could not be sent. There must be one sent to reconcile the Enmity, and another to give gifts to friends; two proceeding Persons, the Son from the Father, and the Holy Ghost from the Father and the Son; accordingly, the second Person, which is the Son, he is sent upon the first errand, to reconcile man to God; and the third Person, the Holy Ghost, he is sent to give gifts to men, so reconciled. So as to Reason, it is a suitable, and a very great congruity; That God having made all things by his Word, should now repair all things by his Word. That as the word of the serpent deceived man, and brought him to ruin; so the Word of God should restore him, and bring him to happiness. That he that was the middle person in the Trinity, should become the Mediator between God, and man; That he that was the express Image of the Father's person, should restore the Image of God, defaced in man by his sins. Men may be too curious in such Queries, but where there is a bottom in the love of God, we may safely lose ourselves in the admiration of the wisdom of God, in the Contrivance of the work of our Redemption. That for the first.

Secondly, From what hath been said of the word, flesh, here, as importing the human nature, and the human nature clothed with infirmities, we may gather both matter of Comfort, and matter of Duty.

First, Matter of Comfort from each of the two branches; from flesh, as it importeth man-hood; from flesh, as it importeth infirmity of man-hood. The Son of God hath taken our nature upon him, that may Comfort men; It is matter of Rejoicing to any man, when he heareth his friend is preferred. What is so near to us as our own nature? Behold our nature is preferred by Jesus Christ, to a union in the Godhead. Christ sitteth in Heaven with our nature, and the same flesh that we have upon us, only glorified. It is that, which all the World cannot give a sufficient reason of, why the same word in the Hebrew, Rashar, should signify both flesh, and good Tydings; Divinity will give you a reason, though Grammar cannot. Christ's taking of flesh upon him, was good Tydings to all the whole World; therefore, no wonder if one word signify both. Abundance of comfort may be taken from hence to poor souls, when they think God hath forgotten them; To consider, Is it likely, that Christ that is man, should forget Man, now He is at the right hand of the Father, clothed in that nature that we have. When we are troubled to think it is impossible, God and man should ever be reconciled; Let us consider, that God, and man, did meet in Christ, therefore it is possible, we may meet; What hath been, may be again. The two natures met in Christ, therefore God may be reconciled to man; yea, they therefore met, that God might be reconciled to man. He was made Emanuel God with us; that he might bring God, and us together. When a man is troubled to think of the Corruptions of his nature, that is so full of defilement, that it cannot be sanctified; let him withal think, that his nature is capable of sanctification to the full. Christ received human nature, which was not polluted, his nature is the same; Therefore, that nature is capable of sanctification to the uttermost. Many more comforts may be raised from this Consideration, That he assumed flesh, with the sorrows of it, and the nature of it; penal infirmities. The consideration of that in general, may give some comfort to men, because it letteth us see, that Christ is able, and willing to help us, because he hath taken our infirmities. Both these the Apostle holdeth out, Hebr. 2. ult. It is said, In that he himself had suffered, being tempted, he is able to succor them that are tempted. He is therefore able, because himself hath been tempted. As a Physician that trieth the virtue of some sovereign Composition upon his own body, he is the better able to cure another, with that Receipt, because he himself hath tried it. Christ hath born our infirmities, therefore he knoweth better how to support us under them. I, but is he willing? yes, His willingness may be collected from this, That he hath taken our infirmities, Hebr. 2. 17. He was made like unto his brethren in all things, that he might be a merciful high Priest. Christ is therefore a merciful high Priest, because he was made like us in our infirmities. It is a great invitation to mercy, to see one in the same condition that we ourselves have been in. As she said, Haud ignara mali, miseris succurrere disco, she had learned to pity others, because she had born the like miseries her self. As a woman that hath had a Child, can more pity women that are in Travaile, because she hath suffered the like pains; than other women can, that never have brought forth any Children at all. So the Lord Jesus hath felt the like infirmities, the penal, not the sinful; therefore he is likely to pity us, when we lie under them, Exod. 23. 9. Thou shalt not oppress a stranger, for ye know the heart of a stranger, seeing ye were strangers in the land of Egypt. Christ knoweth the heart of a man, under his infirmities, when they are only painful, and not sinful, because he himself did undergo such in the days of his flesh. Therefore, this may comfort a man as in general, so in diverse particular Cases; when we wrestle with infirmities, suppose sorrow of heart, it was Christ's own case. Time was, when he cried out, Matth. 26. 38. My soul is exceeding sorrowful, even to death. The consideration of his sorrow, may help to sweeten thine, when thou art afflicted in body, and pinched. It was Christ's case, He himself hungered in the wilderness, and was a thirst at Jacob's well. He was buffeted, and scourged, yea, Crucified in the end, He felt the nails and spear. Therefore saith Luther, I am ashamed, that men should count my sufferings anything, when I think of what Christ endured; So, be our sufferings never so great, we are thereby made conformable to him, who suffered the like things for us. And so for poverty, 2 Cor. 8. 9. Ye know the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, who, though he were rich, yet for your sakes he became poor, that you through his poverty might be made rich. The like may be said in many other Instances: whatsoever infirmity it is, we may expect, Christ will relieve us against it.

But the soul saith, Still you except sin, I would have that taken away. If Christ take not that away, I am undone. [Object.] This doth not so much lie in my Text now, yet I shall speak a word to it.

I told you, Christ took our painful infirmities, and not [Answ.] our sinful. And yet I must tell you, he took our sinful infirmities too, in another sense; not in the same way, as he took the other. He took our painful infirmities, in a way of Inherency; and our sinful ones too, in a way of Iniputation; Quicquid sustulit, tollit, whatsoever Christ took away, he took. He took away our sins, therefore he took our sins, in one sense, or other; He could not take our sins, as our sorrows. It was impossible, that sin should be inherent in Christ; His Divinity was a protection against all sins, yet He took them away by imputation. Therefore, It is said by the Apostle, God hath made him to be sin for us, who knew no sin; He knew no sin, and yet is made sin.

How? Not made sin, by committing sin, for Christ was not in a Capacity of sinning; but made sin, by bearing the Imputation of sin; and so took upon him the guilt of sin, and not the Inherency of sin.

There be two things in guilt, a worthiness of being punished, and a destination to punishment; The Demerit, and the Destination.

It is false to say, That Christ took the guilt upon him, in a way of Demerit; as if Christ himself had been worthy of being punished. For all Demerit implieth sin, either natural, or personal; Now in Christ, was neither original Corruption, nor actual Rebellion. But the other thing in guilt, which is, Poenae obligatio, an obligation, and destination to punishment. In this sense, Christ took guilt, not because of any natural Demerit, but because of his Communion in that nature, of which the Demerit was found; He voluntarily became our Surety, and took our Nature, that, in that nature, He might suffer for our sins. And in this capacity, God doth destinate him to punishment; in this sense, He took our sinful infirmities. And thus ye see, what matter of comfort this truth affordeth.

It affordeth us likewise matter of duty. Lessons of piety, and Lessons of thankfulness.

First, Lessons of piety: Oh, If Christ the second Person in the Triuity, did put on man, how careful should men be to put on Christ? Put ye on the Lord Jesus, saith the Apostle, not making provision for the flesh, to fulfill the lusts thereof, Rom. 13. 14. If Christ assumed our human nature, how should we wrestle with God, to be made partakers of the Divine nature, 2 Pet. 1. 4. Whereby are given unto us exceeding great and precious Promises, that by these you might be partakers of the Divine nature, having escaped the corruptions that are in the World through lusts. If Christ became thus one flesh with us, how zealous should we be to become one spirit with Christ? 1 Cor. 6. 17. Even as man, and wife, is one flesh; so he that is joined to the Lord, is one spirit; So she is married to Christ, and God looketh upon such a soul, as his own daughter, now it is married to his Son; therefore dealeth with it, as Caleb did to Achsah. He giveth her not only the upper Land, and nether springs, not only outward blessings, and accommodations, but comforts, and refreshments with them; not only the nether springs of Ordinances, but the upper springs of Comforts, and Refreshments in, and by, those Ordinances.

Secondly, Here are Lessons of thankfulness too. Was the Word made flesh? Did Christ take our nature? yea, did he take our nature at the worst, after the Fall? What exceeding great cause have we to bless his Name forever; for this Condescension of his? Should all the Princes in the World, have come from their several Thrones, and have gone a begging from door to door, it was not so much, as for Christ to become man for our sakes. And he took our nature not in the integrity of it, as in Adam before his fall, but in the infirmities of it, which came to it by the fall; As, for a man that can live of himself, to wear a Noble man's Livery, while this Noble man is in great favor in the Court, and hath the King's ear, this is no such great matter: But when this Noble man is proclaimed a Traitor, and is cast out of his Prince's favor, then for this man to wear his Cloath, and own him, this is something hard. This is the Case, for Christ to have taken our nature as it was in Adam, while he stood clothed in his Integrity, and flood right in the sight of God; had not been so much, as when Adam was fallen, and proclaimed Traitor. As Bernardsaith, Quo pro me vilior, eo mihi charior, Domine, Lord, thou shalt be so much the more dear to me, by how much the more thou hast been vile for me. Here is Condescension indeed, that Christ should stoop so low to take flesh, and flesh with infirmities. You know what King Ahasuerus did, when he met with the passage in the Chronicles, which laid open, what good service Mordecai had done for him; saith he, What hath been done for this man? and when he saw nothing was done, he thinks presently of advancing him, Hest. 6. 3. Let us call to ourselves, and say, What hath been done for this Jesus, that hath done so much for my soul? If nothing at all; It is time to fall upon this duty, and to think of some way to Testifie our thankfulness to Christ. How shall we do it? Christ is above, we are not able to reach Him. True, but He hath members here on Earth, though He be in Heaven; He will take it as done to himself, if ye do it to one of them. Would you be thankful to Christ, be kind to his people. Kings, when they go their progress, and come to this, and that Town, and are presented with some sum of Money, or piece of Plate; the Present they receive, to give the people content, but they give away the thing to some of their Favorites. So it is with Christ, He giveth away the things ye tender him, he taketh it well; but he is content, that his Children should have what you give. He himself standeth in no need of what we can do; but if we do it to his people, he will accept it, as if it was done to himself, Matth. 25. 40. Therefore David maketh a full Confession of this, Psal. 16. 2, 3. Thou art my Lord, saith he, my goodness extendeth not to thee, but to the Saints on the Earth, and to the Excellent, in whom is all my delight. You see what use may be made now, of what was said of the Divine nature of Christ, as he is called the Word; what of his human nature, as he is said, to be made flesh; and what followeth, and what hath been said of the personal union of these two natures.

Ye may from hence, take a view of one of the deepest Mysteries in all the World; for it is one of the deepest in all Religions, and the Christian Religion containeth such mysteries •s the world cannot show besides; all the depths of the world are but shallow to the things of God. Here is one of the deepest things of God, The Word being made flesh. There are three great Unions, that are three great Mysteries, the deepest of any that are.

- The Substantial union.
- The Personal union.
- The Mystical union.

And this is one of them.

First, The Substantial union of three Persons in one Nature, and one Substance: So, Father, Son, and holy Ghost, make but One God.

Secondly, There is the Personal union, of two Natures in one Person: So, God and Man make but one Christ.

Thirdly, There is the Union of Several, both Persons, and Natures, in one Mystical body; and so, Elect Angels, and Men, and Christ together, make but one Body, whereof Christ is the Head.

Here are the three great Mysteries of Religion. That I speak of, is the second of these, The Personal union.

In the first of these, Divines use to observe, that there is alius and alius, but not aliud and aliud; another Person, but not another Thing. The Father is, Alius a Filio, a distinct Person from the Son; and the Son is, Alius à sancto Spiritu, a distinct Person from the holy Ghost; but not a distinct Thing. The Father, Son, and holy Ghost make but one Essence, there is not aliud to be found in them.

In the Second is aliud, but not alius; a distinct Thing, but not distinct Persons: The Human Nature is a distinct thing from the Godhead, and the Godhead a distinct thing from the Manhood, but not a distinct person from the Manhood; for God and Man make but one Person.

In the Third, the Mystical union, there is both aliud and alius, but not alienus: There is distinct Things, and distinct Persons; the Angelical Nature and Human Nature; the persons of Believers, and the Person of Christ: but there is not alienus amongst them. One of these are united to another in near relation; they are not aliud, one from another. Though there be different things, and different persons, there is a union between them. That is one thing that ye may learn from hence.

Secondly, Ye may learn from hence a ground of that communication of Properties, which is a very mysterious thing in Religion; that which they call, Communicatio Idiomatum, a thing not so easily understood. But by reason of this personal union of the two Natures in Christ, there is a communication of Properties; that is, That which belongeth to the Manhood, may be ascribed and given to Christ, though denominated from the Godhead; and that that belongeth to the Godhead, may be denominated to Christ, because it belongeth to the Manhood. A man may truly say, The Son of Mary made the world. Here Christ is denominated from his human Nature; but it is Christ as God that made the world, not Christ as the Son of Mary; for he was not the Son of Mary till many thousand years after the world was made. On the other side, you may say, The Son of God was crucified, and shed his blood upon t• Cross. Here ye ascribe that to Christ, under the denomination of the Son of God, which belongeth to him as Man; to shed his blood, as God, he hath none to shed. But yet, this may properly be said, because the Person is both God and Man. It is not without precedent in Scripture, Joh. 3. 13. No man hath ascended up to heaven, but he that came down from heaven, even the Son of man which is in heaven. Christ here, when he conversed upon earth, he said, The Son of man was in heaven; Why? Because that Person was in heaven according to his Godhead; and yet the Son of man denominated from the Godhead, is said to be in heaven, whereas nothing more certain, that Christ-Man was upon earth, and yet in heaven, as God. And so on the other side, Act. 20. 28. Take heed to the flock, over which the holy Ghost hath made you overseers, to feed the Church of God, which he hath purchased with his own blood. God hath no blood, yet God is said to purchase the Church with his blood; because that Person which was God, had blood to shed, according to his human Nature; though it was sanguis humanus, yet it was sanguis Dei. It was human blood, yet the blood of that Person, which was God as well as Man. Now the ground of all this, is that personal union, The Word being made flesh. Divines have labored much to make this clear, therefore have invented divers Comparisons; I shall tell you of one or two of them. They suppose a flaming fiery Sword; here is a union of the metal and of the fire, that are met together in this sword; and therefore there may be a communication of the properties. This fiery thing may be said to cut, and this sharp thing may be said to burn, because they are so united in one sword. Or thus, They suppose a man under two capacities, one and the same man that hath skill in two Sciences; suppose he is both a good Physician, and a good Lawyer. Now one may, in propriety of speech, say, This Physician is a Lawyer, and this Lawyer is a Physician, because both meet in one man. A man may say, This Physician is a diligent follower of his Client's business, and this Lawyer is very good at curing his Patients. Or thus, A branch of a Vine is grafted into the stock of an Olive-tree, and that so, as it takes of each tree: both the Vine-branch and the Olive bear according to their several natures, yet are in the union both of one tree; but both Grapes and Olives grow upon it. One may say, This Vine beareth good Olives, and this Olive-tree beareth good Grapes, because united in one tree. So it is in respect of the Manhood united to the Godhead. This Son of Mary made the world, and this Son of God shed his blood upon the Cross. But, no more of this, The Word was made flesh.

—and dwelt amongst us, and we beheld his glory the glory as of the only begotten of the Father, full of Grace and Truth.

I now go on to what remaineth, And dwelt amongst us, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 . The word signifieth properly, Dwelling as in a Tabernacle; 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 signifieth a Tent, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 signifieth, to dwell in a Tent or Tabernacle. Then this Clause, Dwelt amongst us, is capable of a three-fold sense, though, as I suppose, but one is here intended.

There is

- a Mystical sense,
 - of these words.
- a Spiritual sense,
- a Civil sense,

First, A Mystical sense, and, according to that, this phrase, Dwelt amongst us, is an amplification of the former, The Word was made flesh; and implieth this, That the Divinity of Christ dwelleth in the human Nature as in a Tabernacle, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 , in us; the plural number noteth the human Nature, and implieth (as diverse go this way, especially the Greek Fathers, and the Arabic and Syriac, all give this sense of this place, to intimate) That the habitation or dwelling that Christ assumed to himself, was not the Person of man, but the Nature of man; and therefore dwelt in us. There is a place of Scripture that seemeth to favor this sense, Col. 2. 9. where ye find it thus said, In him dwelleth all the fullness of the Godhead bodily. As if so be he should have said, The Godhead dwelt in the body of Christ as in a tabernacle, or tent, which it had erected for its own habitation. Dwelt, and dwelt bodily.

Secondly, There is a Spiritual sense of this Clause; and according to that, the meaning is this. Dwelt in us, namely, by his Spirit, by influence from heaven; and this way Cajetan goeth, Lest men should suspect, saith he, because of what was said before, The Word was made flesh, that now we are to have none but fleshly communion with the Son of God: Though It was made flesh, yet he dwelt, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, in us, by his Spirit, and conversed with us in that respect; and this is implied in the Praeposition 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉. We say not, inter nos; but, in nobis. If he had meant it of Christ's dwelling in the world, he would have said, Inter nos; but he saith, In nobis: that implieth a communication of himself to our inward man, according to that sense which other Scriptures hold forth, That Christ-Man dwelleth in our hearts by faith, Ephes. 3. 17. 2 Cor. 6. 16. God hath said, I will dwell in them, and walk in them; and I will be their God, and they shall be my people.

Thirdly, There is a third sense of these words, that is, a Civil sense. Dwelt amongst us, that is, Conversed amongst us, as one man converseth with another. He took upon him the form of a servant, and was in the likeness of man, and carried himself for about 33 years upon earth as a man. This is his dwelling amongst us, and that is the most proper sense in this place; though there be a truth in all the former, yet neither of them is here intended; not the First, which I call the Mystical sense, because the human Nature of Christ was not assumed like as a Tabernacle or Tent, which is pitched for a while, and then removed; but as a Mansion. The Divinity took up his habitation forever in the human Nature. Christ now continueth, and shall forever, as true Man, as he was when he was born of the Virgin Mary. In that place, Col. 2. 9. the Apostle useth another word, where he saith, that all the fullness of the Godhead dwelleth in him bodily; the word is not, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, as in a Tabernacle; but, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, as in a Mansion and abiding place. He so took the human Nature, as never to lay it down again. Therefore not as in a Tabernacle. As for the Spiritual sense, that cannot well be the meaning here: Though it be true, that Christ dwelleth in the hearts of his Saints, and converseth with their spirits; yet, the Evangelist speaketh of some kind of habitation amongst men; but this kind of habitation, dwelling in our hearts, was that which was usually in the Word from the beginning of the world; so he dwelt amongst the Jews, for they were his beloved people long before he was Incarnate. Besides, this was ceased when the Evangelist wrote. The Word was made flesh, and dwelt amongst us, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, habitavit, in the Praeterperfect Tense. If ye take it of Christ's conversing amongst men upon the face of the earth, he did dwell amongst them so; but he did not dwell amongst them at this time, that was past; but his dwelling in his Spirit amongst us, that is not past: Joh. 6. 56. He that eateth my flesh, and drinketh my blood, dwelleth in me, and I in him. It remaineth therefore, that the sense of this place is plainly thus (not to seek into abstruse senses) The Word was made flesh, and dwelt amongst us; that is, Conversed amongst men as a man. And therefore that of Cajetan hath no validity in it; for [〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉] doth sometimes signify on, as well as in: Act. 18. 11. He continued there a year and six months, teaching the Word of God amongst them; 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, and so our Translators, well, have it here. Dwelt, not in, but amongst us; Well then, The word made flesh, pitched his Tent upon earth, and dwelt amongst men. If ye will have it in a way of Observation, that must be so. Ye have the Emphasis of the original words.

For the explication of this, Three sorts of men were wont to dwell in Tents. And the allusion here may be to all three.

- Shepherds.
- Sojourners.
- Soldiers.

Shepherds, First: Isaiah 38. 12. Mine age is departed, [1] and is removed from me as a shepherd's Tent.

Sojourners, Secondly: as the Israelites in the wilderness, they dwelt in Tents, and, in memory of that, they after [2] kept the feast of Tabernacles, Psal. 120. 5. We is me, that I sojourn in Meshech, that I dwell in the Tents of Kedar.

Soldiers, Thirdly: And David said to him, Go home unto thine own house. But Uriah said to David, Is the ark [3] of Israel, and Judah abiding in Tents? And my Lord abiding in the open field? And shall I go home to my house?

Now Christ was all these three, a Shepherd, a Sojourner, and a Soldier, and therefore is said, to dwell, in these three respects, as in a Tabernacle.

First, As the great and good Shepherd, for both these terms are given to him, Joh 10. 11. I am the good shepherd, saith he, the good shepherd giveth his Life for his sheep. That is a good shepherd indeed! Other shepherds they provide food for their sheep, but they cannot give them a fleece; Christ provideth both food, and fleece for his sheep. And whereas other shepherds sell their sheep to the slaughter, that they themselves may be maintained by them; here is a shepherd slaughtered for his sheep, I am the good shepherd, the good shepherd giveth his Life for the sheep. Some other good shepherds may venture their life for their sheep; As David run a hazard, to venture his Life to rescue the sheep from the Lion. But Christ did more than run a hazard, for He gave his Life.

Then Christ dwelt in Tents as a Sojourner. Ye have a distinction of Viatores, and Comp chenso es, amongst Divines; They say, that all the people of God in their Pilgrimage towards Heaven, are Viatores, and the Saints above in the state of Glory, are Comprehensores, in that they are at home; now the Lord Jesus Christ he is both. There is that difference between a Saint in Heaven, and a Saint on this side Heaven. Christ in the days of his flesh, was at once a Traveler, and a Comprehensor. For he always had the fruition of God, in that respect he was a Comprehensor; and yet in the 33 years of his abode in the flesh, he was a Viator, and a Traveler in the way; therefore he is said, to have drunk of the brook in the way. He speaks of a sojourner, as one going to, and fro, Joh. 16. 8. I came forth from the Father, and am come into the World; and again I leave the World, and go to the Father. Here is his Jistes, as it were several journeys, that Christ took in the days of his Pilgrimage, as a Sojourner.

Thirdly, He pitched his Tents here amongst men, as a Soldier, for indeed so he is. Ever since the fall, the World hath been divided into two parts, all shall be united then, but now the Devil goeth away with the greatest part, as the Prince of this World, and the Lord Jesus appeared on the other side, as the Captain of our salvation. Ye have him under that notion, Hebr. 2. 10. It became him, from whom are all things, and by whom are all things, in bringing many sons unto glory, to make the Captain of their salvation perfect through sufferings. Accordingly he appeared to Joshua, Jos. 5. 13. with a sword in his hand, as the Captain of the Lord's hosts. Therefore it is, that when a man is excommunicated, the Apostle's phrase is, That he may be delivered up to Satan; because he is now cast out of the visible Church, and so deduced again unto Satan's government. In all these respects, ye see, both as a Shepherd, a Sojourner, and a Soldier; Christ is properly said to pitch his Tents amongst us, which is the importance of the Greek word in the Text.

I shall not pass this over without some Application, [Use 1]The consideration of Christ's dwelling amongst us, may be of use, to let us see, the Faithfulness of God for our Encouragement, and the Condescension of Christ for our Imitation.

First, The faithfulness of God, for our encouragement: Be pleased to look into Exodus, and Leviticus, you shall find an old promise, that God would come and dwell amongst his people. It is said in Exodus 12. 43. I will dwell amongst the Children of Israel, and will be their God. It is said, Leviticus 26. 12. I will walk amongst you, and will be your God, and ye shall be my people. Now this promise, is of the nature of diverse, in the Scripture, that have their gradual accomplishments, and are fulfilled, by piece-meal, by degrees; I will dwell amongst you, saith God, He promised then, when the people of Israel were in the wilderness. The first fulfilling of this promise was, when the Tabernacle was made in the wilderness, that was a Testimony of the presence of God. A further fulfilling of this promise was, when Solomon built the Temple, 2 Chron. 6. 2. I have built an house, and habitation for thee, and a place for thy dwelling forever. But when Christ came in the flesh, here was a farther fulfilling of that promise; Then came He, of whose Body the Tabernacle, and Temple, were but types. Destroy this Temple, saith he, and I will build it up in three days, speaking of his body; now here is the promise fulfilled in a remarkable way: and yet there is to be a farther fulfilling of the same promise still. That ye may see, that God maketh good the same promise many times, diverse times over, Revel. 21. 3. Behold the Tabernacle of God is with men, and he will dwell with them, and they shall be his people, and God himself shall be with them, and be their God. There is a farther state of happiness yet to come, wherein this promise is to be made good, That God will dwell amongst men.

Secondly, see the Condescension of Jesus Christ, though, He was the delight of his Father from all Eternity, Prov. 8. Yet to show his delight to the sons of men, he will come and dwell amongst them, Prov. 8. 31. I was by him, as one brought up with him, I was daily his delight, rejoicing always before him, rejoicing in the habitable parts of the world, and my delights were with the sons of men. To manifest this, before he did actually come in the flesh, he was often pleased to take a body for a time, and to lay it down again; to appear in human shape, praeludere Incarnationi, as they use to call it; He acted the Prologue of his Incarnation, before he came really. He appeared to Abraham, and to Joshua. But after he did assume a real body into personal union with himself, which he did never till now, he took it of the Virgin Mary. Here is infinite condescension, that he who lay in the Father's bosom, should not abhor the Virgin's womb. If it were such a commendation of Moses his faith, Heb. 11. though he were in great pomp at the Court; yet, by faith he chose rather to suffer afflictions with the people of God, than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season. Though he were a favourite at Court, yet he would join himself with a sort of poor Brick-makers. Then, what a condescension is it of the love of God, that he would send his Son to dwell amongst us, poor dust and ashes!

Then, from Christ's dwelling amongst us as in a tabernacle, as it referreth to his condition as a Shepherd. Something we may learn from hence; Whom to have recourse to, and to be protected by, in our fallen and relapsed condition: We were all as sheep going astray, 1 Pet. 1. ult. but are now returned to the Shepherd of our souls. Poor sheep, going astray, and must forever go astray, they cannot know the way to return home. But now, Lo, Christ cometh, dwelleth, and pitcheth his tents amongst us, that under him we may have protection. I shall want nothing, saith David, for the Lord is my shepherd, Psal. 23. ult. Seeing Christ came to pitch his tents, we should hear his voice; My sheep hear my voice. Now Christ is in heaven, no voice is to be heard but by the Ministry: therefore all those Exhortations which the Minister giveth to the people, they all come from this great Shepherd, and are accordingly to be heeded. Eccles. 12. 11. The words of the wise are as goads, and as nails fastened by the masters of assemblies, which are given by one shepherd. Those Officers which Christ hath fastened in the Church, they are as nails fastened to the Assemblies. Therefore such as listen to the voice of inferior shepherd, according to the Word, when this great Shepherd shall come, they shall receive a Crown of life.

Secondly, Christ pitched his tents amongst us as a Sojourner. This should teach us to be conformed to Christ, even in this particular. He did but pitch a tent, he did not take up his abode upon the face of the earth. We must carry ourselves as strangers and pilgrims in the world, and not look at ourselves as at home here. Ye know what the Psalmist saith, I am a stranger, Psal. 39. 12. Hear my prayers, O Lord, and give ear to my cry, hold not thy peace at my tears; for I am a stranger with thee, and a sojourner as all my fathers were. Ye know what is said of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and those Patriarchs of old; they dwelt in tents, saith the Apostle, Heb. 11. 8, 9. By faith Abraham, when he was called to go out into a place, which he should after receive for an inheritance, obeyed, and he went out, not knowing whither he went. By faith he sojourned in the land of promise as in a strange country, dwelling in tabernacles with Isaac and Jacob, the heirs with him of the same promise. For he looked for a city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God. And so, verse. 16. Now they desired a better country, that is, an heavenly.

Beloved, not to dwell here, Look about you, and ye will find nothing but Tabernacles; no Mansions, till ye come to heaven. While we live, What are our bodies, but as so many tabernacles to our souls? It is a Scripture-expression, 2 Pet. 1. 13, 14. I think it meet; as long as I am in this tabernacle, to stir you up, knowing that shortly I must put off this tabernacle. While we live, our bodies are but tabernacles to our souls; and when we are dead, the graves are but tabernacles to our bodies. Psal. 16. 9. Therefore did my heart rejoice, and my tongue was glad; moreover my body shall rest in hope. Because neither must our souls remain long in our bodies, nor our bodies in the grave. If we will have Mansions, we must look to Heaven, In my Father's house are many mansions. Therefore dream not of mansions here below.

Thirdly, Christ pitched his tent amongst us, as the Captain of our salvation. Let this encourage us; we have one that's able to encounter with Satan, if he bring all his forces into the field together. Let him be a roaring lion, here is a ruling Lion, the Lion of the tribe of Judah, that can encounter him; that putteth upon us the whole armor of God. They say, that a very Army of Harts and Hares, led by a Lion, their Commander, are able to do great matters, because the Leader putteth courage into them by his valor. Let Christ put courage into us. As that great Commander said, when the Scouts came and told him, that so many thousands were coming against him, more than they were: Why, saith he, How many thousands do you reckon me for? intimating; that he was worth many thousands of his enemies. So, For how many thousands do you reckon Christ, when you go out against the World, and the Flesh, and the Devil? I pass to the next.

And we beheld his glory, as the glory of the only begotten Son of God.

Here is the special manifestation of Christ's glory. The Disciples beheld the glory of Christ, as the glory of the only begotten Son of the Father. Let us take the words as they lie. Here the Spectators were the Disciples of Christ, they were the men that beheld; and, in that respect, they were the blessed men, more blessed then the Fathers before them: Matth. 3. 16, 17. Blessed are your eyes for they see; and your ears, for they hear. For, verily I say unto you, that many prophets and righteous men have desired to see those things which ye see, and have not seen them; and to hear those things which ye hear, and have not heard them.

We beheld, there is the View.

The word is emphatical, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, we beheld, as in a theater, as men behold things presented to them on a Stage; they behold them with a great deal of earnestness and delight: That the word implieth.

Ye have heard what the Object is, the glory of Christ, We beheld his glory, which is the shining forth of excellency; such appeared in Christ.

The specification of that Object, What kind of glory? Why, the glory as of the only-begotten of the Father. Ye read in Scripture of several sorts of glory.

There is the glory of the Celestial bodies, the Sun, Moon, and Stars, of which it is said, 1 Cor. 15. 41. There is one glory of the Sun, another glory of the Moon, and another glory of the Stars; for one Star differeth from another in glory.

We read of the glory of Man, 1 Pet. 1. 24. All flesh is grass, and all the glory of man as the flower of the grass. The glory of Man, because as the Stars, and Sun, and Moon, excel inferior bodies, so they excel the Beasts; there is a shining forth in him, beyond what is in the creatures that have no reason.

We read likewise of the glory of the Angels, who are therefore called the Cherubims of glory, Heb. 9. 5. And over it the Cherubims of glory, shadowing the Mercy-seat, of which we cannot now speak particularly.

But, there is beyond all these (for all these are but created Glories) there is the glory of God, of which he himself saith, He will not give it to any other. This is the Glory of which we read in the Text, He will not give it to another, Isa. 42. 4. I am the Lord, that is my name, and my glory will I not give to another. I, but Christ was himself of the same Nature with himself; therefore the glory they saw in Christ was the glory as of the only-begotten of the Father. Some difference is in these words.

First, In that Christ is said to be the only begotten. Do [Object. 1st.] we not read in the thirteenth Verse of this Chapter, of other children of God, which were born, not of blood, nor of flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God? How then is Christ the only begotten, seeing God hath other children, and other begotten children too? That will not serve the turn, to say, We are adopted Christ's, as his begotten. Saith James, Jam. 1. 18. Of his own will begat he us with the word of truth, that we should be a kind of first-fruits of his creatures. If God hath begotten us, how then is Christ the only begotten of the Father?

I answer, Out of this place of St. James, Of his own will [Answ. 1st.] begat he us. There lieth the differences, Christ is the begotten of the Nature of the Father, we are begotten of the Will of the Father, Of his own will begat he us. Christ is a Son of eternal generation, we are sons by adoption: He begotten of his Nature, and we begotten of his Will. And so in that sense Christ is the only begotten, because the only Natural Son of God.

Still here is a farther difference, We beheld his glory, as [Object. 2d.] the glory of the only begotten of the Father. In this Particle, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, that which is but as another thing, is not the same thing, simile non est idem. Why now we hold out, and that according to truth, that the glory of Christ was the very self-same glory which God the Father had; the self-same glory which is due to God, is due to the Son of God. Therefore it is here said, It was the glory as of the only begotten.

For that you must know, that the Hebrew Caph, and the [Answ. 2d.] Greek 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, is twofold; there is a twofold [As] in Scripture, one of Similitude, the other of Identity. There is [as] Similitudinis, & Veritatis, an [as] of comparison. As for example, If one shall see a Noble-man richly attired, and bravely attended, to go through the streets, and say, Such a Noble-man goeth, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, as a King; here is an [as] of similitude. If the King himself should be going to Parliament, in great state, we may truly say of him, he goeth in state, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, as a King. Here is an [as] of Verity and Identity. The former was but an [as] of similitude. And there are many places of Scripture, where [as] doth not note a likeness, but the self-sameness, (as I may so speak) an Identity. It is said of John the Baptist, that all the people looked at him, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, as a Prophet: Matth. 14. 5. When he would have put him to death, he feared the multitude, because they counted him, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, as a prophet. Do you think the multitude looked at John, as if he had been something like a prophet? No, they took him for a Prophet indeed; yea, it is expressed, they counted him for a prophet. Phil. 2. 8. the Apostle speaking of Christ, being found in fashion of a man, he humbled himself. What, was not Christ really Man? Yes. But he being found, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 , in fashion as a man. Here [as] is an [as] of Identity, not an [as] of similitude, As a man, that is really so. As a man, that is the only begotten Son of God, that is, really the only begotten Son of God. Ye have the words expounded.

Now for the proof of this, The Disciples beheld the glory of Christ, as the glory of the only begotten Son of God; you shall have their own Testimony, 1 Joh. 1. 1, 2. That which was from the beginning, which we have heard, which we have seen with our eyes, which we have looked upon, and our hands have handled of the Word of Life; for the life was manifested, and we have seen, and bear witness, and shown unto you, that Eternal Life, which was with the Father, and was manifested to us. Other men they saw Christ, as well as the Disciples did; but not so much into Christ, as the Disciples did; As the Temple of Solomon was all beautiful without, of costly work, fair, and comely stones, but within, it was all over-laid with Gold. The Passengers that went by, they could see the outside of the Temple, and could not but acknowledge a beautiful frame; but the Priests, that served within, they saw it all over-laid with Gold, and so saw a farther beauty. All the Jews, amongst whom Christ conversed, might behold his outside, but the Disciples had a farther in sight into Christ. We beheld him, that is, we beheld him, as the word of Life, and saw his glory, that is, as of the only begotten Son of God; Whereas others saw his glory, that is, as of a Man, that did many glorious things; but these saw the glory of God, through the Manhood.

For the farther manifestation of this, I shall show you in what things, and at what time, the Disciples beheld the glory of Christ, and then proceed to Application.

First, In what things.

- In his Oracles.
- In his Miracles.

First, In his Oracles, namely his discourses, and Sermons, and Heavenly sayings, that proceeded out of his mouth. They came from him with such a glory, as amazed the hearers; and made them acknowledge, that he spake with authority, Matth. 7. 28, 29. It came to pass, when Jesus hadenaē these sayings, the people were aston shed at his Doctrine; For he taught them as one having authority, and not as the Scribes. Here was a dazelling glory shined out from the words of Christ, in so much, as they could scarce apprehend him; they had not power to lay hold on him, but returned, and said, Never man spake like this Man. What was flatteringly said of Herod, is true of the Lord Jesus Christ, in regard of his Ministry; The voice of God, and not of man, not of mere man, but of him, that was both God and Man. So this glory the Apostles saw in his Oracles, for they conversed with him.

Secondly, In his Miracles: Divine glory shined in them. As it is said of the first Miracle he did, Joh. 2. 11. This beginning of miracles did Jesus in Canaan of Galilee, and manifested forth his glory, and his Disciples believed on him. And so, when he had raised Lazarus from the dead, it is said, Joh. 11. 4. This sickness is not to death, but for the glory of God, that the Son of God might be glorified thereby; The Lord Jesus Christ intended his own glory in raising of Lazarus (And so by all his other Miracles.) This was a Divine glory: Because, never any raised the dead, as he did. Other instances ye have of others, raising some dead ones, as Elisha the Shunamites son, 2 King. 4. •3, 34. and Paul, Eutychus, Acts 20. 10. But here is the difference, Christ raised them by his own power, they by the power of Christ. So, The glory, as the only begotten of God, appeared only in his Miracles, and not in theirs Luk. 14. 7. It is said of Christ, He touched the bier, and they stood still, And Christ said, I say to thee, Arise. Here Christ speaks to men, I say to thee: whereas, what the Apostles did, they acknowledged it done, not by their own power, but by Christ, Acts 3. 12, 13. And when Peter saw it, he answered unto the people, Ye men of Israel, why marvel ye at this? or why look ye so earnestly on us, as though by our own power, and holiness, we had made this man to walk; The God of Abraham, and of Isaac, and of Jacob, the God of our fathers, hath glorified his Son Jesus, whom ye delivered up, and denied him in the presence of Pilate: His Name, through faith in his Name, hath made this man whole. So as it was the Glory of Jesus, that appeared even in the Miracles of the Disciples; These are the things wherein he did especially appear.

For the times: they are these two,

- The time of his Transfiguration.
- The time of his Ascension.

First, The Disciples beheld his glory, as the glory of the only begotten of the Father, at his Transfiguration; of which ye read, Matth. 17. When his Face shined, and his Raiment glittered, having Moses, and Elias, James, Peter, and John there; who were the spectators of all. This, Moses had begged long before, and said, Lord show me thy glory; Some piece of an answer God gave him, when he passed before him, and shown some piece of his glory. But here God showeth his glory upon mount Tabor, when Christ was Transfigured; We beheld his glory, namely, at the Transfiguration. John was one there, and Peter was another, as well as John. And he speaks dearly of it, 2 Pet. 1. 17. For he telleth you of the voice that came from the excellent glory; saying, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased, hear him. Referring to that time, and that place, the time of our Savior's Transfiguration upon that Mount, Mark 9. 2, 3, 4, 5. verse. And after six days, Jesus taketh with him Peter, and James, and John, and leadeth them up into an high mountain, apart by themselves, and he was transfigured before them; and his raiment became shining exceeding white as snow, so as no fuller on earth can whiten them. And there appeared unto them Elias, with Moses, and they were talking with Jesus.

The second time, wherein they beheld this glory of Christ; was the time of his Ascension, which the Disciples were spectators of, Acts 2. 9. And when he had spoken these things, while they beheld him; He was taken up, and a Cloud received him out of their sight. This cloud was Vehiculum Regale, a Royal Chariot, wherein Christ rode up to glory; And glory was not only the term, to which he went, but he went in a glorious way. As you may understand that in Timothy, Great is the mystery of godliness. God manifested in the flesh, seen of angels, believed of in the world, received up into glory, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 . You see by this time the truth of the Proposition. Let us see what use we can make of it, and then proceed.

First, take notice of one great end of Christ's Incarnation, [Use 1] which was, That his glory might be seen: He was made flesh, and dwelt amongst us, and we beheld his glory. Till then, the glory of Christ was invisible; but now, by taking flesh, he exposed himself and his glory to view: God manifested in the flesh, 1 Tim. 3. 16. Indeed, the flesh of Christ was a veil to him, but a mirror and glass to us. To him a Vail, to observe the glory which he had from all Eternity with God the Father, as the Son of God; but to us a Mirrour, in which we beheld this glory of God, which was never till now exposed to view, or not so fully. As God is invisible, so his glory is too dazzling for our weak eyes. But we that cannot behold the Sun in its sphere, may behold the Sun in a bason of water. We that cannot behold the glory of God, as in itself, may behold it in Christ, in the veil of his flesh. Therefore he was manifested, that he might be seen.

Secondly, Be exhorted from hence, to take a view of the glory of Christ, as the Disciples did: We cannot in the same manner, yet we have one way wherein we may do it: For Christ exposeth himself and his glory to believers in the glass of the Gospel; 2 Cor. 3. ult. But we all with open face, beholding as in a glass the glory of the Lord, are changed into the same image from glory to glory, even as by the Spirit of the Lord. To that end, he hath appointed the Ministry of the Word, and furnished his Ministers with gifts. 2 Cor. 4. 6. God who commanded light to shine out of darkness, hath shined in our hearts, that we should give the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ. Therefore in your attendance upon the Ministry of the Gospel, let it be your aim, still to see something of Christ's glory in it: And do as the Disciples did, We beheld his glory as in a Theater. Let it be our care to view Christ, and the things of Christ, as they are represented to us in a Theater. Ye know how greedy men are of such objects, they cannot satisfy their eyes with seeing Pageants, and such kind of shows; besides, things upon a Stage are seen with a great deal of delight: Insomuch as Augustine, when he would expresse the joys of Christians, in the midst of their greatest sorrow, hath this excellent expression of it, Orantium dulciores sunt lacrimae, quàm omnium gaudia Theatrorum, saith he, The tears of praying Christians have more sweetness in them, than all the joys of the Theaters, or of the Stages. Certainly, there never came such a spectacle, never such a thing to be viewed, as the glory of Christ is, never anything so well worth the viewing. Let it therefore be our care to do as the Apostle exhorts us, to be looking up to Jesus. That is very emphatical, Heb. 12. 2. Looking unto Jesus, the author and finisher of our faith; who for the joy that was set before him, endured the cross, and despised the shame, and is set down at the right hand of God. The word is, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, which hath a double force in it, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, and 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉; looking off, first; and then, looking upon. We must look off from the world, which our hearts are too much glued to, and then look up to Jesus; otherwise, if we busy our minds too much with carnal things, our hearts will be so full of the relish of them, as we cannot savor of the things of God. Certainly, brethren, we have presidents for this; take Paul, a man that busied himself in this great work, of beholding the glory of Christ, throughout his whole course, after his conversion; therefore he desired no other learning but Christ crucified, 1 Cor. 2. 2. I determined not to know anything amongst you, save Jesus Christ and him crucified. He valued no other wealth, but the knowledge of Christ, Phil. 3. 8. I count all things but loss and dross, for the excellency of the knowledge of Jesus Christ my Lord; for whom I have suffered the loss of all things, and do count them but dung that I may win Christ. Where was his learning, and wealth, and joy, and great delight? It was in the beholding of Christ; he gloried in nothing else, Gal. 6. 14. God forbid that I should glory, save in the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ. Beloved, the Cross of Christ shall be our Crown, if we love to make the glory of Christ our study.

Thirdly, take this third use into your meditations, of the excellency of Christ, raising your apprehensions above all created glories; for his glory is the glory as of the only begotten of the Father. Ye wrong Christ, if your apprehensions of him be not higher, than those you have of any creature. His hath a glory far above theirs, above the glory of the Celestial bodies, and the glory of Men, above the Angels and Cherubims. Therefore the Apostle taketh a great deal of pains, to prefer Christ above the Angels, that our thoughts may go beyond in the excellency of Christ above any other creatures. Whence it is, that Joh. 5. 23. all men should honor the Son, even as they honor the Father. He that honoreth not the Son, honoreth not the Father which hath sent him. So I have done with that Clause.

4. The fourth thing in my Text remaineth, that is, The singular Qualifications of Christ's Person, Full of Grace and Truth.

Christ was full of grace and truth, That is our Observation. It pleased the Father, saith the Apostle, Col. 1. 19. that in him should all fullness dwell; all fullness, of all sorts of grace, whether ye look to the kinds, or degrees of grace, the fullness of both sorts. There were all kinds of grace in Christ. Those graces which were scattered amongst the Saints, one excelling in this grace, another in that; Moses in meekness, Job in patience, David in thankfulness, and Joseph in chastity, and so in the rest; they are all united in Christ. So for the measure and degrees of grace, as he hath of all kinds, so the utmost degree of every kind. To Ministers, graces are given in a scant proportion, and measured out, according as God hath allotted to everyone his proportion, as the Apostle speaks, Ephes. 4. 7. Unto everyone of us is grace given, according to the measure of the gift of Christ. But to Christ himself, it is above measure, Joh. 3. 34. God gave not the Spirit by measure to him; he doth not stand meting it out, but poureth it out upon him. So that look whatsoever grace a human nature, void of sin, is capable of, that was all poured out upon Christ: Full of grace. It pleased the Father, that in him should all fullness dwell, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 ; that it should be the mansion-house of all fullness, so as there shall be no defect. Adam was full of grace in his condition, but fell from it; and the Angels full, but many of them turned Apostates: but Christ hath no defect in his Nature, it is a fullness, and a dwelling fullness. But this is too general. Full, Of what? Full of grace, and full of truth.

First, Of grace. Grace, is a word of various acceptation, and admitteth of many distinctions: I shall only meddle with such, as are applicable to this place. Grace is twofold, it is taken either Active or Passive.

There is Active-grace, Gratia gratis dans, Giving-grace. Passive-grace, Gratia gratis data, Grace given.

Active grace is that good-will, out of which God bestoweth his benefits upon the gracious.

Passive grace, grace given, is that which is bestowed, either upon the body, or upon the soul, or upon the whole person.

First, A grace bestowed upon the bodies of men, and that is Beauty, which properly cometh under the notion of grace, in that sense; Favor is deceitful, and beauty is vain, Prov. 31. 30. Gratia fallax est, saith the Latin translation, grace is deceitful; taking grace for beauty. So the Heathens, they called those goddesses of theirs, Charites, the Graces. That is grace upon the body, but that is the lowest.

Secondly, There is grace bestowed upon the Soul; and those are rather Gifts, tending to Edification, as gifts of Prophecy, and the like; or to Salvation, as Faith, and Love, and Zeal. The former are called, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 ; the latter, Charites: the former, gifts; the latter, graces, in a strict sense Thirdly, There is grace bestowed upon the whole Person, that is, Acceptation. Ye may call the first, Gracefulness in the body; the second, Grace in the soul; and the third, Gracefulness in the person. As when we say, Such a one is gracious at the Court, when he partaketh of the grace and favor of the King.

Now Christ was full of grace in all these senses.

First, If ye speak of active grace, giving grace; there was a fullness of that in Christ, a fullness of good-will, out of which flowed so many accommodations to the sons of men, both for soul and body. Therefore at his birth, the Angels sung, Good-will towards men. Whether ye look to his words, or to his deeds, ye shall find him full of grace, in this sense. If to his words, ye know what the Evangelist saith, Luk. 4. 42. They all bare witness, and wondered at the gracious words which proceeded out of his mouth. Gracious words. It is prophesied of him, and accordingly he made it good, that he should not cry, nor his voice be heard in the streets. His cry should not be like that of Jonah in Nineveh, a voice of destruction, or of terror; but if he did cry, it should be of mercy. If any man thirst, let him come and drink. If his voice be heard, it is a voice of grace, inviting sinners to come to him, Ye that be heavy laden, &c. Grace in all his words.

And so grace in all his Actions, He went about, as the Scripture telleth us, Act. 10. doing good. And so ye know the Evangelical History. I do not think, ye can give me an instance of any man, that Christ sent away, in the days of his flesh, that came to him for mercy, without mercy, He healed them all▪ Luk. 9. 11. And the people, when they knew it, followed him; and he received them, and spake unto them of the kingdom of God, and healed them that had need of healing. So, here is active grace in Christ.

Secondly, If ye look to Passive grace, to grace given; there was grace given that fell upon his body, which, certainly, was of excellent frame, full of beauty. Therefore it is said, Thou art fairer than the sons of men, grace is poured upon thy lips, Psal. 45. 2. This is not spoken of the Divinity of Christ, for, in that respect, he was fairer than the Angels; but of his Humanity, and so he was fairer than the children of men. There was indeed a time, wherein no beauty was to be seen in him; but he speaketh of him then as upon the Cross, when the ploughers made long furrows upon his back, and digged deep holes in his sides, as he was besmeared with blood; so no beauty in him.

Secondly, Passive grace upon his soul, grace given to that. Whatsoever Indowment was requisite to fit him for a Mediator, that he had; some understand by Grace, all the perfections of the Will; and by Truth, all the perfections of the Understanding. Surely nothing was wanting, either in will, or understanding or affection, that might render the soul of Christ fully gracious. It is prophesied in Isaiah 11. 2. The spirit of the Lord shall rest upon him. He spake before of a rod of Jesse, and a branch growing out of his root; So now, What grace was upon his soul? Why, The spirit of the Lord shall rest upon him, and the spirit of Wisdom, and Understanding, and of Counsel, and Might, and of Knowledge, and of the Fear of the Lord.

Thirdly, Grace given, such as filleth up the whole person, grace of Acceptation. In that sense it is said, Luk. 2. 40. speaking of Christ, The Child grew, and waxed strong in spirit, filled with wisdom, and the grace of God was upon him; that is, the favor of God. So he interpreteth it in the last verse of that Chapter; Jesus increased in wisdom, and stature, and favor with God, and men. We needs must grant it to be so, because, Quod efficit tale, magis est tale, That which maketh another so, is much more so, it self. Christ is he, that procureth acceptance both of our persons, and our services; and therefore, he himself is much more acceptable with God. Our persons have no acceptance, but through him. We are said, to be accepted through the beloved, Ephes. 1. 6. Our services have no acceptance but through him. In that place of Peter, we are a spiritual priest-hood, 1 Pet. 2. 5, 6. Offer up spiritual sacrifices, acceptable to God by Jesus Christ; So as He himself is much more accepted. Thus you see, how he is, full of grace.

Let us see now, how Christ is likewise, full of Truth. The truth is said to be in Jesus, and Jesus is said to be in the truth. Truth is said to be in him, Ephes. 4. 21. If so be ye have heard him, and been taught by him, as the truth is in Jesus. He is said to be The truth, John 14. 6. I am the way, the Truth, and the Life.

More distinctly, Take truth in what notion you will, it will appear Christ was, full of truth. Truth is sometimes opposed to Hypocrisy, sometimes to Error, sometimes to Lying, sometimes to Shadows. Christ was full of truth, in all these senses.

First, If ye take Truth, as opposed to Hypocrisy, and as equipollent with sincerity, not with the leavened bread of malice, but with the unleavened bread of sincerity and truth, saith the Apostle, 1 Cor. 5. So Christ was full of Truth, sincere in all. When he lifted up his eyes, he lifted up his heart to God. When he bowed his knee, he bowed his soul. When he opened his mouth, he opened his heart to his hearers. Therefore he is said to be girt about the loins with faithfulness, and truth; Righteousness, and truth, shall be the girdle of his loins, and faithfulness, the girdle of his reins. As the girdle girts a man in; so sincerity, and truth, girt in all the actions, and speeches of Jesus Christ.

Secondly, If ye take Truth, as it standeth in opposition to Error; thus Christ was, full of truth, because all Treasures, both of wisdom, and knowledge, being hid in him, it was impossible, for him to have any misapprehension; He conceived rightly of all things, and spake truly of all, even his enemies being witnesses. Hear what they say, Matth. 20. 16. They sent out to him their Disciples, with the Herodians, saying, Master, we know thou art true, and teachest the way of God in Truth.

Thirdly, Take Truth, as it standeth in opposition to Lying. Lie not one to another, saith Paul, to the Ephesians; but speak the truth, every man to his neighbor. So Christ was, full of truth. The Apostle Peter telleth you, That he was a Lamb, without spot, or blemish, he did no sin, 1 Pet. 2. 22. He did no sin, neither was guile found in his mouth: It might be sought for, but was not found. The word importeth, it was not found in his mouth: for many lay at catch for Christ, if they could have trapit him in his speeches; There was a great deal of watching, but no guile found in his Lips. He did neither Me•tiri, nor, Mendacium dicere, at any time, which can hardly be said of any; And yet one thing Jabrinus saith, A good man will be sure not to lie, that is, to speak against his knowledge, and Conscience. A prudent man will be careful not to tell a lie, nor yet to speak, what is untrue; One that will not lie, may yet possibly speak an untruth, but Christ did never so much, as speak an untruth. He was so far from Lying.

Fourthly, If ye take Truth, as it standeth in opposition to Shadows, Hebr. 9. 24. Christ is not entered into the Holy place made with hands, which are the figures of the true, &c. Here is true, opposed to figure, to shadow. In this sense, Christ is, full of Truth; because he is the substance of all those shadows, which were under the old Law: which some take to be the sense of what followeth, Joh. 1. 17. The Law came by Moses, but faith, and truth, by Jesus Christ. Truth is here opposed to the Ceremonial Law, which containeth the shadow, as grace to the Moral; Let us learn something throughout every branch of this Explication.

First, Seeing Christ is full of grace, in an active sense, [Use 1] that is, full of giving grace; full of good will to the sons of men: Let us all learn to have good thoughts of Christ, not to look at him in Satan's spectacles, through the glass of unbelief, and melancholy-apprehensions; as one that is inaccessible, one that will not pardon, nor entertain poor sinners: So the Devil sometimes presenteth him, in such a false glass. But look at him in the glass of the Gospel, that holdeth him forth, full of grace. The Holy Ghost, that proceedeth from the Father and the Son, telleth you what he is; He came down in the shape of a Lamb, to show the meekness of Christ. The Disciples they saw him, as full of grace. The friends of Lazarus saw him, weep over Lazarus. They said, Behold how he loved him; the same bowels Christ hath now in Heaven, as he had upon the Earth. And if it were possible, that they were capable of enlargement, there are none more large; now all the provision is laid in, and the meat bought, and the Table spread, and dishes provided. What doth God expect, but that the people should fall to, and eat? How can we doubt of his good will now, that hath done, and suffered, and prepared so much for us? It is not now to do, it is done already; therefore we may be surer of his good-will, than they, before the price was paid.

Secondly, Seeing Christ is full of grace, even in regard of his body Look at Beauty as a blessing. This kind of grace is one of the things that adorned Christ. I say, look at beauty as a blessing, when it falleth upon a body, joined to such a soul as Christ's was; otherwise, it is to the soul as a rusty sword in a velver scabbard. The beauty of a profane person is but like the shining of a rotten stick, like the gaynesse of those weeds in your corn-fields, that make a fair show, yet, if you touch them, they are offensive, not to be endured. There can no expression equal the foulness of them in Scripture; it is as Solomon said, Prov. 11. 22. as a jewel of gold in a swine's snout, so is a fair woman without discretion. But now, where there is a meeting of the inward graces of the soul, and this outward gracefulness in the body, there beauty is an ornament. Pulchior est virtus veniens e corpore pulcro. Where beauty and godliness be, there grace is more beautiful, in such a body, in such a person. And the beauty is more graceful, where there is grace to set it out, where the inside is adorned as well as the outside. It is an high commendation that the Scripture giveth of Abigail, and showeth what beauty is most desirable; a sweet conjunction was found in her, A beautiful woman, of a good understanding, 1 Sam. 25. 3. The name of his wife was Abigail, and she was a woman of a good understanding, and of a beautiful countenance. Such as God hath bestowed beauty upon, should be careful not to blemish it, by any untoward conversation; but to be looking to God both inside and outside. When ye have good apparel on, ye are loath to stain that; When God hath appareled your beauty with beauty, take heed of staining that by any uncleanness whatsoever.

And, in the next place, in that Christ was full of grace in regard of the soul; We should learn from hence, whom to have recourse to, when we stand in need of grace, even to this full Fountain; for he received it, that he might communicate it. He was filled with an overflowing fullness, that of his fullness we might receive grace for grace, Joh. 1. 17. Christ is full of grace, as a woman's breast is full of milk, that even aketh for want of being drawn. Christ, as he is full, so he delighteth to communicate of his fullness; therefore it is an ease to him to be drawn. Of this, we shall speak, God-willing, in its place.

Fourthly, Christ is full of grace, of grace that fell upon his whole Person; that is, Full of acceptation with God, a gracious receiving into favor with God the Father. And this letteth us see, whence we are to fetch all our acceptation. How it cometh to pass, that the Saints come to be so gracious with God? Why, in and through Christ, who is full of grace and acceptance; They are accepted (as ye heard before) in the beloved. Christ is so gracious, as to ingratiate all that believe in him. He is God's Favorite, and bringeth into favor all such as are allotted to him. None of us can possibly get the blessing, but in our Elder Brother's garment; Jacob took that course, so must we, if we will have a blessing from God. As Joseph told the Patriarchs, They should not see his face, except they brought their younger brother Benjamin along with them; so there is no seeing of the face of God, unless we bring Christ along with us in the arms of our faith. There is a story, Act. 12. of the men of Tyre, when Herod was displeased with them, how they made use of Blastus the King's Chamberlain; verse. 20. And Herod was in displeasure with them of Tyre and Sidon; but they came with one accord to him: and having made Blastus the King's Chamberlain their friend, desired peace, because their country was nourished by the King's country. This is our case. God is highly displeased with us for our sins, as Herod was with the men of Tyre and Sidon; we have our dependency upon God, as they had upon Herod's country, Their country was nourished by the King's country. We are undone, if God relieve us not. Now they are undone; the best way is, to make Blastus their friend, that so Herod being appeased, they may have peace. We are to go to God by Christ Jesus, that we may have acceptation with God. He is full of grace, and they shall partake of his grace and favor; even as Joseph, when he was got in with Pharaoh, he made way for all his brethren: the Text saith, Gen. 47. 2. He took some of his brethren, and presented them to Pharaoh. Just so doth Christ take us, and presents us to God. The Apostle Peter hath a phrase somewhat like it, where he saith, 2 Pet. 3. 18. Christ also hath once suffered for sin, the just for the unjust, that he might bring us to God, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, that he might take us by the hand, and lead us to God. Now these men being presented by Joseph to Pharaoh, see how Pharaoh entertaineth them, See, the land is before thee; in the best of the land make thy father and brethren to dwell. If Christ hath once brought us to God, not only all the good things of the world, but all the promises of the Word, are before a Saint, when he is brought to God by grace, and so ingratiated with him.

Fifthly, Seeing Christ is full of truth, as it standeth in opposition to hypocrisy, learn we to be like him; it is good being of Christ's fashion. The girdle of his loins is Truth, as ye heard before out of verse 11. Let it be the girdle of ours, Having your loins girt about with truth. Be sincere in all we speak and do; otherwise, all our performances, be they never so glorious, they are but like a fair pair of gilded Organs, that want wind or bellows to blow them; so are all our performances, if there be no sincerity to enliven them. All outward services, they are but the carcasses of Devotion, if there want sincerity. Ephes. 4. 24. It is called, The new man, created in righteousness, and in the holiness of the truth, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, so it is in the Original; it is, a holiness of truth. Otherwise, no holiness at all, if truth be not there.

Again, If Christ be thus full of truth, as it standeth in opposition to error; then we may see from hence, whom to go to for guidance in all matters of opinion; to Him that is full of truth, that cannot err. Doceat me Deus qui me fecit, & non qui seipsum ignorat. Let him teach me that made me; let not him teach me that knoweth not himself. Every man is a lover of his own opinion, and apt to miscary; but it is Christ that is full of truth, who hath promised to guide us by his spirit, and to lead us into all truth, Joh. 16. 13.

Again, If Christ be full of truth, as it standeth in opposition to lying: Let us learn from hence to gather matter of comfort to all the people of God. He that is full of truth, and cannot lie, hath said to every poor soul, Come to me ye that are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. If any man come to me, I will in no wise cast him off. So is it matter of terror to all ungodly impenitent sinners. He that believeth not, is damned already. He that believeth, shall be saved; he that believeth not is damned, the wrath of God abideth upon him. And so matter of Imitation for all. If our Savior, whom we profess ourselves to depend upon, and to be Disciples of, be full of truth, let us be like him. Therein standeth the true Religion, in imitating him whom we worship, saith Lactantius. If people be given to lying, they are more like the devil than Christ: For it is said of such, Ye are of your father the devil. He is a liar, and the father of it. Mark, he speaks of his own when he speaks a lie. Now there will be a time, when every soul shall be ransackt. Take heed, lest the devil find something of his own, reigning in you. It is said, he came to Christ, The Prince of this world cometh, Joh. 14. 13. and hath nothing in me; that is, nothing of his own in me. He came and searched Christ, but found nothing of his there. Take heed, lest when he comes to you, he find a lying spirit there, that is his own. As, when Laban came to search Jacob's tent, to try if he could find any of his own goods there; if he had, it would have gone ill with Jacob: As, when searchers come to a ship, and find any prohibited goods there, the owner forfeits all the lading. If the devil come, and find anything of his own, he takes that soul to hell. Without are dogs, and everyone that loves and makes a lie, Rev. 22. 15.

Lastly, Seeing Christ is full of truth, as it stands in opposition to shadows: Let us learn to embrace him, that so we may find the substance. That is the phrase of the holy Ghost, Prov. 8. 21. where Wisdom speaks thus, That I may cause those that love me to inherit substance, and I will fill them with treasures. Christ is not only the substance of all Levitical shadows, (they are vanished, we have now nothing to do with them); but there is another sort of shadows that men doat upon, more than the Jews upon their ceremonial carnal things, delights of the world, riches, pleasures, and profits; there are some men that busy themselves in these. What saith the holy Ghost of them? Psal. 83. 17. Let them be confounded and troubled forever; yea, let them be put to shame and perish. All are but shadows, in comparison, no reality. Oh then, he is a substantial man that inherits, he that leaveth to follow after shadows to inherit Christ; otherwise, all men that busy themselves in things below, and neglect Christ, they are but like a man that goes into an Orchard, and, instead of pulling the fruit, he catcheth at the shadow of the fruit, that are scattered in the hedge; he hurts himself, and getteth not the fruit. Would ye have Christ, ye must go to God for him; the reality of all is founded in him. What are the things men doat upon? but either honors, or riches, or pleasures, the worlds Trinity, as some call those three: We shall find them all in Christ, Prov. 3. 16, 17. where Wisdom speaks thus (that Wisdom is Christ) In her right hand are riches and honor. Her ways are ways of pleasantness. Here is all three, riches, honor, and pleasure; and all found in Wisdom, which is the Lord Jesus Christ.

Vers. 15. John bare witness of him; He cried, saying, This was he of whom I spake, He that cometh after me is preferred before me, for he was before me.

16. And of his fullness have all we received, and grace for grace.

For this fifteenth verse, which I am now to close with, there are in it these particulars.

First, The Witness-bearer; that is John the Baptist, John bare witness of him.

Secondly, The manner of his Witnessing, He cried, saying.

Thirdly, The time when he witnessed, which lieth couched in these words, This was he of whom I spake. I shall open that by, and by.

Fourthly, The matter of his testimony here, He that cometh after me is preferred before me, for he was before me.

I shall begin with the first. The Witness-bearer was John the Baptist, of whom we read, verse. 7. that he came for a witness, to bear witness of the Light; and here we find him doing, what he came for. He came for a witness, and here he bears witness. This is the Observation.

That a good man will not be wanting, to the duty of his [Observ.] place.

This was his Office, and ye find him taken up in the discharge of it, and so should everyone be; For we must walk Circumspectly, not as fools, but as wise, not to forget the errand we are sent about. Every blessed man is like that Tree, Psal. 1. that bringeth forth his fruit in his season; which is proper to his Calling, and in such a time, as is most proper for that fruit, Rom. 12. 7, 8. Ye have an Apostolical Injunction. Let him that hath a Ministry, wait upon his ministry; or he that exhorts upon his exhortation; He that giveth, let him do it with simplicity; he that ruleth, with diligence; he that showeth mercy, with Cheerfulness. Men lose nothing, by being employed in that service, that God calls them to; and men get nothing, by being busy in other men's matters. One may be over-busy, and yet, in God's account, but an idle person, if he doth not his proper work, 1 Tim. 5. 13. And withal, they learn to be Idle, wandering about from house to house; and not only idle, but Tatlers also, and busy-bodies, speaking things which they ought not. Busie bodies, and yet idle: Why? why, because busy in matters that concern them not.

The next is the manner of John's witness bearing, He bare witness, and cried; The Baptist cried in his witnessing of Christ. There is something remarkable in that, whereas the Scripture contents it self in other Cases, to say, He opened his mouth, and spake; here John, Crieth. What is the mystery of this? He is said to cry for someone, or all (perhaps) of these three Reasons.

First, In reference to a fore-going Prophecy; Isaiah had fore-told as much, which is applied in, Matth. 3. 3. speaking of John the Baptist, This is he that was spoken of by the Prophet Isaiah; Behold the voice of one crying in the wilderness, Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make his paths straight. He fore-told, he should have the voice of a Crier; therefore; this voice is applied to him.

Or Secondly, In reference to the time, when he first began to witness of Christ, and that was, as Philogus telleth us, in the year of Jubilee; under the Law, every fiftieth year, the Jews were to keep a Jubilee, wherein they were to ordain liberty to their servants, and restore men to their possessions, that had been mortgaged, Levite. 25. 9, 10. Then shalt thou cause the Trumpet of the Jubilee, to sound in the tenth day of the seventh month; in the day of atonement, shall ye make the Trumpet sound through all your Land, unto all the Inhabitants thereof. It shall be a Jubilee unto you, and ye shall return every man to his possession, and ye shall return every man unto his family. John, that came to be the Minister of the Gospel, he began in a year of Jubilee, because he was to proclaim a liberty, that came by Christ; who was now to be exhibited, and to show himself, because he came, by the Ministry of the Gospel to restore men to those possessions they had lost in Adam, even to an Eternal Inheritance, reserved in Heaven for them. The year of Jubilee, was to be proclaimed by a Trumpet; Therefore, John comes crying. The Interpretation, receiveth a strong confirmation of that, Isaiah 58. 1. Cry aloud, spare not, lift up thy voice, like a Trumpet, and show my people their transgressions, and the house of Israel their sins. Here John's voice cometh, as a Jubilee-Trumpet, to proclaim liberty to them that were Captive; therefore, he is said, to Cry.

Thirdly, Crying may refer to the temper of his spirit, in his witness-bearing to Christ; you may note his fervency, or alacrity, or both. Crying noteth fervency, Why Criest thou to me, saith God to Moses at the Red Sea, when Moses was most fervent in spirit; yet we read of nothing he said, saith Augustine. The people cried, and God heard them not, Moses held his peace, and yet was heard, because there was a louder cry within. Of Christ himself it is said, In the days of his flesh, He offered up Prayers with strong cries, and tears. The spirit crieth Abba, Father. It is a term of earnestness, and so of alacrity too, Hos. 12. ult. Cry out, and shout thou inhabitant of Zion, for great is the Holy one of Israel, in the midst of thee; John went about this work, with a great deal of earnestness, and delight. He that leapt in his Mother's Womb, when the news came of the Conception of Christ; now he leapeth with much more joy, when he himself came to be the proclaimer of Christ. He himself hath the honor to be the Day-Star, that shall usher-in the Sun of Righteousness, to be more than a Prophet; He pointed at him with the finger, and said, This is the Lamb of God, that taketh away the sins of the World. Let us all learn from hence, to cry up Christ in our several places, and according to our several capacities; John did so, when he witnessed of him, to cry up Christ with all the alacrity, and fergency, that may be. You know how Demetrius, and the Silver-Smiths, cried up Diana, of the Ephesians; because they got their Living by making of her Silver-shrines. The merits of Christ will bring us more, than the shrines of Diana can bring to them; We shall have Life, and Life Eternal, with this Life. Therefore, we have more cause to cry up, Great is the Lord Jesus; Great is the Lord, the Rock of our Salvation, and our Righteousness. And the rather, because in few words, the best way in the World, to cry down both sin, and error, is, to cry up Christ. Lust, and Heresy both, will fall like Dagon before the Ark, if Christ were once up in men's hearts.

There is use, of other Arguments and Considerations, as of the Law, and the terror of the day of Judgment, and torments of Hell, these have their place; There is nothing so effectual to draw sinners out of hell, as the setting up of Christ; when they know Christ is Crucified, they then are crucified with Christ. A man may be terrified with the threats of the Law, and thoughts of judgment to come, and yet have an heart filled with lust all this while; If Christ once come into the heart, he driveth out these lusts before him: The like may be said of Errors, Corrupt opinions. If the Sun of Righteousness comes in, it is his beams that causeth all these shadows to fly away; nothing so soon, nothing so sure. Instance, in Popery. There may be great use of preaching, against the particular points of it; against Purgatory, Transubstantiation, and Worshipping of images. But if once a man could set up Christ in his heart, How soon would these vanish? Saith Calvin, Popery cannot stand, but where the ignorance of Christ is brought in; for the knowledge of Christ maketh Popery to fall. Christ and Antichrist are like two buckets in a Well; if the one goeth up, the other goeth down. Popery cannot thrive in that soil, where Christ is planted. Thus much from these words, the manner of his bearing witness, He came crying.

Thirdly, For the Time; that, I told you, lay in these words, This was he of whom I spake. Whence it is gathered, That John the Baptist having testified of Christ, when he came to his Baptism, continued his bearing witness to him, now, when Jesus was gone into the wilderness; which, ye know, was presently after he was baptized. That difference is between this Evangelist and the former; he relateth what they omitted, and omitteth many of those things, that they relate. The other had spoken of the testimony that John gave to Christ, before he made himself known; our Evangelist speaketh nothing of this, but falleth upon those Testimonies which he gave to Christ, after he was made known. Now he was made known at his baptism, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased. Chemnitz maketh it appear plainly, that what John saith in my Text, was spoken after Christ was baptized, when he was drawn aside into the wilderness, to be tempted of the Devil. I said, This was he; yet he came after me, and was before me.

Observe from hence this, namely, That the Baptist was honoring Christ, when the devil was tempting of him [Observ.] While Satan was using all his subtlety, to overcome Christ in the wilderness, John is using all his earnestness and endeavor to cry him up, to exalt him in the hearts of his hearers. This is a special piece of Christian prudence, for men to counterwork the devil; to appear so much the more for Christ, by how much the more Satan and his instruments appear against him. There should be a kind of Antiperistasis in the soul of every believer; as in the fire, that burns hottest then, when the air round about it, is coldest. The middle Region is therefore coldest, because the great heat of each, takes the reflection from the lower and the upper heat above. Such an Antiperistasis should be found in Christians, they should be witnesses in the dearest times, and their hearts should be softest in the hardest times, and fullest of activity for Christ, in the times of the greatest opposition against him. As John is a honoring of him, when the Devil is a tempting him. The reason lieth in that enmity, which was put at first between the Serpent, and the Seed of the woman; for enmities work one against another, contraries expel one another. The Devil will be sure to cross us if he can, when we go to any spiritual duty; as, When the high Priest Zacharias was standing before the Lord, then it is said, There was Satan standing at his right hand to resist him, Zach. 3. 1. Therefore when we see Satan plotting any mischief, we should stand at his right hand to resist him. We should do what we can for Christ, at such times more especially. Then our service is most acceptable, and most useful. For men not to be ashamed of Christ, in the midst of a crooked and an adulterous generation; yet, for men to appear for Christ, in a backsliding generation, run through the stories of all times, and ye shall find, this hath been the spirit of the Saints. When Herod sought for Christ, to destroy him in his Infancy, then was Joseph and Mary most careful of him, and took him into Egypt. When the Priests, and Levites, and Scribes, and Pharisees, did much oppose him in his Members; then the Apostle's most of all appeared for him, and tell the Rulers to their faces, Whether it be better to obey God or man, judge ye. In the Primitive times, when it was death to bear the name of a Christian, then did Pausanius, when they asked him what he was, say, My name is Christian, and my surname is Catholic. His name was Christian, to distinguish him from Heretics, and those that opposed Christianity. I need not tell you of our Worthies in Queen Mary's days, that not only by their Writings, but by their Sufferings, witnessed for Christ, not only in black and white, but in red too. It should be so still; the very thoughts of their flames should kindle zeal in us. Christ is opposed even at this day, in many ways, therefore we should strive for him. There are many tempters and revilers now, therefore Christ should have many Champions now. Heaven and Earth may both teach us this lesson. Time was, when our Savior came to the men of Bethlehem, He came to his own, and his own received him not; they refused to entertain Christ as became him. Then doth the Star from heaven own him, that comes, and showeth the Wise-men where he was, and standeth before the house. Afterwards, when his own rejected him, Not him, but Barabbas, said they; When the Jews that pronounced him not worthy to live, had got their ends, then the Sun is darkened, and the Earth quaked; they owned their Lord and Maker then, when the Jews refused him. The Sun is ashamed to behold the Soldiers; and the earth quaked, as loath to bear the Soldiers. Thus far of the Witness-bearer, the Manner of his witnessing, and the Time when.

4. The fourth particular remaineth, namely, The Matter of the Testimony, which John here giveth of Christ, which lieth in these words, This was he of whom I spake, He that cometh after me is preferred before me, for he was before me.

Let us expound the words first.

This was He.

There lieth some matter of commendations even in that. So that your great Orator of Greece, Demosthenes, he accounted it matter of commendations, when he went in the streets, to have it said, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, This is Demosthenes. Res est magnopere laudanda. It is a matter much to be valued, to have one pointed at with the finger, and to have it said, This is such a man of note. The holy Ghost speaks it by way of commendations of Moses and Aaron, Exod. 6. 26, 27. ye have it twice there, These are that Aaron and Moses, to whom the Lord said, Bring out the children of Israel out of the land of Egypt according to their armies. These are they which spake to Pharaoh king of Egypt, to bring out the children of Israel from Egypt. These are that Moses and Aaron. Here it is thrice. So, This was he, saith John. But the commendations he giveth, lieth more apparent in the following words, He of whom I spake, He that comes after me is preferred before me, for he was before me.

He that comes after me.

Quest. What is that? How doth Christ come after John?

Answ. In three respects, which I frame as a ground from this.

- First, In regard of his Nativity.
- Secondly, In regard of his own Ministry.
- Thirdly, In regard of his attendance upon the Ministry of John.

First, In regard of his Nativity. Christ was born of the Virgin Mary, some six months after John the Baptist came into the world; so he came after him in that respect. Luk. 1. 36. You may find, that the mother of John the Baptist was gone with child some six months, when the Virgin Mary had newly conceived: Behold, thy cozen Elizabeth hath conceived, and shall bear a son, and his name shall be called John. So saith the Angel that came to Mary, and brought the first tidings of Christ our Savior.

Secondly, Christ came after him, In regard of his own Ministry, and the discharge of that. Christ did not begin to exercise his Ministry, till John had ended his: Mar. 1. 14. After that John was put in prison, (where he lost his head) Jesus came into Galilee, preaching the Gospel of the Kingdom of God. We use to say, that seldom comes a better; but, let not that proverb occasion dispar in any, for here Christ comes after John. It may be, the people may think themselves undone, now they have lost such a Minister as John the Baptist. After him comes Christ, even as Elisha comes after Elijah, with a double portion of the spiritual truths of God, for all that have to do in the world.

Thirdly, Christ is said to come after John, In regard of his attendance upon the Ministry of John the Baptist. 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 , That word is seldom or never to be found in Scripture, as relating to time, but always to place; and should not be used for: post me, but pone me, as Beza renders it. So it respects time, After me, in regard of his Nativity, and exercise of his Ministry, that ye may take in the other. But now, After me; that is, In regard of his attendancy upon my Ministry. So it was with Christ, who was a hearer of John the Baptist. Joh. 1. 26. John answered them, saying, I baptize with water; but there standeth one amongst you, whom ye know not. There standeth one amongst you. Therefore Christ was one of John's followers, he stood amongst John's Disciples here. And, in the Scripture-phrase, the followers of any Teacher, it is usually said of them, that they go after such a one; because the Teacher was wont to go before, and the Disciples after, which is the proper notion of the phrase in that place, Matth. 16. 24. Then said Jesus to his disciples, If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me. The Disciple is said to come after, and to follow the Teacher. Christ here to come after John, because he was one of his Hearers. Go we on to the next words.

He that comes after me, is preferred before me.

Namely, In regard of his worth and dignity. The Prince comes after the Harbinger, and yet is preferred before him. The Word comes after the Voice, and yet is preferred before it; for it was a voice during the time of articulation, and not a word till it be articulated. Christ was the Prince, and John the Harbinger; Christ, the Sun of righteousness; and John the Morning-star; Christ the Word, and John the Voice. Though he comes after me, he was before me. And it is reason he should be preferred before him in dignity, because he was before him in regard of his Essence, as being God from everlasting to everlasting, whose going forth is from all eternity. He was not only before John, but before Abraham; Joh. 8. 58. Before Abraham was, I am. Before Abraham was, yea, before the World was. Prov. 8. 25, 26. Before the mountains were settled, or before the hills were brought forth; while as yet he had not made the earth nor the fields, nor the highest part of the dust of the world. Ye have John the Baptist telling us in this Chapter, verse. 34. that he bears witness to the Divinity of Christ; And I saw, and bear record, that this is the Son of God. Now this he doth in this place, He proveth, and bears record, that Christ is the Son of God, because he was before all. That is a testimony of his Divinity. The sum of all then is this, John's endeavor is, to prefer Christ before him; that is the thing I would have you to observe. And it should be the care of every Believer, to prefer and exalt, and set up Christ above himself. He that came after me, is preferred before me, for he was before me.

John was put upon this, because the people had a conceit of him, that he was the Messias; and therefore he made it his business thoroughly to depress himself, to exalt his Savior. I must decrease, but he must increase. I am the friend of the Bridegroom, but he is the Bridegroom that hath the Bride. I baptize with water, but he with the holy. Ghost. I am the poorest sinner, but he is the Lamb of God, that taketh away the sins of the world. It was the scope of his Ministry, to prefer Christ before himself, whom the people were apt to magnify. And so Peter, Act. 3. 12, 13, 14. said, Ye men of Israel, why marvel ye at this, or why look ye so earnestly upon us, as though by our own power or holiness we had made this man to walk? The God of Abraham, and of Isaac, and of Jacob, the God of our fathers, hath glorified his Son Jesus; whom ye delivered up, and denied in the presence of Pilate, when he was determined to let him go. But ye denied the holy One, and the Just, and desired a murderer to be granted unto you. The four and twenty Elders, in the Revelations, ye find them casting down their Crowns at the feet of Christ, and giving all praise to him; Rev. 4. 10, 11. The four and twenty Elders fell down before him that sate upon the throne, and worshipped him that liveth forever and ever; and cast their crowns before the throne, saying, Thou art worthy, O Lord, to receive honor, and glory, and power; for thou hast created all things, and for thy pleasure they are, and were created.

The more to blame are they (to make some Use of this, before I end) that either in point of Salvation, or Edification, ascribe more to themselves than to Christ, instead of preferring Christ before them, as John did. This Reproof may concern a great many of us, and, haply, more, than are well aware of it. For this is truth, that Spanhemius lately said, in one of his Treatises, Naturaliter aliquid Pelagii, & aliquid Pharisaei in nobis habemus; We have all by nature something of the Pelagian, and something of the Pharisee in us. Pelagian-like, we are all apt to ascribe too much to our own free-will; and, Pharisee-like, we are all apt to ascribe to ourselves the merits of our good works. What men are those that maintain, that God hath given them a power to will, but the act of willing they have in themselves? Is not this to ascribe more to themselves, than to God? Is it not more, actually to will what is good, than to have a power to will it. Augustine professeth himself, once of opinion, That men were able of themselves to receive the Gospel, when it was preached; but he was converted from that error, by that place of the Apostle, What hast thou that thou hast not received? And, O man, who hath made thee to differ? And yet a Dutch-man of late hath dared to say, I have made myself to differ from others. Though God gives me power to will, yet to will is of myself. Here is something of the Pelagian. See now something of the Pharisee, in those that pride themselves for their good works, with the neglect of Christ. Ye know what the Papists do, they ascribe something to their merits. They will give something to Christ in the beginning, but the carrying on of their works they will have to themselves. Which Bishop against Perkins saith: A father bestoweth a Farm upon his son; the son, by his improvement of this Farm, groweth so rich, as he is able to make the purchase of a greater Farm; which he hath not from his father, but hath purchased it by his own industry, and improvement of the stock which his father gave him. So, God doth at first bestow a stock of grace upon us, saith he; but we, by the improvement of this grace, are able to purchase something at God's hands. Who is the Purchaser? whether he that layeth out the money for what is bought, or he that gave the first Farm? So, Who is the Procurer of Salvation, whether Christ that giveth the first grace, or the man that hath so improved that grace, as to purchase Heaven at the hands of God? All these things are ascribed to the next cause, not to the remote cause. Christ is the remote cause of salvation, but the man himself is the next cause of his own salvation and happiness. Here the man is preferred before Christ. And have we not many amongst ourselves? Ask them, How they hope to be saved? Whereas there is no true answer in the world, but this, Christ in you, the hope of glory. Christ in me, is my hope to be saved: Yet their common answer is, They hope to be saved by their prayers, and duties, and good meaning, and good endeavors. What is this, but to set a man's self above Christ, and to look for salvation by his own Performances, and not by the merits of his Savior. Men may sometimes have Christ in their mouths, but look what their hearts run to when they think of salvation, that many times is their own works. It is a good saying of Mr. Fox, the Author of the Book of Martyrs, in a Latin Treatise of his, Nemo magnus est operando, quin Christus; & qui magnus est, magnus est per fidem in illo: There is none great in works but Christ; and if we will be great, it must be by faith in him. Others, perhaps, will give you a better answer, to seem to; yet, in the issue, it cometh much to one: They tell you, They come to salvation by believing in Christ. But ask them, how they come to believe? Why, because they find so much humiliation in their hearts, and dependency upon Christ. Here a man setteth up belief, whereas in the true course of things, good works should be made out by the issue of faith. Here is a kind of bastard-faith, made out as the issue of good works. Certainly, good works may help faith. Faith groweth fat and well-liking, the more it putteth forth itself in works of holiness. But it is faith laying hold upon Christ, that bringeth in all our comfort. Therefore he that will go the other way to work, must settle himself on Christ by faith. He that was mighty in Peter to the circumcision, was mighty in me to the uncircumcision. Christ was mighty in Paul, and mighty in Peter, they had great success in their ministry; but, Whom do they thank for it? Christ, and not themselves. As Joab did, when they had taken Rabbah, 2. Sam. 12. 27. He sent messengers to David, saying, I have fought against Rabbah, and have taken the city of waters. Now therefore gather the rest of the people together, and encamp against the City, and take it; lest I take the City, and it be called by my name. Joab had taken a great deal of pains in the service, but he would have his Master David to have all the honor. So, whatsoever pains a Minister, or any other, hath taken in the work of God; he must take heed of setting up himself: now cast in for Christ, let him have all the praise. There is a Rabbah taken, when a man is converted, a fort taken out of the Devils hands; who shall have the praise, the Minister? no, but the Lord Jesus Christ, that giveth the success. Joab he fought, and took the City, but Joab was David's servant, therefore David must have the praise; All the ability, and grace, that thou hast laid out in this service, they are Christ's, therefore not to be ascribed to thee. Thou canst not go one step, before Christ comes in to thy assistance; Joab bringeth the work to perfection, and yet David absent a great way off. The Lord Jesus Christ is always present, with any that do a good work; therefore, all the praise is to be given to him. When Peter drew up the multitude of fish, doth he sacrifice to his own Net? no, but he giveth the glory of it to the Lord Christ; though it was Peters net, and Peters hand that drew up the net, yet it was not Peters strength. Therefore, give to the Lord all the praise, that so we may prefer Christ before all, as John the Baptist did.

Vers. 16. Of his fullness have all we received, and grace for grace.

I shall say something of the Coherence, and then come to the particulars. I hinted that to you before, wherein I understood this to seem to relate to the end of the fourteenth verse; where it is said, That Christ was full of grace▪ and truth. And here he proves it, He that is the fountain of grace, must needs be full of it himself, Christ is so; For of his fullness have we all received, and grace for grace. Only there is a great doubt, and Controversy, amongst Interpreters; whether these be the words of John the Baptist, or of John the Evangelist.

Some think them to be a continuation of John the Baptist's Testimony, which I discoursed to you of, out of the former verse? This was he, of whom I spake, He that comes after me, is preferred before me, for he was before me.

Others think, they are the words of John the Evangelist, and cohere with those words, in the end of the fourteenth verse, Full of Grace, and Truth.

And I rather join with them. Partly, for that reason, and partly, because that the graces of Christ, which he speaks of here, and in the following verse, The Law came by Moses, but grace and truth by Jesus Christ, were not so fully manifested, when John the Baptist spake, as when John the Evangelist wrote this Gospel. For the law of Moses, as to the shadows of it, were then expired; The truth of Christ was then exhibited, the Holy Ghost come down, and abundance of grace shed abroad all the World over. So that the Evangelist may well say, Of his fullness we have all received, The Law came by Moses; and now, grace and truth, is come by Jesus. It was so, (when the Evangelist wrote) in the full exhibition of it.

The matter in difference is not very great. But let us take them, as to the Coherence, and then for the parts.

You have in this short verse, abundance of particulars. The general parts, they are but two, But the latter is subdivided.

First, Here is a storehouse, an Heavenly storehouse of Treasure, that is, the fullness of Jesus Christ. Of his fullness.

Secondly, The improvement hereof, for the chiefest good of it; We have all received, even grace for grace. And in this, four particulars.

First, The persons, All we.

Secondly, The participation, Have received.

Thirdly, The proportion, not his fullness, But, of his fullness; de plenitudine, and not plenitudinem, some share of his fullness.

Fourthly, The treasure it self, which was imparted, that is, Grace for grace. Of his fullness have we all received, and grace for grace.

I shall now close with the first of these, which is the Magazine, the Store-house, the Treasury in the text, namely, The fullness of Christ; whence I commend to you this Observation; That,

There is abundant fullness in Jesus Christ. [Observ.]

There is an abundant fullness in Jesus Christ, of whom it is said, Col. 2. 19. It pleased the Father, in him should all fullness dwell. All fullness, All for kind, and All for degree.

And it, therefore, pleased the Father, That all fullness should dwell in him, because he was to be the head of the body; He is the head of the body the Church, for it pleased the Father, That in him should all fullness dwell. It concerned Christ to be full of all grace, because he was to be the head of his Church; As in the natural body, because the head is to convey sense to all the body, therefore, all the Organs of sense are placed in the head. The eye whereby we see, and the ear whereby we hear, and the nose by which we smell, the palate by which we taste; Jesus Christ is to be the head of the Church. Therefore, all fullness was to be in him; He was to be an universal Cause, which was to have an universal Influence, therefore, there must needs be in him an universal fullness. As in the first Adam, there was a fullness of human nature, and of righteousness too, as long as he stood; because he was to convey the human nature, together with the Image of God, to his posterity, if he had continued. So in the second Adam, There was to be a fullness of grace, because he was to convey all grace to all believers, to the end of the World. Joseph filled the Granaries of Egypt with Corn; Why? Because not only Egypt, but all the Countries there about, were to be suppli'd with Corn in time of Famine. So it pleased God, that in Christ should all fullness dwell, That all, Jews, and Gentiles, might come to him for grace; All must go through the hands of Joseph, to the people: Even as the Liver is full of blood, because it conveyeth blood to the members of the body. The Sea is full of water, because it conveyeth water to all the Rivers; And the Sun full of light, because it conveyeth light to all the Stars. So Christ is full of grace, because He was to be the Conveyer of grace.

To speak a little more distinctly. There is a threefold fullness in Christ.

A fullness of Divinity.

A fullness of Sufficiency.

A fullness of Efficacy.

See the distinction, and difference between them.

First, There is in Christ, A fullness of Divinity, and so commonly, it is said, Col. 2. 9. In him dwelleth all the fullness of the Godhead bodily. There are to be found in others, gifts, and graces, that flow from the Godhead; These were in Angels, and Adam, and all Saints. But the Godhead it self, is in Christ. And that, not according to some portion of it; as the Heathens had a conceit, that the Divinity was dispersed, and scattered. That one had one part of it, and another, another part. And therefore, they made many sorts of God's, because they thought no one sufficient to contain the whole Deity; therefore, they made Bacchus, and Apollo, and the rest, to have their several employments. But here is in Christ, not the parts of the Godhead, but the fullness of the Godhead; In him dwelleth all the fullness of the Godhead bodily. Not a parcel, but all and bodily, that is, either really. If ye take body, as it standeth in opposition to shadows, and figures; then the Godhead is said to dwell in Christ bodily, in opposition to the shadows. Under the law, the body dwelt figuratively in the Ark; and, thence the glory of the Lord filled the house. But now it dwelleth in Christ, as the substance of all those shadows; It dwells in him bodily: Or if ye take body, as it sometimes signifieth, person, The Hebrews were wont to put the soul for the whole person; so many souls went down with Jacob into Egypt. The Greeks were wont to put body for the whole person. I beseech you, brethren, by the mercies of God, present your bodies as a living sacrifice; so then, to dwell bodily, is, to dwell personally. Now the fullness of the Godhead, dwells personally in Jesus Christ, because he was the second Person in the Trinity; The Son of God, as full of the Divinity, as the Father himself was. The fullness of the Godhead, dwelt as truly in the Son, as in the Father; Now Sonship implieth Identity of nature. As (if it will not be tedious to you)

Four things go to make up a perfect Sonship. There must be,

- 1. Similitude.
- 2. Procession and Production.
- 3. Life, and
- 4. Identity.

If any of these be wanting, A person cannot be said to be the son of another; I say, Similitude, Procession, Life, Identity. There is a likeness, between the whiteness of the wall, and the whiteness of the snow; but no sonship between them, because there is no production. The whiteness of the wall, doth not produce the whiteness of the snow. Fire, begets fire, Here is a production; But the fire is not the son of the fire, because here wanteth Life. The body of a living Man breeds worms. Here is a production, and life, but yet the worm is not the son of Man; because, here is no Identity of nature. The worm hath not the nature of man; There must be a Coherence in all these four, which you find in Christ, in reference to God the Father. There is a similitude; He is the express Image of his Fathers person. There is a procession: For the Son proceedeth from the Father, and is begotten of the Father, from all eternity. There is Life, For, the Son hath Life in himself, as himself saith. And there is Identity of nature. The very same essence, with that of the Father; And a greater Identity, then between any man, and his son. That take along with you too. Take Abraham, and Isaac: Isaac, hath the same nature with Abraham. But, how the same? The same in species, not in Individuals. The same in kind, not the same Individual nature; For it is possible, that the father may be saved, and the son damned, or the son saved, and the father damned. But now, the Lord Jesus Christ is the same Individual nature with the Father; because but one Deity, and one Divinity, and one Essence, and the same Person pertakes of the same Individual substance. Here is the first fullness. The fullness of Divinity.

Secondly, There is in Jesus Christ, A fullness of sufficiency; for the work of the Mediator-ship, which he undertook, as God-man. That which Divines call the grace of unction. They speak of a double grace that dwelleth in Christ, The grace of union, namely, that favor, by which the human Nature was united Personally to the Godhead. Secondly, The grace of unction; namely, that anointing with the holy Ghost, which Christ-Man had, who is therefore said, to be anointed with the oil of gladness above his fellows. There is therefore this fullness of sufficiency, because there was a fullness of Divinity; there is therefore this grace of unction, because by that grace of union, Christ is therefore anointed, because the Manhood is so united to the Divinity. The nearer anything cometh to the Cause, the more it taketh of the Effect. Fire is the cause of heat; therefore the nearer a man stands to the fire, the hotter he is; the farther off, the less he partakes of the influence of the fire. The Human Nature having a union with the Godhead, must needs partake of all grace. Write the letters of the Alphabet upon a seal, and then put that upon the wax, the wax will bear the image of all the letters. Here is the Divinity. The Godhead falls upon, as it were, and takes to itself the whole Manhood; and therefore the Manhood bears the impression of the whole Godhead, as far as the Manhood is capable. Now indeed it was necessary, there should be a fullness of sufficiency in Christ, because, as Mediator, he had three great Offices to discharge, and everyone of them requireth a fullness; without which, he could not have gone through with his work: Accordingly, ye shall find a fullness of power in Christ, as King; a fullness of wisdom in Christ, as Prophet; and a fullness of righteousness in Christ, as he was the Priest of his Church; which three make up the fullness of Sufficiency.

There is in Christ as King, a fullness of power. That is it which he speaks of, Matth. 28. 18. Jesus came and spake to them, saying, All power is given to me in heaven and in earth. Go ye therefore and teach all Nations, and I will be with you to the end of the world. Christ hath all power in Heaven and Earth, yea, and in Hell too. Of the two former, this place speaks, All power is given to me in heaven. He hath the Angels in heaven at his command, and can send them out as an heavenly host, to assist his people. All power is given to him on earth, over all the Princes in the world. Therefore he is King of kings, and Lord of lords. And this he telleth his Apostles, before he sent them to preach the Gospel, to encourage them. Preach to all Nations; (all Nations, all Mankind.) All power in heaven and in earth is given to me. Therefore go preach: I am with you. And as all power in heaven and earth is given to Christ, as King of the Church; so, all power in Hell. Ye have an expression that may, haply, bear this sense, Rev. 1. 18. I am he that liveth, and was dead; and behold I am alive for evermore, Amen. And have the keys of hell, and of death. Christ hath the keys of hell, and can send whom he will thither, and keep whom he will from thence. The Keys argue Power: It is a metaphor taken from Conquerors; when they take a City, they have the Keys thereof delivered into their hands, in token the City is now at their command. If Hell be here taken for the Grave, yet there be other places that show, that Christ hath power over the Devils of hell: That at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, of things in earth, and things under the earth. Christ could not have run through his Kingly Office; if he had not had this power over devils; because he could not have been able to have bound the strong man, if he himself had not been stronger.

There is in Christ, as he is the Prophet of his Church, the fullness of wisdom; Col. 2. 3. In whom are hid all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge. Though that wisdom the creatures have is but a poor small moiety; we may have our pounds, perhaps, or not so much: What we have is but as shillings, and pence, and farthings. All the treasures of wisdom and knowledge are hid in Christ; and that too, from the very first moment of his Incarnation, though he did not begin to exercise his Prophetical gifts, till afterwards. But when God, only wise, was pleased to join himself to a Creature, that Creature was made partaker of the wisdom of God.

There is a place that may seem to stumble some, Luk. 2. ult. where it is said, that Christ increased in wisdom [Object.] and stature, and in favor with God and man. If he increased in wisdom, then all the treasures of wisdom were not hid in him from the beginning.

For this: you must know, there is in Christ a twofold [Answ.] wisdom,

- An Uncreated wisdom, and
- A Created wisdom.

An uncreated wisdom, which belongeth to him as the Second Person in the Trinity; that is always one and the same.

Secondly, There was a created wisdom that did belong to Christ, as Man; and of that it may be said in some sense, that Christ increased in wisdom. Haply, all the habits of wisdom were not at once infused into the Human Nature, and there might be no increase of them; yet, as to act, there might be a grouth. And as to particular application of wisdom to this and that object, there might be a grouth in experimental wisdom, though not in habitual wisdom. There was no time, wherein God did not favor Christ, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased: But yet the favor of God was not manifested to Christ at all times alike; it was manifested more at his Transfiguration, than when he was in the Garden, when he sweat water and blood; and more, when the voice came from heaven, and gave that testimony of him, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased; then when he hung upon the Cross, and cried out, My God, my God, Why hast thou forsaken me? In experimentall favour Christ grew, and so he might grow in experimental knowledge too. What if a man might say, The habits of this created knowledge were enlarged in Christ, because as Christ grew in years, the Human Nature grew in a capacity of more and more knowledge; and, accordingly, there might be an enlargement in that sense. If a man cut his name in small letters in the bark of a tree, they are but small at the first; as the tree grows, the letters grow; and when the tree cometh to the full grouth, the letters stand at a stay too. Thus, the Human Nature of Christ was extended, as he grew in Nature. But this we are sure of, In him are hid all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge, as he was a Prophet.

Thirdly, To this fullness of sufficiency is a third remaining, ing, that is, A fullness of Righteousness, as he was Priest, of which ye read, Joh. 16. 10. He will convince the world of sin, and righteousness, and judgment. Of righteousness, because I go to the Father, and ye see me no more. Here is a clear argument, that there was a fullness of righteousness in Jesus Christ, because he rose from the dead, and went to the Father, notwithstanding he had undertaken, as our Surety, to pay our debts. He is now gone to the Father, up to Heaven. Heaven had been too hot for him, if he had left anything to pay. But, He convinced the world of righteousness, because I go to the Father, and ye shall see me no more; which he could not have done, if all had not been discharged, which argueth, he did fulfill whatsoever he undertook. Therefore he is called, Jesus the righteous; 1 Joh. 2. 1. If any man sin, we have an Advocate with the Father, even Jesus Christ the righteous, he is the propitiation for our sins; and not for ours only, but also for the sins of the whole world. Had he not been Jesus the righteous, he could not have been Jesus our propitiation. For we have broken the Law; if he had not fulfilled it for us, he could not have been a propitiation for our sins; therein lieth his righteousness. Now there is a fullness of righteousness in Jesus Christ, because he fully answered whatsoever the Law could challenge.

The Law requires a three-fold righteousness of us; it requires

An Habitual righteousness.

A Practical righteousness.

A Passive righteousness.

Habitual righteousness, that is a conformity of our natures to the horridnesse of the Law. Original sin is against that.

Practical righteousness is a conformity of our lives to the precepts of the Law; and every act seems to be a violation of that.

Passive righteousness, is a conformity of our sufferings, to the threatenings and curse of the Law; which is, Cursed be everyone that continueth not in everything of the Law to do it.

Now, all these are to be found in Christ as our Surety, and great high Priest.

There is in him an Habitual righteousness, a conformity of his Nature to the holiness of the Law; for, He is a Lamb without spot and blemish. The Law could never have required so much righteousness, as is found in Him.

For Practical righteousness; there was never any aberration in his thoughts, words, or deeds. The prince of this world cometh, and hath nothing in me.

And for Passive righteousness, there is a conformity of his sufferings to the threats and curse of the Law. What doth the Law threaten? Why, a privation of comfort, which answereth to our omission of good; and an infliction of torment, which answereth to our commission of evil. Both these are to be found in Christ. Time was, when he was deprived of the comforts and influence, which at other times he had, from the Divinity, so far, as to cry out, that he was forsaken. And time was, when he lay under torment and sense of wrath, which made him to sweat water and blood. So, here is a Law exactly answered, which is, the fullness of righteousness, which is in Christ as our Priest.

3. The third fullness which is in Christ, is, The fullness of Efficacy, putting forth itself for the benefit of the Church. Such a fullness is in Christ, that filleth all that come to him, and will not leave one believing soul empty. A fullness of efficacy. Hence it is, that he is said to fill all in all: Ephes. 1. 23. Which is his body, the fullness of him that filleth all in all. Christ filleth all Graces in all believers: Whatsoever there is, either in the Understanding, or Will, or Memory, or anywhere else, it is of Christ's putting there. The first Miracle Christ did, was, a filling of the waterpots with wine; our Evangelist tells us, it was the first Miracle he did in Canaan. And there was in that Miracle a kind of representation, of what Christ will do ever after. He began with filling, and goeth on with filling, and endeth with filling: Insomuch as there is no believing-soul in the world, but he putteth some fullness into it; everyone hath its proportion. Ephes. 4. 13. Till we all come in the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of God, to a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ; Christ here, is Christ Mystical; Christ Mystical, that, is the Church; He being the Head, and believers the Members. As the fullness of a Natural body, is made up of the Compleatnesse of every member. Thar is a full body, when every member is grown to its due proportion; So the Body of Christ is made up, when there is a fullness in every Believer, answerable to that state, and relation, and place, which such a member bears in the body of Christ. All have not the like measure of fullness. One is full, as an arm, another is full, as an hand, another, as a little finger; yet he hath the fullness of a member. And all these put together, make up the fullness of Christ.

To show you, the fullness of Efficacy; see how Christ filleth those that come to him, and live upon him. He giveth them first, a fullness of blessing. That which ye read of, Romans 15. 29. I am sure, when I come unto you, I shall come, in the fullness of the blessing of the Gospel of peace. Wheresoever the Gospel of Christ is entertained, there comes a fullness of blessing. The truth is, All other things in the World are but empty blessings, in comparison of this. Nay, a man may say, where the Gospel is not received, there are Cursed Blessings, Mal. 2. 2. saith he there. If ye will not hear, and lay it to heart, to give glory to my Name, saith the Lord of Hosts; I will even send a Curse upon you, and will Curse your blessings. Health, and riches, and means, and friends, all blessings in themselves; are Cursed blessings, to them, that forsake the Gospel. Where that is entertained, the Curse is removed; so, Christ comes with the fullness of the blessing of the Gospel of peace.

Secondly, He giveth them a fullness of Content, suitable to their several conditions. I speak of such, as walk in Christ, as well as those that have received him; and that live up to their principles. I say, a fullness of content, in their condition. Of this, Paul speaks, Phil. 4. 18. I have all, (saith he) and abound, I am full. It was a sorry pittance, Paul had in outward respects, and yet he wanted nothing; He hath all, he is full. Why full? why, because he was contented. The first Adam, brought emptiness upon all the Creatures, and so they all became subject to bondage, and vanity, by reason of his sin. The second Adam, put a kind of fullness into them. Ye read of some in Job, of whom it is said; In the midst of their sufferings, they shall be in straits. And poor Saints, they have in their straits many times, a sufficiency, because they are contented with their Conditions.

Thirdly, There is, a fullness of spiritual knowledge, that Christ conveyeth to his Members, Rom. 15. 14. I myself, am persuaded of you, my brethren, that ye also are full of all goodness, filled with all knowledge, able also to admonish one another. Though the parts be weak, yet where Christ hath taken possession of the heart, there the soul hath a fullness of spiritual knowledge; The fullness of a small vessel, is fullness, though small, but yet a fullness. He that hath least, hath his proportion, and a fullness in his degree. That which is hardly a fullness, if ye compare him to any unregenerate man, his parts perhaps are beyond his. They shall all know me, from the least, to the greatest; I write to you little Children, (saith John) because ye have known the Father, even the least of God's people know him. Whereas the greatest Scholar in the World, if he hath not entertained Christ, knoweth him not. There is a fullness in Christ, though little; in comparison whereof, the greatest Scholars in the World, are but empty men. He knoweth Christ, as a man knoweth Honey, that hath tasted it, which is another kind of knowledge, than he hath that hath only heard of it, and discoursed of it, and never tasted of it in his Life.

Again, There is a fullness of the fruits of Righteousness, Phil. 1. 11. Being filled with the fruits of Righteousness by Jesus Christ, to the glory, and praise of God. Filled with the fruits of Righteousness. Christ hath no barren Trees in his Orchard, they are all filled with fruit, fruits of Righteousness; whence it comes to pass, that believers living up to their principles, as I said before, they follow God fully. As it is said of Caleb, Numb. 14. 24. My servant Caleb had another spirit with him, and hath followed me fully. They do not follow Christ by halves; Christ a little, and the World much; but follow him fully, close with him, even as two plain Superficies. Suppose two pieces of boards smoothed and plained, they close one with another in every part; Whereas, a round thing doth close only in someone point, if ye put it to a thing that is plain. If ye lay a round ball upon a smooth Table, the ball closeth to the Table, but it is but in a point. Ye have false-hearted men, that seem to close with God, and Christ; but it is in this, or that particular opinion, that may stand with their gain. Whereas the poor soul that followeth God, and Christ, followeth him fully in every truth, and every particular thing, that makes for God, and Christ; so there is a fullness of obedience, as well as a fullness of knowledge.

Again, There is a fullness of joy; This Christ giveth, where he communicateth himself. He speaks of it, Joh. 16. 24. Hitherto, have ye asked nothing in my Name, ask, and ye shall receive, that your joy may be full. They are but empty joys, that the World giveth to its followers; Christ promiseth a full joy to them, that seek to him. Therefore it is, that the members of Christ have a full joy, because they have Communion with him, as their Head; He is present with them, as in the inward man, and, In his presence, is fullness of joy. Joy ariseth from the fruition of some good thing, which a man knoweth, and knoweth himself to have interest in. What so good, as Christ, who is the chiefest Good? when a poor believer comes to know Christ, and to be able to say, My beloved is mine, and I am his; Hence ariseth a full joy, because it is a joy in Christ, who is a good, a present good, a present known good, a present known good which I have interest in; besides those good things which are to come, that farther fruition of Christ, which men shall have in another World. In comparison, of which, Paul accounts himself absent from the Lord, while he is present with the World. Though themselves be absent, they are present to the eye of faith, which is the evidence of things not seen, the substance of things hoped for; Therefore in these, they can rejoice, with a full joy. This makes them, to be filled with everlasting Consolation, and goodhope through grace; yea, with joy unspeakable, and full of glory. So ye see, there is abundant fullness in Jesus Christ; and also, what sorts of fullness they are.

I proceed to the Application of this truth. If there be [Use.] such abundant fullness, in Jesus Christ; Then it holdeth forth,

First, Matter of Consolation, to those that are within.

Secondly, Matter of Invitation, to them that are without, that they would be persuaded to come in upon this ground.

First, Here is that, that may comfort them, that are within; They have a Savior full of all grace, and excellency. And if he be full, then they are Compleat in him: there lieth the Comfort. The Apostle joineth these two together, Col. 2. 9, 10. In him dwelleth all the fullness of the Godhead bodily, and we are complete in him, which is the head of all Principalities, and Powers; We are complete, if we be in Christ. Why? because he is full. Upon this ground it was, that Paul could glory in his Wealth; though but a poor man, and confessed, though he had nothing, he wanted nothing, 2 Cor. 6. 10. As sorrowful, yet always rejoicing; as poor, yet making many rich; as having nothing, and yet possessing all things. Why so? because he had Christ, and all things in him. Qui omnia habentem habet, habet omnia; He that hath him, who hath all, hath all in him. This was Paul's case, as it was Moses his case, when he was forty days, and nights upon the Mount; he had none, but God alone with him, he had taken up no provision: There he was. The people thought Moses was dead, and that he would never come again; therefore, they fell, upon that ground, to make a Calf. If he did return, they thought he would come, and look like a pined starved Creature; Well, Moses comes, beyond their expectations, and never looked so well in his Life. So well, as they could not endure to behold the shining of his Countenance; How came Moses to receive so much vigor upon the Mount, where he had no sustenance? Why, he had God there, and in him all: This is the great fountain of Consolation. It is a pleasant thing for a man to have a full heap to go to, where he may take a purse-full, a bag-full, if need be. A believing soul may go to Jesus Christ, and take his hands full, his heart full, as much as ever he standeth in need of. It is the condition of many a Christian, to be always on the complaining hand, though it ought not to be so; for, Cheerfulness is an honor to Profession.

But thou art apt to complain, Alas for me, I abound in [Object.] nothing but want; there dwelleth no fullness in me.

It is true enough; but thou hast him, in whom all fullness [Answ.] dwelleth. Therefore what needst thou complain of want? I say, Thou hast him, if thou be'st a believer. As many as received him, to them that believe in his name, to them gave he power to be the sons of God. Thine are the wants, Of what? Why, of a finite creature. His is the fullness, Of whom? Of an infinite God. What are thy wants to his fullness? Certainly, the one is infinitely above the other, even as God is far above men. Thou art ignorant (so are we all by nature) of God and of ourselves, and the way to heaven. Thou knowest not what to hold in such and such a point, and knowest not what to do in such and such a case: Why, thou canst never want wisdom; If thou receivest of his fullness, there is wisdom for thee. Christ is made to us of God wisdom, saith the Apostle. Certainly, he that partaketh of Christ's wisdom, shall be wise enough, wise to salvation, as the Apostle speaks in another place. If Stephen receiveth of the fullness of Christ, wisdom for wisdom, then he speaks with such a spiritual wisdom, as all his enemies are not able to resist. A poor man in the Council of Nice, that came to encounter with a great Philosopher; he was full of the Spirit of Christ, and opposed so much power against what the Philosopher said, as he professed, That while Argument was opposed to Argument, and Syllogism to Syllogism, I was hard enough for them all. But here comes a man, that speaks in the power and wisdom of Christ, and I am not able to resist him. Sometimes a Christian complaineth of his own weakness, and who hath not cause to complain of that? But then consider, what a fullness of power is in Christ as thy King, a power, by which he is able to subdue all things to himself, to conquer lust, and to tread down Satan under thy feet, and to make thee more than a conqueror, through him that loved thee.

But the thing lieth upon thy Conscience, and thou canst [Object.] not bear it.

Look to Christ, he is full of righteousness, though thou [Answ.] be'st full of guilt. What can the Law exact of thee, which may not be found in thy Surety? Thou complainest of an unholy nature, but look to Christ's Nature, there is habitual righteousness in him; He is a lamb without spot or blemish. Thou hast broken all the Commandments of God; Look to Christ's life, there is a practical righteousness in him; Satan came, and found nothing in him. The Law threateneth a curse, and death, and hell: How shall this be undergone? Look to Christ thy Surety, there is a passive righteousness in him; he hath answered the curse of the Law, as well as fulfilled the precepts of the Law. The merit of all these redound to thee, if thou canst but believe. Therefore may the poor soul say, as David doth in the Psalms, I will go out in the strength of the Lord God. I will make mention of thy righteousness, even of thine only.

But, How comes it to pass then, if there be such a fullness [Object.] in Jesus Christ, that so many of his Members are so empty, so little grace to be seen in their conversation, and belief to be found in their souls?

It is not for want of fullness in Christ, but it is because [Answ.] we are wanting to Christ, and to ourselves, that we are so empty, notwithstanding the fullness of our Head. It is, because we do not answer his fullness of worth and grace, with the fullness of our affection. Fullness should be answered with fullness. As Excellency calleth for Respect; so according to the degrees of the excellency, should be the degrees of respect. There is a full and abundant grace and merit in Christ, therefore go with full assurance of faith, when thou goest to him.

What is the reason thou art no fuller? [Quaer.]

Why, because thou dost open thy mouth no wider: [Response.] Open thy mouth wide, and I will fill it. Could we believe enough, we should have enough. But Christ saith (as to many of his Patients)▪ Be it to thee according to thy faith. According to the measure of thy Bucker, so shall be the proportion of water that thou drawest out of the Well of Salvation. Christ is the fountain, and his blessings and graces are the water, and faith is the bucket. A large faith, a faith drawn out, fetcheth a large blessing from heaven; and so as he expecteth fullness of faith, that coming to a great God, we should look for great things from him, and not content ourselves with outward Mediocrities, but have our faith exercising itself, in some proportion to the object upon which it acteth. So also, that we should come with the fullness of obedience in our lives, as well as of faith in our hearts. We should not only draw near with assurance of faith, but follow God fully, as Caleb did, Numb. 14. get that spirit as was in Caleb, to follow God fully. We should have great comforts, but we tread awry, and so wrench our faith. We go after God a little, and the world a great deal: when we are following God, we are taken off from the pursuit of God. Thence it is, that our comforts are no more. Suppose the head in the natural body full of sense and spirits, yet if the lower parts, through which the influence should be conveyed to the vital parts of the body, be obstructed, the lower parts may decay for want of the influence of the head; because there is something that hinders that conveying of them, namely, those obstructions. We suffer our understandings, and wills, and affections, to be obstructed with the world, and the things thereof; therefore the fullness of our Head is not conveyed to us in so full a manner. Herein do I exercise myself, saith Paul, to keep a good conscience, towards God, and towards man. These exercises will open those obstructions, and so make way for the influence of the Head. That is the first Use, by way of Consolation to them that are Within.

Secondly, Here is matter of Invitation to them Without, that they would from hence be persuaded to come in to [Use 2] Jesus Christ, because there is such a fullness in him, as ye have heard of in other cases. Fullness inviteth, and why should it not do so in this. The laden Bee, that, flieth abroad into Gardens and Meadows, Why? Because they are full of flowers, there is food to be had for them, and something to carry home to their Hives. Why doth the Merchant take such long voyages to the West Indies, but because that is full of Mines of gold and silver? And to the East Indies, but because they are full of spices? The sons of Jacob took a long journey from Canaan into Egypt, because that was full of corn, and they were loath to starve in their own Land. The Queen of Sh•ba came a great way to see Solomon, because he was full of wisdom. Will not all these rise up in judgment against us one day, if we be not invited and drawn in by the fullness of Christ, in whom there is more sweetness, than in all flowers and spices; more riches, than in all mines of gold and silver; more excellency and fullness, than of milk and honey in Canaan, than of corn in Egypt, than of wisdom in Solomon? Therefore methinks our souls should hasten to him; and the rather, because we all naturally affect a fullness, and will be seeking it one where or other, either in Christ, or in the Creature; and man doth dream of a fullness in the creature. That which Agur speaks of, speaking after the manner of men, Prov. 30. 9. Give me not riches, saith he, lest I be full, and deny thee, and say, Who is the Lord? There is a fullness in wealth, and pleasures, and preferments, that men may truly affect.

Let the very consideration of the emptiness of this fullness, that is supposed to be in the creature, be a motive to invite men to come in to Christ; If ye go not after Christ, ye will go after the high expectations of that fullness, which will deceive you. This of Christ is a filling fullness. And That, ye may call a fullness if ye will, but it will prove emptiness in the issue. Solomon at last comes to this conclusion, Eccles. 1. 14. I have seen all the works under the Sun, and behold all is vanity, and vexation of spirit; that is, emptiness, so the word signifieth. As empty the creatures are, even as Cisterns that hold no water, *Jer. 1. 13. What refreshing can be had from a cistern, that hath no water in it, or but little? ay, but that little in the issue comes to nothing, they are broken Cisterns, and all runs out of them, that seemeth to be put in broken Cisterns, that can hold no water. There is a mere delusion in all the creatures, they make fair promises; but when a man cometh to seek for comfort in them, he is like a Traveler, that comes to a Well for water, and findeth nothing but air there, and so cries out, It is an empty Well. I remember a story of Semiramis, that when she did lie upon her death-bed, she caused her Monument to be made, and this Verse written upon her Tomb,* Hïc fod•at quisquis, si princeps, indiget auro.

If any Prince standeth in need of Treasure, let him dig in this Sepulcher, and see what he can find there. Many years after, Darius passing by, and beholding the Inscription, caused the Monument to be digged open, where, instead of a great deal of treasure, he findeth another Inscription to this purpose, Had'st thou not been extremely covetous, thou wouldst never have digged into this Tomb for nothing. And so indeed, the creature hath no satisfaction in it. A man comes, and thinks to find much, and he hath there nothing, but a sad lesson for himself, to carry away with him. Wherefore let us no longer play the Prodigal, seeing there is bread in our Father's house, let us not go to feed upon husks; the creatures are no better. All is vanity, and worse; they are not only vanity, but vexation of spirit, which ariseth from the disappointment of a man's hopes, when a man is vexed, when he is frustrated; looks for much, and finds a little. That is his case here, a man looks for contentment, and findeth trouble. As our Savior, in the days of his flesh, it is said, He went to the fig-tree expecting fruit, and found none; therefore he was provoked, and cursed the tree. Many a one leaves the creature with a curse; which he sought after with expectation of satisfaction from it. Oh! it is a cursed preferment, and pleasure, saith he, even of that very thing, which he thought would have fully satisfied his soul, when he first enjoyed it. But now, this fullness of Christ is such, as there is no vanity in it, no vexation from it: nay, so far is it from vexation, that it giveth satisfaction which nothing else can give. Psal. 36. 8. They shall be abundantly satisfied with the fatness of thy house, and thou shalt make them to drink of the rivers of thy pleasure. For vexation in the one, here is satisfaction in the other; and for those drops of pleasure which men find in the creature, here is rivers of pleasure, such are those everlasting joys that are in Christ. For the pleasures of the creature, here are Rivers, every man may have his fill. If it were a Cistern, an Army might come and empty that. But here is enough, therefore I need not to envy another's satisfaction; there is enough for all that come to Christ. I have now done with the first Observation, of the first part of my Text.

The Second hath diverse Branches.

The first that offers itself is the Partakers hereof, and those are a great many; We all, saith the Apostle here, We all have received, even grace for grace,

A short Observation is to be taken from thence, namely, [Observ.] That all the members of Christ are partakers of some spiritual endowments. We all have received of his fullness. Not one, but Christ imparts something to, in his measure. Therefore it is clearly said by the Apostle, Ephes. 4. 7. Unto everyone of us is given grace, according to the measure of the gift of Christ. Here is grace, and grace to everyone, and grace from Christ to everyone; yet, to everyone in his measure, not alike measure to all, but some measure to each. One star, saith the Apostle, differs from another in glory. Not a Star but receiveth light from the Sun, the one receiveth more light than the other: Therefore there is a different glory in the Stars. The Lord Jesus shineth upon every believing soul, but not upon everyone in a like luster. You know there was a time, when Esau questioned his father's store strongly, Hast thou but one blessing, my father? but, no man needeth to question the store of this everlasting Father, he hath more blessings than one, he hath some blessings for every Member of his, We have all received. Therefore it is said, Mal. 2. 15. And did not he make one? yet had he the residue of the spirit. Some read, Abundance; and some read, Residue of spirit; both well. God hath given endowments of spirit to an hundred, and he hath a residue of spirit for a thousand more; and when he hath endowed a thousand thousands, he hath a residue of spirit for ten thousand millions more. Ephes. 2. 5. Which is the head. Even when we were dead in sins, hath he quickened us together with Christ, (by grace ye are saved;) Here is one head, but many members. The Head is Christ, the Believers, are the members; All the members of the body they are compact together, saith this place. The whole body is joined together by the bones, that meet in the joints, and let into one another; Compact, by that, which every joint supplieth. So the souls of believers, as they are all knit to Christ their Head; so they are let into one another, by a spirit of love. And something, every joint supplieth; therefore, every joint hath its particular work. As there is a vegetative power in the soul, that putteth forth it self to every member; One member to the proportion of an arm, another of an hand, another of a finger. So there is a working of the spirit of grace in the whole body of Christ, that brings every member to its proportion; one to this degree, another to that, which God hath predestin'd him to. Therefore it is, that the growth of every member, upon the increase of the body, helps to the edifying of it self in love; Look then, that as in the body, every member shares with the soul, that bringeth it to the perfection, due to that member. So doth every believer, share with the spirit of Christ, in some spiritual indowment, fit for his station. It may be of great use to us.

- First, It may serve as an Antidote, against scornfulness, and contempt.
- Secondly, As a spurr to improve.

First, The consideration of this truth, That all the members of Christ, partake of some spiritual indowment; (Weall have received) serveth as an Antidote against scornfulness, and contempt of one another. If every man hath received his part, Who art thou that despisest thy brother? Prov. 17. 5. Who so mocketh the poor, reproacheth his Maker; And he that is glad at Calamity, shall not be unpunished. It pleaseth God to make him so, therefore, to mock him, is to reproach God; so to contemn the poor Saint for want of those parts, to express himself by, that thou hast, thy reproach is to the Spirit of God. God hath purposely dispensed his gifts, and graces, so that there is no believer but hath some, and none that hath all endowments in an eminent way; None hath all, that he may not think to stand alone. And none but hath some, that everyone may have use of another, that the highest should not contemn the meanest; The head should not say to the foot, I have no need of thee. As it is in Countries, Non omnes, fert omnia, Tell us; one Country produceth Wines, another Sugars, another Spices. God hath purposely so done this, that one Kingdom might have interest one with another; In the like manner, God hath ordered things in his mystical body, and given to all his members several endowments, that they might not contemn one another. As it is in a material building, where there is a sort of stones laid together, everyone hath its use; The lower Story bears up those above it, and the upper story, keeps the lower from being warped. There is use of all, and so it is of the members of Christ; Therefore, one should not slight, and contemn another, God delights to order things so. Though thou mayest excel another in diligence, perhaps, yet there is one thing, or other, wherein happily he may excel thee. For instance; It may be, thou art a better Proficient in the School of Christ, then such a one; but perhaps, he was begotten into the School of Christ before thee, that is his honor. Paul accounted it the honor of some Professors, that they were in Christ before him, and had got the start of him in that, Rom. 16. 7. Salute Andronicus, and Junia my Kinsmen, and my fellow Prisoners, who are of note amongst the Apostles, who also were in Christ before me. He valued them in that respect, though he was a Christian of greater parts; yet they were in Christ before him, therefore, he durst not contemn them. It may be, thou hast been in Christ, before such a one, yet the party may live more upon Christ, since he was in him, then thou hast done. Thou hast a greater stock of habitual grace; but he is a better Husband, with that little stock, he hath. It may be, thou art as abundant in pains, as he, but God hath given him better success, then to thee; in his pains, that so thou mayest have something still to value this labor. For, It may be, thou hast more assurance then such a believer hath, it is that, that puffeth thee up; but stay: It may be he, whom thou contemnest, may have as much of faith, as thou hast of assurance. That is no paradox. It is possible, one of less degree of faith, may have a higher degree of assurance for the present, because assurance dependeth not upon the degree of believing; but upon the degree of discovered light: God may come in betimes, with discovered light to one, that hath less habitual grace. We have received the spirit, not of the Law, but of God, by which we know the things that are freely given us of God. Therefore, assurance depends upon the light, not upon the grace.

Let this serve in the second place, to be a spurr to improvement; We have all received, therefore, have all something to be accountable for. I beseech you, saith Paul, that ye receive not the grace of God in vain, 2 Cor. 6. 1. If Christ giveth a gift, it is to some end; And what is the end? why, improvement, so saith the Apostle, 1 Cor. 12. 7. The manifestation of the spirit, is given to every man to profit withal; that is, every Christian Man, and Woman, hath something in Him, or her, which manifesteth their, having the spirit of God. Therefore it is called, the manifestation of the spirit; And said to be given to every man: but here is the end, to profit withal. What Talents a man hath received, he must not hide in a Napkin; As it is in the natural body, That which every member receiveth, it is for the good of the whole. The stomach that takes in meat, but not for it self alone, but to nourish the body; The feet they move, too and from, not for themselves alone, but to carry the body. The hand that worketh, not for it self alone, but to maintain the body; And so it is in the mystical body of Christ, as the Apostle telleth you clearly, 1 Pet. 4. 7. As every man hath received the gift, even so minister the same one to another, as good stewards of the manifold grace of God. Here is manifold grace; And so dispensed, as every man hath received a gift, and as a good steward. The steward receiveth the money, that is put into his hand, not to put up into his own purse, but for the good of the whole family; Men have received, that they may dispence. Therefore, I say, seeing we all have received, we are all bound to be useful in our several places, within our several spheres; not all of the same way, but all in some way, to be useful to the Church of Christ. This doth not open a gap to confusion, it doth not open the Pulpi-doors to everyone, that may say himself to be gifted; but it calls upon everyone in his sphere, to do service to God in his Church. We are like so many Actors upon a Stage, in the acting of a Comedy; he is not commended that acts the greatest part, but he that acteth his own part best, be it the part of a King, or of a Servant, either short or long; if he act that part well, there lieth the matter of his praise; and the Servant may have more commendation for that part he acteth, than the King, if he doth it well. So it is here: He that acteth his own part well, shall have, Well done good and faithful servant. As in the naturallbody, there is a distinction of members; as in Music, the Harmony is made up of different Sounds and Tunes; they have the Base, and Mean, and Treble. If all were Treble, where were the Base? and if all Base, where were the Mean? The Harmony is made up from the consent of all these. So, there is an harmony made up in the Church of God, but it is from the variety of gifts, that God bestows upon them. And the Treble hath its commendation in Music as well as the Base. And as in Painting, your dark colors add to the beauty of the Picture, and deserves praise, if well cast, as well as the fairest color in the whole Piece. So, many Christians of obscure parts, in comparison, in the conjunction of the whole, do add to the beauty of the whole.

The next is, The Participation. I will speak a little of that.

Have received.

The Observation from hence is this, namely, That whatsoever [Observ.] endowment any man is partaker of, he hath but received it. Before I told you, Everyone hath received; now, Whatsoever any one partakes of, it is but received. Of his fullness have we all received, and grace for grace. 1 Cor. 4. 7. What hast thou that thou hast not received? Name the thing, if thou canst, that is good; if it be good, it is received. What hast thou, that thou hast not received? Go from the one end of the work of grace to the other, and you shall find all received: Begin where grace beginneth, at the Understanding, and those good thoughts that God puts into the minds of men, by which he turneth the mind about; for the Understanding is the great Wheel. Those thoughts thou hast received, as the Apostle tells you, 2. Cor. 3. 5. Not that we are sufficient of ourselves to think anything, as of ourselves; our sufficiency is of God. From good thoughts in the Understanding, come to good inclinations in the Will; they are received, Phil. 2. 13. It is God which worketh in you both to will and to do, of his good pleasure. Come from good inclinations of the Will, to good words in the Mouth; why, God puts them in too, or we cannot have them. Isa. 50. 4. The Lord God hath given me the tongue of the learned, that I should know how to speak. Come from good words to good works, by which our words are made good; we fulfill in our actions what we profess: they are also received, Without me ye can do nothing, saith Christ. He doth not say, It is but little; but, Nothing, just nothing, without me. These good works, they have different successes, every degree of success is received; Paul plants, and Apollos watereth, but it is God that giveth the success. Nay, to make it appear that the success is given, that increase is freely dispensed, ye shaall often find God giving more success to meaner labors, than to greater; more success to men of weak abilities, than to men of strong abilities: because he will have success free, as well as anything else. As it was between Rachel and Leah; Rachel was the fairer, but Leah the fruitfuller; Rachel had more beauty, but Leah more children.

Now to come to the Use, which the Apostle hath made [Use.] to my hands, Whatsoever we have is received. Away then with boasting, 1 Cor. 4. 7. Who made thee to differ from another? What hast thou that thou hast not received? Now if thou didst receive it, why dost thou glory as if thou hadst not received it? Away with all proud opinions of men, that ascribe something to the creature, and something to themselves, that they have not received of free grace. There is a great deal of difference between habit acquired, and habit infused. Men speak of grace, as if it were an acquired habit; and so ascribe much to themselves, and do not take all as received. Indeed, in acquired habits, the actions well performed, have a kind of casualty in them; as, if a man learneth to write, his frequent habit bringeth him to write. But it is otherwise in infused habits; there, we have first the habit; then, perform the act: You have first the habit, that, we receive; then, the acts are produced; and, all is of God. As they say of the soul, Grace frames all of itself; the free grace of God doth all in the soul, plants the habit, then draweth it forth into act, and then blesseth those acts, and then crowneth all. And what is the Crown? Why, his own work in us. God crowneth nothing in us, but what he giveth us. It is so from first to last,

All is grace. Therefore there is no boasting. Away then with proud opinions, and glorying of ourselves in our conversation. The truth is, this corruption of nature, though it vent itself much in opinion, yet more in practice. It is too common a fault for men to play the Swan, when they look into the whiteness of their own bosoms, without considering the blackness of their feet. Whence is that whiteness received, if there be any whiteness? It is from God; therefore glory not, as if thou hadst not received. Yet, glory in God, but not in thyself. There is that which will make us to play the Judas with Christ; Christ giveth a bag to Judas, and Judas will filch from Christ. Christ giveth us grace, and we are apt to pocket up all for ourselves. We derive all from Christ, and yet many times we take upon us, as if we had it out of our own Cisterns: This I did, and said; and this was done by my endeavors. Oh! What hast thou that thou hast not received? The Moon receiveth all its light from the Sun, and yet the Moon eclipseth the Sun as much as in her lieth. Seeing we receive all from Christ, let him have the praise of all we have, and hope for. Let this break the pride of our hearts. Beggars must be no boasters. Of his fullness have we all received, even grace for grace.

Vers. 17. For the Law was given by Moses, but Grace and Truth came by Jesus Christ.

18. No man hath seen God at any time. The only begotten Son, which is in the bosom of the Father, he hath declared him.

In this 17th. Verse are contained two Assertions.

- First, That the Law was given by Moses.
- Secondly, That Grace and Truth came by Jesus Christ.

Of these, I shall not here speak anything; nor of the opposition which is here made by some, between these two. Whereas Christ and Moses, the Gospel and the Law, are here opposed by way of Comparison; the one, as more excellent than the other: Diverse mistake them, as opposed by way of Controversy, as the one excluding the other; and so gather from hence, That under the Gospel we have nothing to do with the Law. That, The grace and truth that came by Jesus Christ, doth quite destroy and abolish the Law, that came by Moses.

We might here distinguish of a four-fold estate of Man.

- A state of Innocency.
- A state of Corruption.
- A state of Preparation.
- A state of Grace.

And also of the several uses of the Moral Law.

- First, To justify.
- Secondly, To discover sin and guilt.

- Thirdly, To provoke to sin.
- Fourthly, To condemn for sin.
- Fifthly, To lead to Christ.
- Sixthly, To direct in the ways of holiness.
- First, The Law was of use to have justified Adam in the state of Innocency; but could never justify any man since.
- Secondly, The Law is still of use to provoke, and to condemn, in the state of Corruption.
- Thirdly, In the state of Preparation, the Law is still of use, as a School-master, to lead us to Christ.
- Fourthly, It is of small use to Condemne, and of no force to provoke, in the state of grace.

But yet, Fifthly, even in the state of grace, it is of use to correct, and so, it is a rule of Life; All these I might discover to you, by diverse arguments. But my intension is, to consider such places, as are objected to the contrary, and then to come to the Application, Gal. 3. 19. seems to imply, that the Law was to continue no longer, then till the coming of Christ; Wherefore then serveth the Law? It was added, because of transgression, till the seed should come, to whom the promise was made. If by seed, we understand [Object.] Christ, as is likely; Then it doth rise higher, the Law was added, because of Transgression, till the seed should come: but then it was to continue no longer.

But the answer is not difficult. First, If ye understand [Answ.] the Ceremonial Law, then that began to vanish; when Christ, (who was the substance) came, now that, even the Ceremonial Law was added, because of Transgression, is proved in that. All of the rights of Ceremonies, was such as implied guilt, and sin; yea, it did not only imply our guilt, but our misery. For the blood was to be poured out, to show what we all deserved; even to be made sacrifices to the wrath of God, and fuel for the fire of Hell. But if ye will understand it of the Moral Law, for it taketh in both; Then thus you must distinguish between the matter, and substance of the Law, and the Ministry of Moses.

The Moral Law, for the matter of it, is perpetual; It was before Moses, and will be after Moses, even to the end of the World. But then, if you take the Law, as it implieth the Ministry of Moses; In that respect, there was a ceasing of the Law, when the seed came, because all those Mosaecall appendixes, to the Moral Law, they then began to vanish. As namely, to the second Commandment, the whole Ceremonial Law was an Appendix to that; The fourth Commandment, the seventh days Sabbath, was a Type of Christ, resting in the grave, the seventh day from the Creation. So as for the matter, it remains, though as for the Ministry of Moses, there is an end of that. The great place is urged of those out of the Romans, Rom. 7. 6. Now we are delivered from the [Object.] Law, that being dead, wherein we were held, that we should serve in newness of the spirit, and not in the oldness of the letter. If we be delivered from the Law, then we have nothing to do with it, after we have received the Gospel of Christ, that is the Objection.

Understand the Answer, read the beginning of the Chapter, and ye shall see in what sense, he saith, We are delivered [Answ.] from the Law, namely, from the Law, as an Husband, begetting sin upon our souls; The Law had a provoking power, to stir up Concupiscense in Men. Now, saith he, we are delivered from the Law in this sense, because we are under another Husband, namely under Christ. In which respect, it is said in this Epistle, Chap. 6. 14. That we are not under the Law, but under grace; namely, not under the provoking power of the Law. That place may seem [Object.] to have some difficulty in it, Rom. 10. 4. Christ is the end of the Law for righteousness, to every one that believeth; If Christ be the end of the Law, Then the Law ended when Christ came. This is the Objection, but of this we must distinguish a threefold end.

- Finis Abolitionis.
- Finis Adimptionis.
- Finis Intentionis.

An end of Abolition. That which kills a man, a sword, [Answ.] or, poison, that is his end; because, it kills him. Finis interficiens.

Secondly, An end of Impletion, As, the end of the Law is charity. What is that? Love is the fulfilling of the Law.

Thirdly, Finis Intentionis, That is the scope of a thing, that is, at which it aims; now Christ is the end of the Law, What is that? not the abolishing end. For he himself tells you, He came not to destroy the Law, but to fulfill it; He is an end in these two latter senses, not in the first. He is the scope of the Law, and the fulfilling of the Law, and in both these senses; The end of the Law for righteousness, to everyone that believeth.

First, He is the scope of the Law. The Ceremoniallaw, that aimed at Christ; and the Moral law aims at Christ too; because it driveth men out of themselves, to seek for a Savior, 2 Cor. 3. 13. speaking of the veil that was upon Moses his face. Not as Moses, which put a veil over his face, that the children of Israel could not steadfastly look to the end of that which was abolished. What was the end of the Law? Saith he, the Israelites were not able to understand Christ, at whom the whole law aimed; there was a veil upon their face, so as in the Levitical Rites, and Ceremonial precepts, they could not see Christ: they could not look to the end of all those Levitical Rites, which are now abolished. And this veil, when they come to be Converted, shall be taken away. Thus, He is the end, that is, the scope of the Law.

Secondly, He is the end; that is, the fulfiller of the Law. Look what righteousness the law required, that Christ fulfilled, and so satisfied the law to the utmost, both in the precepts, and curse of it.

Well, Is it so, may some say? If Christ hath thus fulfilled [Object.] the law, there is so much the less need, why we should observe it, because our surety hath done it already for us.

This will have no great weight, if we consider, that [Answ.] Christ, and we, are to observe the Law to different ends. Indeed, there would be some strength in the Reason, if we should affirm, we are to observe the Law to the same end, that Christ observed it; We observe the Law, to testify our thankfulness to Christ, for the salvation we have by him. Christ obeyed the Law, to testify obedience for us; Therefore, we are bound to obey so much the more, because Christ obeyed it. Now Christ endured the punishment, due to our sins; therefore, we that are in Christ, are not liable to punishment, properly so called, but yet to affliction, under another notion, as Chastisements, though Christ hath endured the Curse for us. And so in active obedience, we are to Imitate Christ, to do as He did.

I will name one place more, that is 1 Tim. 1. 9. Knowing [Object.]ing this, that the Law is not made for a righteous man, but for the lawless, and disobedient, for the ungodly, and sinners. Therefore a person justified, saith the Objector, hath nothing to do with the Law.

For the meaning of this place, take it clearly thus.

First, Ye cannot understand this place absolutely, as if, [Answ.] whosoever is righteous, had nothing to do with the Law; for, ye know, Adam, in his Innocency, had a Law given him. This therefore cannot be denied: Look how far a man is righteous, he hath a principle within him, that even without a Law it will constrain him to obey: The love of Christ constraineth us, saith the Apostle. As far as a man walks according to this principle, so far he doth not come within the compass of the Law, as to the penalty of it. A Law, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, it doth not lie against a righteous man. That is the property of the word. As when it is said, The ax is laid 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, to the root of the tree, to cut it down. The Law is not laid to a righteous man, to condemn him. As we say in Suits at Law, A Suit lieth against such a man, in such a Court; that is, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉. Now, saith the Apostle, the Law, in this sense, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, doth not lie against a righteous man. If ye will have the clear meaning of this, see Gal. 5. 23. The fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, meekness. Against such there is no law. Make up the meaning betwixt these two, Gal. 5. 23. and 1 Tim. 1. 9. The Law is not made for a righteous man. That is, Made to direct him, not to condemn him.

Then, to have done with this, There is no such great cause why the Ministers of Christ should be afraid of meddling with the Law, in their Sermons: So long as we preach the Law with the same intent that God gave it, we may preach it without fear.

God gave the Law with a double subserviency. Before our Conversion, the Law is subservient to lead a man to Christ; and after our Conversion, the Law is subservient to direct us in the way to Christ. God gave the Law for Evangelical ends, and men should preach the Law for Evangelical ends; not to set up a covenant of Works, but to drive them out of themselves to Christ; and then, when they are in Christ, to help to guid them in the way of holiness. To preach the Law as Christ himself preached it, Matth. 5. who spent a great part of that Sermon in the Mount, upon the Law.

And then for People, as well as for Preachers; they need not fear having respect to the Law. David said, I shall not be ashamed, when I have respect to all thy commandments. Some seem to be ashamed, to have respect to any of the commandments of God. Certainly, Brethren, if ye will obey the Law out of Evangelical principles, as it was given for Evangelical ends, you need never to be afraid of observing it. They are the same precepts to a man converted, but they are observed out of new principles; yet the precepts continue the same. Hest. 2. 10. it is said, that she had not yet shown her kindred and people, as Mordechai had charged her, that she should not show it. She was obedient to Mordechai, all the while she had been under his government; and when she was Queen, yet still she doth the commandment of Mordechai. When men are engrafted into Jesus Christ, they are still bound to do the commandments of the Law, as before: then they were bound under the curse of it, for fear; but now out of love. Here the grace of Christ will make them more obedient, because it teacheth them to deny ungodliness and worldly lusts. I have done with this. Now to the next Verse, which runneth thus,

Vers. 18. No man hath seen God at any time. The only begotten Son which is in the bosom of the Father, He hath declared Him.

Ye may perceive by what ye read, Joh. 9. how zealous the Jews were for Moses, and how prejudicial against Christ: Joh. 9. 28, 29. Then they reviled him, and said, Thou art his disciple, but we are Moses his disciples. We know that God spake unto Moses; but as for this fellow, we know him not whence he is. And therefore the Evangelist here, to take away this misapprehension of theirs, having in the seventeenth verse preferred Christ before Moses, and the Gospel before the Law. Because the Jews, that spake so much of God's speaking to Moses; and appearing to him, were ready to object, But God spake face to face with Moses; Therefore, the Evangelist here prefers Christ, and showeth a greater intimacy between God and Christ, than between God and Moses. No man hath seen God at any time, (no, not Moses) but the only begotten Son. Moses had some sight of God, but in apparition: He desired to see God face to face, but was denied; only he was not denied the sight of some similitude of God. Numb. 12. 8. With him will I speak mouth to mouth, even apparently, and not in dark speeches; and the similitude of the Lord shall he behold. Moses beheld the similitude of the Lord; but Christ was in the Father's bosom, and so saw him face to face, as never man saw him.

There are three Assertions in this place.

The first concerneth the Invisibility of God, No man hath seen God at any time.

The second concerneth the Intimacy of Christ with the Father, The only begotten Son which is in the bosom of the Father.

The third concerneth the Discovery of the Father by Christ, He hath declared him.

Of these three, in their order.

First, That which concerneth the Invisibility of God, No man hath seen God at any time. For the right understanding whereof, ye must know, that God may here be considered, either in reference to his Essence, or his Counsel, and accordingly there is a twofold sight of God.

- A Beatifical vision, and
- A Scientificall vision.

A Beatifical vision of God, in reference to his Essence.

And a Scientificall vision of God, in reference to his Counsel.

I dare not exclude neither of these, in reference to the Text, because the words which follow seem to have Christ in both, The only begotten Son which is in the bosom of the Father. That implieth Christ to have a beatifical vision of God, in his Essence, even here upon the face of the earth, because he was then even in the bosom of the Father. And he must needs see the Essence of God, that is, essentially God himself. He that hath the same essence with the Father, must needs see the essence of the Father. He is the only begotten Son, therefore he hath the beatifical vision of the Father.

Then, He lieth in the bosom of the Father, therefore He hath the scientificall vision of the Father too; in both which respects, he was able to declare the Father. Speak we then first of this Clause.

No man hath seen God at any time, as it refers to the beatifical vision of God in his essence. The meaning will be this, No man, that is, no mere man; for Christ, who is God-Man, must be excepted. No man hath seen God, that is, God in his essence; for God, in apparitions, hath been seen by many. No man hath seen God at any time, namely, during his life, during the state of mortality; so it is to be limited. That answer which God gave to Moses, Exod. 33. 20. when he desired the sight of God, The Lord said, Thou canst not see my face; for no man shall see me and live; you must take it, in sensu composito; that is, No man upon the face of the earth shall see me, no living man, while he liveth upon the face of the earth, can see the face of God in his Essence. Otherwise, there is a time while men do live (and live most happily) namely, when they are in a state of glory; then they do see the face of God (then face to face, saith Paul) even as the Angels. It is said of them, that they behold the face of God, Matth. 18. 20. Christ saith there, I say to you, that in heaven, their Angels do always behold the face of my Father which is in heaven. So, when men come to be like Angels in a state of glory, they shall also see the face of God. But no man hath seen God at any time, during this life, God in his Essence. For this we have more than one place of Scripture; the same words in the Text are repeated in 1 Joh. 4. 12. No man hath seen God at any time. And Paul hath a place to the same purpose, 1 Tim. 6. 16. Who only hath immortality, dwelling in light which no man can approach unto, whom no man hath seen, nor can see.

There are but three ways that can be imagined, by which man, in a state of mortality, can see God in his Essence: either it must be by his

- Bodily eyes,
- or by the eye of Reason,
- or by the eye of Faith.

But a man cannot see God by any of these, therefore no man can see God in that sense.

First, No man can see God by his Bodily eye; for the very light wherein he dwelleth, is inaccessible to the eye of sense; we cannot so much as see our own souls, or the Angels that are inferior spirits; How then shall we be able, with our bodily eyes, to see the Father of spirits, the Lord of glory? The Israelites could not so much as endure the shining of Moses his face; How then can the eye of the body be imagined capable of that infinite glorious light, that is in the essence of God? And yet there is a place that speaks, as if a man, in the state of mortality, by his bodily eyes, had seen God, Gen. 32. 30. Jacob called the name of the place Penuel; for I have seen God face to face, and my life is preserved. Here is a man in the state of mortality, that saw God face to face. For this ye must know, that Jacob did indeed see God, but God in a representation, not God in his essence. He saw the Second Person in the Trinity in the shape of a man, that wrestled with him. This was all the sight of God that he had. The Second Person in the Trinity, before he took the nature of man, took the shape of man; such a shape had Christ taken here, in which he wrestled with Jacob; and this is that God which Jacob saw face to face, not God in his essence, but God in a representation. And that very thing of God, appearing in the Old Testament in a representation, to the eyes of the body, showeth, that he never appeared to them in his essence, because his representations are many, and his essence is one. He appeared in a Bush to Moses, and to Elijah in a still Voice; to Jacob as a Wrestler, to Joshua as a Captain of the Lord's host. These were all representations, that God was pleased to make of himself; and thus men saw him. But his essence all this while was invisible, neither could it be diversified as his representations were, being but one. That is memorable which Isaiah saith, Isa. 6. 5. Mine eyes have seen the King, the Lord of hosts. The Jews took this advantage against him, and said, he was a false Prophet; Why? He said, he had seen the King, the Lord of hosts; whereas God saith to Moses, Thou canst not see my face and live. Therefore they put him to death. No man can see God in his essence, and live. But Isaiah saw him, and he said true; but it was in a representation

Secondly, No man can see God in his essence, no, not by the eye of Reason. Reason hath but three ways, by which it comes to the knowledge of God, and those are known to Scholars by these names, Via causalitatis, via Remotionis, and via Eminentiae.

First, By way of Causality; and so reason comes to gather of God by all the creatures which it seeth lovely; and looks at all these as effects of God, as the cause of all, and so comes to the knowledge of God as the first cause. Thus Reason collects of God: But how far is this from seeing the essence of God? Reason discovers a God, but not what God is in his Being, only that He is. For, no effect can show the nature of its cause fully, but either such as manifesteth the whole force of the cause, or else such as is of the same kind with the cause; as burning, that showeth the nature of the fire, because the fire, being a natural agent, burns to the utmost of its power. Therefore burning showeth what nature the fire is of, as carrying the nature of the force in it. As a child showeth the nature of the father, because of the same nature with the father. But the creatures cannot show God, because they are of effects different from him. These are parts of the way, but how little proportion is readd of him? The thunder of his power, who can understand? Neither are the creatures of the same rank and kind with God, as the child is with the father; they are all of them finite, God is infinite. So that all that Reason can do this way, is, to gather, that there is a God, but not what he is.

Secondly, There is the way of Remotion, by looking over all the creatures, and by setting aside whatsoever savors of imperfection in them, and ascribing the remainder to God. Thus we say, that God is Immortal, Impassible, Impeccable; because we say, that to die, to suffer, and to sin, are the imperfections of the creature. God cannot sin, God cannot die, God cannot lie, God cannot suffer. But this still comes short of seeing God in his essence; for, by this, we see what God is not, not what he is, by this way of Remotion.

3. The third way, which is a way of Eminency. Reason goeth over the creatures once again, and looks whatsoever is good in them, and savors of perfection in them; and ascribes that to God, as the Author of those perfections. So, when it seeth in Man, wisdom, and strength, and goodness; Reason can ascribe to God (as the cause of them) a more eminent goodness, and wisdom, and strength. And this is the nearest, and the farthest, Reason can go. And yet in all these, it cometh short of the essence of God; because in this way, it findeth out what he is, rather in regard of his qualities, (speaking after the manner of men) then what he is in his essence. Thus we cannot see God in his essence, no not by the eye of Reason.

There is only one more, that is, the eye of Faith, which goeth a great deal further into the knowledge of God, than Reason can; and yet we cannot apprehend God in his essence, no not by the eye of Faith. Thence it is, that faith is opposed to sight, 2 Cor. 5. 7. We walk by faith, and not by sight. Implying, that all the while we have no higher principle than faith in us, all that while we come short of God, to see him face to face. 1 Cor. 13. 12. Now we see through a glass darkly, but then face to face. Then, speaking of a time after this life, when that which is perfect is come, and that which is imperfect shall be done away; Then, face to face, not till then. Here, by the eye of faith, we see as through a glass darkly; These are two excellent expressions, though something darkened by the Translation. For it is, as through a glass, & in a riddle; here is the glass to the eye, and the riddle to the ear; both imply, that faith giveth us but a dark knowledge of God, in comparison of the light of glory. What we see in a glass, we see by reflection; The Angels see God face to face, by direct beams. We see him as in a glass, the glass of the Creatures, and of the Scriptures; There shall be no need of these glasses in Heaven, where all Ordinances shall cease, and God shall be all, in all. But here, as through a glass, and as in a riddle. What men apprehend in a riddle, they may have true apprehensions of it; As in the riddle, that Sampson put forth. But it doth not convey a thing so clearly, as if it were spoken in plain words; Whatsoever we see, we see it, as in a glass. Whatsoever we hear, we hear, as in a riddle; but then, face to face, saith the Apostle; then we shall see him, as he is, 1 Joh. So now, ye have had an explication of this proposition, according to the first sense; That no man hath seen God at any time. That is, No man, in the state of mortality, hath a beatifical vision of God in his Essence.

I proceed now to the second. That, No man here, attaineth to a Scientificall vision of God, in reference to his Counsel; That also is proper to Christ. Compare, if you please, Joh. 6. 46. with Luk. 10. 22. In John, thus of that; No man hath seen the Father, save he which is of God, he hath seen the Father. What is that? Luk. 10. 22. All things are delivered to me of my father, and no man knoweth who the Son is, but the father, and who the father is, but the Son, and he to whom the Son will reveal him; Seeing, is usually put for knowing in Scripture, and seeing of God, for the knowing of his Counsel. This, only Christ doth. Therefore, called the wonderful Counselor, Isa. 9. 6. He could not be a Counselor to us, in discovering the great secrets of God, if he were not first privy to God's secrets. Who but Christ, could have made known that way of salvation, which he hath opened through his own flesh, to the way of Heaven. It was impossible, for Angels, or Men, to have found out a way to have been recovered to God, (when man was once fallen) had not Christ revealed it; This knowledge of God, no man hath. For he saith, Rom. 11. 34. (having said, verse. 33. Oh the depth of the riches, both of the wisdom, and knowledge of God; How unsearchable is his wisdom? He addeth,) Who hath known either the mind of the Lord, or who hath been his Counselor? That, is proper to Christ. No man may assume it; I say no more of it here, because it will come in again in the next Clause. The only begotten Son, who is in the bosom of the Father.

Come we now to the Observation, of the invisibility of God; for Application.

First, By way of reproof, we might from hence take occasion of lashing the Papists in the first place; And in the [Use 1] next place, the disputers of this World, and especially, the Arminians.

The Papists, First, and that both in point of their Idolatry, and of their boasting of their Idolatry.

First, No man hath seen God at any time; And yet they presume to make Images of Him, visible shapes of the Invisible God, Deut. 4. 15, 16. Take ye good heed to yourselves, for ye saw no manner of similitude, on the day that the Lord spake unto you in Horeb, out of the midst of the fire, lest you corrupt yourselves, and make you a graven Image; the similitude of any figure, the likeness of Male, or Female. If we will be worshipping any Image of God, let us worship Christ, who is the express Image of his Father's Person; And no Image of God, but Christ, may be worshipped. They were wont to kiss their Images of old; Ye know what God saith of so many souls, who have not bowed the knee to Baal, nor kissed him. In reference to this, kiss the Son, Psal. 2. No man hath seen God at any time: And yet, if you believe them, they tell you strange stories of some of their Grandees, that have seen the blessed Trinity; as they say of one Matinius, that was continually encompassed with the glorious light, either of the whole Trinity, or of some glorious Person of the Trinity. As he said of a Jesuit, That he lay a long time in prison, because, during his life-time, he had not earnestly desired to see the glorious Trinity. They shall never make me believe, that God will discover to any Jesuit of them all, what he denied to his servant Moses.

I come to what is more for Edification, to refute thegreat disputers of this World; and especially, the Arminians, that speak, as if they were privy to the Counsels of God, and had a Scientificall vision here below; and therefore, will believe no more, then they can bring within the compass of their own reason. Not considering what Job saith, Job 33. 12, 13. Behold, in this thou art not just, I will answer thee, That God is greater then man; why doest thou strive against him? for he giveth not account of any of his matters.

Two Queries are made by Paul, that might stop the mouths of all over-curious Quaerists in the World. Nay, but oh man, Who art thou, that repliest against God? There are too many, that are ready to reply against God, to chop logic with their Maker; when they will not believe, what God revealeth, because they cannot fathome it, 1 Cor. 1. 20. Where is the Wise, and the Scribe, and the Disputer of this World? The disputer of this world, (and, Emphatically, Of this world;) because, there will be no disputing in the next World. Then cometh the day of (◊) Revelation of the righteous judgments of God, as Paul speaks, Rom. 2. When God will make it apparent to every man, that, whatsoever he hath said, is True; and whatsoever he hath done, is Just; whether we can believe the truth of the one, and consent to the Justice of the other, yea, or no. Therefore, it is good to take the counsel of Augustine; Vis tu disputare mecum? Potiùs admirare mecum: Wilt thou be disputing with me? rather wonder with me, and cry, Oh Profunditas, Oh the depth! Let us, both thou, and I, agree in fearing, and trembling at the Counsels of God; lest we, both, perish for our Curiosity, in searching too far into them. And of all Disputers, none more guilty in this kind than the Arminians, therefore I name them. Men that take upon them to state the Decrees of God, as if they had been of his Council, when he made them; men that seem to wade where Paul was past his depth, which made him cry, O the depth! They make it clear to you, to give you a reason of all God's Decrees, if you take for granted what they say. If you ask them, Why Peter was elected, and Judas not? they say, Because God foresaw Peter would believe, and Judas not. Why Peter was saved, and Judas not? Because Judas willed to persevere in sin, and Peter did not. Are not here men of God's Council, that leave nothing unsearched? Saith Paul, when he was discoursing of these high points, Rom. 9. 13, 14. It is written, Jacob have I loved, and Esau have I hated. What shall we say then? Is there unrighteousness with God? God forbid. He speaketh as a man puzl'd and non-plussed at the thoughts of this, how God should come to choose Jacob, and hate Esau. He saw no unrighteousness with God; God hath done it, and therefore Just. And yet these people speak, as if they could have fetched Paul out of his non-plus, which is but to say, That God foresaw that Jacob would believe, and Esau would not; therefore he loved the one, and hated the other. So as a man; according to this reckoning, may learn more in Arminius his School in a few days, then Paul had learned in the third heavens. Let us take this for a conclusion: As God cann• 〈◇〉 seen in his Essence, so not known in his Counsels, to any man on this side Heaven.

2. The second Use is this, No man hath seen God at any time. Why then, let us all from hence be set to long for [Use 2] heaven, where we shall enjoy that, which is not attainable by any man here below; a sight of God, a beatifical sight, a scientificall sight: ye shall have them both there in one place, 1 Cor. 13. 12, 13. Now we see through a glass darkly, but then face to face; there is the beatifical. Now I know in part, but then shall I know even as also I am known; there is the scientificall. St. John tells you in another place, a speech, that might set the hearts of the people of God a leaping within them for joy, to think of that day; 1 Joh. 3. 2. Beloved, now are we the sons of God, and it dothnot yet appear what we shall be: but we know, that when he shall appear, we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is. Who would not long for this day, and for this appearance? When he shall appear, we shall see him as he is. No day so joyful as this, to the people of God. The Sabbath, that is a joyful day; therefore the Saints have learned, to call the Sabbath a delight, as it is in Isaiah. Behold here a rest for the people of God, an eternal Sabbath, a Sabbath that hath no working-day after it; a Sabbath, which whosoever hath once arrived at, shall rest from his labors for evermore. It was a joyful day, that, when the people of Israel passed over Jordan, and got into the land of Canaan, which they had been so long looking for. Think of that spiritual Canaan, of which the other was but a type, flowing with better milk and honey, in likeness to God, and vision of God. We shall be like him, and see him as he is. If Moses longed for that, think what cause the people of God have, to long for the other, because there, they shall have the sight of God. The year of Jubilee was a joyful time, before the appearing of Christ. When we shall be restored to that we fell from in Adam, we shall partake of the glorious liberty of the sons of God, as the Apostle speaketh. But that which is so joyful, is the sight of God, which cannot be attained till then. The very sight of Ghrist in the flesh afforded much joy. Simeon got him in his arms, and desired to die, Now let thy servant depart in peace, for mine eyes have seen thy salvation. The Greeks, Joh. 12. they came to Philip, and said, Sir, we would see Jesus. It was a joyful sight to see Christ, even in the flesh, What is it then to see Christ in his glory, and God in his Essence, as far as a finite creature can be capable of such a sight. If the Disciples upon the Mount were so over-joyed with the sight of Christ, and two glorified creatures with him, Moses and Elias, so as Peter forgot himself there; What joy will there be in the souls of men, that come to see Christ attended with thousand thousand times ten thousand Saints and Angels, not Christ transfigured, but Christ in his utmost glory? Wonder not, if I speak but Balbusanter of these things, for all words come short; let us make it up in affections. Learn to long for this sight, and for that place where it is attainable.

But then take this with you, before I leave the Point, Be careful, as you desire to have that, which you cannot attain here, a beatifical and scientificall sight of God; be careful to walk in Purity, and in Peace; for the sight of God is promised upon these conditions.

First, In Purity. Matth. 5. 8. Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God. It is not for every eye to see God; the pure in heart, they shall see him. Sore eyes cannot endure to see the light, impure souls shall never be honored with the sight of God. The Jews, whom Christ was speaking to here, were men that stood much upon legal purifications: He putteth them off from them, and saith, Blessed are the pure in heart. A man that was not legally pure, might not come to see God in the Sanctuary; so will moral uncleanness much more keep us from the sight of God in Heaven. Walk in Purity.

I, and in Peace too; so saith the Apostle, Heb. 12. 14. Follow peace with all men, and holiness, without which, no man shall see the Lord. As not without holiness, so not without peace. He that hopeth to see the Prince of peace in another world to his comfort, must carry the Son of peace here. That of Augustine is an excellent speech, which he writeth concerning this subject of seeing God; (in his hundred and twelfth Epistle, where he had disputed largely about this thing, he taketh himself off, and saith,)

Let us be wise •o sobriety, and not be too full of heat. In the carrying on of this Argument, let us dispute fairly, lest while we seek, in a way of contention and bitterness, how God may be seen, we lose that peace, without which, God cannot be seen.

Follow peace and holiness, without which, it is impossible to see the Lord.

I come now to the second thing, the Intimacy of Christ with the Father, which lieth in these words,

The only-begotten Son, which lieth in the bosom of the Father.

Christ is the only begotten Son, that is in the bosom of the Father: that lieth clearly in my Text. Of his being the only begotten Son, I shall need to say nothing now, because I spake before to it upon the fourteenth Verse, And the Word was made flesh, and dwelt amongst us, and we beheld his glory, as of the only begotten of the Father, full of grace and truth.

This expression is to be opened here, Which is in the bosom of the Father, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 which is, not, which was to be before the Incarnation; or, which was to be in the bosom of the Father, after the Ascension; but, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, which is in the bosom of the Father. When these words were uttered; and in every moment of time; yea, from eternity, Christ is in the bosom of the Father.

The phrase, I take it, implieth these three things.

- The unity of Natures.
- The dear nesse of Affections.
- The communication of Secrets.

First, It implieth unity of Natures; and so there is something more in 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, then 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉; more in unity of Natures, then distinction of Persons. In the bosom of the Father. The word is, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉, not 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉. But, for the unity of Natures, they use 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉. Thus the bosom is the child's place. Look to the Scripture-expressions. Ye find Moses speaking of himself as a father, carrying Israel, as a child, in his bosom, Numb. 11. 12. Have I conceived all this people, have I begotten them, that thou shouldst say unto me, Carry them in thy bosom? And so, in Nathan's Parable, 2 Sam. 12. 3. A poor man had nothing, save only a little ewe-lamb, which he had brought and nourished up, and it grew up together with him, and with his children; it did eat of his own meat, and drank of his own cup, and lay in his bosom, and was unto him as a daughter. A daughter in the bosom. And so accordingly here, The only begotten Son, that is in the bosom of the Father, to show the unity of Natures that is between the Father and the Son; Christ being God, co-equal with the Father.

Secondly, As it implieth unity of Natures, so it implieth dear nesse of Affection. Bosom, as it is for children, so for nearness of Relation. The wife of thy bosom; and, The husband of thy bosom. Deut. 28. 54. His eye shall be evil towards the wife of his bosom; and verse 56. Her eye, speaking of a wife, shall be evil against the husband of her bosom. Because of those dear affections, which that nearness of Relation, as that of Marriage calleth for, between man and wife. John, the beloved of the Lord, ye find him lying nearest Christ, even in his bosom, Joh. 13. 23. And there was leaning on Jesus his bosom one of his disciples; whom Jesus loved. The posture of leaning upon Christ's bosom, was an argument that Christ loved him. In this sense, Jesus is the Son of the Father's bosom, because the Son of the Father's love. He shall translate us into the kingdom of the Son of his love. This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased, saith the Voice from heaven.

Thirdly, Being in the bosom, implieth communication of Secrets; the bosom is a place for them. It is a speech of Tully to a friend, that had betrusted him with a secret, Crede mihi, &c. Believe me, saith he, what thou hast committed to me, it is in my bosom still, I am not ungirt, to let it slip out. But Scripture addeth this hint too, where it speaketh of the bosom as the place of Secrets, Prov. 17. 23. A wicked man taketh a gift out of the bosom, to pervert the ways of judgment, speaking of a bribe. Prov. 21. 14. A gift in secret pacifieth anger, and a reward in the bosom expiateth wrath. Here is secret and bosom all one, as gift and reward are one. So, Christ lieth in the Father's bosom; this intimateth his being conscious to all the Father's secrets. So have ye an opening of this phrase. Much is to be learned from it.

First, Seeing Christ's being in the bosom of the Father implieth unity of natures, this should teach us to give the same worship to Christ, as we give to the Father, because there is the same nature in both. It is that, that Christ expecteth and calleth for, Joh. 5. 23. The Father judgeth no man, but hath committed all judgment to the Son, that all men should honor the Son, even as they honor the Father. He that honoreth not the Son, honoreth not the Father which hath sent him. Jesus Christ requireth the same honor, which we give to God the Father; it is fit he should have it, and it is fit this honor should be pleaded for, now in this age, wherein many plead against the Divinity of Christ. We should give him the same honor that we give to the Father. Heb. 1. 6. When he bringeth him in as the first-born of the world, he saith, Let all the Angels in heaven worship him. If they, then how ought all the world to worship him? We should give him the honor of Invocation, praying to him, as Stephen did, when they stoned him; he called upon God, and said, Lord Jesus receive my spirit. As with Worship, and Invocation, so with Faith. It is said, that Abraham gave glory to God, by believing in him. We should give honor to Christ, by exercising the act of believing in him; this he called for, Let not your hearts be troubled; ye believe in God, believe also in me. He is the proper object of faith, as he justifieth. Circumferentia fidei est Verbum Dei, sed Centrum est Deus. The whole Word of God is the circumference of faith; everything learned in it, is to be believed: But the center of faith (as the Word justifieth) that, is the Word, God; that, is Jesus Christ, blessed for evermore.

Secondly, His being in the bosom of the Father, implieth the dear nesse of affection, between the Father, and the Son. And this teacheth us (who are bound to be followers of God, as dear children) to set our affections upon Christ, because God doth so; He, who is the Son of God's love, should be the object of our love. God hath a bosom for Christ, we should have a bosom for Christ too; It is said of Ignatius, that, after his death, his body being opened, the name Jesus was found written in his heart. That is a fable, yet hath a good moral; every soul should have Jesus written in the heart; because the love of the heart should be bestowed upon Christ, as the noblest object, and best deserving it.

Again, ye have an expression that comes home, to that in the Text, Cant. 1. 13. (ye shall see where the Church laid Christ;) A bundle of myrrh, is my well-beloved to me, He shall lie all night between my breasts. Here the Church maketh a room for Christ to lie in her bosom; This is a most significant expression, This comparing Christ to a bundle of myrrh, which is of a bitter taste, but a sweet smell. And so, fitter to represent Christ Crucified; in whose death, there was a concurrence of these two, bitterness, and sweetness. Nothing so bitter in itself, as the passion of Christ; the token of which, was the pascal Lamb, which was to be eaten with bitter herbs. He endured more, then we can comprehend; His own soul only, could know that bitterness. As there was a great deal of bitterness in it, so a great deal of sweetness too, as in myrrh; He offered himself to God a sacrifice, of a sweet smelling savor, Ephes. 5. 2. saith the Apostle. Myrrh, they say, is of special use to keep from putrefaction, to dry up moist humors; therefore, they took myrrh to inbalm Christ's body withal; And such drieth up the superfluous humors of the soul. As Physicians say, That in nature, a bundle of myrrh between the breasts is Cordial; surely, we have no such Cordials as Christ in the bosom. Therefore, A bundle of myrrh my beloved is to me, He shall lie all night between my breasts; Nothing so bitter as my sins were, but the crucifying of Christ; and yet nothing so sweet, as that Christ was crucified for my sins, to take them away. Therefore, let us find a bosom to lay Christ in, for the time to come; If we will be glad of his bosom, when we die. He will be content to lie in ours now, if we will but receive him; Certainly, it concerneth us to know what we do with our affections: How we bestow our love. Loe, here is an object, to be beloved, more then the wife of the bosom, more then the husband of the bosom; Here is the Mediator in the bosom. If anything will draw-out love from us, it is the consideration of that love, which he hath shown to us; Love is the Load-stone of love. See how he hath opened his bosom to us, how he hath exceeded all the patterns of love; We find in Scripture, Rebecca loved Jacob, better then Esau; Therefore, she put him into a way of getting the blessing. And when Jacob was afraid of the event, lest his father should curse him, The curse be upon me my son, saith she; The Lord putteth us into a way of getting an eternal blessing from God the Father, and for the procuring of this, he himself is become a curse for us. He was made sin for us, and a curse, that we might be made the righteousness of God in him. Jacob loved Rachel, better then Leah; therefore, was content to serve so many years. For us, the Lord took upon him the form of a servant, and in that form served for us three and thirty years, and more, here in the flesh. Jonathan loved David, and, to manifest his love, he put his own garment upon him; Christ so loved us, as to clothe us with his own righteousness. David loved Mephibosheth, and therefore set him at his own Table, to eat bread continually, though he were lame. Christ so loveth us, notwithstanding all our lameness, and imperfections, as to provide a Table for us, where we shall one day sit down with Isaac, and Jacob, in the Kingdom of Heaven. Beloved, do you provide a room for Christ in your bosoms; and he will provide a room for you in Abraham's bosom, yea, in his own.

Thirdly, This being in the Fathers bosom, implieth Communication of secrets. Let us learn from hence, to go to Christ for Illumination, that he who knows the secrets of the Father, would discover them to us; so far as they are necessary for our salvation, or the edification of our brethren. Whither should we go, but to the great Counselor, for advice? The Disciples took this course, Luk. 11. 1. One of the Disciples, said to him, Lord, teach us to pray. So, Lord teach us to hear, Lord teach us to meditate, and, Lord teach us to confer; to go to Christ for all teaching. If any man want wisdom, let him ask it of God, Jam. 1. 5. Who giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not; we cannot be wise to Salvation, unless Christ be made wisdom to us: otherwise, the Devil will be too hard for us, he is so cunning, and subtle, as to make fools of us. As soon as a subtle man will cheat a Child of what he hath, so soon will the Devil cheat us; There are wiles of the Devil, depths of Satan, mysteries of Iniquity. How shall we be able to shun these, to avoid the danger of them, if we be not instructed by Him, who knoweth the secrets of the Father? As there are mysteries of Iniquity, so of Godliness too. The Gospel it self, Paul calleth it, wisdom in a Mystery; And that even amongst the perfect, 1 Cor. 2. 6. Howbeit, we speak wisdom amongst them that are perfect, ver. 7. We speak the wisdom of God in a mystery. Which mystery? wisdom in a mystery: such, is the Gospel. So mysterious, that one mystery is wrapit in another; wisdom in a Mystery, and that hid, and that amongst the perfect. How shall we come to find out this wisdom, if the Lord Jesus, the wisdom of God, be not made wisdom to us? As there are mysteries in every point of Doctrine, so there are secrets in every point of Practice; which without the help of Christ, we cannot come to be made masters of, Psal. 25. 14. The secrets of the Lord are with them that fear him; In every duty we can put our hands to, there is a secret. It is a Common thing to pray, but to pray in the Holy Ghost, is a great secret; It is a Common thing to come to the Lord's Table but to discern the Lord's body, that is a secret. It is a Common thing to hear the word, but so, as it may be mixed with faith in us, that is a secret; To keep the Sabbath is a common thing; but, to call the Sabbath a delight, that is a secret. Would we be acquainted with the secrets of the power of godliness, let us go to Jesus Christ, who is only conscious to all the secrets of God; seek to him, that he would reveal them to us by his Spirit; for, He is in the bosom of the Father. So I have done with the second thing.

I come now to the third thing, concerning the discovery of the Father by Christ.

He hath declared him.

You have heard of a twofold sight of God, a Beatifical, and Scientificall vision.

A Beatifical Vision, in Reference to his Essence.

A Scientificall Vision, in Reference to his Counsel.

And that Christ, the only begotten Son, may not be excluded from either of these; the next Clause implieth, Which is in the bosom of his Father. I say, It implieth, That Christ the Son hath a beatifical vision of God the Father, even in his essence; here, while upon the face of the earth, amongst the Children of men. And besides this, He must needs see the essence of God, that is, essentially, God himself.

And His lying in the bosom of the Father, implieth, That he could not but have the scientificall vision of the Father; Hence we infer, that none is fitter, to declare the Father, then he that saw the Father, and none more able to show forth the mind and the Counsel of the Father, then he that lay in the Father's bosom.

The only begotten Son, which is in the bosom of the Father, He hath declared him.

The word in the Original is, 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 . There is an Emphasis in the expression, and Erasmus noteth, that 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 , de eo dicitur, qui res alioqui latentes, & obscuras, plane ac dilucide declarat; It is oftentimes spoken of him, that revealeth obscure and hidden things, and maketh manifest, things otherwise not to be revealed. And it is properly to be applied, to Divine and Heavenly Mysteries; Hence there ariseth a difference between 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 , and 〈 in non-Latin alphabet 〉 . The first is properly applied to divine and heavenly mysteries; the other to vulgar; and things more obvious, and common. And some think that Christ in the beginning of this Chapter, is called 〈 in non-

Latin alphabet › , the Word, because he is ‹ in non-Latin alphabet › , the Father's Interpreter; or he that declareth the mind, and will of the Father.

So then, Concerning the discovery of the Father by Christ, two things are to be observed.

- First, The person declaring, Christ.
- Secondly, The person declared, the Father.

First, The person declaring. From hence note two things.

- The Fitness of the Messenger.
- The Fullness of the Message.

First, The fitness of the Messenger, by whom in these latter times, the deep mysteries of the Father's Divine essence, and will, (so far as is necessary to Salvation) is declared. For Jesus Christ the only begotten Son of God, that lay in the bosom of the Father, who is the express Image of his Person, Heb. 1. 3. hath shown to us the Invisible glory, and made it visible; so far, as we are capable to behold it. An expression you have to confirm this out of the mouth of Christ himself, Matth. 11. 27. All things are delivered unto me of my Father, and no man knoweth the Son, but the Father, neither knoweth any man the Father, save the Son, and he to whom soever the Son will reveal him, Joh. 6. 46. No man hath seen the Father, save he that is of God, he hath seen the Father.

Secondly, The fullness of the Message, that Christ hath declared, which is indeed, Every thing necessary for man's Salvation; and whatsoever Christ hath declared, is true, profitable, wholesome, and sufficient. Therefore, no leaving the Word of Christ, and flying to human Traditions: for saith he, Joh. 3. 11. Verily, verily, I say unto you, we speak that we do know, and testify that we have seen, And, Hebr. 1. 1. God, who at sundry times, and in diverse manners, spake in times past unto the fathers by the Prophets, hath in these last days spoken unto us by his Son. The words in the original are, ‹ in non-Latin alphabet › , by piece-meal, darkly, by riddles, and visions formerly: but now, he hath clearly declared, not only himself, by his Son, but whatsoever else (so much as our frail natures and weak capacities can reach unto) tending to the salvation of all the Elect of God.

Secondly, The next thing is the Person declared, That is the Father, or the mind, and will of the Father, or, more plainly: Christ, that lay in the bosom of the Father, hath declared from the Father's bosom, the glorious mystery of man's Redemption; his Justification by faith, and the way to everlasting happiness, and glory.

I now go on to as brief an Application.

First, Doth Christ declare the mind of the Father? get then Intimacy, and Familiarity with Jesus Christ; Take Him into thy heart, that lay in the bosom of the Father. For what greater stay can we have in the time of trouble, and what more supporting Comfort and consolation in the hour of Temptation, than to be acquainted with, and united to him, that is the Churches Head; and our Lord, and Savior, the only begotten Son of God; and to lie in the bosom of the Father?

Secondly, Take notice of the Dignity of a Christian; that hath so able, and so gracious an Interpreter, even the Eternal Son of God. He it is, that to us declareth the will, and layeth open the whole Counsel of his Father.

Thirdly, Let dignity oblige you to duty. If Jesus Christ declareth the will of the Father: then, upon the life of your souls, it exceedingly much concerneth you diligently to observe, and carefully to attend unto what Christ declareth; Learning always to submit to the will of the Father, thus declared by his Son, that his Name alone may be glorified, and our souls Eternally saved.

FINIS. ...