THE GREEK ORIGINALS OF THE PLAYS IN THIS VOLUME

In this and each succeeding volume a summary will be given of the consensus of opinion ¹ regarding the Greek originals of the plays in the volume and regarding the time of presentation in Rome of Plautus's adaptations. It may be that some general readers will be glad to have even so condensed an account of these matters as will be offered them.

The original of the Amphitruo is not now thought to have been a work of the Middle Comedy but of the New Comedy, very possibly Philemon's Nig $\mu \alpha \kappa \rho \dot{\alpha}$. A clue to the Greek play's date is found in the description of Amphitryon's battle with the Teloboians, a battle fought after the manner of those of the Diadochi who came into prominence at the death of Alexander the Great. The date of the Plautine adaptation of this play, as in the case of the Asinaria, Aulularia, Bacchides, and Captivi, is quite uncertain, beyond the fact that it no doubt belongs, like almost all of his extant work, to the last two decades of his life, 204–184 B.C. The Amphitruo is one of the five ¹ plays in the first two volumes whose scene is not laid in Atliens.

THE GREEK ORIGINALS

The $Ova\gamma \delta s$ of a certain Demophilus, otherwise unknown to us, was the original of the Asinaria. The assertion of Libanus that he is his master's Salus is thought to be a fling at the honours decreed certain of the Diadochi, who were called, while still alive, $\Sigma \omega r \hat{\eta} \rho \epsilon s$. This possibility, together with the fact that the Pellaean merchant and the Rhodian Periphanes travel to Athens—northern Greece and the Aegaean therefore being pacified and Athens at peace with Macedon—would indicate that the $Ova\gamma \delta s$ was written while Demetrius Poliorcetes controlled Macedon, 294–288 B.C.

Very slender evidence connects the Aulularia with some unknown play of Menander's in which a miser is represented δεδιὼς μή τι τῶν ἔνδον ὁ καπνὸς οἴχοιτο φέρων. Euclio's distress 6 at seeing any smoke escape from his house seems at least to suggest that Plautus may have borrowed the Aulularia from Menander. The allusion to praefectum mulierum, 7 rather than censorem, would seem to show that in the original γυναικονόμον had been written: this would prove the Greek play to have been presented while Demetrius of Phalerum was in power at Athens (317–307 B.C.), where he introduced this detested office, which was done away with by 307 B.C.

THE GREEK ORIGINALS

Ritschl 1 has shown clearly enough that the original of the Bacchides was Menander's Δi_s $\hat{\epsilon} \hat{\epsilon} a \pi a \tau \hat{\omega} \nu$. The fact that Athens, Samos, and Ephesus are at peace, that the Aegaean is not swept by hostile fleets, that one can travel freely between Athens and Phocis, together with the allusion to Demetrius, 2 lead one to believe that the Δi_s $\hat{\epsilon} \hat{\epsilon} a \pi a \tau \hat{\omega} \nu$ was written either between the years 316–307 or 298–296 B.c.

The original of the Captivi is quite unknown, while the war between the Aetolians and Eleans gives the only clue to the date of this original. Hueffner ³ considers it probable that the war was that between Aristodemus and Alexander, and the Greek play was produced shortly after 314 B.C. Others ⁴ assume that the scene of the play would not be Aetolia unless Aetolia had become an important state, and that the war was therefore one of the third century B.C.

LITTLE is known of the life of Titus Maccius He was born about 255 B.C. at Sarsina, Plautus. in Umbria; it is said that he went to Rome at an early age, worked at a theatre, saved some money, lost it in a mercantile venture, returned to Rome penniless, got employment in a mill and wrote, during his leisure hours, three plays. These three plays were followed by many more than the twenty extant, most of them written, it would seem, in the latter half of his life, and all of them adapted from the comedies of various Greek dramatists, chiefly of the New Comedy. Adaptations rather than translations they certainly were. Apart from the many allusions in his comedies to customs and conditions distinctly Roman, there is evidence enough in Plautus's language and style that he was not a close translator. Modern translators who have struggled vainly to reproduce faithfully in their own tongues, even in prose, the countless puns and quips, the incessant alliteration and assonance in the Latin lines, would be the last to admit that Plautus, writing so much, writing in verse, and writing with such careless, jovial, exuberant ease, was nothing but a translator in the narrow sense of the term.

Very few of his extant comedies can be dated, so far as the year of their production in Rome is concerned, with any great degree of certainty. The Miles Gloriosus appeared about 206, the Cistellaria about 202, Stichus in 200. Pseudolus in 191 B.c.; the Truculentus, like Pseudolus, was composed when Plautus was an old man, not many years before his death in 184 B.c.

Welcome as a full autobiography of Plautus would be, in place of such scant and tasteless biographical morsels as we do have, only less welcome, perhaps, would be his own stage directions for his plays, supposing him to have written stage directions and to have written them with something more than even modern fullness. We should learn how he met the stage conventions and limitations of his day; how successfully he could, by make-up and mannerism, bring on the boards palpably different persons in the Scapins and Bobadils and Doll Tear-sheets that on the printed page often seem so confusingly similar; and most important, we should learn precisely what sort of dramatist he was and wished to be.

If Plautus himself greatly cared, or expected his restless, uncultivated, fun-seeking audience to care, about the construction of his plays, one must criticize him and rank him on a very different basis than if his main, and often his sole, object was to amuse the groundlings. If he often took himself and his art with hardly more seriousness than does the writer of the vaudeville skit or musical comedy of to-day, if he often wished primarily to gain the immediate laugh, then much of Langen's long list of the playwright's dramatic delinquencies is somewhat beside its intended point.

And in large measure this—to hold his audience by any means—does seem to have been his ambition: if the joke mars the part, down with the part; if the ludicrous scene interrupts the development of the plot, down with the plot. We have plenty of verbal evidence that the dramatist frequently chose to let his characters become caricatures: we have some verbal evidence that their "stage business" was sometimes made laughably extravagant: in many cases it is sufficiently obvious that he expected his actors to indulge in grotesqueries, well or ill timed, no matter, provided they brought guffaws. It is probable, therefore, that in many other cases, where the tone and "stage business" are not as obvious, where an actor's high seriousness might elicit catcalls, and burlesque certainly would elicit chuckles, Plautus wished his players to avoid the catcalls.

This is by no means the universal rule. In the writer of the Captivi, for instance, we are dealing with a dramatist whose aims are different and higher. Though Lessing's encomium of the play is one to which not all of us can assent, and though even the Captivi shows some technical flaws, it is a work which must be rated according to the standards we apply to a Minna von Barnhelm rather than according to those applied to a Pinafore: here, certainly, we have comedy, not farce.

But whatever standards be applied to his plays their outstanding characters, their amusing situations, their vigour and comicality of dialogue remain. Euclio and Pyrgopolynices, the straits of the brothers Menaechmus and the postponement of Argyrippus's desires, the verbal encounter of Tranio and Grumio, of Trachalio and the fishermen—characters, situations, and dialogues such as these should survive because of their own excellence, not because of modern imitations and parallels such as Harpagon and Parolles, the misadventures of the brothers Antipholus and Juliet's difficulties with her nurse, the remarks of Petruchio to the tailor, of Touchstone to William.

Though his best drawn characters can and should stand by themselves, it is interesting to note how many favourite personages in the modern drama and in modern fiction Plautus at least prefigures. Long though the list is, it does not contain a large proportion of thoroughly respectable names. Plautus rarely introduces us to people, male or female, whom we should care to have long in the same house with us. A real lady seldom appears in these comedies, and—to approach a paradox when she does she usually comes perilously close to being no lady: the same is usually true of the real gentleman. The generalization in the Epilogue of The Captives may well be made particular: "Plautus finds few plays such as this which make good men better." Yet there is little in his plays which makes men—to say nothing of good men—worse. A bluff Shakespearean coarseness of thought and expression there often is, together with a number of atrocious characters and scenes and situations. But compared with the, worst of a Congreve or a Wycherley, compared with the worst of our own contemporary plays and musical comedies, the worst of Plautus, now because of its being too revolting, now because of its being too laughable, is innocuous. His moral land is one of black and white, mostly black, without many of those really dangerous half-lights and shadows in which too many of our present day playwrights virtuously invite us to skulk and peer and speculate.

Comparatively harmless though they are, the translator has felt obliged to dilute certain phrases and lines.

The text accompanying his version is that of Leo, published by Weidmann, 1895-96. In the few cases where he has departed from this text brief critical notes are given: a few changes in punctuation have been accepted without comment. In view of the wish of the Editors of the Library that the text pages be printed without unnecessary defacements, it has seemed best to omit the lines that Leo brackets as un-Plautine 1: attention is called to the omission in each case and the omitted lines are given in the note: the numbering, of course, is kept unchanged. Leo's daggers and asterisks indicating corruption and lacunæ are omitted, again with brief notes in each case.

The translator gladly acknowledges his indebtedness to several of the English editors of the plays, notably to Lindsay, and to two or three English translators, for a number of phrases much more happily turned by them than by himself: the difficulty of rendering verse into prose—if one is to remain as close as may be to the spirit and letter of the verse, and at the same time not disregard entirely the contributions made by the metre to gaiety and gravity of tone—is sufficient to make him wish to mitigate his failure by whatever means. He is also much indebted to Professors Charles Knapp, K. C. M. Sills, and F. E. Woodruff for many valuable suggestions.

ARGUMENT OF THE PLAY (I)

While Amphitryon was engaged in a war with his foes, the Teloboians, Jupiter assumed his appearance and took the loan of his wife, Alemena. Mercury takes the form of an absent slave, Sosia, and Alemena is deceived by the two impostors. After the real Amphitryon and Sosia return they both are deluded in extraordinary fashion. This leads to an altercation and quarrel between wife and husband, until there comes from the heavens, with a peal of thunder, the voice of Jupiter, who owns that he has been the guilty lover.

ARGUMENT OF THE PLAY (II)

Jupiter, being seized with love for Alcmena, changed his form to that of her husband, Amphitryon, while he was doing battle with his enemies in defence of his country. Mercury, in the guise of Sosia, seconds his father and dupes both servant and master on their return. Amphitryon storms at his wife: charges of adultery, too, are bandied back and forth between him and Jupiter. Blepharo is appointed arbiter, but is unable to decide which is the real Amphitryon. They learn the whole truth at last, and Alcmena gives birth to twin sons.

PROLOGUE

SPOKEN BY THE GOD MERCURY

According as ye here assembled would have me prosper you and bring you luck in your buyings and in your sellings of goods, yea, and forward you in all things; and according as ye all would have me find your business affairs and speculations happy outcome in foreign lands and here at home, and crown your present and future undertakings with fine, fat profits for evermore; and according as ye would have me bring you and all yours glad news, reporting and announcing matters which most contribute to your common good (for ye doubtless are aware ere now that 'tis to me the other gods have yielded and granted plenipotence o'er messages and profits); according as ye would have me bless you in these things, then in such degree will ye (suddenly dropping his pomposity) keep still while we are acting this play and all be fair and square judges of the performance.

Now I will tell you who bade me come, and why I came, and likewise myself state my own name. Jupiter bade me come: my name is Mercury (pauses, evidently hoping he has made an impression). My father has sent me here to you to make a plea, yea, albeit he knew that whatever was told you in way of command you would do, inasmuch as he realized that you revere and dread him as men should Jupiter. But the fact remains that he has bidden me make this request in suppliant wise, with gentle, kindly words. (confidentially) For you see, that Jupiter that "bade me come here" is just like any one of you in his horror of (rubbing his shoulders reflectively) trouble 1: his mother being human, also his father, it should not seem strange if he does feel apprehensive regarding himself. Yes, and the same is true of me, the son of Jupiter: once my father has some trouble I am afraid I shall catch it, too. (rather pompously again) Wherefore I come in peace and peace do I bring to you. It is a just and trifling request I wish you to grant: for I am sent as a just pleader pleading with the just for what is just. It would be unfitting, of course, for unjust favours to be obtained from the just, while looking for just treatment from the unjust is folly; for unfair folk of that sort neither know nor keep justice. Now then, pay attention all of you to what I am about to say. Our wishes should be yours: we deserve it of you, my father and I, of you and of your state. well, why should I-after the fashion of other gods. Now first as to the favour I have come to ask, and then you shall hear the argument of our tragedy. What? Frowning because I said this was to be a tragedy? I am a god: I'll transform it. I'll convert this same play from tragedy to

I understand your feelings in the matter perfectly. I shall mix things up: let it be tragi-comedy. Of course it would never do for me to make it comedy out and out. with kings and gods on the boards. How about it, then? Well, in view of the fact that there is a slave part in it, I shall do just as I said and make it tragi-comedy. Now here is the favour Jove bade me ask of you: (with great solemnity) let inspectors go from seat to seat throughout the house, and should they discover claqueurs planted for the benefit of any party, let them take as security from all such in the house—their togas. there be those who have solicited the palm for actors, or for any artist-whether by letter, or by personal solicitation, or through an intermediaryor further, if the aediles do bestow the said palm upon anyone unfairly, Jove doth decree that the selfsame law obtain as should the said party solicit guiltily, for himself or for another, public office. Tis worth has won your wars for you, saith he, not solicitation or unfairness: why should not the same law hold for player as for noblest patriot? Worth, not hired support, should solicit victory. He who plays his part aright ever has support enough, if it so be that honour dwells in those whose concern it is to judge his acts. This injunction, too, did Jove lay upon me: that inspectors should be appointed for the actors, to the end that whosoever has enjoined claqueurs to clap himself, or whosoever has endeavoured to compass the failure of another, may have his player's costume cut to shreds, also his hide. I would not have you wonder why Jove is now regardful of actors; do not so: he himself, Jove, will take part in this comedy. What? Surprised? As if it were actually a new departure, this, Jove's turning actor! Why, just last year when the actors on this very stage called upon Jupiter, he came, and helped them out. This play, then, Jove himself will act in to-day, and I along with him. Now give me your attention while I unfold the argument of our comedy.

This city here is Thebes. In that house there (pointing) dwells Amphitryon, born in Argos, of an Argive father: and his wife is Alcmena, Electrus's daughter. At present this Amphitryon is at the head of the Theban army, the Thebans being at war with the Teloboians. Before he himself left to join his troops, his wife, Alcmena, was with child by him. (apologetically) Now I think you know already what my father is like—how free he is apt to be in a good many cases of this sort and what an impetuous lover he is, once his fancy is taken. Well. Alcmena caught his fancy, without her husband knowing it, and he enjoyed her and got her with child. So now Alcmena, that you may see it quite clearly, is with child by both of them, by her husband and by almighty Jove. And my father is there inside this very moment with her in his arms, and it is on this account that the present night has been prolonged while he enjoys the society of his heart's delight. All this in the guise of Amphitryon, you understand.

¹ An allusion to some play in which Jupiter appeared in time to save some situation.

AMPHITRYON

Now don't be surprised at this get-up of mine and because I appear here in the character of a slave as I do: I am going to submit to you a new version of a worn and ancient tale, hence my appearance in a new get-up. The point is, my father Jupiter is now inside there, mark you. He has turned himself into the very image of Amphitryon, and all the servants that see him believe that's who he is. See how he can change his skin when he likes! And as for me, I have assumed the form of Amphitryon's slave Sosia, who went away to the army with him, my idea being to subserve my amorous sire and not have the domestics ask who I am when they see me busy about the house here continually. As it is, when they think I am a servant and one of their own number, not a soul will ask me who I am or what I've come for.

So now my father is inside indulging his heart's desire as he lies there with his arms around the lady-love he particularly dotes on. He is telling Alcmena what happened during the campaign: and she all the time thinking him her husband when he's not. On he goes there with his stories of putting the legions of the foe to flight and being presented with prizes galore. The prizes Amphitryon did receive there we stole-things my father fancies do come easy to him! Now Amphitryon will return from the army to-day, and the slave I am representing, too. To make it easier for you to tell us apart I shall always wear this little plume on my hat: yes, and as for my father he will have a little gold tassel hanging from his: Amphitryon will not have this mark. They are marks that none of the household here will be able to see, but (stopping and peering around timorously) Who's a bolder man, a more audacious man than I amknow all about the young bloods and their capers, I do, yet here I am strolling around all alone at this time of night! (seems to hear something and jumps) What if the police should lock me up in jail? To-morrow I should be taken out of that preserve closet and get served—to a rope's end; and not a word would they let me say for myself,1 and not a bit of help could I get from master, and there wouldn't be a soul but what would reckon I deserved a hiding. Those eight strong wardens would pound my poor carcass just as if I was an anvil: that is how I should be entertained on coming home from abroad—a public reception. (disgustedly) It's master's impatience forced me into this, routing me out from the harbour at this time of night, against my will. Might have sent me on the same errand by daylight, mightn't he? This is where it comes hard slaving it for a nabob, this is where a plutocrat's servant is worse off-night and day there's work enough and more for him, no end, always something to be done, yes, or said, so that you can't rest. Sos. (frightened again) I need a drubbing, I do, drudge that I am. I was not too quick, was I, to think of addressing the gods and giving 'em due thanks on my arrival? Oh Lord! if they took a notion to pay me back my dues, they'd commission some one to mash my face for me in fine shape on my arrival, now that I haven't appreciated the good turns they've done me and have let 'em go for nothing. me on ahead home from the harbour to tell his wife the news: how the state was served under the leadership, command, and auspices of—his very own self. (meditating) Now let me think how I am to tell her the tale when I get there. If I do work in a lie or two, it won't be anything extraordinary for me. The fact is, it was just when they were doing their hardest fighting that I was doing my hardest running. Oh well, I'll pretend I was there just the same, and recite what I heard tell about it. But the neatest way to narrate my story—and the words to use—I must practise a bit by myself beforehand here. (pauses) Here's how we'll begin. (lays lantern down and addresses supposed Alcmena importantly)

First and foremost, when we reached there, as soon as we had touched land, straightway Amphitryon picks out the most illustrous of his captains. These he sends forth as legates and bids convey his terms to the Teloboians, to wit: should they wish, without contention and without strife, to deliver up pillage and pillagers and restore whatsoever they had carried off, he himself would lead his army home forthwith and the Argives would leave their land and grant them peace and quietude; but were they otherwise disposed, and disinclined to yield what he sought, he would thereupon with all the force at his command make onslaught on their city.

When Amphitryon's ambassadors had duly made this proclamation to the Teloboians, they, doughty warriors, confiding in their courage and glorying in their strength, made right rough and haughty answer to our embassy, saying that they could defend themselves and theirs by force of arms, and propere irent, de suis finibus exercitus deducerent. haec ubi legati pertulere, Amphitruo castris ilico producit omnem exercitum. Teloboae contra ex oppido legiones educunt suas nimis pulcris armis praeditas. postquam utrimque exitum est maxima copia, dispertiti viri, dispertiti ordines, 220 nos nostras more nostro et modo instruximus legiones, item hostes contra legiones suas instruont. deinde utrique imperatores in medium excunt, extra turbam ordinum colloquontur simul. convenit, victi utri sint eo proelio, urbem agrum aras focos seque uti dederent. postquam id actum est, tubae contra utrimque occanunt, consonat terra, clamorem utrimque efferunt. imperator utrimque, hinc et illine, Iovi vota suscipere, utrimque hortari exercitum. 230 tum pro se quisque id quod quisque potest et valet edit, ferro ferit, tela frangunt, boat caelum fremitu virum, ex spiritu atque anhelitu nebula constat, cadunt volnerum vi viri. Denique, ut voluimus, nostra superat manus: hostes crebri cadunt, nostri contra ingruont vi 1 feroces. sed 2 fugam in se tamen nemo convortitur nec recedit loco quin statim rem gerat; animam omittunt prius quam loco demigrent: 240 quisque ut steterat iacet optinetque ordinem. hoc ubi Amphitruo erus conspicatust, ilico equites iubet dextera inducere. vicimus vi MSS: Leo brackets vicimus. ² Corrupt (Leo). that accordingly they should depart at once and lead their troops out from the Teloboian borders. On receiving this report from his legates, Amphitryon at once led forth his whole army from camp. And from the city, too, the Teloboians led out their legions in goodly panoply. After both sides had marched out in full force, troops arrayed, and ranks arrayed, we drew up our legions according to our usual method and manner: our foemen likewise draw up their legions facing ours. Then forward into the centre of the field stride the leaders of both hosts, and there out beyond the serried lines they hold colloquy. This pact was made, that they who were conquered in this battle should surrender city and land, shrines, homes, and persons. This done, the trumpets blared on either side; earth echoes; on either side the battle cry is raised. The generals on either side, both here and there, offer their vows to Jove, and on either side cheer their war-Then each man lays about him with his every ounce of strength and strikes home with his blade: lances shiver: the welkin rings with the roar of heroes: up from their gasping, panting breath a cloud arises: men drop beneath the weight of wounds.

At last, as we wished, our host prevails: the foemen fall in heaps: on and on we press, fired by our might. Yet for all that, none turns in flight nor yields an inch, but stands his ground and hews away. They lose their lives sooner than quit their post. As each had stood, so he lies, and keeps the line unbroken. When my lord Amphitryon noted this, he straightway ordered that the cavalry on our right be led to the charge. Swift

When the Teloboians turn their backs we stick them full of spears, and Amphitryon himself cut down King Pterelas with his own hand. This fight was fought out all through the day there from morn till eve. (reflectively) I remember this point more distinctly because that noon I went without my lunch. But darkness at last intervened and terminated the engagement. The following day their foremost men come tearfully from the city to our camp, their hands veiled in suppliant wise, and entreat us to pardon their transgression: and one and all they surrender their persons, their entire possessions sacred and profane, their city and their children to the Theban people to have and to hold as they deem fit. Then, for his valour, my lord Amphitryon was presented with a golden bowl from which King Pterelas was wont to drink. (heaves deep sigh of relief) This is how I will tell it to the mistress. Now I'll go finish up the job for master and take myself home. (picks up lantern)

Sos. (aside) That bully's going to do me up and mould my face all over again for me.

Mer. The face that thou shalt smite in earnest is bound thereafter to be bouless.

Sos. (aside) Sure enough he's reckoning on boning me like a lamprey. I—I object to these manboners. It's all up if he catches sight of me.

Mer. (sniffing the air) Ha! I smell somebody, and woe to him!

Sos. (aside) Oh, dear! It can't be he's got a whiff of me?

Mer.	Atque haud longe abesse oportet, verum longe hinc afuit.
Sos.	Illi homo superstitiosust.
Mer.	Gestiunt pugni mihi.
Sos.	Si in me exercituru's, quaeso in parietem ut primum domes.
Mer.	Vox mi ad aures advolavit.
Sos.	Ne ego homo infelix fui,
	qui non alas intervelli: volucrem vocem gestito.
Mer.	Illic homo a me sibi malam rem arcessit iumento suo.
Sos.	Non equidem ullum habeo iumentum.
Mer.	Onerandus est pugnis probe.
Sos.	Lassus sum hercle, navi ut vectus huc sum: etiam nunc nauseo;
	vix incedo inanis, ne ire posse cum onere existimes.	330
Mer.	Certe enim hic nescio quis loquitur.
Sos.	Salvos sum, non me videt:
	nescioquem loqui autumat; mihi certo nomen Sosiaest.
Mer.	Hinc enim mihi dextra vox auris, ut videtur, verberat.
Sos.	Metuo, vocis ne vicem hodie hic vapulem, quae hunc verberat.
Mer.	Optume eccum incedit ad me.
Sos.	Timeo, totus torpeo.
	non edepol nunc ubi terrarum sim scio, si quis roget, neque miser me commovere possum prae formidine.
	ilicet, mandata eri perierunt una et Sosia.
	verum certum est confidenter hominem contra con- loqui,

Mer. Aye, and he must be near at hand, albeit he has been afar from here.

Sos. (aside) The fellow's got second sight.

Mer. My fists are rampant.

Sos. (in low tone) If you intend to put 'em through their paces on me, for heaven's sake break 'em in first on the wall.

Mer. A voice hath flown unto my ear.

Sos. (aside) There you are! I swear I am an unlucky devil not to have clipped its wings, and me with such a bird-like voice.

Mer. You wight doth summon me to wallop his beast's back for him.

Sos. (aside) Never a beast do I own, not I.

Mer. He needs a lusty load of buffets.

Sos. (in low tone) Oh Lord! and me all done up with that sea trip home! I'm seasick even now. It's all I can do to stump along empty handed, so don't think I can travel with a load.

Mer. Yea, of a truth some one is talking here.

Sos. (in lower tone) Saved! He doesn't see me. It's Some one he says is talking: and my same is Sosia, I know that for a fact.

Mer. Yes, a voice from the right here, as it seems, doth strike my ear.

Sos. (aside) I'm afraid he'll soon pummel me instead of my voice for its striking him. (steps forward timidly)

Mer. Oho! Splendid! He moves this way.

Sos. (aside) I'm scared, I'm simply stiff! Good gracious, I don't know where in the world I am, not if anyone asked me. Oh dear, I can't move a step for fear! This ends me! Master's orders are done for, and Sosia, too. But I'm resolved —I'm going to speak right up to him boldly, so

	qui possim videri huic fortis, a me ut abstineat manum.	340
Mer.	Quo ambulas, tu qui Volcanum in cornu conclusum geris?
Sos.	Quid id exquiris tu, qui pugnis os exossas hominibus?
Mer.	Servosne es an liber?
Sos.	Utcumque animo conlibitum est meo.
Mer.	Ain vero?
Sos.	Aio enim vero.
Mer.	Verbero.
Sos.	Mentiris nunc.
Mer.	At iam faciam ut verum dixas dicere.
Sos.	Quid eo est opus?
Mer.	Possum seire, quo profectus, cuius sis aut quid veneris?
Sos.	Huc eo, eri iussu, eius sum servos. numquid nunc es certior?
Mer. Sos.	Ego tibi istam hodie, sceleste, comprimam linguam. Haud potes:
	bene pudiceque adservatur.
Mer.	Pergin argutarier? quid apud hasce aedis negoti est tibi?
Sos.	Immo quid tibi est?	3 50
Mer.	Rex Creo vigiles nocturnos singulos semper locat.
Sos.	Bene facit: quia nos eramus peregre, tutatust domi; at nunc abi sane, advenisse familiares dicito.
Mer.	Nescio quam tu familiaris sis: nisi actutum hine abis, familiaris accipiere faxo haud familiariter.
Sos.	Hic inquam habito ego atque horunc servos sum. 36 that I can make him think I'm a dangerous character and let me be. (tries to swagger)

Mer.Whither dost stroll, thou who conveyest (pointing to lantern) Vulcan pent within you horn?

What dost want to know for, thou who Sonest Sos. folks' faces for 'em with yon fists?

Mer.Art slave or free?

Sos. Whichever I please.

Mer.So? In sooth?

Sos. Yes, so in sooth.

Mer. Thou whipped slave!

You lie: I'm none. Sos.

(advancing) But I shall soon make thee say 'tis true. Mer.

Sos. (shrinking back) Oh, what's the use of that?

Mer.(sternly) May I be informed where thou art bound, who owns thee, or why thou camest? (halts)

Sos. (encouraged) I'm bound for here-master's orders —and I'm his slave. Are you any wiser now?

Mer. I'll soon make thee hold thy tongue, miscreant!

Sos. No chance: she's chaperoned in nice modest fashion.

Mer. Still at thy quips, ch? What business hast thou at this house?

Well, and what have you? Sos.

Mer.King Creon posts separate sentries about here every night.

Sos. (in superior manner) Much obliged. Seeing we were abroad, he's kept guard for us at home. But now you can be off: say the family servants have got back.

Mer. Thou a family servant, indeed! Unless thou dost disappear instantly, I warrant ve I'll welcome servants of the family with strange familiarity.

Sos. Here's where I live, I tell you. This is my master's house.

Mer.	At sein quo modo?
	faciam ego hodie te superbum, nisi hinc abis.
Sos.	Quonam modo?
Mer.	Auferere, non abibis, si ego fustem sumpsero.
Sos.	Quin me esse huius familiai familiarem praedico.
Mer.	Vide sis quam mox vapulare vis, nisi actutum hine abis.	360
Sos.	Tun domo prohibere peregre me advenientem postulas?
Mer.	Haecine tua domust?
Sos.	Ita inquam.
Mer.	Quis erus est igitur tibi?
Sos.	Amphitruo, qui nunc praefectust Thebanis legionibus, quicum nupta est Alcumena.
Mer.	Quid ais? quid nomen tibi est?
Sos.	Sosiam vocant Thebani, Davo prognatum patre.
Mer.	Ne tu istic hodie malo tuo compositis mendaciis advenisti, audaciai columen, consutis dolis.
Sos.	Immo equidem tunicis consutis huc advenio, non dolis.
Mer.	At mentiris etiam: certo pedibus, non tunicis venis.
Sos.	Ita profecto.
Mer.	Nunc profecto vapula ob mendacium.	370
Sos.	Non edepol volo profecto.
Mer.	At pol profecto ingratiis.
	hoc quidem profecto certum est, non est arbitrarium.
Sos.	Tuam fidem obsecro.
Mer.	Tun te audes Sosiam esse dicere,
	qui ego sum?
Sos.	Perii.
	38

Mer. But knowest thou what? I'll soon be making an exalted man of thee, an' thou decampest not.

Sos. Exalted! How is that?

Mer. You shall be carried off on people's shoulders—no walking—once I take my club to you.

Sos. I'm a member of the household here, I do avow.

Mer. Kindly consider how soon you want a thrashing, unless you vanish instantly.

Sos. So you want to forbid me the house when I'm getting back from foreign parts, you?

Mer. Is this the house where you belong?

Sos. That's what I say.

Mer. Who is your master, then?

Sos. Amphitryon, now in command of the Theban army, and his wife is Alemena.

Mer. How say you? Your name!

Sos. Sosia the Thebans call me, Sosia, son of Davus.

Mer. Ah! 'twas an evil hour for thee, when thou camest here, thou pinnacle of impudence, with thy premeditated lies and patched-up fabrications.

Sos. You're wrong, I vow: I've come with my tunic patched up, not my fabrications.

Mer. Ha, lying again! Thou dost clearly come with thy feet, not thy tunic.

Sos. (dryly) Naturally.

Mer. And naturally now get thrashed for fibbing. (advances)

Sos. (retreats) Oh dear, I object, naturally.

Mer. Oh well, naturally that is immaterial. My "naturally," at least, is a cold hard fact, no matter of opinion. (beats him)

Sos. (squirming) Easy, easy, for heaven's sake!

Mer. Durst say that thou art Sosia when I am he?

Sos. Murder! murder!

Mer. (continuing to beat him) Murder? A mere nothing compared with what is coming. Whose are you now?

Sos. Yours! Your fists have got a title to me by limitation. Help, Thebans, help!

Mer. So? Bellowing, varlet? Speak up, why camest thou?

Sos. Just to give you some one to punch, sir.

Mer. Whose are you?

Sos. Amphitryon's Sosia, I tell you.

Mer. Well then, you shall be pummelled the more for talking nonsense. You Sosia! I am he myself.

Sos. (in low tone) I wish to God you were, instead of me, and I was thumping you.

Mer. Ha! Muttering, eh?

Sos. I won't, I won't, sir!

Mer. Who is your master?

Sos. Anyone you like, sir.

Mer. Indeed? And your name now? Sos. Nothing but what you order, sir.

Mer. You were saying you were Amphitryon's Sosia.

Sos. All a mistake, sir; "Amphitryon's associate" I meant, sir, really I did.

Mer. Ah, I knew quite well there was no servant Sosia at our place except me. You made a slip.

Sos. Oh, how I wish your fists had!

Mer. I am that Sosia you claimed to be a while ago.

Sos. For heaven's sake, sir, let me have a word with you in peace without getting pummelled.

Mer. No peace—but I consent to a short armistice, if you have anything to say.

Sos. I won't say it, not unless peace is made: your fists are too much for me.

Mer. Out with what you want: I shall not hurt you!

Sos.	Tuae fide credo?
Mer.	Meae.
Sos.	Quid si falles?
Mer.	Tum Mercurius Sosiae iratus siet.
Sos.	Animum advorte, nunc licet mihi libere quidvis loqui. Amphitruonis ego sum servos Sosia.
Mer.	Etiam denuo?
Sos.	Pacem feci, foedus feci. vera dico.

Sos.	Ita enim vero.

Can I take your word for that? Sos.

Mer. You can.

What if you fool me? Sos.

(solemnly) Then may Sosia feel the wrath of Mer-Mer. curv!

Listen here, sir. Now I'm free to come out plain Sos. with anything. I am Amphitryon's Sosia, I am.

Mer. (advancing) What? Again?

(vigorously) I made peace—I struck a treaty! It's Sos. the truth.

Mer. Be thrashed to you!

Sos. Suit yourself, do what suits you, seeing your fists are too much for me. (doggedly) But just the same, no matter what you do, I won't keep that back, by gad, not that.

Mer. You shall never live to make me anyone but Sosia, never.

And by thunder, you shall never do me out of Sos. being our family's servant. No sir, and I'm the only servant Sosia we have.

Mer. The man is crazy.

Crazy? You're putting your own complaint off on Sos. to me. (half to himself) See here, dash it, an't I Amphitryon's servant Sosia? Didn't our ship arrive this night from Port Persicus, and I on it? Didn't my own master send me here? An't I standing in front of our own house this minute? Haven't I got a lantern in my hand? An't I talking? An't I awake? Didn't this chap just give me a bruising? Lord, but he did! Why, my poor jaws ache even now. What am I hesitating for, then? Or why don't I go inside our house?

Mer. What? Your house?

Sos. Yes, just so.

Mer.		410
	omnia ementitu's: equidem Sosia Amphitruonis sum.
	nam noctu hac soluta est navis nostra e portu Persico, et ubi Pterela rex regnavit oppidum expugnavimus, et legiones Teloboarum vi pugnando cepimus, et ipsus Amphitruo optruncavit regem Pterelam in proelio.
Sos.	Egomet mihi non credo, cum illaec autumare illum audio;
	hic quidem certe quae illic sunt res gestae memorat memoriter.
	sed quid ais? quid Amphitruoni doni a Telobois datum est?
Mer.	Pterela rex qui potitare solitus est patera aurea.
Sos.	Elocutus est. ubi patera nunc est?
Mer.	Est in cistula;	420
	Amphitruonis obsignata signo est.
Sos.	Signi die quid est?
Mer.	Cum quadrigis Sol exoriens. quid me captas, carnufex?
Sos.	Argumentis vicit, aliud nomen quaerundum est mihi. nescio unde haec hic spectavit. iam ego hunc deci- piam probe;
	nam quod egomet solus feci, nec quisquam alius affuit, in tabernaclo, id quidem hodie numquam poterit dicere.
	si tu Sosia es, legiones cum pugnabant maxume, quid in tabernaclo fecisti? victus sum, si dixeris.
Mer. Sos.	Cadus erat vini: inde implevi hirneam. Ingressust viam.
Mer.	Eam ego, ut matre fuerat natum, vini eduxi meri.	430

Mer. You lie, I tell you: your every word has been a lie. I am Amphitryon's Sosia, beyond dispute. Why, this very night we unmoored and left Port Persicus; and we have seized the city where King Pterelas held sway; and we subdued the legions of the Teloboians by our sturdy onslaught; and Amphitryon himself slew King Pterelas on the field of battle.

Sos. (aside) I can't believe my own ears when I hear that fellow going on so. My word, he certainly does reel our doings there all off pat. (aloud) But I say—what was Amphitryon presented with from the Teloboian spoils?

Mer. A golden bowl that King Pterelas was wont to drink from.

Sos. (aside) He's hit it! (aloud) Where is the bowl now?

Mer. In a little chest, sealed with Amphitryon's signet.

Sos. What's on the signet, tell me that?

Mer. Sol rising in a four horse chariot. (blustering) Why this attempt to catch me, caitiff?

Sos. (aside) This evidence settles me. I've got to find me a new name. I don't understand where he saw all this from. (reflecting) Ah, now I'll trick him in good style. Yes, something I did when I was all alone, and not another soul there, in the tent,—he'll never be able to tell me about that, anyway. (aloud) Well, if you're Sosia, what did you do in the tent when the soldiers were in the thick of the fight? Answer me that and I give in.

Mer. There was a cask of wine: I drew off a jugful.

Sos. (aside) He's on the right track.

Mer. Then I drained it, wine pure as it came from its mother.

C

Sos.	Factum est illud, ut ego illic vini hirneam ebiberim meri.
	mira sunt nisi latuit intus illic in illac hirnea.
Mer.	Quid nunc? vincon argumentis, te non esse Sosiam?
Sos.	Tu negas med esse?
Mer.	Quid ego ni negem, qui egomet siem?
Sos.	Per Iovem iuro med esse neque me falsum dicere.
Mer.	At ego per Mercurium iuro, tibi Iovem non credere; nam iniurato scio plus credet mihi quam iurato tibi.
Sos.	Quis ego sum saltem, si non sum Sosia? te interrogo.
Mer.	Ubi ego Sosia nolim esse, tu esto sane Sosia;
	nunc, quando ego sum, vapulabis, ni hinc abis, ig- nobilis.	440
Sos.	Certe edepol, quom illum contemplo et formam cognosco meam, quem ad modum ego sum—saepe in speculum inspexi—nimis similest mei; itidem habet petasum ac vestitum: tam consimilest atque ego;
	sura, pes, statura, tonsus, oculi, nasum vel labra, malae, mentum, barba, collus: totus. quid verbis opust?
	si tergum cicatricosum, nihil hoc similist similius.
	sed quom cogito, equidem certo idem sum qui semper fui.
	novi erum, novi aedis nostras; sane sapio et sentio.
	non ego illi obtempero quod loquitur. pultabo foris.
Mer.	Quo agis te?

Sos. (aside) That's a fact—I did drink off a jug of wine, neat. Most probably the fellow was hiding in that same jug!

Mer. Well, have I convinced you that you are not Sosia?

Sos. You deny it, do you?

Mer. Of course I deny it, being Sosia myself.

Sos. No, I am,—I swear it by Jupiter, and swear I'm not lying, too!

Mer. But I swear by Mercury that Jupiter disbelieves you. Why, man, he will take my bare word against your solemn oath, no doubt about it.

Sos. For mercy's sake who am I, if I'm not Sosia? I ask you that.

Mer. When I do not wish to be Sosia, be Sosia yourself, by all means. Now that I am he, you either pack, or take a thrashing, you unknown riff-raff.

(aside, looking him over carefully) Upon my soul, Sos. now I look him over, and consider my own looks, my own appearance—I've peeped in a mirror many a time—he is precious like me. Has on a travelling hat, yes, and clothes the same as mine. He's as like me as I am myself! Same leg -foot-height-haircut-eyes-nose-lips, even -jaw-chin-beard-neck-everything. well, well! If he's got a backful of whip scars, you couldn't find a liker likeness anywhere. (pause) But—when I think it over—I'm positive I'm the same man I always was, of course I am. (with growing conviction) I know master, I know our house: I'm sane and sound, I've got my senses. won't take any notice of what he says, not I. knock at the door. (moves toward Amphitryon's house)

Mer. (blocking him off) Where now?

Sos. Home.

Mer. (advancing) And shouldst thou climb into Jupiter's four horse chariot and seek to flee, e'en so thou canst hardly fly misfortune.

I can tell my own mistress what my own master Sos.

ordered me to tell her, can't I?

Thy own mistress, aye,—whatever likes thee: but Mer. never shalt thou approach ours here. Yea, provoke me, and thou draggest hence a shipwreck of a man.

(advancing)

(retreating) Don't, don't,—I'll be off! (aside) Ye im-Sos. mortal gods! For heaven's sake, where did I lose myself? Where was I transformed? Where did I drop my shape? I didn't leave myself behind at the harbour, did I, if I did happen to forget it? For, my word, this fellow has got hold of my complete image, mine that was! Here I am alive and folks carry my image-more than anyone will ever do when I'm dead. I'll go down to the harbour and tell my master all about these goings on—that is unless he doesn't know me, too,—and I hope to Jupiter he won't, so that I may shave my hair off this very day and stick my bald head in a freeman's cap.

Scene 2. EXIT Sosia. Mer.

Well, my little affair has progressed finely, famously. I have sent a confounded nuisance to the right-about from the door and given my father a chance to embrace the lady there in safety. Now when our friend gets back there to his master, Amphitryon, he'll tell his tale how it was servant Sosia that packed him off. Yes, and then Amphitryon will think he is lying, and never came here as he ordered. I'll muddle up the pair of them, bedevil them completely, and Amphitryon's whole household, too, and keep it up till my father has his fill of her whom he loves: then all shall know the truth, but not before. And finally Jupiter will renew the former harmony between Alcmena and her spouse. For you see, Amphitryon, will be raging at his wife shortly, and accusing her of playing him false: then my father will step in and quell the riot. Now about Alcmena—something I left unsaid a while ago—now she shall bring forth twin sons, one being a ten months' boy, the other a seven. One is Amphitryon's child, the other Jove's: the younger boy, however, has the greater father, and vice versa. You see how it is now, do you? But out of consideration for Alemena here, my father has provided that there shall be only one parturition: he intends to make one labour suffice for two. But Amphitryon, though, as I told you some time since, will be informed of the whole affair. But what of that? Certainly no one will hold Alcmena guilty: no, no, it would seem highly unbecoming for a god to let a mortal take the consequences of his misdeeds and his indiscretions. (listening) Enough of this: there goes the door. Ah, the counterfeit Amphitryon comes out with his borrowed wife, Alcmena! (steps aside)

ENTER Jupiter AND Alcmena

Scene 3. FROM THE HOUSE.

Jup. Good-bye and God bless you, my dear. Continue to look out for our common interests, and do be sure not to overdo: you are near your time now, you know. I am obliged to leave you—but don't expose the child.

Alc. (plaintively) Why, my husband, what is it takes you away so suddenly?

Iup.	Edepol haud quod tui me neque domi distaedeat; sed ubi summus imperator non adest ad exercitum, citius quod non facto est usus fit quam quod facto

Mer.	Accedam atque hanc appellabo et subparasitabor patri.

- Jup. No weariness of you and home, I swear to that. But when the commander-in-chief is not with his army, things are much more liable to go wrong than right.
- Mer. (aside) Ah, he's a sly old dodger—does me' credit, my father does! Notice how suavely he'll smooth her down.
- Alc. (pouting) Oh yes, I'm learning how much you think of your wife.
- Jup. (fondly) Isn't it enough that you're the dearest woman in the world to me? (embraces her)
- Mer. (aside) Now, now, sir! Just let the lady up yonder (pointing thumb heavenward) learn of your performances here, and I'll guarantee you'd rather be Amphitryon than Jove.
- Alc. Actions speak louder than words. Here you are leaving me before your place on the couch had time to get warm. You came last night at midnight, and now you are going. Does that seem right?
- Mer. (aside) I'll go slip a word in and play henchman to my father. (to Alemena, stepping up) Lord, ma'am, I don't believe there's a mortal man alive loves his own wife (glancing slyly at Jupiter) so madly as the mad way he dotes on you.
- Jup. (angrily) You rascal, don't I know you? Out of my sight, will you! What business have you to interfere with this matter, or to breathe a word about it, you scamp? I'll take my cane this instant and—
- Alc. (seizing his arm) Oh, please don't!
- Jup. You just breathe a word now!
- Mer. (aside dryly) The henchman's first try at henching pretty nearly came to grief.

Alc. Iup.	Lacrimantem ex abitu concinnas tu tuam uxorem. Tace,

Mer.	Immo sic: condignum donum, qualest cui dono datumst.

Jup. But as to what you say, precious,—you oughtn't to be cross with me. It was on the sly that I left my troops: this is a stolen treat, stolen for your sake, so that your first news of how I served my country might come first from me. And now I have told you the whole story. I wouldn't have done such a thing, if I hadn't loved you with all my heart.

Mer. (aside) Doing as I said, eh? Stroking her down, patting her back, poor thing.

Jup. Now I must slip back, so that my men may not get wind of this and say I put my wife ahead of the public welfare.

Alc. (tearfully) And make your own wife cry at your leaving her!

Jup. (affectionately) Hush! Don't spoil your eyes: I shall be back soon.

Alc. That "soon" is a long, long time.

Jup. It's not that I like to leave you here and go away.

Alc. So I perceive—going away the same night you came to me! (clings to him)

Jup. Why do you hold me? It is time: I wish to get out of the city before daybreak. (producing a golden bond) Here is the bowl they presented me for bravery on the field—the one King Pterelas used to drink from, whom I killed with my own hand—take it as a gift from me, Alcmena.

Alc. (taking bowl eagerly) That is so like you! Oh, your gift just matches the giver!

Mer. Oh no, not the giver—that gift matches the getter.

Jup. (savagely) So? At it again? Is there no choking you off, you jailbird? No? (advances with upraised you off, you jailbird! No! (advances we cane)

Alc. (holding him back) Please, Amphitryon, don't be angry with Sosia on my account.

Iup. Faciam ita ut vis.

Mer. Ex amore hic admodum quam saevos est.

Iup. Numquid vis?

Alc. Ut quom absim me ames, me tuam te absente tamen.

Mer. Eamus, Amphitruo. lucescit hoc iam.

Iup. Abi prac, Sosia,

iam ego sequar. numquid vis?

Alc. Etiam: ut actutum advenias.

Iup. Licet,

prius tua opinione hic adero: bonum animum habe.
nunc te, nox, quae me mansisti, mitto uti cedas die, ut mortalis inlucescat luce clara et candida.
atque quanto, nox, fuisti longior hac proxuma, tanto brevior dies ut fiat faciam, ut aeque disparet.
sed dies e nocte accedat. ibo et Mercurium sequar.

ACTVS II

Amph. Age i tu secundum.

Sos. Sequor, subsequor te.

Amph. Scelestissimum te arbitror.

Sos. Nam quam ob rem?

Jup. (halting) Anything you please.

Mer. (aside) Love has made an out-and-out savage of him.

Jup. (kissing Alemena and turning to go) Nothing else, then?

Alc. This,—even though I am not near you, love me still, your own true wife, absent or not.

Mer. Let's go, sir; it is getting light already.

Jup. Go ahead, Sosia; I shall be with you in a moment.

[EXIT Mercury.
(kisses Alcmena again and turns to go) Nothing further?

Alc. Yes, yes—do come back soon.

Jup. Indeed I will: I shall be here sooner than you think. Come, come, cheer up! (embraces her and moves away) [EXIT Alcmena INTO HOUSE, SADLY. Now, Night, who hast tarried for me, I dismiss thee: give place to Day, that he may shine upon mortals in radiance and splendour. And Night, since thou wert longer than the last, I shall make the day so much the shorter, that there may be fair adjustment. But let day issue forth from night. Now to follow after Mercury.

EXIT Jupiter.

ACT II

(Half an hour has elapsed.)

ENTER Amphitryon FOLLOWED BY Sosia. SLAVES WITH BAGGAGE IN REAR.

Amph. (to lagging Sosia) Here you! After me, come!

Sos. Coming, sir! Right at your heels.

Amph. It's my opinion you are a damned rascal.

Sos. See there now! Just like you—you can never trust your servants.

(misunderstanding) What? How is that? Well, by Amph.heaven now, I'll cut out that villainous tongue for you, you villain!

Sos. (stubbornly) I am yours, sir: so do anything that suits your convenience and taste. However, I shall tell everything just as it happened here, and you shall never frighten me out of that, never.

Amph. You confounded rascal, do you dare tell me you are at home this very minute, when you are here with me?

Sos. It is a fact, sir.

A fact you shall soon suffer for-the gods will see to Amph.that, and so will I.

Sos. That rests with you, sir: I am your man.

Amph.You dare make fun of me, scoundrel, your master? You dare tell me a thing no one ever saw before, an impossible thing—the same man in two places at one time?

Sos. Really, sir, it is just as I say.

Jove's curse on you! Amph.

What harm have I done you to be punished, sir? Sos.

Harm? You reprobate! Still making a joke of Amph.me, are you?

Sos. You would have a right to call me names, if that was so. But I am not lying, sir: it happened just as I say.

Amph.The man is drunk, I do believe.

(heartily) Wish I was! Sos.

Amph.(dryly) Your wish is already gratified.

Amph. It is. Where did you get drink?

Sos. I did not, not I, nowhere.

Amph. (despairingly) What am I to make of the fellow?

Sos. I have told you how it is ten times over: I am at home, I say. Do you hear that? Yes, and I am here with you, the same Sosia. There sir, do you think that is putting it plainly enough, lucidly enough for you?

Amph. (shoving him aside) Bah! Get away with you.

Sos. What is the matter?

Amph. You have the plague.

Sos. Why, what do you say that for? Really, sir, I feel well, I am all right.

Amph. But I shall soon see you get your deserts: you will not feel so well, you will be wretched enough, once I get back home all right. Be so good as to follow me, you that make a butt of your master with your idiotic drivel. Seeing you neglected to carry out your master's orders, you now have the effrontery to come and laugh at him, to boot,—with your tales of what can never happen, what no man ever heard of, you rapscallion. By heaven, those lies of yours shall fall on your own back, I promise you!

Sos. (plaintively) It is hard, sir, horribly hard, on a good servant that tells his master plain facts to have his facts confuted by a flogging.

Amph. Curse it! How in the world is it possible—argue it out with me—for you to be here now, and at home, too? Tell me that, will you?

Sum profecto et hic et illic. hoc cuivis mirari licet, Sos. neque tibi istuc mirum 1 magis videtur quam mihi. Amph. Quo modo? Sos. Sos.

Sos. I am here and I am there, I positively am. I don't care who wonders at it: it is no more wonderful to you than it is to me, sir.

Amph. How is that?

Sos. I say it is not a bit more wonderful to you than to me. So help me heaven, I didn't believe my own self, Sosia, at first, not till that other Sosia, myself, made me believe him. He reeled off every thing just as it happened while we were on the field there with the enemy; and besides, he had stolen my looks along with my name. One drop of milk is no more like another than that I is like me. Why, when you sent me ahead home from the harbour before dawn a while ago—

Amph. What then?

Sos. I was standing in front of the house long before I got there.

Amph. What confounded rubbish! Are you actually in your senses?

Sos. You can see for yourself I am.

Amph. The fellow is bewitched somehow: the evil hand has been laid on him since he left me.

Sos. Right you are! Evil? The way I got beaten to jelly was damned evil.

Amph. Who was it beat you?

Sos. I beat myself—the I that is at home now.

Amph. Mind now, not a word but what I ask you. In the first place, I wish to be informed who that Sosia is.

Sos. Your own slave.

Amph. As a matter of fact, I have one too many in you already, and never in my life did I own a slave named Sosia except yourself.

Sos. Well sir, you mark my words now: I warrant you you will come upon a second servant Sosia of yours besides me when you reach home, yes sir, one whose father was Davus the same as mine, and who is just like me and just my age, too. Enough said, sir. Sosia has twinned here for you.

Amph. (impressed) Strange, very strange indeed! But did you see my wife?

Sos. Why, sir, never a foot was I allowed to put in the house.

Amph. Who hindered you?

Sos. That Sosia I have been telling of all along, the one that smashed me up.

Amph. Who is that Sosia?

Sos. I am, I say. How many times do you need to be told?

Amph. (reflecting) But look here, you were not asleep a while ago, were you?

Sos. Not a bit of it, sir.

Amph. Then perhaps, if you had seen that, well, that Sosia of yours in your dreams—

Sos. I don't do my master's orders drowsily. Wide awake I was, eyes open; I am wide awake with 'em open on you now; I am wide awake telling my story; and I was wide awake when he hammered me a while back, yes, and (ruefully) he was wide awake.

Amph. Who?

Sosi. Sosia, I tell you, that me. Pray do not you understand?

Amph. How the devil can any man understand? Such stuff and nonsense!

Sos. (significantly) Well, you will know what I mean very soon, once you know that servant Sosia.

Amph. (going toward house) Come then, this way. This matter needs my investigation first of all. (stops to examine house from distance and talks with Sosia)

Scene 2. ENTER Alcmena INTO DOORWAY.

Alc. Oh, are not the pleasures in life, in this daily round, trifling compared with the pains! It is our common ita divis est placitum, voluptatem ut maeror comes consequatur: quin incommodi plus malique ilico adsit, boni si optigit quid. nam ego id nunc experior domo atque ipsa de me scio, cui voluptas parumper datast, dum viri mei mihi potestas videndi fuit noctem unam modo; atque is repente abiit a me hinc ante lucem. sola hic mihi nunc videor, quia ille hinc abest quem ego amo praeter omnes. 640 plus aegri ex abitu viri, quam ex adventu voluptatis cepi. sed hoc me beat saltem, quom perduellis vicit et domum laudis compos revenit: id solacio est. absit, dum modo laude parta domum recipiat se; feram et perferam usque abitum eius animo forti atque offirmato, id modo si mercedis datur mi, ut meus victor vir belli clucat. satis mi esse ducam. virtus praemium est optimum; virtus omnibus rebus anteit profecto: libertas salus vita res et parentes, patria et prognati 650 tutantur, servantur: virtus omnia in sese habet, omnia adsunt bona quem penest virtus Amph. Edepol me uxori exoptatum credo adventurum domum. quae me amat, quam contra amo, praesertim re gesta bene.

human lot, it is heaven's will, for sorrow to come following after joy: yes, yes, and to have a larger share of trouble and distress the moment something nice has happened. Ah, I am learning this now at first hand, learning it of my own experience—a few short hours of happiness, allowed to see my husband for just one night; and then away he goes all of a sudden before daylight! It does seem so lonely here now, when the one I love best is gone. I have felt more unhappy at his going than happy at his coming. But there is thus much to be thankful for, at least: he has been victorious and come home a hero—that is one comfort. He may leave me, if only he returns to me with a glorious name: I will bear his going, yes, and keep on bearing it to the end firmly and unflinchingly, only let me have the reward of hearing my husband hailed conqueror. That is enough for me! Courage is the very best gift of all; courage stands before everything, it does, it does! It is what maintains and preserves our liberty, safety, life, and our homes and parents, our country and children. Courage comprises all things: a man with courage has every blessing.

Amph. By Jove, my wife will certainly be delighted to have me home—loving each other as we do! Especially now that we have been successful, and the enemy, that every one thought invincible, beaten, beaten at the first set-to under my auspices and leadership. Ah yes, my arrival will surely be a very welcome event to her.

Sos. What? And don't you think mine is going to be welcome to my lady friend?

Alc. (seeing them) Why, here is my husband!

Amph. (to Sosia) Here you, this way! (goes on toward house)

Alc. (aside) What in the world is he back for so soon after saying he must hurry off! Is he trying me on purpose, does he want to test how much I miss him when he goes? Bless his heart, I have no objection to his coming home again!

Sos. (seeing her) We had better make for the ship once more, sir.

Amph. Why?

Sos. No one at home is going to give the new arrivals a breakfast, that is why.

Amph. And how does that thought happen to occur to you? Sos. Because we've come too late.

Amph. How so?

Sos. (pointing) Well, there's mistress in front of the house, and she has a sort of well-fed look about her.

Amph. I had hopes when I went away, Sosia, of being made a father.

Sos. Heaven help me!

Amph. What is the matter?

Sos. (disgustedly) I have got home exactly in time to draw the water: it is the tenth month since, according as I follow your reckoning.

Amph. (laughing) Cheer up, cheer up!

Sos. Know how cheerful I am, do you, sir? Let me get hold of a bucket, and by gad, don't ever trust my sacred oath again, if I do not drain that well of its last breath, once I begin.

Amph. Come now, this way with me. (moves toward house again)
I will appoint some one else to that office, never fear.

Alc. (aside) I suppose it would be more duteous of me to go to meet him. (advances slowly)

Amph. (with playful courtliness) Gladly does Amphitryon greet his darling wife, whom her husband judges to be the one best lady in all Thebes; yea, and justly do the citizens of Thebes bruit her virtue. (earnestly) Have you been well all this time? Are you glad to see me?

Sos. (aside) Glad? None more so! Welcomes him about as warmly as she would a dog!

Amph. Ah, it is splendid to see your condition, dear, and to see you getting on so finely.

Alc. Good gracious! Why are you making fun of me with all these greetings and salutations, as if you had not seen me a little while ago and were just this moment back from the war?

Amph. (surprised) Why, why, but I have not seen you—no, nowhere at all except this very instant.

Alc. What makes you deny it?

Amph. Because I have learned to tell the truth.

Alc. It is not a good plan to learn a thing and then unlearn it. Or is this a test of my feelings? But why are you returning so quickly? Were you delayed by bad omens, or is it the weather detains, you, that you have not gone away to the army, as you spoke of doing a little while ago?

Amph. A little while ago? How little a while ago was that?

Alc. Tease! Oh, quite a little while ago—just now.

Amph. For heaven's sake, how can those statements agree —" quite a little while ago" and " just now"?

Amph. (to Sosia) Upon my soul, she is raving!

Sos. Wait a while till she has slept out just one sleep.

Amph. What, awake and dreaming?

Alc. (indignantly) To be sure I am awake, and awake as I relate what happened. Why, just a little while ago before dawn I saw that man and you, both.

Amph. Where was this?

Alc. Here in your very own house, sir.

Amph. Impossible!

Sos. Hush, sir, hush! What if the ship carried us here from the harbour in our sleep?

Amph. Ha! you are siding with her too, are you?

Sos. (misely) Well, what do you want? Don't you understand? You but cross a Bacchante when the Bacchic frenzy fills her, and you'll make the crazy thing crazier still and she'll hit you all the more: humour her, and she'll call it quits after one blow.

Amph. Humour her? By the Lord, it will be bad humour, that's sure,—arriving home to-day and she unwilling to give me a decent welcome!

Sos. You'll be poking up a hornet's nest.

Amph. Silence! (to Alcmena, sternly) Alcmena, there is something I wish to ask you.

Alc. Anything you please.

Amph. Are you obsessed by some foolish notion, or is this pride running away with you?

Alc. What makes it enter your head to ask me such a question, my husband?

Alc. Why mercy me, when you came home yester-day I certainly did welcome you the moment you appeared, and asked you in the same breath if you had been well all the time, and seized your hand and gave you a kiss.

Sos. Welcomed him yesterday, did you?

Alc. Yes, and you, too, Sosia.

Sos. Sir, I hoped she was going to bear you a son; but it's no child she's got.

Amph. What, then?

Sos. A crazy streak.

Alc. (angrily) Indeed I have not, and I pray heaven I may safely bear a son. But you, sir, shall have an ample supply of aches and pains, if your master here does his duty! You shall be well rewarded for that omen, Sir Omener.

Sos. Really now, ma'am, it's a lady in your condition ought to have aches and pains, yes, and an apple supply, too, so as to have something to chew on in case she gets to feeling seedy.

Amph. You saw me here yesterday?

Alc. Yes, I,—if you must be told ten times over.

Amph. In your sleep, perhaps?

Alc. No, no, awake,—and you were awake, too.

Amph. Oh, this is terrible, terrible!

Sos. What ails you?

Amph. My wife is raving!

Sos. Bilious attack, sir, black bile. There's nothing sets 'em raving so soon.

Amph. When did you first feel it coming on, woman? Alc. Goodness me! I'm perfectly sane and sound.

AMPHTTRYON

Amph. Then why are you declaring you saw me yesterday, when we reached port last night? I took dinner there and spent the whole livelong night there on board my ship, and I have not set foot in this house from the time I and my troops started on our campaign against the Teloboians and conquered them.

Alc. The idea! You had dinner with me and went to bed with me.

Amph. What?

Alc. I tell you the truth, sir.

Amph. Good God! Not in that, anyhow: about other matters I can't say.

Alc. And at the very break of day you went away to the army.

Amph. How's that?

Sos. Quite straight, sir, as far as her memory goes: she's giving you her dream. But I say, ma'am, this morning after you woke up you ought to have taken some salted cakes, or incense, and prayed to Jove—he has charge of prodigies.

Alc. Oh confound you, sir!

Sos. (innocently) That would do you good, ma'am—if you would see to it.

Alc. There he is, rude to me again, and not suffering for it!

Amph. (to Sosia) Keep still, you! (to Alcmena) And you—
I left you this morning at daybreak, did I?

Alc. Why, who else but you two told me how the battle there went?

Amph. You don't mean to say you know about that?

Alc. Naturally, since I heard from your own lips how you took that great city and killed King Pterelas yourself.

Amph. I told you that, I?

Alc. Amph.	Tute istic, etiam adstante hoc Sosia. Audivistin tu me narrare haec hodie?
Sos.	Ubi ego audiverim?
Amph.	Hanc roga.
Sos.	Me quidem praesente numquam factum est, quod sciam.
Alc.	Mirum quin te adversus dicat.
Amph.	Sosia, age me huc aspice.	750
Sos.	Specto.
Amph.	Vera volo loqui te, nolo adsentari mihi.
1	audivistin tu hodie me illi dicere ea quae illa au- tumat?
Sos.	Quaeso edepol, num tu quoque etiam insanis, quom id me interrogas, qui ipsus equidem nunc primum istanc tecum con-spicio simul?
Amph.	Quid nunc, mulier? audin illum?
Alc.	Ego vero, ac falsum dicere.
Amph.	Neque tu illi neque mihi viro ipsi credis?
Alc.	Eo fit quia mihi
	plurimum credo et scio istaec facta proinde ut proloquor.
Amph.	Tun me heri advenisse dicis?
Alc.	Tun te abiisse hodie hinc negas?
Amph.
Alc.	Obsecro, etiamne hoc negabis, te auream pateram mihi	760

Amph.	Neque edepol dedi neque dixi; verum ita animatus fui
r	itaque nunc sum, ut ea te patera donem. sed quis istuc tibi dixit?

Alc. Yes, you yourself,—with Sosia here standing by, too.

Amph. (to Sosia) Have you ever heard me say a word of this?

Sos. Heard you? Where?

Amph. (sullenly) Ask her.

Sos. You never did so far as I know, leastways with me at hand.

Alc. (ironically) It is strange he declines to contradict his own master.

Amph. Sosia, here! Look me in the eye.

Sos. (obeying) Very good, sir.

Amph. What I want from you is the truth, no obsequiousness. Did you ever hear me utter a syllable of what she says?

Sos. Well, upon my word, I should like to ask if you are not crazy yourself, asking me a question like that—and I just this minute setting eyes on her for the first time along with you?

Amph. What now; madam? Do you hear him?

Alc. To be sure I do—telling lies.

Amph. You won't believe him, or me, your own husband, either?

Alc. That is only because I believe myself most of all, and I know everything occurred just as I tell you.

Amph. And you say that I arrived yesterday?

Alc. And you deny that you left to-day?

Amph. Deny it? Of course I do. And I say I'm just now coming home to you for the first time.

Alc. And will you deny this, too, pray,—that you gave me the golden bowl to-day that was presented to you there, as you said?

Amph. By heaven! I neither gave it nor said it. But I did intend to make you a gift of that bowl, and do still. Who told you of that, though?

Alc.	Ego equidem ex te audivi et ex tua accepi manu
Amph.	pateram. Mane, mane, obsecro te. nimis demiror, Sosia, qui illace illic me donatum esse aurea patera sciat, nisi tu dudum hanc convenisti et narravisti haec omnia.
Sos.	Neque edepol ego dixi neque istam vidi nisi tecum simul.
Amph.	Quid hoc sit hominis?
Alc.	Vin proferri pateram?
Amph.	Proferri volo.
Alc.	Fiat. heus tu, Thessala, intus pateram proferto foras,	770

Sos.	An etiam credis id, quae in hac cistellula tuo signo obsignata fertur?
Amph.	Salvom signum est?
Sos.	Inspice.
Amph.	Recte, ita est ut obsignavi.
Sos.	Quaeso, quin tu istanc iubes pro cerrita circumferri?

Alc.	Quid verbis opust?
Au.

Amph.	Cedo mi.
Alc.	Age aspice huc sis nunciam
	tu qui quae facta infitiare; quem ego iam hic con- vincam palam.
	estne haec patera qua donatu's illi?
	So.

Alc. Why, I heard about it from your own lips and received the bowl from your own hand.

Amph. One moment, please, one moment! (turning to Sosia) It is very extraordinary, Sosia, how she knows I was presented with a golden bowl there, unless you met her a while ago yourself and told her the whole story.

Sos. By gad, sir, I never told her, no, nor saw her, except here with you.

Amph. (helplessly) What sort of a creature have I got here?

Alc. Would you like to have the bowl brought?

Amph. Indeed I should.

Alc. Very well. (calling to maid within) Ho, there! Thessala, bring out the bowl my husband gave me to-day.

Amph. Sosia! Come over here. (they withdraw somewhat) Upon my soul, it will be the most astounding of all these astounding circumstances, if she has that.

Sos. Do you really believe that, sir, when I've got it in this little chest here, sealed with your own signet?

Amph. Is the seal intact?

Alc.

Sos. (showing chest) Look and see.

Amph. (doing so) It is all right—just as I sealed it.

Sos. For heaven's sake, why don't you have her treated for lunacy?

Amph. By Jove, so I should! Why, bless my soul, she's full of evil spirits!

ENTER Thessala WITH BOWL.

Alc. Are you satisfied, sir? There! Your bowl, see!

Amph. (dombfounded) Give it here!

Come now, be so good as to look at it, you that do a thing and then disown it. I shall refute you plainly, sir, here and now. Is this the bowl which they presented to you there, or not?

Amph.	Summe Iuppiter,	780

Sos.	Aut pol haec praestigiatrix multo mulier maxima est aut fateram hic inesse oportet.
Amph.	Agedum, exsolve cistulam.
Sos.	Quid ego istam exsolvam? obsignatast recte, res gesta est bene:
	tu peperisti Amphitruonem, ego alium peperi Sosiam;
	nunc si patera pateram peperit, omnes congeminavimus.
Amph.	Certum est aperire atque inspicere.
Sos.	Vide sis signi quid siet.

Amph.	Opus mi est istuc exquisito.
Sos.	Iuppiter, pro Iuppiter.
Amph.	Quid tibi est?
Sos.	Hic patera nulla in cistulast.
Amph.	Quid ego audio?
Sos.	Id quod verumst.

Alc.	Qui me rogat.
Sos.	Me captas, quia tute ab navi clanculum huc alia via praecucurristi, atque hinc pateram tute exemisti atque eam huic dedisti, post hanc rursum obsignasti clanculum.
	82

Amph. (taking it) Jove almighty! What do I see? The selfsame bowl, it is, it is! This is frightful, Sosia!

Sos. By gad, she's either the greatest enchantress alive, easily, or the bowl must be inside here. (pointing to chest)

Amph. Come, come, unfasten the chest!

Sos. Unfasten it? Why? It's sealed all right, everything is shipshape. You have spawned another Amphitryon; I have spawned another Sosia; now if the bowl has spawned another bowl, we've all doubled.

Amph. I'm resolved: it must be opened and inspected.

Sos. You please take a look at the seal, sir, so that you won't blame me later.

Amph. (looking) Yes, yes, open up! Why, the woman is bent on driving us mad with her talk.

Alc. Where did this come from, then, if not as a present from you?

Amph. (curtly) This matter needs my investigation. Sos. (busy with chest) By Jove! Oh, by Jove!

Amph. (excited) What is it?

Sos. There's no bowl in the chest here at all!

Amph. What's that you say? Sos. It's the honest truth.

Amph. But your skin shall soon pay for it, if it's not forthcoming.

Alc. This one is forthcoming, at any rate.

Amph. (roughly) Who gave it you, then?

Alc. (calmly) My questioner.

Sos.

(to Amphiryon) Trying to catch me! The fact is you ran on ahead from the ship yourself by another road on the sly, and took the bowl out yourself, and gave it to her, and then sealed up the chest again on the sly.

Sos. Now I don't like that, that beginning with a kiss!

Amph. Go on, go on!

Alc. Then you bathed.

Amph. And after bathing?

Alc. You took your place on the dining couch.

Sos. Bravo, sir Great work! Now get to the bottom of it.

Amph. (to Sosia) No interruptions! (to Alcmena) Go on with your story.

Alc. Dinner was served: we dined together: I took my place on the couch, too.

Amph. The same couch?

Alc. Surely.

Sos. Oho! This banqueting looks bad!

Amph. (to Sosia) That will do. Let her state her case. (to Alcmena) What after we dined?

Alc. You said you were sleepy: the table was removed: we went off to bed.

Amph. Where did you sleep?

Alc. Why, with you, in our room.

Amph. Oh, my God! Sos. What ails you?

Alc. Why, my dear man, what do you mean?

Amph. (furiously) Don't speak to me!

- Alc. Pray tell me what I have done in being with you, the man I married?
- Amph. You with me? Of all brazen shamelessness! You might at least borrow some sense of decency, if you have none of your own!
- Alc. Such behaviour as you accuse me of does not become members of my family, sir. Angle for me if you wish, you cannot catch me in such unspeakable conduct.
- Amph. Great God! You know me, anyhow, Sosia, don't you? Sos. Well, rather!
- Amph. Didn't I dine yesterday on shipboard at Port Persicus?
- Alc. Yes, and I too have witnesses to corroborate what I say.
- Sos. I can't puzzle it out, sir, unless there's some other Amphitryon to manage your business, no matter if you are away, and to do your job for you when you have gone. I tell you what, that sham Sosia was monstrous surprising, but this second Amphitryon is certainly more so.
- Amph. Some magician or other has bedevilled the woman!
 Alc. (slowly and impressively) I swear by the kingdom of the King on high and by Juno, the matron goddess I most should reverence and fear—so may she bless me as no mortal man, save you only, has taken me to him as a wife.

Ak. It is the truth, but what of that, when you refuse to believe me!

Amph. You're a woman: you swear boldly.

Alc. A woman who has done nothing wrong ought to be bold, yes, and self-confident and forward in her own defence.

Amph. Bold, with a vengeance!

Alc. As innocence should be.

Amph. Yes, you're immaculate as far as talk goes.

Alc. (quietly) Personally I do not feel that my dowry is that which people call a dowry, but purity and honour and self-control, fear of God, love of parents, and affection for my family, and being a dutiful wife to you, sir, lavish of loving-kindness and helpful through honest service.

Sos. My word! She's a regular pattern of perfection, if she's telling the truth.

I she's tening the truth.

Amph. Upon my soul, I have been so bewitched I don't know who I am!

Sos. You're Amphitryon right enough, sir: but just look out you don't lose your title to yourself by limitation, the way folks are getting changed about these days since we came back from abroad.

Amph. (to Alcmena, sternly) This matter shall not escape investigation, madam, I am resolved on that.

Alc. Dear me, sir, do investigate, and welcome!

Amph. See here, answer me this—what if I bring your own relative, Naucrates, over from the ship? He made the voyage with me on the same vessel: now if he denies that I did as you say, what do you deserve? Have you any reason to give that I should not divorce you?

Alc. None, if I have done wrong.

Amph. Convenit. tu, Sosia, duc hos intro. ego huc ab navi mecum adducam Naucratem.

Sos. Nunc quidem praeter nos nemo est. dic mihi verum serio:
ecquis alius Sosia intust, qui mei similis siet?

Abin hinc a me dignus domino servos?

Alc.

Sos. Abeo, si iubes.

Alc. Nimis ecastor facinus mirum est, qui illi conlibitum siet meo viro sic me insimulare falso facinus tam malum. quicquid est, iam ex Naucrate cognato id cognoscam meo.

Amph. Agreed! (turning to Sosia) Sosia, take these fellows in. (pointing to slaves with luggage) I will bring Naucrates here from the ship. (Sosia sends slaves inside) [EXIT Amphitryon.

Sos. (to Alcmena, confidentially) Now then, ma'am, no one's here besides us. (elaborately makes sure of it)

Do be serious and tell me the truth—is there another Sosia inside who's just like me?

Alc. (indignantly) Will you leave my sight, sir—you slave worthy of your master!

Sos. Sure, ma'am, if you say so. [EXIT INTO HOUSE.

Alc. Merciful heavens! It's simply unintelligible, how my husband could think fit to accuse me of such atrocious conduct without the slightest cause. Well, whatever it is, I shall soon know about it from Naucrates, one of my own family.

EXIT INTO HOUSE.

ACT III

(A couple of hours have elapsed.)

ENTER Jupiter.

Jup. (in jocular, self-satisfied tone) I am that Amphitryon who has a servant Sosia, which same turns into Mercury on occasion, I being the Amphitryon who lodge in the upper attic (pointing heavenward) and become Jupiter at times, when the humour seizes me. As soon as I wend my way into these parts, however, on the spot I am Amphitryon and change my clothes. I now appear out of regard for you, so as not to terminate this inchoate comedy. At the same time I am here to help out Alcmena, poor innocent, denounced as disloyal by her lord, Amphitryon. For it would be sinful of me, if the nam mea sit culpa, quod egomet contraxerim, si id Alcumenae innocenti expetat.

Mercurium iussi me continuo consequi, si quid vellem imperare. nunc hanc adloquar.

Alc. Durare nequeo in aedibus. ita me probri, stupri, dedecoris a viro argutam meo!

atque id me susque deque esse habituram putat. non edepol faciam, neque me perpetiar probri falso insimulatam, quin ego illum aut deseram aut satis faciat mi ille atque adiuret insuper, nolle esse dicta quae in me insontem protulit.

- Iup. Faciundum est mi illud, fieri quod illaec postulat, si me illam amantem ad sese studeam recipere, quando ego quod feci, id factum Amphitruoni offuit atque illi dudum meus amor negotium insonti exhibuit, nunc autem insonti mihi illius ira in hanc et male dicta expetent.

 Alc. Sed eccum video qui me miseram arguit
 - stupri, dedecoris.
- Iup. Te volo, uxor, conloqui.

storm I have brewed should descend on the head of guileless Alemena. I will pretend for the present to be Amphitryon myself, as I have already, and thoroughly confound this family to-day. Then, after that, I will eventually clear matters up, yes, and aid Alemena in due season, contriving that she give birth at one time to both the children she carries, her husband's and my own, without a pang. Mercury has his orders to attend me closely, in case I have commands to give. Now for a word with the lady.

Scene 2. ENTER Alcmena FROM HOUSE.

Alc. I can't stand staying in the house! To be branded so with shame, disloyalty, disgrace, by my own husband! How he clamours to make facts no facts! And what never happened, things I never, never did, he accuses me of, and thinks I'll consider it quite immaterial. Good gracious, but I won't! I won't endure such an awful, unjustified accusation: I will leave him, or he must apologize, one or the other, yes, and swear he is sorry, too, for the things he has said to an innocent woman.

Jup. (aside, dryly) Hm! It's incumbent upon me to meet her demands, if I wish the loving creature to take me into her good graces again. Since my doings offended Amphitryon, and this love affair of mine lately occasioned his guiltless self some consternation, it is turn about now, and my guiltless self has to suffer for the scorn and contumely he heaped on her.

Alc. (aside, seeing him) Ah, there he is—the man that charges his wretched wife with disloyalty and shame!

Jup. I wish to speak with you, my dear. (circling her as she turns her back on him) Turned away? Where to?

Alc. It is natural I should, sir: I always loathed looking at enemies.

Jup. Oh, I say now! Enemies?

Alc. Yes, enemies: and that's the truth of it—unless you intend to term this a lie, too.

Jup. (trying to fondle her) You're too irritable.

- Alc. (pulling away) Can't you keep your hands off? Why surely, sir, if you were sane or had a particle of sense about you, when you think your wife is immodest and tell her so yourself, you wouldn't hold any conversation with her at all in jest or earnest, unless you were the silliest of silly men.
- Jup. My saying so doesn't make you so any the more, And I don't think you so, either; and I've come back to set myself right with you. For I never did feel sicker at heart about anything than after I heard you were provoked with me. "Why did you say it?" you'll ask. I'll clear up that point for you. Bless your heart, it wasn't because I believed you were immodest. I was just testing your feelings to see what you'd do and how you'd take it. (forcing a laugh) Really it was all a joke, what I said just now, merely a bit of fun. Why, you can ask Sosia here. (pointing to house)

Alc. (coldly) Why do you not bring my relative Naucrates, as you just now said you would, to prove you had not been here?

Jup. If something is said in joke, it's not fair to take it in earnest.

Alc. I know one thing—that joke of yours cut me to the heart, sir.

Jup. (seizing her hand) I beg and beseech you, Alcmena, da mihi hanc veniam, ignosce, irata ne sies. Alc. Ego istaec feci verba virtute irrita; nunc, quando factis me impudicis abstini, ab impudicis dictis avorti volo. valeas, tibi habeas res tuas, reddas meas. iuben mi ire comites Sanan es? Iup. Alc. Iup. me meam pudicam esse uxorem arbitrarier. id ego si fallo, tum te, summe Iuppiter, quaeso, Amphitruoni ut semper iratus sies. Alc. A, propitius sit potius. Iup. Confido fore: nam ius iurandum verum te advorsum dedi. iam nunc irata non es? Alc. Non sum. Iup. Bene facis. nam in hominum aetate multa eveniunt huius modi: capiunt voluptates, capiunt rursum miserias; irae interveniunt, redeunt rursum in gratiam. 940 verum irae si quae forte eveniunt huius modi inter eos, rursum si reventum in gratiam est, bis tanto amici sunt inter se quam prius. Alc. Primum cavisse oportuit ne diceres, verum eadem si isdem purgas mi, patiunda sunt. Iup. Iube vero vasa pura adornari mihi, ut quae apud legionem vota vovi, si domum rediissem salvos, ea ego exsolvam omnia. Als. Ego istuc curabo.

by this right hand of yours, do forgive me for it:

pardon me: don't be angry!

Alc. Your charges are refuted by my honest life; now, sir, having been guiltless of gross behaviour, I will not be subjected to gross language. Good-bye. Keep your own things and return me mine. Will you order my attendants to follow me? (turns to go)

Jup. Are you in your senses?

Alc. If you decline to do so, I will go with my woman's honour as my only escort. (walks away)

Jup. (holding her) Wait, wait! I'll swear to it—at your dictation—that I believe my wife is virtuous. If I deceive you in this, then, Jove almighty, I invoke thy curse upon Amphitryon for evermore.

Alc. (hurriedly) Oh no! His blessing, his blessing!

Jup. I trust to have it, for it is a reliable oath I have given you. (draning her close) Now you're not angry, are you?

Alc. (submitting) No.

Jup. (caressing her) That's a good girl. Why, life is full of incidents of this sort. Human beings lay hold on pleasures and then again on pains. Quarrels come between them, and then they are reconciled again. But if any such quarrel as this does happen to arise between them, then when it blows over they are twice as fond of one another as they were before.

Alc. You should have been careful not to say such a thing in the first place: but if you apologize so nicely for hurting me so, I can't complain.

Jup. Well, well, then, have the sacrificial vessels prepared for me so that I can pay all the vows I vowed for a safe return home when I was in the field.

Alc. I will attend to that.

Jup. (to maids in doorway) Call Sosia out. I want him to invite Blepharo, the pilot aboard my ship, to lunch with us (EXEUNT maids). (aside) As a matter of fact, friend Blepharo will be left unlunched and looking foolish when I turn Amphitryon out neck and crop.

Alc. (aside) I wonder what he's talking about all to himself! Ah, there goes the door! Sosia's coming out.

Scene 3. ENTER Sosia.

Sos. Present, sir. If anything's needed, order away and I'll fulfil orders.

Jup. Sosia, you are the very man I want.

Sos. Is there peace between you two now, sir? I tell you what, it's a pleasure, it's a joy, to see you looking peaceful. Yes, and to my way of thinking, an honest servant ought to stick to this principle: be like what his betters are, model his expression on theirs, be in the dumps if they are in the dumps, and jolly if they are happy. But come, sir, answer me. Have you made friends again now, eh?

Jup. (reprovingly) Mocker! What I said a while ago was all in fun, and you know it.

Sos. In fun, was it? Upon my soul, I thought it was the solemn truth.

Jup. I have explained: peace is made.

Sos. That's grand, sir.

Jup. I will make those offerings I vowed, inside.

Sos. Very good, sir.

Jup. As for you, convey my invitation to Pilot Blepharo to come over from the ship and lunch with me after the sacrifice is done.

Sos. I'll be here by the time you think I'm there, sir.

Alc. Is there anything else, or shall I go in now and see to the things you'll need?

Jup. Do, by all means, and get everything ready as quickly as you can.

Alc. Come in as soon as you wish. I'll make sure there's nothing to delay you.

Jup. (tenderly) That's the way for an attentive wife to talk.

[EXIT Alcmena. There we are! Both of 'em fooled, servant and mistress, took in thinking me Amphitryon. A sad mistake! Hark ye, Sosia the divine, appear! You hear what I say, even though absent in the flesh. Drive Amphitryon away from the house when he arrives—any device you please. He must be hoodwinked while I proceed to divert myself with my wife on loan. Kindly see that this is managed precisely as you know I wish it to be, and do me service while I am sacrificing to myself.

[EXIT Jupiter.

Scene 4. ENTER Mercury HURRIEDLY WITH BURLESQUE IMPORTANCE.

Mer. (to imaginary passers-by) Get away, get out, get off the street, every one! Let no man be so bold as to block my path. (to audience) For damme, just tell me why a god like me hasn't as much right to hector people that hinder him as your paltry slave in the comedies? He brings word the ship is safe, or the choleric old man approaching: (magnificently) as for me, I hearken to the word of Jove and at his bidding do I now hie me hither. Wherefore 'tis still more seemly to get out, to get off the street for me. My father calls me; I come, obedient to his hest and will. (confidingly) I am a good son to my father, as a son should be. I back him

He's in love: he's wise; he does well to indulge his inclinations. It is what every one ought to do, that is within due bounds. At present my father wishes Amphitryon to be fooled: fooled he shall be finely. I promise you, here and now, spectators, and under your inspection. I'm going to put a garland on my head and make believe I'm drunk, yes, and I'll climb out on the roof yonder (pointing to Amphitryon's house) and repel our returning hero in glorious style from up above there. I'll see that he's both soaked and sober. Then that servant Sosia of his shall promptly smart for it, Sosia being accused of doing what I do here. But what of that? I must humour my own father: it is only dutiful to meet his desires. (looking down street) But there's Amphitryon coming! Here and now he'll be finely fooled—if you'll only take the trouble to attend. I'll go inside and make up as a person flown with wine; then I'll up on the roof to keep him off. EXIT INTO HOUSE.

ACT IV

ENTER Amphitryon WEARILY.

Amph. Naucrates, whom I wanted to get hold of wasn't on the ship, and not a soul can I find at his house or in the city who has seen him. first to last.—I'm tired to death looking for him, and not a sign of Naucrates anywhere. Now I'm going home and ask my wife some more questions about this, and (savagely) find out who it is she has prostituted herself for. Ah, I'd sooner die than let the day pass without having this matter settled. (trying door) Well! they've locked up the house! Nice doings! Quite in accord with the rest of it. I'll knock. (does so) Open up here! Hey! is anyone in? Open—somebody! (knocks more lustily)

Scene 2. Mercury, MUCH DISHEVELLED, APPEARS ON ROOF.

(thickly) Who's at the door? Mer:

Amph.I am.

Mer.I am, eh?

Amph.(sharply) So I say.

Jupiter and . . . all the . . . gods . . . are surely Mer. . . . angry at you . . . demolishing our door so.

Amph.What do you mean?

Mer.Here's . . . what I mean: you're certainly going to have a bad, bad time of it.

(sternly) Sosia! Amph.

Mer.Just so! That's me . . . unless you think I've forgotten. Now what do . . . you want?

Rascal! Do you actually dare ask me that—what Amph.I want?

Of course I do. You've almost hammered the doors Mer. off their hinges, you . . . stupid. Didn't suppose we were supplied with doors at public expense, did you? What are you staring at me for, you . . . booby? What are you after now? Who are you?

Amph. You scoundrel! Still asking me who I am, you death-on-rods, you? By gad, I'll warm you up with a whip to-day for this insolence!

Mer. You must have been a waster . . . in your . . . younger days.

Amph. How so?

Mer. Well . . . here you are in your declining years begging . . . me for trouble.

Amph. You shall soon suffer for this flow of language, you drudge.

Mer. I'm sacrificing to ye, I am.

Amph. How?

Mer. (slyly poising a pail of water) Why, because I'm making you an offering of a . . . calamity.

[At this point there is a gap in the MSS. Only a few lines have been preserved. Leo outlines the lost part as follows: After Mercury has had sufficient amusement with Amphitryon, the disturbance calls Alcmena from within. She has a dispute with her husband—Jupiter had left her earlier so that he might offer sacrifice—and shuts him out of the house. Perhaps Amphitryon went away to summon friends to aid him: at any rate, Sosia appears with Blepharo and gets a bad welcome from his master, despite Blepharo's patronage, and then escapes. Jupiter comes out of the house. Husband and lover abuse each other vigorously and a scuffle ensues. Blepharo is appealed to by Amphitryon, only to be made ridiculous by Jupiter.]

Amph. But I'll make you an offering of torture and torment, you whipping post.

Mer. The master, Amphitryon, is busy.

Mer. — now you still have a chance to leave.

By the Lord, that villain shall never make game of me and escape, whoever he is! I'll go straight to the king this moment and tell him all as it happened. I swear I'll have my revenge this day on that Thessalian sorcerer who has turned the wits of my household topsy-turvy. (looking around) Where is he, though? Good God! He's gone inside—to my wife, no doubt! Oh, of all miserable men in Thebes! What shall I do now? Disowned and humbugged by every mortal soul to suit their humour! (pause) My mind's made up—I'll burst into the house, and every human creature there I set my eyes on, maid or man, wife or paramour, father or grandfather, I'll cut them down in my halls! And not the will of Jupiter and all the gods shall stop my doing as I've determined! I'll in this minute! (he rushes toward door: a peal of thunder: he falls to ground motionless)

(Half an hour has elapsed.)

ENTER Bromia FROM HOUSE, IN A PANIC. .

Oh, my hopes and chances of getting out of this Brom.alive are dead and buried inside of me! There's not a thing left to keep my courage up now! The way everything-sea, land, sky-does seem set on crushing me, killing me off this instant! dear, oh dear! What to do I don't know. amazing things as did happen in there! Oh, poor me! I feel faint. Oh, for some water! I'm a wreck, I'm all done up. My head's splitting, and I can't hear or see right, either. There isn't a wretcheder woman on earth, or one that could seem so, either. The experience mistress did have this day! As soon as her time comes she calls on the gods to help her, and there's a grumbling and rumbling and smashing and crashing-what a crash, so sudden and quick and heavy it was! Every one fell flat where he stood at the peal. And then some one or other called out in a mighty voice: "Alcmena, help is at hand: be not afraid. To thee and thine the sovereign of the skies comes in kindliness. Rise," he said, " ye who have fallen in terror, from dread of me." Having dropped, I got on my feet: I thought the house was afire, the way it was all lit up then. Just then Alcmena calls for me to come. I was trembling already at what happened, but fear of mistress prevailed, and up I run to find out what she wants. And there I see she has given birth to twins, boys, and not a soul of us noticed when it happened, or is ready for it! (sees prostrate Amphitryon) But what's this? Who's this old man lying like this in front of our house? Why, can it be he's struck by lightning? Why, mercy me, I do believe so! For, good gracious, he's as complètely disposed of as if he was a corpse! I'll go find out, whoever it is. (approaches) It's Amphitryon! It's my master! Amph. For heaven's sake hurry up and don't keep me on tenterhooks! I have had enough of your trifling! What happened next?

Brom. While this was going on, not one of us heard your wife groan or whimper a bit, sir, the whole time: that's how she bore those boys, sir—never a pang, that's plain.

Amph. (heartily) Well now, I'm glad of that, no matter what her behaviour to me has been.

Brom. Do let that be, sir, and listen. After they were born she told us to bathe them. We began. But that boy I bathed! How big and strong he was! Not a soul of us could wrap him in his swaddling clothes.

Amph. A most astounding story! If it be true, there's no doubt that my wife received divine aid.

Brom. You'll call this more astounding still, sir, I warrant you. After he was tucked in his cradle, two enor-

The almighty ruler of gods and men, Jupiter. He Brom.said that he himself had secretly shared Alcmena's bed and that that was his son who had crushed the serpents: the other one, he said, was your own child.

ARGUMENT OF THE PLAY

An old gentleman, whose wife is the head of the household, desires to give his son financial support in a love affair. He therefore had some money, brought to Saurea in payment for some asses, counted out to a certain rascally servant of his own, Leonida. This money goes to the young fellow's mistress, and he concedes his father an evening with her. A rival of his, beside himself at being deprived of the girl, sends word, by a parasite, to the old gentleman's wife, of the whole matter. In rushes the wife and drags her husband from the house of vice.

PROLOGUE

Kindly give us your entire attention now, spectators: I heartily hope it will result in benefit to me, also to you, and to this company and its managers, and to those that hire them. to a herald) Herald, provide all this crowd with ears at once. (the herald proclaims silence) Enough enough! Sit down-and be sure you put that in your bill! (to audience) Now I shall say why I have come out before you here and what I wished: I have come to acquaint you with the name of this play. For as far as the plot is concerned, that is quite simple. Now I shall say what I said I wished to say: the Greek name of this play is ONAGOS: Demophilus wrote it: Maccus translated it into a foreign tongue. He wishes to call it THE COM-EDY OF ASSES, by your leave. It is a clever comedy, full of drollery and laughable situations. Do oblige me by being attentive, that now too, as in other days, Mars may be with you.

(with an air of profound moral conviction) Libanus, all parents who take my advice will be a bit indulgent to their children, seeing it makes a son more friendly and affectionate. Yes, and I am anxious to be so myself. I wish to be loved by my own flesh and blood; I wish to model myself on my own father who dressed up as a shipmaster for my sake and swindled a slave-dealer out of a girl I was in love He felt no shame at going in for hocuspocus at his time of life, and buying his son's affection, mine, by his kindnesses. These methods of my father's I have resolved to follow out myself. Well now, this very day my boy Argyrippus begged me to supply him with some money, saying he was in love: and I heartily desire to oblige the dear lad. No matter if his mother does keep a firm, tight rein on him and play the ordinary father's part, none of that for me. And seeing he has regarded me as worthy of his confidence, I have special reason to respect his inclinations. Now that he has applied to me, as a respectful son should to his father, I am desirous that he should have some money for his mistress.

Lib. You're desirous of something you'll desire in vain, sir, I reckon. Your wife's brought along Saurea. that dower slave of hers, to have more power than you.

Dem. Well, me, or my wife, or servant Saurea—do your best, swindle us, rook us; I promise you your interests won't suffer, if you accomplish this to-day.

Dem. I will.

Dem. Go ahead! A pleasant stroll to you! (Libanus walks away) And I say,—listening still, are you?

Dem. Look here! I shall be at banker Archibulus's.

Lib. In the forum, you mean?

Dem. Yes, there,—if anything's needed.

Lib. (nonchalantly) I'll keep it in mind.

Dem. A more rascally servant than this of mine can't be found, or a wilier one, or one harder to guard against. But he's just your man to commit a matter to, if you want it well managed: he'd prefer to expire in pain and torment rather than fail to fulfil his promise to the letter. Why, I'm just as confident that that money is in store for my son as that I've got my eyes on this cane here. But I must be off to the forum, where I was going. Yes, and I'll wait there at the banker's.

All I've given you and all I've done for you gets no thanks, goes for nothing, I find: but after this all I can do against you I'll do, and do it with good By the Lord, I'll put you down where you came from, the depths of destitution, I will. By heaven, I'll make you appreciate what you are now and what you were. You, who before I courted that girl of yours and offered her my loving heart, used to regale yourself on coarse bread in rags and poverty: yes, and gave hearty thanks to Heaven, if you got your bread and rags. Yet here you are, now that you are better off, snubbing me that made you so, curse you! I'll tame you down, you wild beast, by the famine treatment: trust me for that. As for that girl of yours, why should I be angry with her? She's done nothing, she's not at all to blame. It is your dictates she follows, your orders she obeys: you're mother and mistress both. You're the one I'll have revenge on; you're the one I'll ruin as you deserve, as your behaviour to me merits. (pauses and glares at house) But d'ye see how the wretch doesn't even think it worth while to come to me, talk with me, go on her knees to me, when I'm in a rage? Scene 3. ENTER Cleareta FROM HOUSE.

Cle. (calmly and pleasantly) Not a single one of those words do I part with for golden sovereigns, not if some purchaser comes along: uncomplimentary remarks about us from you are good coin of the realm. Your heart is fastened to us here with one of Cupid's spikes through it. Out with oar and up with sail, speed your fastest and scud away: the more you put out to sea, the more the tide brings you back to harbour.

Argyr. (grimly) By the Lord, I'll hold back that harbour master's harbour dues; from this time forth you'll get the treatment you merit of me and my exchequer, for this unmerited treatment of me, this

Cle. (lightly) Such things are easier said than done, I observe.

Argyr. I, and I alone, am the man that rescued you from loneliness and destitution; even if I should take the girl for myself alone, you'd still be in my debt.

Cle. Take her for yourself alone, if you alone will always give me what I demand. You can always be sure of her—on condition your presents are the biggest.

Argyr. And what end to the presents? Why, you can never be sated. Now you get something, and a minute later you're devising some new demand.

Cle. And what end to the taking her, to the lovey-doveying? Can you never be sated? Now you have sent her back to me, and the next instant you're crying for me to send her back to you.

Argyr. You're using me shamefully.

Cle." Why find fault with me for doing my plain duty? Why, nowhere in stone, paint, or poem is a lady in my line portrayed as using any lover well—if she wants to get on.

Argyr. (appealingly) You really ought to use me sparingly, though, so that I may last you a long time.

Cle. (coolly) You miss the point? The lady that spares her lover spares herself too little. Lovers are the same as fish to us-no good unless they're fresh. Your fresh ones are juicy and sweet; you can season them to taste in a stew, bake them, and turn them every way. Your fresh one wants to give you things, wants to be asked for something: in his case it all comes from a full cupboard, you see; and he has no idea what he's giving, what it costs him. This is his only thought: he wants to please, please his girl, please me, please the waitingwoman, please the men servants, please the maid servants, too: yes, the new lover makes up to my little dog, even, so that he may be glad to see This is the plain truth: every one ought to keep a sharp eve for the main chance.

Argyr. I have thoroughly learned the truth of that, and a pretty penny it's cost me.

Cle. Tut, tut! If you had anything left to give us, your language would be different; now that you have nothing, you expect to get her by abuse.

Argyr. That's not my way.

Cle. Nor mine, sir, to let you have her gratis—mercy, no! But, considering your youth and our high regard for you, this shall be done, seeing you have been more of an income to us than a credit to yourself: just hand me over (casually) four hundred pounds in cash and you shall have this evening with her, in token of said high regard, as a free gift from me.

Argyr. What if I haven't it?

Cle. (smiling, but firm) I'll give you credit—that you haven't it: the girl shall go to some one else, however.

Argyr. Where is what I gave you before?

Ck. Spent. Why, if it had lasted, you should have your lady, and not a thing would 1 be asking for. Daylight, water, sunlight, moonlight, darkness—for these things I have to pay no money: everything else we wish to use we purchase on Greek credit. When we go to the baker for bread, to the vintner for winc, their rule is commodities for cash: we use the same system ourselves. Our hands have eyes always: seeing is believing with them. As the old proverb has it: "There's no getting"—you know what. I say no more.

Argyr. It's a different sort of eloquence you use on me now I've been fleeced, very different, I say, from that former sort when I was giving you things, different from that former sort when you were luring me on with your smooth, suave talk. Then your very house used to be wreathed in smiles, when I turned up. You used to say I was the one and only love in all the world for you and her. After I'd given you anything the both of you used to keep hanging on my lips like a pair of young doves. Whatever I fancied, you fancied, and nothing else. You used to keep clinging to me. I ordered a thing, wished a thing,—you used to do it: I disliked a thing, forbade a thing,—you used to take pains to avoid doing it: you didn't dare attempt to do it then. Now you don't care tuppence what I like, or don't like, you vile wretches!

Cle. (still cheerfully superior) You miss the point? This profession of ours is a great deal like bird-catching. The fowler, when he has his fowling-floor prepared, spreads food around: the birds become familiarized: you must spend money, if you wish to make money. They often get a meal: but once they get caught they recoup the fowler. is quite the same with us here: our house is the floor, I am the fowler, the girl the bait, the couch the decoy, the lovers the birds. They become through pleasant familiar greetings, pretty speeches, kisses, cooey, captivating little whispers. If he cuddles her close in his arms, well, no harm to the fowler. If he takes a naughty kind of kiss, he can be taken himself, and no net needed. You to forget all this, and so long in the school, too?

Argyr. It's your fault, if I have: you expelled your pupil when he was half taught.

Cle. Trot along back to us holdly, if you find the tuition fee: for the present run away. (turns to go in)

Argyr. Wait, wait, listen! Tell me, what do you think I ought to give you to have her all to myself this next year?

Cle. (laughingly) What? You? (after a pause) Eighty pounds: yes, and on this condition—if some one else brings me the money before you do, good-bye to you. (again turning to go)

Argyr. But there's something more I want to say before you go.

Cle. Say on, anything.

Argyr. I'm not entirely ruined yet: there is a balance left for further ruin. I can give you what you ask.

All you desire, all you like,—impose your own terms on us: only bring along the money, too; the rest is easy for me. Our doors are much like those of a custom house: pay your fee, and they are open: if you can't, they are—(going into house and closing the door in his face with a provoking laugh) not open.

Argyr. (drearily) It's all over with me, if I don't get hold of that eighty pounds: yes, one thing is sure, that money goes to pot, or else my life must. (a pause, then with animation) I'll off to the forum this moment and try to raise it by every means in my power: I'll entreat, ex-supplicate every friend I see. Good and bad—I'll up and try them all, I'm resolved on that: and if I can't get it as a friendly loan, I'm resolved to borrow it at usury.

Save your master: mind you don't do the same as other servants that use their wilv wits to gull him. (pause) Where shall I get it? Who shall I swindle? Where shall I steer this cutter? (looking upwards, then jubilantly) I've got my auspices, my auguries: the birds let me steer it where I please! Woodpecker and crow on the left, raven and barn owl on the right. "Go ahead," they say! By Jove, I'll follow your advice, I certainly will. (looking upward again) What's this, though, the woodpecker tapping an elm? 1 That's not for nothing! Lord! So far as I understand the omen of this woodpecker, that certainly means there are rods in pickle for me, or for steward Saurea. (looking down street) But what's wrong—Leonida running up here all out of breath? I'm afraid now that the bird there has predicted trouble for my artful arts.

Scene 2. ENTER Leonida IN GREAT EXCITEMENT, WITHOUT SEEING Libanus.

Leon. Where shall I look for Libanus now, or young master, so that I can make them more delighted than Delight herself? Oh, the mighty prize and triumph my coming confers on 'em! But if he's ready to take part with me and pounce on this opportunity that's turned up, he'll be my partner in hatching the biggest, joy-stuffedest jubilee that ever was for his masters, son and father both, yes, and put the pair of 'em under obligations to the pair of us for life, too, chained tight by our services.

Lib. (aside) Chained, he says: some one or other chained! I don't like it. I'm afraid he's been trumping up some trumpery that'll involve the both of us.

Leon. (quivering with excitement) I'm absolutely done for, if I don't find Libanus at once, wherever he is.

Lib. That chap's after a mate to yoke with in a race for a thrashing. I don't like it! it means something bad soon, when a man in a sweat shivers.

Leon. Ah there, (turning and stopping) you whip developer!

Lib. How goes it, gaol guard?

Leon. Oh you fetter farmer.

Lib. Oh you rod tickler!

Leon. How much do you think you weigh, stripped?

Lib. Lord! I don't know.

Leon. I knew you didn't know: but by the Lord, I know for I've weighed you. Stripped and tied you weigh a hundred pounds—when you're hanging by your heels.

Lib. What's your proof of that?

Leon. I'll tell you my proof and my method. When a fair hundredweight is fastened to your feet, with the handcuffs hugging your hands lashed to a beam, you're not a bit under or over the weight of—a good-for-nothing rascal.

Lib. You be damned!

I've just now come upon such a deed for us to do, that we two will be called the worthiest men alive—to be where the torture's thickest.

Lib. (dryly) Aha! I was wondering what made my shoulders tingle a while ago: they began prognosticating trouble was in pickle for 'em. Whatever it is, out with it!

Lib. I won't. (grandly) My ears await your tidings.

Leon. Listen here, and you'll know about things as well as I do.

Lib. I'm dumb.

Leon. (ironically) Oh, bliss! Do you remember those Arcadian asses our steward sold to the merchant from Pella?

Lib. I do. Well, what next?

Leon. Now then! He's sent the money for 'em, to be paid to Saurea. A young chap's just arrived with it.

Lib. (with a start) Where is he?

Leon. Think he ought to be swallowed down the minute you spy him, eh?

Lib. Aye, that I do! But let me see, of course you mean those poor old lame asses with their hoofs worn away up to their hocks?

Leon. Precisely! the ones that used to come down from the farm with loads of elm rods for you.

Lib. I have you: yes, the same ones that carried you off to the farm in fetters.

Leon. Remarkable memory, yours! However, when I was in the barber's chair he speaks up and asks me if I know a Demaenetus, the son of Strato. I say yes at once, and declare that I'm his servant, and I told him where our house was.

Lib. Well, what next?

Leon. He says he's bringing money for the asses to steward Saurea, eighty pounds; but that he doesn't know the man at all: says he knows Demaenetus himself well, though. After he had given me an account of things this way——

Lib. What next?

Leon. Well, listen and you'll find out. Instantly I pose as a fine, superior sort of creature and tell him I am the steward. Here's the way he answered me: "Well, well," says he, "I am not acquainted with Saurea personally and I don't know what he looks like. You have no reason to take offence. Bring along your master Demaenetus whom I do know, if you please: I'll let you have the money without delay." I told him I would bring my master and be at home waiting for him. He's going to the baths: then he'll be here later. What do you propose now for a plan of campaign? Tell me.

Lib. (thinking) That's the point! Just what I'm casting about for-some way to relieve newcomer and Saurea of the cash. We must have our scheme roughed out at once; for let that stranger fetch his money before we're ready and the next minute we're both shut out of it. You see, the old man took me aside out of the house to-day all by myself: swore he'd made the pair of us perfectly elmy, if eighty pounds was not forthcoming for Argyrippus this very day. He gave us orders to do the steward out of it, or else his wife: said he'd stand by us whichever it was. Now you be off to the forum to master and tell him what our game will be: that you are going to change from Leonida to steward Saurea when the trader brings the money for the asses.

Leon. I'll do as you say. (moves off')

Lib. I'll entertain him here myself meanwhile, if he happens to come before you do.

Leon. (halting) I say.

Leon. Come, come, put up with it patiently.

Lib. Yes, and you put up with it when I hit you back.

Leon. I'm telling how it's got to be done.

Lib. And by the Lord. I'm telling how I'm going to do it.

Leon. Don't refuse.

Lib. Oh, I agree, I agree—to pay you back all you earn.

Leon. (turning to go) I'm off: you'll put up with it now, I know you will. (looking down street) Hullo! Who's this! It's he, the very man! I'll hurry back here soon! You keep him here while I'm gone. I must tell the old man. (stops to look again) wards. Now he pays his bills: even brings his banker over to the house besides, and writes his cheque. Has Dromo brought home his wages?

Lib. Only half, I think.

Leon. And the rest?

Lib. He said he'd give it to you as soon as it was given to him; claimed it was kept back so that he'd finish up a job that was placed with him.

Leon. Those cups that I lent Philodamus—has he returned 'em?

Lib. Not yet.

Leon. Hey? No? (sourly) Give things away, if you like, —give 'em to a friend on loan.

Trader (half aside, wearily) Oh, the devil! The fellow will be driving me off before long with his confounded talk.

Lib. (aside to Leonida) Hi, you! That's enough now! D'ye hear what he says?

Leon. (aside to Libanus) I hear; I'll calm down.

Trader (aside) Silent at last, I do believe. Best approach him now before he begins to rattle on again. (aloud to Leonida) How soon can you give me your attention?

Leon. (looking at him and affecting surprise) Aha! Splendid! How long have you been here? Well, well, I hadn't noticed you before! I trust you won't feel offended. I was so angry that it affected my eyesight.

Trader Nothing strange in that. But I wished to see Demaenetus, if he is at home.

Leon. He (indicating Libanus) says he's not in. But as to that money, though,—count it out to me, if you like, and then I'll engage that your account with us is settled.

Trader I should prefer to make the payment in the presence of your master Demaenetus.

Lib. (protestingly) Oh, master knows him and he knows master.

Trader (firmly) I shall pay him in his master's presence.

Lib. Oh now, give it to him, at my risk: I'll make it all right. Why, if our old man knew Saurea here was doubted, he'd be furious: he always trusts him with everything himself.

Leon. (very superior) It's of no importance. He can keep it, if he wants. Let him stand by with it there.

Lib. (aside to trader) I say, do give it to him. Oh dear, this is awful! I'm afraid he'll think I persuaded you not to trust him. Give it to him, for mercy's sake, and don't be afraid. Good Lord, it'll be all right!

Trader I trust it will be, so long as I keep hold of it myself, anyway. I am a stranger here: I don't know Saurea.

Lib. (pointing to Leonida) Well, just make his acquaintance, then.

Trader Whether he is the man or not, I don't know by, gad. If he is, he is, of course. I certainly do know that when I am uncertain I give this (showing a nallet) to nobody on earth.

Leon. Be damned to the fellow! (to Libanus) Not a word of entreaty, you! He's puffed up at having the handling of my eighty pounds. (to trader) No one will take it! Home with you! Away with you! Don't bother me!

Trader (scoffingly) Quite in a pet! The idea of a mere slave being arrogant!

Leon. (to Libanus) By heaven, you'll soon pay dear for it, if you don't abuse him!

Trader Gad! It's a bad time you two are looking for.

Leon. (to Libanus) Continuing to coax that criminal, are you?

Trader (getting indignant) How is this? You dare to abuse a free man, you, you slave?

Leon. You be thrashed!

Trader Be thrashed? Precisely what will be done to you, by gad, the moment I set eyes on Demaenetus to-day!

Leon. What, you whipping post? So, you gallowsbird? D'ye think we skulk from our master? On with you straight to the master you summon us to, the master you've wanted to see this long time past. (goes toward forum)

Trader At last, eh? But never a penny do you get from me, unless I am instructed to give it to you by Demaenetus.

Leon. All right, all right! Come, step along, then! Do you want to insult another man and not get it back? I'm as much of a man as you are!

without presumption, let me tell you this now: no one has ever yet accused me justly, and there's not a single other man in all Athens that people think worthy of such confidence as me, either.

Trader I dare say. But notwithstanding, never will you induce me to-day to trust this money to you, a stranger. (somewhat apologetically) "Man is no man, but a wolf, to a stranger."

Leon. (encouraged) Now there, that's decent of you! I knew you'd soon be making amends to a good fellow for doing him an injustice. No matter if I do look shabby, I'm an honest man just the same, and as for the cash I've laid by—it can't be counted.

Trader (sceptically) I dare say.

Leon. Even Periphanes, the rich trader from Rhodes, counted out two hundred pounds to me when master was away and we were all by ourselves,—he trusted me, and he wasn't deceived in doing so, either.

Trader I dare say.

Leon. Yes, and even you yourself, too, if you had only inquired from others about me, I know you would trust me with what you've got there, good Lord, yes!

Trader (icily) I should be sorry to deny it. (motions Leonida to lead the way to Demaenetus)

- Phil. How should I be showing myself duteous to Filial Duty, mother, if I tried to please you by practising such practices and doing as you prescribe?
- Cle. Is this regarding filial duty, to lessen a mother's authority?
- Phil. I don't find fault with mothers that do right, and I don't like ones that do wrong.
- Cle. A glib enough little hussy!
- Phil. (lightly) All in my profession, mother: tongue asks, body teases; fancy prompts, circumstances suggest.
- Cle. I intended to scold you, and here you are turning on me!
- Phil. Oh, no! I'm not turning on you: I don't think that would be right. But I do think it's a cruel fate to be kept away from the man I love.
- Cle. Am I to get some share of the speechmaking before nightfall?
- Phil. I give you my share and your own, too: you can be boatswain yourself and give the signal for talking and keeping still. But goodness me, if I once lay down the oar, I, and stay by myself resting in the rowers' room, the progress of this whole household stops short, you see.
- Cle. Look here! Of all the impudent young misses I have ever seen! How many times have I forbidden you to have communication or contact or chitchat with Demaenetus's son, Argyrippus, or to cast your eyes on him? What has he given us? What has he had sent us? make love to him yourself, run after him yourself, have him called yourself. Men that give you things you treat with contempt; those that trifle with you you dote on. Have you any business waiting for it to happen, if a man does promise to make you rich, if his mother dies? Mercy me, while we wait for her to die, up looms a big risk of ourselves and our household dying of starvation! Now let me tell you this: unless he brings me eighty pounds, I swear to goodness that fellow shall be bundled out of the house, liberal as he is—of tears! This is the last day I accept pleas of poverty.

Phil. Tell me to do without food, mother dear, and I'll endure that.

Cle. I have nothing to say against your loving men who give you something to be loved for.

Phil. What if my heart isn't free, mother? What then? Advise me.

Cle. Look! Consider these grey hairs of mine, if you really have any regard for your own good.

Phil. Even the shepherd that pastures other peoples' sheep has some ewe lamb of his very own, mother, one that he builds happy hopes on. Do let me love Argyrippus alone, the man I want, just for love's sake.

Cle. Inside with you! Why, mercy on us, a more shameless minx than you really can't exist.

Lib. Drop your nonsense now and answer me this question.

Leon. Ask your question.

Lib. (triumphantly) The eighty pounds, have you got it?

Leon. You're a prophet! By gad, old Demaenetus did do the handsome thing by us. The way he pretended I was Saurea—clever, my word! I did have a deuce of a time holding in when he hauled our guest over the coals for not being willing to trust me in his absence. The way he remembered to keep calling me steward Saurea!

Argyr. (sadly) Why hold me back?

Phil. (learfully) Because it's dreadful having you leave me when I love you so.

Argyr. (trying half-heartedly to release himself) Farewell!

Phil. (still clinging to him) I should fare much better if you'd stay with me.

Argyr. And God bless you!

Phil. You ask God to bless me when you curse me yourself by going?

Argyr. Your mother said this was to be my last hour: she has ordered me home.

Phil. She'll make her daughter die in misery, if I must be deprived of you.

Lib. (aside to Leonida) By gad! He's been shut out of the house here.

Leon. So he has.

Argyr. (dismally) Come, come, let go! (pulls away from her and turns to go)

Phil. Where are you off to now? Why don't you stay here?

Argyr. I will at night, if you want.

Lib. Hear the chap—how free he is with his attentions by night? For now in the daytime he's a hardworking Solon, drawing up laws to bind the people—oh, yes he is! Rot! Folks that set themselves to obey his laws won't ever be good for anything, that's sure,—except drinking day and night.

Leon. Good Lord! The fellow wouldn't move a step from her, if he had his way, not he, for all this rush of his and threats to leave her.

Lib. Come, make an end of your talk: I want to take in some of his.

Argur. Vale.

Argyr. (tragically) Farewell! (starts away)

Phil. Where are you hurrying to?

Argyr. Farewell! Be happy. I shall see you in the world to come! For upon my soul, this world and I shall now be divorced as soon as possible!

Phil. (running up and clinging to him) Oh, for heaven's sake, why, why do you wish to condemn me to death yourself, innocent as I am?

Argyr. I you? If I saw your life was ebbing, I'd freely give you my own at once and add my years to yours.

Phil. Then why do you theaten me with throwing away your life? For what do you think I will do, if you do what you say? My mind's made up:
I'll do to myself just precisely what you do to yourself.

Argyr. Oh, you're sweeter than sweet honey!

Phil. And you're my very life, I know that. Do put your arms around me!

Argyr. (doing so) Yes, yes, gladly!

Phil. Oh, if we could only be carried to the grave like this!

Leon. I say, Libanus, what a poor devil a chap in love is! Lib. By Jove, no! A chap hung up by his heels is a much poorer devil, believe me.

Leon. I know that: I've tried it. (a pause) Let's surround him, and give him a salute, one from here (pointing) and the other from here. (they station themselves: then, giving the signal to Libanus to chime in, loudly to Argyrippus) Good day, sir! (the lovers give a start) But—this lady you're hugging isn't smoke, is she?

Argyr. Smoke? Why so?

Leon. Well, your eyes are watering; that's why I asked.

Argyr. Patronus qui vobis fuit futurus, perdidistis.

Leon. Equidem hercle nullum perdidi, ideo quia numquam ullum habui.

hinc med amantem ex aedibus eiecit huius mater. argenti viginti minae me ad mortem appulerunt, quas hodie adulescens Diabolus ipsi daturus dixit, ut hanc ne quoquam mitteret nisi ad se hunc annum totum.

videtin viginti minae quid pollent quidve possunt? ille qui illas perdit salvos est, ego qui non perdo pereo.

Lib. Iam dedit argentum?

Argyr. Non dedit.

Lib. Bono animo es, ne formida.

Argyr. (tragically) You have lost a man who would have freed you and been your patron, my lads.

Leon. Lord! I haven't lost any such, no, indeed, seeing
I never had any such.

Lib. Good day to you, Philaenium.

Phil. God grant all your wishes, to both of you.

Lib. I'd wish an evening with you and a cask of wine, if wishing was having.

Argyr. Hold your tongue, you rascal!

Lib. Oh, wish 'em for you, I mean, sir, not for myself.

Argyr. Then in that case, say what you like.

Lib. Like? I'd like to give this chap (pointing to Leonida) a thrashing, by gad!

Leon. (ironically) Well, well, who'd believe it of you, you frizzle-headed girl hunter? You thrash me, you, you that live on thrashings?

Argyr. (tragical again) Ah, Libanus, how far preferable your lot is to mine—I who will never never live till evening!

Lib. How's that, for mercy's sake?

Argyr. Because I love her (indicating Philaenium) and she loves me; and (bitterly) never a penny can I find anywhere to give her; and her mother has thrown me out of the house here, me, her daughter's lover. I'm driven to my death by eighty pounds, eighty pounds young Diabolus promised to pay her to-day for letting no one else but him have my girl the whole of this next year. Do you see the power, the possibilities in eighty pounds? The man that loses them is saved: I don't lose them and I'm lost myself.

Lib. Has he paid 'em over already?

Argyr. No.

Lib. Cheer up: never you fear.

Leon.	Secede nuc, Libane, te voio.
Lib.	Si quid vis.
Argyr.	Obsecro vos,
-	eadem istac opera suaviust complexos fabulari.	640
Lib.	Non omnia eadem aeque omnibus, ere, suavia esse scito:
1	vobis est suave amantibus complexos fabulari, ego complexum huius nil moror, meum autem hic aspernatur.
	proinde istud facias ipse quod faciamus nobis suades.
Argyr.	Ego vero, et quidem edepol lubens. interea, si videtur, concedite istuc.
Leon.	Vin erum deludi?
Lib.	Dignust sane.
Leon.	Vin faciam ut te Philaenium praesente hoc amplexetur?
Lib.	Cupio hercle.
Leon.	Sequere hac.
Argyr.	Ecquid est salutis? satis locuti.
Leon.	Auscultate atque operam date et mea dicta devorate.
	primum omnium servos tuos nos esse non negamus;	650
	sed tibi si viginti minae argenti proferentur, quo nos vocabis nomine?
Argyr.	Libertos.
Leon.	Non patronos?
Argyr.	Id potius.
Leon.	Viginti minae hic insunt in crumina, has ego, si vis, tibi dabo.

Leon. Libanus! Come over here: I want you.

Lib. (obeying) Anything to please. (they nithdraw and talk, heads close together)

Argyr. (calling) For heaven's sake, you two! You'd find it pleasanter to hug each other, while you do your chatting!

Lib. Tastes differ about what's pleasant, sir, let me tell you that. A fond pair like you find it pleasant to hug each other while you do your chatting; but, personally, I don't care for this fellow's hugs, and as for mine, he scorns 'em. So you go on and practise yourself what you preach to us.

Argyr. Indeed I will, by Jove, yes, and gladly. Meanwhile you two go on and step aside there, if you see fit. (embraces Philaenium)

Leon. D'ye want to have some fun with master?

Lib. That I do, serves him right.

Leon. D'ye want me to make Philaenium give you a squeeze right before his face?

Lib. (enthusiastically) Gad, I long for one!

Leon. Come along. (leads the way back to Argyrippus and (Philaenium)

Argyr. Any good news? You have talked enough.

Leon. (importantly) Listen here, you two; pay attention and devour my remarks. (to Argyrippus) First of all, we are your slaves, we don't deny that; but if eighty pounds is produced for you, what will you call us?

Argyr. (eagerly) Freedmen! Leon. Not patrons, eh?

Argyr. Yes, yes, patrons!

Leon. There's eighty pounds in this wallet here: I'll give it to you if you like.

Argyr.	Di te servassint semper, custos erilis, decus popli, thensaurus copiarum, salus interioris¹ corporis amorisque imperator.
	hic pone, hic istam colloca cruminam in collo plane.
Leon.	Nolo ego te, qui erus sis, mihi onus istuc sustincre.
Argyr.	Quin tu labore liberas te atque istam imponis in me?
Leon.	Ego baiulabo, tu, ut dacet dominum, ante me ito

Argyr.	Quid nune?
Leon.	Quid est?
Argyr.	Quin tradis huc cruminam pressatum

Leon.	Hanc, cui daturu's hanc, iube petere atque orare mecum.
	nam istuc proclive est, quo iubes me plane collocare.
Phil.	Da, meus ocellus. mea rosa. mi anime. mea voluptas,
	Leonida, argentum mihi, ne nos diiunge amantis.

Argyr. Heaven prosper you for evermore, you guardian of your master, you glory of the populace, you storehouse of supplies, saviour of the inner man, and generalissimo of love! Put it here, hang that wallet here around my neck in plain sight.

Leon. Let my master bear such a load? No sir, not I.

Argyr. Why not take things easy yourself and let me stand the strain?

Leon. I'll act as porter myself; as for you, you walk on ahead as a master should, empty handed.

Argyr. (eagerly) Well now? Leon. (drawling) Well what?

Argyr. Why don't you hand the wallet over and let it crush my shoulder?

Leon. She's the one, (pointing to Philaenium) the one you'll give it to, tell her to ask me for it, tease me for it. You see that plain site you told me to put it on is a (with a sly glance at Philaenium) slope.

Phil Oh, Leonida, you apple of my eye, my rosebud, my heart's delight, my darling, do give me the money!

Don't separate us lovers.

Leon (with burlesque fondness) Well then, call me your little sparrow, hen, quail, call me your little lamb-kin, kidlet, or calfyboy, if you prefer: take hold of me by the earlaps and match my little lips to your little lips.

Argyr. She kiss you, you scoundrel?

Leon. Yes, it does seem a shame, doesn't it? However, you don't get the cash this day, by gad, unless you rub my knees.

Argyr. "Need knows no shame." Rubbed they shall be. (gets down on ground, with poor grace, and clasps Leonida's knees) Won't you grant my prayer? (gets up)

- Phil. Age, mi Leonida, obsecro, fer amanti ero salutem, redime istoc beneficio te ab hoc, et tibi eme hunc isto argento.
- Leon. Nimis bella es atque amabilis, et si hoc meum esset, hodie numquam me orares quin darem: illum te orare meliust,

Argyr. Furcifer, etiam me delusisti?

Leon. Numquam hercle facerem, genua ni tam nequiter fricares.

- Lib. Taceas, me spectes.
- Argyr. Quin ad hunc, Philaenium, adgredimur, 680 virum quidem pol optimum et non similem furis huius?
- Lib. Inambulandum est: nunc mihi vicissim supplicabunt.
- Argyr. Quaeso hercle, Libane, sis erum tuis factis sospitari,

- Lib. Videbitur. factum volo. redito huc conticinno. nunc istanc tantisper iube petere atque orare mecum.
- Phil. Amandone exorarier vis ted an osculando?

Come, dear Leonida, please, please save your master Phil.that loves me so! Buy your freedom from him by this kindness, buy his favour for yourself with this money! (embraces him)

(leering at her) Ah, you're pretty, perfectly Leon. adorable: and if this belonged to me, I'd never let you tease me twice for it, never. But he's the one for you to tease: (pointing to Libanus) he gave it to me to keep for him. At him now, my pretty, prettily. Libanus, catch hold of this, will you! (tosses him the wallet)

Argyr. What, you villain! Have you been making a fool of me?

Bless you, sir, I wouldn't, only you made such a bad job of rubbing my knees. (aside to Libanus) Come on now, will you; you take your turn at fooling him and cuddling her.

(aside to Leonida) Shut up: you watch me! Lib.

(aside to Philaenium) Why not make up to him, Argyr. Philaenium! He's a very decent sort, Libanus is, gad yes, nothing like this thief. (indicating Leonida)

Lib. (aside as they approach) Now for some strutting around: here's where I come in for being suppli-cated. (parades magnificently back and forth)

Hang it all, Libanus, for mercy's sake be a good fellow and save your master's life! Give me that eighty pounds. You see I'm in love and need the money.

Lib. We'll see about it. Happy if I can oblige. Come back early in the evening. Meanwhile now just tell the lady there to ask me for it and tease me for it.

Phil. Tease it from you by loving you, or by kissing you, which?

Lib.	Enim vero utrumque.

Lib. Oh well, try both of 'em.

Phil. (fondling him) And both of us, then,—do rescue us, please, please!

Argyr. O Libanus, my dear patron. do hand it over to me! A freedman is the proper person to carry a load on the street, not his patron.

Phil. My own Libanus, my little golden treasure boy, love's gift and glory, oh, I'll adore you, do anything for you, only give us that money!

Lib. Then call me your little ducky, dovey, doggieboy, your swallow, your little jackdaw, your little tootsie wootsie sparrowkin: (opening his mouth) make a reptile of me and let me have a double tongue in my mouth; throw a chain of arms around me; clasp me close around my neck.

Argyr. Put her arms around you, you gallows-bird!

Lib. An awful shame, isn't it, really now? Not to have you saying such shameful things of me free of charge, you'll carry me on your back to-day, by gad. that is, if you count on getting this cash.

Argyr. I carry you on my back—I?

Lib. See any other way of getting this cash, do you—you?

Argyr. O damnation! Well, if it is right and proper for a master to carry a servant on his back—get up.

Lib. Here's how those toplofty ones are tamified. Now then, stand by—the way you used to do years ago as a boy. Know how I mean? (Argyrippus sidles up and bends over) There! That's it! Good for you! Capital! There isn't a more knowing bit of horseflesh than you anywhere.

Argyr. Get up, and be quick about it!

Lib. (springing on his shoulders) So I will. (Argyrippus moves of slowly) Hullo! What's the matter? How you do jog along! By gad, I'll dock your barley directly, if you don't stir yourself and gallop. (Argyrippus gallops)

There's a good fellow, Libanus,—that's enough now! Argyr. Not on your life—you don't beg off this day. Why, Lib. now I'm going to dig the spurs in and trot you up a hill: afterwards I'll hand you over to the millers to do some running for 'em at the end of a rawhide. Stand still! so that I can dismount on the slope now, even though you are a good-for-nothing beast. (gets off)

How about it now? There's a good fellow! See-Argyr. ing you two have had your fill of sport with me, going to give us the money, are you?

Lib. Oh well, if you put me up an altar and statue, yes, and offer me up an ox here the same as a god: for I'm your goddess Salvation, I am.

Leon. Come, sir, get rid of that chap, won't you, and apply to me in person, yes, and let me have those statues and supplications he ordered for himself.

Ah, and by what name does your godship pass? Argyr.

Fortune, yes sir, Indulgent Fortune. Leon. Argyr. Now there's where you are better.

Fh? what's better for a man than Salvation? Lib.

I can praise Fortune and still not disparage Argyr. Salvation.

Phil. Mercy me, they're both good.

I'll know so when I get something good out of Argyr. them.

Wish for something you want to happen to you. Leon.

Argyr. What if I do?

It'll come true. Leon.

Lib.	Noctem huius et cenam sibi ut dares.

Argyr. My wish is to have this lady's attentions this whole next year through.

Leon. You've got it. Argyr. Really? really?

- Leon. Sure thing I tell you.
- '.ib. It's my turn—come over here and give me a trial.

 Long for something you most want to come true:
 it will.
- Argyr. What could I long for more than something I haven't got a trace of—a round eighty pounds to give this girl's mother?

Lib. Forthcoming. Keep your courage up: your longing will be gratified.

Argyr. (incredulous) Salvation is at her old tricks, fooling people, and Fortune too.

Leon. In lighting on this cash to-day—I'm the one that's been the head of it!

Lib. I'm the one that's been the foot of it!

Argyr. And upon my soul, your discourse is a puzzle from head to foot. I can't understand your talk, or why you're making game of me.

- Lib. (aside to Leonida) I move he's been fooled with long enough. Come on, let's out with it. (to Argyrippus) Your kind attention, Argyrippus! Your father told us to bring this money to you. (holding up wallet)
- Argyr. Oh, you've brought it just in time, just at the right moment!
- Lib. You'll find in here eighty good sovereigns illgotten: he said to give 'em to you according to terms agreed upon.

Argyr. Terms? What terms, for mercy's sake?

Lib. That you're to give him an evening with this lady, and a dinner.

Argyr. Iube advenire quaeso:

Leon. Patierin, Argyrippe,

Leon. Going to put up with your father's hugging her, are you, Argyrippus?

Argyr. (waving wallet) This will easily enable me to put up with it. Leonida, for heaven's sake run and beg my father to come here.

Leon. (pointing to Cleareta's house) He was in there long ago.

Argyr. He certainly didn't come this way.

Leon. Sneaked in by the alley there through the garden, so that none of the servants would see him enter: he's afraid of his wife finding out. If your mother was to learn about the money, how it was—

Argyr. Hold on there! No ominous remarks!

Lib. In with you, quick!

Argyr. Good-bye, you two.

Leon. And spoon away, you two.

Diab. Come on, show me that contract you drew up between me and my mistress and the Madame. Read over the terms. Ah, you're the one and only artist at this business.

Moreover, in case she pretends to have a running cold, she must not do this: (purses his lips) you are to wipe her little lip yourself rather than let her pucker up her mouth for anyone so obviously. Nor shall the Madame, her mother, drop in while you are having your wine, or say a single abusive word to anyone. such a word be said by her, the penalty shall be this-no wine for her for twenty days."

Diab. Par.

Splendid document! Capital contract!

Then if she bid her maid carry chaplets, wreaths, perfumes to Venus or to Cupid, your servant shall observe whether she gives them to Venus, or to a Should she happen to express a wish for religious seclusion, she must give you as many hours of love as she has of loneliness." These be no trifles; these be no dirges for dead folk, I tell you. The terms are highly satisfactory. Follow me in.

Diab. Par.

Very well. EXEUNT INTO Cleareta's HOUSE: SOUND OF WRANGLING WITHIN: RE-ENTER Diabolus AND Parasite FROM HOUSE.

Scene 2.

Diab. (incensed) Come along! I put up with this? I hold my tongue? I'd rather perish from the earth than not let it out to his wife! (shouting to Demaenetus within) You will, will you? You will play the gay young spark with a mistress and excuse yourself to your wife on the plea of old age, eh? You will snatch a girl from her lover and toss your money to the Madame, eh? You will filch things from your lady at home on the sly, eh? I'd sooner hang myself than let you carry it off so and nothing said. the Lord, I'll go to her this very minute, I will, the woman you're bound to bring to pauperism of jealousy than out of regard for her.

Diab. Right you are, gad yes, that is better! Then raise hell for him yourself; stir up a row; notify her that he's having a daylight carouse with his own son, one girl between 'em there at her house, and she herself being rooked for it!

Par. No advice needed! I shall take care of that.

ACT V

THE DOOR OF Cleareta'S HOUSE IS OPEN, SHOWING Argyrippus, Demaenetus, AND Philaenium BANQUETING, Philaenium BEING ON A COUCH BESIDE Demaenetus AND TRYING NOT TO SEEM BORED BY HIS GALLANTRIES.

Dem. You don't mind it, do you, my boy,—her being on the couch here with me? (merrily chucks Philaenium under the chin)

Argyr. (dolefully) My duty as a son takes the sting out of the sight, father. Even though I do love her, of course I can persuade myself not to be disturbed at her being with you.

Dem. A young fellow should be modest, Argyrippus.

Argyr. Ah yes, father, I can behave as you deserve.

Argyr. An tu me tristem putas?

Dem. Putem ego, quem videam aeque esse maestum ut quasi dies si dicta sit?

Argyr. Ne dixis istuc.

Dem. Ne sic fueris: ilico ego non dixero. 839. 840

Dem. Quin te ergo hilarum das mihi? 849, 850

Dem. (jovially) Come on then, let's have a lively banquet—wine and sweet converse, my dears!

None of your filial awe for me: your love is what I want, my lad.

Argyr. (still more dolefully) Ah yes, father, I give you both,

as a son should.

Dem. I'll believe that, once I see you looking jolly.

Argyr. (with a deep sigh) You don't think I'm . . . melancholy . . . do you?

Dem. Think so? When you look as sepulchral as if you were docketed for trial!

Argyr. Don't say that.

Dem. Don't be that, and I'll stop saying it soon enough.

Argyr. (making a dismal effort to look happy) Here now! See! I'm smiling.

Dem. (dryly) I wish my enemies were blessed with a smile like that.

Argyr. Of course I know why you think my bearing toward you now is melancholy, father,—because she's with you. And good heavens, father, to tell you the truth, I—it does make me miserable; not because I'm not eager to have your wishes gratified; but I love that girl. If it was some other one, I shouldn't mind at all, really I shouldn't.

Dem. I want this one, though.

Argyr. Well then, you've got your desire: I wish I could have the same luck!

Dem. Oh, you'll take it calmly this one day, now that I've given you the chance to be with her for a year, and furnished forth my young gallant with funds.

Argyr. Just the point! You have me bound hard and fast by that.

Dem. Come then, surrender and be jolly, won't you?

Scene 2. ENTER Artemona AND Parasite FROM HOUSE OF Demagnetus.

- Art. (tempestuously) What's that, for heaven's sake,—my husband carousing here with his son, and brought eighty pounds to a mistress, and my son conniving at such an outrage on the part of his father, his father?
- Par. Never trust me in another thing divine or human, madam, if you find I have misinformed you in this.
- Art. But oh dear me! I thought my husband was the very paragon of men, a sober man, a worthy, moral man that loved his wife devotedly.
- Par. But from now on you must realize that he is the very scum of the earth, a toping man, a worthless, immoral man that hates the wife of his bosom.
- Art. Mercy yes! unless all that was true, he would never be acting as he does now.
- Par. I always thought he was a worthy man myself before to-day, upon my soul I did: but now he shows himself in his true colours—carousing with his own son and sharing his mistress with him, the old ruin!
- Art. Good gracious! This explains his going out to dinner every day! He with his tales of going to dine with Archidemus, Chaerea, Chaerestratus, Clinia, Chremes, Cratinus, Dinias, Demosthenes—and all the time corrupting his children at a harlot's, haunting houses of ill fame!
- Par. Why not tell your maids to pick him up and take him off home?
- Art. You just keep still. Oh, but I'll make life miserable for him, I swear I will!
- Par. I have no doubt about that, just as long as he is your husband.

Art. (too irate to notice unflattering accent) Yes, indeed! He busy in the Senate or helping his clients! He wearied out by his labours there, there, that he spends the whole night snoring! It is business away from home that makes him turn up at night all weary—the business of ploughing other people's fields and leaving his own uncultivated. Corrupt himself, he actually goes on and corrupts his own son.

Par. Just follow me this way: I'll soon make you drop on our gentleman in the very act.

Art. Ah—h—h! There's nothing I'd like better!

Par. Hm! wait! (goes quietly to Cleareta's door, peeps in and comes back)

Art. What's the matter?

Par. If you happened to spy your husband stretched out on a banquet couch with a garland on and a girl in his arms—if you saw him, could you recognize him?

Par. (taking her cautiously to the door) Behold your man!

Art. (peeping) Dreadful, dreadful!

Par. (drawing her aside) Wait a bit! Let's lie in ambush and spy what's going on without being seen.

Argyr. (resentfully) Father! When is that hug going to end? Dem. (somewhat embarrassed) I admit, my dear boy,— Argyr. Admit what?

Dem. That this lady is altogether too much for my sense of decorum.

Par. (to Artemona) Do you hear what he says?

Art. Mercy on us! So he was the thief all those times I suspected my maids, yes, and tortured the poor innocent things.

Argyr. Tell them to set the wine going, father; it seems an age since I had my first drink.

Dem. (to servant) Boy, send round the wine from the head of the table. (to Philaenium) Come, my dear, meanwhile you send round a naughty, naughty kiss from the foot. (Philaenium obeys)

Art. Oh-h-h! Good heavens! The way he kisses, the villain, fit only to grace a coffin!

Dem. My word! Rather sweeter breath than my wife's!

Phil. Do tell me, there's a dear—your wife's breath isn't bad, is it?

Dem. I'd rather drink bilge water, if it came to that, than kiss her.

Art. (aside) So? You would, would you? Good gracious, sir, that fling at me will cost you dear. Very well! just you come back home, sir! I'll show you the danger of vilifying a wife with money.

Phil. Goodness me, you poor thing!

Art. (aside) Goodness me, he deserves to be!

Argyr. Look here, father. Do you love my mother?

Dem. Love her? 1? I love her now for not being near.

Argyr. And when she is near?

Dem. I yearn for a death in the family.

Par. (to Artemona) This gentleman is fond of you, it seems.

Art. (aside) Oh-h-h! won't he pay interest on that flow of words! Just let him come back home to-day, and that will be my favourite method of revenge—kissing him.

Dem. By all means. (as he throws) Here's to you for me, Philaenium, and my wife for the tomb! (looking at throw) Ha! The Venus! (to servants) A cheer, lads, and some mead from the tankard for that throw!

Art. (aside to Parasite) This is intolerable!

Par. (aside to Artemona) No wonder, if you never learned the fuller's ² trade. Your best plan is to make a dash for his eyes.

Art. (bursting into house) My heavens, sir, I will live, and you shall pay dear for that petition of yours just now! (tableau)

Par. (gleefully) Run, some one, and fetch the undertaker!

Argyr. (innocently) How do you do, mother?

Art. Enough of your how d'ye do-ing!

Par. (aside) Demaenetus is dead. Time for me to retire from the scene; the battle waxes finely. I'll off to Diabolus and tell him his mandates are executed to the letter, yes, and suggest our taking dinner meantime, while they fight it out. Then to-morrow when it's over I'll bring him back to the Madame so that he may give her the eighty pounds and get her permission for his fond self to go shares in the girl here. I do hope Argyrippus can be induced to let him have her half the time. For if I don't get so much out of him, I have lost a patron—all one blaze of love, as the fellow is.

EPILOGUE

(Spoken by the Company)

If this old gentleman has indulged his inclinations a bit without informing his wife, he has done nothing new or strange, or different from what other men ordinarily do. No one has such an iron nature, such an unyielding heart, as not to do himself a good turn whenever he has any chance. So now in case you wish to beg the old fellow off from a beating, we opine that you can succeed, if you—give us some loud applause.

ARGUMENT OF THE PLAY (I)

A miserly old man named Euclio, a man who would hardly trust his very self, on finding a pot full of treasure buried within his house, hides it away again deep in the ground, and, beside himself with terror, keeps watch over it. His daughter had been wronged by Lyconides. Meanwhile an old gentleman, one Megadorus, is persuaded by his sister to marry, and asks the miser for his daughter's hand. The dour old fellow at length consents, and, fearing for his pot, takes it from the house and hides it in one place after another. The servant of this Lyconides, the man who had wronged the girl, plots against the miser; and Lyconides himself entreats his uncle, Megadorus, to give up the girl, and let him, the man that loves her, marry her. After a time Euclio, who had been tricked out of his pot, recovers it unexpectedly and joyfully bestows his daughter upon Lyconides.

ARGUMENT OF THE PLAY (II)

Euclio, on finding a pot full of gold, is dreadfully worried, and watches over it with the greatest vigilance. Lyconides wrongs his daughter. This girl, undowered though she is, Megadorus wishes to marry, and he cheerfully supplies cooks and provisions for the wedding feast. Anxious about his gold, Euclio hides it outside the house. Everything he does having been witnessed, a rascally servant of the girls' assailant steals it. His master informs Euclio of it, and receives from him gold, wife, and son.

PROLOGUE

SPOKEN BY EUCLIO'S HOUSEHOLD GOD.

That no one may wonder who I am, I shall inform you briefly. I am the Household God of that family from whose house you saw me come. For many years now I have possessed this dwelling, and preserved it for the sire and grandsire of its present occupant. Now this man's grandsire as a suppliant entrusted to me, in utter secrecy, a hoard of gold: he buried it in the centre of the hearth, entreating me to guard it for him. When he died he could not bear—so covetous was he—to reveal its existence to his own son, and he chose to leave him penniless rather than apprise him of this treasure. Some land, a little only, he did leave him, whereon to toil and moil for a miserable livelihood.

After the death of him who had committed the gold to my keeping, I began to observe whether the son would hold me in greater honour than his father had. As a matter of fact, his neglect grew and grew apace, and he showed me less honour. I did the same by him: so he also died. He left a son who occupies this house at present, a man of the same mould as his sire and grandsire. He has one daughter. She prays to me constantly, with daily gifts of incense, or wine, or something: she gives me garlands. Out of regard for her I caused Euclio to discover the treasure here in order that he might the more easily find her a husband, nam eam compressit de summo adulescens loco. is scit adulescens quae sit quam compresserit, illa illum nescit, neque compressam autem pater.

Eam ego hodie faciam ut hic senex de proxumo sibi uxorem poscat. id ea faciam gratia, quo ille eam facilius ducat qui compresserat. et hic qui poscet cam sibi uxorem senex, is adulescentis illius est avonculus, qui illam stupravit noctu, Cereris vigiliis. sed hic senex iam clamat intus ut solet. anum foras extrudit, ne sit conscia. credo aurum inspicere volt, ne subreptum siet.

if he wished. For she has been ravished by a young gentleman of very high rank. He knows who it is that he has wronged; who he is she does not know, and as for her father, he is ignorant of the whole affair.

I shall make the old gentleman who lives next door here (pointing) ask for her hand to-day. My reason for so doing is that the man who wronged her may marry her the more easily. And the old gentleman who is to ask for her hand is the uncle of the young gentleman who violated her by night at the festival of Ceres. (an uproar in Euclio's house) But there is old Euclio clamouring within as usual, and turning his ancient servant out of doors lest she learn his secret. I suppose he wishes to look at his gold and see that it is not stolen.

Eucl. (nithin) Out with you, I say! Come now, out with you! By the Lord, you've got to get out of here, you snook-around, you, with your prying and spying.

ENTER Staphyla FROM Euclio's HOUSE, FOLLOWED BY Euclio WHO IS PUSHING AND BEATING HER.

Staph. (groaning) Oh, what makes you go a-hitting a poor wretch like me, sir?

Eucl. (savagely) To make sure you are a poor wretch, so as to give a bad lot the bad time she deserves.

Staph. Why, what did you push me out of the house for now?

Eucl. I give my reasons to you, you,—you patch of beats, you? Over there with you, (pointing) away from the door! (Staphyla hobbles to place indicated) Just look at her, will you,—how she creeps along! See here, do you know what'll happen to you? Now by heaven, only let me lay my hand on a club or a stick and I'll accelerate that tortoise crawl for you!

Staph. (aside) Oh, I wish Heaven would make me hang myself, I do! Better that than slaving it for you at this rate, I'm sure.

Eucl. (aside) Hear the old criminal mumbling away to herself, though! (aloud) Ah! those eyes of yours, you old sinner! By heaven, I'll dig 'em out for you, I will, so that you can't keep watching me whatever I do. Get farther off still! still farther! still—Whoa! Stand there! You budge a finger's breadth a nail's breadth, from that spot; you so much as turn your head till I say the word, and by the Staph.

Almighty, the next minute I'll send you to the gallows for a lesson, so I will. (aside) A worse reprobate than this old crone I never did see, no, never. Oh, but how horribly scared I am she'll come some sly dodge on me when I'm not expecting it, and smell out the place where the gold is hidden. She has eyes in the very back of her head, the hellcat. Now I'll just go see if the gold is where I hid it. Dear, dear, it worries the life out of me!

[EXIT Euclio INTO HOUSE.

Staph. Mercy me! What's come over master, what crazy streak he's got, I can't imagine,—driving a poor woman out of the house this way ten times a day, often. Goodness gracious, what whim-whams the man's got into his head I don't see. Never shuts his eyes all night: yes, and then in the daytime he's sitting around the house the whole livelong day, for all the world like a lame cobbler. How I'm going to hide the young mistress's disgrace now is beyond me, and she with her time so near. There's nothing better for me to do, as I see, than tie a rope round my neck and dangle myself out into one long capital I.

Scene 2.

RE-ENTER Euclio FROM HOUSE.

Eucl. (aside) At last I can feel easy about leaving the house, now I have made certain everything is all right inside. (to Staphyla) Go back in there this instant, you, and keep watch inside.

Staph. (tartly) I suppose so! So I'm to keep watch inside, am I? You aren't afraid anyone'll walk away with the house, are you? I vow we've got nothing else there for thieves to take—all full of emptiness as it is, and cobwebs.

Eucl. Mirum quin tua me causa faciat Iuppiter Philippum regem aut Dareum, trivenefica. araneas mihi ego illas servari volo. pauper sum; fateor, patior; quod di dant fero. abi intro, occlude ianuam. iam ego hic ero. cave quemquam alienum in aedis intro miseris. quod quispiam ignem quaerat, extingui volo, ne causae quid sit quod te quisquam quaeritet. nam si ignis vivet, ut extinguere extempulo. tum aquam aufugisse dicito, si quis petet. cultrum, securim, pistillum, mortarium, quae utenda vasa semper vicini rogant, fures venisse atque abstulisse dicito. profecto in aedis meas me absente neminem volo intro mitti. atque etiam hoc praedico tibi, Staph. Pol ea ipsa credo ne intro mittatur cavet, nam ad aedis nostras numquam adit, quamquam prope est.

It is surprising Providence wouldn't make a King Eucl. Philip or Darius of me for your benefit, you viper, you! (threateningly) I want those cobwebs watched! I'm poor, poor; I admit it, I put up with it; I take what the gods give me. In with you, bolt the door. I shall be back soon. No outsider is to be let in, mind you. And in case anyone should be looking for a light, see you put the fire out so that no one will have any reason to come to you for it. Mark my words, if that fire stays alive, I'll extinguish you instantly. And then water-if anyone asks for water, tell him it's all run out. As for a knife, or an axe, or a pestle, or a mortar,—things the neighbours are all the time wanting to borrow —tell 'em burglars got in and stole the whole lot. I won't have a living soul let into my house while I'm gone—there! Yes, and what's more, listen here, if Dame Fortune herself comes along, don't vou let her in.

Staph. Goodness me, she won't get in: she'll see to that herself, I fancy. Why, she never comes to our house at all, no matter how near she is.

Eucl. Keep still and go inside. (advances on her) Staph. (hurrying out of reach) I'm still, sir, I'm going!

Eucl. Mind you lock the door, both bolts. I'll soon be

[EXIT Staphyla INTO HOUSE. It's agony having to leave the house, downright agony. Oh my God, how I do hate to go! But I have my reasons. The director of our ward gave notice he was going to make us a present of two shillings a man; and the minute I let it pass without putting in my claim, they'd all be suspecting I had gold at home, I'm sure they would. No. it doesn't look natural for a poor man to think so little of even a tiny bit of money as not to go ask for his two shillings. Why, even now, hard as I try to keep every one from finding out, it seems as if every one knew: it seems as if every one has a heartier way of saying good day than they used to. Up they come, and stop, and shake hands, and keep asking me how I'm feeling, and how I'm getting on, and what I'm doing. Well, I must get along to where I'm bound; and then I'll come back home just as fast as I possibly can.

EXIT Euclio.

ACT II

ENTER Eunomia AND Megadorus FROM LATTER'S HOUSE.

Eun.

Brother, I do hope you'll believe I say this out of my loyalty to you and for your welfare, as a true sister should. Of course I'm well enough aware you men think us women are a bother; yes, awful chatterboxes—that's the name we all have, and (ruefully) it fits. And then that common saying: Never now, nor through the ages, never any woman dumb." But just the same, do remember this one thing, brother,—that I am closer to you and you to me than anyone else in the whole world. So both of us ought to advise and counsel each other as to what we feel is to either's advantage, not keep such things back or be afraid to speak out openly; we ought to confide in one another fully, you and I. This is why I've taken you aside out here now-so that we can have a quiet talk on a matter that concerns you intimately.

Mega. Da mi, optuma femina, manum.

Eun. Ubi ca est? quis ea est nam optuma?

Mega. Tu.

Eun. Tune ais?

Mega. Si negas, nego.

Eun. Decet te equidem vera proloqui; nam optuma nulla potest eligi:

alia alia peior, frater, est.

Mega. Idem ego arbitror, 140 ned tibi advorsari certum est de istac re umquam, soror.

Eun. Da mihi operam amabo.

Mega. Tuast, utere atque impera, si quid vis.

Eun. Id quod in rem tuam optumum esse arbitror, ted id monitum advento.

Mega. Soror, more tuo facis.

Eun. Factum volo.

Mega. Quid est id, soror?

Eun. Quod tibi sempiternum salutare sit: liberis procreandis—ita di faxint—volo te uxorem domum ducere.

Mega. Ei occidi.

Eun. Quid ita? 150

Mega. Quia mihi misero cerebrum excutiunt tua dicta, soror: lapides loqueris.

Eun. Heia, hoc face quod te iubet soror.

Mega. Si lubeat, faciam.

Eun. In rem hoc tuam est.

Mega. (warmly) Let's have your hand, you best of women!

Eun. (pretending to look about) Where is she? Who on earth is that best of women?

Mega. Yourself.

Fun. You say that—you?

Mega. (banteringly) Oh well, if you deny it-

Eun. Really now, you ought to be truthful. There's no such thing, you know, as picking out the best woman: it's only a question of comparative badness, brother.

Mega. My own opinion precisely: I'll never differ with you there, sister, you may count on that.

Eun. Now do give me your attention, there's a dear.

Mega. It is all your own: use me, command me—anything you wish.

Eun. I'm going to advise you to do something that I think will be the very best thing in the world for you.

Mega. Quite like you, sister. Eun. I certainly hope so.

Mega. And what is this something, my dear?

Eun. Something that will make for your everlasting welfare. You should have children—God grant you may!—and I want you to marry.

Mega. Oh-h-h, murder!

Eun. How so?

Mega. Well, you're knocking my poor brains out with such a proposition, my dear girl: you're talking cobble-stones.

Eun. Now, now, do what your sister tells you.

Mega. I would, if it appealed to me.

Eun. It would be a good thing for you.

Mega.	Ut quidem emoriar prius quam ducam.
	sed his legibus si quam dare vis ducam:
	quae cras veniat, perendie foras feratur;
	his legibus dare vis? cedo: nuptias adorna.
Eun.	Cum maxima possum tibi, frater, dare dote;
	sed est grandior natu: media est mulieris aetas.
	eam si iubes, frater, tibi me poscere, poscam.	160
Mega.	Num non vis me interrogare te?
Eun.	Immo, si quid vis, roga.
Mega.	Post mediam aetatem qui media ducit uxorem domum.
	si eam senex anum praegnatem fortuito fecerit, quid dubitas, quin sit paratum nomen puero Postumus?
	núnc ego istum, soror, laborem demam et deminuam tibi.
	ego virtute deum et maiorum nostrum dives sum satis.
	istas magnas factiones, animos, dotes dapsiles, clamores, imperia, eburata vehicla, pallas, purpuram, nil moror quae in servitutem sumptibus redigunt viros.
Eun.
	Dic mihi, quaeso, quis ea est quam vis ducere uxorem?
Mega.	Eloquar.	170
,	nostin hunc senem Euclionem ex proximo pauper- culum?
Eun.	Novi, hominem haud malum mecastor.
Mega.	Eius cupio filiam virginem mihi desponderi. verba ne facias, soror.
	scio quid dictura es: hanc esse pauperem. haec pauper placet.
	250

Mega. Yes—to die before marrying. (pause) All right, I'll marry anyone you please, on this condition, though: her wedding to-morrow, and her wake the day after. Still wish it, on this condition? Produce her! Arrange for the festivities!

Eun. I can get you one with ever so big a dowry, dear.

To be sure, she's not a young girl—middle-aged, as a matter of fact. I'll see about it for you, brother, if you want.

Mega. You don't mind my asking you a question, I dare say?

Eun. Why, of course not; anything you like.

Mega. Now supposing a man pretty well on in life marries a lady of maturity and this aged female should happen to show intentions of making the old fellow a father—can you doubt but that the name in store for that youngster is Postumus? ¹ See here, sister, I'll relieve you of all this and save you trouble. I'm rich enough, thanks be to heaven and our forbears. And I have no fancy at all for those ladies of high station and hauteur and fat dowries, with their shouting and their ordering and their ivory trimmed carriages and their purple and fine linen that cost a husband his liberty.

Eun. For mercy's sake tell me who you do want to marry, then!

Mega. I'm going to. You know the old gentleman—rather hard up, poor fellow,—that lives next door, Euclio?

Eun. Yes indeed. Why, he seems quite nice.

Mega. It's his daughter—there's the engagement I'm eager for. Now don't make a fuss, sister. I know what you're about to say—that she's poor. But this particular poor girl suits me.

¹ The last born, or born after the father's death.

Eun. Di bene vortant. Mega. Idem ego spero. Quid me? num quid vis? Fun. Mega. Vale. Eun. Et tu. frater. Ego conveniam Euclionem, si domi est. Mega. sed eccum video. nescio unde sese homo recipit domum. II. 2. Eucl. Praesagibat mi animus frustra me ire, quom exibam domo: itaque abibam invitus; nam neque quisquam curialinm venit neque magister quem dividere argentum oportuit. 180 nunc domum properare propero, nam egomet sum hic, animus domi est. Mega. Salvos atque fortunatus, Euclio, semper sies. Eucl.Di te ament, Megadore. Mega. Quid tu? recten atque ut vis vales? Eucl. Non temerarium est, ubi dives blande appellat pauperem. iam illic homo aurum scit me habere, eo me salutat blandius. Mega. Ain tu te valere? Pol ego haud perbene a pecunia. Eucl. Mega. Pol si est animus aequos tibi, sat habes qui bene vitam colas. Fucl Anus hercle huic indicium fecit de auro, perspicue palam est, cui ego iam linguam praecidam atque oculos effodiam domi.

Eun. God's blessing on your choice, dear!

Mega. I trust so.

Eun. (about to leave) Well, there's nothing I can do?

Mega. Yes—take good care of yourself.

Eun. You too, brother. [EXIT Eunomia.

Mega. Now for an interview with Euclio, if he's at home. (looking down street) Hullo, though! here he is!

Just getting back from somewhere or other.

Scene 2. ENTER Euclio.

Eucl. (without seeing Megadorus) I knew it! Something told me I was going on a fool's errand when I left the house; that's why I hated to go. Why, there wasn't a single man of our ward there, or the director either, who ought to have distributed the money. Now I'll hurry up and hurry home: I'm here in the body, but that's where my mind is.

Mega. (advancing with outstretched hand) Good day to you, Euclio, yes, and the best of everything to you always!

Eucl. (taking hand gingerly) God bless you, Megadorus.

Mega. How goes it? All right, are you? Feeling as well as you could wish?

Eucl. (aside) There's something behind it when a rich man puts on that smooth air with a poor one. Now that fellow knows I've got gold: that's why he's so uncommon smooth with his salutations.

Mega. You say you are well?

Eucl. Heavens, no: I feel low, very low—in funds.

Mega. (cheerily) Well, well, man, if you have a contented mind, you've got enough to enjoy life with.

Eucl. (aside, frightened) Oh, good Lord! The old woman has let on to him about the gold! It's discovered, clear as can be! I'll cut her tongue out, I'll tear her eyes out, the minute I get at her in the house!

Mega. Eucl.	Quid tu solus tecum loquere? Meam pauperiem conqueror.	190 virginem habeo grandem, dote cassam atque inlo- cabilem, neque eam queo locare cuiquam.
Mega.	Tace, bonum habe animum, Euclio.
ı	dabitur, adiuvabere a me. dic, si quid opust, impera.
Eucl.	Nunc petit, cum pollicetur; inhiat aurum ut devoret.
	altera manu fert lapidem, panem ostentat altera.
	nemini credo qui large blandust dives pauperi:
	ubi manum inicit benigne, ibi onerat aliqua zamia.
	ego istos novi polypos, qui ubi quidquid tetigerunt tenent.
Meg a.	Da mi operam parumper. paucis, Euclio, est quod te volo de communi re appellare mea et tua.
Eucl.	Ei misero mihi,	20 0
	aurum mi intus harpagatum est. nunc hic eam rem volt, scio, mecum adire ad pactionem. verum intervisam domum.
Mega.	Quo abis?
Eucl.	Iam ad te revortar: nunc est quod visam domum.
Mega.	Credo edepol, ubi mentionem ego fecero de filia,
J	mi ut despondeat, sese a me derideri rebitur;
	neque illo quisquam est alter hodie ex paupertate parcior.
Eucl.	Di me servant, salva res est. salvom est si quid non perit.
	nimis male timui. prius quam intro redii, exani- matus fui.
	redeo ad te, Megadore, si quid me vis.

Mega. What is that you're saying to yourself?

(startled) Just . . . how awful it is to be poor. And I Eucl. with a grown-up girl, without a penny of dowry, that I can't get off my hands or find a husband for.

(clapping him on the back) There, there, Euclio! Mega. Cheer up. She shall be married: I'll help you Come now, call on me, if you need anything.

Eucl. (aside) When he agrees to give he wants to grab! Mouth wide open to gobble down my gold! Holds up a bit of bread in one hand and has a stone in the other! I don't trust one of these rich fellows when he's so monstrous civil to a poor man. They give you a cordial handshake, and squeeze something out of you at the same time. I know all about those octopuses that touch a thing and then-stick.

I should be glad to have a moment of your time, Mega. I want to have a brief talk with you on a matter that concerns us both.

(aside) Oh, God save us! My gold's been hooked, Eucl. and now he wants to make a deal with me! I see it all! But I'll go in and look. (hurriestoward house)

Where are you off to? Mega.

Eucl. Just a moment! ... I'll be back ... the fact is ... I must see to something at home. [EXIT INTO HOUSE.

By Jove! I suppose he'll think I'm making fun of Mega.him when I speak about his giving me his daughter; poverty never made a fellow closer-fisted. RE-ENTER Euclio Eucl. (aside) Thank the Lord, I'm saved! It's safe—that is, if it's all there. Ah, but that was a dreadful moment! I nearly expired before I got in the house. (to Megadorus) Here I am, Megadorus, if you want anything of me.

Mega.	Habeo gratiam. quaeso, quod te percontabor, ne id te pigeat pro- loqui.	210
Eucl.	Dum quidem ne quid perconteris quod non lubeat
Mega. Eucl.	proloqui. Dic mihi, quali me arbitrare genere prognatum? Bono.
Mega.	Quid fide?
Eucl.	Bona.
Mega.	Quid factis?
Eucl.	Neque malis neque improbis.
Mega.	Actatem meam scis?
Eucl.	Scio esse grandem, item ut pecuniam.
Mega.	Certe edepol equidem te civem sine mala omni malitia semper sum arbitratus et nunc arbitror.
Eucl.	Aurum huic olet.
	quid nunc me vis?
Mega.	Quoniam tu me et ego te qualis sis scio, quae res recte vortat mihique tibique tuaeque filiae, filiam tuam mi uxorem posco. promitte hoc fore.
Eucl.	Heia, Megadore, haud decorum facinus tuis factis facis,	220 ut inopem atque innoxium abs te atque abs tuis me inrideas.
	nam de te neque re neque verbis merui ut faceres quod facis.
Mega.	Neque edepol ego te derisum venio neque derideo, neque dignum arbitror.
Eucl.	Cur igitur poscis meam gnatam tibi?
Mega.	Ut propter me tibi sit melius mihique propter te et tuos.

Mega. Thanks. Now I trust you won't mind answering the questions I'm going to ask.

Eucl. (cautiously) No-no—that is, if you don't ask any I don't like to answer.

Mega. Frankly now, what do you think of my family connections?

Eucl. (grudgingly) Good.

Mega. And my sense of honour?

Eucl. Good.

Mega. And my general conduct? Eucl. Not bad, not disreputable.

Mega. You know my age?

Eucl. Getting on, getting on, I know that—(aside) financially, too.

Mega. Now Euclio, I've always considered you a citizen of the true, trusty type, by Jove, I certainly have, and I do still.

Eucl. (aside) He's got a whiff of my gold. (aloud) Well, what do you want?

Mega. Now that we appreciate each other, I'm going to ask you—and may it turn out happily for you and your girl and me—to give me your daughter in marriage. Promise you will.

Eucl. (whining) Now, now, Megadorus! This is unlike you, unworthy of you, making fun of a poor man like me that never harmed you or yours. Why, I never said or did a thing to you to deserve being treated so.

Mega. Good Lord, man! I didn't come here to make fun of you, and I'm not making fun of you: I couldn't think of such a thing.

Eucl. Then why are you asking for my daughter?

Mega. Why? So that we may all of us make life pleasanter for one another.

Eucl.	Venit hoc mihi, Megadore, in mentem. ted esse hominem divitem, factiosum, me autem esse hominem pauperum pauperimum;
	nunc si filiam locassim meam tibi, in mentem venit te bovem esse et me esse asellum: ubi tecum con- iunctus siem, ubi onus nequeam ferre pariter, iaceam ego asinus in luto,	230
	tu me bos magis haud respicias, gnatus quasi num- quam siem.	200 et te utar iniquiore et meus me ordo inrideat, neutrubi habeam stabile stabulum, si quid divorti fuat:
	asini me mordicibus scindant, boves incursent cornibus.
	hoc magnum est periclum, ab asinis ad boves transcendere.
Mega.	Quamad probac propinquitate proxime te adiunxeris, tam optumum est. tu condicionem hanc accipe, ausculta mihi, atque eam desponde mi.
Eucl.	At nihil est dotis quod dem.
Mega.	Ne duas.
_	dum modo morata recte veniat, dotata est satis.
Eucl.	Eo dico, ne me thensauros repperisse censeas.	240
Mega.	Novi, ne doceas. desponde.
Eucl.	Fiat. sed pro Iuppiter,
	num ego disperii?
Mega.	Quid tibi est?
Eucl.	Quid crepuit quasi ferrum modo?
Mega.	Hic apud me hortum confodere iussi. sed ubi hic est homo?
	abiit neque me certiorem fecit. fastidit mei,
	258

Now here's the way it strikes me, Megadorus,— Eucl.you're a rich man, a man of position: but as for me, I'm poor, awfully poor, dreadfully poor. Now if I was to marry off my daughter to you, it strikes me you'd be the ox and I'd be the donkey. When I was hitched up with you and couldn't pull my share of the load, down I'd drop, I, the donkey, in the mud; and you, the ox, wouldn't pay any more attention to me than if I'd never been born at all. You would be too much for me: and my own kind would haw-haw at me: and if there should be a falling out, neither party would let me have stable quarters: the donkeys would chew me up and the oxen would run me through. It is a very hazardous business for donkeys to climb into the ox set.

Mega. But honourable human beings—the more closely connected you are with them, the better. Come, come, accept my offer: listen to what I say and promise her to me.

Eucl. But not one penny of dowry can I give.

Mega. Don't. Only let me have a girl that's good, and she has dowry enough.

Eucl. (forcing a laugh) I mention this just so that you mayn't think I've found some treasure.

Mega. Yes, ves, I understand. Promise.

Eucl. So be it. (aside, starting at noise) Oh, my God!
Can it be I'm ruined, ruined?

Mega. What's the matter?

Eucl. That noise? What was it—a sort of clinking sound? [EXIT INTO HOUSE HURRIEDLY.

Mega. (not noticing his departure) I told them to do some digging in my garden here. (looking around) But where is the man? Gone away and left me—without a word! Scorns me, now he sees I desire his friendship! Quite the usual thing, that. Yes, let a wealthy man try to get the regard of a poorer one, and the poor one is afraid to meet him half-way: his timidity makes him injure his own interests. Then when it's too late and the opportunity is gone he longs to have it again.

RE-ENTER Euclio.

Eucl. (to Staphyla within) By heaven, if I don't have your tongue torn out by the very roots, I give you orders, give you full authority, to hand me over to anyone you please to be skinned alive. (approaches Megadorus)

Mega. Upon my word, Euclio! So you think I am the proper sort of man to make a fool of, at my time of life, and without the slightest reason.

Eucl. Bless my soul! I'm not making a fool of you, Megadorus: I couldn't if I would.

Mega. (doubtfully) Well now, do you mean I am to have your daughter?

Eucl. On the understanding she goes with the dowry I mentioned.

Mega. You consent, then?

Eucl. I consent.

Mega. And may God prosper us!

Eucl. Yes, yes,—and mind you remember our agreement about the dowry: she doesn't bring you a single penny.

Mega. I remember.

Eucl. But I know the way you folks have of juggling things: now it's on and now it's off, now it's off and now it's on, just as you like.

Mega. You shall have no occasion to quarrel with me. But about the marriage—there's no reason for not having it to-day, is there?

Eucl.	Immo edepol optuma.
Mega.	Ibo igitur, parabo. numquid me vis?
Eucl.	Istuc. ei et vale.

Eucl.

Eucl. Dear, dear, no! The very thing, the very thing!

Mega. I'll go and make arrangements, then. (turning to leave) Anything else I can do?

Eucl. Only that. Go along. Good-bye.

Mega. (calling at the door of his house) Hey, Pythodicus! quick! [ENTER Pythodicus] Down to the market with me—come, look alive! [EXEUNT.

Eucl. (looking after them) He's gone! Ah, ye immortal gods, doesn't money count! That is what he's gaping after. That is why he's so set on being my son-in-law. (goes to the door and calls) Where are you, you blabber, telling the whole neighbourhood I'm going to give my daughter a dowry! Hi-i! Staphyla! It's you I'm calling. Can't you hear!

Scene 3.

[ENTER Staphyla] Hurry up with the dishes inside there and give them a good scouring. I have betrothed my daughter: she marries Megadorus here to-day.

Staph. God bless them! (hastily) Goodness, though! It can't be done. This is too sudden.

Eucl. Silence! Off with you! Have things ready by the time I get back from the forum. And lock the door, mind; I shall be here soon. [EXIT Euclio.

Staph. What shall I do now? Now we're all but ruined, the young mistress and me: now it's all but public property about her being disgraced and brought to bed. We can't conceal it, we can't keep it dark any longer now. But I must go in and do what master ordered me before he gets back. Oh deary me! I'm afraid I've got to take a drink of trouble and tribulation mixed.

[EXIT Staphyla INTO HOUSE.

Scene 4. (An hour has elapsed.)

ENTER Pythodicus BRINGING COOKS, Anthrax AND Congrio, MUSIC GIRLS, Phrygia AND Eleusium, AND ATTENDANTS, WITH PROVISIONS FROM THE MARKET AND TWO LAMBS.

Pyth. (importantly) After master did the marketing and hired the cooks and these music girls at the forum, he told me to take and divide all he'd got into two parts.

Anthr. By Jupiter, you shan't make two parts of me, let me tell you that plainly! If you'd like to have the whole of me anywhere, why, I'll accommodate you.

Cong. (to Anthrax) You pretty boy, yes, you nice little everybody's darling, you! Why, if anyone wanted to make two parts of a real man out of you, you oughtn't to be cut up about it.

Pyth. Now, now, Anthrax, I mean that otherwise from what you make out. Look here, my master's marrying to-day.

Anthr. Who's the lady?

Pyth. Daughter of old Euclio that lives next door here. Yes sir, and what's more, he's to have half this stuff here, and one cook and one music girl, too, so master said.

Anthr. You mean to say half goes to him and half to you folks?

Pyth. Just what I do mean.

Anthr. I say, couldn't the old boy pay for the catering for his daughter's wedding his own self?

Pyth. (scornfully) Pooh!

Anthr. What's the matter?

Pyth. The matter, eh? You couldn't squeeze as much out of that old chap as you could out of a pumice stone.

Anthr.	Ain tandem?
Pyth.	Ita esse ut dixi. tute existuma:

.1nthr. (incredulously) Oh, really now!

Pyth. That's a fact. Judge for yourself. Why, I tell you he begins bawling for heaven and earth to witness that he's bankrupt, gone to everlasting smash, the moment a puff of smoke from his beggarly fire manages to get out of his house. Why, when he goes to bed he strings a bag over his jaws.

Anthr. What for?

Pyth. So as not to chance losing any breath when he's asleep.

Anthr. Oh yes! And he puts a stopper on his lower windpipe, doesn't he, so as not to chance losing any breath while he's asleep?

Pyth. (ingenuously) You should believe me, I believe, just as I should believe you.

Anthr. (hurriedly) Oh, no, no! I do believe, of course!

Pyth. But listen to this, will you? Upon my word, after he takes a bath it just breaks him all up to throw away the water.

Anthr. D'ye think the old buck could be induced to make us a present of a couple of hundred pounds to buy ourselves off with?

Pyth. Lord! He wouldn't make you a loan of his hunger, no sir, not if you begged him for it. Why, the other day when a barber cut his nails for him he collected all the clippings and took 'em home.

Anthr. My goodness, he's quite a tight one, from what vou sav.

Pyth. Honest now, would you believe a man could be so tight and live so wretched? Once a kite flew off with a bit of food of his: down goes the fellow to the magistrate's, blubbering all the way, and there he begins, howling and yowling, demanding to have the kite bound over for trial. Oh, I could tell Anthr. I am, and a whole lot better, too.

Pyth. At cooking I mean, not thieving.

Anthr. Well, I mean cooking.

Pyth. (to Congrio) And how about you?

Cong. (with a meaning glance at Anthrax) I'm what I look. Anthr. He's nothing but a market-day cook, that chap:

he only gets a job once a week.

Cong. You running me down, you? You five letter man, you! You T-H-I-E-F!

Anthr. Five letter man yourself! Yes, and five times —penned!

Scene 5.

Pyth. (to Anthrax) Come, come, shut up, you: and this fattest lamb here, (pointing) take it and go over to our house.

Anthr. (grinning triumphantly at Congrio) Aye, aye, sir.

[EXIT Anthrax INTO HOUSE OF Megadorus LEADING LAMB.

Pyth. Congrio, you take this one he's left (pointing) and go into that house there, (pointing to Euclio's) and as for you, (indicating some of the attendants) you follow him. The rest of you come over to our house.

Cong. Hang it! That's no way to divide: they've got the fattest lamb.

Pyth. Oh well, I'll give you the fattest music girl. (turning to girls) That means you, Phrygia: you go with him. As for you, Eleusium, you step over to our place. [EXEUNT Eleusium AND OTHERS INTO HOUSE OF Megadorus.

Cong. Oh, you're a wily one, Pythodicus! Shoving me off on this old screw, eh? If I ask for anything there, I can ask myself hoarse before I get a thing.

Pyth. Stultus et sine gratia es. ¹ tibi recte facere, quando quod facias perit. Cong. Qui vero? Pyth. Cong. Sequor. II. 6. Pyth. Heus, Staphyla, prodi atque ostium aperi. Staph. Qui vocat? 350 Pyth. Pythodicus. Staph. Quid vis? Pyth. Hos ut accipias coquos tibicinamque obsoniumque in nuptias. Megadorus iussit Euclioni haec mittere. Staph. Cererin, Pythodice, has sunt facturi nuptias? Qui? Pyth. 1 Corrupt (Leo): stultu's et sine gratiast ibi Guhelmius.

Pyth. An ungrateful blockhead is what you are. The idea of doing you a favour, when it's only thrown away!

Cong. Eh? How so?

How so? Well, in the first place there won't be Pyth. an uproarious gang in that house to get in your way: if you need anything, just you fetch it from home so as not to waste time asking for it. Here at our establishment, though, we do have a great uproarious gang of servants, and knickknackery and jewellery and clothes and silver plate lying about. Now if anything was missing, -of course it's easy for you to keep your hands off, provided there's nothing in reach,—they'd say: "The cooks got away with it! Collar 'em! Tie 'em up! Thrash 'em! Throw 'em in the dungeon!" Now over there (pointing to Euclio's) nothing like this will happen to you—as there's nothing at all about for you to filch. (going toward Euclio's house) Come along.

Cong. (sulkily) Coming. (he and the rest follow)

Scene 6.

Pyth. (knocking at door) Hey! Staphyla! Come here and open the door.

Staph. (within) Who is it?

Pyth. Pythodicus.

Staph. (sticking her head out) What do you want?

Pyth. Take these cooks and the music girl and the supplies for the wedding festival. Megadorus told us to take 'em over to Euclio's.

Staph. (examining the provisions disappointedly) Whose festival are they going to celebrate, Pythodicus? Ceres'?

Pyth. Why hers?

Staph. Quia temeti nihil allatum intellego. At iam afferetur, si a foro ipsus redierit. Pyth. Staph.Ligna hic apud nos nulla sunt. Cong. Sunt asseres? Staph. Sunt pol. Cong. Fucl. Volui animum tandem confirmare hodie meum, ut bene me haberem filiai nuptiis.

Staph. Well, no tipple's 1 been brought, as I notice.

Pyth. But there'll be some all right when the old gent gets back from the forum.

Staph. We haven't got any firewood in the house.

Cong. Any rafters in it?

Staph. Mercy, yes.

Cong. There's firewood in it, then: never mind going for any.

Staph. Hey? You godless thing! even though you are a devotee of Vulcan, do you want us to burn our house down, all for your dinner or your pay? (advances on him)

Cong. (shrinking back) I don't, I don't!

Puth. Take 'em inside.

Staph. (brusquely) This way with you.

[EXEUNT Congrio AND OTHERS INTO Euclio's HOUSE.

Scene 7.

Pyth. (as they leave) Look out for things. (starting for Megadorus's house) I'll go see what the cooks are at. By gad, it's the devil's own job keeping an eye on those chaps. The only way is to make 'em cook dinner in the dungeon and then haul it up in baskets when it's done. Even so, though, if they're down there gobbling up all they cook, it's a case of starve in heaven and stuff in hell. But here I am gabbling away just as if there wasn't anything to do, and the house all full of those young Grabbits.

I did. Off I go to the market—ask for fish! Very dear! And lamb dear . . . and beef dear ... and veal and tunny and pork ... everything dear, everything! Yes, and all the dearer for my not having any money! It just made me furious, and seeing I couldn't buy anything, I up and left. That's how I circumvented 'em, the whole dirty pack of 'em. Then I began to reason things out with myself as I walked along. "Holiday feasting makes everyday fasting," says I to myself, "unless you economize." After I'd put the case this way to my stomach and heart, my mind supported my motion to cut down daughter's wedding expenses just as much as possible. Now I've bought a little frankingense here and some wreaths of flowers: we'll put 'em on the hearth in honour of our Household God, so that he may bless daughter's marriage. (looking toward house) Eh! What's my door open for? A clattering inside, too! Oh, mercy on us! It can't be burglars, can it?

(within, to an attendant) See if you can't get a bigger Cong. pot from one of the neighbours: this here's a little one: it won't hold it all.

Oh, my God! my God! I'm ruined! They're Eucl. taking my gold! They're after my pot! Oh, oh, Apollo, help me, save me! Shoot your arrows through them, the treasure thieves, if you've ever helped a man in such a pinch before! must rush in before they ruin me entirely!

(in burlesque panic) Hi—i—i! Citizens, natives, inhabitants, neighbours, foreigners, every onegive me room to run! Open up! Clear the street! (stopping at some distance from the house) This is the first time I ever came to cook for Bacchantes at a Bacchante den. Oh dear, what an awful clubbing I and my disciples did get! I'm one big ache! I'm dead and gone! The way that old codger took me for a gymnasium! (Euclio's door opens and he appears, cudgel in hand) Oh-ow-ow! Good Lord be merciful! I'm done for! He's opening the den: he's at the door: he's after me! what I'll do: (retires) he's taught me my lesson. my master has. I never in all my life saw a place where they were freer-handed with their wood: (rubbing his shoulders) why, when he drove the lot of us out he let us have big sticks of it, all we could stagger under.

Cong. Why?

Eucl. Well, you carry a knife. Cong. And so a cook should.

Eucl. And how about your threatening me?

Cong. It's a pity I didn't jab it through you, I'm thinking.

Eucl. There isn't a more abandoned villain than you on the face of the earth, or one I'd be gladder to go out of my way to punish more, either.

Cong. Good Lord! That's evident enough, even if you didn't say so: the facts speak for themselves. I've been clubbed till I'm looser than any fancy dancer. Now what did you mean by laying hands on me, you beggar?

Eucl. What's that? You dare ask me? Didn't I do my duty by you—is that it? (lifts cudgel)

Cong. (backing away) All right: but by gad, you'll pay heavy for it, or I'm a numskull.

Eucl. Hm! I don't know anything about the future of your skull, but (chuckling and tapping his cudgel) it must be numb now. (savagely) See here, what the devil were you doing in my house without my orders while I was gone? That's what I want to know.

Cong. Well then, shut up. We came to cook for the wedding, that's all.

Eucl. And how does it concern you, curse you, whether I eat my food cooked or take it raw—unless you are my guardian?

Cong. Are you going to let us cook dinner here or not?
That's what I want to know.

Eucl. Yes, and I want to know whether my things at home will be safe?

Cong. All I hope is I can get safe away with my own things that I brought there. That'll do for me: don't worry about my hankering for anything you own.

Eucl. (incredulous) I know. You needn't go on. I quite understand.

Cong. Why won't you let us cook dinner here now? What have we done? What have we said that you didn't like?

Eucl. A pretty question, you villainous rascal, with your making a public highway of every nook and cranny in my whole house! If you had stayed by the oven where your business lay, you wouldn't be carrying that cloven pate: it serves you right. (with forced composure) Now further, just to acquaint you with my sentiments in the matter,—you come any nearer this door without my permission, and I will make you the most forlorn creature in God's world. Now you know my sentiments.

Cong. (calling after him) Where are you off to? Come back! So help me holy Mother of Thieves, but I'll soon make it warm for you, the way I'll rip up your reputation in front of the house here, if you don't have my dishes brought back! (as Euclio closes the door) Now what? Oh, hell! It certainly was an unlucky day when I came here! Two shillings for the job, and now it'll take more than that to pay the doctor's bill.

Cong. A nice time for it, after you've clubbed my head till it's all cracks!

Eucl. In with you. You were engaged to get up a dinner here, not a declamation.

Cong. I say, old boy, I'll come to you with my bill for that basting, by the Lord I will. I was hired a while ago to be cook, not to be thumped.

Here's Megadorus now, trying to catch me—oh, dear, dear!—in all sorts of ways. Sending cooks over here and pretending it's because of regard for me! Sent 'em to steal this (looking under cloak) from a poor old man—that's what his sending 'em was because of! And then of course that dunghill cock of mine in there, that used to belong to the old woman, had to come within an inch of ruining me, beginning to scratch and claw around where this (looking under cloak) was buried. (looking down street) Ah, but there is son-in-law Megadorus swaggering back from the forum. I suppose it would hardly do for me to pass him without stopping for a word or two, now.

Scene 5. ENTER Megadorus.

Mega.

(not seeing Euclio) Well, I've told a number of friends of my intentions regarding this match. They were full of praise for Euclio's daughter. Say it's the sensible thing to do, a fine idea. Yes, for my part I'm convinced that if the rest of our wellto-do citizens would follow my example and marry poor men's daughters and let the dowries go, there would be a great deal more unity in our city, and people would be less bitter against us men of means than they are, and our wives would stand in greater awe of marital authority than they do, and the cost of living would be lower for us than it is. It's just the thing for the vast majority of the people; the fight comes with a handful of greedy fellows so stingy and grasping that neither law nor cobbler can take their measure. And now supposing some one should ask: "Who are the rich girls with dowries going to marry, if you make this rule for the poor ones?" Why, anyone they please, let 'em marry, provided their dowry doesn't go along with 'em. In that case, instead of bringing their husbands money, they'd bring them better behaved wives than they do at present.

When you've got all these fellows of fluff and Mega.ruffles satisfied, along comes a military man, bringing up the rear, and wants to collect the army tax. You go and have a reckoning with your banker, your military gentleman standing by and missing his lunch in the expectation of getting some cash. After you and the banker have done figuring, you find you owe him money too, and the military man has his hopes postponed till another day. These are some of the nuisances and intolerable expenses that big dowries let you in for, and there are plenty more. Now a wife that doesn't bring you a penny—a husband has some control over her: it's the dowered ones that pester the life out of their husbands with the way they cut up and squander. (seeing Euclio) But there's my new relative in front of the house! How are you,

Mega. (genially) Ah well, you've got enough, and heaven make it more and more, and bless you in what you have now.

Eucl. (turning away with a start) "What you have now!" I don't like that phrase! He knows I have this money just as well as I do! The old hag's been blabbing!

Mega. (pleasantly) Why that secret session over there?

Eucl. (taken aback) I was—damme sir,—I was framing the complaint against you that you deserve.

Mega. What for?

Eucl. What for, eh? When you've filled every corner of my house with thieves, confound it! When you've sent cooks into my house by the hundred and every one of 'em a Geryonian with six hands apiece! Why, Argus, who had eyes all over him and was set to guarding Io once by Juno, couldn't ever keep watch on those fellows, not if he tried. And that music girl besides! She could take the fountain of Pirene at Corinth and drink it dry. all by herself, she could,—if it ran wine. Then as for the provisions——

Mega. Bless my soul! Why, there's enough for a regi-

I tell you what, if a servant wants to give satisfaction, he'd just better make it a case of master first and man second. Even if he should fall asleep, he ought to do it with an eye on the fact that he's a servant. He's got to know his master's inclinations like a book, so that he can read his wishes in his face. And as for orders, he must push 'em through faster than a fast four-in-hand. (walks slowly toward house) Now I'll have a bath, so that I may sacrifice and not hinder my prospective son-in-law from marrying my girl the moment he claims her. (looking down street toward temple) Take care now, Faith, do, do, do take care I get my pot back from you safe. I've trusted my gold to your good faith, laid it away in your grove and shrine.

EXIT Euclio INTO HOUSE.

(jumping up) Ye immortal gods! What's all this I heard the fellow tell of! A pot just crammed with gold hidden in the shrine of Faith here! For the love of heaven, Faith, don't be more faithful to him than to me. Yes, and he's the father of the girl that is master's sweetheart, or I'm mistaken. I'm going in there: I'll search that shrine from top to bottom and see if I can't find the gold somewhere while he's busy here. But if I come across it—oh, Faith, I'll pour you out a

IV. 3.

Eucl. Non temere est quod corvos cantat mihi nunc ab laeva manu; semul radebat pedibus terram et voce croccibat sua: continuo meum cor coepit artem facere ludicram atque in pectus emicare. sed ego cesso currere?

IV. 4.

Eucl. I foras, lumbrice, qui sub terra erepsisti modo, qui modo nusquam comparebas, nunc, cum compares, peris.

ego pol te, praestrigiator, miseris iam accipiam modis.

Strob. Quae te mala crux agitat? quid tibi mecum est commerci, senex?

quid me adflictas? quid me raptas? qua me causa verberas?

Eucl. Verberabilissime, etiam rogitas, non fur, sed trifur?

Strob. Quid tibi surrupui?

Eucl. Redde huc sis.

Strob. Quid tibi vis reddam?

Eucl. , Rogas?

Strob. Nil equidem tibi abstuli.

five pint pot of wine and honey! There now! that's what I'll do for you; and when I've done that for you, why, I'll drink it up for myself.

EXIT TO TEMPLE AT A RUN.

Scene 3.

RE-ENTER Euclio FROM HOUSE.

Eucl. (excitedly) It means something—that raven cawing on my left just now! And all the time a-clawing the ground, croaking away, croaking away! The minute I heard him my heart began to dance a jig and jumped up into my throat. But I must run, run! [EXIT TO TEMPLE.

Scene 4.

A FEW MOMENTS ELAPSE. THEN THE SOUND OF A SCUFFLE DOWN THE STREET. RE-ENTER Euclio DRAG-GING Strobilus.

Eucl. Come! out, you worm! crawling up from underground just now! A minute ago you weren't to be found anywhere, and (grimly) now you're found you're finished! Oh-h-h-h, you felon! I'm going to give it to you, this very instant! (beats him)

Strob. What the devil's got into you? What business have you got with me, old fellow? What are you pounding me for? What are you jerking me along for? What do you mean by battering me?

Eucl. (still pummelling him) Mean, eh? You batterissimo. You're not a thief: you're three thieves.

Strob. What did I steal from you?

Eucl. (threateningly) You kindly give it back.

Strob. Back? What back? Eucl. A nice question!

Strob. I didn't take a thing from you, honestly.

Strob. Come, come, what?

Eucl. You shan't get away with it.

Strob. What is it you want?

Eucl. Down with it!

Strob. Down with it, eh! Looks as if you'd downed too much of it yourself already, old boy.

Eucl. Down with it, I tell you! None of your repartee!

I'm not in the humour for trifling now.

Strob. Down with what? Come along, speak out and give it its name, whatever it is. Hang it all, I never took a thing nor touched a thing, and that's flat.

Eucl. Show me your hands.

Strob. (stretching them out) All right—there they are: have a look.

Eucl. (dryly) I see. Come now, the third one: out with it.

Strob. (aside) He's got 'em! The old chap's mad, stark, staring mad! (to Euclio, virtuously) Now aren't you doing me an injury?

Eucl. I am, a hideous injury—in not hanging you. And I'll soon do that, too, if you don't confess.

Strob. Confess what?

Eucl. What did you carry off from here? (pointing toward temple)

Strob. (solemnly) May I be damned, if I carried off a thing of yours. (aside) Likewise if I didn't want to.

Eucl. Come on, shake out your cloak.

Strob. (doing so) Anything you say.

Eucl. Um! probably under your tunic.

Eucl.

Eucl. Ugh! you rascal! How obliging you are! That I may think you didn't take it! I'm up to your dodges. (searches him) Once more now—out with your hand, the right one.

Strob. (obeying) There you are.

Strob. (obeying) Why, certainly: here's the both of 'em.

Eucl. Enough of this searching. Now give it here.

Strob. What?

Eucl. Oh-h! Bosh! You must have it!

Strob. I have it? Have what?

Eucl. I won't say: you're too anxious to know. Anything of mine you've got, hand it over.

Strob. Crazy! You went all through me as much as you liked without finding a solitary thing of yours on me.

Eucl. (excitedly) Wait, wait! (turns toward temple and listens) Who's in there? Who was that other fellow in there along with you? (aside) My Lord! this is awful, awful! There's another one at work in there all this time. And if I let go of this one, he'll skip off. (pauses) But then I've searched him already: he hasn't anything. (aloud) Off with you, anywhere! (releases him with a final cuff)

Strob. (from a safe distance) You be everlastingly damned!
Eucl. (aside, dryly) Nice way he has of showing his gratitude. (aloud, sternly) I'll go in there, and that accomplice of yours—I'll strangle him on the spot.
Are you going to vanish? Are you going to get out, or not? (advances)

Strob. (retreating) I am, I am!

Eucl. And kindly see I don't set eyes on you again.

[EXIT Euclio TOWARD TEMPLE.

Scene 5.

Strob. I'd sooner be tortured to death than not give that old fellow a surprise to-day. (reflecting) Well, after this he won't dare hide his gold here. What he'll most likely do is bring it out with him and put it somewhere else. (listening) Hm-m-m! There goes the door! Aha! the old boy's coming out with it. I'll just back up by the doorway for a while. (hides by Megadorus's house)

Scene 6. RE-ENTER Euclio WITH POT.

I used to fancy Faith, of all deities, was absolutely Eucl. faithful, and here she's just missed making a downright ass of me. If that raven hadn't stood by me, I'd be a poor, poor ruined man. By heavens, I'd just like that raven to come and see me, the one that warned me, I certainly should, so that I might pay him a handsome-compliment. As for tossing him a bite to eat, why, that would amount to throwing it away. (meditating) Let me think now; where is some lonely spot to hide this in? (after a moment) There's that grove of Silvanus outside the wall, solitary, willow thickets all around. There's where I'll pick my place. I'd sooner trust Silvanus than Faith, and EXIT Euclio. that's settled.

Strob. Good! Good! The gods are with me: I'm a made man! Now I'll run on ahead and climb some tree there so as to sight the place where the old fellow hides it. What if master did tell me to wait here! I'd sooner look for a thrashing along with the cash, and that's settled.

[EXIT Strobilus.]

Scene 7. ENTER Lyconides AND Eunomia.

Lyc. That's the whole story, mother: you see how it is with me and Euclio's daughter as well as I do.

resecroque, mater, quod dudum obsecraveram: fac mentionem cum avonculo, mater mea.

Eun. Scis tute facta velle me quae tu velis, et istuc confido a fratre me impetrassere; et causa iusta est, siquidem ita est ut praedicas, te eam compressisse vinulentum virginem.

Lyc. Egone ut te advorsum mentiar, mater mea?

Phaed. Perii, mea nutrix. obsecro te, uterum dolet.

Iuno Lucina, tuam fidem!

Lyc. Em, mater mea, tibi rem potiorem verbo: clamat, parturit.

Eun. Ei hac intro mecum, gnate mi, ad fratrem meum, ut istuc quod me oras impetratum ab eo auferam.

Lyc. I, iam sequar te, mater. sed servom meum

And now, mother, I beg you, beg you again and again, as I did before: do tell my uncle about it, mother dear.

Eun. Your wishes are mine, dear; you know that yourself: and I feel sure your uncle will not refuse me.
It's a perfectly reasonable request, too, if it's all as you say and you actually did get intoxicated and treat the poor girl so.

Lyc. Is it like me to look you in the face and lie, my dear mother?

Phaed. (within Euclio's house) Oh—oh! Nurse! Nurse dear! Oh, God help me! The pain!

Lyc. There, mother! There's better proof than words gives. Her cries! The child!

Eun. (agitated) Come, darling, come in to your uncle with me, so that I may persuade him to let it be as you urge.

Lyc. You go, mother: I'll follow you in a moment.

[EXIT Eunomia INTO Megadorus's HOUSE. I wonder (looking around) where that fellow Strobilus of mine is that I told to wait for me here. (pauses) Well, on thinking it over, if he's doing something for me, it's all wrong my finding fault with him. (turning toward Megadorus's door) Now for the session that decides my fate. [EXIT.

Scene 8. ENTER Strobilus WITH POT.

Strob. (elated) Woodpeckers that haunt the Hills of Gold, eh! I can buy 'em up my own single self. As for the rest of your big kings—not worth mentioning, poor beggarlets! I am the great King Philip. Oh, this is a grand day! Why, after I left here a while ago I got there long before him and was up in a tree long before he came: and from there I spotted where the old chap hid

[EXIT Strobilus.]

Scene 9. ENTER Euclio FRANTIC.

Eucl.

(running wildly back and forth) I'm ruined, I'm killed, I'm murdered! Where shall I run? Where shan't I run? Stop thief! Stop thief! What thief? Who? I don't know! I can't see! I'm all in the dark! Yes, yes, and where I'm going, or where I am, or who I am—oh, I can't tell, I can't think! (to audience) Help, help, for heaven's sake, I beg you, I implore you! Show the man that took it. Eh, what's that? What are you grinning for? I know you, the whole lot of you! I know there are thieves here, plenty of 'em, that cover themselves up in dapper clothes and sit still as if they were honest men. (to a spectator) You, sir, what do you say? I'll trust you, I will, I will. Yes, you're a worthy gentleman; I can tell it from your face. Ha! none of them has it? Oh, you've killed me! Tell me, who has got it, then? You don't know? Oh dear, oh dear, oh dear! I'm a ruined man! I'm lost, lost! Oh, what a plight! Oh, such a cruel, disastrous, dismal day—it's made a starveling of me. a pauper! I'm the forlornest wretch on earth! Ah, what is there in life for me when I've lost all that gold I guarded, oh, so carefully! I've denied myself, denied my own self comforts and pleasures; yes, and now others are making merry over my misery and loss! Oh, it's unendurable!

ENTER Lyconides from house of Megadorus.

Lyc. Who in the world is raising all this howling, groaning hullabaloo before our house here? (looking round) Upon my word, it's Euclio, I do believe. (drawing back) My time has certainly come: it's all out. He's just learned about his daughter's child, I suppose. Now I can't decide whether to leave or stay, advance or retreat. By Jove, I don't know what to do!

Scene 10.

Eucl. (hearing sound of voice only) Who's that talking here?

Lyc. (stepping forward) I'm the poor wretch, sir.

Eucl. No, no, I'm the poor wretch, a poor ruined wretch, with all this trouble and tribulation.

Lyc. Keep your courage up, sir.

Eucl. For heaven's sake how can I?

Lyc. Well, sir, that outrage that distresses you—(hesitantly) I'm to blame, and I confess it, sir.

Eucl. Hey? What's that?

Lyc. The truth.

Eucl. How have I ever harmed you, young man, for you to act like this and try to ruin me and my children?

Lyc. It was some demon got hold of me, sir, and led me on.

Eucl. How is this?

Lyc. I admit I've done wrong, sir; I deserve your reproaches, and I know it; more than that, I've come to beg you to be patient and forgive me.

Eucl. How did you dare do it, dare touch what didn't belong to you?

Lyc. (penitently) Well, well, sir,—it's done, and it can't be undone. I think it must have been fated; otherwise it wouldn't have happened, I'm sure of that.

Fucl.	At ego deos credo voluisse ut apud me te in nervo enicem.
Lyc.	Ne istuc dixis.
Fucl.	Quid tibi ergo meam me invito tactiost?
Lyc.	Quia vini vitio atque amoris feci.
Eucl.	Homo audacissime,
ı	cum istacin te oratione huc ad me adire ausum, impudens!
	nam si istuc ius est ut tu istuc excusare possies, luci claro deripiamus aurum matronis palam, nos fecisse amoris causa. nimis vilest vinum atque amor,	750 si ebrio atque amanti impune facere quod lubeat licet.

Lyc.	Quintibiultro supplicatum venio ob stultitiam meam.
Eucl.	Non mi homines placent qui quando male fecerunt purigant.
	tu illam scibas non tuam esse: non attactamoportuit.
Lyc.	Ergo quia sum tangere ausus, haud causificor quin ego habeam potissimum.

Eucl.	Tun habeas me invito meam?
Lyc.	Haud te invito postulo; sed meam esse oportere arbitror.
	quin tu iam invenies, inquam, meam illam esse oportere, Euclio.
Eucl.	Iam quidem hercle te ad praetorem rapiam et tibi scribam dicam.
	nisi refers.
Lyc.	Quid tibi ego referam?
Eucl.		760
	Quod surripuisti meum.	760
Lyc.	Surripui ego tuom? unde? aut quid id est?
Eucl.	Ita te amabit Iuppiter
	ut tu nescis.

Eucl. Yes, and I think it must have been fated that I'm to shackle you at my house and murder you!

Lyc. Don't say that, sir.

for it.

Eucl. Then why did you lay hands on what was mine, without my permission?

Lyc. It was all because of drink . . . and . . . love, sir.

Eucl. The colossal impudence of it! To dare to come to me with a tale like that, you shameless rascal!

Why, if it's legal to clear yourself that way, we should be stripping ladies of their jewellery on the public highways in broad daylight! And then when we were caught we'd excuse ourselves on the score that we were drunk and did it out of love.
Drink and love are altogether too cheap, if your drunken lover can do what he likes and not suffer

Lyc. Yes, but I've come of my own accord, sir, to entreat you to pardon my madness.

Eucl. I have no patience with men who do wrong and then try to explain it away. You knew you had no right to act so: you should have kept hands off.

Lyc. Well, now that I did venture to act so, I have no objection to holding to it, sir,—I ask nothing better.

Eucl. (more angry) Hold to it? Against my will?

Lyc. I won't insist on it against your will, sir; but I do think my claim is just. Why, you'll soon come to realize the justice of it yourself, sir, I assure you.

Eucl. I'll march you off to court and sue you, by heaven I will, this minute, unless you bring it back.

Lyc. I? Bring what back?

Eucl. What you stole from me.

Lyc. I stole something of yours? Where from? What?

Eucl. (ironically) God bless your innocence—you don't know!

Lyc.	Nisi quidem tu mihi quid quaeras dixeris.
Eucl.	Aulam auri, inquam, te resposco, quam tu confessu's mihi te abstulisse.
Lyc.	Neque edepol ego dixi neque feci.
Fucl.	Negas?
Lyc.,	Pernego immo. nam neque ego aurum neque istaec aula quae siet scio nec novi.

Eucl.	Die bona fide: tu id aurum non surripuisti?
Lyc.	Bona.
Eucl.	Neque cum seis qui abstulerit?
Lyc.	Istuc quoque bona.
Eucl.	Atque id si scies

Lyc.	Ita.
Eucl.	Quid si fallis?
Lyc. Eucl.	Tum me faciat quod volt magnus Iuppiter. Sat habeo. age nunc loquere quid vis.

Lyc. Not unless you say what you're looking for.

Eucl. The pot of gold, I tell you; I want back the pot of gold you owned up to taking.

Lyc. Great heavens, man! I never said that or did it, either.

Euct. You deny it?

Lyc. Deny it? Absolutely. Why, I don't know, haven't any idea, about your gold, or what that pot is.

Eucl. The one you took from the grove of Silvanus—give it me. Go, bring it back. (pleadingly) You can have half of it, yes, yes, I'll divide. Even though you are such a thief, I won't make any trouble for you. Do, do go and bring it back, oh do!

Lyc. Man alive, you're out of your senses, calling me a thief. I supposed you had found out about something else that does concern me, Euclio. There's an important matter I'm anxious to talk over quietly with you, sir, if you're at leisure.

Eucl. Give me your word of honour: you didn't steal that gold?

Lyc. (shaking his head) On my honour.

Eucl. And you don't know the man that did take it?

Lyc. Nor that, either, on my honour.

Eucl. And if you learn who took it, you'll inform me?

Lyc. I will.

Eucl. And you won't go shares with the man that has it, or shield the thief?

Lyc. No. Eucl. What if you deceive me?

Lyc. Then, sir, may I be dealt with as great God sees fit.

Eucl. That will suffice. All right now, say what you want.

	J. V

Lyc. In case you're not acquainted with my family connections, sir,—Megadorus here is my uncle: my father was Antimachus, and my own name is Lyconides: Eunomia is my mother.

Eucl. I know who you are. Now what do you want?

That's what I wish to know.

Lyc. You have a daughter. Eucl. Yes, yes, at home there!

Luc. You have betrothed her to my uncle, I understand.

Eucl. Precisely, precisely.

Lyc. He has asked me to inform you now that he breaks the engagement.

Eucl. (furious) Breaks the engagement, with everything ready, the wedding prepared for? May all the everlasting powers above consume that villain that's to blame for my losing my gold, all that gold, poor God-forsaken creature that I am!

Lyc. Brace up, sir: don't curse. And now for something that I pray will turn out well and happily for yourself and your daughter—"God grant it may!" Say that.

Eucl. (doubtfully) God grant it may!

Lyc. And God grant it may for me, too! Now listen, sir. There isn't a man alive so worthless but what he wants to clear himself when he's done wrong and is ashamed. Now, sir, if I've injured you or your daughter without realizing what I was doing, I implore you to forgive me and let me marry her as I'm legally bound to. (nervously) It was the night of Ceres' festival... and what with wine and ... a young fellow's natural impulses together... I wronged her, I confess it.

Eucl. Oh, oh, my God! What villainy am I hearing of?

Lyc. (patting his shoulder) Lamenting, sir, lamenting, when you're a grandfather, and this your daughter's wedding day? You see it's the tenth month since the festival—reckon it up—and we have a child, sir. This explains my uncle's breaking the engagement: he did it for my sake. Go in and inquire if it isn't just as I tell you.

Eucl. Oh, my life is wrecked, wrecked! The way calamities swarm down and settle on me one after another! Go in I will, and have the truth of it!

EXIT INTO HIS HOUSE.

Lyc. (as he disappears) I'll soon be with you, sir. (after a pause, contentedly) It does look as if we were pretty nearly safe in the shallows now. (looking around) Where in the world my fellow Strobilus is I can't imagine. Well, the only thing to do is to wait here a bit longer; then I'll join father-in-law inside. Meanwhile I'll let him have an opportunity to inquire into the case from the old nurse that's been his daughter's maid: she knows about it all. (waits in doorway)

ACT V

ENTER Strobilus.

Strob. Ye immortal gods, what joy, what bliss, ye bless me with! I have a four pound pot of gold, chock full of gold! Show me a man that's richer! Who's the chap in all Athens now that Heaven's kinder to than me?

Lyc. Why, it surely seemed as if I heard some one's voice just then. (catches a glimpse of Strobilus's face, the latter wheeling around as he sees Lyconides)

Strob. (aside) Hm! Is that master there?

Luc. Videon ego hunc servom meum? Strob. Ipsus est. Haud alius est. Luc. Strob. Congrediar. Lyc. Contollam gradum. credo ego illum, ut iussi, eampse anum adiisse, huius nutricem virginis. Strob. Lyc. (aside) My servant, is it?

(aside, after a quick glance) It's the governor. Strob.

(aside) Himself. Luc.

(aside) Here goes. (moves toward Lyconides) Strob.

(aside) I'll go meet him. No doubt he's followed Lyc.instructions and been to see that old woman I mentioned, my girl's nurse.

Strob. (aside) Why not tell him I've found this prize? Then I'll beg him to set me free. I'll up and let him have the whole story. (to Lyconides, as they meet) I've found(scoffingly) Found what? Lyc.

No such trifle as youngsters hurrah over finding in Strob. a bean.1

Lyc. At your old tricks? You're chaffing. (pretends to be about to leave)

Hold on, sir: I'll tell you all about it this minute. Strob. Listen.

Lyc. Well, well, then, tell away.

Sir, to-day I've found—boundless riches! Strob.

(interested) You have? Where? Lyc.

A four pound pot, sir, I tell you, a four pound pot Strob. just full of gold!

What's all this you've done? He's the man that Lyc. robbed old Euclio. Where is this gold?

In a box at home. Now I want you to set me free. Strob. (angrily) I set you free, you, you great lump of Lyc.

iniquity?

(crestfallen, then laughing heartily) Go along with Strob. you, sir! I know what you're after. Gad! that was clever of me, testing you in that way! And you were just getting ready to drop on it! Now what would you be doing, if I really had found it?

Lyc. Yes, hand it over, so that it may be handed over to Euclio.

Strob. Gold? Where from?

Lyc. The gold you just admitted was in the box.

Strob. Bless your heart, sir, my tongue's all the time running on foolish-like.

Lyc.

Strob. That's what I say.

Lyc. (seizing him) See here, do you know what you'll get?

Strob. By heaven, sir, you can even kill me, but you won't have it from me, never——

The rest of the play is lost, save for a few fragments. Apparently Lyconides, on returning the pot of gold, was given permission to marry Euclio's daughter; and Euclio, having a change of heart, or influenced by his Household God, gave it to the young couple as a wedding present.

The first part of the play is lost, save for a few fragments, together with the last part of THE POT OF GOLD: Leo's summary of it follows:

POT OF GOLD: Leo's summary of it follows:

Pistoclerus has received a letter from his friend
Mnesilochus at Ephesus asking for help in his love affair. He has been captivated by a girl there named Bacchis, who has been hired for a year by a certain Captain Cleomachus and taken by him to Athens.
Mnesilochus mishes his friend to find Bacchis and obtain her release from the Captain. A servant of Bacchis of Athens has gone down to the harbour and comes back to her mistress with the report that her sister Bacchis has arrived. In charge of a slave of the Captain's this sister appears. The sisters meet with Pistoclerus, who is in search of his friend's sweetheart, and determine to make him useful.

Bacch. Qui, amabo?

Pistoc. Quia, Bacchis, bacchas metuo et bacchanal tuom.

Bacch. Quid est? quid metuis? ne tibi lectus malitiam apud me suadeat?

Pistoc. Magis illectum tuom quam lectum metuo. mala tu es bestia.

nam huic aetati non conducit, mulier, latebrosus locus.

Bacch. Egomet, apud me si quid stulte facere cupias, prohibeam.

tu prohibebis, et eadem opera tuo sodali operam dabis;

THE TWO BACCHISES

Pistoc. Stand by her? How?

Bacch. To have her carried back home when she's finished her service, so that he mayn't keep her for his maid servant. Why, if she only had the money to pay him back, she'd be glad to do it.

Pistoc. Where is this man at present?

Bacch. He'll be here soon, I suppose. But this is a matter you can manage better at our house; yes, you sit down and wait there till he comes. (coaxingly)
You shall have something to drink, too, and after that I'll give you just the nicest sort of kiss, too.

Pistoc. Nothing but birdlime, these honeved words.

Bacch. Oh now, why?

Pistoc. Well, because here you are, the pair of you, after one lone pigeon. (aside) Damnation! The limed twigs are brushing my wings! (aloud, stiffly) Madam, I consider this an unprofitable business for me to be in.

Bacch. Bless your heart, why so?

Pistoc. Well, Bacchis, I'm afraid of Bacchantes and your Bacchante resort.

Bacch. How's that? What are you afraid of? The couch's tempting you to be naughty with me?

Pistoc. It's not so much the couch as the couch's alluring occupant I'm afraid of. You're a dangerous animal. Why, dens of darkness don't become a young fellow like me.

Bacch. (quite artless) If you felt like doing anything silly there with me, I'd stop you my own self. But this is why I want you to be at my house when the Captain comes—because no one will do her (pointing to sister) or me any harm when you're by. You'll prevent it, and be helping along your chum at the same time; and when that military man et ille adveniens tuam med esse amicam suspicabitur. quid, amabo, opticuisti?

Pistoc.

Quia istaec lepida sunt memoratui: eadem in usu atque ubi periclum facias, aculeata sunt, animum fodicant, bona distimulant, facta et famam sauciant.

Soror

Quid ab hac metuis?

Pistoc

Quid ego metuam rogitas? adulescens homo penetrem me huius modi in palaestram, ubi damnis desudascitur? 1

Bacch. Lepide memoras.

Pistoc.

THE TWO BACCHISES

arrives, he'll take me for your sweetheart. Now, now, my dearie,—why so silent?

Pistoc. Because those words of yours have a pretty sound: but when a fellow takes 'em up and tries 'em they're barbed—they pink a heart, run a fortune through, disable a character and reputation.

Sister Why are you afraid of her?

Pistoc. Why am I afraid of her, eh? A young fellow like me to enter a physical training school of this sort (pointing to Bacchis's house) where a man only sweats himself to insolvency?

Bacch. (with pretended admiration) You do say such clever things!

Pistoc. Where my sword would be a turtle dove, my helmet a wine bowl, my plume a woven chaplet, my spear a dice box, my corselet a downy robe; where I'd be given a couch for a horse, with a bad bad girl beside me for a buckler? Hence! Avaunt!

Bacch. Ah, you're too hard on us!

Pistoc. I am hard on myself.

Bacch. We'll have to soften you. Yes indeed, I'll take you in hand myself—(fondling him) this way.

Pistoc. (submitting reluctantly) Ah, your handiwork is too expensive.

Bacch. Do make believe you love me.

Pistoc. (smiling) Make believe in fun, or as if I meant business?

Bacch. (reprovingly) Now, now! here's what we'd better do. When the Captain arrives I want you to hug me.

Pistoc. What's the use of my doing that?

Bacch. I want him to see you. I know what 'in doing.

THE TWO BACCHISES

Pistoc. Gad! And I know what I'm fearing. But, I say.

Bacch. Well?

Pistoc. What if there should happen to be an impromptu luncheon or drinking party at your house, or a dinner party, perhaps—the ordinary thing at resorts like yours—where would my place be then?

Bacch. Next to me, darling; a nice boy and a nice girl side by side. This place at my house is your very own always, no matter how unexpectedly you come. Whenever you want to have a nice time just say, "Give me a comfy place, rosey dear," and I'll give you a nice place to be comfy in.

Pistoc. (half to himself) This is a rapid stream: dangerous crossing here!

Bacch. (aside) My conscience, yes! And a stream you're bound to lose something in, young man! (aloud) Give me your hand and come along. (tries to take it)

Pistoc. (drawing back) Oh no, not a bit of it!

Bacch. Why not?

Pistoc. Because a young fellow couldn't be offered a more enticing combination than that—wine, woman, and evening hours.

Bacch. All right then. Dear me, I don't mind at all except for your sake, indeed I don't. To be sure he'll carry her off; but don't you come near me if you don't like to. (looks at him sadly and appealingly)

Pistoc. (half aside) So I've no mind at all, eh—no power to control myself?

Bacch. What is it you're afraid of?

Pistoc. (pauses, then ardently) Nothing! Bagatelles! I surrender myself to you, my lady: I'm all your own; command me.

Bacch. Lepidu's. nunc ego te facere hoc volo.

ego sorori meae cenam hodie dare volo viaticam:

eo tibi argentum iubebo iam intus ecferri foras;

Bacch. At ego nolo dare te quicquam.

Pistoc. Sine.

Bacch. Sino equidem, si lubet.

Pistoc. Prius hic adero quam te amare desinam. 100

Soror Bene me accipies advenientem, mea soror.

Bacch. Quid ita, obsecro?

Soror Quia piscatus meo quidem animo hic tibi hodie evenit bonus.

Bacch. Meus ille quidemst. tibi nunc operam dabo de Mnesilocho, soror, ut hic accipias potius aurum, quam hinc eas cum milite.

Soror Cupio.

Bacch. Dabitur opera. aqua calet: eamus hinc intro, ut laves.

nam uti navi vecta es, credo timida es.

Soror Aliquantum, soror.1

Bacch. Sequere hac igitur me intro in lectum, ut sedes lassitudinem.

 $^{^{1}}$ Leo brackets following v., 107: simul huic nescio cui, turbare qui huc it, decedamus.

Bacch. That's a nice boy! (petting him) Now this is what I want you to do. I want to give my sister a dinner to-day to celebrate her coming. I'll tell them to bring you out some money at once, and you're to see to provisioning us in perfectly splendid style. (turns to call to servant within)

Pistoc. (eagerly) I'll stand the provisioning myself: why, it wouldn't be decent of me to let you give me a good time, in your kindness, and pay the bills for it too.

Bacch. (glancing slyly at her sister) But I don't want it to cost you anything.

Pistoc. Do let me.

Bacch. Oh, very well, if you really want to. Hurry along, there's a dear.

Pistoc. (fondly) I'll be back before I've stopped loving you.

Sister You're going to entertain me finely on my arrival, sister mine.

Bacch. Indeed? Why do you say that?

Sister Well, that's something fine in the fish line (with a smile toward the retreating figure of Pistoclerus) you've landed to-day, at least I think so.

Bacch. Oh yes, I've caught him all right. Now I must help you out in regard to Mnesilochus, my dear, so that you may pick up some money here rather than go trooping off with the Captain.

Sister I do so wish you would.

Bacch. We'll see to it. (going toward house) The water's hot: let's go inside so that you may bathe. For after that sea trip of yours I dare say you're feeling shaky.

Sister More or less, sister.

Bacch. Come on in with me then, so as to lie down and get rested. [EXEUNT.

Lydus (magisterially) I have been following you in silence for some time, Pistoclerus, waiting to see what you were about with this gear. (pointing to slaves and their hampers) Why, Lord love me, I do believe Lycurgus 1 himself could be led astray here. Where are you betaking yourself now, going away up the street with such a train?

Pistoc. (pointing to Bacchis's door) Here.

Lydus What do you mean by "here"? Who lives there? Pistoc. (rapturously) Love, Delight, Venus, Grace, Joy, Jest, Jollity, Chitchat, Kissykissysweetkins!

Lydus (shocked) What commerce have you with such pernicious, pernicious deities?

Pistoc. It takes a bad man to say bad things of the good; you're blaspheming the gods: it's wrong.

Lydus You mean to say there is a god Kissykissysweet kins?

Pistoc. You mean to say you didn't ever suppose there was? Oh, Lydus, you are a barbarian! I fancied you were ever so much wiser than Thales and here you are, sillier than a barbarian babe in arms—your age, and not knowing the names of the gods!

Lydus I do not like this paraphernalia.

Pistoc. Well, nobody got it together for you: it was got for me, and I do like it.

Lydus Are you actually commencing to make smart replies to me? You whom it befits to be mute, even if you had ten tongues?

Pistoc. We aren't schoolboys for ever, Lydus. The one thing uppermost in my mind just now is that the cook may do as creditable a job on these edibles as their excellence calls for.

Lydus Ah, now you have thrown yourself away, and me, and my labour,—me, who many a time gave you good advice, all in vain!

Pistoc. I threw away my own labour at the same place you did yours: your system of instruction is no good to either of us.

Lydus Oh, what an obdurate breast!

Pistoc. You're a bore! Keep still and come along, Lydus.
 Lydus Now kindly look at that! He no longer calls me "Tutor," merely Lydus.

Pistoc. It's not the proper thing, it would be out of place, when the man who bought all this is inside there, and on a couch with his mistress, kissing her—and other guests about—to have his "Tutor" there in their presence.

Lydus (horrified) In the name of heaven! These provisions bought for such an orgy?

Pistoc. (flippantly) Well, of course man proposes and God disposes.

Lydus You to have a mistress, you?

Pistoc. (enthusiastically) Once you see her, then you'll know!

Lydus Never! You shall not have one; I will not allow it. (taking Presoclerus by the arm and trying to lead him back) Go home this instant.

Pistoc. (pulling away) Leave me alone, Lydus, and (threateningly) look out for trouble.

Lydus What? "Look out for trouble?"

Pistoc. I'm too old for you to play the teacher these days. Lydus (tragically) Oh, pit, where art thou now? How

Pistoc. It's a Hercules I'll be, I'm thinking, and you a Linus.¹

Lydus Great heavens! I have more fear of your actions forcing me to be a Phoenix ² and to convey to your father the news of your death.

Pistoc. (impatiently) Enough of your tales!

Lydus He is lost to shame! Great heavens! You gained nothing that does credit to your years in acquiring this impudence. The creature is past redemption! Does it ever occur to you that you have a father?

Pistoc. Am I your servant, or you mine?

Lydus It was a wicked, wicked teacher gave you these lessons, not I! You are a much apter pupil in matters of this sort than in the subjects I lost my labour teaching you.

Pistoc. (coolly) I've let you rant to your heart's content, so far, Lydus. Now drop it. Follow me this way and keep your mouth shut.

Apollo, who dost dwell adjacent to our house, and I do implore thee not to let our old man Nicobulus fall in with me ere I see Pistoclerus, the chum of Mnesilochus, to whom Mnesilochus hath sent a letter about his mistress, Bacchis.

Scene 2. ENTER Pistoclerus FROM HOUSE OF Bacchis.

Pistoc. (to Bacchis within) It seems curious, your begging me so hard to come back, when I couldn't possibly leave you if I wanted, when you've got me so bound over to you, held fast in the fetters of love.

Chrys. Ye everlasting gods! It's Pistoclerus. What ho, sir! How are you?

Pistoc. And yourself, Chrysalus?

Chrys. Here's for saving you the trouble of a long speech, sir. You're glad I've come: I believe you. You promise to do the honours and dine me, the stranger from afar, and so you should: for my part, I accept. I bring you cordial greetings from your chum. You'll ask me where he is: alive.

Pistoc. (eagerly) And well, well, of course? Chrys. That's what I wanted to ask you.

Pistoc. How can I know? Chrys. None better.

Pistoc. Why, how so?

Chrys. Because if his ladylove has been discovered, he's perfectly well: if she's not discovered, he's not so well; he's at death's door. His love is life to a lover: if she's away, he's lost; if she's there, his cash is lost, he himself being—a poor good-fornothing fool. But you—what have you been doing about his commission?

Pistoc. I? Am I the man to let him arrive and find the request his messenger mentioned unattended to? I'd sooner pass my days in the lower regions.

Chrys. Eho, an invenisti Bacchidem? Pistoc. Samiam guidem. 199, 200 Chrys. Vide quaeso, ne quis tractet illam indiligens; scis tu ut confringi vas cito Samium solet. Pistoc. Iamne ut soles? Chrys. Chrys. Hullo! You haven't found Bacchis?

Pistoc. Yes, the Samian one.

Chrys. (affecting terror) Heavens! do see that no one handles that one carelessly; you know that Samian 1 ware, how precious brittle it is.

Pistoc. The same old wag, eh?

Chrys. Tell me where she is now, for heaven's sake.

Pistoc. Here in the house you just saw me coming out of.

Chrys. Here's a go! Residing in the immediate neighbourhood! Well, well! does she remember Mnesilochus?

Pistoc. Remember him? More than that, she thinks he's the one and only man on earth.

Chrys. Oh pshaw!

Pistoc. More than that, what do you suppose her feelings are? The poor affectionate thing is dying for him.

Chrys. Quite charming!

Pistoc. More than that, Chrysalus—look!—she doesn't let even so much (illustrating) time pass without mentioning his name.

Chrys. Humph! So much the better of her.

Pistoc. More than that---

Chrys. (bored) More than that, by gad, I'd rather get out of range!

Pistoc. You don't object to hearing that your master is in a prosperous situation, do you?

Chrys. It's not the situations that make me sick unto death; it's your confounding acting. Even the Epudicus 2—a comedy I love as well as my own self—well, there's not a one I so object to seeing, if Pellio's playing in it. But you really consider Bacchis a fine lively one, do you?

ibi desidere neque redire filium,

Pistoc. Do you ask me that? If I hadn't lighted on Venus myself, I'd call her Juno.

Chrys. (half aside) Well, by gad, Mnesilochus, as far as I can understand the present situation, you've got your love: the wherewithal is what you need to find. (to Pistoclerus) For I dare say there is need of gold in the affair.

Pistoc. Yes, and good coin of the realm.

Chrys. And furthermore, I dare say it's needed soon.

Pistoc. No, before that, even: for a Captain's due here soon.

Chrys. Indeed? A Captain, too?

Pistoc. Who'll be after money for letting Bacchis go.

Chrys. (airily) Let him come when he wants, yes, and let him take care not to keep me waiting. I'm provided: I fear no man and supplicate no man, not I,—at least as long as this heart of mine can prompt a good stiff lie. Inside with you: (grandly maving Pistoclerus in) I'll take charge here myself. You tell Bacchis in there that she may expect Mnesilochus at once.

Pistoc. Very well. [EXIT

Chrys. It's my look out, this business of the exchequer. We've brought twelve hundred sovereigns from Ephesus, money a friend there owed our old man. I'll machinate some machinations to-day for transferring part of said gold to my lovesick young master. (listening) But there goes our door! Wonder who's coming out. (steps aside)

Scene 3. ENTER Nicobulus FROM HIS HOUSE.

Nic. I'll walk down to the Piraeus and see if any merchantman has come in from Ephesus. It worries me to have my son dilly-dallying there so long and not returning.

Chrys. (aside) I'll unravel him handsomely now, God willing. No sleepyheadedness allowed: Chrysalus, you must be a golden chrysalis! Here's at him—the man I'll certainly make a ¹Phrixus's ram here to-day, and by the same token shear off his gold right down to the quick! (aloud, ceremoniously) Greetings to Nicobulus from servant Chrysalus, sir.

Nic. Chrysalus! for the love of heaven where is my son? Chrys. (affecting pique) Why don't you return my greeting first, sir?

Nic. How d'ye do. (more animatedly) But where on earth is Mnesilochus?

Chrys. Alive and well. Nic. Has he come?

Chrys. He has.

Nic. (fervently) Oh, good, good! That news is like a dash of water! Has he been well all this time?

Chrys. In fighting trim, a perfect athlete.

Nic. How about it? The business I sent him to Ephesus for? Did he get the gold from my friend Archidemides?

Chrys. (disgustedly) Ugh! My heart and head fairly split, sir, whenever I hear that fellow mentioned. Call that friend of yours fiend, won't you?

Nic. Bless my soul! Why, for heaven's sake?

Chrys. Good Lord! Because I'm positive the four gods, Fire, Moon, Sun, and Day, never shone on a more abandoned villain.

Nic. Than Archidemides?

Chrys. Yes, than Archidemides.

Nic. What has he done?

Chrys. What hasn't he done? Why don't you ask me that? Well, in the first place he began lying to your son and disclaimed owing you a single sixpence. Immediately Mnesilochus summoned that old gentleman, Pelagon, that's been our friend so long; in his presence he promptly shows the fellow the token, the one you gave your son yourself to carry to him.

Nic. (anxiously) And what when he showed him the token?

Chrys. (indignantly) He cries out it's a counterfeit and not the right token at all. And how he did heap insults on your innocent boy! Said he was an old hand at counterfeiting.

Nic. Have you got the money? Do tell me that.

Chrys. To be sure, after the judge had appointed arbitrators, he was finally convicted, and, under compulsion, he handed over twelve hundred pounds.

Nic. (with a sigh of relief) That was all he owed.

Chrys. There's more still, sir,—listen how he wanted to knock us out.

Nic. More still?

Chrys. Now then! (aside) This'll be a regular hawk swoop.

Nic. (hotly) I've been deceived! I've trusted my gold to an Autolycus 1 of a friend!

Chrys. Come, come, listen.

Nic. Ah, no, I didn't fathom his greedy soul.

Chrys. After we got the gold we embarked, eager for home. I was sitting on deck, and while I was looking around, my eye just happened to fall on a long, staunch, wicked-looking galley being fitted out for sea.

Nic. Hell and fury! That galley is ramming me amidships!

Chrys. (with emphasis) It was owned between your friend and some pirates.

(agonized) Could I have been such an imbecile as Nic. to trust the fellow when his very name, Archidemides, fairly bawled out that I'd be damnéd easy, if I did trust him with anything?

Chrys. (warming up) This galley was lying in wait for our ship. I began to keep an eye on their operations aboard her. Meanwhile our ship weighs anchor and moves out of the harbour. When we get outside they row after us fast as a bird, fast as the wind. Now that I noticed what was up, we brought to at once. Now that they saw us lying to they began to slow down there in the harbour.

Nic. God bless me, what rascals! What did you do then?

Chrus. We put back to the harbour.

Nic. That was wise. What did they do after that?

Chrys. Toward evening they went ashore.

Nic. By the Lord! They wanted to make off with the gold: that was their aim!

Chrys. I knew that well enough: I saw through it. That drove me frantic. Now that we perceived that they had designs on the gold, we laid our plans at once; the next day we carried it all ashore publicly and openly while they were by, to let them know it was done.

Nic. By Jove, a neat idea! Come, come, what did they do?

Chrys. Looked doleful on the spot, and as soon as they see us go away from the harbour with the gold there's a shaking of heads and they beach their galley. As for us, we deposited all the gold with Theotimus, the priest of Diana there at Ephesus.

Nic. (suspiciously) Who is that Theotimus?

Chrys. (reassuringly) Megalobulus's son, sir, and quite the dearest man in all Ephesus to the Ephesians.

Nic. Good Lord! He certainly would be a very very much dearer man to me, if he should swindle me out of so much gold.

Chrys. Oh, but it's stored in the temple of Diana itself.

It's in public keeping there.

Nic. Yes, worse luck! It would be a great deal safer in private keeping here. But you didn't bring any of it home, not any?

Chrys. To be sure, we did. Just how much we brought, though, I don't know.

Nic. What? Don't know?

Chrys. You see Mnesilochus visited Theotimus on the sly, by night, and he didn't care to confide in me or anyone else aboard: so I don't know just what trifle he did bring along; not very much, though.

Nic. As much as half, do you think?

Chrys. Upon my soul, I don't know; but I don't believe so.

Nic. A third. eh?

Chrys. Bless my soul, I don't believe so; however, I don't know. In fact, all I know about the money is that I don't know. Now you'll have to make a voyage there yourself, sir, so as to get it from Theotimus and bring it back home. And, oh, I say!

Nic. Well?

Chrys. See you remember to take your son's ring along.

Nic. Ring? What for?

Chrys. Because we arranged with Theotimus that he's to give the gold to the man that brings him that ring.

Nic. I shall remember; well you mentioned it, too.

Chrus. Wealthy, eh? Wealthy? And he with gold soles on his shoes!

What makes him so high and mighty? Nic.

Chrys. He's so rich; he doesn't know what to do with gold. (sighing) Wish he'd give it to me! But who was Nic. there when this money was given to Theotimus?

Chrys. The whole population, sir: there's not a soul in Ephesus but knows about it.

My son showed sense in that, at any rate,—giving Nic. it to a wealthy man to keep for him. You can get it from such a man at a moment's notice.

Oh no, he'll never keep you waiting, not-see Chrys. here—(illustrating) not so long: he'll let you have it the day you arrive.

Nic. I thought I had escaped from the seafaring life, that an old man of my age might really be done with voyaging. But no choice is left me, I perceive, in this case—thanks to the tactics of my charming friend Archidemides. Where is my son Mnesilochus at present, then?

Gone to the forum to pay his respects to the gods Chrys.

and his friends.

Nic. Well, I shall go and try to find him as soon as possible.

Chrys. (gleefully) He's nicely freighted, he is, in fact, overfreighted. Not a half bad sort of web I've woven here! To set up the young master in funds for his love affair, I've fixed things so that he can take as much of the gold as he wants himself, yes, and pass on to his father as much as he likes to pass on. The old man will go to Ephesus to fetch the gold and we'll be living a downy life of it here, that is, if the old chap leaves us here and doesn't drag me and Mnesilochus along with him. Oh. won't

Scene 2.

ENTER Mnesilochus, FOLLOWED AT SOME DISTANCE BY SLAVES CARRYING HIS LUGGAGE.

I've given the question careful consideration, Mnes. and what I believe is this: nothing but Heaven itself excels a friend who is a friend in the full sense of the term; I've found this is so from my own experience. After I went away from here to Ephesus-almost two years ago, that was-I sent a letter from there to my chum Pistoclerus asking him to find my mistress, Bacchis, for me. And find her he did, it seems, according to that fellow Chrysalus of mine. (pauses) Quite worthy of Chrysalus, that scheme of his against my father to get the money, so that my amorous self might have supplies. (pauses) Well, well, to my own mind there's nothing more expensive than being an ingrate. Letting a malefactor off is better than turning your back on a benefactor. The name of being too extravagant is a great deal better for you than that of being ungrateful. Good men will speak well of the first sort of fellow: even rascals themselves will blame the second. I must take all the more care, then, how I act and keep my eyes open. Here's where you show a sample of yourself, Mnesilochus; here's where you're put to the test whether you're the man you should be or not-bad or good, whatever you Scene 3. ENTER Lydus AND Philoxenus.

Lydus (struggling to control himself) Now we shall see whether or no you have a heart of fiery feeling within you. Follow me!

Phil. (calmly) Follow you where? Where are you taking me to now?

Lydus To the woman who has depraved, destroyed your one and only son!

Phil. Gently, gently, Lydus! "Ire restrained is wisdom gained." It's less surprising to have a youngster up to something of that kind than not. I've done the same sort of thing myself in my younger days.

Lydus Oh-h-h dear, oh dear! It is that very tolerance that has been his undoing. Why, but for you, I should have made a good moral man of him: as it is, you and your support have made a debauchee of Pistoclerus.

Mnes. (aside) Good God! My chum's name! What does this mean—Lydus running down his master Pistoclerus so?

Phil. A man's eager to have his fling for a little while, Lydus; the time will soon come when he'll actually loathe himself for it. Give him rein; so long as he's careful not to go too far in his indiscretions, why, let him be.

I will not let him be, no, nor let him be corrupted Lydus and live to see it, never! But you-with your pleas for a son so corrupted—was your own training of this same sort when you were a young man? I say no, I say you never had a chance during the first twenty years of your life to stir a single finger's breadth from the house without your tutor. Unless vou had arrived at the athletic grounds before sunrise, it was no slight penalty the Gymnasium Director imposed on you. When this had happened, this further trouble was added, that pupil and teacher too were held to be disgraced. There it was by running, wrestling, throwing the spear and discus, boxing, ball, jumping, they used to get their exercise, rather than by means of wenches, or kisses: it was there they used to spend their lives, not in dark dens of vice. Then when you had returned home from the track and field, all neat and trim you would sit on your chair before your teacher with your book: and while you were reading, if you had missed a single syllable, your hide would be made as spotted as a nurse's gown.

Mnes. (aside) It's torment, hang it, to have my chum coming in for all this on my account; it's for my sake he's shouldering this suspicion, poor innocent.

Phil. (soothingly) The customs of to-day are different, Lydus.

Lydus Indeed they are! I realize the truth of that.

Then the tutor is summoned: "Hey, you worthless old baggage, don't you touch my boy merely for acting like a lad of spirit!" Judgment pronounced, the court adjourns. Can a teacher exert authority here under such conditions, if he is beaten first himself?

Mnes. (aside) Here's a warm protest! Judging from his remarks, it's a wonder if Pistoclerus hasn't been punching Lydus's head.

Lydus (looking in the direction of Mnesilochus) But who is this I see standing in front of the door? (recognizing him) Ah, Philoxenus, that is a man whose support I should value no less than that of the gods!

Phil. Who is it?

Lydus Mnesilochus, your son's chum. And a youth so, so different from the one lolling in that vile house! (pointing to Bacchis's) Happy, happy Nicobulus to have brought up such a lad!

Phil. (stepping forward) How are you, Mnesilochus? I'm glad to see you safely back.

Mnes. (heartily shaking hands) God bless you, Philoxenus! Lydus Ah, yes, here is a son to rejoice a father's heart: goes to sea, attends to family affairs, is the bulwark of the home, observes and obeys his father's every wish and word. He was Pistoclerus's chum even when they were boys—not three days' difference between them so far as age is concerned, but this lad is more than thirty years his senior in native sense.

Cave malo et compesce in illum dicere iniuste. Phil. Lydus Tace. stultus es qui illi male aegre patere dici qui facit.1 Mnes.Quid sodalem meum castigas, Lyde, discipulum tuom? Lydus Periit tibi sodalis. Mnes. Ne di sirint. Ludus Sic est ut loquor. quin ego cum peribat vidi, non ex audito arguo. Quid factum est? Mnes. Lydus Mcretricem indigne deperit. Mnes. Non tu taces? Lydus Atque acerrume aestuosam: absorbet ubi quemque attigit. Mnes. Ubi ea mulier habitat? Ludus Mnes. Unde esse cam aiunt? Ex Samo Ludus Mnes. Quae vocatur? Ludus Bacchis. Mnes. Erras, Lyde: ego omnem rem scio quem ad modumst. tu Pistoclerum falso atque insontem arguis. nam ille amico et benevolenti suo sodali sedulo rem mandatam exsequitur. ipsus neque amat nec tu creduas. ¹ Leo brackets following v., 465, 466: nam illum meum malum promptare malim quam peculium. Phil. Quidem ? Quia, malum si promptet, in dies faciat minus. Lydus Yes, yes, I should rather have him administer my punishment than my money. Phil. Why so? Because if he administered my punishment, there would Lydus soon be none left.

Phil. (angrily) Look out for yourself, and stop speaking about the lad unfairly!

Lydus Peace! fool that you are to be pained at hearing him badly spoken of, when he is bad!

Mnes. (innocently) Why are you finding fault with my chum, Lydus, your own pupil?

Lydus (tragically) Your chum has perished!

Mnes. God forbid!

Lydus It's just as I tell you. Ah yes, I myself beheld him in the act: I am not accusing him on hearsay.

Mnes. What has happened?

Lydus He is shockingly infatuated with a courtesan.

Mnes. (apparently scandalized) Oh, don't say such a thing!
 Lydus Yes, and a perfect maelstrom of a woman: she sucks down every man who comes within her reach.

Mnes. Where does this woman live?

Lydus (pointing) Here.

Mnes. Where do they say she is from?

Lydus Samos.

Mnes. What is her name?

Lydus Bacchis.

Mnes. (with an air of relief) You're mistaken. Lydus: I know all about the matter, just how it stands. That's a false charge of yours, and Pistoclerus is innocent. Why, he's fulfilling a commission for a friend and well-wisher of his, a chum, and doing it zealously. He doesn't love her himself, and you mustn't think he does.

Lydus Itane oportet rem mandatam gerere amici sedulo, ut ipsus in gremio osculantem mulierem teneat sedens? nullo pacto res mandata potest agi, nisi identidem manus ferat ei ad papillas, labra a labris nusquam auferat? 480 nam alia memorare quae illum facere vidi dispudet: cum manum sub vestimenta ad corpus tetulit Bacchidi me praesente, neque pudere quicquam. quid verbis mihi discipulus, tibi sodalis periit, huic filius; nam ego illum periisse dico quoi quidem periit pudor.1 Perdidisti me, sodalis. egone ut illam mulierem Mnes. capitis non perdam? perire me malis malim modis. satin ut quem tu habeas fidelem tibi aut cui credas nescias? Lydus Viden ut aegre patitur gnatum esse corruptum tuom. suom sodalem, ut ipsus sese cruciat aegritudine? Phil. Mnesiloche, hoc tecum oro, ut illius animum atque ingenium regas; serva tibi sodalem et mihi filium. Mnes. Factum volo. Lydus Melius esset, me quoque una si cum illo relinqueres. Phil. Adfatim est. ¹ Leo brackets following v., 486-488: quid opust verbis? si opperiri vellem paulisper modo, ut opinor, illius inspectandi mi esset maior copia, plus viderem quam deceret, quam me atque illo acquom foret. Why say more? If I had wished to remain but a little longer, I should have had further opportunity to observe his conduct, I suppose, and I should have seen more than was proper, more than became me and him.

Lydus (sharply) Does executing this commission for his friend, and doing it zealously, call for his sitting down and holding the girl in his lap while she kisses him? Is there no way of his carrying out this commission save by his embracing her time and again in unseemly fashion and never taking his lips an inch from hers? Why, I feel ashamed to mention other things I saw him do, dreadful, dreadful things, in my presence—and never a trace of shame about him. Why say more? My pupil, your chum, this father's son, has perished; for perished I say he has, when his sense of shame has perished.

Mnes. You've wrecked my life, (nith special acrimony) chum! Oh, won't I wreck that woman's! I'd rather die a dog's death than not get even with her! Can it really be you don't know whom to think loyal to you, whom to trust?

Lydus (to Philosenus) Do you see how he suffers at your son, his chum, being corrupted; how his very soul is tormented?

Phil. Mnesilochus, try to control the lad's impulses and disposition, I beg you. Save your chum for yourself and my son for me.

Mnes. (vehemently) I wish I might!

Lydus (to Philoxenus) It would be better for you to leave me with him, too.

Phil. No, no, he'll manage.

Lydus Mnesiloche, cura, ci, concastiga hominem probe, qui dedecorat te, me amicosque alios flagitiis suis.

Phil. In te ego hoc onus omne impono. Lyde, sequere hac me.

Lydus

Sequor.

III. 4. Mnes.

However, rather than have my money make her a fraction the weightier or heavier, I'd prefer to perish in the pangs of want.

Lydus Mnesilochus, take charge of him! Go, rate him well—for degrading you, and me and his other friends with his enormities.

Phil. I put the whole load on your shoulders. (turns to go) This way, Lydus; come.

Lydus (gloomily) Very well.

[EXEUNT Philoxenus AND Lydus.

Scene 4.

(tempestuously) I absolutely can't tell which is my Mnes. worse enemy now, my chum or Bacchis. Hankered for him instead of me, did she? Let her have him! All right, all right! By heaven, she'll certainly pay for this; for may no one ever believe my sacred word again, if I don't thoroughly and utterly-(wryly) love her. She shan't say she's lighted on a man she can laugh to scorn, I promise you. I'll home this minute, and—steal something from my father and give it to her. I'll be revenged on her in all sorts of ways. Yes indeed, I'll bring her to such a pass that-my father will have to beg his bread. But can I really be in possession of my senses, babbling here in this fashion about these futurities? Good Lord! I do believe I love herseeing I know it for certain. But sooner than let any cash of mine make her a fraction of a featherweight the heavier, I'd outbeggar a beggar. gad, she shan't give me the laugh in this world, never! My mind's made up—I'll count out every bit of that gold to my father this moment. Then let her try her pretty wiles on me when I'm poverty stricken and penniless, when it won't do any more good to coax than if you were to prattle to a dead man at his tomb. The money goes to my father, that's final, absolutely final. At the same time I'll

Yes, it is only right I should look out for the fellow that lied to him for my sake. (to slaves nith luggage) Follow me, you. [EXEUNT INTO HOUSE OF Nicobulus.

Scene 5. (Fifteen minutes have elapsed.)

ENTER Pistoclerus from Bacchis's House.

Pistoc. (to Bacchis mithin) Everything else shall come second to your commission, Bacchis,—to hunt up Mnesilochus and bring him back with me. Why, I don't know what to make of his delay, if my message reached him. I'll go look him up at the house here, in case he happens to be at home.

Scene 6.

ENTER Mnesilochus FROM HOUSE.

Mnes. I've handed over the whole sum to my father. Now's the time I should like her to meet me, now that I haven't a sou—my Lady Disdain! (pausing) But how father did hate to pardon Chrysalus for me! However, I finally induced him to swallow his wrath.

Pistoc. (approaching Nicobulus's house) Isn't that my chum?

Mnes. Isn't that my enemy I see?

Pistoc. (beaming) It certainly is.

Mnes. (glowering) It is.

Pistoc. I'll step up and meet him. (hurries to him) Mnesilochus! bless you!

Mnes. (gruffly) Same to you.

Pistoc. (enthusiastically) We must have a dinner, now you're safe back from abroad.

Mnes. I have no desire for a dinner that stirs my bile.

Pistoc. (wonderingly) You haven't met with any trouble on your return, have you?

Mnes. Yes, of the worst sort.

Pistoc.	Unde?
Mnes.	Ab homine quem mi amicum esse arbitratus sum antidhac.

Mnes.	Ego ita esse arbitror.
Pistoc.	Obsecro hercle loquere, quis is est?
	Benevolens vivit tibi.
	nam ni ita esset, tecum orarem ut ei quod posses mali

	38 2

Pistoc. What caused it?

Mnes. A man I always took for a friend till now.

Pistoc. (indignantly) There are plenty of fellows amongst us of that character and description, fellows you regard as friends only to find 'em treacherous traitors—energetic talkers, lazy doers, and ready deserters. There's no one they don't envy his good luck. As for themselves, they take proper care no one envies them—their own inertness looks out for that.

Mnes. (dryly) Well, well! You certainly have a very intimate acquaintance with their characteristics. But there's this one thing to add: they're cursed by their own cursed dispositions: friends to no man as they are, they themselves have foes in all men. When they're deceiving themselves the fools fancy they are deceiving others. That's the way with this man I thought was as good a friend to me as I am to myself: as far as in him lay he took pains to do me all the harm he could, to defraud me of all I had.

Pistoc. The fellow must be a perfect villain!

Mnes. Precisely my own opinion.

Pistoc. (more indignantly) By Jove, now! Who is he? Tell me, tell me.

Mnes. A man on good terms with you. Yes, but for that, I'd beg you to do him any damage you could.

Pistoc. Only tell me who the fellow is: if I don't damage him somehow, you can call me the most spiritless wretch on earth.

Mnes. He's a scoundrel, but good Lord, he is a friend of yours!

Pistoc. All the more reason for telling me who he is; it's little I care for the favour of a scoundrel.

Mnes.	Video non potesse quin tibi eius nomen eloquar.
	Pistoclere, perdidisti me sodalem funditus.	560
Pistoc.	Quid istuc est?

	ACTVS IV
Par.	Parasitus ego sum hominis nequam atque improbi,

Mnes. I see there is nothing for me to do but give you his name. Pistoclerus, (bitterly) you have ruined me, your chum, ruined me utterly.

Pistoc. (aghast) Eh? What's that?

Mnes. What's that? Didn't I send you a letter from Ephesus about my mistress, asking you to find her for me?

Pistoc. To be sure you did—and I did find her.

Mnes. What? Weren't there enough other women in Athens for you to philander with, without beginning to make love to her, the girl I had entrusted to you, and trying this underhand trick on me?

Pistoc. Are you sane?

Mnes. I have the whole story from your tutor. You needn't deny it. You have ruined me.

Pistoc. (getting irritated) Can it be you're bent on provoking me with this uncalled for abuse of yours?

Mnes. Eh? You do love Bacchis?

Pistoc. Well, but look you, there are two Bacchises in here.

Mnes. (astonished) What? Two?

Pistoc. And sisters, too.

Mnes. Now you're talking rot, and you know it.

Pistoc. See here now, if you go on making light of my word, I'll perch you up on my neck and carry you off inside. (seizes him)

Mnes. No, no, I'll go: wait.

Pistoc. I won't wait, and I won't have you suspecting me falsely, either. (pulls him toward door)

Mnes. I'm coming. [EXEUNT INTO HOUSE.

ACT IV

ENTER Parasite WITH Cleomachus's PAGE.

Par. The parasite of a worthless reprobate is what I am, the parasite of the Captain that carried the wench militis, qui amicam secum avexit ex Samo.

nunc me ire iussit ad eam et percontarier, utrum aurum reddat anne eat secum semul.
tu dudum, puere, cum illac usque isti semul:
quae harum sunt aedes, pulta. adi actutum ad fores.
recede hinc dierecte. ut pulsat propudium!
comesse panem tris pedes latum potes, fores pultare nescis. ecquis in aedibust?
heus, ecquis hic est? ecquis hoc aperit ostium?
ecquis exit?

580

IV. 2.

Pistoc.

Quid istuc? quae istaec est pulsatio? quae te mala crux agitat, qui ad istunc modum alieno viris tuas extentes ostio? fores paene exfregisti. quid nunc vis tibi? Adulescens, salve.

Par. Pistoc

Salve. sed quem quaeritas?

Par. Bacchidem.

Pistoc.

Utram ergo?

Par.

Nil scio nisi Bacchidem. paucis: me misit miles ad eam Cleomachus, vel ut ducentos Philippos reddat aurcos vel ut hinc in Elatiam hodie eat secum semul.

590

Pistoc. Non it. negat se ituram. abi et renuntia. alium illa amat, non illum. duc te ab aedibus.

Par. Nimis iracunde.

Pistoc.

At sein quam iracundus siem? ne tibi herele haud longe est os ab infortunio, ita dentifrangibula haec meis manibus gestiunt.

off from Samos with him. Now he has ordered me to call on her and inquire whether she intends to pay him back his money, or go along with him. (scanning the houses) Boy, you came along to the place with her a short time ago: whichever house it is here, knock. Up to the door with you directly: (page obeys, knocking timidly) Get out and be hanged to you! How the imp knocks! You can devour a loaf of bread three feet wide: as for knocking at a door, you don't know how. (pounds vigorously himself, and shouts) Anyone at home? Hi! Anyone here? Anyone minding this door? Anyone coming?

Scene 2. ENTER Pistoclerus INTO DOORWAY.

Pistoc. (angrily) What's all this? What do you mean by pounding so? What the devil ails you, to test your strength on other people's doors this way? You've nearly smashed it off. Now what are you after?

Par. (somewhat coved) Good day, young gentleman. Pistoc. Good day. But who is it you're looking for?

Par. Bacchis.

Pistoc. Well, which?

Par. Bacchis—that's all I know. Briefly: Captain Cleomachus sent me to say she must either pay him back two hundred golden sovereigns, or else go along with him to-day to Elatea.

Pistoc. She is not going. She refuses to go. Away with you and report! It's another man she loves, not him. March yourself off!

Par. (soothingly) You're too irritable.

Pistoc. (roaring) But d'ye know how irritable? By the Lord, that face of yours is precious close to a calamity, the way these (shaking his fists at parasite, who retreats) tooth-crackers here are itching!

Cum ego huius verba interpretor, mihi cautiost, Par. ne nucifrangibula excussit ex malis meis. tuo ego istaec igitur dicam illi periculo.

Pistoc. Quid ais tu?

Par. Ego istuc illi dicam.

Pistoc. Die mihi, 600

quis tu es?

Par. Illius sum integumentum corporis.

Pistoc. Nequam esse oportet cui tu integumentum improbu's.

Par. Sufflatus ille huc veniet.

Pistoc. Dirrumptum velim.

Numquid vis? Par.Pistoc. Abeas. celeriter factost opus.

Par.Vale, dentifrangibule. Pistoc.

Et tu, integumentum, vale. in eum nunc haec res venit locum, ut quid consili dem meo sodali super amica nesciam, qui iratus renumeravit omne aurum patri, neque nummus ullust qui reddatur militi. sed huc concedam, nam concrepuerunt fores.

610

Mnesilochus eccum maestus progreditur foras.

IV. 3.

Mnes. Petulans, protervo iracundo animo, indomito incogitato, > sine modo et modestia sum, sine bono iure atque honore.

> incredibilis imposque animi, inamabilis inlepidus vivo, malevolente ingenio natus. postremo id mi est quod volo ego esse aliis. credibile hoc est? pequior nemost neque indignior quoi di bene faciant neque quem quisquam homo aut amet aut adeat.

Par. (aside, wryly) To judge from his remarks, I must take care he doesn't knock the nutcrackers out of my jaws. (aloud) All right, I'll tell him about this, and it will be at your risk. (turns to go)

Pistoc. See here! (advancing)

Par. (backing away) I'll tell him what you say.

Pistoc. Tell me this, who are you?

Par. (impressively) I am the Captain's corporal integument.

Pistoc. A sorry specimen he must be to have a rascal like you for an integument!

Par. He'll be coming here swelling with rage.

Pistoc. I hope he bursts.

Par. (going) Anything more I can do?

Pistoc. Yes, get out! And you need to be quick about it. (advancing)

Par. (running) Farewell, Sir Toothcracker.

Pistoc. The same to yourself, Sir Integument. [EXIT Parasite.] Now matters have come to the point where I don't know how to advise my chum about his mistress, what with his getting angry and counting out all the gold to his father, and not a penny left to pay the Captain. (listening) But I'll step aside here: (does so) the door creaked. Ah, there's our woebegone Mnesilochus coming out.

Scene 3. ENTER Mnesilochus FROM Bacchis's HOUSE.

Mnes. A hasty fool, a reckless, passionate, uncontrollable, unthinking fool without method and moderation, that's what I am—a creature without any sense of right and honour, distrustful, hotheaded, loveless, graceless, crabbed and born crabbed! Yes, yes, I'm everything that I wish some one else was! Is this credible? There's not a viler man alive, a man more unworthy of heaven's kindness, of having inimicos quam amicos aequomst med habere, malos quam bonos par magis me iuvare.

omnibus probris, quae improbis viris digna sunt, dignior nullus est homo; qui patri reddidi omne aurum amans, mihi quod fuit prae manu. sumne ego homo miser? perdidi me simulque operam Chrysali.

Perii.

620

Pistoc. Consolandus hic mist, ibo ad eum.

Mnesiloche, quid fit?

Mnes.

Pistoc. Di melius faciant.

Mnes. Perii.

Pistoc. Non taces, insipiens?

Mnes. Taceam?

Pistoc. Sanus satis non est.

Mnes. Perii.

multa mala mi in pectore nunc acria atque acerba eveniunt.

criminin me habuisse fidem? immerito tibi iratus

Pistoc. Heia, bonum habe animum.

Mnes. Unde habeam? mortuos pluris pretist 630 quam ego sum.

Pistoc. Militis parasitus venerat modo aurum petere hinc, eum ego meis dictis malis his foribus atque hac platea abegi;

reppuli, reieci hominem.

Mnes. Quid mi id prodest? quom ipse veniet, quid faciam? nil habeo miser. ille quidem hanc abducet, scio.

Pistoc. Si mihi sit, non pollicear.

a mortal soul love him or come near him! Enemies are what I ought to have, not friends; rascals are the right people to help me, not honest men. Not a man on earth has a better title to all the infamy of an infamous scoundrel! I to give all that gold to my father, and I in love—gold I had in hand! If I'm not a poor, poor fool! I've thrown away my own life together with all Chrysalus did for me.

Pistoc. (aside) I must console him: I'll up to him. (aloud, approaching) How are things, Mnesilochus?

Mnes. I'm done for.

Pistoc. God forbid!

Mnes. (still more dejectedly) I'm done for. Pistoc. Won't you shut up, you silly fellow?

Mnes. Shut up?

Pistoc. You've lost your wits.

Mnes. I'm done for. Oh, the confounded thoughts that crowd in on me now, exasperating, excruciating!

To have credited that accusation! I had no reason to be angry with you.

Pistoc. Oh well, cheer up.

Mnes. Where can I get cheer? A corpse is worth more than I am.

Pistoc. (encouragingly) The Captain's parasite has just been here after the money: I let him have a volley of abuse and drove him away up the street here. I fought him off, flung him back.

Mnes. (disconsolate) What's the good of that to me? When he comes himself, what shall I do? I haven't a penny, wretch that I am! Of course he'll carry her off, I know that.

Pistoc. If I had any money myself, I wouldn't promise it to you.

Mnes.	Scio, dares, novi tuom.

Being in love, however, you have troubles enough of your own as it is. But even if you were fancy free, could I think you able to supply me, unsupplied as you are yourself? Impossible!

Pistoc. Oh, do shut up: some god will look out for us.

Mnes. Rubbish! (despairingly, moving off) Farewell!

Pistoc. (looking down street) Wait.

Mnes. What's the matter?

Pistoc. (pointing) Look! I see your supply station, Chrysalus. Sh—h! (they withdraw).

Why, I've done a double deed to-day, been graced with double spoils. old master—how cleverly I did take him in to-day, how he was fooled! Wily as the old chap is, my wily arts impelled him and compelled him to believe me in everything. And now the young master that's in love, the old one's son, that I drink with and eat with and go a-courting with—I've furnished him out with regal supplies, golden supplies, so that he can go to himself for cash and not look for it outside. I haven't any use for those Parmenos, those Syruses 1 that do their masters out of two or three gold pieces. There's nothing more worthless than a servant without brains: he's got to have a precious powerful intellect: whenever a scheme is needed, let him produce it from his own intellect. Not a soul can be worth anything, unless he knows how to be good and bad both. He must be a rascal among rascals, rob robbers, steal what he can. that's worth anything, a chap with a fine intellect, has to be able to change his skin. He must be good with the good and bad with the bad; whatever the situation calls for, that he's got to be. (pausing) But I should like to know how much money master took for himself and what he passed on to his father. If he is worth anything, he has let his father play Hercules—given him a tithe and made off with nine parts for his own use. (sees Mnesilochus and Pistoclerus) Hullo, though! Here's a lucky meeting with the man I'm looking for! (to Mnesilochus) You haven't dropped any of the coin, have you, sir,—gazing at the ground that way? (waits for answer) What makes you two look so sad and gloomy? (waits again) I don't like it: no indeed, it's not for nothing. (waits again) Why don't you answer me?

Mnes. Chrysalus, I'm a lost man.

Chrys. You took too little of the gold, perhaps?

Mnes. Too little, eh, curse it! No indeed,—much too much less than too little!

Chrys. Well, how's that, you blockhead? After my ability won you this opportunity to help yourself to just as much as you pleased, you surely didn't pick it up this way (illustrating) with a couple of finger tips? Didn't you know how seldom a man is offered such a chance?

Mnes. You're making a mistake.

Mnes. (moodily) Good Lord! You'd lecture me more than you do now, if you knew more of the facts. I'm a lost man!

Chrys. Now I foresee more trouble coming, after that remark.

Mnes. I'm done for.

Chrys. Why so?

Mnes. Because I've handed over every scrap of it to my father.

Chrys. (dumbfounded) Handed it over?

Mnes. Handed it over.

Chrys. Every bit?

Mnes. Absolutely.

Chrys. We're both lost men! What made it enter your head to do such a thing, such an awful thing?

Mnes. (awkwardly) I heard a charge made, Chrysalus, and suspected Bacchis and Pistoclerus here of plotting against me: so I got angry and handed all the money over to my father.

Chrys. What did you tell your father when you handed it over?

Mnes. That I had received it on demand from his friend Archidemides.

Chrys. (grimly) Aha! And gave Chrysalus over to torment by the statement; for when he sets eyes on me the old man will promptly hale me off to the public torturer.

Mnes. (hurriedly) I persuaded him.

Chrys. (dryly) Indeed? To do what I'm saying, I take it? Mnes. No. no. not to harm you, or be at all angry with No, no, not to harm you, or be at all angry with you for what you did; and a hard time I had getting it out of him, too. (pauses, then in flattering manner) Here's what you must see to now, Chrysalus.

Chrys. Quid vis curem?

Mnes. Ut ad senem etiam alteram facias viam. compara, fabricare finge quod lubet, conglutina, ut senem hodie doctum docte fallas aurumque auferas.

Chrys. Vix videtur fieri posse.

Mnes. Perge, ac facile ecfeceris.

the gold.

Chrys. It hardly looks possible to me.

Mnes. You go ahead, and you'll carry it through easily.

Chrys. Easily, ch, curse it? A man that has caught me in a barefaced lie? A man that, if I should beg him not to believe me in a thing, wouldn't dare to believe even that!

Mnes. (smiling feebly) Worse still—if you had only heard what he said to me about you.

Chrys. What did he say?

Mnes. That if you told him the sun there was the sun, he'd believe it was the moon, and that it was night now, not day.

Chrys. (thinking a moment, then jubilantly) By Jupiter! I'll clean the man up in glorious shape to-day, that he mayn't say that for nothing!

Mnes. What do you want us to do now?

Chrys. Oh, make love—that's all I order. But just apply to me for gold, as much as you like: I'm your man. What's the advantage of my being named Chrysalus, unless I live up to it? Well now, Mnesilochus. what's the paltry sum you need? Tell me.

Mnes. (eagerly) I need two hundred pounds at once to pay the Captain for Bacchis.

Chrys. Oh, I say, let's go gently and attend to things one by one: after I've attended to this, then I'll attend to that. I'll train my catapult on the old fellow for the two hundred first. If I shatter the tower and outworks with the said catapult, the next minute I'll plunge straight through the gate into the ancient and time-worn town: in case I capture it, you two can carry off gold to your lady friends by the basketful, and gratify the hope of your soul.

Pistoc. Our soul is in your keeping, Chrysalus.

Chrys. (obviously the manager) Now, Pistoclerus, inside with you to Bacchis and hurry back with—Pistoc. With what?

Chrys. —a stylus, wax and tablets, some tape.

Pistoc. I'll have them here at once. [EXIT INTO HOUSE. Mnes. What are you going to do now? Tell me that.

Chrys. Is lunch cooked? You two, and your girl with you for a third,—is that the plan?

Mnes. Just so.

Chrys. No girl for Pistoclerus?

Mnes. Oh, yes there is! He loves one sister and I the other, both of them Bacchises.

Chrys. (surprised) What's that you tell me?

Mnes. Merely our arrangements.

Chrys. Where is this duplex dining-couch of yours set?

Mnes. What do you ask that for?

Chrys. The case calls for it: I want to be told. You don't know what I'm up to, what a monster of a scheme I'm going to get under way.

Mnes. (slyly) Give me your hand and follow me closer to the door. (leads Chrysalus to the house of Bacchis and pushes the door open) Cast your eyes in there!

Mnes. Write what?

Chrys. Oh, some wish—use your own words—for your father's health. (Mnesilochus vrites)

Pistoc. Hadn't he better write sickness and death? That will be more to the point.

Mnes. That's down now according to orders.

Chrys. Let's hear how you've put it.

Mnes. Well, say what.

Chrys. "However, I beg you to remember what you promised me, father: don't beat him; but tie him up and keep watch on him at home." (to Pistoclerus)
The wax and tape, you, look sharp! (Pistoclerus obeys. To Mnesilochus) Come on, fasten it, scal it, quick!

Mnes. (obeying) For heaven's sake, what's the use of a document like this, telling him not to believe you at all, to tie you up and keep watch on you at home?

Chrys. Because it suits me. Can't you mind your own business and not bother about me? (arrogantly) I was relying on myself when I contracted for this job, and I'll take the risk myself in doing it.

Mnes. Fairly spoken.

Chrys. Hand over the tablets.

Mues. (doing so) Here they are.

Chrys. Attention now! Mnesilochus, and you too, Pistoclerus, go at once and take your places on your duplex dining-couch, each of you beside his girl—that's the thing to do—and right there where the couches are set at present you hurry up and begin drinking.

Pistoc. O peerless leader!

Chrys. (bustling them off) You should have put down two drinks already.

Mnes. (in mock terror) We're running away.

Chrys. (grinning) You two do your duty and I'll attend to mine.

EXEUNT Pistoclerus AND Mnesilochus INTO HOUSE OF Scene 5.

Chrys. (doubtfully) It's some wild, wild work I've got in hand, and what I'm afraid of is that I can't carry it out. (pauses) But now I must make the old man feel fierce and savage. For it won't suit this swindle of mine, to have him peaceful when he sets eyes on me. I'll turn him other end up to-day, hand-somely, on my life, I will. I'll see he's roasted like a roasted pea. I'll saunter up to the door so that when he comes out I can hand him the letter the minute he appears. (withdraws as door opens)

Nic. What? Threatening, you hangdog?
Chrys. You'll shortly know what sort he is. He ordered me to bring this letter to you now. Begged you to do what's written there.

Nic. Give it here.

Chrys. (obeying) Take notice of the seal.

Nic. (seeing it is intact) Yes, yes. Where is my son himself?

Chrys. (surlily) Don't know. The proper thing for me now is to know nothing. I've forgotten everything. I know I'm a slave. I don't even know what I do know. (aside) Now our thrush here is after the worm in my trap; he'll soon be hung up handsomely, the way I've set the noose.

Chrys. (as Artamo obeys) What have I done?

Nic. (to Artamo) Plant your fists in his face, if he breathes a word. (to Chrysalus) What does this letter say?

Chrys. What are you asking me for? I took it from him and brought it to you just as it was, all sealed.

Nic. Oho, you! So you have been giving my son the rough side of your tongue, because he handed over that gold to me? Said you'd take it from me just the same by some rascally scheme, eh?

Chrys. I said that, I?

Nic. Just so.

Chrys. Who's the man says I said that?

Nic. Silence! No man says it: this letter indicts you, the one you brought yourself. (showing it) There! This orders you to be tied up.

Chrys. (resignedly) Aha! Your son has made a Bellerophon 1 of me: I myself brought the letter to have myself tied up. (dangerously) Very well!

Nic. (ironically) I do this merely to make you persuade my son to join you in riotous living, you soulless villain.

Chrys. Oh, you poor poor fool, you don't know you're being sold this moment; and here you are standing on the very block with the crier crying you!

Nic. (mystified) Answer! Who is selling me?

Nic. I give it away?

Chrys. Yes, and beg me, beg me of your own accord, to take it away, when you learn about that accuser of mine and what danger, what deadly danger, he's in. Then you'll be all for liberating Chrysalus; but not for me, I won't be liberated.

Chrys. (going toward Bacchis's house) This way; follow me:
I'll soon let you know.

Nic. (following) Where on earth are you taking me?

Chrys. Three steps merely. Nic. Ten, for that matter.

Chrys. Come on now, you, Artamo; open this door a tiny bit; easy, don't make it creak. (Artamo obeys)

That will do. (to Nicobulus) Step up here, you. See that jovial party? (pointing inside)

Nic. (peeking in) I see Pistoclerus and Bacchis right opposite.

Chrys. Who are on that other couch?

Nic. (peeking again, then with a start) Death and damnation!

Chrys. Do you recognize the gentleman?

Nic. Novi. Chrys. Die sodes mihi, bellan videtur specie mulier? Nic. Admodum. Chrys. Quid illam, meretricemne esse censes? Quippini? Nic. Chrys. Frustra es. Nic. Quis igitur obsecrost? Chrys. Seies haud multo post. Nic. Oppido interii miser.

Nic. I do.

Chrys. Kindly give me your opinion—good-looking female, eh?

Nic. (angrily) Quite so!

Chrys. Well, do you think she's a harlot?

Nic. Naturally.

Chrys. You're mistaken.

Nic. For heaven's sake, who is she, then?

Chrys. (again mysterious) You'll soon discover. But you'll never get the information from me to-day.

Scene 8. Doorway.

Cleom. (blustering) Mnesilochus, Nicobulus's son, keep her here by force—my woman? What sort of conduct is this?

Nic. Who is that?

Chrys. (aside) The Captain has come just in the nick of time for me. (draws Nicobulus farther anay)

Cleom. He takes me for a woman, not a soldier, a woman unable to defend myself and mine! Now never may Bellona 1 and Mars trust me more, unless 1 extinguish his vital spark, once I come upon him, and unless I disinherit him of his existence!

Nic. (anxiously) Chrysalus! who's that threatening my son?

Chrys. (coolly) He is the husband of that woman beside your son on the couch.

Nic. (in terror) What? The husband? Chrys. That is what I say, the husband.

Nic. For heaven's sake, is she married?

Chrys. You'll see a little later.

Nic. Oh! This is perfectly agonizing!

- Chrys. What now? Do you think Chrysalus is the criminal?
 Go ahead now, tie me up and listen to your son.
 Didn't I tell you you'd find out what sort he is?
- Nic. What shall I do now?
- Chrys. Kindly have me loosed, and quickly; for if I'm not loosed, he'll soon be surprising our gentleman red-handed.
- Cleom. There is no amount of money I had rather make to-day than surprise him with her in his arms, so that I may slay them both!
- Chrys. You hear what he's saying? Why don't you have me loosed?
- Nic. (to slaves) Loose him. (they obey) This is awful!

 Dear, dear, I'm frightened through and through!
- Cleom. Then that woman who makes a common prostitute of herself—I warrant she'll not say she has lit on a man she can laugh to scorn!
- Chrys. You can buy him off for a bit of cash.
- Nic. (beside himself) Buy him off, then, for heaven's sake—anything you like—if only he doesn't surprise the lad red-handed and slay him!
- Cleon. Unless two hundred pounds are given me at once, I'll drain them dry, the both of them, of the breath of life this moment.
- Nic. There! Buy him off for that, if you can. At him, for heaven's sake: buy him off at any price.
- Chrys. I'll go and do my best. (approaching Cleomachus)
 What are you bawling at?
- Cleom. Where is your master?
- Chrys. (loudly) Nowhere. I don't know. (gets him farther from Nicobulus) Do you want to have two hundred pounds promised you instantly, on condition you don't come bawling or bellowing here?

Chrys. (in low tone) Yes, and on condition you take plenty of hard words from me?

Cleom. At your own discretion.

Nic. (hearing only last words) How the hangdog is wheedling him!

Chrys. Here is (pointing) Mnesilochus's father; come on; he'll promise it to you. You ask for the money; (meaningly) as for the rest, a word will suffice. (Cleomachus nods his understanding: they join Nicobulus)

Nic. Well? Well?

Chrys. I've settled for two hundred pounds.

Nic. (ecstatic) Ah, my salvation! you've saved me! How long before I say "I'll pay"?

Chrys. (to Cleomachus) You make your demand of him: (to Nicobulus) you promise him.

Nic. (eagerly) I promise: make your demand.

Cleom. Will you pay me two hundred good honest gold sovereigns?

Chrys. (to Nicobulus) "I will": say that. Answer him.

Nic. I will.

Chrys. (to Cleomachus) What now, you beast? Is anything owed you? What are you annoying that gentleman for? What are you scaring him with murderous threats for? We'll give you a horrible time of it, he and I together. You may have a sword, but we've got a little spit at home: if you get me roused, I'll up with it and stick you fuller of holes than a squealing shrewmouse. Good Lord! Nic. (aside) What an oath! The man is saving me by perjuring himself.

Cleom. Where is Mnesilochus at present, then?

Chrys. His father has sent him out to the farm. As for the lady, she has gone to the Acropolis to visit Minerva's temple. It's open now. Go and see if she isn't there.

Cleom. In that case, I'll be off to the forum.

Chrys. Or to blazes, if you like, by gad!

Cleom. Shall I get the money out of him to-day?

Chrys. Get it, and be hanged to you! You needn't think he will sue for favours from you, you riffraff. [EXIT Cleomachus] He's sent packing. (fervently) In the name of heaven, sir, do let me go in here and see your son, I beseech you.

Nic. Go in this house? Why?

Chrys. So that I may reprove him roundly for acting in such a way as this.

Nic. Let you? I beg you to, Chrysalus, and I beseech you, don't spare him in the slightest!

Chrys. (virtuously indignant) D'ye warn me of that, me? Is it enough, if he hears more hard words from me this day than ever Clinia 1 heard from Demetrius? 1

EXIT Chrysalus INTO HOUSE OF Bacchis.

Nic. (ruefully) That servant of mine is very much like a sore eye: if you haven't got one, you don't want one and don't miss it; if you have, you can't keep your hands off it. Why, if he hadn't happened by good luck to be here to-day, the Captain would have surprised Mnesilochus with his wife and cut him to pieces for an adulterer caught in the act. As it is, I have bought my son, so to speak, for the two hundred pounds I promised to pay the Captain -two hundred I won't be rash enough to pay him yet, before I have met the boy. I'll put no rash confidence in Chrysalus, never, by heaven! But I've a mind to read this over (looking at letter) once more still: a man ought to have confidence in a sealed letter. EXIT INTO HOUSE.

Scene 9. (Fifteen minutes have elapsed.)

ENTER Chrysalus from Bacchis's House.

(bumptiously) The two sons of Atreus have the Chrys. name of having done a mighty deed when Priam's paternal city, Pergamum, "fortified by hand divine," was laid low by 'em after ten years, and they with weapons, horses, and army and warriors of renown and a thousand ships to help 'em. That wasn't enough to raise a blister on their feet, compared with the way I'll take my master by storm, without a fleet and without an army and all that host of soldiers. Now before the old chap appears, I feel like raising a dirge for him till he comes out. (wailing) O Troy, O paternal city, O Pergamum! O ancient Priam, thy day is past! Thou shalt be badly, badly beaten—out of four hundred golden sovereigns. Ah yes, these tablets here, (showing them) sealed and signed, which I bear, are no tablets, but a horse sent by the Greeks—a wooden horse.1

¹ Our Epius is Pistoclerus: from his hands were they taken. Mnesilochus is Sinon the abandoned. Behold him! not lying at Achilles' tomb, but on a couch; he has a Bacchis with him; that one of old had a fire, to give the signal,—but this Sinon is burning himself. I am Ulysses whose counsel directs it all.

Moreover, the words herein inscribed are the soldiers within this horse, soldiers armed to the teeth and full of fight. Thus has my scheme progressed up till now. Aye, and this horse will proceed to assail not a stronghold, but a strongbox, The wreck, ruin, and rape of the old man's gold will this horse prove to-day. This silly old man of ours-I dub him Ilium, I certainly do. The Captain is Menelaus, I Agamemnon: I am likewise Laertian Ulysses: Mnesilochus is Alexander,1 who will be the destruction of his native city; he is the one that carried off Helen, on account of whom I now besiege Ilium. At that Ilium Ulysses, so they say, was a bold, bad man, just as I am now. I was caught in my wiles; he was found begging and almost perished, while he was seeking to learn there the destinies of the Ilians. What befell me to-day was quite similar. I was bound, but released myself by wiles: by wiles he likewise saved himself. In the case of that Ilium, so they say, there were three fateful events which would prove her downfall: if the image 2 disappeared from the citadel; still a second, the death of Troilus 3; the third, when the upper lintel of the Phrygian gate should be torn away. Counterparts of these three are three fateful events, too, in the case of this Ilium of ours. For a little while ago when I first told our old man that lie about his friend and the gold and the galley, I there and then stole the image from the citadel.

iam duo restabant fata tune, nec magis id ceperam oppidum. post ubi tabellas ad senem detuli, ibi occidi Troilum, 960 cum censuit Mnesilochum cum uxore esse dudum militis.1 post cum magnifico milite, urbes verbis qui inermus capit, conflixi atque hominem reppuli; dein pugnam conserui seni: eum ego adeo uno mendacio devici, uno ictu extempulo cepi spolia. is nunc ducentos nummos Philippos militi. 970 quos dare se promisit, dabit, nunc alteris etiam ducentis usus est, qui dispensentur Ilio capto, ut sit mulsum qui triumphent milites.² sed Priamum adstantem eccum ante portam video. adibo atque adloquar. ¹ Leo brackets the following v., 962-965: ibi vix me exsolvi: id periclum adsimilo, Vlixem ut praedicant cognitum ab Helena esse proditum Hecubae; sed ut olim blanditiis exemit et persuasit se ut amitteret. item ego dolis me illo extuli e periclo et decepi senem. ² Leo brackets the following v., 973-977: sed Priamus hic multo illi praestat: non quinquaginta modo. quadringentos filios habet atque equidem omnis lectos sine eos ego hodie omnis contruncabo duobus solis ictibus. nunc Priamo nostro si est quis emptor, comptionalem vendam ego, venalem quem habeo, extemplo ubi oppidum expugnavero.

Even then two fateful events were yet to come, and the town was still untaken. Later, on carrying the letter to the old man, I then slew my Troilus, when he thought Mnesilochus a short time ago was with the Captain's wife. Still later I closed with the noble Captain—who captures cities with no weapon save his mighty tongue-and hurled him back. Next I joined battle with the old man: aye, and him I struck down with a single lie; a single blow, and the spoils were mine. He now will give the Captain the two hundred pounds he promised him. And now there is need of another two hundred still, to be disbursed, on Ilium's capture, that the soldiery may have wine and honey to celebrate their victory.2 [ENTER Nicobulus From his house.] Aha, though! I see Priam standing before the gate. I'll up and address him.

¹ Then it was I just managed to get free: this danger I liken to that they tell of when Ulysses was recognized by Helen and betrayed to Hecuba. But as he, in former days, got away by means of his honeyed words and persuaded her to let him go, so also I, by means of my wiles, got out of danger and deceived the old man.

² But this Priam is far superior to that one: not a mere fifty sons has he; he has four hundred, yes, and every one is unquestionably a choice and flawless specimen. This day I will annihilate 'em all with just two blows. Now, if there is anyone who cares to buy our Priam, I will sell off the old gentleman I have on sale, as a job lot, the moment I have taken the town by storm.

Nic. (looking round) Whose voice is that I hear near me?

Chrys. (approaching) Oh, sir!

Nic. (eagerly) How goes it? What about your mission—have you accomplished anything?

Chrys. Do you ask that? Come here, close.

Nic. (doing so) I am.

Chrys. (enthusiastic) I'm the orator for you! I fairly brought our man to tears, by saying all the harsh, bitter things I could think of.

Nic. What did he say?

Chrys. Not a word: just wept in silence and paid attention to what I was telling him. Still silent, he wrote a letter, scaled it, and gave it to me. He ordered me to give it to you. But I'm afraid it sings the same song as the other one. (hands tablets to Nicobulus) Take notice of the seal. Is it his?

Nic. (examining seal) Yes, yes. I'm anxious to read this over.

Chrys. Do. (aside) Now the upper lintel is being torn away; now Ilium's fall is nigh. The wooden horse is making a beautiful mess of things.

Nic. Chrysalus, stay here while I read this over.

Chrys. What's the use of my staying with you?

Nic. I wish it, so that you may know what is written here.

Chrys. Not for me-I don't wish to know.

Nic. Never mind; stay here.

Chrys. What's the use?

Nic. (angry) Silence! do what I tell you.

Chrys. (apparently reluctant) Stay I will.

Nic. Euge litteras minutas.

Chrys. (innocently) Yes, for a man with poor eyes; they're big enough, if your sight is good enough, though.

Nic. Well then, pay attention.
Chrys. I don't want to, I tell you.
Nic. But I want you to, I tell you.

Chrys. What's the use?

Nic. See here now, you do what I order.

Chrys. (after reflection, impartially) It's right for your own servant to serve you as you see fit, sir.

Nic. Now kindly attend to this at once.

Chrys. Read when you like, sir: I promise you my ears.

Nic. (looking tablets over with a sigh) He hasn't been sparing of wax or stylus, it seems. But whatever it is, I'm resolved to read it through. (reading)

"Father, do for mercy's sake give Chrysalus two hundred pounds, if you wish to have your son safe, or alive." Give him a good sound thrashing, by heaven! Chrys. I say.

Nic. Well?

Chrus. Didn't he write a word of greeting first?

Nic. (looking) Not a sign of it.

Chrys. (indignant) You won't do it, if you're wise; but no matter how much you do do it, let him look up another porter, if he's wise: for I won't carry it, no matter how much you order me. I am suspected enough as it is, when I'm perfectly blameless.

Nic. Listen, further, while I read through what is written here.

Chrys. That's an impudent letter, impudent from the very beginning!

	cura atque abduce me hinc ab hac quantum potest,

Nic. (continuing) "I'm ashamed to come into your sight, father: I have heard that you know of my wicked intrigue with the foreign Captain's wife." Gad! That is no joke! Two hundred golden sovereigns it cost me to save your life after that piece of wickedness!

Chrys. There's nothing of that I didn't say to him, sir.
Nic. "I admit that I acted foolishly. But for mercy's sake, father, don't desert me, if I have done wrong in my folly. Wanton desires possessed me, and I couldn't control my eyes; I was induced to do what I am now ashamed of doing." Well, prudence then, rather than shame now, would have been the proper thing for you!

Chrys. Just the very same words I said to him a while ago, sir.

Nic. "Do, please, consider it enough, father, that Chrysalus has scolded me very very harshly and has made me a better man by his precepts, so that you ought to be deeply grateful to him."

Chrys. Is that written there?

Nic. (showing him the place) There! look, then you'll know.

Chrys. (piously) How the wrongdoer does bend the knee to every one, of his own accord!

Nic. "Now if I have a moral right to be seech you, father, I do be seech you to give me two hundred pounds."

Chrys. Not even one, by heaven, if you're wise!

Nic. Let me read it through. "I took an oath in express terms to give the woman this sum before evening comes and she leaves me. Now, father, do see to it that I don't forswear myself, and do rescue me just as soon as you can from this creature quam propter tantum damni feci et flagiti.

cave tibi ducenti nummi dividiae fuant;
sescenta tanta reddam, si vivo, tibi.
vale atque haec cura." quid nunc censes, Chrysale?

Chrys. Nihil ego tibi hodie consili quicquam dabo, neque ego haud committam ut, si quid peccatum siet.

fecisse dicas de mea sententia.

verum, ut ego opinor, si ego in istoc sim loco, dem potius aurum quam illum corrumpi sinam. duae condiciones sunt: utram tu accipias vide: vel ut aurum perdas vel ut amator perieret. ego neque te iubeo neque veto, neque suadeo.

Nic. Miseret me illius.

Chrys. Tuos est, non mirum facis.
si plus perdundum sit, periisse suaviust, quam illud flagitium volgo dispalescere.

Nic. Ne ille edepol Ephesi multo mavellem foret, dum salvos esset, quam revenisset domum. quid ego istic? quod perdundumst properem perdere.

binos ducentos Philippos iam intus ecferam, 10 on account of whom I have been so wasteful and wicked. See you don't let a matter of two hundred pounds vex you; I will pay it back to you a thousand times over, if I live. Good-bye and do look out for this." What do you recommend now, Chrysalus?

Chrys. (vehemently) Never a bit of advice will I give you this day! I'll take no chance of your saying, if anything goes wrong, that you did it at my suggestion. However, in my opinion, if I was in your place, I should rather give up the money than let him be debauched. There are two alternatives: see for yourself which to choose: you must either lose the money, or let our lover be forsworn. I do not order you, or forbid you, or urge you, either, not I.

Nic. (earnestly) I'm sorry for the lad.

Chrys. Nothing strange in that, your own flesh and blood as he is. (casually) If more must be lost, that's pleasanter than having such a piece of wickedness come to be the common talk.

Nic. Good Lord! I should certainly much rather have him at Ephesus, provided he was safe, than back home. (pauses) What am I to do in the matter? (another pause, then irritably) Let me hurry up and lose what has to be lost. I'll go in and get four hundred pounds at once—the two hundred I promised the Captain a while ago, poor wretch that I am, and this last. Wait where you are: I'll be with you again in a moment. Chrysalus.

Chrys. (hilarious). Troy is being made a waste; the chieftains are laying Pergamum low! I knew long ago I'd be the downfall of Pergamum! By gad, the edepol qui me esse dicat cruciatu malo dignum, ne ego cum illo pignus haud ausim dare; tantas turbellas facio. sed crepuit foris: ecfertur praeda ex Troia. taceam nunciam.

Nic. Cape hoc tibi aurum, Chrysale, i, fer filio. ego ad forum autem hinc ibo, ut solvam militi.

1060

Chrys. Non equidem accipiam. proin tu quaeras qui ferat.

nolo ego mihi credi.

Nic. Cape vero, odiose facis.

Chrys. Non equidem capiam.

Nic. At quaeso.

Chrys. Dico ut res se habet.

Nic. Morare.

Chrys. Nolo, inquam, aurum concredi mihi. vel da aliquem qui servet me.

Ohe, odiose facis.

Chrys. Cedo, si necesse est.

Nic. Cura hoc. iam ego huc revenero.

Chrys. Curatum est—esse te senem miserrumum.

hoc est incepta efficere pulcre: bellule mi evenit, ut ovans praeda onustus incederem; salute nostra atque urbe capta per dolum domum reduco integrum omnem exercitum.
sed, spectatores, vos nunc ne miremini quod non triumpho: pervolgatum est, nil moror;
verum tamen accipientur mulso milites, man that says I deserve to be punished damnably—I surely wouldn't dare bet him I don't. Oh, the lovely rumpus I'm raising! (listening) But the door creaked: the booty is being carried out from Troy. Time for me to keep still!

RE-ENTER Nicobulus WITH TWO BAGS OF GOLD.

Nic. Take this money, Chrysalus: go, carry it to my son. As for me, I am going to the forum to settle with the Captain.

Chrys. (drawing back) No indeed, I won't take it. So you can look further for some one to carry it. I don't want it trusted to me.

Nic. Come, come, now, take it: you annoy me.

Chrys. Indeed I won't take it.

Nic. But I beg you.

Chrys. (firmly) I tell you just how I stand. Nic. (impatiently) You're delaying me.

Chrys. I don't want money put in my charge, I say. (pause) At least, appoint some one to watch me.

Nic. Pshaw! You annoy me.

Chrys. (reluctant) Give it here, if I must.

Nic. (handing him bag of gold) Look out for this. I shall be back here soon. [EXIT TOWARD FORUM.

Chrys. (as Nicobulus disappears) It has been looked out for—your being the poorest old wretch alive. Here's the way to carry out your attempts in style! Ah, this is beautiful luck—to be marching along in jubilation, laden with booty. Safe myself, the city captured by guile, I am leading my whole army back home intact. But, spectators, don't be surprised now that I don't have a triumph: they're too common: none of them for me. But the soldiers shall be entertained with wine and honey just the same. (turning toward Bacchis's door) Now nunc hanc praedam omnem iam ad quaestorem deferam.

IV. 10.

Phil. Quam magis in pectore meo foveo quas meus filius turbas turbet, quam se ad vitam et quos ad mores praecipitem inscitus capessat, magis curae est magisque adformido, ne is percat neu corrumpatur.

I'll convey all this booty to the quartermastergeneral at once. [EXIT INTO HOUSE.

Scene 10. (Half an hour has elapsed) ENTER Philoxenus.

The more I ponder over the capers my son is cut-Phil. ting, and the life and habits the thoughtless lad is plunging headlong into, the more worried, and the more fearful I get at the danger of his becoming an irreclaimable rake. I know, I was young once myself, and did all those things, but I showed some self-restraint. The attitude I see in the general run of parents toward their sons doesn't suit me. I've made a practice of being liberal to my son, so that he may follow his inclinations; I think it's the fair way; at the same time, I don't want to give too much play to his dawdling. Now I'm going to see Mnesilochus about that commission of mine, and find out if he has driven the boy over to the path of virtue and sobriety by his efforts-as I know he has, if he found occasion:

ruined, eradicated, tortured every way! Every kind of trouble is upon me: I've died every kind of death! I've been mangled to-day by Chrysalus, stripped, poor wretch, by Chrysalus! sheared me clean of my gold, the villain, sheared me to suit his taste by his wily arts, artless innocent that I am! The Captain tells me that the woman that rascal said was his wife is a courtesan, and he's given me the full history of the case-how he'd hired her for this year, how the money I'd promised him, like an utter idiot, was the sum due him for the months yet to run. This, this, is what galls me; this is the crowning torment—for me to be gulled at my time of life, for me, poor fool, with my hoary hairs and white beard to be cleaned out of my gold! Oh, damnation! My own servant dares to hold me cheaper than dirt in this fashion! Yes, yes, if I lost more money some other way, I should mind it less and regard the loss as less.

Phil. It surely seemed as if some one was speaking here near me. (sees Nicobulus) But who's this I see? Mnesilochus's father, upon my word! (approaches)

Nic. (grimly) Splendid! I see my partner in toil and woe. Good day to you, Philoxenus.

Phil. And to you. Where are you coming from?

Nic. Where a wretched, unlucky man should come from.

Phil. Gad! but I'm on the very spot where a wretched, unlucky man should be.

Nic. Igitur pari fortuna, aetate ut sumus, utimur. Phil. Sic est. sed tu. quid tibist? Nic. Pol mihi par, idem est quod tibi. Phil. Numquid nam ad filium haec aegritudo attinet? 1110 Nic. Admodum. Phil. Idem mihi morbus in pectorest. Nic. At mhi Chrysalus optumus homo perdidit filium, me atque rem omnem meam. Phil. Quid tibi ex filio nam, obsecro, aegrest? Nic. Scies: id, perit cum tuo: ambo aeque amicas habent Phil. Qui scis? Nic. Vidi. Phil. Ei mihi, disperii. Nic. Quid dubitamus pultare atque huc evocare ambos foras? Phil. Haud moror. Nic. Quid hoc est negoti nam, amabo? Bacch. quis has huc ovis adegit? Nic. Ovis nos vocant pessumae.

Nic. Then we're alike in luck as we are in years.

Phil. So it seems. But you—what is your trouble?

Nic. Good Lord! The same as yours.

Phil. This dolefulness of yours has something to do with your son, eh?

Nic. (morosely) Rather!

Phil. The same ailment is worrying me.

Nic. Well, but Chrysalus—that pattern of excellence—has ruined my boy and me and all that's mine!

Phil. What in the world has your son done to vex you, pray?

Nic. You shall know: this—he's going to the dogs along with yours: the both of them alike have mistresses.

Phil. How do you know?

Nic. I saw.

Phil. (with apparent conviction) Oh dear me! Terrible, terrible!

Nic. Why don't we go straight up and knock; and call them both out here?

Phil. (lukewarm) I have no objection.

Nic. (pounding on Bacchis's door) Hi! Bacchis! Be so good as to have the door opened this instant, unless you prefer to have door and doorposts smashed in with axes!

Scene 2.

Bacch. (within) Who's raising such a din and uproav, calling me and beating on the house?

ENTER THE TWO Bacchises INTO DOORWAY.

Nic. This gentleman and I.

Bacch. (to sister after surveying them) Mercy me, dear, what does this mean? Who drove these sheep here?

Nic. (to Philoxenus) They're calling us sheep, the sluts!

Sister Their shepherd must be taking a nap, to let them straggle off from the flock this way, bleating.

Bacch. My goodness, though! They are sleek! they seem to be quite spick and span, both of them.

Sister Yes, you see they've both been ever so well shorn.

Phil. (to Nicobulus) Hm! They seem to be making fun of us.

Nic. (sourly) Let them go as far as they like.

Bacch. Do you suppose they are generally sheared three times a year?

Sister Goodness me! that other one (indicating Nicobulus) has been shorn twice this very day for certain.

Bacch. They're both rather woolless old—(nith a sly glance at her sister) customers.

Sister But they used to be good ones, I do believe.

Bacch. For heaven's sake, do you see the little sidelong glances they're casting at us?

Sister Oh well, I don't think they mean anything naughty by it.

Phil. (to Nicobulus) This serves us right for coming here!

Bacch. They really ought to be pushed inside.

Sister I don't see any use in that; they haven't any milk, or wool either. Let them stand still as they are. They've been worked to their full value: all the fruit has dropped off of them already. Don't you see how they straggle along aimlessly, alone, untended? Why, I do believe they're dumb with age: they don't even bleat at being away from the rest of the flock. They seem perfectly harmless—just silly. Let's go back inside, sister.

Nic. Stay where you are, both of you: these sheep want you.

Sister Dear, dear, miraculous! The sheep are addressing us, quite as if they were human!

Nic. Haec oves vobis malam rem magnam, quam debent, dabunt. Si quam debes, te condono: tibi habe, numquam abs te petam. sed quid est quapropter nobis vos malum minitamini? Phil. Quia nostros agnos conclusos istic esse aiunt duos. Nic. Et praeter eos agnos meus est istic clam mordax canis: qui nisi nobis producuntur iam atque emittuntur foras. arietes truces nos erimus, iam in vos incursabimus. Bacch. Soror, est quod te volo secreto. Soror. Eho, amabo. Nic. Quo illaec abeunt? Bacch. Senem illum tibi dedo ulteriorem, lepide ut lenitum reddas: 1150 ego ad hunc iratum adgrediar, si possumus nos hos intro inlicere huc. Soror Meum pensum ego lepide accurabo, quamquam odiost mortem amplexari. Bacch. Facito ut facias. Soror Taceas. tu tuom facito: ego quod dixi haud mutabo. Nic. Quid illaec illic in consilio duae secreto consultant? Phil. Quid ais tu, homo? Nic. Quid me vis? Phil. Pudet dicere me tibi quiddam. Nic. Quid est quod pudeat? Phil. Sed amico homini tibi quod volo credere certumst. nihili sum.

Nic. These sheep are going to give you all the trouble they owe you.

Bacch. If you owe anything, I'll forgive it you: keep it yourself—I'll never come to you for it. But what's the reason for your threatening us with trouble?

Phil. Because they say our lambs are shut up in there, (pointing to house) two of them.

Nic. And besides those lambs, there's a dog of mine, a biter, skulking in there: unless these beasts are produced for us immediately and let out of doors, we'll turn into ferocious rams, and immediately butt you.

Bacch. Sister, I want a word with you in private. (takes her aside)

Sister (inquiringly) Well, well, there's a dear!

Nic. Where are they off to?

Bacch. I give that further old fellow (pointing to Philoxenus) over to you to get nicely pacified; I'll make up to this bear, (indicating Nicobulus) and we'll see if we can't lure them inside here.

Sister (without enthusiasm) I'll take care of my stint nicely enough, even though it is sickening to hug a death's-head.

Bacch. See you do it.

Sister Hush! You do your share, and I won't fail to keep my word.

Nic. What are they scheming, those two, in that secret session?

Phil. (awkwardly) I say, old fellow.

Nic. What do you want?

Phil. There's something I'm ashamed to tell you.

Nic. What is it you are ashamed of?

Phil. But to a good friend like you—yes, I'm going to own up to what I want. (pauses) I'm an ass.

Nic. Istuc iam pridem scio. sed qui nihili es? id memora. Phil. Tactus sum vehementer visco: cor stimulo foditur. Nic. Pol tibi multo aequius est coxendicem. sed quid istuc est? etsi iam ego ipsus quid sit probe scire puto me; 1160 verum audire etiam ex te studeo. Phil. Viden hanc? Nic. Video Phil. Abin hine? non homo tu quidem es, qui istoc pacto tam lepidam inlepide appelles. Bacch. Senex optime quantumst in terra, sine me hoc exorare abs te. 1170 448

THE TWO BACCHISES

Nic. I have known that for some time. But why are you an ass? Explain that.

Phil. (with a wry smile) I'm most confoundedly caught in bird-lime; my heart's pierced by a goad.

Nic. Jove! much more to the point, if it were your nether portions! But what do you mean? And yet I think I have a pretty fair notion myself what it is already; however, I'm anxious to have it from your own lips.

Phil. Do you see this girl? (pointing to the Sister)

Nic. I do.

Phil. (approvingly) Not a bad one!

Nic. (indignantly) Good Lord! She certainly is a bad one, and you are an ass.

Phil. (not listening) In short, I'm in love with her.

Nic. You in love?

Phil. Bien sûr!

Nic. You, you disgusting creature? You venture to turn lover at your age?

Phil. Why not?

Nic. Because it's infamous.

Phil. (gathering courage rapidly) Tut, tut! I'm not angry at my son, and you oughtn't to be angry at yours: if they're in love, they're acting wisely.

Bacch. (to sister) Come along.

Nic. Ah, there they come at last, the seductive, persuasive pests! (to sisters) Well now? See here, are you going to give us back our sons and servant? Or shall I try more vigorous measures with you?

Phil. (to Nicobulus, protestingly) Get out, will you? There's no red blood in you, addressing a sweet little girl (leering at Bacchis) in that sour fashion.

Bacch. (to Nicobulus, as she tries to fondle him) You nicest old man in all the world, do let me persuade you ut istuc delictum desistas tanto opere ire oppugnatum.

Nic. N

Bacch. Sine, mea pietas, te exorem.

Nic. Exores tu me?

Soror Ego quidem ab hoc certe exorabo.

Phil. Immo ego te oro, ut me intro abducas.

Soror Lepidum te.

Phil. At scin quo pacto me ad te intro abducas?

Nic. (struggling to be very stern) Unless you get away from me—no matter if you are pretty—I'll give you a good sound slap this minute.

Bacch. (softly, still fondling him) I'll take it. I'm not afraid of your striking me so as to hurt at all.

Nic. (aside) What a coaxer she is! Oh, dear me! I'm afraid!

Sister (caressing Philoxenus to his high satisfaction) This one is more peaceful.

Bacch. Do come inside here with me: yes, and punish your son ever so, in there, if you like.

Nic. Get away from me, you hussy!

Bacch. Let me persuade you, that's a love! (tries to draw him toward house)

Nic. You persuade me?

Sister I'll certainly persuade my man, at any rate.

Phil. (returning her embrace nith vigour) No you won't: I myself beg you to take me inside.

Sister Oh, you delightful man!

Phil. But do you know on what condition you can take me inside.

Sister Yes, your being with me. Phil. The sum total of my desires!

Nic. (pulling himself together) I have seen worthless men, but never a worse one than you.

Phil. (cheerfully) So I am.

Bacch. (to Nicobulus) Do come along inside with me: you'll have a lovely time—things to eat, and wine and perfumes.

Nic. Enough, enough of your banqueting already—it makes no difference to me how I'm entertained! Four hundred pounds I've been tricked out of by my son and Chrysalus. And I wouldn't forgo making that slave bleed for it, not for another four hundred.

Bacch. Well, but supposing half of it is given back, won't you come in with me, then? Yes, and pardon their offences?

Phil. He'll do it.

Nic. (with all his remaining resolution) Not a bit of it: I don't want to. None of this for me: leave me alone. I prefer to take vengeance on that pair.

Phil. (aside to Nicobulus) See here, you—ass! Look out you don't lose the blessings the gods give you, and have yourself to blame for it. Here's half the money given you: take it, and drink and have a good time with the wench.

Nic. (very feebly) I drink in the house where my son is being debauched?

Phil. (clapping him on the shoulder) Drink you must.

Nic. (giving way temporarily) Come on then, no matter what it is, disgraceful though it be, I'll stand it, I'll bring myself to it. (after a pause, doubtfully)

Am I to look on while she's on the couch beside him?

Bacch. Goodness me, no indeed! I'll be on the couch beside you, loving you and hugging you. (snuggles up to him)

Nic. (aside) My head does itch! Dear, dear! It is hard to keep on saying no!

Bacch. My dear man, doesn't it occur to you that, supposing you do enjoy yourself all your life, this life is very, very short, after all,—good gracious, yes!—and that if you let this chance slip, it won't come again when you're dead, ever?

Nic. (nearly helpless) What am I to do?

Phil. Quid agas? rogitas etiam?

Nic. Libet et metuo.

Bacch. Quid metuis?

Nic. Ne obnoxius filio sim et servo.

SPOKEN BY THE COMPANY.

Unless these old men had been worthless from their very youth, they would not be guilty of such an enormity as this to-day when their heads are hoary; nor, indeed, would we have presented such a comedy, unless we had seen before now how fathers become their sons' rivals at places of unsavoury repute. Spectators, we wish you health and—your loud applause.

ARGUMENT OF THE PLAY

One of Hegio's sons has been taken prisoner in a battle with the Eleans; the other was stolen by a runaway slave and sold when he was four years old. The father, in his great anxiety to recover the captured boy, bought up Elean prisoners of war; and among those that he purchased was the son he had lost many years before This son, having exchanged clothes and names with his Elean master, secured the latter's release, taking the consequences himself. This master of his returned, bringing Hegio's captive son, and along with him that runaway slave, whose disclosures led to the recognition of the other son.

PROLOGUE

Tyndarus and Philocrates are chained, in an uncomfortable position, to a pillar in front of Ilegio's house.

These two prisoners you see standing here, well, both of those bystanders are men who arestanding, not sitting down. (Prologue laughs uproariously at his pleasantry) I leave it to you if so much is not true. The old man that lives yonder-(pointing to Hegio's house) Hegio, by name—is this man's (pointing to Tyndarus) father. But how it happens that he is the slave of his own father I shall (jauntily) here in your midst proclaim, with your kind attention. This old gentleman had two sons. One of them, when he was four years old, was stolen by a slave who took to his heels and sold the boy in Elis to the father of this worthy (pointing to Philocrates) here. Now you take me? Very good! Bless my soul! That gentleman at the back says he does not. Let him step this way. (no move in audience) In case there is no opportunity to take a seat, sir, you can take a (pointing to an exit) stroll, seeing you insist on making an actor turn beggar. I have no intention of bursting myself, merely to keep you from misunderstanding the plot. (to rest of audience) As for you gentlemen who do own enough property to pay taxes on, let me discharge my debt: none of the credit system for me. That runaway slave, as I said before, stole his young master when he decamped and sold him to this (indicating Philocrates) man's father. This gentleman, on buying the boy, gave him to this son of his for his very own, the two being of about the same age. Now here he is, back home, his own father's slave without his father knowing it. Ah yes, the gods use mortals as footballs! Well, you comprehend the way in which he lost one son. Later, when war broke out between the Aetolians and Eleans, the other son was taken prisoner-a common occurrence in times of war-and a doctor, Menarchus, in that same Elis, bought the young man. then began to buy up Elean captives, hoping to get hold of one that he could exchange for his son -the captive son, that is: for he has no idea that this man at his home is his own child. And inasmuch as he heard it rumoured yesterday that an Elean knight of the very highest rank and family connections had been captured, he had no thought of saving money if only he could save his son. in the hope of getting that son back home more readily he bought both of these prisoners from the commissioners who were disposing of the spoils. These same prisoners, however, have got together and laid a scheme, as you can see, to the end that the slave here (indicating Tyndarus) may send his master off home. Accordingly, they have exchanged clothes and names with each other. That one (indicating Tyndarus) is calling himself Philocrates, and this one (indicating Philocrates) Tyndarus: each is posing as the other for the time being. Tyndarus here is going to work out this trick to-day like an artist, and set his master at liberty. By so eodemque pacto fratrem servabit suom reducemque faciet liberum in patriam ad patrem, imprudens: itidem ut saepe iam in multis locis plus insciens quis fecit quam prudens boni. sed inscientes sua sibi fallacia. ita compararunt et confinxerunt dolum itaque hi commenti, de sua sententia ut in servitute hic ad suom maneat patrem: ita nunc ignorans suo sibi servit patri; 50 homunculi quanti sunt, quom recogito! haec res agetur nobis, vobis fabula. sed etiam est, paucis vos quod monitos voluerim. profecto expediet fabulae huic operam dare. non pertractate facta est neque item ut ceterae: neque spurcidici insunt versus, immemorabiles; hic neque periurus leno est nec meretrix mala neque miles gloriosus; ne vereamini, quia bellum Aetolis esse dixi cum Aleis: foris illic extra scaenam fient proelia. 60 nam hoc paene iniquomst, comico choragio conari desubito agere nos tragoediam. proin si quis pugnam expectat, litis contrahat: valentiorem nactus adversarium si erit, ego faciam ut pugnam inspectet non bonam, adeo ut spectare postea omnis oderit. abeo. valete, iudices iustissimi domi duellique duellatores optumi.

doing he will rescue his own brother, too, and enable him to return home to his father a free man, all quite unwittingly,—as in so many cases before now a man has often done more good unconsciously than wittingly. But all unconsciously, in their trickery, they have so planned and contrived and schemed, acting upon their own ideas, that Tyndarus will stay here as his own father's slave. So now it is his father he is serving unawares. What helpless creatures we mortals be, when I stop to reflect! All this will be fact on the boards. fiction for the benches. About one thing more, though, I should like to offer a word or two of suggestion. It will undeniably be to your profit to pay attention to this play. It is not composed in the hackneved style, is quite unlike other plays; nor does it contain filthy lines that one must not repeat. In this comedy you will meet no perjured pimp, or unprincipled courtesan, or braggart captain. Let not my statement that the Aetolians and Eleans are at war alarm you: engagements will take place off the stage yonder. It would almost amount to imposition, you know, for us, in our comedy get-up, to try to present a tragedy all of a sudden. So if anyone is looking for a battle scene, let him pick a quarrel: if he gets a good strong opponent, I promise him a glimpse of a battle scene so unpleasant that hereafter he will hate the very sight of one. (turning to go) And so good-bye to you, most just of judges here at home and doughtiest of fighters in the field.

ACT I

ENTER Ergasilus LOOKING HUNGRY AND FORLORN.

Erg.

The young fellows have dubbed me Missy, on the gound that whenever they're at their banquets I feel called upon to be with 'em. sure, the professional wags say it is an absurd nickname, but I protest it's a good one. For at banquets when the young sparks are playing dice they call upon their missies, yes, their missies, to be with 'em as they make a throw. Does missy feel called upon to be with 'em, or not? unmistakably. But by heaven, I tell you we parasites feel the call more unmistakably still, for no one else ever feels for us or calls us, either. mice, we're forever nibbling at some one else's food. When the holidays come, and men hie 'em to their country estates, our grinders take a holiday, too. It's the same as snails hiding in their holes during the dog days and living on their own juices when there's no dew falling: that's the way with parasites during the holidays-hide in their holes, poor devils, and subsist on their own juices while the people they could get pickings from are in the rural regions ruralizing. So long as the holidays last we parasites are greyhounds: when they're over we are wolf-hounds and dear-hounds and bore-hounds, very much so. And, by gad, in this town, at least, if a parasite objects to being banged about and having crockery smashed on his cranium, he can betake himself to the far side of Three Arch Gate and a porter's bag. (ruefully) Which is precious likely to be my own fate.

nam postquam meus rex est potitus hostium ita nunc belligerant Aetoli cum Aleis; nam Aetolia hacc est, illic est captus in Alide, Philopolemus, huius Hegionis filius senis, qui hic habitat, quae aedes lamentariae mihi sunt, quas quotienscumque conspicio fleo; nunc hic occepit quaestum hunc fili gratia inhonestum et maxime alienum ingenio suo: homines captivos commercatur, si queat aliquem invenire, suom qui mutet filium. quod quidem ego nimis quam cupio 1 ut impetret: nam ni illum recipit, nihil est quo me recipiam. nam nulla est spes iuventutis, sese omnis amant; ille demum antiquis est adulescens moribus, cuius numquam voltum tranquillavi gratiis. condigne pater est eius moratus moribus. nunc ad eum pergam. sed aperitur ostium, unde saturitate saepe ego exii ebrius.

after my patron fell in with the enemy-the Aetolians, you see, are at war now with the Eleans; this is Aetolia, you understand, and it's there in Elis that Philopolemus is a captive, Philopolemus being the son of Hegio here, the old gentleman that lives in (pointing) that house (and a lamentatious house it is! every time I look at it, it makes me weep!)-well, now Hegio has taken up his present business, all for his son's sake, ungentlemanly business as it is, and quite beneath a man of his type. He's buying up prisoners of war, to see if he can't come across one to exchange for his boy. And Lord! how I do yearn for him to succeed! You see, it's a matter of his coming home, or my going hungry. For our young fellows are absolutely unpromising—egoists, the whole lot of 'em! But he is a young gentleman of the old school, that lad: I never smoothed the wrinkles out of his brow without getting more than a thankye for it. His father is just such another perfect gentleman. Now for a call on him. (moves toward Hegio's house) But there goes his door, out of which I've often come so full of food I was fairly tipsy. (withdraws)

Scene 2. ENTER Hegio WITH Slave Overseer.

Hegio

Attention, please, my man. Those two captives that I bought yesterday from the commissioners in charge of the spoils—put the light irons on them and take off the heavy ones they're coupled with. Let them walk out here or inside, whichever they please; but look after them sharp, mind you. A captive free is a regular wild bird: once given a chance to flit, that is enough—you can never get hold of him again.

Hegio That seems untrue of you at any rate.1

Over. In case I haven't anything else to give you, how about my giving you—the slip?

Hegio Give me that, and I shall shortly have something to give you.

Over. I'll copy that wild bird you speak of.

Hegio Exactly—for then I'll cage you. But enough of this. Mind my orders and be off with you. I'll drop in at my brother's for a look at my other prisoners, and see if they made any disturbance last night. Then I'll return home again at once.

EXIT Overseer INTO HOUSE.

Erg. (nith a loud sigh) It does grieve me to see the poor old gentleman at this gaoler's job for his poor son's sake. (in lower tone) However, if he only manages to get the lad back here somehow, let him turn hangman, too,—I can stand it.

Hegio (looking round) Who is that speaking here?

Erg. (stepping forward) I—a man that am all worn out by your woe, that am getting thin, growing old, pining away in sorrow: I'm nothing but skin and bones, I feel for you so. Nothing I eat—at home—ever does me any good. (aside) But how I do relish the merest morsel when I'm dining out!

Hegio Ah, good day, Ergasilus.

Erg. God bless you, Hegio, bless you bounteously! (grasps Hegio's hand fervently and bursts into tears)

Hegio Don't cry.

Erg. I not cry for him? I not cry my eyes out for such a youth?

- Hegio (somewhat moved) I always did feel that you were a friend to my son, and I realized that he regarded you as one.
- Erg. Ah, we mortals realize the value of our blessings only when we have lost them. Myself now—after your son fell in with the enemy, I have come to understand how much he meant to me, and now I long for him.
- Hegio When an outsider like you takes his misfortune so bitterly, how must I feel, his father, and he my only son?
- Erg. (choking) An outsider? I? An outsider to that boy? Oh-h-h, Hegio! don't say a thing like that, don't let such a thought enter your mind, ever! Your only son, yes,—but he was even more than that to me: he was my only only! (sobs violently)
- IIegio I appreciate this, that you consider your friend's disaster your own. (patting him on the back) Come now, take heart.
- Erg. Oh, dear! oh, dear! here's (rubbing his stomach) where it hurts: my whole commissary department has been disbanded now, you see.
- Hegio (smiling) And meantime haven't you hit upon anyone that could reorganize the department you say is disbanded?
- Erg. Would you believe it? Every one keeps fighting shy of the office ever since your Philopolemus, its duly elected occupant, was captured.
- Hegio Bless my soul! no wonder they fight shy of it. You need many recruits, of many sorts, too: why, in the first place you need Pad-u-ans; 1 and there only a private citizen!

Well, well, now, take heart. As a matter of fact, I Hegio trust we shall have the boy back with us in a few days. For, look you (pointing to house) I have a young Elean prisoner inside here-splendid family, quantities of money: I count on being able to exchange him for my son.

Erg. (heartily) The gods and goddesses be with you! say, though,—you haven't been invited out to Hegio (cautiously) Nowhere, to my knowledge. But why do you ask?

Well, to-day is my birthday: so consider yourself Erg. invited to take dinner at-your house.

Hegio (laughing) Well put! But only on condition you can be content with very little.

Erg. Yes, only don't make it very, very, very little, for that is what I regale myself on constantly at home. Come on, come on, do please say "Done!" (after a pause, formally) In the event of no party making a better offer, more satisfactory to myself and associates, I'll knock myself down to you-on my own terms—just as if I was selling an estate by auction.

Captive (protestingly) Oh-h-h-h!

Over. There's no need of howling or crying. It helps to take bad things well.

Tynd. But to be in chains—we feel disgraced!

Over. But it's disgusted our master would feel later on, if he took the chains off, or let you loose, when he's paid money for you.

Tynd. What has he to fear from us? We realise what our duty is, if he should let us loose.

Over. Ah yes, you're planning to run for it! I see what's afoot.

Philocr. Run-we? Where should we run to?

Over. Home.

Philocr. Get out! The idea of our acting like runaway slaves!

Over. Lord! why not? I'm not saying you shouldn't, if you get the chance.

Tynd. (with dignity) Be good enough to grant us one request.

Over. Well, what is it?

Tynd. Merely this—give us an opportunity to talk together without being overheard by these good fellows (pointing to slaves) and yourselves.

Over. All right. (to slaves) Away with you! (to other overseer) Let's drop back here. (to captives) Make it short, though.

Tynd. Oh yes, that was my intention. (to Philocrates, drawing him farther from slaves) Come this way.

Over. (to slaves still hanging about) Get out and leave 'em alone. (slaves obey)

Tynd. (to overseers) We are much obliged to you, both of us, for the privilege of doing as we wish; we owe it to you.

Philocr. (to Tyndarus) Step over here now, if you please, come over, so that no one may catch what we say and leave us with a scheme that has leaked out. (they move still farther from the overseers) Shrewd management is what makes a trick a trick, you know: once it gets out, it becomes an instrument of torture. No matter if you are passing as my master and I as your slave, even so we've got to be wary, we've got to be cautious, so that our plan may be worked out in a clear-headed way, quietly and carefully, with discretion and diligence. It's a big job we've got in hand: we can't go to sleep over it.

Tynd. I will be all you wish me to be, sir.

Philocr. I hope so.

Tynd. For that matter, sir, you already see that to save a man I love, I am holding my own life cheap, much as I love it.

Philocr. I realize it.

Tynd. But remember to realize it when you get what you want. For, generally speaking, men have a habit of being fine fellows so long as they are seeking some favour; but when they have obtained it there's a change, and your fine fellows turn into villainous cheats of the worst description. In all this, sir. I'm telling you how I wish you to act toward me.

Philocr. By heaven. I might call you my father, if I chose:
for next to my real father you are the best one I have.

Tynd. I know, I know.

Philocr. And that's just why I keep reminding you the oftener to remember what the situation calls for:
I'm not your master, I'm a slave. Now I beg this one thing of you—since we have unmistakable proof that it's Heaven's will I should no longer be your master but your fellow slave, I, who used to have the right to command you, now implore and entreat you—by the common peril in which we stand and by my father's kindness to you and by the captivity which the chances of war have brought upon us both, don't feel less respect for my wishes than you did when you were my slave, and remember, remember carefully, both who you were and who you are now.

Tynd. Yes, yes, I know that I am you for the time being and that you are I.

Philocr. There! manage to remember to keep that in mind, and this scheme of ours looks likely.

Scene 2. Enter Hegio from House.

Hegio (to those within) I shall be back directly, if I find out what I want to know from these fellows. (to overseers) Where are those prisoners I had brought out in front of the house here?

Philocr. (advancing, pertly) Gad! You guarded against having to look for us far, I perceive,—see how we're barricaded with chains and watchmen.

Ilegio The man on his guard against being deceived is hardly on his guard even when he is on his guard; even when he supposed he was on his guard, your guarder has often enough been gulled. Really though, haven't I good reason to take pains to keep you, when I paid so high for you, cash down?

Philocr. Bless your heart, sir, we haven't any right to find fault with you for trying to keep us, or you with us, if we clear out—if we get a chance.

Hegio Yes.

Philocr. Then other folks besides us have been cowards.

Hegio (leading him farther from Tyndarus) Step over here.

There are some matters I wish to ask you about in private. No lying about them, mind.

Philocr. Not I, sir, not if I know. If I don't know about a thing, I'll (innocently) tell you what I don't know.

Tynd. (aside, cheerfully) Now the old fellow is in the barbar's chair, yes, now we have the clippers on him. And master not even willing to throw a towel over him to keep his clothes clean! Is it going to be a close crop, I wonder, or just a trim?—that's the question. If he knows his business, though, he'll dock him handsomely.

Hegio See here, would you prefer to be a slave or a free man, tell me that?

Philocr. The maximum of pleasure and the minimum of pain, that's my preference, sir; but being a slave hasn't bothered me much, though: I wasn't treated any differently than if I'd been a son of the house.

Tynd. (aside) Well done my boy! I wouldn't buy Milesian Thales at a thousand thalers: why, he was nothing but the veriest amateur of a wise man compared with master here. How cleverly he's dropped into the servant jargon!

Hegio Who are Philocrates' people there in Elis?

Philocr. The Goldfields, sir,—the most influential and respected family in those parts easily.

Hegio And the young man himself? How does he stand? Philocr. Very high indeed, sir,—belongs to the highest circles.

Hegio How about his property? Pretty fat one, eh? Philocr. Fat? Old Goldfields could get dripping out of it. Hegio What about his father? Is he living?

Philocr. He was when we left home; whether he's alive now or not, of course you had better inquire below as to that, sir.

Tynd. (aside) The situation is saved! Now he not only lies but moralizes.

Hegio What was his name?

Philocr. Ducatsdoubloonsandpiecesofeightson.

Hegio A sort of name applied to him on account of his money, I take it.

Philocr. (apparently struck by a new idea) Lord, no! on acacount of his being so greedy and grasping, sir.

Hegio What's that? His father's rather close, is he?

Philocr. Close? My word, sir! he's adhesive! Why, really,—just so as to give you a better notion of him—whenever he sacrifices to his own Guardian Spirit he won't use any dishes needed in the service except ones made of Samian earthenware, for fear his very Guardian Spirit may steal 'em. You can see from this what a confiding character he is in general.

Hegio Well, well, come this way with me. (aside, as they join Tyndarus) I'll soon get the information I want out of the master here at the same time. (to Tyndarus) Philocrates, your servant has acted as a worthy fellow ought to act. Yes, I know from him about your family: he has admitted everything. If you choose to be equally open with me, it will be to your advantage: however, I have been completely informed already by him.

Tynd. (with dignified melancholy) He has done his duty in admitting the truth to you, much as I did wish to keep you in the dark, Hegio, about my rank and birth and wealth; now that I am a man without a country, a prisoner, I suppose it is not to be expected that he should stand more in awe of me than of you. The chances of war have put master and man on an equal footing. I remember the time when he did not venture to offend me by a word: now he is at liberty to do me an actual injury. But you see! fortune moulds us, pinches us, to suit her whims: here am I, the one-time free man, a slave—tossed from the heights to the depths. Accustomed to command, I am now at another's beck and call. And indeed, if I might have such a master as I myself was when I was the head of a household, I should have no fear of being treated unjustly or harshly. There is one thing I should like to impress upon you, Hegio,—unless you object, maybe.

Hegio Tynd. No, no, speak out.

Once I was free as your son; an enemy's success deprived me of my liberty as he was deprived of his; he is a slave in my country as I am here with you. There surely is a God who hears and sees what we do: and according to your treatment of me here, so will he look after your son there. He will reward the deserving and requite the undeserving. Just as you long for your son, so does my father long for me.

Hegio

I know all that—but do you admit the truth of what this fellow has told me?

Tynd.

I do admit that my father is a very wealthy man at home and that I do come of very good family. But, Hegio, I beseech you, don't let my wealth make your demands too exorbitant: for my father, even though I am his only son, might feel that it was better for me to remain your slave, well fed and clothed at your expense, than to come to beggary there at home where it would disgrace us most.

- Hegio I am not a man who regards each and every acquisition of money as a blessing: plenty of people have been tainted before now by this money getting, I know that. There are even times when it certainly is more profitable to lose money than to make it. Gold! I despise it: it has led many a man into many a wrong course. Now give me your attention: I want you to understand thoroughly what I have in mind. (slowly and emphatically) My son is a prisoner in Elis, a slave there among your countrymen: get him back to me, and without your giving me a single penny in addition, I will let you go home, and your servant, too. On no other terms can you get off.
- Tynd. A very fair and reasonable proposition, sir, and you are the very fairest of men. Does he belong to some private person, though, or to the state?
- Hegio To a private person, a doctor named Menarchus.

 Tynd. (aside) Jove! why, he's a client of master's!

 (aloud) Why, this will be just as easy for you as rain when it pours.
- Hegio Have him ransomed.
- Tynd. I will. But thus much I beg of you, Hegio,-
- Hegio (eagerly) Anything you please, provided my interests don't suffer by it.
- Tynd. Listen, and you can see if they will. I don't ask to be released myself until my servant gets back. But I do urge you to let me have him under a forfeit, to send to father so that your son there can be ransomed.
- Hegio Oh no, I'll send some one else instead when we have an armistice: that will be preferable: he shall confer with your father and carry out your orders to your satisfaction.

Tynd. But it's no good sending a stranger to him: you'll have frittered away your time. Send him: (pointing to Philocrates) he will transact the whole affair, once he gets there. You can't send him a more reliable man, one he would trust more, a servant that's more to his mind; I may go so far as to say there is no one he would be readier to entrust his own son to. Never fear: I will be responsible for his fidelity. I can depend on his goodness of heart; he appreciates my kindness to him.

Hegio Very well, I'll send him under a forfeit, on your guarantee, if you wish.

Tynd. I do wish it. And I wish to have all this an accomplished fact just as quickly as possible.

Hegio Have you any objection to paying me eighty pounds for him in case he doesn't return?

Tynd. Not the slightest—fair as can be.

Hegio (to overseers) Take the chains off that fellow at once, off both of them, in fact.

Tynd. (as slaves obey) God grant your every wish, sir, for your highly considerate conduct toward me and for releasing me. (aside, stretching himself) I tell you what, it's no unpleasant sensation, having that necklet off one's neck.

Philocr. Philocrates, ut adhue locorum feci, faciam sedulo, ut potissimum quod in rem recte conducat tuam, id petam idque persequar corde et animo atque viribus.

and my son, and yourselves! My man, your new master wishes you to do something your old master wishes, and to do it faithfully. The fact is, I have given you over to him, under an eighty pound forfeit, he saying he desires to send you off to his father and let him ransom my son there in Elis, so that he may exchange my boy for his own.

Philocr. I'm quite disposed to do both of you a good turn, sirs, you and him both; you can use me like a wheel, I'll turn your way or his, either way, wherever you like.

Ilegio And you are acting very much to your own advantage in being so disposed, and in accepting your slavery as you should. Follow me. (leading way to Tyndarus) There's your man.

Tynd. (sedately) I thank you, sir, for affording me this opportunity, of making him my messenger to my parents, so that he may carry to my father a full account of me and my situation here, and what I wish him to see to. (turning to Philocrates) Tyndarus, this gentleman and I have just arranged that I send you to Elis to father, under a forfeit: if you fail to return, I am to pay him eighty pounds for you.

Philocr. And a good arrangement, too, in my opinion. For the old gentleman's expecting either me or some messenger to come to him from here.

Tynd. Well then, I wish you to pay attention to the message I wish you to take home to him.

Philocr. I'll do the best I can for you, sir, just as I always have: anything that makes for your good, sir, I'll work my hardest for, and follow up with all my heart and soul and strength.

Tynd. The proper spirit. Now I wish you to pay attention. First of all, remember me to my father and mother and my relatives and anyone else you may see who is interested in my welfare; tell them I am in good health here and a slave of this most estimable gentleman who has always accorded me the (with emphasis) very extraordinary consideration which I still enjoy.

Philocr. No instructions needed along that line, sir: I can remember to mind that easily enough, without.

Tynd. For really, aside from the fact that I have a guard, I feel that I am a free man. Tell my father what arrangement this gentleman and I have made regarding his son.

Philocr. Mere waste of time, sir, to remind me of what I remember.

Tynd. That he is to ransom him and send him back here in exchange for us both.

Philocr. I'll remember.

Hegio Yes, but just as quickly as possible: that's of the highest importance to each of us.

Philocr. You don't long to see your son any more than he does his, sir.

Philocr. No further message for him, eh?

Tynd. distress. When my father knows of this, Tyndarus, knows what your spirit toward his son and himself has been, he will never be so niggardly as not to set you free at his own expense; and if I return. I will put forth my own efforts to make him the more ready to do it. For it is through your efforts and good will and devotion and wisdom that I have a chance to go back to my parents once more, inasmuch as you informed this gentleman of my family and wealth: thanks to your wisdom in doing so, your master's fetters have been removed.

Philocr. Right you are, sir, so I did, and I'm glad you remember it. You deserve anything I've done for you, too; why, sir, if I was to go on like that now and mention how many good turns you've done me, it would take all day and more; why, it was just as if you had been my slave, not a bit different, the deferential way you've always treated me.

Hegio (half aside) Bless my soul, what noble natures!

Dear, dear, it brings the tears to my eyes! You can see they are simply devoted to each other.

The way that splendid slave praised his own master—a perfect panegyric!

Tynd. Heavens, sir, he doesn't praise me a hundredth part as much as he deserves to be praised himself.

Hegio (to Philocrates) Well then, having been such an excellent servant, here is an opportunity to crown your services by carrying through this business for him faithfully.

Philocr. I'll be just as keen in actually trying to do it as I can be for wanting it done, sir; and to prove it, sir, I swear by God Almighty that I'll never be unfaithful to Philocrates—

Hegio (heartily) Worthy fellow!

Philocr. Nec me secus umquam ei facturum quicquam quam memet mihi.

(with increased earnestness) It is the actual performance, the deed, I wish to test those words by: and inasmuch as I said less than I wished about your conduct, I wish you to pay particular attention,—yes, and be sure not to take offence at what I say. But I beg you, do bear in mind the fact that you are being sent off home, sent home at my risk and under a forfeit, and that I am staking my life for you here: so don't forget me the moment you are out of sight, when you have left me here in servitude, a slave, in your stead; and don't consider yourself a free man and let your promise go and fail to save me by bringing back this gentleman's son. Be faithful, I entreat you, to one who has shown his faith, and don't falter in that faithfulness. As for my father, I am sure he will do everything he should do. For your part, keep me your friend for ever, and do not lose this friend (indicating Hegio) you have found. This I beseech you by this hand (grasping Philocrates' right hand), this hand I hold in mine: don't be less true to me than I am to you. (after a pause) Well, to the work! You are my master now, my protector, my father, you and you only: to you I commend my hopes and my welfare.

Philocr. Enough commands, sir. Will you be satisfied, if I turn your commands to accomplished facts?

Tynd. Yes.

Philocr. I'll come back here equipped to suit you (to Hegio) sir, and you, (to Tyndarus) too. Nothing else?

Erg. Miser homo est, qui ipse sibi quod edit quaerit et id aegre invenit, sed ille est miserior, qui et aegre quaerit et nihil invenit:

Hegio (to Philocrates) Follow me. I must go to the banker's and give you some money for travelling expenses: I'll get a passport from the practor at the same time.

Tynd. What passport?

'egio One to take to the army with him so that he'll be allowed to go off home. As for yourself, you go inside.

Tynd. (to Philocrates) A good journey to you.

Philocr. Good-bye, sir, good-bye!

EXIT Tyndarus INTO Hegio's HOUSE.

Hegio (aside, in high spirits) Well, well, well, it was the making of me when I bought those two from the commissioners! I've set my son at liberty, God willing! And to think I hesitated for a long time whether to buy them or not! (to overseers) Please keep an eye on that prisoner inside there, my lads, and don't let him set a foot out here anywhere without a guard. I shall soon be home myself. I'll just step over to my brother's for a look at my other captives: at the same time I'll inquire if any one of them knows this young gentleman. (to Philocrates) Come, my man, so that I may send you off; I want to attend to that first.

[EXEUNT Hegio AND Philocrates.

A more hungriful day, a more bulged-out-with-starvation day, a more unprogressive day for every undertaking, I never did see! Such a famine feast as my inside is having! Devil take the parasitical profession! How the young fellows nowadays do sheer off from impecunious wits! Not a bit of use have they nowadays for us Spartans, us valiant benchenders, us descendants of old Takesacuff, whose capital is talk without cash and comestibles. The guests they're after are the ones that enjoy a dinner and then like to return the compliment. They do their marketing themselves, too,-that used to be the parasites' province—and away they go from the forum themselves to interview the pimps, just as barefaced as they are in court when they condemn guilty defendants. They don't care a farthing for wits these days: they're egoists, every one. Why, when I left here a little while ago, I went up to some young fellows in the forum. "Good day," says I. "Where are we going to lunch to-gether?" says I. Sudden silence. "Who says: This way '? Who makes a bid? "says I. Dumb " Where as mutes, didn't even give me a smile. do we dine?" says I. A shaking of heads. I told 'em a funny story—one of my best, that used to find me free board for a month. Nobody smiled. I saw in a moment it was a put-up job; not a one of 'em was even willing to act like a cross dog and at least show their teeth, no matter if they wouldn't laugh. I left 'em after I saw I was being made a fool of this way; up I went to some others, and then to others, and to others still,—same story. They're all in a combination, just like the oil dealers in the Velabrum. So here I am back again, seeing I was trifled with there. Some more parasites were prowling round the forum all for nothing, too. Now I'm going to have the foreign law on those chaps and demand my full rights, I certainly am: it's conspiracy, conspiracy to deprive us of sustenance and life, and I'm going to summon 'em, fine 'em-make 'em give me ten dinners, at my discretion, and that will be when food is dear. That's how I'll catch them. (turning to go) Well, now for the harbour. That's where my one hope is, gastronomically speaking; if that oozes away, I'll come back here to the old man's terror of a meal.

[EXIT Ergasilus, LOOKING IN ALL DIRECTIONS FOR A POSSIBLE HOST.

Scene 2. ENTER Hegio WITH Aristophontes AND Slaves Hegio (highly pleased with himself) Now what makes you feel better than managing your affairs properly and contributing to the common good, just as I did yesterday in buying these prisoners? Whenever anyone sees me, up he comes and congratulates me on it! Dear, dear! I was so worn out with all their stopping and detaining me, it got to be frightfully hard work emerging from the flood of felicitations At last I escaped to the praetor's.
Barely waiting to catch my breath, I asked for a passport: got it on the spot; gave it to Tyndarus:
he's off for home. After seeing to that, I first start straight for home. Then I go on to my brother's where the rest of my prisoners are. Inquire if any one of 'em knows Philocrates of Elis. Finally this fellow (pointing to Aristophontes) calls out that Philocrates is a particular friend of his. I tell him he's at my house; the next instant he's begging and beseeching me for a chance to see him. I had him unfettered at once. (to Aristophontes) Now, sir, come this way, so as to obtain your request and meet your friend.

RUSHES OUT.

Scene 3.

Tynd. (grimly) Now's the time when I should infinitely prefer to be underground than on it! Hope, resources, help-all deserting, all leaving me in the lurch now! My day has come: I can never hope to get out of this alive. Done for, and nothing to be done for it! There's no prospect of staving off the danger, either, and not a thing to drape my crafty lies with. My falsehoods can't beg themselves off, or my transgressions take to their heels: no lodgings anywhere for brass: guile can't find accommodations. The covert's uncovered, our plot's apparent, everything's out. There's nothing to do about it: I must drop off disagreeably, and come to a painful end for master -also for myself. He's been the ruin of me, this Aristophontes that just went inside: he knows

What can I invent? What can I devise? (reflecting, then doubtfully) Oh, this is awful nonsense I'm at, poor simpleton! (disgustedly) Stuck!

Scene 4. ENTER Hegio, Aristophontes, AND Slaves.

Hegio Where did that fellow bolt for out of the house just now, I wonder?

Tynd. (aside) It's all over with me, all over with me now: the enemy are upon you, Tyndarus! What shall I say? What story shall I tell? What shall I deny—or what admit? It's a shaky business for me on every side! What faith can I put in my luck? Oh, I wish the gods had made away with you before you made away from home, Aristophontes,—upsetting my settled plan completely! The game is up, unless I hit upon some awfully clever scheme.

Hegio (to Aristophontes, on seeing Tyndarus) Come along!
There's your man! Go up and speak to him!

Tynd. (aside, as Aristophontes approaches) What mortal man is in a more confounded hole than this? (pretends not to recognize him)

Arist. I wonder what you mean by this, Tyndarus,— avoiding my eye and snubbing me as a stranger, quite as if you never knew me? I'm just as much of a slave as you are, to be sure, but at home I was free: as for you, you've been slaving it in Elis from your boyhood up.

Hegio Bless my soul! I'm not a bit surprised if he avoids you, or your eye, no, nor if he detests you, when you call him Tyndarus instead of Philocrates.

Tynd. (dragging Hegio aside) Hegio, this fellow was looked upon as a raving maniac in Elis, so don't you let him fill your ears with his babble. Why, at home he chased his father and mother about with a spear, and every once in a while he has an attack of the dinease that people spit on. So get out of his reach, then,—well away.

Hegio (to slaves) Keep him off! Keep him off!

Arist. What's that, you rascal? I'm a raving maniac and chased my own father with a spear, you say? I have the disease that calls for my being spat upon?

Hegio (cheeringly) Never you mind! Many a man's consumed by that disease of yours, who's been helped by being spat on, and it's brought him through.

Arist. (to Hegio, hotly) How's this? You, too? Do you actually believe him?

Hegio Believe him in what?

Arist. That I'm insane?

Tynd. (to Hegio) Do you see him—that angry glare of his? You'd better leave, Hegio. It's just as I said: a fit's coming on. Look out for yourself!

Hegio (hastily moving farther off) I thought so, I thought he was crazy, from the moment he called you Tyndarus.

Tynd. Why, at times he positively forgets his own name and doesn't know who he is.

Hegio But he was even saying you were an intimate friend of his.

Tynd. (dryly) Quite so! And the fact is that Alcumeus,² in that case, and Orestes,² and Lycurgus ² too, are intimate friends of mine, just exactly as much.

Arist. Ha! You scoundrel, do you dare go on maligning me? Don't I know you?

Hegio Good heavens! It's quite plain you don't know him—calling him Tyndarus instead of Philocrates! The man you see you don't know: you name the man you don't see.

Arist. No, sir! This fellow says he's the man he isn't, and says he isn't the man he really is.

Tynd. (to Aristophontes, meaningly) So you have turned up to beat Philocrates in stating facts!

Arist. Good Lord! As I look at it, you have been unearthed to browbeat facts by stating falsehoods.

But come now, confound it, look me in the eye!

Tynd. (doing so coolly) Well?

Arist. Now tell me: do you deny that you are Tyndarus?

Tynd. I do, certainly.

Arist. You claim to be Philocrates, you?

Tynd. I certainly do.

Arist. (to Hegio, exasperated) Do you believe him?

Hegio More than I do you, surely,—or myself. For you see, the fellow you tell me this man is—he went away to Elis to-day to this man's father.

Arist. (contemptuously) Father! What do you mean, when he's a slave?

Tynd. Well, you, too, are a slave and once were free: and (nith emphasis) I hope to be so myself, when I have restored this gentleman's son to home and liberty.

Arist. What's that, you villain? You tell me you were born a freeman?

Tynd. No indeed, my name is not Freeman, but Philocrates: that's what I say.

- of you, Hegio! Why he's a slave himself—the only one he ever had.
- Tynd. (superior) Just because you yourself are povertystricken in your own country, with nothing at home to live on, you want to have every one else put in the same list. There is nothing strange in that: it is characteristic of poor beggars to be illnatured, and envy the well-to-do.
- Arist. Hegio, I beg you take care not to go on with your rash confidence in this fellow. And for that matter, he's certainly given you a fall or two already, I take it. This talk of his about rescuing your son doesn't please me at all.
- Tynd. (with an appealing look) I know you don't want it done; but I'll bring it about, God helping me. (slowly) I will restore his son to this gentleman, and then this gentleman will send me back to Elis to my father. That was why I sent Tyndarus off to my father.
- Arist. Why, you're Tyndarus yourself: and besides you there's not a slave in Elis of that name.
- Tynd. Still taunting me with being a slave, eh? A slave as it happens, because the enemy were too much for us!
- Arist. (angrily) I positively can't control myself any longer!
- Tynd. (apparently alarmed, to Hegio) Aha! Hear what he's saying? Run, why don't you? He'll be after us with stones in a minute, if you don't have him seized.
- Arist. Oh, this is driving me wild!
- Tynd. His eyes are blazing! He's having one, Hegio! See how his whole body is covered with lurid spots? It's black fury that's tormenting the fellow!

- Arist. Now, by the Lord, if this old gentleman did the wise thing, it's black pitch that would torment you at the executioner's, and light up that head of yours!
- Tynd. Now he's got to the raving point! Evil spirits are hounding the man, Hegio. Heavens! You'd do more wisely to have him seized!
- Arist. Oh, damnation! not to have a stone to knock out the brains of this blackguard that's driving me mad with his talk!
- Tynd. Hear that—looking for a stone!
- Arist. (struggling to contain himself) Hegio, I want a word with you all alone.
- Hegio (timorously) Say it from there, if there's anything you want—from away off there. I shall hear it all the same.
- Tynd. That's right, by Jove! for if you go any nearer, he'll bite your nose off.
- Arist. Heavens and earth, Hegio! don't believe I'm insane, or that I have, or ever had, the disease he's talking about. However, if you're at all afraid of me, have me tied up. I am willing, provided that fellow is tied up too.
- Tynd. No indeed, Hegio, certainly not: tie up the fellow that wants it.
- Arist. You keep still, now! I'll soon show you up, you false Philocrates, for the real Tyndarus. (Tyndarus makes signs to him behind Hegio's back) What are you shaking your head at me for?
- Tynd. I shaking my head at you?
- Arist. (to Hegio) What would he do, if you were farther off?
- Hegio See here, what if I should step up to this lunatic?
- Tynd. Ridiculous! He'll make a fool of you, jabbering something without head or tail to it. Look at this fellow, and you're looking at a regular Ajax 1—all but the make-up.

Hegio I don't care. I'm going to step up to him just the same. (approaches Aristophontes hesitantly)

Tynd. (aside) Now I'm done for entirely. Now I'm between the axe and the altar, and what to do I don't know.

Hegio I'm at your service, Aristophontes, if there's anything you want of me.

Arist. I'll show you, Hegio, that all this you take for a lie is the truth. But first I want to clear myself with you, and assure you that I am not insane, and have no affliction except captivity. And now,— (solemnly) so may the King of heaven and earth restore me to my native land,—that fellow is no more Philocrates than you or I.

Hegio (impressed) Hey? Tell me, who is he then?

Arist. The man I told you he was to begin with, a while ago. If you find it otherwise, I make no objection to forfeiting my parents and my liberty and staying here with you.

Hegio (to Tyndarus) And you—what have you to say?

Tynd. (urbanely) That I am your servant, and that you are my master.

Hegio (impatiently) That isn't what I'm asking about.

Were you a freeman?

Tynd. I was.

Arist. He certainly was not. Absurd!

Tynd. (superciliously) How do you know? Or were you my mother's midwife, perhaps, that you venture to speak with such assurance on this point?

Arist. I saw you when we were both boys.

- Tynd. Well, I see you now we are both grown-ups. There's one for you! You wouldn't meddle with my business, if you behaved decently. I don't meddle with yours, do I?
- Ilegio Wasn't his father called Ducatsdoubloonsandpiecesofeightson?
- Arist. No sir, he was not, and I never heard that name before to-day. The father of Philocrates was Theodoromedes.
- Tynd. (aside, dryly) I'm jolly well done for. Stop your noise, will you, heart? Go to the deuce, and be hanged to you! Jumping up and down, while I, poor devil, can hardly stand for fear!
- Hegio Am I to take it as absolutely clear that this fellow was a slave in Elis, that he is not Philocrates?
- Arist. So absolutely that you'll never find it to be anything different. But where is Philocrates at present?
- Hegio (savagely) Where I least want him, and he most wants to be. Do, do, see if there's not some mistake, though.
- Arist. No, I'm sure of my ground and fully informed in what I tell you.
- Hegio You're certain?
- Arist. You'll never find a deader certainty than this, I assure you. Philocrates has been a friend of mine ever since he was a boy.
- Ilegio So then, I've been trimmed, torn limb from limb poor fool, by the arts of this rogue, who's taken me in with his tricks to suit his taste! But what does your friend Philocrates look like?
- Arist. I'll tell you: thin face, sharp nose, complexion fair, black eyes, hair a little reddish, waving, and curled.
- Hegio That agrees!

Tynd. (aside ruefully) Gad! Indeed it does—with my coming into damned unpleasant prominence this day. Alas for those poor whips that are doomed this day to die upon my back!

Hegio I see I've been duped!

Tynd. (aside) Come on, ye shackles, run up and embrace my shanks, so that I may keep you safe!

Hegio Well, haven't those rascal captives taken me in with this day's trickery? The other one pretended he was the slave, while this fellow here played the freeman. I've lost the kernel and kept the shell for surety. That's the way they've daubed my face up for me, ass that I am! (grimly) This one shall never have the laugh on me, at any rate. (stepping to door and calling) Box! Buffum! Bangs! Come! Out with you! Bring your straps!

Scene 5. [ENTER OVERSEERS, CARRYING HEAVY RAWHIDES.

Box (merrily cracking a whip) You don't want us to go and tie up faggots, do you, sir?

Hegio Clap handcuffs on this rogue. (pointing to Tyndarus) Tynd. (as they obey) What does this mean? What have I done?

Hegio Done! You sower and hoer of sin—(more savagely) and reaper, especially!

Tynd. (politely) Couldn't you manage to slip in "harrower"? Why, farmers always harrow before they hoe.

Hegio (angrily) Now look at that! the bold way he stands up to me!

Tynd. A guiltless, harmless slave ought to face his own master boldly, his own master, of all men.

Hegio (to overseers) Fasten his hands, tight, mind you!

Tynd. I am yours. Have them cut off, even, for that matter. But what does this mean? Why this rage at me?

670 Hegio Quia me meamque rem, quod in te uno fuit, tuis scelestis falsidicis fallaciis deartuasti dilaceravisti atque opes confecisti omnes, res ac rationes meas: ita mi exemisti Philocratem fallaciis. illum esse servom credidi, te liberum; ita vosmet aiebatis itaque nomina inter vos permutastis. Tynd. Fateor, omnia facta esse ita ut tu dicis, et fallaciis abiisse eum abs te mea opera atque astutia; an, obsecro hercle te, id nunc suscenses mihi? 680 Hegio At cum cruciatu maxumo id factumst tuo. Tynd. Dum ne ob male facta, percam, parvi aestumo. si ego hic peribo, ast ille ut dixit non redit, at erit mi hoc factum mortuo memorabile. me meum crum captum ex servitute atque hostibus reducem fecisse liberum in patriam ad patrem, meumque potius me caput periculo praeoptavisse, quam is periret, ponere. Hegio Facito ergo ut Acherunti clueas gloria. Tund. Qui per virtutem, periit, at non interit. 690 Hegio Quando ego te exemplis pessumis cruciavero atque ob sutelas tuas te morti misero, vel te interiisse vel periisse praedicent; dum pereas, nihil intererit: dicant vivere.

Hegio Because as far as in you lay you've sent me and my hopes to smash, demolished me, with your rascally deceitful dodges, and spoiled all my chances, all my prospects and plans. That's the way you, got Philocrates off—by swindling me! I supposed he was the slave and you the freeman; that's what you said yourselves; that's how you exchanged names.

Tynd. (coolly) I admit it: it is all as you say—yes, you were swindled out of him, and it was my support and my scheming that did it. But heavens and earth, that isn't what sets you raging at me, is it?

Hegio You shall pay for doing it, though, pay for it with vour own best blood!

Tynd. (simply) Provided it is not for wrongdoing. let me die—it matters little. If I myself do die here, and if he does fail to return, as he said he would, what I have done, at least, will be remembered when I am gone—men will tell how I saved my captured master from slavery and from his enemies, restored him, a free man, to his home and his father, and how I chose to put my own life in peril rather than let him die.

Hegio Well then, you can look in the next world for that glorious name of yours.

Tynd. The man that dies in a worthy cause does not perish utterly.

Hegio After I've tortured you in the most excruciating ways possible, and sent you to perdition for the lies you've patched up, let'em announce that you've perished utterly, or that you've merely died; so long as you're dead, no matter—they can say you're living, for all I care.

Pol si istuc faxis, haud sine poena feceris, Tynd.

Hegio Pessume. Tynd. At ego aio recte, qui abs te sorsum sentio.

Hegio

You do that, sir, and I swear it will cost you Tynd. dear, if my master comes back, as I expect him to do.

Arist. (aside) Great God! Now I see it! Now I understand what it all means! My chum Philocrates is free, has gone home to his father. Good! And not a friend have I got that I wish better luck to, either. But I do feel bad about the cursed way I've treated Tyndarus here! He's got me and my tongue to thank for being strapped up at this moment.

Hegio Didn't I tell you not to deceive me in the slightest particular?

Yes. Tund.

Then why did you dare lie to me? Hegio

Tynd. Because the truth would have harmed the person I was trying to help: as it is, deceit has served his turn.

Hegio It won't serve yours, however.

Very well, sir. I saved my master, at any rate, Tynd. and I'm happy in having saved the man that my older master put in my care. Really now, do you think this was a wrong act?

Hegio Atrocious!

Well, sir, I differ with you—I say it was right. Tynd. Why, just think! if a slave of yours did the same thing for your own son, what would be your feeling toward him? Would you set this slave free, or not? Wouldn't this slave be your favourite? Answer me that.

Hegio

(reluctantly) I suppose so. Why are you angry at me, then? Tynd.

Hegio Because you have been more faithful to him than to me.

Tynd. What? Did you expect in a single night and day to teach a man just recently captured, a slave you had hardly bought, to consult your interests more than those of the master I grew up from boyhood with?

Hegio Well then, look to him for your thanks for it. (to overseers) Off with him and have him shackled—heavy ones, solid ones! (to Tyndarus) After that you shall go straight to the stone quarries. There, while the rest of them are digging out their eight blocks a day, you're to do half as much again, or you'll be dubbed The Cracks-collector.

Arist. Hegio! for God's sake don't let the man be utterly lost!

Hegio Lost? We'll see to that! Why, at night he'll be chained up in a cell and guarded, and in the day-time he'll be under ground hewing out stone. It's agony long drawn out he'll get from me; I won't end it for him all in one day.

Arist. (distressed) Is this your fixed intention, sir?

Hegio Fixed as death! (to overseers) Quick! March him off to Hippolytus the blacksmith and have some solid irons forged on him; then he's to be escorted outside the city to my freedman Cordalus and the quarries. Yes, and tell Cordalus I want it seen to that he be treated quite as well as the man that's treated (ferociously) worst.

Tynd. Why should I ask for mercy when you refuse it? My life is risked at risk to you. After death, there is no evil in death for me to fear. And even if I live on and on to the very limits of human life, it's still only for a short time I shall have to endure what you threaten me with. Farewell, sir, and God bless you, no matter if you do deserve to have me tu, Aristophontes, de me ut meruisti, ita vale; nam mihi propter te hoc optigit.

That rascal is bound straight for the prison cell Hegio he's entitled to. I'll make an example of him for the benefit of those other prisoners, so that none of them will dare engage in such deviltry. hadn't been for this fellow here who disclosed it all, they'd have bitted me and led me along with their tricks till the end of time. again do I trust a soul in anything, that's settled. Once cheated is enough. (pauses, then gloomily) I hoped, poor fool, that I had ransomed my son from slavery—a hope that's slipped I lost one son, a four-year-old boy that a slave kidnapped, and never a trace of slave or son since. And my older boy in the hands of enemies! What curse am I under? As if I'd begotten children so as to be left childless! (to Aristophontes) This way, you. (going toward brother's house) Back you go where you were before. I am determined to pity no one, since no one pities me.

Arist. (wryly) It seemed a good omen, my getting out of irons. Now I perceive I must omen myself back to chains again.

ACT IV

(It is to be assumed that several hours only have elapsed.)

ENTER Ergasilus, ELATED.

Great God on high, thou dost preserve me and Erg. prosper me with fatness! Boundless abundance, yea, sublime abundance dost thou bring me! Praise, profit, pleasure, jollity, festivity, feasting, trains of victuals, eatables, drinkables, satiety, joy! Never will I toady to human being more, I now resolve it. Why, I can bless my friend or blast my foe, now that this delightful day has loaded me down with its delightful delightfulness! I've landed a legacy stuffed fit to burst, and not a single encumbrance attached! Now for a race up to old Hegio here: I'm bringing him all the happiness he craves of Heaven, yes, and more, too. I know what I'll do now: like slaves in the comedies, I'll bundle my cloak round my neck and run, so that I'll be the first man he hears this news from: and I hope to get food for ever and ever for my information.

ENTER Hegio. Scene 2.

(soliloquizing moodily) The more I think it over, Hegio the sourer I feel. The idea of their playing upon me in that style to-day! And I couldn't see through it. When it gets known, I shall be the joke of the town. The moment I appear at the forum they'll all be saying: "Here comes that smart old fellow that got humbugged." (observing Ergasilus) But isn't that Ergasilus I see over there? With his cloak all tucked up, too! Now what in the world is he going to do? (steps aside)

Move aps te moram atque, Ergasile, age hanc rem. 790 Erg. eminor interminorque, ne mi obstiterit obviam nisi quis satis diu vixisse sese homo arbitrabitur. nam qui obstiterit, ore sistet. Tum pistores scrofipasci, qui alunt furfuribus sues, Erg. quarum odore praeterire nemo pistrinum potest: eorum si quoiusquam scrofam in publico conspexero, ex ipsis dominis meis pugnis exculcabo furfures. 810 Leo brackets the following v., 801: Qui mihi in cursu opstiterit, faxo vitae is ex'emplo opsti-The man that stands in my path shall forthwith stand in the way of his own existence. 538

Erg. (nith burlesque importance and bustle) No dawdling now, Ergasilus! At it, my boy, at it! I give you to wit by all the law's pains and penalties that no man stand in my way, unless he thinks he has lived long enough. For the man that does stand in my way shall stand on his head. (squares off and delivers lusty blows at imaginary passers-by)

Hegio (aside) The fellow is going in for a boxing match!

Erg. I'll do it, I'm resolved. So everybody keep where they belong, and don't anyone bring his business into this street! I tell you what, my fist is a siege-gun, and this forearm is my catapult, and my shoulder is a battering ram, yes, and every man I lay my knee into will bite the earth. I'll make every man I meet a tooth-collector.

Hegio (aside) What on earth does all this bluster mean? Quite unaccountable!

Erg. I'll make him remember this day and this place and me for ever.

Hegio (aside) What giant undertaking is the fellow at, with all this big talk?

Erg. I give you due notice, that no one may come to grief through his own ignorance of the law: stay at home: keep away from me—I am a violent man.

Hegio (aside) Bless my soul! I'll be sworn he's got some assurance put into his inside. Heaven help the poor wretch whose larder has set him up so!

Erg. And as for the millers that keep sows, and feed waste stuff to their swine, that raise such a stench nobody can go by the mill,—if I spy a sow of any one of 'em on the public highway, I'll up with my fists and stamp the stuffing out of those sows'—owners.

Hegio	Basilicas edictiones atque imperiosas habet: satur homost, habet profecto in ventre confiden-

Hegio	Perlubet hunc hominem colloqui. Ergasile.
Erg.	Ergasilum qui vocat?

(aside) Right royal and imperious pronunciamentos. Hegio The man is gorged: he certainly has got some assurance stowed away inside.

Erg. Then the fishmongers that travel around on a jogging, jolting gelding, and offer folk stale fish so strong it drives every last lounger in the arcade out into the forum—I'll whack their faces with their own fish baskets, just to teach 'em what an abomination they are to the public nose. Yes, and the butchers, too, that bereave sheep of their little ones, that engage to sell you lambs fit for slaughter, and then give you lamb as old as two lambs, and pass off a tough old ram as a prime wether—if I spy that ram on a city thoroughfare, I'll make ram and owner the saddest men alive!

(aside) Splendid! Why, he is issuing edicts like a Hegio Comptroller of the Victualling: I shouldn't be surprised if the Aetolians have made him market inspector.

Erg. I'm no parasite now, not I! I'm a precious potent potentate of potentates, with all that invoice at the harbour for my belly-food, food! must hurry and load old Hegio here with ecstasy. There's not a luckier man alive than he!

(aside) What ecstasy is it this ecstatic creature is Hegio going to lavish on me?

(pounding on Hegio's door) Hi! Where are you? Erg.Anybody here? Anybody going to open this door?

Hegio (aside) The fellow is coming to dine with me.

Erg. Open this door-both doors-before I knock 'em to flinders and finish 'em for good and all!

(aside) I should quite enjoy a word with him. Hegio (aloud) Ergasilus!

(still pounding) Who calls Ergasilus?

Hegio	Respice.
Erg.	Fortuna quod tibi nec facit nec faciet, me iubes. sed quis est?
Hegio	Respice ad me, Hegio sum.
Erg.	Oh mihi,

Hegio Vouchsafe me a look, sir.

Erg. (mithout turning his head) Vouchsafe you a look, eh!
That is more than Good Luck does for you, or ever will do, either! Who is it, though?

Hegio Look around this way. It's Hegio.

Erg. (rushing up) Oh! oh! You best of all the best men that tread the earth, you come just in time!

Ilegio You have hit upon some one or other at the harbour to dine with: that's why you are so haughty.

Erg. (rapturously) Give me your hand!

Hegio My hand?

Erg. Your hand, I say—give me your hand this instant!
Hegio (doing so) Take it. (Ergasilus shakes it vigorously)

Erg. Rejoice!
Hegio Rejoice—I? What for?

Erg. Because I bid you to. Come now, rejoice!

Hegio Good Lord, man! grief takes precedence of joy in my case.

Erg. I will remove every grief spot from off your person for you this minute. Rejoice, rejoice boldly!

Hegio Well, I am rejoicing, although I haven't the least idea why I should.

Erg. Much obliged! Order— Hegio (suspiciously) Order what?

Erg. —a fire to be built, an enormous fire.

Hegio An enormous fire?

Erg. That's what I say—make it a big one.

Hegio (angry) How's that? Do you think I'm going to burn my house down for your benefit, you vulture?

Erg. Calm yourself, sir. Will you order the pots to be set near the oven, or won't you—and the platters washed—and bacon and lovely things to eat to be warmed up in fire-pans piping hot? And some one to go and lay in fish?

Hegio	Hic vigilans somniat.

Hegio Day dreams, poor fellow!

Erg. And some one else to get pork and lamb and spring chicken?

Hegio You know how to enjoy yourself—given the wherewithal.

Erg. And ham and river-lamprey and pickled fish, mackerel and sting ray and tunny, and nice soft cheese?

Hegio You will have more of an opportunity to mention those viands, Ergasilus, than to masticate them here at my house.

Erg. Do you suppose I'm saying this on my own account?

Hegio What you get here to-day will be a cross between nothing and next to nothing; make no mistake about that. So bring me a stomach that is ready for your ordinary fare.

Erg. Why, I'll make you long to squander money, you yourself, even though I should forbid it.

Hegio Me?

Erg. Yes, sir, you!

Hegio Then you are my master, I take it.

Erg. No, no, your whole-souled friend. Do you want me to make you a fortunate man?

Hegio Rather than unfortunate, why, yes.

Erg. Give me your hand.

Hegio Here it is. (Ergasilus again shakes it fervently)

Erg. The gods are with you!

Hegio I wouldn't know it.

Erg. You wouldn't? Well, you're out of the wood; that's why you don't twig it. But see they get the holy vessels ready for worship—quick! Yes, and have a special lamb brought in, a fat one.

Erg. To me, by gad! For I'm your Jupiter Most High now, myself; and Salvation, Fortune, Light, Gladness, Joy—they're all this identical I! So mind you placate this divinity by stuffing him full.

Hegio You need food, I fancy.

Erg. No sir, I need food I fancy, not food you fancy.

Hegio (smiling) Have it your own way: I'm perfectly willing to—crawl.

Erg. Crawl? I believe you: it's a habit you—fell into—as a child.

Hegio (disgusted) Oh, you be damned, sir!

Erg. And by Jove, you be—grateful to me, as you ought, for my news. The glorious news from the port I'm just reporting! Now your dinner begins to tempt me.

Hegio Be off, you idiot: you're behind time, you have come too late.

Erg. Well, if I had come before, then you'd have had more reason to say that. (slowly and portentously)
Now, sir, prepare for the eestasy of which I am the vehicle. A few minutes ago at the harbour your son, your son Philopolemus, alive, safe and sound, —I saw him, saw him in a despatch boat, and along with him that young Elean and your slave Stalagmus that stole your little four year old boy.

Hegio To the devil with you! You're making fun of me. So help me Holy Stuffing, so may she grace me with her name for evermore—I did see them, Hegio!

Erg. Out, par Amalfi!

Hegio Careful now!

Erg. Oui, par Torre dell'Annunziata!

Hegio What are you swearing by foreign cities for!

Erg. Well, because they're the same as you said your meals were—perfect terrors.

Hegio Plague take you!

Erg. My sentiments exactly, seeing you don't believe a word I tell you in sober earnest. Stalagmus, though, —what was his nationality when he disappeared?

Hegio Sicilian.

Erg. But he's no Sicilian now: he's a Gaul—he's being galled,¹ anyhow, by that thing he's attached to: he's coupled with the article so as to get children, I suppose?

Hegio See here, have you told me all this in good faith?

Erg. In good faith.

Hegio Great heavens! I feel like a new man, if what you say is true.

rg. Eh? How's that? You'll still doubt me when I'd give you my sacred word on it? Very well then. Hegio, if my solemn oath is insufficient for you, go down to the harbour and see for yourself.

Erg. (wild with joy) Now by Jupiter, if I don't do some handsome catering, comb me down with a club!

Hegio I'll dinner you till doomsday, if it's true.

Erg. And who's to pay?

Hegio I and my son.

Erg. I have your word on that?

Hegio My word.

Erg. And for my part, my word to you is—your son has arrived.

Hegio (making off toward harbour) Attend to everything the very best you can.

Scene 3.

Erg. A pleasant walk and—backwalk—to you. [EXIT Hegio] He's gone! And the whole blessed commissariat left to me! Ye immortal gods! how I'll knock necks off backs now! Ah, ham's case is hopeless, and bacon's in a bad, bad way! And sow's udder—done for utterly! Oh, how pork rind will go to pot! Butchers and pig-dealers—won't I bustle 'em! Why, if I should mention all the other things that go to bolster up a belly, it would be a waste of time. I must off this minute to perform my official duties and pass judgment on bacon and help out hams that are still untried and in suspense.

yours and all parasites and anyone that gives a parasite a meal hereafter! Disaster, devastation, a tornado, has just fallen on our house. I was afraid he'd jump at my throat like a ravening wolf! As soon as I saw that ravenous look of his I almost died for fear he'd make a rush at me-Lord, how he did scare me, how he kept grinding his teeth! In he came and tugged down the meat, rack and all-grabbed a knife and lopped the choice bits off three necks of pork—and smashed every pot and tureen that didn't hold a peck or more! Kept asking the cook if he couldn't possibly use the big pickle vats to boil things in! Broke into all the cupboards and raided the pantry! (shouting to those within) Hi, boys! watch him, will you! I'm going to find the old man. I'll tell him, so that he can get in more victuals for himself, that is if he wants any for his own use: for to judge from the way this fellow is getting 'em out here, there's nothing left now, or won't be long. EXIT.

ACT V

(Half an hour has elapsed.)
ENTER Hegio, Philopolemus, Philocrates, AND Stulagmus.

Hegio

(to Philopolemus) I thank God with all my heart, as I ought, for bringing you back to your father, and for relieving me of the dreadful anguish I've been enduring as day after day went by, and I still here without you; yes, and for letting me see this rascal (indicating Stalagmus) in my power, and for this gentleman's (indicating Philocrates) proving himself a man of honour in standing by his promise to us.

Philop. Satis iam dolui ex animo, et cura me satis et lacrumis maceravi. satis iam audivi tuas aerumnas, ad portum mihi quas memorasti. hoc agamus. Philocr. Quid nunc, quoniam tecum servavi fidem tibique hunc reducem in libertatem feci? Hegio Fecisti ut tibi. Philocrates, numquam referre gratiam possim satis, proinde ut tu promeritu's de me et filio. Philop. Immo potes, pater, et poteris et ego potero, et di eam potestatem dabunt ut beneficium bene merenti nostro merito muneres; sicut tu huic 1 potes, pater mi, facere merito maxume. Hegio Quid opust verbis? lingua nullast qua negem quidquid roges. Philocr. Postulo abs te, ut mi illum reddas servom, quem hic reliqueram pignus pro me, qui mihi melior quam sibi semper fuit, pro bene factis eius ut ei pretium possim reddere. 940 Quod bene fecisti referetur gratia id quod postulas; Hegio et id et aliud, quod me orabis, impetrabis. atque te nolim suscensere quod ego iratus ei feci male. Philocr. Quid fecisti? Hegio In lapicidinas compeditum condidi,

1 tu huic MSS; nunc Leo.

ubi rescivi mihi data esse verba.

Philop. (seeing Philocrates is getting impatient) I've had quite enough bitter suffering, and enough of wearing myself out with anxiety and weeping, too, and I've heard quite enough of your distress of which you told me at the harbour, father! So now to the main point. (turns to Philocrates)

Philocr. (to Hegio) What of me, sir, now that I have kept faith with you and secured the liberty of your son here?

Hegio After the way you have acted, Philocrates, I'm entirely unable to show gratitude enough for your treatment of me and my son.

Philop. No, no, you are able, father, yes, and always will be able, and so shall I be, and Heaven will give you the ability to do a deserved kindness to a man that has been so kind to us. It's just as with this slave here, (pointing to Stalagmus) father dear; you're able to give him his full deserts.

Hegio (to Philocrates) It's plain enough, sir,—I have no tongue with which to refuse a request of yours.

Philocr. What I ask you to do is to give me back the slave I left here as security for myself—he was always ready to sacrifice himself for me!—so that I can reward him for his kindnesses.

Hegio You have been kind to us, sir, and I shall be glad to do as you ask; both that request, and any other, will be granted. (embarrassed) And—and I trust you won't be incensed at me for getting angry and treating him badly.

Philocr. (anxiously) What did you do?

Hegio I had him fettered and put down in the stone quarries when I found out I had been imposed upon.

Philocr. God forgive me! To think of the splendid fellow suffering so, and all for my sake!

Well, sir, this being so, you needn't give me a Hegio single farthing for him: take him from me gratis —he is a free man.

Philocr. Well, well, Hegio, many thanks! But have him sent for, I beg you.

By all means. (calling to slaves in house) Where are Hegio you? [ENTER OVERSEERS] Quick! go bring Tyndarus here. [EXEUNT OVERSEERS] (to Philopolemus and Philocrates) As for you lads, step inside. Meanwhile I want to inquire of this whipping post here (pointing to Stalagmus) what was done with my younger son. You can take a bath meanwhile.

Philop. Come along in with me, Philocrates.

Philocr. Certainly.

EXEUNT.

Scene 2.

(to Stalagmus) Come now, you! Over there with Hegio you, (pointing) my good sir, my charming piece of property.

(sullenly) What can you look for from me, when a Stal. fine gentleman like you tells lies? I've had my day as a dandy, a charmer: a good sir, or good for anything, I never was, and I never will be, make no mistake: don't you build up hopes I will be good for anything.

Hegio You have no difficulty in appreciating your position pretty fairly well. Now be truthful, and you'll be acting to your own advantage and make a bad prospect somewhat better. Out with your story; make it straightforward and honestvirtues you have never displayed hitherto, however.

Hegio Cui homini?

Stal. Theodoromedi in Alide Polyplusio, sex minis.

Hegio Pro di immortales, is quidem huius est pater Philocrati.

Stal. Quin melius novi quam tu et vidi saepius.

Hegio Serva, Iuppiter supreme, et me et meum gnatum mihi.

Philocrates, per tuom te genium obsecro, exi, te 'volo.

Leo brackets the following v., 968: si eris verax, ex tuis rebus feceris meliusculas.

Stal. When I'm ready to admit a thing myself d'ye think I should be ashamed of it just because you say it's so?

Hegio I'll make you ashamed, though: (savagely) I tell you what, I'll make one big blush of you.

Stal. (ironically) La! La! I'm promised a whipping, it seems, and I such a novice at it—oh, yes I am!

Look here, get done with that talk and say what you've got to propose, so as to get what you're after.

Hegio Quite a gift of tongue, sir! But oblige me by saving some of it for the moment.

Stal. Anything you like.

Hegio (half aside) That compliance he showed as a boy hardly becomes him at present. (aloud) To business! Now then, pay attention and answer me fully.

Stal. Rot! Don't you suppose I know what I deserve? Hegio Well, you have a chance to escape a little of it, if not all.

Stal. Little enough I'll escape, I know that; for there'll be plenty coming, and it serves me right, seeing I ran away and kidnapped your son and sold him.

Hegio To whom?

Stal. (drawling) Theodoromedes Goldfields, in Elis, for twenty-four pounds.

Hegio God bless my soul! Why, he is the father of Philocrates here!

Stal. Well, I know him better than you, and I've seen him oftener.

Hegio God Almighty, save me and save my boy for me!
(running to door and shouting) Philocrates! Here, here, come, on your life! I want you!

Scene 3. [ENTER Philocrates.

Philocr. Here I am, Hegio. If I can be of any service, command me.

Hegio (beside himself) This fellow says my son—he sold him to your father—for twenty-four pounds—in Elis!

Philocr. How long ago was this?

Stal. Going on for twenty years.

Philocr. He's lying.

Stal. (indifferent) One of us is. As a matter of fact, your father gave you a little four year old boy for your own, when you were nothing but a youngster yourself.

Philocr. (interested) What was his name? If your story is true, come. tell me that.

Stal. Styled Pettie, he was: later on you folks called him Tyndarus.

Philocr. How is it I don't know you?

Stal. Because it's the regular thing to forget a fellow and cut him, in case his good will can't help you at all.

Philocr. Tell me, was that boy you sold my father the same one that was given me for my own?

Stal. (nuth a nod in Hegio's direction) His son.

Hegio (eagerly) Is he alive, this—man?

Stal. I got the money: that's all I bothered about.

Hegio (to Philocrates) What do you say?

Philocr. Why, it's Tyndarus himself that is your son, at least according to this fellow's evidence. For Tyndarus has been brought up with me from the time we were boys, and brought up in good honest fashion.

Hegio I feel miserable and happy both, if what you two say is true! Miserable at having been so hard on him, if he is my own boy! Dear, dear! how much more I've done than I ought, or how much less! It's torment, to think of the horrible thing I've done—oh, if it could only be undone! (looking down street) Look, though,—there he comes! To be decked out like that, the noble fellow!

ENTER Tyndarus ESCORTED BY OVERSEERS. HE IS Scene 4. HEAVILY IRONED AND CARRIES A CROWBAR

Tynd. (dryly) I have seen a good many pictures whose subject was torture in Hell: but upon my soul, there is no hell that can match those stone quarries where I've been. That place down there is certainly the one where a weary man can be dead sure of working off his tired feeling. Why, when I got there it was just like your young scions of the nobility being given daws or ducks or quails for playfellows: my own case exactly—the moment I arrived they gave me this crow to have a lark with. (looking toward Hegio's house) But there's my master in front of the door—and, yes, my other master back from Elis!

Hegio Oh, how are you, my own longed-for son?

Tynd. Eh? "My son?" How's that? (pauses, then with a weary laugh) Ah, yes, yes, I see the point of your father and son chaff: just as parents do, you give me a chance to behold the light of day.

Philocr. God bless you, Tyndarus!

Tynd. And you, sir, for whose sake I'm undergoing this confounded experience.

Philocr. But now you shall be a free man, Tyndarus, and a rich one, I promise you. For here is (indicating Hegio) your father; this slave (indicating Stalagmus) stole you away from him here when you were four years old and sold you to my father for Philocr. Quin, inquam, intus hic est.

Tynd. Fecisti edepol et recte et bene.

Philocr. Nunc tibe pater hic est: hic fur est tuos, qui parvom hinc te abstulit.

Tynd. At ego hunc grandis grandem natu ob furtum ad carnificem dabo.

Tynd. (dazed) What about his son?

Philocr. Look—inside there—your own brother! 1

Tynd. Great heavens! When I think back I do now at last remember hearing—in a cloudy sort of way—my father called Hegio!

Hegio (embracing him) I am that Hegio!

Philocr. (to Hegio, pointing to the shackles on Tyndarus).

Those irons, sir,—for mercy's sake get yourself a lighter son, and him a heavier slave. (indicating Stalagmus)

Hegio Yes, yes, I must see to that first of all. Let's go inside and have a blacksmith sent for, so that I may get those irons off of you and make this fellow (turning to Stalagmus) a present of them.

Stal. Thanks awfully—seeing I haven't a thing I can call my own. [EXEUNT OMNES.

¹ Tynd. What do you say? Did you bring this gentleman's captive son?

Philocr. Yes, yes, he's inside, I tell you.

Tynd. By heaven, sir, you have acted fairly and honourably.

Philocr. Now here is your father: and here is the thief who stole you away from here when you were small.

Tynd. But now that we're both big, I'll hand him over to the executioner for that theft.

Philocr. He deserves it.

Tynd. Well then, I'll give him his deserved deserts deservedly, by gad! But you, sir, speak, I beseech you. Are you my father?

Hegio I am, my dear lad.

Tynd. Now at last I remember—when I think it over.

CATERVA

Spectatores, ad pudicos mores facta haec fabula est, neque in hac subigitationes sunt neque ulla amatio 1030 nec pueri suppositio nec argenti circumductio, neque ubi amans adulescens scortum liberet clam suom patrem.

huius modi paucas poetae reperiunt comoedias, ubi boni meliores fiant. nunc vos, si vobis placet et si placuimus neque odio fuimus, signum hoc mittite:

qui pudicitiae esse voltis praemium, plausum date.

EPILOGUE

SPOKEN BY THE COMPANY.

Spectators, this play was composed with due regard to the proprieties: here you have no vicious intrigues, no love affair, no supposititious child, no getting money on false pretences, no young spark setting a wench free without his father's knowledge. Dramatists find few plays such as this which make good men better. Now, if you so please, and if we have pleased you and have not been boring, intimate as much: you who wish virtue to be rewarded, give us your applause.
