nativize ('neɪtɪvaɪz), v. Linguistics. [f. NATIVE a. + -IZE.] trans. To render native; spec. a. To adapt (a loan word) to the phonetic structure of the native language. b. To develop (a pidgin language) into a creole used as a first language. Hence nativized ppl. *a., nativization.

1933 L. BLOOMFIELD Lang. xxv. 454 From the completely nativized ['ʃowfɪ] chauffeur, we have the back-formation to chauffe [ʃowfɪ]. 1940 Proc. Amer. Philos. Soc. LXXXII. 15 'Scandalous examples of Great Russian chauvinism' have often interfered with what is called the nativization of the Soviet apparatus. 1970 Language XLVI. 66 A Nupe speaker will consistently 'nativize' [Cɔ] as [Cʰa] and [Ce] as [Cʰa]. Ibid., The position supported by this evidence is that the nativization of foreign sounds is a valid indicator of what rules have been internalized. 1971 I. F. HANCOCK in J. SPENCER Eng. Lang. W. Afr. 113 When a pidgin supplants a 'full' language, changes must occur... Therefore in becoming nativised and thereby creolised, it expands its vocabulary, produces more explicit grammatical constructions and becomes more fixed in pronunciation.

N.A.T.O., NATO, Nato ('neɪtəʊ). [Acronym f. the initials of North Atlantic Treaty Organization, set up in 1949.] A military alliance of the United States and Canada with certain European nations. So 'Nato-ish *a., supporting N.A.T.O.; 'Natoism, adherence to N.A.T.O.; 'Natoist, a supporter of N.A.T.O.

natour, obs. form of NATURE sb.

1756 P. BROWNE Jamaica (1789) 38 The Egyptian Natre, and Tartarian Natre.

natrium ('neɪtrɪəm, 'nætrɪəm). Chem. rare. [f. NATR-ON + -IUM.] Sodium.

1842 FRANCIS Dict. Arts & Sci., Natrium, the name given by the German chemists to sodium, the metallic base of soda. 1870 GARROD Mat. Med. (ed. 3) 131 Sodium... called also Natrium, is contained in the soda salts, but does not exist native.

natriuresis (,neɪtri-, ,nætri(j)uːrɪˈsɪs). Med. [f. NATRI(UM) + Gr. οὐρῆσις urination.] The excretion of abnormally large amounts of sodium in the urine.

1957 H. W. SMITH in Amer. Jnl. Med. XXIII. 625/2 An increase or decrease in sodium excretion will be designated as natriuresis and antinatriuresis. 1974 Nature 11 Jan. 109/1 The natriuresis produced by the intra-renal release of kallikrein may be effected by vasodilator and permeability effects on the renal vasculature and tubules.

Hence natriuretic (-'etɪk) a., causing or pertaining to natriuresis.

1957 Amer. Jnl. Med. XXIII. 625/1 The natriuretic effects of the infusion of large volumes of saline solution are in part controlled by the absence of natriuresis after the infusion of iso-oncotic albumin. 1974 Nature 11 Jan. 109/1 The data on sodium excretion place substance P amongst the most potent natriuretic substances so far described.

natro- ('neɪtrəʊ, 'nætrəʊ-), comb. form of NATRIUM, used in Min. to form the names of sodium-containing minerals (as NATROLITE), and also prefixed to existing mineral names to indicate the (often partial) substitution of sodium for some other metal in that mineral, as natro'alunite, any of the range of basic sulphates of sodium, potassium, and aluminium, (Na,K)Al₃(SO₄)₂(OH)₆, which have the proportion of sodium greater than that of potassium and are found as white hexagonal crystals; spec. the sodic end-member of this series; natro'chalcite [L. chalcites CHALCITES], a basic hydrated sulphate of sodium and copper, NaCu₂(SO₄)₂(OH).H₂O, which is found as emerald-green monoclinic crystals at Chuquicamata in Chile; natro'davyne [ad. It. natrodavyna (F. Zambonini 1910, in Atti d. R. Accad. d. Sci. fis. e mat. XIV. vi. 188)], a silicate and carbonate of aluminium and sodium, found as colourless hexagonal crystals; natro'jarosite, a basic sulphate of sodium and iron, NaFe₃(SO₄)₂(OH)₆, found as yellow or brown hexagonal crystals; natromonte'brasite [a. F. natromontebrasite (F. Gonnard 1913, in Bull. de la Soc. franç. de Min. XXXVI. 120)], a basic fluoride and phosphate of sodium, lithium, and aluminium, (Na,Li)Al(PO₄)(OH,F), with more sodium than lithium, which is found as whitish triclinic crystals.

1902 HILLEBRAND & PENFIELD in Amer. Jnl. Sci. CLXIV. 220 The name natroalunite might be employed to designate the two varieties of alunite from Colorado..., where the proportion of the soda to the potash molecule is 7:4. 1937 Amer. Mineralogist XXII. 944 Small amounts of finely granular natroalunite have attacked the andalusite ores. 1968 I. KOSTOV Mineral. II. 493 Natroalunite is a sodium analogue [of alunite] NaAl₃(SO₄)₂(OH)₆. 1969 Mineral. Sci. CLXXVI. 343 The collection... was obtained from exhausted copper veins and includes... natrochalcite (a new mineral). 1944 Econ. Geol. XXXIX. 274 The SO₃ concentration is so reduced that chalcantinite, natrochalcite, and krohnkite become unstable and antlerite takes their place. 1968 I. KOSTOV Mineral. II. 514 Natrochalcite is monoclinic (C₂/m), occurring as acute pyramidal green crystals with perfect {001} cleavage. 1913 Mineral. Mag. XVI. 367 Natrodavyne... Hexagonal crystals, rich in faces, hitherto referred to nepheline or to davyne. 1963 Canad. Mineralogist VII. 632 Dry material of the natrodavyne composition was prepared by mixing α-cristobalite, γ-alumina and Na₂SiO₃ in the correct stoichiometric proportions for the formation of nepheline, and then adding the required weight of anhydrous Na₂CO₃. 1902 HILLEBRAND & PENFIELD in Amer. Jnl. Sci. CLXIV. 219 It has seemed to the writers best to designate the new compounds described in this article as natrojarosite and plumbojarosite, the names signifying their relation to a well known species. 1938 Amer. Mineralogist XXIII. 757 At Chuquicamata natrojarosite is associated with chalcantinite, krohnkite and sulphur. 1969 Natrojarosite [see natroalunite above]. 1971 Norsk Geol. Tidsskrift LI. 195 Natrojarosite is reported as a secondary mineral from Forvik antimony deposit, Helgeland, North Norway. 1915 Mineral. Mag. XVII. 355 Natromontebrasite... To replace the name Natrambygonite or Natronambygonit of W. T. Schaller... since the mineral is a hydrofluophosphate rather than a fluophosphate. 1955 Amer. Mineralogist XL. 1141 Fremontite..., in which Na:Li = 1:7:1 and OH>F, becomes natromontebrasite and possesses the dubious distinction of having been referred to under three different names within 40 years.

natrolite ('nætrəʊlaɪt, 'neɪtrəʊ-). Min. [f. NATRO-N + -LITE; named by Klaproth, 1803.] A hydrous silicate of aluminium and sodium, usually occurring in white, transparent, acicular crystals.

1805 JAMESON Syst. Min. II. 541. 1811 SMITHSON in Phil. Trans. CL. 171 The natrolite has been lately met with under a regular crystalline form. 1836 T. Rocks* x. 159 A meshwork of little prisms of natrolite, in some instances, almost completely filling the crystal.

natron ('neɪtrən, 'nætrən). [a. F. natron (1665), a. Sp. natron, ad. Arab. naṭrūn, nīṭrūn, ad. Gr. νίτρον NITRE. Cf. ANATRON.] Native sesquicarbonate of soda, occurring in solution or as a deposit (mixed with other substances) in various parts of the world.

1684 LEIGH in Phil. Trans. XIV. 610 The Natron... is an Alkali Salt perforated like a Sponge, and of a lixivial tast. 1706 PHILLIPS (ed. Kersey), Anatron or Natron, a kind of Salt drawn from the Water of the River Nile in Egypt. 1760 Gentl. Mag. XXX. 315 The saltiness of the dew in that country... is owing to the natron, which is in plenty on the surface of the earth. 1803 Med. Jnl. IX. 514 The stomachic affections were subdued by natron. 1863 BAKER Albert N'yanza i. (1866) I. 64 Found quantities of natron on the marshy ground bordering the river. 1872 — Nile Trib. xvii. 304 The water is impregnated with natron.

b. attrib. in natron lake, a lake from which natron is obtained.

1821 R. JAMESON Man. Min. 6 It abounds... in the famous natron lakes in Northern Africa. 1876 HARLEY Mat. Med. (ed. 6) 149 The natron lakes of Egypt were known to the ancients.

natrophilite (nə'trɒfɪlaɪt). Chem. [f. NATRIUM + Gr. φίλος friendly + -ITE.] A yellow resinous phosphate of manganese and sodium.

1890 BRUSH & DANA in Amer. Jnl. Sci. Ser. III. XXXIX. 204 Another new member of the triphylite group, a sodiummanganese phosphate, which we shall call natrophilite. Ibid. 205-6.

h. natural deduction: in Logic, the name given to a method devised separately in 1934 by G. Gentzen (1935 Math. Zeitschrift XXXIX) and S. Jaśkowski (1934 Studia Logica I) whereby formal proofs are obtained solely by the application of rules of inference without appeal to axioms.

1950 W. V. QUINE Methods of Logic (1952) §28. 166 The method set forth in the present pages is of a type known as natural deduction, and stems, in its broadest outlines, from Gentzen and Jaśkowski (1934). 1954 I. M. COPPI Symbolic Logic iv. 119 The methods of proof as far assembled (techniques for 'Natural Deduction', as they are sometimes called) permit the demonstration of all logically true propositions constructed out of truth-functional connectives and the quantification of individual variables. 1966 Amer. Philos. Q. III. 27 (title) Natural deduction rules for obligation. 1969 Aristotelian Soc. Suppl. Vol. XLIII. 53 The expression 'natural deduction' was introduced, I surmise, under the influence partly of the name bestowed on Herbrand's 'theorem of deduction' and partly of the French expression 'la déduction naturelle'. 1973 B. A. BRODY Logic iii. 103 Two... methods for showing that inferences are valid. The first, the natural deduction technique, starts from the results of this section.

c. natural right(s), in Western political philosophy, esp. since the 18th century, doctrines derived from concepts of the nature of man and the relationship of the individual to the state whereby certain rights are formulated (see quotes.) which the state ought to safeguard.

1689 tr. B. de Spinoza's Treat. Theol. Pol. xvi. 343 In Democratical Government, no man so transfers his own Natural Right to another, as for ever after to be excluded from consultation, but only transfers it upon the major part of the Society, of which he still makes one. 1791 T. PAINE Rights of Man 111 The end of all political associations, is, the preservation of the natural and imprescriptible rights of man; and these rights are liberty, property, security, and resistance of oppression. Ibid., The exercise of the natural rights of every man, has no other limits than those which are necessary to secure to every other man the free exercise of the same rights. 1796 Encycl. Brit. XVI. 244/1 Natural rights are those which a man has to his life, limbs, and liberty; to the produce of his personal labour; to the use, in common with others, of air, light, and water, &c. 1925 A. D. LINDSAY Karl Marx's Capital iii. 60 The labour theory of value is... like all theories of natural right, a revolutionary doctrine. Ibid. 61 Theories of natural right are always to this extent misleading—that they are statements of ideals which pretend to be statements of fact. 1939 E. BENEŠ Democracy i. 7 The French Revolution became by the declaration of human rights the expression of the whole school of philosophy which for centuries fought for the recognition of the so-called 'natural rights'—that is, for the innate rights of man, the equality of human beings. 1955 Philos. Rev. LXIV. 175, I shall advance the thesis that if there are any moral rights at all, it follows that there is at least one natural right, the equal right of all men to be free. 1971 A. R. Sci.* v. 14 The crux of the Naturopathic contention is that the suppression of every acute malady—after the Allopathic procedure—lays the foundation for another acute malady. 1937 Evening News 20 Jan. 9/1, I suppose that everybody will admit that we owe the present day benefits of fasting to the teaching of naturopaths. 1960 Spectator 28 Oct. 647 A number of naturopathic practitioners. 1973 Times 8 May 18/8 The conference of the British Naturopathic and Osteopathic Association. 1973 Nation Rev. (Melbourne) 31 Aug.-6 Sept. 1434/5, I do take exception to those people who advocate cures for homosexuality as chiropractor and naturopath.

|| Naturphilosophie (na'tu:ɾfɪlɒsəfi:). Also natur-philosophie. [G., f. natur nature + philosophie philosophy.] The name given to the theory put forward, esp. by Schelling (1775-1854) and other German philosophers, that there is an eternal and unchanging law of nature, proceeding from the Absolute, from which all laws governing natural phenomena and forces derive. Hence na'turphilosoph, -er, one who adheres to the theory of Naturphilosophie.

1817 COLERIDGE Biogr. Lit. I. ix. 148 In Schelling's 'Natur-Philosophie',...I first found a genial coincidence with much that I had toiled out for myself. a1834 — in K. WALLACE tr. Hegel's Logic (ed. 2) 430 The formalism of Naturphilosophie may teach e.g. that understanding is electricity. 1920 A. N. WHITEHEAD Concept of Nature ii. 47 A Natur-philosoph raises nature to independence, and makes it construct itself, and he never feels, therefore, the necessity of opposing nature as constructed (i.e. as experience) to real nature, or of correcting the one by means of the other. 1946 M. R. COHEN Pref. to Logic vi. 102 Since the failure of the romantic Naturphilosophie to derive infallible knowledge of nature a priori,...it has become generally evident that all our factual knowledge...is only probable. 1957 G. S. CARTER 100 Yrs. Evolution ii. 16 The German abstract or transcendental zoology, usually called Natur-philosophie...owed its origin to Goethe more than to any other biologist. Ibid. vi. 70 The theories of the natur-philosophers might have done this. 1965 Listener 3 June 833/1 One of the important influences which shaped the intellectual milieu of early Victorian England was German Naturphilosophie. 1974 Sunday Times (Colour Suppl.) 9 June 52/4 In Germany naturphilosophie often coincided with extreme nationalism.

Neanderthal (nɪˈændəˌtɑ:l), Also Neandertal. The name of a valley near Düsseldorf in western Germany, used attrib. in Neanderthal man, skull, etc., to designate the Middle Palæolithic fossil hominid Homo neanderthalensis, first identified from a skull found there in 1856, and also known from other remains in Europe, Africa, and Asia. Also absol., fig. (with reference to appearance), and as adj.
1861 G. BUSK tr. D. Schaaffhausen in Nat. Hist. Rev. Apr. 167 The considerations which have led us to compare the Neanderthal cranium with those of the most ancient races are still further confirmed by the discovery. . . of skulls exhibiting a yet closer correspondence with it. 1863 T. H. HUXLEY Evidence Man's Place in Nature iii. 142 The posterior lobe of the brain of the Neanderthal man must have been as much flattened as I suspected it to be. In truth, the Neanderthal cranium has most extraordinary characters. 1864 Q. J. Sci. I. 88 It is my intention to confine myself to the consideration of the Neanderthal fossil with reference to its place in Nature. Ibid. 90 The Neanderthal skull is of an elongated oval form. 1899 A. near (niə(r)), *adv.*² (and prep.) Forms: 2-6 ner, 4-7 nere, neer(e); north. and Sc. neir, (5 neyre, 7 neire); 6 nyer, 7 nier; 6-7 neare, 6- near. [a. ON. nær (Da. nær, Sw. när), properly the comparative of ná = OE. néah NIGH, but also used as a positive: cf. NAR adv.

The transition from the comparative to the positive sense in ON. probably originated in such expressions as koma or ganga nær 'to come or go nearer' (to a person or place), which readily passes into the sense of going absolutely 'close' or 'near'. The positive sense having thus attached itself to the word, nær could be employed with other verbs than those of motion, as standa or vera (to be). A similar development has taken place in MDu. naer near (whence mod. Du. naar, to, for, after, etc.). Even in English some difference is felt in the sense of near according as it goes with a verb of motion or not, and in predicative use after the verb to be (expressed or implied) the adverbial sense tends to pass into a purely adjectival one.

ON. near (like OE. near) might be used either absolutely or governing a noun in the dative case. Both usages were adopted in ME., and a further construction introduced by the use of to before the noun. When the noun directly depends on near, this acquires practically the force of a preposition, but differs from real prepositions in having comparative and superlative forms.]

I. Used absolutely (without to or dependent sb.).

Biol. Chem.* CCXXXVI. 864 (heading) Frequencies of nearest neighbor base sequences in deoxyribonucleic acid. 1972 Computers & Humanities VII. 40 The statistical analysis of pattern in such horizontal distributions is another area to which some attention is now being given, with nearest-neighbour analysis the most frequently adopted method.

e. near money, a deposit, bond, etc., that can easily be converted into ready money.

1948 G. CROWTHER Outl. Money (rev. ed.) ii. 65 Bank deposits, in those circumstances, might be something very close to money, but still not quite within the definition. They would be 'near-money'. Ibid. 66 We have already come across another example of 'near-money' in the form of the Bill of Exchange. 1968 Economist 23 Nov. 83/1 Ottawa itself is relying on a $2 billion 'near-money' savings bond issue at 6½ per cent to meet its current excessive needs.

3. Astron. An indistinct cloud-like cluster of distant stars, or a luminous patch of supposed gaseous or stellar matter lying beyond the limits of the solar system. In mod. use the term is applied to (a) a cloud of gas or dust situated within the interstellar space of a galaxy (usu. our own) and appearing as either a bright or a dark cloud (according to whether or not there are stars present to make it luminous); (b) a galaxy (usu. one other than our own).

DINGLE Mod. Astrophysics xvi. 302 A dark nebula is really dark, and not merely too faint for its light to be seen on account of its great distance from us. 1930 R. H. BAKER Astron. xi. 465 Frequently a 'nebula' turned out to be a star-cluster, thereby encouraging the opinion, in former times, that all nebulae are really clusters of stars. Ibid., Modern investigations have shown that nebulae, as distinguished from ordinary star-clusters, fall into two classes having entirely different characteristics, namely, the galactic nebulae and the extra-galactic nebulae. 1963 B. & J. LOVELL Discovering Universe ix. 114 The Milky Way system is typical of many extra-galactic spiral nebulae, and very much akin to M31 in Andromeda. 1968 P. MOORE Sky at Night II. xxxii. 232 With other nebulae, there are no convenient stars—and so the nebulae cannot be seen directly, but betray themselves because they blot out the light of the stars beyond... Mention should also be made of the nebulae which shine by pure reflection. Such is the nebula in the Pleiades. Ibid. 235 The old term of 'spiral nebula' has become obsolete, to be replaced by 'spiral galaxy'; a proper nebula is gaseous, and belongs to the Galaxy in which we live. 1971 D. W. SCIAMA Mod. Cosmol. iii. 39 In this way he [sc. E. P. Hubble] obtained a distance of 800,000 light-years for the Andromeda nebula, and similar values for other spiral nebulae. Now that these nebulae are well established as stellar systems outside our own, we shall henceforth call them galaxies. 1974 F. W. COLE Fund. Astron. xiii. 358/1 The Orion nebula is 1600 LY distant and about 30 LY in diameter. In our galaxy, other emission nebulae of the same type are about the same size. Vastly larger emission nebulae are known outside our galaxy; an excellent example is in M33, a spiral galaxy in Triangulum.

Both in form and gender, however, the word exhibits curious variations in OE. The forms niēd, nýd, néd would be normal as representatives of a fem. i-stem, but in cases where the gender can be distinguished they usually appear as neuters. A form without umlaut also occurs (néad: cf. the ON. nauð), which appears to have been feminine. The very common form néod, which is distinctly fem., is difficult to account for; if not an independent ablaut-variant, its vowel has probably been influenced by the frequent word néod desire, earnestness, pleasure, etc.]

Néel ('neɪl). The name of Louis Eugène Félix Néel (b. 1904), French physicist, used attrib. to designate certain phenomena connected with his work on magnetism, as Néel point or temperature, the transition temperature for an antiferromagnetic or ferrimagnetic substance, above which it is paramagnetic (analogous to the Curie point for ferromagnetics); Néel spike, a sharply pointed triangular domain extending from a small hole or inclusion in a magnetic substance diagonally in relation to the field direction in the surrounding area; Néel wall, a type of domain boundary that Néel predicted should occur in thin layers of magnetic material, in which the rotation of the field direction in passing from one side of the wall to the other occurs in the plane of the film.

Physics* XXI. 572/2 Measurement of the ratio of length to width of the Néel domains offers a possible experimental method for determining . . the surface energy density of a Bloch wall. 1951 Jrnl. de Physique et le Radium XII. 311 (heading) Néel 'spikes' around holes in a crystal surface. 1952 Physica XVIII. 714 In warming the salt through the region of the Néel temperature a continuous but rapid change occurs from a state in which the spins of the Cu⁺⁺ ions are highly ordered to a state of comparative disorder. 1960 *Jrnl. SMART in Rado & Suhl Magnetism III. ii. 66 The Néel point . . of a ferrimagnet or an antiferromagnet can be determined in a number of different ways, of which magnetic susceptibility is probably the most common and specific heat measurements one of the most accurate. 1966 CAREY & ISAAC Magn. Domains ii. 24 Néel walls become energetically more favourable than Bloch walls for thin films. Ibid. 28 In films of thickness less than about 200 Å no cross-tie walls occur but normal Néel walls are observed. Ibid. viii. 142 Consideration of the magnetostatic energy associated with large inclusions in iron crystals led Néel to predict the existence of closure domains . . now termed Néel spikes. 1973 Physical Rev. B. b. A mould for, or reverse impression of, a piece of sculpture or the like. Cf. next, sense II a.

1911 A. TOFT Modelling & Sculpture x. 195 The mould or negative is next coated with a preparation of plumbago or black-lead, and placed in a bath where the metal is deposited into it. 1947 J. C. RICH Materials & Methods Sculpture i. 18 The 'negative' is the term applied to the hollow containing form or mold into which the positive, temporarily plastic casting material is poured. Ibid. v. 95 If a plaster negative is fashioned over an earth-clay model, the original should not be too dry. 1961 J. CHALLINOR Dict. Geol. 134/1 Negative, a fossil in the form of an impression. 1973 D. COWLEY Working with Clay & Plaster 81 (caption) Plaster negative taken from a positive plaster cast.

c. A disc similar to a gramophone record but having ridges in place of grooves.

1918 H. SEYMOUR Reproduction of Sound 17 In 1900 he applied the vacuous deposit system in electrolysis to the production of record negatives. 1931 A. NADELL Projecting Sound Pict. xiv. 240 This metal plate . . . constitutes a 'negative' with which any number of 'positive' records may be stamped. 1974 Encycl. Brit. Macropædia XVII. 52/1 Berliner did not, however, contemplate using this etched master as the record to be played; rather, a negative was made from the master by electroforming.

9. The negative plate or metal in a voltaic battery.

1884 KNIGHT Dict. Mech. Suppl. 368 Negative depolarized by jet of steam. Ibid. 369 Negative rotated by a crank.

negative ('negətiv), a. Also 5 -yff, 6 -yfe, -yve. [ad. F. negatif, -ive, (13th c.), or late L. negativus: see NEGATE v. and -IVE.]

c 1400 Beryn 2068 And he had mysseyd onys, or els I-seyd nay, . . . then he had been negatyff. Ibid. 2066 To 3ew that were negatyff, the lawe wold graunte anoon. 1611 SHAKS. Wint. T. I. ii. 274 If thou wilt confesse, or else be impudently negative, To haue nor Eyes nor Eares nor Thought. 1736 CHANDLER Hist. Persec. 208 Negative hereticks are such, who being . . . convicted of some heresy before an Inquisitor, yet will not confess it.

2. a. Expressing, conveying, or implying negation or denial. negative flag (see quots.).

1509 HAWES Past. Pleas. xxxiv. (Percy Soc.) 110 By the comyn wytte to be affirmatyve Or by decernynge to be negatyve. 1571 GOLDING Calvin on Ps. vii. 5 So must the negatyve woord (not) bee supplied. 1579 FULKE Heskins' Parl. 89 Hee did . . . beate doune the proclaymers negative argumentes. 1649 Nicholas Papers (Camden) I. 146 There are two negative conclusions which seeme necessary. 1670 CLARENDON Dial. Tracts (1727) 333, I long to see a good negative Catechism of religion. 1791 BURKE App. Whigs Wks. VI. 186 Their negative declaration obliges me to have recourse to the books which contain positive doctrines. 1803 J. MARSHALL Const. Opin. (1839) 22 Affirmative words are often . . . negative of other objects than those affirmed. 1850 GROTE Greece II. lxviii. (1862) VI. 138 It is by Plato that the negative and indirect vein of Sokratēs has been worked out. 1891 LD. COLERIDGE in Law Times Rep. LXV. 581/1 'The negative statement that the 6 Geo. 4, c. 129, is not now on this subject the governing statute. 1909 Daily Chron. 18 Aug. 7/5 If it is hoisted superior to the flag called the Negative flag, it signifies that the man is drowned. 1916 'TAFFRAIL' Carry On! 24 If the 'Negative flag', white with five black crosses, had been displayed, he would have known that the worst had happened, and that a life had been lost. 1948 R. DE KERCHOVE Internat. Maritime Dict. 487/1 Negative flag, a single-letter signal consisting of letter 'N' of the International Code of signals. Means 'No'.

b. spec. in Logic, of propositions, etc., or names.

1551 T. WILSON Logike (1580) 24 If one of the Propositions be particular, or negative, the conclusion is particular, or negative. 1628 T. SPENCER Logick 92 In this Chapter . . . we must handle negative contraries. 1651 HOBBS Leviath. i. iv. 16 Names, called Negative; which are notes to signifie that a word is not the name of the thing in question. 1690 LOCKE Hum. Und. II. viii. §5 We have negative Names, which stand not directly for positive Ideas, but for their Absence, such as Inspid, Silence, Nihil, etc. 1725 WATTS Logic III. i, The Foundations of all negative Conclusions. 1846 MILL Logic i. ii. §6 Negative names are employed whenever we have occasion to speak collectively of all things other than some thing or class of things. 1870 JEVONS Elem. Logic vii. 63 A negative proposition . . . asserts a difference or discrepancy.

3. a. Of commands, statutes, etc.: Prohibitory.

1526 Pilgr. Perf. (W. de W. 1531) 238b, All the commaundementes of the seconde table, that be negatyue. 1596 BACON Max. & Use Com. Law II. (1635) 14 But the Statute of Mag. Char. Cap. II. 5 is negative against it. a 1711 KEN Divine Love Wks. (1838) 261 Keep my love watchful . . . that in thy negative precepts I may continually resist evil. 1765 BLACKSTONE Comm. I. i. 137 A few negative statutes, whereby abuses, perversions, or delays of justice . . . are restrained.

b. Expressing refusal to do something; refusing consent to a proposal or motion.

1535 STEWART Cron. Scot. II. 592 Malcolme . . . Wald noch consent, . . . And gaif to him an anser negatyue. 1576 FLEMING Panopl. Epist. 194 They . . . yealded to his request, notwithstanding my negatyue voyce. 1621 T. WILLIAMSON tr. Goulart's Wise Vieillard 56 Hee gaue his negatyue voyce and crossed the treatie of a dishonourable peace. 1681 H. NEVILLE Plato Rediv. 125 But for this point of the Negative Vote, it is possible [etc.].

c. Able to impose a veto. Now rare.

1648-9 Eikon Bas. vi. (1662) 20 Denying me any power of a Negative voice as King. 1712 ADDISON Spect. No. 287 ¶ 5, I do not find that the Consuls had ever a Negative Voice in the passing of a Law. 1775 DE LOLME Eng. Const. II. xvii. (1784) 263 To make use, even once, of its negative voice.

d. quasi-adv. Negatively, on the negative side. 1868 MAIDMENT Bk. Sc. Pasquils 238 This cherub . . . swore negative . . . much to the astonishment of Fountainhall. 1897 Daily News 7 May 3/2 Twenty-five of the Senators voting negative are free silver advocates.

†4. Opposed (to a measure). Obs. rare.

1642 SIR E. DERING Sp. on Relig. xvi. 71, I am so fixed negative. Ibid. 88 That I may as negative to this bill, be poasted up [etc.].

II. 5. Characterized by the absence, instead of the presence, of distinguishing features; devoid of, or lacking in, distinctly positive attributes.

In very common use in the 19th century.

1565 T. STAPLETON Fortr. Faith 103*, I will not labour to recite euery particular of their negative religion. 1642 in Clarendon Hist. Reb. v. §49 His discharge was but negative. 1647 CLARENDON ibid. II. §25 A man who . . . was thought to be made choice of only for his negative qualities. 1662 STILLINGFEL. Orig. Sacra III. i. §5 How ever positive we apprehend it, yet we always apprehend it in a negative way. 1702 Eng. Theophrastus 249 No better than a negative traitor to his country. 1788 PRIESTLEY in Phil. Trans. LXXXIX. 15 The positive evidence of actually finding a substance is always more conclusive than the negative one, of not finding it. 1801 FUSSELL in Lect. Paint. II. (1848) 383 He contented himself with a negative colour. 1838 W. BELL Dict. Law Scot. 769 The negative prescription . . . not only presumes the debt to have been extinguished [etc.]. 1873 SPENCER Stud. Sociol. x. 259 These negative causes of dissatisfaction are joined with the positive cause indicated.

6. a. In Algebra, denoting quantities which are to be subtracted from other quantities, or which are taken as indicating a subtraction from zero; marked by the sign —.

1673 KERSEY Algebra I. 269 A negative Root (which Cartesius calls a false Root) expressteth a Quantity whose Denomination is opposite to an affirmative, as — 5 or — 20. 1727-38 CHAMBERS Cycl. s.v. Quantity, Negative or priuative quantities are those less than nothing. 1753 Ibid., Supp. s.v., Negative powers arise from the division of any power of a quantity, by a greater power of the same quantity. 1768 HORSEFALL in Phil. Trans. LVIII. 101, $d + 9 = 1$ cannot be; because d would be negative. 1798 HUTTON Course Math. (1807) II. 282 The fluxion of any negative integer power of a variable quantity. 1842 GWILT Archit. §611 We immediately perceive that those powers are negative whose exponents are odd numbers. 1885 WATSON & BURBURY Math. The. Electr. & Magn. I. 25 Every possible spherical harmonic function of negative integral degree.

b. negative sign, the sign — used to mark a negative quantity. Also applied to a sign used in the Sanskrit alphabet (see quot. 1851).

1704 J. HARRIS Lex. Techn. I, Negative Quantities in Algebra, are such as have before them the Negative Sign. 1743 EMERSON Fluxions 164 The negative Sign only shews that the Curvature increases. 1823 MITCHELL Dict. Math. & Phys. Sci., Negative index, of a logarithm, are those which are affected with a negative sign. 1851 Proc. Philol. Soc. V. 86 When the word closes with a consonant, there is a peculiar negative sign to be affixed to the consonant to show that no vowel follows.

7. a. Applied to that form of electricity which is produced by friction upon resin, wax, gutta-percha or similar substances, as distinguished from that produced by rubbed glass, which is called positive.

1755 B. MARTIN Mag. Arts & Sci. 322 What they had observed of positive and negative Electricity. 1770 PRIESTLEY in Phil. Trans. LX. 194, I could not find that either positive or negative electricity was communicated to the insulated tube. 1860 G. PRESCOTT Electr. Electr. 11 The one of the fluids we call positive, or vitreous electricity; the other, negative, or resinous. 1873 F. JENKIN Electr. & Magn. i. §8 It is found invariably that equal quantities of positive and negative electricity are produced.

transf. 1755 B. MARTIN Mag. Arts & Sci. 303 This positive and negative Doctrine of Electricity.

b. Characterized by the presence or production of negative electricity. negative booster, a booster used to lower the potential of the station end of a negative feeder to below earth potential; negative feeder, a wire which connects the rails forming the negative connection for an electric traction vehicle to the bus-bars at a substation.

1799 Med. Jnrl. I. 55 Electricity... produces this effect particularly by what is called the negative bath. 1837 WHEWELL Hist. Induct. Sci. (1857) III. 137 An alkali was separated on the negative plates. 1860 G. PRESCOTT Electr. Electr. 22 These extremities are termed poles; the former the negative, and the latter the positive pole of the pile. 1873 F. JENKIN Electr. & Magn. xxii. §3 These currents may be either positive or negative; that is to say, they may be sent from the copper or zinc pole of the battery. 1890 Proc. R. Soc. XLVII. 543 How far the positive charges in the polarising layer and the negative charges projected away from the kathode are alone sufficient to account for the whole current, cannot be decided at present. 1902 Negative electron [see ELECTRON² 1a]. 1909 P. DAWSON Electr. Traction on Railways xv. 475 The negative booster consists simply of a rotating machine driven at a constant speed by an independent motor. Ibid. 476 The booster is usually designed so that the E.M.F. produced in the armature is sufficient to cancel out the loss of voltage in the negative feeder. 1932 R. RAWLINSON in E. Molloy Pract. Electr. Engin. V. 1598/2 The negative booster is so connected as to reduce the station end of the negative feeder to below earth potential. 1933 Discovery Mar. 69/1 The negative electron, the massless unit charge of electricity, was isolated first in the Cavendish Laboratory by Sir J. J. Thomson in 1897. 1956 Ann. Reg. 1955 402 The bevatron, at Berkeley, made possible the discovery of a new atomic particle—the negative proton. 1974 Encycl. Brit. Macropædia VI. 666/1 The magnitude of the negative charge e was obviously of basic importance and a scale parameter for the whole of atomic physics.

c. Chemically opposed to something.

1882 Rep. to Ho. Repr. Prec. Met. U.S. 611 Iron is also negative to gold under this condition.

d. negative glow, the luminous region in a discharge tube between the Crookes dark space and the Faraday dark space.

1890 Proc. R. Soc. XLVII. 557 This is the dark interval separating the positive part of the discharge from the negative glow. 1939 H. J. REICH Theory & Applic. Electron Tubes xi. 369 The brightness of the negative glow decreases toward the anode, and the glow gradually merges into another relatively dark region, the Faraday dark space. 1971 J. F. WAYMOUTH Electr. Discharge Lamps iv. 71 In the negative glow, the rate of ion production required to supply a cathode ion current of 10% of the total may be many times what it is in the positive column.

8. a. Reckoned in an opposite direction to the positive; falling on the other side of the point from which the positive is measured.

1802–12 BENTHAM Ration. Judic. Evid. (1827) IV. 61 Separated from argument, the value of such opinion will not simply be nothing, but negative. 1817 COLERIDGE Biog. Lit. (Bohn) 141 The subtraction will be the same, whether we call the capital negative debt, or the debt negative capital. 1831 BREWSTER Optics xvii. 147 The axis is called... in the second case a negative axis of double refraction. c 1865 J. WYLDE in Circ. Sci. I. 79/2 The optic axes are respectively positive and negative when the extraordinary ray is bent either to or from the geometrical axis of the crystal. 1893 SIR R. BALL Story of Sun 170 If the Sun's axis lie to the right... then the position angle is regarded as negative.

b. Proceeding or tending in an opposite direction to that regarded as positive.

1831 BREWSTER Optics xxv. 215 The double refraction is negative in relation to the axes to which the doubly refracted ray is perpendicular. 1875 BENNETT & DYER tr. Sachs' Bot. 677 Both positive and negative heliotropism. 1879 Cassell's Techn. Educ. IV. 313/1 Spherical aberration of a negative character.

c. Misc. special collocations: negative capability (see quot. 1817); now also used (in the light of Keats's other observations on the nature of the creative artist) for EMPATHY; negative catalysis (Chem.) = INHIBITION 3 b; negative catalyst = INHIBITOR 2 c; negative eugenics, an attempt to prevent the birth of children to persons considered unfit to be parents; cf. DYSGENIC a.; negative feedback, feedback that tends to diminish or counteract the process giving rise to it; negative g or G, (a force resulting from) the deceleration of a vehicle, esp. an aircraft or spacecraft; negative growth, the cessation or reversal of growth, esp. in lower animals, in response to starvation or other unfavourable conditions; negative income tax, a scheme whereby low-paid workers receive a government subsidy to raise their pay to subsistence level; also negative tax; negative (phase) sequence (Electr. Engin.), a three-phase system in which the voltages or currents in each phase reach their maxima in the opposite order (i.e. red—blue—yellow) from the positive sequence; negative resistance, (the property of) a device in which an increase in the potential difference between its terminals causes a drop in the current flowing through it; negative transfer, habits or methods learned for one task which interfere with or transfer negatively to the learning of a subsequent task; cf. TRANSFER sb. 3, POSITIVE a. 8; negative transference, the transfer or imputing to a doctor of feelings of hostility, or of resistance and constraint, that may be aroused in the patient through fear of giving expression to his repressed emotions; also, the transferring to a relationship of negative emotions which persist from a previous relationship or experience; cf. TRANSFERENCE 1, POSITIVE a. 8.

1817 KEATS Let. c 21 Dec. (1958) I. 193, I had not a dispute but a disquisition, with Dilke, on various subjects; several things dovetailed in my mind, & at once it struck me, what quality went to form a Man of Achievement especially in Literature & which Shakespeare possessed so enormously—I mean Negative Capability, that is when man is capable of being in uncertainties, Mysteries, doubts without any irritable reaching after fact & reason—Coleridge, for instance, would let go by a fine isolated verisimilitude caught from the Penetrarium of mystery, from being incapable of remaining content with half knowledge. 1964 S. BARNET et al. Dict. Literary Terms 97 Negative capability is sometimes identified with empathy, sometimes with objectivity. 1975 Studies in Eng. Lit.: Eng. Number (Tokyo) 167 The poem is representative of the poet [sc. Wallace Stevens] in that it is a poem of 'Negative Capability', his basic mental attitude. 1904 Jnrl. Chem. Soc. LXXXVI. ii. 113 The simultaneous effect of a positive catalyst (copper sulphate) and a negative catalyst (mannitol or stannic chloride) has been studied, and the experiments support the view that negative catalysis consists in a counteracting of the effect of positive catalysis. 1940 GLASTONE Text-bk. Physical Chem. xiii. 1121 Negative catalysis in gas reactions is probably also to be ascribed to the breaking of reaction chains. 1966 McGraw-Hill Encycl. Sci. & Technol. II. 546/2 Such substances, formerly called negative catalysts, are now known to be consumed in the process... Accordingly such materials are not true catalysts. 1968 M. M. JONES Ligand Reactivity & Catalysis i. 10 Negative catalysis resulting from the removal of catalytically active metals by a chelating agent, for example, the inhibition of hemoglobin by carbon monoxide. 1908 F. GALTON in Nature 22 Oct. 645/2 Little or nothing will be said relating to what has been well termed by Dr. Saleeby 'negative' eugenics, namely, . . . hindering the marriages and the production of offspring by the exceptionally unfit. 1914 C. W. SALEEBY Progress Eugenics i. 20 It is no less necessary to discourage parenthood among defective individuals, and to this, with Galton's approval, I gave the name of negative eugenics, calling his own scheme positive eugenics. 1931 J. S. HUXLEY What dare I Think? iii. 93 Negative eugenics is concerned with preventing degeneration. 1974 J. R. BAKER Race iv. 57 He [sc. Madison Grant] was harsh in his schemes for negative eugenics... He favoured the forcible sterilization of criminals, diseased and insane persons, and 'worthless race-types', and the enactment of laws against race-mixture. 1934 H. S. BLACK in Bell Syst. Techn. Jnrl. XIII. 5, 1/(1-μβ) will be used as a quantitative measure of the effect of feedback and the feedback referred to as positive feedback or negative feedback according as the absolute value of 1/(1-μβ) is greater or less than unity. negativism ('negətviz(ə)m). [f. as prec. + -ISM.]

1. The doctrines of a negationist; doctrine characterized by denial.

1824 in Mem. F. Perthes (1856) II. xx. 295 The superlative of positivism is a bedlamite; of negativism a cipher. 1865 Athenæum No. 1949. 312/3 The negativism which Comte calls positivism. 1872 MORLEY Voltaire 208 The inundation of Europe by the literature of negativism and repudiation.

2. Psychol. Resistance to attempts to impose a change of activity or posture, characteristic of various neuropsychiatric disorders.

1892 D. H. TUKE Dict. Psychol. Med. II. 724/2 As soon as we attempt to produce passive movements of any part of the patient's body, we meet almost always with a powerful resistance; the groups of muscles antagonistic to the attempted movement commence to contract energetically — this has been termed the symptom of negativism. 1902 A. R. DEFENDORF Clin. Psychiatry 63 Negativism consists in the reaction to stimuli which are [sic] the reverse of the normal reaction. 1916 A. A. BRILL tr. Freud's Wit & its Relation to Unconscious III. vi. 278 This... behavior of antagonistic relationships is probably not without value for the understanding of the symptom of negativism in neurotics and in the insane. 1947 G. MURPHY Personality II. ix. 218 Negativism appears... at any period in which the external interference is insufficient to redirect behavior but is sufficient to necessitate an extra effort in continuing one's own activities. 1969 Sci. Jml. June 72/2 The patient continued to maintain his negativism and said 'I don't know'. 1971 Publishers' Weekly 30 Aug. 209/3 Solutions to the problems of fear, tension, guilt, loneliness, and negativism.

'negativist. [-IST.] = NEGATIONIST. Also attrib. or as adj.

1873 L. STEPHEN Ess. Freethinking 190 A positivist, or a negativist, or a materialist. 1876 M. COLLINS Th. in Garden (1880) I. 271 The atheists and negativists of the day fondly fancy... they would produce a perfect civilisation. 1927 J. S. HUXLEY Relig. without Revelation i. 52 They have... rejected the whole ground of divinity... and so been forced into a negativist attitude, compelled to satisfy their natural and normal religious needs in other ways and other spheres. 1958 W. STARK Sociol. of Knowl. 317 The main representatives of this doctrine which... we wish to label the negativist theory, are... Nietzsche and... Pareto.

negativistic (ˌnegətiˈvistik), a. [f. NEGATIV(ISM) + -ISTIC.] Of, pertaining to, or characterized by negativism.

1902 A. R. DEFENDORF Clin. Psychiatry 64 The negativistic patient shows great equanimity, he seldom defends himself... but merely resists. 1916 C. E. LONG tr. Jung's Coll. Papers Analytical Psychol. vi. 200 Disposing causes of negativistic phenomena are: the ambitendency by which every impulse is accompanied by its opposite. 1930 E. & F. JENSEN tr. Adler's Educ. Children xii. 213 If an adolescent shows himself very negativistic in regard to the other sex, we will find, if we trace back his life, that he was probably a fighting child. 1957 M. MILLAR Soft Talkers 186, I do hope your negativistic attitude towards me personally won't interfere with your better judgement. 1970 H. MCLEAVE Question of Negligence (1973) x. 84 The negativistic attitude of Fairchild, the ministry sneak with the almost psychotic habit of saying no to everything.

negativity (ˌnegəˈtɪvɪti). [f. as NEGATIVE a. + -ITY.] The fact or quality of being negative.

1854 GEO. ELIDT tr. Feuerbach's Essence Christianity ii. 42 It is true that thus, negativity, as the speculative philosophers express themselves — nothing is the cause of the world. 1860 in WORCESTER (citing Eclectic Review). 1865 GROTE Plato I. i. 31 The negativity or destructive interference of the universal process. 1882 Nature 12 Jan. 258 Sudden negativity of under surface. 1899 J. CAIRD Fundam. Ideas Chr. II. ix. 13 That universal negativity or nothingness which pertains to all finite agents alike. 1953 R. LEHMANN Echoing Grove 41 Had decided to my own satisfaction what it meant, in psychological terms: not tension, not active boredom — simply negativity. 1956 D. GASCOYNE Night Thoughts 17 The Tyrant Negativity has usurped power. 1975 Times 24 Oct. 3/3 Rabies virus was not found in a man who died of the disease after intensive vaccine treatment... 'The negativity of the finding... was perhaps the light at the end of the tunnel.'

negativo-, combining form of NEGATIVE a., in negativo-affirmative, -positive.

1726 COLSON in Phil. Trans. XXXIV. 162 Common Numbers may be reduced to negativo-affirmative Numbers a great variety of Ways. 1899 Month Dec. 614 We get the idea by a negativo-positive process: or, to speak more exactly, the idea is a negativo-positive one.

negaton ('negətn). Physics. [f. NEGAT(IVE a. + -ON¹.] = NEGATRON 2.

1928 H. D. HUBBARD Explanatory Key to Periodic Chart of Atoms 20 The positive atom of electricity, the 'proton' is 1845 times heavier than the negative. (Since 'electron' is ambiguous, the term 'positon' is suggested as more explicit, and 'negaton' would avoid ambiguity as the corresponding name for the negative electron.) 1938 Encycl. Brit. Bk. of Year 404/1 The prediction of the possibility under certain conditions of the materialization of radiation quanta into a positon and a negaton. 1955 O. KLEIN in W. Pauli Niels Bohr 115 Assuming... that there are no negaton-positon interaction terms. 1955 R. D. EVANS Atomic Nucleus xviii. 569 The Sixth General Assembly of the International Union of Pure and Applied Physics (Amsterdam, July 8 to 10, 1948) unanimously recommended the use of the terms positon and negaton as a means of distinguishing between positive and negative electrons. However, common usage, as seen in the periodical literature, still tends to retain the 'r'.

negator (niˈgeɪtə(r)). [a. L. negātor, agent-n. f. negāre: see NEGATE v.]

1. One who denies; spec. a member of a sect of Russian anarchists.

1805 in Spirit Pub. Jnrls. VIII. 241 The grand inflictor and grand negator — one who in doing or denying stands nearly unmatched. 1888 Science XI. 178 One such [sect] calls itself the 'Negators', and its members keep themselves aloof from all men.

2. A word expressing negation; = NEGATIVE sb. 2.

1961 R. B. LONG Sentence & its Parts iv. 100 Not is by no means the only adjunct with negator force... Negative subjects and negative complements can serve as negators. 1966 G. N. LEECH Eng. in Advertising xviii. 159 The universal negators no, never, etc. 1973 Archivum Linguisticum IV. 14 Of these auxiliaries, only one negator /no/ can occur independently. 1974 L. TODD Pidgins & Creoles iii. 34 In the 1830 examples the negator occurs in the same position as in the pidgins and creoles we have examined.

3. See NEGATER.

negatory ('negətəri), a. Also 6 7 -orie. [ad. F. négatoire or late L. negātōri-us: see NEGATE v. and -ORY.] Of the nature of negation.

1580 HOLLYBAND Treas. Fr. Tong. Negatoire, vne action negatoire, a negatorie action. 1611 COTGR., Negatoire, negatorie, infictorie, negatue, denying. negentropy (nɛ'gɛntɹəpi). [f. NEG(ATIVE a. + ENTROPY.)] Negative entropy, as a measure of order or information.
1950 L. BRILLOUIN in Amer. Scientist XXXVIII. 594/1 Every observation in the laboratory.. is made at the expense of a certain amount of negative entropy (abbreviation: negentropy), taken away from the surroundings. 1956 — Sci. & Information Theory p. xii, We prove that information must be considered as a negative term in the entropy of a system; in short, information is negentropy. Ibid. ix. 117 An isolated system contains negentropy if it reveals a possibility for doing mechanical or electrical work. 1958 Archivum Linguisticum X. 137 The calculation of redundancy, by the method taken over from information theory, requires the three terms 'negentropy', 'relative negentropy' and redundancy. 1966 S. BEER Decision & Control ix. 188 Hence the energy transferred through the system is exactly balanced by the information flowing the opposite way; to speak of a change in entropy is ipso facto to speak of an equivalent change in negentropy. 1970 H. C. SHANDS Semiotic Approaches to Psychiatry xxiii. 386 Knowing systems lose information as physical systems gain entropy. The continuous input of 'negentropy'.. is required to maintain balance in either context. 1971 Sci. Amer. Sept. 183/2 Taking commonly accepted average values for the temperatures of the sun and the earth, the 1.6 × 10¹⁵ megawatt-hours of energy radiated to outer space carries with it the capability for an entropy decrease, or 'negentropy flux', of 3.2 × 10²² joules per degree K. per year, or 10³⁸ bits per second.

c. Math. (i) The set of points whose distance from a given point is less than, or is less than or equal to, some non-zero, usu. small, value (see also quot. 1921).

1891 G. L. CATHCART tr. Harnack's Introd. Study Elem. Differential & Integral Calculus I. v. 26 We have attained the conception of the Region or Neighbourhood of a point. By it we mean an arbitrarily small but still always finite interval at both sides of the value x. 1921 H. S. CARSLAW Introd. Theory Fourier's Series & Integrals (ed. 2) iii. 52 Sometimes the neighbourhood is meant to include the point x = a itself. In this case it is defined by $|x - a| \leq h$. 1939 M. H. A. NEWMAN Elem. Topology of Plane Sets of Points ii. 20 If a is a point of a space with the metric ρ , and ϵ any positive number, the set of all points, x, satisfying $\rho(x, a) < \epsilon$ is called a spherical neighbourhood, and more particularly an ϵ -neighbourhood of a. 1956 E. M. PATTERSON Topology ii. 22 A convenient way of describing continuity is to introduce the idea of neighbourhood. . . The set of points whose coordinates x satisfy $|x - x_0| < \epsilon$ is called the ϵ -neighbourhood of x_0 ; it consists of all points whose distance from x_0 is less than ϵ . 1971 M. GEMIGNANI Introd. Real Analysis iii. 32 We denote the p-neighborhood of a by $N(a, p)$. (Thus, $N(a, p)$ consists of all real numbers within distance p of a.) Ibid., Not only is every p-neighborhood an open interval, but every open interval is a p-neighborhood.

(ii) Any open set containing a given point or non-empty set; also, any set containing such an open set.

1934 C. C. KRIEGER tr. Sierpiński's Introd. Gen. Topology ii. 33 We shall understand by a neighbourhood of an element a any open set containing a. 1946 E. LEHMER tr. Pontrjagin's Topological Groups ii. 28 We shall give a method of defining a topological space by means of neighborhoods rather than by means of the operation of closure. This method is rather important and is often used as the foundation of the axiomatic treatment of the concept of a topological space. 1964 W. J. PERVIN Found. Gen. Topology iii. 45 A set is open iff it is a neighborhood of each of its points. 1967 I. ADLER New Look at Geom. xii. 372 The sets that belong to this special class of subsets in a topological space are called the open sets of the space or the neighborhoods of the space. 1968 S. MORAN tr. H. Schubert's Topology 86 An open set is a neighbourhood of every one of its subsets.

nellyl'² ('nelɪ). Also Nelly, Nellie. [A fem. Christian name, familiar form of Helen or Eleanor.] 1. Slang phr. not on your Nelly [f. rhyming slang Nelly Duff = puff = breath of life], 'not on your life' (see LIFE sb. 3 d), not likely.

1941 New Statesman 30 Aug. 218/3 Not on your Nelly Duff,...not likely. 1961 John o' London's 14 Dec. 663/1 You might have thought Mr. Samuel Bronston would have rested... Not, as they say, on your nelly. 1961 PARTRIDGE Adventuring among Words xi. 55 The trouble begins when part, usually the latter part, of the rhyming phrase is omitted, as so often it is, as in... 'not on your Nellie' for '... Nellie Duff!' = 'not on your puff' = 'not on your life' or 'most certainly not' or, less politely, 'like hell, I will!'. 1966 Times 15 May 9 That would mean me investing in another man's career. Not on your Nelly! 1968 Manch. Guardian Weekly 11 Apr. 15/1 So the Liberals dropped Acton and Dudley and concentrated on Warwick and Leamington? Not on your Nellie! 1972 Times 24 June 11/4 Ooh, no, not on your nelly, ah, fearless Francis! 1974 Globe & Mail (Toronto) 21 Sept. 35/2, I appear to be giving away most of the plot? Not on your nelly. That's only the beginning.

2. A cheap wine. Austral. slang.

1945 BAKER Austral. Lang. ix. 166 Here is a group of indigenous terms used to describe cheap wines: Africa speaks,... nelly, nelly's death [etc.]. 1952 A. G. MITCHELL in Chambers's Shorter Eng. Dict. Suppl., Nelly,... (slang) cheap wine.—phr. on the nelly, given to drinking cheap wine.

3. A weak-spirited or silly person; a homosexual. Also as quasi-adj., of feminine appearance, effeminate. Cf. NICE-NELLYISM.

1961 Sunday Times 17 Sept. 41/4 [Henry] Livings's latest work, 'Sacred Nit'... This same play, now called 'Big Soft Nellie', opens at the Oxford Playhouse. 1962 Sunday Times 29 Apr. 12/4 See, what you've got to do is get on the same wavelength as the nelliess who write in. 1967 'T. WELLS' Dead by Light of Moon (1968) iv. 45 You don't suppose it could have anything to do with that Strangler business, do you? Not that I'm a nervous Nelly type. 1970 K. PLATT Pushbutton Butterfly (1971) xvi. 182 He...puffed daintily on a long cigarette as he watched the nelliess cruising to the 'tearoom'. 1971 Psychiatry XXXIV. 187/2 Some guy came up to me and tried to take me for some money, and I knew it, and he said, 'You know, you're very nellie.' 1972 B. RODGERS Queens' Vernacular 141 Nelly...outrageously effeminate; coy, silly. 1973 C. WITTMAN in P. Brown Radical Psychol. xix. 459 There is a tendency among 'homophile' groups to deplore gays who play visible roles—the queens and the nelliess.

4. Slang phr. sitting next to (or by, with) Nelly, learning an occupation on the job by observing how others do it.

1963 J. U. FRASER Psychol. (ed. 2) xiv. 173 Observation of a skilled operator (often characterized as 'sitting next to Nellie'). 1966 Guardian 30 July 6/5 The generous 'General Trainees Scheme' which allows them to spend up to two years in different departments [of the BBC]—'sitting with Nellie', is the union phrase. 1972 Listener 10 Aug. 180/2 Journalists are the casual labourers of the intellectual world... Most training still consists of sitting next to Nellie. 1975 New Society 17 July 130/1 It was then made compulsory for doctors from overseas to 'sit by Nellie' for a month. Immigrant doctors had to complete satisfactorily a month's supervision under a consultant supervisor.

Nelson ('nɛlsən).

1. Wrestling. [App. f. a proper name.] The name of a class of holds in which one or both arms are passed under the opponent's from behind and the hand(s) applied to his neck; often with words prefixed to indicate the precise form of the hold, as double nelson, half nelson, (three-) quarter nelson. Also fig.

1889 W. ARMSTRONG Wrestling 233 Probably the most dangerous move in Lancashire and Cornwall and Devon wrestling...is what is called the 'Double Nelson'. 1893 Lippincott's Mag. Feb. 211 Among the many holds the Nelson is the most popular one with wrestlers, while the half-Nelson and half-walch-lock are next in order. 1897 [see hammer-lock (HAMMER sb. 7)]. 1900 A. E. T. WATSON Young Sportsman 644 The principal chips associated with catch as catch can wrestling are the double Nelson, the half Nelson, the heave, the Lancashire lock, the flying mare and the three-quarter Nelson. 1930 P. MACDONALD Link ix. 168 They lose Dinwater—or lose half the Nelson they've got on him, so immediately they switch on to you.

2. The name of Admiral Lord Nelson (1758–1805) used attrib. in Nelson cake (see quot. 1966); Nelson eye, a blind eye: usu. transf. and fig. (cf. EYE *sb.*¹ 5e); Nelson knife, a combined knife and fork for the use of a one-armed person; Nelson's blood, Navy rum; Nelson touch, a stroke, action, or manner characteristic of Nelson.

1909 Daily Chron. 16 Dec. 4/7 The Nelson cake consists of two thin pieces of reputed pastry, with a dark agglomeration between them of currants and sweet mush. 1966 F. SHAW et al. Lern Yerself Scouse 42 Nelson cake, a cake made from compressed, broken biscuits, pastry remnants etc. with dried fruit added: the whole soaked in syrup or burnt sugar and stacked in great piles. 1965 New Society 7 Jan. 12/3 The police made no attempt to arrest him. The State simply turns a Nelson eye to his presence. 1970 B. TURNER Another Little Death xxiv. 149 It's often possible for the police to turn a Nelson eye to misdemeanours confessed to them if they can catch a blackmailer by doing so. 1973 J. LEASOR Mandarin Gold i. 13 He makes most out of opium. Turning a Nelson eye to a trade he should be stamping out. 1902 Chambers's Jrnal. 4 Oct. 692/2 The mention of knife and fork attached to the one wrist is at first slightly puzzling; but probably the combination was what is called the 'Nelson knife', after its most distinguished user. The handle is like that of an ordinary table-knife; but the end of the blade, instead of being rounded off in the ordinary way, turns up at a right angle in its own plane, and is divided into four fork-prongs. 1974 Times 27 Nov. 17/6 A 'Nelson' knife...has a curved blade...and also teeth at the end of the blade... Nelson knives are a Government issue to those...who have lost an arm but they can also be purchased. 1925 FRASER & GIBBONS Soldier & Sailor Words 166 Nelson's Blood, rum. Old Navy, and probably derived from the old story of the sailors on board the Victory tapping the cask in which Nelson's body was brought home and drinking the spirits. 1968 Telegraph (Brisbane) 26 June 45 To preserve Nelson's body it was placed in the ship's rum ration—that's why rum is now often referred to as 'Nelson's blood'. 1970 A. DRAPER Swansong for Rare Bird ix. 76 After all the Nelson's blood he'd stashed away the night before, I was surprised to see Gorgeous already there. 1805 LD. NELSON Let. 25 Sept. in C. Oman Nelson (1947) xix. 607, I am anxious to join the fleet, for it would add to my grief if any other man was to give them the Nelson touch, which we say is warranted never to fail. Ibid. 1 Oct. 609 When I came to explain to them the 'Nelson touch', it was like an electric shock. 1898 H. NEWBOLT Island Race 26 But cared greatly to serve God and the king, And keep the Nelson touch. 1963 Economist 12 Jan. 90/1 There was a 'Nelson touch' about the bloodless occupation of Jadotville. 1968 B. TURNER Sex Trap xiii. 116 A little of the old Nelson touch is a big help in getting on with other departments. 1971 D. CORY Sunburst i. 20 Only the British, in Intelligence matters, retain the Nelson touch. What's Fedora doing in Spain?... Up goes the old telescope. Fedora? I see no Fedora.

Nelsonian (nɛl'səʊniən), a. [f. NELSON 2 + -IAN.] Belonging to the time of Nelson; pertaining to, characteristic of, or relating to Nelson. Hence Nelsoni'ana, a collection of papers, relics, etc., relating to Nelson.

1909 Daily Chron. 24 Feb. 3/5 A volume of Nelsoniana, which realised £145. 1913 *Q. nematocyst ('nemətəsɪst). Zool. [f. NEMATO- + CYST.] A small cell in the external layer of jelly-fishes and other cœlenterates, containing a thread capable of being ejected and of producing a stinging sensation; a lasso-cell or thread-cell.

1875 HUXLEY in Encycl. Brit. I. 129/1 The Actinozoa agree with the Hydrozoa... in possessing thread cells, or nematocysts. 1877 — Anat. Inv. Anim. iii. 124 In its most perfect form, a nematocyst is an elastic thick-walled sac, coiled up in the interior of which is a long filament, often serrated or provided with spines. 1888 ROLLESTON & JACKSON Anim. Life 781 The tentacles especially are provided with nematocysts of two sizes.

nematode ('nemətəʊd), a. and sb. [See NEMATO- and -ODE¹, and cf. NEMATOID.]

A. adj. 1. Of worms: Pertaining to the class Nematoda or Nematoidea, comprising those of a slender cylindrical or thread-like form (chiefly parasitic in animals or plants), such as the common round-worm, maw-worm, Guinea-worm, etc.

1861 HULME tr. Moquin-Tandon II. VII. i. 339 The embryos of the nematode worms may pass the winter in a sort of torpid state. 1876 Beneden's Anim. Parasites Introd. 26 The greater part... have not lived long in captivity, before nematode and cestode worms completely disappear.

2. [Partly attrib. uses of the sb.] Of or pertaining to, resembling or characteristic of, worms of this class.

1866 Standard 19 Feb., We now proceed to look our foe in the face—if, indeed, the nematode nuisance possesses any face. 1889 GEDDES & THOMSON Evol. Sex 17 They become parasitic, and lose both activity and nematode form. 1897 Albutt's Syst. Med. II. 1032 An embryo of the usual nematode character.

B. sb. A nematode worm.

1865 T. S. COBBOLD in Pop. Sci. Rev. IV. 163 In various plants I have... noticed free nematodes within their parenchyma. 1876 Beneden's Anim. Parasites 155 A nematode which I observed under very singular circumstances. 1888 ROLLESTON & JACKSON *Anim. I have seen sixteen varieties of colour. 1927 Observer 20 Mar. 24/3 Modern florists and men of science...have made a rainbow out of a single colour (as in the nemesia). 1949 L. G. GREEN In Land of Afternoon v. 72 Hybrid gladioli, nemesias, even the Hottentot fig, were all startling novelties. 1970 C. LLOYD Well-Tempered Garden ii. 97 There is a freshness about a display of nemesias.

nemesis ('nemisis). Also Nemesis. [a. Gr. νέμεσις (f. νέμειν to give what is due), righteous indignation, just resentment, also personified as 'the goddess of Retribution, who brings down all immoderate good fortune, checks the presumption that attends it,...and is the punisher of extraordinary crimes'.] 1. The goddess of retribution or vengeance; hence, one who avenges or punishes. 1576 GASCOIGNE Philomene (Arb.) 114 She calles on Nemesis..., The Goddess of al iust reuenge. 1591 SHAKS. 1 *Hen. CRAWFORD Infidelity (1836) 164 Guilt naturally produces a fear of the divine Nemesis. 1859 BUCKNILL Psychol. Shaks. 21 It is a pathological Nemesis of guilt. 1867 JEBB Sophocles' Electra Introd. 8 The nemesis which overtook Clytæmnestra.

nemesism ('nemɪsɪz(ə)m). Psychol. [f. NEMESIS + -ISM.] Feelings of frustration turned inward and expressed by aggression directed against the self. So nemesistic a., of or connected with nemesism. 1938 S. ROSENZWEIG in H. A. Murray Explorations in Personality vi. 588 The psycho-analyst might appropriately call the turning of aggression upon the individual's own self 'nemesism' from the name of the Greek goddess of vengeance. Nemesism could then be thought of as the counterpart of narcissism. 1945 J. C. FLÜGEL Man, Morals & Society vii. 78 We propose here to adopt Rosenzweig's suggestion and to use the term 'nemesism' as an alternative and technical term for 'aggression turned against the self'. Ibid. 87 The channel for the discharge of the children's aggressiveness towards the natural outer objects being blocked, there may be no alternative for them but to become nemesistic and introjective. Ibid. xi. 143 This nemesistic urge. 1946 [see INTROJECTION 3a]. 1968 P. MCKELLAR Experience & Behav. ix. 248 Nemesism is a term coined by Flügel.

neoglacial (ni:əʊ'gleɪsɪəl, -'gleɪʃəl), a. Also Neo-. [f. NEO- + GLACIAL a.] Of or pertaining to a neoglaciation; also absol., a neoglacial period.

At that time glaciers in southern Alaska had begun to retreat from a maximum neoglacial position attained earlier in the 18th century. 1974 Nature 20/27 Dec. 680/1 During the Neoglacial, the three major advance phases of alpine and polar glaciers around 4,590–5,260, 2,100–2,940 and 40–460 yr b.p. were exactly contemporaneous with the three major post-Wisconsin volcanic phases... in New Zealand, Japan and southern South America.

neoglaciation (ni:əʊ'gleɪsɪ'eɪʃən). Also Neo-. [f. NEO- + GLACIATION.] A minor, short-lived increase in glaciation following the major glacial retreat at the end of the Ice Age.

Though freq. attributed to F. E. Matthes, the term appears not to have been used by him in print.

1951 J. H. MOSS Early Man in Eden Valley v. 62 In the Sierra Nevada, Matthes (1939) has described a similar set of small, very fresh moraines fronting the existing glaciers... They contrast sharply with the older moraines slightly farther down the valley. Matthes suggested the name Neoglaciation for the minor glacial pulsation represented by these moraines, and pointed out that it probably postdates the so-called Climatic Optimum. 1954 Jrnl. Geol. LIV. 340/1 Most of the moraines described in the literature which have been correlated with the Neoglaciation are close to, or in contact with, existing ice masses and are devoid of all vegetation. 1970 *Sci. BLOOMFIELD Lang. xx. 354 The neo-grammarians insist... that his hypothesis... sorts out the resemblances that are due to factors other than phonetic change. Ibid. 355 The opponents of the neo-grammarians hypothesis claim that resemblances which do not fit into recognized types of phonetic correspondence may be due merely to sporadic occurrence or deviation or non-occurrence of sound-change. 1947 E. STURTEVANT Introd. Linguistic Sci. vii. 70 In the 1870's a number of scholars announced... that phonetic laws have no exceptions. The earliest declaration... seems to have been made by August Leskien in 1876, but the discovery really belonged to a group, who, from that time to this, have been called the neo-grammarians (Junggrammatiker). 1965 Language XLI. 188 Mention of the neogrammarians... can elicit so much emotional noise that no one can hear what you are saying. 1972 Ibid. XLVIII. 437 The subsequent section illustrates... the Neogrammarians position. Ibid., Arens refers to Saussure's association with the Neogrammarians.

neo-im'pressionism. Freq. with capital initials. [ad. F. néo-impressionnisme, f. NEO- + IMPRESSIONISM.] A movement or style in art, originated by the French painter Georges Seurat (1859–91), and characterized by a systematic use of divisionism. Cf. POINTILLISM. So neo-im'pressionist a. and sb.

1886 F. neolith (ni:'ləɪθ). Archæol. [See next.]

1. A person belonging to the later stone age.

1882 G. ALLEN in Knowledge No. 17. 352 The neoliths were unacquainted with the use of metal, but they employed weapons and implements of stone, . . . carefully ground and polished. 1883 Pall Mall G. 3 Oct. 2/1 The tall Saxon did not . . . oust the shorter Celt or neolith.

2. A weapon or implement of the later stone age.

1882 Jrnl. Anthropol. Inst. XI. 136 note, As a connecting link between neoliths and palæoliths . . . is a large series of quartz arrow-heads. 1894 Nat. Sci. Apr. 266 The usual neoliths on the surface.

3. attrib. Neolithic.

1882 Jrnl. Anthropol. Inst. XI. 136 It was found associated with other neolith weapons.

neolithic (ni:əu'liθɪk), a. Archæol. [f. Gr. véos new (see NEO-) + λίθος stone. Hence F. néolithique.] Of or belonging to the later stone age, characterized by the use of ground or polished stone implements and weapons.

1865 LUBBOCK Preh. Times i. 3 The later or polished Stone age; a period characterized by beautiful weapons and instruments made of flint and other kinds of stone. . . neolocal (ni:əu'ləʊkəl), a. Anthrop. [f. NEO- + LOCAL a.] Denoting a place of residence chosen by a newly-married couple which is independent of parental or family ties. Hence neo'locally adv.

1949 G. P. MURDOCK Soc. Structure i. 16 When a newly wedded couple, as in our own society, establishes a domicile independent of the location of the parental home of either partner. . . residence may be called neolocal. 1958 F. M. KEESING Cultural Anthropol. x. 264 The married couple may . . . as in the modern urban society, set up a home apart from the parents of both: neolocal (new-place). 1967 J. DEETZ Invitation to Archaeology 95 We Americans reside neolocally, apart from both parents. 1973 Times Lit. Suppl. 6 July 774/5 Many young married couples must live 'neolocally': that is, away from the extended family households characteristic of other kinds of area.

neologian (ni:əu'ləʊdʒiən), a. and sb. [f. NEOLOGY + -AN.]

A. adj. 1. Inclined towards, or imbued with, theological neologism.

1833 R. PINKERTON Russia 144 The . . . neologian literati and clergy of Germany. 1865 Daily Tel. 12 Apr. 6 Bavaria is the head-quarters of a neologian school. 1884 D. HUNTER tr. Reuss's Hist. Canon xvi. 305 This truth . . . has never been to the taste of scholars, orthodox or neologian.

2. Of the nature of, marked by, neologism.

1831 MACAULAY in Napier Sel. Corr. (1879) 119 The neologian article about German divinity. 1851 Bp. WILBERFORCE Let. in Life (1881) II. iii. 109, I am not blind to the threatening evils of Neologian teaching.

B. sb. One who introduces or adopts new (rationalistic) views in theology; a neologist.

1846 Brit. Quart. Rev. III. 143 The argument . . . will furnish some further employment to the critical powers of the Neologian. 1857 R. A. VAUGHAN Essays & Rem. (1858) I. 50 The heathen philosophy of the Rationalist and the Neologian. 1875 JOWETT Plato (ed. 2) I. 316 He thinks you are a neologian.

Hence neo'logianism, neologian views.

1846 WORCESTER cites Eclectic Rev. 1869 Contemp. Rev. XII. 274 He had himself passed through every phase of opinion. . . except. . . Romanism and neologianism.

neo'logic, a. rare. [See next.] = NEOLOGICAL.

neological (ni:əu'ləʊdʒɪkəl), a. [ad. F. néologique (1726): see NEOLOGY and -ICAL.]

1. Dealing with, characterized by, new words or phrases. rare.

1754 CHESTERFIELD World No. 101 ¶11 A genteel neological dictionary, containing those polite . . . words and phrases, commonly used . . . by the beau monde. 1774 Chesterfield's Lett. (1792) III. ccxxvii. 83 The affected, the refined, the neological, or new and fashionable style, are at present too much in vogue at Paris.

2. Of the nature of, characterized by, neologism in theological views or doctrines.

1827 Eclectic Rev. July 26 Disgusted . . . by the Neological infidelity of Protestant clergymen. 1841 D'ISRAELI Amen. Lit. (1867) 718 Some German systems, stripped of their deep neological disguise, have borrowed from Cudworth. 1870 ANDERSON Missions Amer. Bd. III. vi. 82 The advocates of the neological system.

Hence neo'logically adv. (Webster 1847.)

neologism (ni:əu'ləʊdʒɪz(ə)m). [ad. F. néologisme (1735): see NEOLOGY and -ISM.]

1. a. The use of, or the practice of using, new words; innovation in language.

1800 W. TAYLOR in Monthly Mag. X. 318 Quaintness, the unavoidable companion of neologism, is . . . hostile to grace. 1858 DE QUINCEY Language Wks. IX. 76 Neologism, in revolutionary times, is not an infirmity of caprice. 1895 SAINTSBURY Ess. Eng. Lit. Ser. II. 34 Not . . . alarmed at an appearance of neologism now and then.

b. A new word or expression.

1803 Edin. Rev. II. 104 Scotticisms, neologisms . . . dance through each page. 1841 D'ISRAELI Amen. Lit. (1867) 361 Since that day neologisms have fertilised the barrenness of our Saxon. 1875 MAINE Hist. Inst. ii. 52 The class which, to use a modern neologism, 'formulates' the ideas [etc.].

c. Psychol. An invented or concocted word or word-sound without recognizable meaning, freq. interpolated in otherwise correct sentences, and used by persons in a variety of neuropsychiatric disorders.

1905 A. J. ROSANOFF tr. Rogues de Fursac's Man. Psychiatry ii. 46 Neologisms the meaning of which may remain absolutely enigmatical to the patient himself. Ibid. viii. 200 Neologisms are frequent in the period of dementia. 1906 J. H. MACDONALD tr. Bianchi's Textbk. Psychiatry 111. xiii. 680 In the typical form [of mania] . . . neologisms and symbols are found in great number. 1932 CANNON & HAYES Princ. & Pract. of Psychiatry 378 The verbal repetition of these 'new' words—neologisms or senseless words invented by himself. 1960 R. F. C. HULL tr. Jung's Coll. Wks. III. 1. 25 Word-formations, which are so bizarre that they immediately bring to mind the neologisms of dementia praecox. 1969 W. MAYER-GROSS et al. Clin. Psychiatry (ed. 3) v. 286 Other patients refer the origin of neologisms to hallucinatory experiences.

2. Tendency to, adoption of, novel (rationalistic) views in theology or matters of religion.

1827 Eclectic Rev. July 15 Neologism, a system which is not confined to Germany, but has been zealously fostered in other countries. 1851 Bp. WILBERFORCE Let. in Life (1881) II. iii. 108, I have seen for twenty-six years that Neologism was the peril which was before the English Church. 1865 Guardian 19 Apr. 401/2 However despicable . . . the temper of modern neologism may be.

neologist (ni:əu'ləʊdʒɪst). [= F. néologiste: see NEOLOGY and -IST.]

1. One who invents or uses new words or forms; one who makes innovations in language.

1785 TRUSLER Mod. Times I. 135 He called himself a neologist [sic], or a former of new words. 1814 D'ISRAELI Quarrels Auth. (1867) 481 The vicious neologist, who debates the purity of English diction by affecting new words or phrases. 1827 Westm. Rev. VIII. 395 We have an interesting anecdote . . . inserted in the language of Gravina, as a hint to neologists.

2. One who adopts neologism in theology or religious matters; a rationalist.

1827 Eclectic Rev. July 3 They go under the denominations of Rationalists, Neologists, and Anti-supernaturalists. 1833 J. H. NEWMAN Arians i. iv. (1876) 104 The Neologists of the present day deny that the miracles took place in the manner related in the sacred record. 1875 MERIVALE Gen. Hist. Rome li. (1877) 404 In vain had Rome attempted . . . to ward off the attacks of the foreign neologists by pretending to interpret her own mythology and ritual.

attrib. 1827 Eclectic Rev. July 17 Sentiments which will . . . separate him from the Neologist divines. 1830 PUSEY Let. in Liddon Life (1893) I. x. 242 The Neologist. . . solution of miracles. 1864 — Lect. Daniel (1876) 185 Neologist interpreters do not hesitate to admit this.

1827 Eclectic Rev. July 18 The most false and dangerous notions . . . lie at the basis of the Neologicistic theory. 1935 Mind XLIV. 524 Philosophers who have absorbed a glut of new systems of logic during the last decade . . . must face the invention of yet another neologicistic language with something like dismay. 1936 Theology XXXII. 73 The Catholic is quite sure that there is a God, and that in no neologicistic sense.

neologization. rare—⁰. [f. next + -ATION.] The action of neologizing.

1846 WORCESTER cites JEFFERSON.

neologize (ni:əu'ləʊdʒaɪz), v. [See NEOLOGY and -IZE.]

1. intr. To use new words or phrases; to make linguistic innovations.

1846 WORCESTER cites JEFFERSON. 1858 DE QUINCEY The Grk. Trag. Wks. IX. 56 At every step of the introvolution (to neologise a little in a case justifying a neologism). 1895 Westm. Gaz. 25 Nov. 4/2 Prone to take strange liberties with the language, and to neologise.

2. To introduce or accept new theological doctrines.

Neo-Melanesian is . . . of obvious political importance. 1973 Sunday Times (Colour Suppl.) 10 June 42/2 Pidgin is taught as a subject at Brisbane University and is referred to by some American scholars as 'Neo-Melanesian'.

neomen, ME. variant of nimen NIM v.

neomenia (ni:əu'mi:nɪə). [eccl. L. neomēnia, a. Gr. νεομηνία (Attic νοομηνία), f. νέος new NEO- + μήνη moon.] In Greek and Jewish antiq., the time of the new moon, the beginning of the lunar month; also, the festival held at that time.

neomorph (ni:əu'mɔ:f). [f. NEO- + -MORPH.]

1. Biol. An anatomical structure or feature that is of recent origin phylogenetically.

1886 W. N. PARKER tr. Wiedersheim's Elem. Compar. Anat. Vertebrates 33 It is uncertain whether the dermal skeleton present in Armadillos . . . is to be derived directly from that of Reptiles, or whether it is to be considered as formed independently, that is, as a new acquisition or 'neomorph' (Gadow).

2. Genetics. A mutant allele which effects a different character from that effected by the wild-type allele.

1932 H. J. MULLER in Proc. Sixth Internat. Congress Genetics I. 245 Somewhat different from the negatively acting, competing mutant genes, or antimorphs, is the class which I am provisionally terming 'neomorphs'. A good example is the dominant mutant, Hairy wing, near the left end of the X chromosome. 1946 Nature 12 Oct. 520/1 Among spontaneous mutations which are known to occur at this locus some would be expected to be neomorphs. 1967 Evolution XXI. 850 (heading) Latent neomorphs and the evolution of dominance.

Hence neo'morphic a., of, pertaining to, or being a neomorph (in either sense).

1903 Rep. Brit. Assoc. Advancement of Sci. 1902 631 Madagascar has yielded a Physa (P. lamellata) with a neomorphic gill, a character shared by species of Planorbis (P. cornus and P. marginatus). 1922 W. GARSTANG in Jrnl. Linnean Soc.: Zool. XXXV. 99, I propose in future to use palæogenetic and neogenetic when referring to ontogenetic processes, and palæomorphic and neomorphic when contrasting primitive and modified types of structure. 1932 H. DE BEER Embryos & Ancestors xiv. 89 A palaeomorphic character may of course, have made its first appearance in early stages of ontogeny. Conversely, characters of more recent origin, to which Garstang applies the term neomorphic, may have originated in terminal ontogenetic or adult stages. 1966 E. A. CARLSON Gene xiii. 113 In this neomorphic class, Muller placed Bar eyes.

neomycin (ni:əu'maɪsɪn). Pharm. [f. NEO- + -MYCIN.] An antibiotic that is a mixture of two stereoisomers produced by a selected strain of Streptomyces fradiae, is active against many strains of Gram-positive and Gram-negative bacteria, and is used (as the sulphate) in lotions and injections for treating a wide variety of infections and orally as an intestinal antiseptic; also, either of the two constituent isomers (neomycin B and C) or an inactive degradation product of them (neomycin A).

1949 WAKSMAN & LECHEVALIER in Science 25 Mar. 305/2 In search for new compounds, particular attention was paid to those that would be effective against streptomycin-resistant bacteria, notably against the streptomycin-resistant strains of Mycobacterium tuberculosis. The discovery of such an agent, designated as neomycin, is reported here. 1949 R. L. PECK et al. in Jrnl. Amer. Chem. Soc. LXXI. 2590/2 Evidence has been obtained that the neomycin activity is due to more than one chemical entity; hence one may define it as a 'neomycin-complex'. The substance isolated as described herein, has been designated neomycin A. 1960 M. E. FLOREY Clinical Applications of Antibiotics IV. v. 140 Neomycin... was expected to replace streptomycin since it was much less liable to induce resistance in pathogenic organisms. 1963 Lancet 19 Jan. 161/2 The infant [sc. a Salmonella heidelberg excretor] was treated with neomycin, and thereafter all specimens were negative. 1970 PASSMORE & ROBSON Compan. Med. Stud. II. xx. 30/1 Neomycin and kanamycin reduce ventilation during general anaesthesia by a neuromuscular blocking action. 1974 M. C. GERALD Pharmacol. iii. 45 The antibiotic neomycin is used to sterilize the gastrointestinal tract prior to abdominal surgery.

neon ('ni:nɒn). [Gr. νέον neut. of νέος new.]

1. Chem. One of the inert or noble gases, which is present in low concentration in the earth's atmosphere and is used at low pressure in discharge tubes, where it emits an orange-red glow. Atomic number 10; symbol Ne.

1898 SIR W. RAMSAY & TRAVERS in Proc. Roy. Soc. 438 The density of this gas, which we propose to name 'neon' (new) was next determined. 1905 Chem. News 5 May 204/1 A fair quantity of the mixture of neon and helium was prepared by liquefying air. 1935 Industr. & Engin. Chem. Jan. 116/1 Neon is characterized by its high electrical conductivity and light-emissive powers when an electrical current is discharged through it. 1966 McGraw-Hill Encycl. Sci. & Technol. IX. 36/1 Neon is used as the current-carrying agent in lightning arrestors; virtually no current is carried at voltages below the breakdown potential of the neon, but when lightning strikes, the neon is ionized and allows the current to flow to ground. 1966 COTTON & WILKINSON Adv. Inorg. Chem. (ed. 2) xxiii. 598 Helium, neon and argon have so far not been brought into chemical combination... and it seems unlikely that they are capable of reaction.

2. A neon lamp or tube; neon lighting. Also fig.

1934 S. GOLD Neon 18 Whilst the customer may want his name expressed in neon and surrounded by a border, it is up to the sign-man to supply it with 'finish'. 1957 J. BRAINE Room at Top vi. 54 Too clean and well-lighted. They'll be installing neons soon. 1958 Spectator 30 May 687/3 The dialogue [of a play] is stuffed as full of metaphors as a copywriter's prose and Tony Richardson's production sets up each phrase in neon. 1960 A. GLYN Dragon Variation v. 162 To the left it was the glare of the rest of the Strip, the great river of neon, the jazziest in the world. 1974 R. BUTLER Buffalo Hook iii. 26 The neons were flashing over the plushy restaurants.

3. attrib. and Comb., as neon advertisement, glow, lighting, strip, wilderness, world; neon-blazing, -bright, -coupled, -filled, -lighted, -lit adjs.

1972 D. HASTON in High Places iv. 57 There was a neon advertisement by the entrance. 1962 K. neonate ('ni:əneɪt). Med. [f. NEO- + L. nāt-us born.] A recently born individual; spec. an infant less than four weeks old. Also attrib. or as adj.

1932 M. B. MCGRAW in Child Development III. 292/1 Most 'parturients' display a decidedly helpless response to the force of gravity. [Note] ¹ A term indicating infants who are just born... It covers about the first fifteen or thirty minutes of life since it includes the time during and immediately following parturition. When the umbilical cord is dressed and the baby is taken to the maternity nursery, then he becomes a 'neonate'. 1936 Q. Rev. Biol. XI. 70 (heading) Problems in the classification of neonate activities. 1951 L. CARMICHAEL in S. S. STEVENS Handbk. Exper. Genetic Psychol. CXXII. 320 The overall body proportions of the typical neonate, 2-year-old, 6-year-old, [etc.].

neonatology (ni:əneɪ'tɒlədʒɪ). Med. [f. prec. + -OLOGY.] The branch of medicine concerned with the disorders and problems of recently born infants. Hence neona'tologist, an expert or specialist in neonatology.

1960 A. J. SCHAFER Diseases of Newborn 1/1 We trust we shall be forgiven for coining the words 'neonatology' and 'neonatologist'. We do not recall ever having seen them in print. The one designates the art and science of diagnosis and treatment of disorders of the newborn infant, and the other the physician whose primary concern lies in this specialty. Ibid. p. vi/1 The situation of the pediatrician practising neonatology differs but little qualitatively from his everyday posture with respect to older infants and children. 1967 Obstetrics & Gynecol. XXX. 890 The obstetric trainee would assume the role of a pediatric resident in the field of neonatology. 1972 Daily Colonist (Victoria, B.C.) 3 Aug. 26/5 The intensive care unit... combines the disciplines of both fetalogy and neonatology. 1975 Sci. Amer. Jan. 51 (Adv.), Most neonatologists contend that many of these tragedies can be prevented by specially-trained perinatal medical teams using intensive care techniques.

neoned ('ni:ndnd), a. [f. NEON + -ED².]

Illuminated by neon lighting.

1945 Tomorrow Mar. 46 The shadow went, he hardly noticed that he was already moving again toward the neoned glarc. 1968 Punch 29 May 778/3 We... came upon an imperfectly neoned structure which might have passed for a church hall. 1973 J. 'neonism. rare—⁰. [irreg. f. Gr. νέον (see NEON) new + -ISM.] Neologism.

1846 WORCESTER cites HUNTER.

neonomian (ni:əu'nəʊmɪən), sb. and a. [f. Gr. νέος NEO- + νόμος law, after ANTINOMIAN.] a. sb. One who maintains that the Gospel is a new law entirely supplanting the old or Mosaic law. b. adj. Pertaining to the assertion of a new law.

1692 CHAUNCEY Neonomianism Unmasked Ep. Ded., One that Asserts the Old Law is abolished... but pleads for a New Law, and Justification by the Works of it, and therefore is a Neonomian. Ibid. Aiv, Some of the Paradoxes contained in the Neonomian Scheme. 1693 G. FIRMIN Rev. Mr. Davis's Vind. ii. 20 Whither Mr. Crisp, and Mr. Davis, will charge me there-fore to be a Neonomian, I cannot tell. 1882-3 SCHAFF Encycl. Relig. Knowl. II. 1417 Antinomian error and Neonomian heresy. Ibid., Every effort was made by the Neonomians to prevent the settlement of ministers holding the Marrow doctrines.

Hence neo'nomianism. (See quot. 1882-3.)

1692 CHAUNCEY (title) Neonomianism Unmask'd; or, The Ancient Gospel pleaded, against the other, called a New Law or Gospel. 1882-3 SCHAFF Encycl. Relig. Knowl. II. 1622 Neonomianism..., a term... applied to the views of Dr. Daniel Williams and his adherents because they defined and construed Christianity as a 'new law'.

neopallium (ni:əu'pælɪəm). Anat. Also (with hyphen) neo-pallium. Pl. -pallia. [mod.L., f. NEO- 1 e + PALLIUM.] The phylogenetically youngest portion of the pallium of the brain, which appears first among the more advanced reptiles and which among the mammals has become the largest part of the brain. Cf. NEOCORTEX.

1901 G. E. SMITH in Jrnl. Anat. & Physiol. XXXV. 431 It is only one of the three histological formations which constitute the true pallium; and, as it is the latest of these to reach the height of its development, we may call it the 'new pallium' or... 'neopallium', in contradistinction to the 'old pallium' of the Saurapsida and earlier Vertebrata, which is chiefly formed of the other two pallial areas. 1907 Arch. Neurol. III. 51 Maps have been obtained of these neopallia which are fairly full. Ibid. 52 The term neopallium is employed throughout in the sense suggested by Elliot Smith to indicate the variable area intercalated between the 'basal pallium' or pyriform lobe and the marginal pallium, or hippocampus. 1922 Glasgow Herald 23 Dec. 4/2 When our ancestors, with their free hands, their enlarged cerebral cortex or neopallium, and their capacity for co-operative action, had resources sufficient to enable them to stand up to Carnivores..., they left the trees and became once more terrestrial. 1948 A. BRODAL Neurol. Anat. x. 323 With the development of the neopallium or neo-cortex, the two more primitive areas are finally pushed medially, and in man are found entirely on the medial aspect of the hemisphere. 1973 Gray's Anat. (ed. 35) vii. 921/1 In the course of evolution visual, auditory and other conduction paths have been transferred, through the thalamus, to the pallium of the cerebral hemispheres... Consequently, each cerebral hemisphere enlarges as a result of the formation of an additional region, the neopallium.

Hence neo'pallial a., of or pertaining to the neopallium.

1907 Arch. Neurol. III. 112 This appears to be the lowest grade of conscious neopallial association—i.e., of psychic function. 1921 TILNEY & RILEY Form & Functions Central Nervous Syst. xlii. 772 (heading) Neopallial projection system. 1953 G. Anat. Nerv. Syst.* vii. 411/1 Neopallial cortex makes up the major portion of the cerebral cortex in man.

neophilia (ni:ə'fɪliə). [f. NEO- + -PHILIA.] Love for, or great interest in, what is new; a love of novelty. So neo'philiac, a person characterized by neophilia; also neo'phili(a)c a.; ne'ophily.

1932 B. MALINOWSKI in R. F. Fortune Sorcerers of Dobu p. xxvii, Terminological neophily... is a habit to which I have always been hostile. 1966 R. & D. MORRIS Men & Apes vii. 217 There is a perpetual struggle going on inside the brain, between the fear of the new (neophobia) and the love of the new (neophilia). The neophobic urges keep the animal out of danger, while the neophilic urges prevent him from becoming too set in his ways. 1969 C. BOOKER (title) The neophiliacs. 1971 R. PETRIE Thorne in Flesh xi. 142 From where Thorne had sat, without neophilic needs, he had seen . . . not spangles but sweating flesh. 1972 Daily Tel. 2 Aug. 2/2 The exaltation of novelty (neophilia) had been turned into a cult. Ibid., Neophiliacs suffer from a collective fantasy which leads them to describe every change as inevitable and an improvement on what preceded it.

neophron ('ni:ʊfrɒn). [L. Neophron (a. Gr. νεόφρων), the name of a man transformed into a vulture in the Metamorphoses of Antoninus Liberalis: adopted as a generic name by Savigny.] The white Egyptian vulture, or a vulture belonging to the same genus.

1833 SELBY Illustr. Brit. Ornith. (ed. 2) 4 Egyptian Neophron. 1840 Cuvier's Anim. Kingd. 165 The Neophrons . . . have a long and slender beak. Ibid. 166 The White Neophron. 1848 Zoologist VI. 1959 A tame neophron, kept at the public slaughter-house at Malaga.

neophyte ('ni:ʊfaɪt). Also 6–7 (9) -phite. [= F. néophyte (†neofite, 14th c.), ad. eccl. L. neophytus, ad. Gr. νεόφυτος (1 Tim. iii. 6), lit. 'newly planted', f. νέος NEO- + φυτόν plant, φυτεύειν to plant.

Not in general use before the 19th c. Its employment in the Rheims N.T., though defended by the translators, was objected to by their contemporaries:—

neossine (ni:'ɒsəm). [f. Gr. νεοσσα-ός a young bird + -INE⁵.] The substance of which the edible birds' nests of the East are made, being a mucus secreted by the salivary glands of a genus of swifts (Collocalia). Hence ne'ossidine.

1849 tr. Mulder's Chem. Veg. & Anim. Physiol. 241 The mucus from the œsophagus of the swallows, which in India build their edible nests of it. . . The pure mucous matter, which I called neossine, consists of [etc.]. 1894 MORLEY & MUIR Watts' Dict. Chem. IV. 342/2 It. . . is chiefly composed of a hyalogen (neossine), which yields as its hyalin, neossidine.

neo'ssology. Ornith. [f. as prec. + -LOGY.] That part of ornithology which deals with the hatching and rearing of the young.

1864 NEWTON in Zool. Record (1865) I. 61.

ne'ossoptile. Ornith. [f. as prec. + πτελον a down-feather.] One of the soft feathers of a newly-hatched bird, as contrasted with those of a mature type (teleoptiles).

1893 GADOW in Newton Dict. Birds 243 Soft feathers. . . possessing several characters which make it advisable to distinguish them by the name of 'Neossoptiles'.

neostriatum (ni:əʊstraɪ'eɪtəm). Anat. [mod.L., f. NEO- + e + STRIATUM.] The phylogenetically younger portion of the corpus striatum, consisting essentially of the caudate nucleus and the putamen.

1909 Arch. Neurol. & Psychiatry IV. 163 As the nucl. med. thal. (and also the nucl. rotund.) receive trigeminal fillet-fibres, it results that the first neocortical tactile region is one of oral sensibility (just as the first neostriatum). 1929 *Physiol. neotechnic (ni:əʊ'teknik), a. [f. NEO- + Gr. τεχνικ-ός (see TECHNIC a. and sb.)] Denoting, or belonging to, the most recent stage of industrial development. Hence neo'technics, neotechnic technology.

1915 P. GEDDES Cities in Evolution iv. 64 Simply substituting -technic for -lithic, we may distinguish the earlier and ruder elements of the Industrial Age as Paleotechnic, the newer and still often incipient elements disengaging themselves from these as Neotechnic. 1927 Neotechnics [see geotechnics (GEO-)]. 1934 [see EOTECHNIC a.]. 1963 Punch 21 Aug. 284/1 The forms, symbolism and idiom of neotechnics. 1967 Punch 27 Sept. 451/1 The country would be rejigged to meet the challenge of the neotechnic revolution.

neotene (ni:əʊti:n). rare⁻¹. [Cf. next.] A species (or member of a species) in which the period of immaturity is indefinitely prolonged.

1959 AUDEN Homage to Clio (1960) 25 The neotene who marches Upright and can subtract.

neoteny (ni:əʊtəni). Zool. [ad. G. neotenie (J. C. E. Kollman 1884, in Verh. Naturf. Ges. Basel VII. 391), f. Gr. νέος young + τείνειν to extend.]

a. The retention of juvenile characteristics in adult life. b. The possession of sexual maturity by an animal still in its larval stage. Cf. neotenia, -tenia (NEO- 2).

1901 H. GADOW in Cambr. Nat. Hist. VIII. iii. 65 These cases of neoteny are therefore instances of more or less complete retardation, or of the retention of partially larval conditions. 1920 Conquest Apr. 278/2 Neoteny... here means the abnormal time-extension of youthful characters. 1932 J. S. HUXLEY Probl. Relative Growth vii. 237 It is clear that changes in rate-genes could as easily lead to the opposite of recapitulation as to recapitulation. Many examples of neoteny would fall under this head. 1962 D. ||Nerita (nɪ'raɪtə). Zool. Pl. Neritæ, also -as. [L. nērīta, ad. Gr. νηρίτης, νηρεΐτης sea-mussel, f. Νηρεΐς: see NEREID.] A genus of gasteropod molluscs; a mollusc belonging to this genus.

The name was widely applied by Linnæus, but was subsequently restricted to a group typical of the family

Neritidæ, having a thick globular shell with a small spire and semilunate aperture.

Nernst (nɛ:rnst, nɜ:nst). [Name of Walther Hermann Nernst (1864-1941), German physical chemist.] a. Used attrib. to designate an electric incandescent lamp invented by Nernst in which an unenclosed rod or wire consisting of a mixture of rare earths and other metallic oxides (as magnesia or zirconia) is made hot and luminous by the passage of an electric current (after being first brought to a conducting state by heating), and which is used esp. as a source of infra-red radiation.

1899 Chambers's Jnrl. 25 Mar. 269/2 For some time there have been rumours of an electric lamp on an entirely new principle, and... the contrivance was recently exhibited at the Society of Arts, London. It is known as the Nernst incandescent electric lamp, and its chief peculiarity is that it employs a rod of refractory earth in place of the usual carbon filament, and that this material is not enclosed in a glass exhausted of air. 1912 W. S. FRANKLIN Electric Lighting v. 134 There are five important kinds of glow lamps as follows: ... (e) The Nernst lamp in which the glower is a small rod of porcelain-like material. 1950 L. J. BRADY in M. G. MELLON Analytical Absorption Spectrosc. viii. 444 One serious objection to the Nernst glower is the frequent mechanical failure of the source due to the poor bonding of the platinum leads to the element itself. 1962 R. E. DODD

Chem. Spectrosc. i. 16 For use in the infra-red region, mainly beyond 2μ, the hot body takes the form of a rod of semi-conducting lanthanum oxides, a Nernst glower. Ibid. 17 The Nernst filament is only suitable for the near infra-red and visible.

b. Used attrib. with reference to a thermo-magnetic effect investigated by Nernst, in which a temperature gradient in a metal subject to a magnetic field at right angles to the gradient gives rise to an e.m.f. in a direction at right angles to both.

1901 M. G. LLOYD in Amer. Jnrl. Sci. CLXII. 57 It has already been proposed† to call the galvano-magnetic temperature-difference, the thermo-magnetic temperature-difference, and the thermo-magnetic potential-difference by the respective names, Ettingshausen effect, Leduc effect and Nernst effect. [Note] †Thesis: The Transversal Thermo-magnetic Effect in Bismuth, M. G. Lloyd, Philadelphia, 1900; Beiblätter, 24, p. 1014. 1911 Physical Rev. XXXIII. 300 Both the Hall electromotive force and the Nernst electromotive force seem to be proportional to the intensity of magnetization in the plate rather than to the magnetic field. 1960 E. H. PUTLEY Hall Effect & Related Phenomena ii. 27 In the Nernst effect, electrons attempting to diffuse down a temperature gradient are deflected by a magnetic field but a transverse electric field is set up to balance out the Lorentz force. Ibid. 28 The units for the Nernst coefficient are cm² sec⁻¹ (°K)⁻¹ or m² sec⁻¹ (°K)⁻¹.

c. Used attrib. and in the possessive to designate a theorem in thermodynamics enunciated by Nernst: the change in entropy accompanying a chemical reaction between pure crystalline solids tends to zero as the temperature at which it occurs tends to absolute zero. (Also called the third law of thermodynamics, esp. in more generalized formulations.)

1913 J. R. PARTINGTON Text-bk. Thermodynamics xvii. 484 The required information is furnished by a hypothesis put forward in 1906 by W. Nernst, and usually called by German writers 'das Nernstsche Wärmetheorem'. We can refer to it without ambiguity as Nernst's Theorem. 1928 J. K. ROBERTS Heat & Thermodynamics xviii. 354 Such a wide range of reactions is considered that we are certainly justified in regarding the Nernst Heat Theorem as being established as a first approximation. Ibid. 355 If the Nernst Theorem as originally stated should prove to be only a first approximation, the theorem does not on that account become less important. 1971 G. SOCRATES Thermodynamics & Statistical Mech. vii. 139 An alternative statement of Nernst's heat theorem is: It is impossible to reduce the temperature of any system to absolute zero in a finite number of operations.

When a Persian arm Can thus with vigour its reluctance bend, And to the nerve its stubborn force subdue. 1791 COWPER Iliad viii. 371 Teucer had newly fitted to the nerve An arrow keen. 1818 KEATS Endym. iv. 411 He tries the nerve of Phoebus' golden bow. fig. 1781 COWPER Table-T. 623 Then like a bow long forced into a curve, The mind, released from too constrained a nerve, Flew to its first position.

c. (See quot. and Du Cange, s.v. Nervus.)

1854 WISEMAN Fabiola II. xxi, Let this Lucianus be kept in the nerve (stocks) with his feet stretched to the fifth hole.

†5. Sc. A narrow band or strap of material used to ornament a garment. Obs. rare—1.

After French use: cf. NERVE v. I.

1531 Acc. Ld. H. Treas. Scotl. (1905) VI. 20 For xv elnis blak satyn... to be ane gounne cuttit out with tway nervis of the self.

6. a. Bot. One of the ribs or fibres of vascular matter extending through the parenchyma of a leaf; esp. the midrib.

1585 HIGINS tr. Junius' Nomencl. 113 Nerues. The nerue, sinew or string of a leafe, as in plantaine. 1607 TOPSELL Four-f. Beasts (1658) 474 There is an herb... the nerve whereof in the middle is red. 1671 MARTEN in Acc. Sev. Late Voy. II. (1694) 68 Through the middle of it run two black Stroaks or Nerves to the Stalk. 1712 tr. Pomet's Hist. Drugs I. 180 The Leaves are smal and fine, growing by Couples on each Side of a Nerve or Rib. 1796 WITHERING Brit. Plants (ed. 3) III. 794 The nerve or keel does not extend to the extremity of the leaves. 1835 LINDLEY Introd. Bot. (1839) 129 If other veins similar to the midrib pass from the base to the apex of a leaf, such veins have been named nerves. 1863 M. J. BERKELEY Brit. Mosses iii. 14 There is one central nerve of variable length and thickness, occasionally projecting far beyond the tip of the leaf.

b. Ent. = NERVURE.

1833 LYELL Princ. Geol. III. 277 The nerves of the wings in almost all the Diptera, are perfectly distinct.

7. Arch. (See quotes.)

A French sense, perh. never in actual English use.

1727-38 CHAMBERS Cycl. s.v., Nerves, in architecture, denote the mouldings of projecting arches of vaults. 1823 P. NICHOLSON Pract. Build. 589 Nerves, the mouldings of the groined ribs of Gothic vaults. 1850 PARKER Gloss. Archit. (ed. 5) 325 Nerves, a term sometimes applied to the ribs and mouldings on the surface of a vault, but it is not technical.

II. 8. a. A fibre or bundle of fibres arising from the brain, spinal cord, or other ganglionic organ, capable of stimulation by various means, and serving to convey impulses (esp. of sensation or motion) between the brain, etc., and some other part of the body.

1606 SHAKS. Ant. & Cl. IV. viii. 21 Yet ha we A Braine that nourishes our Nerues. 1626 BACON Sylva §400 An Eye... thrust forth, so as it hanged a pretty distance by the Visuall Nerve. 1656 tr. Hobbes' Elem. Philos. (1839) 392 Certain spirits and membranes, which... involve the brain and all the nerves. 1704 F. FULLER Med. Gymn. (1711) 25 Cutting off a Nerve always causes the wasting of the Part to which that Nerve leads. 1744 BERKELEY Siris §102 As the nerves are instruments of sensation, it follows that spasms in the nerves may produce all symptoms. 1800 Med. Jnrl. IV. 340 Fallopius was the first who distinguished this nerve from the proper nerve of the voice. 1868 SPENCER Princ. Psychol. (1872) I. II. iii. 207 A nerve is a thread of unstable nitrogenous substance... along which... there runs a wave of molecular change. 1873 MIVART Elem. Anat. 399 The spinal nerves arise in pairs from opposite sides of the spinal marrow.

b. In non-scientific use, with reference to feeling, courage, etc. Phr. to live on one's nerves: to lead an emotionally exhausting life.

1601 B. JONSON Poetaster Introd., Light, I salute thee, but with wounded nerues. 1742 POPE Dunc. IV. 56 Chromatic tortures soon shall... Break all their nerves, and fritter all their sense. 1764 GOLDSM. Trav. 220 Those powers that... Catch every nerve, and vibrate through the frame. 1802 MAR. EDGEWORTH Angelina iv, Not the fittest companion in the world for a person of your ladyship's nerves. 1842 TENNYSON Walking to Mail 95 What know we of the secret of a man? His nerves were wrong. 1879 BROWNING Martin Relph 56 We soldiers need nerves of steel! 1927 Daily Tel. 1 Nov. 7 The correspondence about the dramatic version of 'The Secret Agent'... is almost interminable. One sees that Conrad lived on his nerves, as the French say, and that he took a secret delight in parading his petty cares. 1932 AUDEN Orators I. 16 Dare-devils of the soul, living dangerously upon their nerves.

c. transf. and fig.

1681-6 J. SCOTT Chr. Life (1747) III. 280 The political Nerves and Arteries, by which their several Parts... are united to one another. 1781 COWPER Table-T. 487 The Muse... pours a sensibility divine Along the nerve of every feeling line. 1856 STANLEY Sinai & Pal. ii. (1858) 126 The nerves of the faith of Israel were not unstrung. 1898 H. H. FURNESS Pref. Winter's Tale 13 In feeling the pulse of that public he had as a guide the most sensitive of nerves: the pocket.

d. pl. A disordered nervous system; nervousness.

Quots. ?1792 and 1839 perhaps belong in sense 8b.

?1792 I. PRIGOT Let. in A. Leslie Mrs. Fitzherbert (1960) ix. 87 She says her spirits are so damped and her nerves so bad, she must go out to... soothe her mind by change of scene and country. 1839 DICKENS Let. 5 Mar. (1965) I. 519 Recovering from an attack 'on the Nerves'. 1890 Spectator 5 Apr., As to his dying of 'nerves', that is a story sure to be circulated about anybody whose life it is necessary to guard. 1892 M. NORTH Recoll. Happy Life I. 107 That tree... always gave me a fit of nerves. 1914 G. W. YOUNG From Trenches vii. 143 The control of the population is admirable in its restraint. We have no 'nerves' here yet. 1920 H. CRANE Let. 23 Nov. (1965) 46 I'm sorry to know you are having such an ordeal of 'nerves'. 1948 A. CHRISTIE Taken at Flood I. i. 20 The poor girl was blitzed and had shock from blast... She's a mass of nerves.

e. Phr. to get on one's nerves: to (begin to) affect one with irritation, impatience, fear, or the like.

1903 'C. E. MERRIMAN' Let. from Son to his Self-Made Father vi. 75 I've worried a lot since you went away. The business seems to have got on my nerves. 1908 H. G. WELLS War in Air iv. 125 This flying gets on one's nerves. Ibid. v. 174 All this looking down and floating over things and smashing up people, it's getting on my nerves. 1910 Chambers's Jnrl. Mar. 155/2 Sometimes I hate this accursed country... It gets on one's nerves at times. 1920 B. C. CRONIN Timber Wolves ii. 34 Hotel hogs, I call 'em. Come in and jolly a chap as if they owned the whole joke. Gets on your nerves when you've been out of your bed all night. 1941 A. L. ROWSE Tudor Cornwall xi. 276 The siege... got on people's nerves. 1959 T. S. ELIOT Elder Statesman iii. 99, I remember, when I came home for the holidays How it used to get on my nerves, when I saw you Always sitting there with your nose in a book. 1972 J. WILSON Hide & Seek vii. 118 Alice and I are really close, even if we do get on each other's nerves sometimes.

f. war of nerves: the use of hostile or subversive propaganda to undermine morale and cause confusion and uncertainty; psychological warfare.

1940 Ann. Reg. 1939 81 The British public... did not allow the 'war of nerves' organised by the Nazi Government to interfere in the least with its August holiday. 1953 E. SIMON Past Masters IV. ii. 223 War of nerves... Best thing to do is take no notice. 1974 P. WRIGHT Lang. Brit. Industry ii. 26 Recent threats of conflicts have produced, e.g., cold war and war of nerves.

9. a. Nervous fibre.

1839-47 Todd's Cycl. Anat. III. 596/1 The influence which nerve exerts upon muscle to provoke it to contraction. 1877 HUXLEY & MARTIN Elem. Biol. 257 Tease out a bit of fresh nerve in... sodic chloride.

fig. 1778 MISS BURNLEY Evelina lxiv. 'Your Ladyship's constitution... is infinitely delicate'. 'Indeed it is... I am nerve all over!' 1855 PRESCOTT Philip II. I. (1857) 79 Paul seemed to be always in a state of nervous tension. 'He is all nerve', the Venetian minister... writes of him.

b. An attack or fit of nervousness.

1815 JANE AUSTEN Emma xi, She... had many fears and many nerves.

10. a. Courage or coolness in exciting or dangerous circumstances; boldness, assurance.

1809 W. IRVING Knickerb. IV. ii. (1820) 365 He... spoke forth like a man of nerve and vigor. 1826 DISRAELI Viv. Grey II. xiii, You have nerve enough, you know, for anything. 1852 TENNYSON Ode Wellington 37 O iron nerve to true occasion true! 1873 BLACK Pr. Thule xxvii. 456 Do you think you have nerve to cut this hook out of my finger?

b. colloq. Audacity, impudence, cheek. Esp. in phr. to have a nerve or to have the nerve to.

1887 Lantern (New Orleans) 6 Aug. 3/3 Oh, this is a nerve, sure. 1890 BARRÈRE & LELAND Dict. Slang II. 84/2 Nerve (Eton), impudence. a 1911 D. G. PHILLIPS Susan Lenox (1917) I. xx. 352 More money!... You have got a nerve!—when factories are shutting down everywhere. 1921 Daily Colonist (Victoria, B.C.) 5 Apr. 4/2 No one had the nerve to claim this should be done, because it would have been laughed out of court immediately. 1925 WODEHOUSE Sam the Sudden xxv. 219 'You mean to tell me that you had the—the nerve—the insolence—' He gulped. 1929 [see HONESTLY adv. 2 b]. 1930 V. SACKVILLE-WEST Edwardians vi. 220 The caddy exclaimed that the young foot had a nerve and no mistake. 1942 Q. Jnrl. Speech Feb. 6/2 In low brow programs... we note... you've got a nerve'. 1975 S. BRETT Cast xiii. 136 Joanne Menzies looked at him coolly. 'You've got a nerve.'

11. attrib. and Comb. a. Attributive, as nerve-ache, -action, -branch, -bulb, -bundle, -chain, -channel, -end, -network, -pill, -test, -tester, -tip, -world, etc.

The number of such combs., esp. in recent medical works, is very great; only some of the earlier or more prominent examples are illustrated here.

Nesite ('nesait). Also Nesian, Nesitic. [f. Hittite našili, nešumnili, f. Nešaš name of an ancient Hittite city in Asia Minor (identified by B. Hrozný 1929, in Archiv orientální (Prague) I. 273-99) + -ITE¹.] a. A name given to the official language used in Hittite documents, suggested as an alternative to KANESIAN. b. A member of the Hittite people who used this language.

The meaning of našili and nešumnili in Hittite texts has been disputed, but the view of Hrozný (above), and 1931, in Journal Asiatique CCXVIII. 318-19) is now generally accepted, that the words relate to the former Hittite capital Nešaš (or Nesa) and designate the Indo-European Hittite aristocracy and its language (see also quot. 1954).

[1920 A. H. SAYCE in Jrnl. Royal Asiatic Soc. 605 Literary Hittite is once called 'Luvian', Lúi-li, 'in Luvian', taking the place of the more usual nási-li. 1921 M. BLOOMFIELD in Jrnl. Amer. Oriental Soc. XL1. 197 The supposedly I. E. Hittite [in the Boghazköi inscriptions] seems, according to both authors [sc. Forrer and Hrozný], to be well entitled to the name Kanesian, named after the city of Kaneš. But this latter designation is never indicated by an ethnical adjective. . . Instead there occurs, more frequently than the mention of Kaneš, the ethnical designation Našili, which Forrer takes to be the same as Kanesian. 1929 B. HROZNÝ in Archiv orientální (Prague) I. 296 Les Nésites sont donc en effet les fondateurs du grand empire hittite. . . La langue hittite doit donc être nommée. . la langue nésite.] 1933 E. H. STURTEVANT Compar. Gram. Hittite Lang. i. 28 Hrozný. . may be correct in thinking that the word nešumnili. . refers to official Hittite and therefore in calling the latter Nesite. 1949 F. O. STEIN tr. L. Matouš's Bedřich Hrozný 26 Later, in a paper published in Volume I of Archiv orientální (Oriental Archives). . . Hrozný shewed that the Indo-European Hittites originally called themselves Nesites, from their ancient city Neshash, and that therefore their language should more correctly be called Nesitic, and not Hittite, as had always been taken for granted. 1954 O. R. GURNEY Hittites (ed. 2) 122 While Hrozný adopted the name 'Nésite' (i.e., the language of the city Nesa), Forrer preferred 'Kanisisch' (i.e., the language of Kaneš). It is now generally agreed that 'Nésite' or 'Nesian' (derived from the Hittite adverb našili or nešumnili) is indeed the true name of the language. 1959 Chambers's Encycl. VII. 155/1 The language. . was seen to be mainly Indo-European in structure and vocabulary. In the Hittite texts it is sometimes called the speech of Nesas, and has therefore been termed Nesite. 1964 G. ROUX Ancient Iraq xiv. 191 The Luwians. . settled to the west of Cilicia, along the coast. . and the so-called Nesites in Cappadocia. . Centuries later, those Nesite-speaking invaders conquered the centre of the Anatolian plateau. 1972 W. B. LOCKWOOD Panorama Indo-Europ. Lang. xiv. 262 The terms used are našili (or nišili) and nešumnili meaning respectively 'in the language of Nesa' and 'in the language of those of Nesa', and Hittite has since occasionally been called Nesite.

-ness, suffix, representing OE. -nes(s), -nis(s), -nys(s), fem. (inflected, and later also in nom., -nesse, etc.) = OFris. -nesse, -nisse, OS. -nesse, -nessi, -nissi, -nussi (also -nissea, -nussea; MDu. -nesse, -nisse, Du. -nis), OHG. -nessi, -nassi, -nissi (also -nissa; MHG. -nisse, G. -niss), Goth. -nassus; the -n is originally part of the stem, the real suffix being -assus, formed from weak verbs in -atjan. The variations in the vowel of the West Germanic forms have not been satisfactorily explained.

In middle and early modern English the initial of the suffix is occasionally omitted when preceded by another n, as in brownesse brownness, cleennesse cleanness, kenesse keenness, meanesse meanness, etc. (cf. note to FINESSE).

2. In OE. -nes is the suffix most usually attached to adjectives and past participles to form substantives expressing a state or condition, as biternes, deorcnes, heardnes, ábolgennes, forþryccednes, etc. A large number of these survive in middle and modern English, and new formations of the same type have been continually made in all periods of the language, it being possible to add the suffix to any adjective or participle, whatever its form or origin may be. Formations from compound adjectives are also common, as selfconceitedness, kindheartedness, square-toedness, water-tightness, tonguetiedness, etc.; and even from adjectival phrases, such as used-upness, get-at-ableness, up-to-dateness, à-la-modeness, little-boyishness; few of the latter, however, are in established or serious use, and most of them are of recent introduction. This is also the case with formations on pronouns, adverbs, etc., as I-ness, me-ness, whatness; whyness, withoutness, nowness, everydayness, etc. The following are examples of some of the more exceptional uses of the suffix by writers of the 19th century.

1804 COLERIDGE in Lit. Rem. (1836) II. 414 The exclusive Sir-Thomas-Brown-ness of all the fancies. 1853 GEO. ELIOT in Cross Life (1885) I. 319 Dislike-to-getting-up-in-the-morningness. 1859 SALA Gas-light & D. iv. 43 An irreproachable state of clean-shirtedness, navy blue-broadclothedness and chimney-pot-hattedness. 1891 BAX Outlooks New Standp. iii. 199 All nowness is the form of I-ness. Ibid. 201 The in-itselfness which Kant saw behind the sense-impression. 1893 MORRIS & BAX Socialism iii. 58 The this-worldliness...of barbarian society.

3. Uses of the suffix somewhat varying from those mentioned above occur in a few words, such as FORCENESS, MILKNESS, WILDERNESS, WITNESS.

2. (The making of) a nested arrangement (see NESTED ppl. a. 2).

1957 D. D. McCracken Digital Computer Programming xvii. 207 The truncated series is factored: $e^x = 1 + x/1! + x^2/2! + x^3/3! + x^4/4! + x^5/5! + x^6/6! = 1 + x[1 + \frac{1}{2}x[1 + \frac{1}{3}x[1 + \frac{1}{4}x[1 + \frac{1}{5}x[1 + \frac{1}{6}x[1 + \dots]]]]]]]$. The factored series is then evaluated 'from the inside out', which is also called nesting. 1958 C. F. HOCKETT Course in Mod. Linguistics xxi. 189 The presence of certain attributive constructions in the nesting precludes the occurrence of certain others at a more inclusive level: we can say this fresh milk, but not fresh this milk. 1963 [see NESTED ppl. a. 2 b]. 1965 Language XL. 71 Internal layering and multiple nesting characterize many syntagmemes. 1966 Y. For example, the expression $AX^3 + BX^2 + CX + D$ may be written in nested form as $((B + Ax)x + C)x + D$ which requires less arithmetic.

1972 HARTMANN & STORK Dict. of Lang. & Linguistics 150/2 Nesting, the embedding of a phrase or clause within an endocentric phrase to modify its head word.
