Ro'man nu'merals, the numerals in the ancient Roman system of notation, still used for certain limited purposes, as in some pagination, dates on buildings, etc. The common basic symbols are I (= 1), V (= 5), X (= 10), L (= 50), C (= 100), D (= 500), and M (= 1000). The Roman numerals for one to nine are: I, II, III, IV, V, VI, VII, VIII, IX. A bar over a letter multiplies it by 1000; thus, X equals 10,000. Integers are written according to these two rules: If a letter is immediately followed by one of equal or lesser value, the two values are added; thus, XX equals 20, and XV equals 15. If a letter is immediately followed by one of greater value, however, the first is subtracted from the second; thus, XL equals 40, and XC equals 90. Examples: XLVII (=47), CXVI (=116), MCXX (=1120), MCMXIV (=1914). Roman numerals may be written in lower-case letters, though they appear more commonly in capitals.

—Syn. 3. RUIN, DESTRUCTION, HAVOC imply irrevocable and often widespread damage. DESTRUCTION may be on a large or small scale (destruction of tissue, of enemy vessels); it emphasizes particularly the act of destroying, while RUIN and HAVOC emphasize the resultant state. RUIN, from the verb meaning to fall to pieces, suggests a state of decay or disintegration (or an object in that state) which is apt to result from the slow, natural processes of time and change, than of sudden violent activity from without: The house has fallen to ruins; only in its figurative application is it apt to suggest the result of destructive violence: the ruins of her hopes. HAVOC, originally a cry which served as the signal for pillaging, has changed its reference from that of pillage to that of devastation. It is used particularly to describe the destruction following in the wake of natural calamities: the havoc wrought by flood and pestilence. Today it is used figuratively to refer to the destruction of hopes and plans: This sudden turn of events played havoc with her carefully laid designs. 4. fall, overthrow, defeat, wreck. 10. demolish, destroy, damage. scle·ro·cau·ly (sklēr'ə kô'lē), n. Bot. the normal development of thickened stems in the stems of certain plants, as some desert plants, resulting in hardened, dry stems. [SCLERO- + CAUL- + -Y³] scle·ro·cer·ma (sklēr'ō sûr'mə), n. Pathol. a disease in which all the layers of the skin become hardened and rigid. Also called scleriasis. [SCLERO- + DERMA] scle·ro·der·ma·ti·tis (sklēr'ō dûr'mə tī'tis, sklēr'ō-), n. Pathol. inflammation and hardening of the skin. Also, scle·ro·der·mi·tis (sklēr'ō dər mī'tis, sklēr'-). [SCLERO- + DERMATITIS] scle·ro·der·ma (sklēr'ə dûr'mə təs, sklēr'-), adj. Zool. covered with a hardened tissue, as scales. [SCLERO- + DERMATOUS] scle·ro·der·ma (sklē roj'ə mə), adj. Pathol., Bot. producing hard and insoluble tissue. Also, scle·ro·gen·ic (sklēr'ə jen'ik, sklēr'-). [SCLERO- + -GENOUS] scle·roid (sklēr'oid, sklēr'-), adj. Biol. hard or indurated. [SCLER- + -OID]

scle·ro·ma (sklē rō'mə), n., pl. -mas, -ma·ta (-mə tə). Pathol. a tumorlike induration of tissue. [< Gk sklērō-ma. See SCLERO-, -OMA] scle·rom·e·ter (sklē rom'i tər), n. any instrument for determining with precision the degree of hardness of a substance, esp. a mineral, as by measuring the pressure necessary to pierce or scratch it. [SCLERO- + -METER] —scle'ro·met·ric (sklēr'ə met'rik, sklēr'-), adj.

scle·ro·phyll (sklēr'ə fil), Bot. —n. adj. 1. Also, scle·ro·phyl·lous (sklēr'ə fil'əs), of, pertaining to, or exhibiting sclerophyly. —n. 2. a plant exhibiting sclerophyly. [SCLERO- + -PHYLL] scle·ro·phyl·ly (sklēr'ə fil'ē), n. Bot. the normal development of much sclerenchyma in the leaves of certain plants, as some desert plants, resulting in thickened, hardened foliage. [SCLERO- + PHYLL- + -Y³] —scle'ro·phyl'lous, adj.

scle·ro·pro·tein (sklēr'ō prō'tēn, -tē in), n. Biochem. protein that is insoluble in water and serves as a protective or supportive function in the body. Also called albuminoid. [SCLERO- + PROTEIN]

Scler·o·scope (sklēr'ə skōp', skler'-), n. Trademark. a type of sclerometer in which the hardness of a material by measuring the rebound of a standard ball dropped on the material from a fixed height.

scle·rosed (skli rōst', sklēr'ōzd, sklēr'-), adj. Pathol. hardened or indurated, as by sclerosis. [SCLEROS(IS) + -ED²] scle·ro·sis (skli rō'sis), n., pl. -ses (-sēz). 1. Pathol. a hardening or induration of a tissue or part, or an increase of connective tissue in the spaces of such tissue or more active tissue. 2. Bot. a hardening of a tissue or cell wall by thickening or lignification. [< ML < Gk sklērōsis hardening. See SCLERO-, -OSIS] —scle·rot'ic (-rot'ik), adj.

scle·rot·ic (skli rot'ik), adj. 1. Also, scleral. Anat. of or pertaining to the sclera. 2. Pathol., Bot. pertaining to or affected with sclerosis. [< ML sclērōtic(us) < LGk sklērōtikós (fem. adj.) of hardening. See SCLEROSIS, -TIC] scle·ro·tin (sklēr'ə tin, sklēr'-), n. Biochem. an insoluble protein that serves to stiffen the chitin of the cuticle of arthropods. [< Gk sklērō(s) hardness + -IN¹] scle·ro·ti·tis (sklēr'ə tī'tis, sklēr'-), n. Pathol. scleritis. [SCLEROT(IC) + -ITIS] —scle·ro·tit·ic (sklēr'ə tit'ik, sklēr'ə-), adj.

scle·ro·ti·um (skli rō'shē əm), n., pl. -ti·a (-shē ə). Bot. a vegetative, resting, compact body in many higher fungi, composed of a compact mass of indurated mycelia. [< NL; see SCLEROTIN, -IUM] —scle·ro·tial (skli rō'shəl), adj.

scle·ro·ti·za·tion (sklēr'ə tī zā'shən, sklēr'ō-), n. the state of being sclerotized. [SCLEROTIZ(ED) + -ATION] scle·ro·tized (sklēr'ə tīzd', sklēr'-), adj. 1. (esp. of the cuticle of an arthropod) hardened by the presence of substances other than chitin, as by sclerotins, waxes, calcium salts, etc. 2. Pathol. sclerosed. [SCLERO(TIC) + -IZE + -ED²] scle·ro·tome (sklēr'ə tōm', sklēr'-), n. 1. Embryol. the part of the primitive somite contributing to the development of the vertebrae and ribs. 2. Surg. an instrument for use in performing a sclerotomy. 3. Zool. a fibrous partition separating adjacent myotomes. [SCLERO- + -TOME] —scle·ro·tom·ic (sklēr'ə tom'ik, sklēr'-), adj.

scle·rot·o·my (skli rot'ə mē), n., pl. -mies. Surg. incision into the sclera, as to extract foreign bodies. [SCLERO- + -TOMY]

shall (shal; unstressed shəl), auxiliary v., pres. sing. 1st pers. shall, 2nd shall or (Archaic) shalt, 3rd shall, pres. pl. shall; past sing. 1st pers. should, 2nd should or (Archaic) shouldst, 3rd should, past pl. should; imperative, infinitive, and participle lacking. 1. (generally used in the first person to denote simple future time) plan to, intend to, or expect to: I shall go today. 2. (generally used in the second and third persons to denote authority or determination) will have to, is determined to, promises to, or definitely will: You shall do it, or else! 3. (used interrogatively in questions that admit of shall in the answer): Shall he be told? He shall. 4. (used conditionally in all persons to indicate future time): if he shall come. [ME schal, OE sceal; c. OS skal, OHG scal, Icel skal; cf. G soll, D zal]

—Usage. In formal speech and writing, as well as in the information and explanation of parliamentary speakers, SHALL is restricted to use with the first person, singular and plural: I shall go. We shall be there. WILL, in these contexts, is used with the second and third persons: you, he, she, it, and they. WILL, in this style, SHALL used with pronouns other than I and we denotes determination or command (You shall go, even if you don't want to); it sometimes carries the same force when used with I and we: I shall return. Although there are some who feel that the meaning "to decide, bring about, or attempt to effect by act of will" is inherent in WILL, it is actually a sense of another word (to will). Generally, in ordinary speech, SHALL has fallen into disuse, perhaps because its contraction ('ll) is indistinguishable from that of WILL.
