Ura′lian em′erald, demantoid: not a true emerald.

U·ral·ic (yo͝o ral′ik), n. 1. a family of languages that comprises Finno-Ugric and Samoyedic and subfamilies. Hungarian, Finnish, and Estonian belong to Uralic. —adj. 2. Also, Uralian. of or pertaining to Uralic. [URAL + -IC]

U·ral·ite (yo͝or′ə līt′), n. Mineral. hornblende formed by the hydrothermal alteration of pyroxene. [< G Uralit, named after URAL MOUNTAINS where found; see -ITE1] —u·ral·it·ic (yo͝or′ə lit′ik), adj.

U′ral Moun′tains, a mountain range in the W Soviet Union, extending N and S from the Arctic Ocean to near the Caspian Sea, forming a natural boundary between Europe and Asia. Highest peak, Mt. Telpos, 5540 ft. Also called U′rals.

U′ralsk (o͝o rälsk′), n. a city in W Kazakstan, in the W Soviet Union in Asia. 114,000 (est. 1964).

u·ra·na·ly·sis (yo͝or′ə nal′ə sis), n., pl. -ses (-sēz′). urinalysis.

U·ra·ni·a (yo͝o rā′nē ə), n. 1. Class. Myth. the Muse of astronomy. 2. a name of Aphrodite, as representing spiritual love. 3. a girl's given name.

U·ra·ni·an (yo͝o rā′nē ən), adj. pertaining to the planet Uranus. [URAN(US) + -IAN] u·ran·ic1 (yo͝o ran′ik), adj. Chem. 1. of or containing uranium, esp. in the tetravalent state. 2. containing uranium in a lower state of oxidation than the corresponding uranous compound. [URAN(IUM) + -IC] u·ran·ic2 (yo͝o ran′ik), adj. of or pertaining to the heavens; celestial; astronomical: uranic principles. [< Gk ouranikós, equiv. to ouran(ós) heaven + -ikos adj. suffix]

u·ra·nin·ite (yo͝o ran′ə nīt′), n. a mineral, probably originally uranium dioxide, UO_2, but altered by radioactive decay, and usually containing more or less uranium trioxide, lead, helium, etc., occurring in several varieties, including pitchblende: the most important ore of uranium. [URAN(IUM) + -IN2 + -ITE1]

u·ra·nis·cus (yo͝or′ə nis′kəs), n., pl. -nis·ci (-nis′ī). Archit. a cover, as of a cupola, or a coffer of a ceiling. [< Gk ouraniskos, equiv. to ouran(ós) heaven + -iskos adj. suffix] u·ra·nite (yo͝or′ə nīt′), n. Mineral. any of the uranium phosphates, as autunite or torbernite. [< G Uranit. See URANIUM, -ITE1] —u·ra·nit·ic (yo͝or′ə nit′ik), adj.

u′ranite group′, the mineralogical group including uranites and related minerals.

u·ra·nit·o·phane (yo͝o ran′ə fān′), n. Chem. a white, lustrous radioactive, metallic mineral, occurring in pitchblende, and having compounds which are used in photography and in coloring glass. Its uranium-235 isotope is used in atomic and hydrogen bombs. It is a by-product used in power reactors. Symbol: U; at. wt.: 238.03; at. no.: 92; sp. gr.: 19.07. [< NL; see URAN(US), -IUM] uranium 235, Chem. the radioactive uranium isotope having a number of 235 and a half life of 7.07 × 10^8 yrs., comprising 0.715 percent of natural uranium. When bombarded with neutrons it undergoes fission with the release of energy. Also called U-235, U 235.

uranium 238, Chem. the radioactive uranium isotope having a mass number 238 and a half life of 4.5 × 10^9 years, comprising 99.28 percent of natural uranium; subject in nuclear reactors to a source of the fissionable isotope plutonium 239. Also called U-238, U 238 uranium 239, Chem. the uranium isotope with a mass number 239. It is artificially produced by the neutron bombardment of U-238 and undergoes radioactive decay. Also called U-239, U 239

Ura′nium Cit′y, a city in NW Saskatchewan, in central Canada. 2,000 (estimated 1949 (1950)).

ura′nium hexafluˑoride, Chem. a colorless, water-insoluble, crystalline, volatile solid, UF_6, used in its gaseous state in separating uranium 235 from uranium.

ura′nium seˑries, Chem. the radioactive series that starts with uranium 238 and ends with a stable isotope of lead of mass number 206. Also, ura′ni·um-raˑdi·um seˑries and ra′di·um seˑries.

urano-, a learned borrowing from Greek meaning "heavens," used in the formation of compound words: uranography; uranometry. [< Gk, comb. form of ouranós heaven, heaven] u·ra·no·graˑphy (yo͝or′ə nog′rə fē), n. the branch of astronomy concerned with the description and mapping of the heavens, and esp. of the fixed stars. Also called uranology. [< Gk ouranographía. See URANO-, -GRAPHY] —u′ra·no·graˑpher, n. —u′ra·no·graph·ic (yo͝or′ə nō graf′ik), u′ra·no·graph′i·cal, adj.

u·ra·nol·o·gy (yo͝or′ə nol′ə jē), n., pl. -gies. Astron. 1. uranography. 2. a treatise on the celestial bodies. [URANO- + -LOGY] —u·ra·no·log·i·cal (yo͝or′ə nō loj′i kəl), adj.

u·ra·nom·e·try (yo͝or′ə nom′i trē), n. Astron. 1. a chart of the positions of the heavenly bodies on the celestial sphere. 2. the measurement of the positions of heavenly bodies. [< NL uranometria. See URANO-, -METRY] —u·ra·no·met·ri·cal (yo͝or′ə nə met′ri kəl), adj.

u·ra·nos·co·pid (yo͝or′ə nos′kə pid), n. 1. any fish of the family Uranoscopidae, comprising the stargazers. —adj. 2. belonging or pertaining to the family Uranoscopidae. [< NL Uranoscopid(ae) name of the family, equiv. to uranoscop(us) kind of fish (< Gk ouranoskópos, lit., observing the heavens; see URANO-, -SCOPE) + -idae -ID2] u·ra·nous (yo͝or′ə nəs), adj. Chem. containing tri-valent uranium. [< NL uranōs(us). See URANIUM, -OUS]

U·ra·nus (yo͝or′ə nəs, yo͝o rā′-), n. 1. Class. Myth. the personification of Heaven and ruler of the world, son and husband of Gaea (Earth) and father of the Titans, the Cyclopes, etc., who confined his children in Tartarus and was dethroned by his son Cronus, youngest of the Titans, at the instigation of Gaea. 2. Astron. the planet seventh in order from the sun, having a diameter of 30,880 miles, a mean distance from the sun of 1,783,000,000 miles, a period of revolution of 84.02 years, and 5 satellites. 4. a language u·ra·nyl (yo͝or′ə nil), n. Chem. the bivalent ion, UO_2^{++}, or group, UO_2, which forms salts with acids. [URAN(IUM) + -YL] —u′ra·nyl′ic, adj.

u·ra·ra (yo͝o rär′ə), n. curare. [< Carib]

U·rar·ti·an (o͝o rär′tē ən), adj. 1. of or pertaining to Urartu, its people, or their language. —n. 2. a native or inhabitant of Urartu. 3. the non-Semitic, non-Indo-European language of Urartu, written in a cuneiform syllabic script. [URART(U) + -IAN] volt[1] (vōlt), n. Elect. the meter-kilogram-second unit of electromotive force or potential difference, equal to the electromotive force or potential difference that will cause a current of one ampere to flow through a conductor with a resistance of one ohm. Abbr.: V, v [named after Alessandro VOLTA] volt[2] (vōlt), n. 1. Manège. a. a circular or turning movement of a horse. b. a gait in which a horse going sideways turns around a center, with the head turned outward. 2. Fencing. a sudden movement to leap to avoid a thrust. [< F volte < It volta < VL volvita* a turn; see VAULT[1]] volta (vōl′tə; It. vôl′tä), n., pl. -te (-tā; It. -te). Music. turn; time (used in phrases): una volta ("once"); duo volte ("twice"); prima volta ("first time"), etc. [< It: a turn; see VOLT[2]]

Volta (vōl′tə or, It., vôl′tä for 1; vol′tä for 2), n. 1. Alessandro, Count, 1745–1827, Italian physicist. 2. a river in W Africa, in Ghana, formed by the confluence of the Black Volta and the White Volta and flowing into the Bight of Benin. ab. 250 mi. long; with branches ab. 1240 mi. long.

volta-, a combining form of voltaic: voltameter.

Volta effect′ (vōl′tə), Elect. See contact potential.

Volta·ic (vol tā′ik), adj. voltaic.

volt·age (vōl′tij), n. Elect. electromotive force or potential difference expressed in volts. [VOLT[1] + -AGE] volt′age divid′er, Elect. a resistor or series of resistors connected in parallel across a source used to provide voltages which are fractions of that of the source. Also called potential divider.

volt·a·ic (vol tā′ik), adj. 1. Elect. noting or pertaining to electricity or electric phenomena when produced by chemical action, as in a cell; galvanic. 2. (cap.) of or pertaining to Alessandro Volta. [named after A. VOLTA; see -IC] volt′a·ic bat′ter·y, Elect. an electric battery consisting of several voltaic cells connected together. Also called galvanic battery.

volt′a·ic cell′, Elect. a cell consisting of two electrodes of different materials immersed in a solution that chemical action produces an electromotive force.

volt′a·ic cou′ple, Elect. a pair of substances, as two different metals, which when placed in a proper solution produces an electromotive force by chemical action.

volt′a·ic elec′tric·ity, electric current; moving electric charges.

Volta·ic pile′, Elect. a cell that consists of several metal disks, each made of one of two dissimilar metals, arranged in an alternating series, and separated by pads moistened with an electrolyte. Also called galvanic pile. See voltaic cell.

volt·aire (vol târ′, vōl-; Fr. vôl ter′), n. (François Marie Arouet), 1694–1778, French philosopher, historian, dramatist, and essayist. —Vol·tair′e·an, Vol·tair′i·an, adj., n.

volt·a·ism (vol′tə iz′əm), n. the branch of electrical science that deals with the production of electricity by chemical action or by chemical action. [named after A. VOLTA; see -ISM] volt·am·e·ter (vōlt′am mē′tər), n. a device for measuring the quantity of electricity passing through a conductor by the amount of electrolytic decomposition it produces, or for measuring the strength of a current by the amount of such decomposition in a given time. Also, coulometer. [VOLT[1] + -AMPERE + -METER] —volt·a·met·ric (vol′tə met′rik), adj.

volt·am·me·ter (vōlt′am mē′tər), n. an instrument for measuring voltage or amperage. [VOLT-AM(PERE) + -METER] volt·am·pere (vōlt′am′pēr), n. Elect. an electric measurement unit, equal to the product of one volt and one ampere, equivalent to one watt for direct current systems and a variable power for alternating current systems. Abbr.: Va, va

Vol·ta's pile′ (vōl′təz), Elect. See voltaic pile. [named after A. VOLTA] volt·a·tion (vol tā′shən, kō′ō lom′), n. Elect. a unit of electric energy, equivalent to one joule and equal to the energy produced by the transfer of one coulomb of charge across a potential difference of one volt.

volte (vōlt), n. 1. Fencing. a sudden movement to parry a thrust. 2. a turnabout, esp. a reversal of opinion or policy. [< F < It voltafaccia, equiv. to volta turn (see VOLT[2]) + faccia FACE] volt·e-face (vōlt′ə fās′), n. imperative. Music. turn; turn over: a direction to turn the page. [< It] volt·me·ter (vōlt′mē′tər), n. Elect. a calibrated instrument for measuring the potential difference between two points. [VOLT[1] + -METER]

Vol·tur·no (vōl tŏŏr′nō), n. a river in S central Italy, flowing from the Apennines into the Tyrrhenian Sea. 130 mi. long.

vol·tus (vol′təs), n. the ancient Roman personification of the east or southeast wind. Cf. Eurus.

vol·u·ble (vol′yə bəl), adj. characterized by a ready and continuous flow of words; fluent; glib; talkative: a voluble salesman. 2. Bot. twining: voluble stem. [< L volūbil(is) which turns easily, hence rapid (of speech), equiv. to volū(tus) ptp. of volvere to turn + -bilis -BLE] —vol′u·bil′i·ty, vol′u·ble·ness, n. —vol′u·bly, adv.

—Syn. talkative, loquacious. See fluent. —Ant. taciturn.

vol·ume (vol′yōōm, -yəm), n. 1. a collection of written or printed sheets bound together and constituting a book: a volume of poems. 2. a set or series of books. 3. a roll of papyrus, parchment, or the like, or of manuscript. 4. the amount of space, measured in cubic units, that an object or substance occupies. 5. a mass or quantity, esp. a large quantity, of something: a volume of mail; volumes of abuse. 6. amount; total: the volume of business; the volume of crime. 7. degree of sound intensity or audibility; loudness: to turn up the volume on a radio; volume control. 8. (pl.) clouds, smoke, etc., in large masses. [VOLUME + -ED[3]] vo·lu·me·ter (və lōō′mi tər), n. any of various instruments or devices for measuring volume, as of gases, liquids, or solids. [VOLUME + -METER] vol·u·met·ric (vol′yə me′trik), adj. of or pertaining to measurement by volume. Also, vol′u·met′ri·cal. [VOLUME + -METRIC] —vol′u·met′ri·cal·ly, adv.

—vo·lu·me·try (və lōō′mi trē), n.

volumet′ric anal′ysis, Chem. analysis by volume, esp. by titration. 2. determination of the volume of gases that changes their volume during combination. Cf. gravimetric analysis.

volu′me velo′city, Physics. the movement caused by a sound wave of a unit volume of a specific transmitting medium through a unit area per unit of time.

vo·lu·mi·nous (və lōō′mə nəs), adj. 1. forming, filling, or writing a large volume or many volumes: His humorous writings filled a voluminous publication in a standard edition. 2. sufficient to fill a volume or volumes: a voluminous correspondence. 3. of great volume, size, or extent: a voluminous flow of lava; voluminous records. 4. of ample size, extent, or fullness: voluminous petticoats. 5. Archaic. having many coils, convolutions, or windings. [< LL voluminos(us) full of coils, equiv. to L volūmin- (s. of volūmen VOLUME) + -ōsus -OUS] —vo·lu′mi·nous·ly, adv. —vo·lu′mi·nous·ness, vo·lu·mi·nos·i·ty (və lōō′mə nos′i tē), n.

Vo·lund (vō′lŏŏnd), n. Scand. Myth. Wayland.

vol·un·ta·rism (vol′ən tə riz′əm), n. any theory that regards the will rather than the intellect as the fundamental agency or principle. 2. voluntaryism. [VOLUNTAR(Y) + -ISM] —vol′un·ta·rist, n., adj.

watt-hour (wot′our′, -ou′ər), n. a unit of work equal to the power of one watt operating for one hour, equivalent to 3600 joules. Abbr.: Wh Also, watt′-hour′.

wat·tle (wot′əl), n., v., -tled, -tling, adj. —n. 1. Often, wattles. Chiefly Brit. a number of rods or stakes interwoven with twigs or tree branches for making fences, walls, etc. 2. wattles, a number of poles laid on a roof to hold thatch. 3. (in Australia) any of various acacias whose slender branches were used by the early colonists for wattles, now valued esp. for their bark, which is used in tanning. 4. Brit. Dial. a twig, stick, rod, or wand. 5. a hurdle. 6. Ornith. a fleshy lobe or appendage hanging from the throat or chin of certain birds, as the domestic fowl, the turkey, etc. —v.t. 6. to bind, wall, fence, etc., with wattle or wattles. 7. to roof or thatch with wattles. 8. to form into a basketwork; interweave; interlace. 9. to make or construct by interweaving twigs or branches: to wattle a fence. —adj. 10. built or covered with wattle or wattles. [ME watel, OE watul covering, var. of watla bandage; see WAD¹] wat′tle and daub′, 1. Also, wat′tle and dab′. Also called mud and mud. a building technique employing wattles plastered with clay and mud. 2. a form of wall construction consisting of upright posts or stakes interwoven with twigs or tree branches and plastered with a mixture of clay and straw.

wat·tle-bird (wot′əl bûrd′), n. an Australian honey eater, Anthochaera paradoxa, having a pendulous wattle on each side of the throat. [WATTLE + BIRD] wat·tle·less (wot′əl lis), adj. Elect. without watts or power, as an alternating current which differs in phase by 90 degrees from the applied electromotive force or an electromotive force which differs in phase by 90 degrees from the current. [WATT + -LESS] watt·me·ter (wot′mē′tər), n. Elect. a calibrated instrument for measuring electric power in watts. [WATT + -METER]

Watts (wots), n. 1. George Frederick, 1817–1904, English painter and sculptor. 2. Isaac, 1674–1748, English theologian and hymnist.

Watts-Dun·ton (wots′dun′tən), n. (Walter) Theodore (Walter Theodore Watts), 1832–1914, English poet, novelist, and critic.

watt-sec·ond (wot′sek′ənd), n. a unit of work equal to the energy of one watt acting for one second; the equivalent of one joule. Also, watt′sec′ond.

Wa·tu·si (wä tōō′sē), n., pl. -sis, (esp. collectively) -si. 1. a member of a tall, slender, partly Caucasoid people of Rwanda and Burundi. 2. (usually l.c.) a dance that is a modification of the frug. —v.i. 3. to dance the watusi.

waucht (Scot. wäkht, wôkht; Eng. Dial. wät), n., v.i. Scot. and North Eng. waught.

Wau·chu·la (wô chōō′lə), n. a town in central Florida. 3411 (1960).

Wau·con·da (wô kon′də), n. a town in NE Illinois. 1007 (1960).

wauf (wof), adj., n. Scot. waff².

wauf·ie (wof′ē), n. Scot. waffle.

waugh (wô), adj. Scot. and North Eng. 1. tasteless; insipid. 2. unpleasant to taste. 3. unpleasant to smell. 4. tastes, smells, sounds, etc.) weak; faint. [OE wealg nauseous ?]

Waugh (wô), n. 1. Alec (Alexander Raban), born 1898, English novelist, traveler, and lecturer (son of Arthur, brother of Evelyn). 2. Arthur, 1866–1943, English literary critic, publisher, and editor (father of Alec and Evelyn). 3. Evelyn (Arthur St. John), 1903–66, English novelist, traveler, and biographer (author of books on travel (son of Arthur, brother of Alec). 5. Frederick Judd (jud), 1861–1940, U.S. painter and etcher.

waught (Scot. wäkht, wôkht; Eng. Dial. wät), Scot. and North Eng. —n. 1. a copious draft. —v.t., v.i. 2. to drink fully. Also, waucht. [?]

waugh (wôk, wäk), v.i., v.t., n. Scot. wake¹

Wau·ke·gan (wô kē′gən), a city in NE Illinois, on Lake Michigan, N of Chicago. 55,719 (1960).

Wau·ke·sha (wô′ki shô′), n. a city in SE Wisconsin, W of Milwaukee. 30,004 (1960).

Wau·kon (wô kon′), n. a town in NE Iowa. 3639 (1960).

wauk·rife (wôk′rīf′, wäk′-), adj. Scot. wakerife.

waul (wôl), v.i. to cry like a cat or a newborn infant; squall. Also, wawl. [? < Scand; cf. Icel vāla to wail. See CATWAUL]

Wau·pac·a (wô pak′ə), n. a town in central Wisconsin. 3984 (1960).

Wau·pun (wô pon′), n. a town in central Wisconsin. 7935 (1960).

waur (wôr, wär), adj., adv. Scot. and North Eng. worse. [var. of WAR²]

Wau·sau (wô′sô), n. a city in central Wisconsin. 56,923 (1960).

Wau·se·on (wô′sē ən), n. a town in NW Ohio. 4311 (1960).

Wau·wa·to·sa (wô′wə tō′sə), n. a city in SE Wisconsin, near Milwaukee. 56,923 (1960).

wave (wāv), n., v., waved, wav·ing. —n. 1. a disturbance on the surface of a liquid body, as the sea or a lake, in the form of a ridge or swell, or any similar surging or progressing movement or part resembling a wave of the sea: a wave of the pulse. 2. a swell, surge, or rush of feeling, movement, prosperity, etc.: a wave of disgust sweeping over a person; a wave of cholera throughout the country. 4. a widespread feeling, opinion, tendency, etc.: a wave of anti-intellectualism; the new wave of installment buying. 5. a mass movement, as of troops, settlers, migrating birds, etc. 6. an outward curve, or one of a series of such curves, in a surface or line; undulation. 7. the act or an instance of waving, as a flag or the hand. 8. a fluttering sign or signal made with the hand, a flag, etc.: a farewell wave. 9. natural waviness of the hair, or a special treatment to impart waviness: to have a wave in one's hair; to get a shampoo and a wave. 10. a period or spell of unusually hot or cold weather. 11. Physics. a progressive disturbance propagated from point to point in a medium or space without progress or advance by the points themselves, as in the transmission of sound or light. 12. Archaic. a body of water. —v.i. 13. to move freely and gently back and forth or up and down, by the action of air currents, sea swells, etc.: The flags were waving in the wind. 14. to curve alternately in opposite directions; have an undulating form: The road waved along the valley. 15. to bend or sway up and down or to and fro, as branches or plants in the wind. 16. to be moved, esp. alternately in opposite directions: The lady's handkerchief waved in greeting. 17. to give a signal by fluttering or flapping something: She waved to me with her hand. —n.t. 18. to cause to flutter or have a waving motion in: A night wind waves the tattered banners. 19. to cause to move to and fro and up and down or to and fro: The storm waved the heavy branches of the elm. 20. to give an undulating form to; cause to curve up and down or in and out. 21. to give a wavy appearance or pattern to, as silk. 22. to impart a wave to (the hair). 23. to move, esp. alternately in opposite directions: to wave the hand. 24. to signal to by waving a flag or the like; direct by a waving motion: to wave a car to the curb. 25. to wave traffic around an obstacle. 25. to signify or express by a waving movement: to wave a last good-by. [ME; OE wafian]—wave′less, adj. —wave′like′, adv.

—Syn. 1. undulation, sea. WAVE, RIPPLE, BREAKER, SURF refer to a swell on the surface of water. WAVE is the general word: waves in a high wind. A RIPPLE is the smallest kind of wave, such as is caused by a stone dropped in water or by a gentle breeze. A BREAKER is a wave breaking, or about to break, upon the shore or upon rocks: the roar of breakers. SURF is the collective name for breakers: Heavy surf makes bathing dangerous. 13. undulate, fluctuate, float, sway, rock.

Wave (wāv), n. an enlisted member of the Waves. Also, WAVE. [see WAVES] wave′ cy′clone, Meteorol. a cyclone that forms on a front and is marked by the presence of an increasingly sharp, wavelike deformation of the front.

waved (wāvd), adj. having a form, outline, or appearance resembling waves; undulating. [WAVE + -ED²] wave′ di′ode, Electronics. See traveling-wave diode.

wave′ equa′tion, 1. Math., Physics. an equation describing wave motion, $\nabla^2\phi = \frac{1}{c^2}\frac{\partial^2\phi}{\partial t^2}$ where ∇ is the Laplace operator, ϕ is a wave function, c is the velocity of propagation, and t is the time. 2. Physics. See Schrödinger wave equation.

wave-form (wāv′fôrm′), n. Physics. the shape of a wave, as determined by plotting the instantaneous values of a periodic quantity against the time.

wave′ front′, Physics. a surface, real or imaginary, that is the locus of all adjacent points at which the phase of oscillation at the points is the same.

wave′ func′tion, Physics. 1. a solution of a wave equation. 2. the solution of the Schrödinger wave equation the square of the modulus of which at any amplitude represents the probability of finding a given particle in a given element of volume.

wave′ guide′, Electronics. a piece of hollow, conducting tubing, usually rectangular or circular in cross section, used as a conductor or directional transmitter for microwaves propagated through its interior.

wave-length (wāv′lengkth′), n. Physics. the distance, measured in the direction of propagation of a wave, between two successive points in the wave that are characterized by the same phase of oscillation. Also, wave′ length′. [WAVE + LENGTH] wave-let (wāv′lit), n. a small wave; ripple. [WAVE + -LET]

Wa-vell (wā′vəl), n. Archibald Percival, 1st Earl, 1883–1950, British field marshal and author: viceroy of India 1943–47.

wa-vel-lite (wā′və lit′), n. a hydrous aluminum fluophosphate occurring as a white to yellowish-green or brown mineral often in radiating fibers. [named after W. Wavell, (d. 1829), English physician, the finder; see -ITE¹] wave′ mechan′ics, Physics. the part of quantum mechanics that treats elementary particles by means of their wavelike properties.

wave-me-ter (wāv′mē′tər), n. a device for measuring the wave length or frequency of a radio wave. [WAVE + -METER] wave′ mold′ing, any architectural member, as a stringcourse, having a Vitruvian scroll in low relief.

wave′ num′ber, the number of waves in one centimeter; 2π times the reciprocal of the wavelength.

wa-ver¹ (wā′vər), v.i. 1. to sway to and fro; flutter: Foliage wavers in the breeze. 2. to flicker or quiver, as light: A distant beam wavered and then disappeared. 3. to become unsteady from weakness, fatigue, etc.: When she heard the news her senses wavered. 4. to shake or tremble, as the hands, voice, etc.: Her voice wavered. 5. to feel or show hesitation; be irresolute: He wavered in his determination. 6. (of things) to fluctuate or vary: Prices wavered. 7. to totter or reel: The earth quaked and the tower wavered. [ME; ? ult. a blend of WAVE and waberen to move about, Icel vafra to toddle] —wa′ver-er, n. —wa′ver-ing-ly, adv.

—Syn. 1. WAVER, FLUCTUATE, VACILLATE refer to an alternation or hesitation between one direction and another. WAVER means to hesitate between choices: to waver as to what course to pursue. FLUCTUATE suggests changes from one side to the other or to up and down: The prices of stocks fluctuate when there is bad news followed by good. VACILLATE is to make up one's mind, change it again and again, or to be undecided as to what to do: We must not vacillate but must set a day.

wa-ver² (wā′vər), n. 1. a person who waves or causes something to flutter or have a waving motion: Election time brings out the wavers of flags and harangуers of mobs. 2. a person who specializes in waving hair. 3. something, as a curling iron, used for waving hair. [WAVE + -ER¹]

Wa-ver-ley (wā′vər lē), n. (or 'Tis Sixty Years Since) a historical novel (1814) by Sir Walter Scott: the first of the Waverley novels.

Wa′verley Nov′els, a group of novels written by Sir Walter Scott.

Wa-ver-ly (wā′vər lē), n. 1. a town in NE Iowa, 6857 (1960). 2. a town in S New York, 5950 (1960). 3. a town in S Ohio, 3830 (1960). 4. a town in central Tennessee, 2891 (1960).

wa′ver mem′brane, Embryol. See amniotic membrane.

Waves (wāvz), n., Sea of. See Mare Undarum.

Waves (wāvz), n. (construed as sing. or pl.) Women's Reserve, U.S. Naval Reserve. Also, WAVES. [W(omen's) A(ppointed) V(olunteer) E(mergency) S(ervice)] wave′ scroll′, See Vitruvian scroll.

wave-sock (wāv′sok), n. Old Eng. Law. goods from a ship wrecked at sea that are found floating on the water. [WAVE + -sock (formed after AF floteson FLOTSAM)] wave′ the′ory, Physics. the theory that light is propagated as a wave, similar to oscillations in magnetic and electric fields. Also called undulatory theory. Cf. corpuscular theory.

wave′ train′, Physics. a series of successive waves of oscillation.

wa-vey (wā′vē), n., pl. -veys. U.S. and Canada Dial. any of various wild geese. [< Algonquian] wav-y¹ (wā′vē), adj., wav-i-er, wav-i-est. 1. curving in alternately opposite directions; undulating: a wavy course; wavy hair. 2. abounding or characterized by waves: the wavy sea. 3. resembling or suggesting waves: a cotton material with a wavy pattern. 4. Bot. a. bending with successive curves in opposite directions, as a margin. b. having such a margin, as a leaf. 5. Heraldry, noting a partition line or ordinary formed in a series of S-curves. 6. Obs. vibrating or tremulous; unsteady; wavering. [WAVE + -Y¹] —wav′i-ly, adv. —wav′i-ness, n.

wa-vy² (wā′vē), n., pl. -vies. Chiefly Canadian. See wavey.

wāw (wou), n. the 27th letter of the Arabic alphabet. [< Ar] wawl (wôl), v.i. Chiefly Scot. waul.

wax¹ (waks), n. 1. See beeswax. a. solid, yellowish, nonglycerine substance allied to fats and oils, secreted by bees, plastic when warm and melting at about 140°F, variously employed in making candles, models, casts, ointments, etc., and used by bees in constructing their honeycomb. 2. any of various similar substances, as spermaceti, the secretions of certain insects, or the juice of certain plants. Cf. vegetable wax, wax insect. 3. any of a group of substances composed of hydrocarbons, alcohols, fatty acids, and esters of both, usually insoluble in water: carnauba wax. 4. cerumen; earwax. 5. a resinous substance used by shoemakers for rubbing thread. 6. See sealing wax. 7. a person or object suggesting wax, as in manageability: She was a wax in his hands. Helpless as wax in their hands. —v.t. 8. to rub, smear, stiffen, polish, etc., with wax: to wax the floor. 9. to fill crevices (in ornamental carving) with colored material. 10. Informal. to make a phonograph recording of. —adj. 11. made of, pertaining to, or resembling wax: a wax doll; a wax candle. [ME; OE weax, n.; wæs, G Wachs, Icel vax] —wax′er, n. —wax′like′, adj.

wax² (waks), v.i., waxed; waxed or (Poetic) wax-en; wax-ing. 1. to increase in extent, quantity, intensity, power, etc.: The moon waxed and its glamour grew. (of the moon) to increase in the extent of its illuminated portion before the full moon. Cf. wane (def. 1). 3. to grow or become: He waxed angry at the insinuation. [ME; OE weaxan; G wachsen, Icel vaxa] —Syn. 1. extend, grow, lengthen, enlarge, dilate.

wax³ (waks), n. Chiefly Brit. a fit of anger; rage. [? special use of WAX²] wax′ bean′, 1. a variety of string bean bearing yellowish, waxy pods. 2. the pod of this plant, used for food.

wax-ber-ry (waks′ber′ē, -bə rē), n., pl. -ries. 1. the wax myrtle, or the bayberry. 2. the snowberry. [WAX¹ + BERRY] wax-bill (waks′bil′), n. any of several Old World estrildine birds of the genus Estrilda, having white, pink, or red bills of waxy appearance, often kept as pets. [WAX¹ + BILL²] waxed′ pa′per. See wax paper.

waxed′ tab′let. See wax tablet.

wax-en (wak′sən), adj. 1. made of or covered, polished, or treated with wax. 2. resembling or suggesting wax: Illness gave his face a waxen appearance. 3. weak, easily molded, or influenced: a person of no characteristics: The minds of young children are waxen. —v. 4. Archaic. pp. of wax². [ME; OE weaxen. See WAX², -EN³] wax′ flow′er. See Madagascar jasmine.

wax′ gourd′, 1. a vine, Benincasa hispida, of tropical Asia, having a brown, hairy stem, large, solitary, yellow flowers, and melonlike fruit. 2. the fruit itself. Also called wax′ mel′on, wax′ pump′kin, white gourd.

wax′ing moon′, the moon at any time after new moon and before full moon, so called because its illuminated area is increasing. Cf. waning moon. See diagram under moon.

wax′ in′sect, any of several homopterous insects that secrete a waxy substance, esp. a Chinese scale insect, Ericerus pe-la.

wax′ jack′, an illuminating device consisting of a reel holding a waxed wick which is fed upward through a pierced plate. Also called taper jack.

wax′ moth′. See bee moth.

wax′ myr′tle, a shrub or tree of the genus Myrica, of the bayberry family, bearing berries coated with wax which is sometimes used in making candles. Also called tallow-shrub.

wax′ palm′, 1. a tall, pinnate-leaved palm, Ceroxylon peruvia, of the Andes, whose stem and leaves yield a resinous wax. 2. Also called carnauba. a palmate-leaved palm, Copernicia cerifera, of Brazil, having leaves coated with a hard wax.

wax′ pa′per, a whitish, translucent wrapping paper made moistureproof by a paraffin coating. Also, waxed paper.

wax′ pink′. See rose moss.

wax-plant (waks′plant′, -plänt′), n. any climbing or trailing, asclepiadaceous plant of the genus Hoya, of tropical Asia and Australia, having glossy leaves and umbels of pink, white, or yellowish, waxy flowers. [WAX¹ + PLANT] wax′ priv′et, an evergreen shrub, Ligustrum japonicum, of Japan and Korea, having leathery leaves and white flower clusters.

D welk, G welch, Goth hwileiks, lit., of what form] —Usage. Teachers of English and many good writers and stylists have long insisted that there is a distinction between WHICH and THAT in relative clauses is a useful one that should be kept. The traditional rule is that THAT is used to introduce restrictive relative clauses and WHICH to introduce nonrestrictive relative clauses. In The house that has green shutters has been sold, the relative clause is restrictive, hence is introduced by THAT. (This is the way that the author would write it, not the one with red or other shutters, that was sold.''') In The house, which has green shutters, has been sold, the relative clause is descriptive or parenthetical, hence is introduced by WHICH. Nowadays, however, this distinction is made more often in careful writing than in ordinary speech—where stress can often serve to express the restrictive/nonrestrictive nuances of a sentence—and many excellent writers regularly fail to treat THAT and WHICH differently.

On the other hand, WHICH is used regularly in referring to inanimate objects and, usually, animals and never to people, while THAT can be used for either. WHO, in its various forms, is used only in referring to people and, sometimes to animals that are pets: Fido, who lay at on the hill is white. The house, which is on the hill, is white. The man whom (or that) you saw is my father. Note that WHO can be either restrictive or nonrestrictive.

which-er (hwich′ər, wich′-), pron. 1. (of a certain number or group specified or implied) any one that: Take whichever you like. 2. no matter which: Whichever you choose, five others will be rejected. 3. (of an indicated number) no matter which: whichever day; whichever ones you choose. [late ME; see WHICH, EVER]

The twenty-sixth letter of the English alphabet developed from the seventh letter of the North Semitic alphabet, zayin. Adopted into Greek as zeta (ζ), it passed on to the Etruscans. It does not appear in Latin until after the conquest of Greece by the Romans in the 1st century B.C., when it was used to transliterate the Greek z-sound in words like zenith and zephyros. Placed at the end of the alphabet together with Greek-derived Y, it passed to all West-European alphabets in this position.
