- 1. Book day, my soul, Tell Mary's preise. By Canon F. Oakeley, in his fr. of Horst's Paradisus, 1850, p. 593, and divided, as in Horst, into six decades.
- 2, Daily, daily, eing to Mary, Sing, my soul, her praises due. This is in the Oratory Hys., 1854, and the Catholic Psalmist, 1858, p. 141. It is Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865. [J. M.]

repeated in the Catholia Hyl., 1860, as the first part of No. 63; and, in almost the same text, in the Crown of Jesus H. Bk., 1862, &c.

3. Sing, aing each day, A tuneful lay. By Cardinal Wiseman, in his Hymn of St. Casimir, London, 1859.

ix. Pulchra tota, sine nota onjuncumque maculae. This is really part of the cento made by St. Casimir. It is ir. as:-

Holy Queen! we bend before thee, Queen of purity divine. By E. Caswall, in his Masque of Mary, 1858, p. 312, and Hys. & Pooms, 1873, p. 176; repeated in the Hys. for the Year, 1867, and the Parachial H. Bk., 1880. In the Catholic Hyl., 1860, No. 63, pt. ii., it begins "Holy Mary, we implore three By thy purity divine," and this form is repeated in the Crown of Jesus H. Bk., 1862.

zi. Ut juoundas cervus undas, aestuans desiderat. This is found also in Daniel, v. p. 409, and in Trench's Sac. Latin Poetry, ed. 1864, p. 237. It is tr. as :-

The thirsty hart pants with desire. By D. T. Morgan, in his Hys. of the Latin Church, 1871,

These various forms and centes testify to the popularity which the poem has enjoyed in Roman Catholic circles. It is in parts very beautiful; but is, as a whole, too intensely Marian to lond itself for use in the Churches of the Reformation, unless with such adaptation as would almost destroy its identity. [J. M.]

Ut queant laxis resonare fibris. Paul the Deacon. [St. John the Baptist's Day.] This hymn by Paul the Deacon, con of Warnfried, is found in three MSS. of the 11th cent. in the British Museum (Jul. A. vi. f. 54; Vesp. D. xii. f. 81 b; Add. 30848 f. 165); and in the Latin Hys. of the Anglo-Saxon Ch., 1851, p. 102, is printed from an 11th cent. Ma. at Durham (B. lil. 82 f. 30b). Also in the St. Gall us. No. 887, of the 11th cent.; in a ms. of the 11th cent. at Corpus Christi College, Cambridge (391, p. 260), &c. Among the Bern Mes. it is found in No. 363 of the 8th cent.; No. 303 circa 900; and No. 455 of the 10th cent. Ernest Dimmler, in the Postas Latini acri Carolini, Berlin, 1881, vol. i. p. 83, gives it in the Appendix "Carminum Dubiorum" of Paul the Deacon, citing it as in a Vatican as, of the 10th cent., and many others. It is in the Roman, Scrum, York, Aberdeen, and other Breviaries. In the Sarum use part i. was assigned to Lauds, pt. ii. Antra deserti teneria sub unais to Matina, pt. iii., O nimis felix, meritique celal to Lands. Stanza i. has often been quoted by writers on music (from Guide of Arezzo in the 11th cept, onwards) as indicating the names of the musical

" Ut queant laxis Resonare fibris Mira gestorum Famuli tuorum Solve polluti Labii reatum, Sancte Johannes."

The printed text is also in Daniel i. No. 183, with readings at iv. pp. 163, 370, oiting the Bern Ms. No. 455, &c.; in Wacker-nagel, i. No. 127; Bässler, No. 64; G. M. Dreves's Hymnarius Moissincensis, 1888 p. 50, from a 10th cent. Ms.; and in Card. Newman's

V. In the New Golden Shower, N. Y., 1870, i.e. Mrs. Van Alstyne.

Vain are the hopes the sons of men. I. Watts. [Justification by Faith.] Pub. in his Hys. and S. Songs, 1709, Bk. i., No. 94, in 4 st. of 4 l., and headed "Justification by Faith, not by Works; or, The Law condemns, Grace justifies, Rom. iii. 19-22." In the Druft of the Scottish Translations and Paraphrases, 1745, it was given unaltered; in that of 1751 it was slightly changed; and in the authorised issue of the Trs. and Paraphs., 1781, No. xli., st. i., ii. were rewritten, but began with the original first line as above; at. iii. was taken from the Draft of 1751; and st. iv. unaltered from Watts. In the markings by the eldest daughter of W. Cameron (p. 200, ii.) these al-In the markings by the eldest terations are attributed to him. The use of the 1781 form of the text is far more extensive than that of the original. [J. J.]

Van Alstyne, Frances Jane, Crosby, a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, was b. at South East, Putnam County, New York, March 24, 1823. When six weeks old sie lost her sight. About 1885 she entered the New York City Institution for the Blind. On completing her training she became a teacher therein from 1847 to 1858. In 1858 she was married to Alexander Van Alstyne, a musician, who was also blind. Her first poem was pub. in 1831; and her first volumes of verse as A Blind Girl, and Other Poems, 1844; Monteresy, and Other Poems, 1849; and A Wreath of Columbia's Flowers, 1858. Her first bymn was "We are going we are going" (Death and Burial), which was written for Mr. Bradbury and pub. in the Golden Censer, 1864. From 1853 to 1858 she wrote 20 songs, which were set to music by G. F. Root. Her songs and hymns number some 2,000 or more, and have been published mainly in several of the popular American Sunday school collections, and often under a nom de plume. About 60 have come into C. U. in G. Britain. The majority of these are taken from the following American collections:--

- In addition to these hymns, all of which are in C. U. in G. Britain (mainly through I. D. Sankey's Sacred Songs and Solos, the Metho-dist S. S. H. Bk., the Silver Street Sunday Scholar's Companion, and other collections for Sunday schools), there are also "A blessing for you, will you take it?" (Pardon through Jesus); "My song shall be of Jesus' (Praise of Jesus); "Now, just a word for Jesus" (Home Missions); "Onward, upward, Christian colding," (Particles of Jesus') Christian soldier" (Pressing Heavenward); "Sinner, how thy heart is troubled" (Invita-tion); "Tisa goodly, pleasant land" (Heaven anticipated); and "When the dewy light was fading" (Death anticipated). All of these are in I. D. Sankoy's Sac. Songs & Solos. Mrs. Van Alstyne's most popular composition is "Safe in the arms of Jesus" (Safety in Jesus). This was written in 1868, at the request of Mr. W. H. Doane, to his well-known melody with which it is inseparably associated, and pub. in Bright Jewels, 1869. Mrs. Van Alstyne's hymns have sometimes been published. anonymously; but the greater part are signed by a bewildering number of initials, and nome de plume, including :-
- A; C; D. H. W; F; F, A. N; F, C; F, J, C; F, J, C; F, J, C, E; J, C, K; V; V, A; Ella Dale; F, Crosby; F, J, Crosby; Fannie; Fannie Orosby; Fanny; Fanny Von Alatyne; Jenny V; Mrs. Jenie Glenn; Mrs. Este Grinley; Miss V; Miss Viola V, A; Mrs. V; Vola, (List kindly supplied by Mr. H, P, Main, of New York.)

The combined sales of the volumes of songs and hymne named above have amounted in English epeaking countries to millions of copies. Notwithstanding the immense circulation thus given to Mrs. Van Alstyne's hymns, they are, with few exceptions, very weak and poor, their simplicity and cornestness being their redeeming features. Their popularity is largely due to the melodies to which they are wedded.

Since the above was in type we have found that the following are also in C. U. in G. Britain:-

- 51. Suppose the little cowslip. Value of Little Things.

- Things.

  52. Sweet hour of prayer. The Hour of Prayer. These are in Bradbury's Golden Chain, 1801.

  63. Never lose the golden rule. Love to our Neighbours. In Bradbury's Golden Censer, 1864.

  64. I will not be aireld at night. Trust in God. In Bradbury's Fresh Laurets, 1867.

  55. Frake Him, praise Him, Jesus out, &c. Praise of Jesus. In Biglow & Main's Bright Jeneis, 1889.

  58. More like Jesus would I be. More like Jesus. In Perkins & Taylor's Songe of Salantion, 1870.

  57. Behold me standing at the door. Christ at the Door. In Biglow & Main's Gristian Songs, 1872.

  68. If I come to Jesus. Jesus the Children's Guide.

  59. Jesus, Lord, I come to Thee, Trust in Jesus.

  60. Let me learn of Jesus. Jesus the Children's Friend.

- 61. Singing for Jesus, Osinging for Jesus. Singing for Jesus, Jane.

Of these hymns Nos. 58-62 we have not [J, J,]been able to trace.

Various. It was originally intended that additions to and corrections of articles in this Dictionary should come under this heading. The expension of the work far beyond its original limits, the accumulation of hymns and hymnological works of great value, the discovery of Mes. and books heretofore unknown to the hymnologist, the passing away of a large number of hymnwriters since the printing of this Dictionary was begun in 1880, and the late arrival of some important articles, have however necessitated an Appendix, which will be found at p. 1807. In every case where the reader is referred to Various in this Dictionary the information will be found in that Appendiz. [J. J.]

Vater unser im Himmelreich. [M. Luther. The Lord's Prayer.] This was included in V. Schumann's Geistliche Lieder, Leipzig, 1539, in 9 st. of 6 L, entitled "The Lord's Prayer briefly expounded and turned into metre" (apparently first as a broadsheet with the same title, in 1539; see Wackernagel's Bibliographia, 1855, p. 156); and thence in Wackernagel, iii. p. 24. Also in Schircks's ed. of Luther's Geistliche Lieder, 1854, p. 52; and in the Unv. L. S., 1851, No. 572. It is a beautiful rendering, and has been by some regarded as Luther's finest hymn. Each of the first eight stanzas amplifies one of the clauses of the Lord's Prayer (omitting the doxology), and the ninth is on the Amen. O. von Winterfeld, in his ed. of Luther's Deutsche Geistlicke Lieder, Leipzig, 1840, gives a facsimile of what he believed to be the autograph original draft of this hymn. Tr. as:

- 1. Our Father in the heaving above. A good and full tr. by A. T. Russell, as No. 121 in the Dalston Hospital B. Bk., 1848, repeated as No. 4, in the Appx. to his own Ps. & Hys., 1851, and omitting st. ix., in Maurice's Choral H. Bk., 1861.
- 2. Our Pather door, which art in beaven. In full, by R. Massie, in his Martin Luther's Spir. Songe, 1854, p. 61, repeated in the Ohio Luth. Hyl., 1880.

Vaughan, Charles John, p.p., s. of Mr. Vaughan, Vicar of St. Martin's Leicester, was b. in 1817, and educated at Rugby, and at Trinity College, Cambridge, where he graduated in 1838 as Senior Classic. He was for sometime Fellow of his College, and successively Vicar of St. Martin's, Leicester; Head Master of Harrow; Vicar of Doncaster; Master of the Temple; and Dean of Llandaff (1879). He has also been Chaplain in Ordinary to the Queen, and Chancellor of York Cathedral. In 1882 he was appointed Deputy Clerk of the Closet. Although so widely known as a Scholar, Theologian, and Preacher, his hymn-writing is very limited. Practically he is known by one hymn only: "Lord, Whose temple once did glisten" (Laying Foundation Stone of a Church), which was written at Cambridge about 1887, to the tune "The German Emperor" (H. A. & M., 1875, No. 292, 1st tune), and was used at the laying of the Foundation stone of Trinity Church, Chesterfield. It was pub. in Alford's Ps. & Hye., 1844, No. 115, in 4 st. of 8 L, and was given for "The Consecration of a Church." It is in several modern collections.

Vaughan, Henry, w.D., commonly called "The Silurist," was one of twin-brothers born of a titled family at Newton, Llansaintfliad, in 1621. After studying under the Rev. Matthew Herbert, Rector of Llangattock, he proceeded to Jesus College, Oxford, in 1638; but through the national troubles of those days, his studies, in common with those of his brother, were interrupted, and they had to leave the University. Subsequently he en-tered the medical profession, and practised at Brecon and at Newton. He d. April 23, 1695. His published works include, Poems with the Tenth Satire of Juvenal Englished, 1646; Olor Iscanus, 1651; The Mount of Olives, 1652, &c. As a religious poet he followed very closely the peculiarities of George Herbert, of whose writings he was a great admirer. His bost and most devotional poems were written during a severe affliction, and were pub in his Silex Scintillane. After being almost forgotten for more than 200 years, his quaint, thoughtful, devotional, and, in many instances, beautiful poems, are receiving attention at the hands of hymnal compilers and others. The title of the work in which these pieces appeared is :-

Siles Scintillans: or Sucred Poens and Private Elaculations. By Henry Yaughan, Siles-sist. London. Privated by J. W. for H. Bluxden, at 19 Castle in Cornsill, 1858. This contains 110 pages. This was reprinted as Siles Scintillans: or Sacred Poens and Private Bjaculation. The Second Billion, in two books: By Henry Yaughan, Silevist. London, Printed for Henry Crips, and Lodowick Lloyd, next to the Castle in Cornhill, and in Poper-Head Alley, 1855. The Rev. H. F. Lyte republished this work as, The Sacred Poens and Private Efaculations of Henry Vaughan, with Memoir. London, Pickerlug, 1847. It is also reprinted in Grosart's Puller Worthies, 1868.

From the Silex Scintillans several pieces have been taken as hymne for public worship. In addition to those annotated under their respective first lines (see Index of Anthers and Translators), the following, all from the lat ed. of 1650, are in C. U. :-

1. As travellers when the twilight's come. Life a Pilgrimage.

2. Bright shadows of true rest! some shoots of bliss. - engos spacows of true rest; some shoots of bliss. Sundays. Sometimes as "Types of eternal rest, fair buds of bliss."

3. Joy of my life, while left me bere. Guiding Stars.

4. King of mercy, King of love. God our King, 5. Lord, with what courage and delight. Cheerful-

Mese. 6. My God and King, to Thee I bow my knee. Lent. 7. Since in a land not burren still. Love and Ditcipline.

Up to those bright and gladsome bills. Ps. cxxi.
 What needs a conscience, clear and bright?

10. When one loud blast shall rend the deep. Advent. Judgment.

11. Zion's true glorious God! on Thee. Praise.

Of Vaughan's hymns the most widely used are:—"Bright Queen of heaven," "My soul, there is a countrie," and "Up to these bright and gladsome hills." [J. J.]

Vaughan, Rowland, was a member of on ancient Welsh family in Merionethshire. He received his University education at Jesus College, Oxford. His name stands pre-eminent among the contemporary gentry of Wales, for devoting his telents to the improvement of his poorer countrymen. He translated several excellent works; and besides being a good prose writer, he was also a good poet. His tr. of the Veni Creator Spiritus, "Tyr'd Yebryd Glan," and his Galarnad Pechadus are still in great favour in Wales. His mansion at Caergai was burnt to the ground by the Republican forces from Montgomeryshire, and part of his estates confiscated. His attachment to the King's cause brought upon him [W. G. T.] great sufferings.

Venez Jésus, mon salutaire. Antoinnette Bourignon. [Renouncing all for Christ.] This hymn was written, circa 1640, and expressed her determination to live for Christ alone, a resolution which she came to whilst suffering from her father's anger because she refused to marry a man whom he had chosen for her. It is given in her Works, Amsterdam, 1686, in 5 st. of 8 l. Tr. as:—

Come Baviour, Jesus, from above. Dr. Osborn, in The Postical Works of John and Charles Wes-ley, 1808-72, vol. i. v. 110, says in a note to this tr., which is given there from the Wesley Hys. and Sac. Poems, 1739, p. 123, in 10 st. of 4 l.

and Sac. Poems, 1739, p. 123, in 10 at. of 4 l.

"This, and the 'Farewell to the World,' p. 17, were probably farnished to the complers by Mr. Byrom, of Manchester (see 'Byrom and the Wesleye,' by the Rev. Dr. Hoole [1864], pp. 17, 21), and translated by him from the French of Mastam de Burignon. The copy of 'A Hyun to Jeans,' which is found in his 'Miscellaneous Poems' (Manchester, 1773), vol. il. p. 211, differs from that given above only in the title 'Renouncing all for Christ'), and in such verbal alterations as the superior tests and judgment of the Wesleys would dictate. The 9th and 16th verses, in both Byrom's and Wesley's copies are tinged with that mysticism to which the preface (to the Hyz. and Sac. Poems, 1732) refers; and Wesley has improved on himself as well as an Byrom in the last edition of v. 9 (that in the Large Hyun-Dock, 1780), where, include of 'Nor heaven nor earth,' we read 'Nothing on earth.'"

The references to Byrom and the Wesleys are these:-

(1) p. 17. Under date, "Manchester, March 3rd, 1738," Byrom writes to C. Wesley, and in his letter says:—"As your brother (J. Wesley) has brught so many hymns translated from the French, you will have a sufficient mumber, and no occasion to increase them by the small addition of Mademoiselle Bourignon's two little pieces. I desire you to favour my present weakness, if I judge wrong, and not to publish them."

(2) p. 27. Under date of "April 26th, 1739," Byrom writes to his son:—"They [J. & C. Wesley] have both together printed a book of hymns [the Hys. & Sta. Poems, 1739], althought which they have inserted two of Maden Bourignon's, the of which they call "A Farewell to the Bourigion's, one of which they call 'A Farewell to the World,' translated from the French; and the other, 'Renouncing all for Christ,' translated from the French, They have introduced them by a preface against what they call Myssic writers (not naming any particular author), for whom they say that they had once a great veneration, but think themselves obliged very solemnly to acknowledge their error, and to gnard others against the like, which they do by certain reasons that I do not see the reason of." see the reason of."

We regard these facts and quotations as good evidence in support of Byrom's authorship, notwithstanding that his Poems were pub. not by himself but by another ten years after his death.

In 1780 J. Wesley included his amended version in 8 st, of 4 l. in the Wes, H, Bk., No. 276. Since then it has passed into numerous collections in G. Britain and America in various forms varying from 4 to 8 stanzas, and all from J. Wesley's text. [J. J.]

Veni Creator Spiritus, Mentes tuo-rum visita. [Whitsentide.] In annotating this great hymn we shall deal (i.) with the MSS. and the various forms of the Text; (ii.) with its Authorship and Date; and lastly (iii.) with the differences found in its Use.

i. MSS. and Text. From the 12th cent. onwards man of this hymn are innumerable, as it is commonly found in the Hymnols, Breviaries, &c., of almost all churches of the West. Beforce the 12th cent. copies are much less plentiful. In order to determine the text, seven mas, all assigned to the 11th cont., have been collated as follows:-

Three now in the British Museum, viz., Jel. A., vi. f. 53 (Hymnal), Vep. D., xil. f. 77 (Hymnal), Add: 30848, f. 159 (Mozarabic Breviary); one at Corpon Christi College, Cambridge, Mo. 381, page 281 (Pasiter with hymns); one in the Bodlelan, Litwey, Mic. 320, f. 33 (Hymnal); one at Burham, B. iii. 33, L. 27 (Hymnal); and one in the Vatican at Rome, Patat. 30, (Pasiter with hymns).

Among other ancient mss. it is found

In two Rheimau nes., now in the Kantonal-Hibliothek at Zurich, viz. No. 111, f. 112b, of the 10th cent., and No. 91, f. 149, of the 11th cent., in the latter assigned to Vespera; in a Ms. of the 11th cent. at St. Gail, No. 387, page 215 (the earliest St. Gail ws. in which the Idbrarian, page 215 (the earliest St. Gail ws. in which the Idbrarian of the 12th cent. in the Brit. Miss., Arundel, 1557, 157b (the 18th Idbrarian) has (Pasiter with Hymns), &c.

In other early was, its existence and use are recognised, but only the first words of the hymn are given. Four such uss., all of the 11th cent., may be mentioned, viz. :-

Three in the British Museum, Hart. 2961, f. 1025 (Collectarium and Hymnal), 78411 D. xxvii. f. 76 (Book of Offices, &c., circa 1015), Add, 30850, f. 1375 (Mozarabio Antiphonary); and one in the Bodielan, Letting, Misc., 369, f. (Pontifical).

" Accende lumen sensibus Infunde amoram cordiեսո, Infirma nostri corporis Virtute firmans perpeti.

" Hostem repellas longins, Per Te sciamus, da,
Pacemque donas proti-845. Ductore sic Te praevio Vitemus omne noxium.

Patrem,
Noscamus atque Fillum,
Te utriusque Spiritum
Credamus cmni tempore."

These six etanzas clearly form the original text, and in some of the uss. cited (e.g. Add. 30848, and Palat. 30), in the Add. 18801, f. 128b (a Collectarium and Hymnal of the 12th cent.), and in some of the early printed Breviaries, e.g. the Augsburg Brev. of 1493, Basel Brev. of 1498, &c., &c., nothing more is added. Many Mss. indeed contain a doxology, the most usual being :-

" Sit lans Patri cum Filio. Sancto simul Paraclito, Nobisque mittat Filius Charlema Sancti Spiritus."

The extraneous character of the doxology is however betrayed by the quantity of the penultimate of Paraclitus, and by the great variety of such doxologies, almost every church having its own special one. The doxology in the Durham Hymnal is:—

" Sit lans Patri cum Genito, Amborum et Paracilto, Proies ut hunc promiserat, Nobis modoque tribuat."

In the Roman Brev. of 1570 and 1632 the doxology reads:---

"Dec Patri eit gloria, Et Filio, Qui a suortuis Surrexit, se Paraclito, In semplierna (saeculorum) saecula."

But whatever the form was it was, as a rule, merely a general dexology common to all the Pentecostal hymns, as indeed is often indicated by a rubric such as "Sic terminantur Hymni usque ad Vesperas Sabbati sequentis" (Brev. Rom.). In the Arundel MS. 155, only the words "Sit laus Patri," are added; and in the Vesp. D., xil., "Deo Patri sit gloria."

The variations in the six stanzas of the lext proper are few and of small importance, viz. in st. iii. Il. 3, 4, some MSS. give "promissum" and "ditans," and in st. iv. l. 4, some MSS. read "perpetim." In the Roman Brev. of 1632 the variations introduced are:-

ii. l. l. Qui diceris Paraciilus. ii. l. 2. Altissimi donum Bei. iii. l. 2. Digitus Paternae depterae. vi. i. 3. Teque utrineque Spiritum.

These variations however rest on no MA. authority, but are merely due to the tasteless revision of the Breviory hymns made in 1628-81, under Urban viii., and are simply somewhat clumsy attempts to improve the rhythm and scansion. That in st. ii. l. l, is specially to be regretted, as it destroys one of the most characteristic features of the hymn, viz. the way in which it preserves the correct quantity of the penultimate of Paraclitus, contrary to the general practice in Latin.

(β) Additions to the Original Text. In some Mes. an additional stanza is given between

st. v. and vi. as follows:-

" Da gaudiorum praemia, Da gratiarum munera, Dissolve litis vincula, Astringe pacis foedera."

This is contained e.g. in two was, in the Bodleian (Land Misc., 468 f. 4, of the 12th cent., and Liturg. Misc., 370, f. 117, oirca 1840), and in some of the early printed books, e.g.

the Basel Brev. of 1493. But it is wanting in the exiliest use. (e.g. it is not in the Durham Hymnal; Vesp. D., xii.; Jul. A., vi.; Litery. Misc., 320; Patat. 30; C. C. C., 391), and the true ending of the hymn is st, vi., which forms the real doxology, no other being needed.

Another extreneous stanza is sometimes inserted after st. vi., viz. :-

" Dudum sacrata pestera, Tua replesti gratia, Dimitta nunc petcamina, Et da quista tempora."

This is found in the Durham Hymnal, but it has no business in the text, and really belongs to the "Beata nobis gaudia" (p. 190, i.). In the Sarum Brev. it is attached, along with the doxology, "Sit laus Patri cum Filio," to other Pentecostal hymns.

There is thus no doubt that the hymn should really consist of the 24 lines printed together as above, ending with the stanza "Per Te sciamus, da, Patrem." We may add that in a ms. ofrce 1100, in the Brit. Mus. (Add. 18302, f. 24), a rubric regarding the "Veni Creator Spiritus" is followed by a hymn in four st., viz. :-

I. Te nunc Deue pilsaime. il. Dudum sacrata pectora. iil. Hie, Christe, nunc Paraciltus, iv. Sit laus Patri cum Filio.

Of these at il., iv. are noted above, at i. in from the "Beata nobis gaudia," and at iii. is given in the Durkom Hymnal as part of the "Jam Christus astra ascenderat" (p. 576, i.).

II. Authorship and Date. It is curious how very little is known of the authorship of this hymn, which has taken deeper hold of the Western Church than any other mediaeval hymn, the Te Deem alone excepted. The real author is as yet unknown, but it has been ascribed (a) to the Emperor Charles the Great (Charlemagne), (8) to St. Ambrose, (7) to Gregory the Great, and to (8) Elabanus Maurus. We may discuss these in this order.

Maurus. We may discuss these in this order.

(a) Charlemagns. The best known and most widely accepted opinion is that which sacribes it to the Emperor Charles the Great. Even Dom Gneranger (Institutions Letterpiques, 2nd ed., vol. i. p. 119, Paris, 1878) repeated it without qualification. This is however a legend, and fails to precess at once when traced to its source. The original authority is Ekkesherd v., Monk of St. Gall, in his vite Sancti Notheri, written circa 1220. There, in chapter xviii., Ekkehard says:—

"It is told of the blessed man [Notker] that one day when he went through the domitory be listened, for there was hard by a mill, whose wheth was revolving slowly for lack of water, and, groening, gave out sounds something like words. And the man of God, hearing this, straightway was in the spirit, and produced that most beautiful hymn, and gave attenues to the honey-weet melody from the same kind Spirit which possessed him: I mean the Sequence on the Holy Spirit Sancti Spiritus delt noble gratia '[n. 963, 1]. And when had completed it be sont it as a present to the Emperor Charles the Great, who was then probably staying at Acchen. And the same Christian Emperor cent back to him by the measunger that with which the same Spiritus."

Here we have the original story which has spread so Spiritue.

Spiritue."

Here we have the original story which has spread so widely, and has been so generally accepted. The words in italics above are really found in Ekkehard's autoraph its, at St. Gall (No. 586, p. 342), but are a manifest blunder, for Charles the Great (Charlemagne) died in 614, and Notker was born about it wears after, circos 640. The Charles to whom the St. Gall tradition really referred was probably Charles the Fat, and such an interchange of courieries is not at all milkely to have taken place between Notker and that Emperor. Charles the Fat paid Notker special attention during his wist to St. Gall in 883, and the incident which Enkeland relates may well have taken place scen after. That the hymn was actually composed by Charles the Fat does not seem probable. If however this tradition has any foundation of fact it implies that the hymn was at that time newly composed, or at least had lately come into the Emperor's hand. This suggests that it was written in the last quarter of the 5th cent., and by a person who was in some way connected with the court of the Emparer of

(β) St. Ambroso. Like most other important Latin hymnethis also has been ascribed to St. Ambrose, e.g. by Gardati. It appears as his in some early printed books. Gaussić. It appears as his in some early printed books, e.g. in the hyrestorium Christofamen, Leipsig, 1575, and is included in some of the earlier editions of his works, e.g. Paris, 1614. It is not however claimed for him base Benedictine editors of his works, nor by Biraghi in his fami sinceri e Carmi di Sant' Ambrogio, 1862, and there is really no evidence whetever of his authorship. It is true that it bears traces of his infinence. The

"Accende tamers sensitus, Infunde amorem cordibus," recall the words "Infunde lumen cordibus" of the very ancient hymn "0 lux beats Trioltes" (p. 645, ii.), which is probably his work; while Il. 3, 4 of st, iv. are borrowed directly from the "Veni Redemptor gentium" (p. 1211, Il.), which is certainly his. But the mere fact that the bounder two large from a wall-known home the training and the streamy has a well-known hymn of his is no evidence whatever that as a whole it is his work. The hymns of St. Ambrose soon became the common property of the Church, and later writers had no scruples about making free use of them in their own compositions. The "Yen! Creator" is secribed to St. Ambrose by no ancient writer, and the secription to him may be set aside without hesitation.

Ambrose by no ancient writer, and the ascription to him may be set saide without heritation.

(y) Gregory the Great. More, i. p. 242 (followed by Kock, i. p. 14), ascribes it to Gregory the Great, on the following grounds:—(1) Hs correspondence with his known hymns and his other works. (2) Its classical metre, with occasional rhymns. (3) The correct quantity of the penultimate of Paraciditat, as showing a knowledge of Greek. These arguments have a certain value, and Gregory is in himself not an unlikely person to have written the hymn. But had it been the work of a writer of such repute as Gregory in the 6th cent, we might fairly have expected to come across some early notices of 9. It is however attributed to him by no early writer, it is wanting in the earliest hymnals which we possess, and is not alluded to by Bretz (d. 736) in his "De arte metrica," where many early hymna are mentioned. It is quite precarious to seeign it, on purely subjective grounds, and in the absence of any external testimony, to so early and so celebrated a writer as Gregory.

(d) Rhabanus Maurus, sometime Archbishop of Mains (b. circa 776, d. 886). Christopher Brower, a learned Jesuit, included the "Veni Creator" in his edition of Rhabanus's Possatia, Mains, 1617, p. 74. But he was evidently not at all certain that it was really by Rhabanus, and does not print the text in full. He gives no definite information regarding the Ma. which he used, and it does not seem to have been of not great auditulty.

no definite information regarding the Me. which he used, and it does not seem to have been of any great antiquity. and it does not seem to have been or any green summany. Some of the hymns in this MR. are certainly not by Rhabanus, and his claim to the rest is very shadowy. The MR. contained 29 hymns, but of these Professor E. L. Dürmuler, in his critical edition of the Carpaina of Rhabanus (Pociae Latina acet Carolinia, vol. II., Berlin, 1884), has only seen reason enough to accept two, both of Rhabanus (Poctae Latini acvi Carolini, vol. it., Berlin, 1884), has only seen reason enough to accept two, both which he gives among the pieces "incertae originia," and he did not find sufficient ground to include the "Veni Creator" even among the poems doubtfully ascribed to Rhabanus. It is indeed true that in Rhabanus's prose work De Unicerse, Bk. 1, chapter iii. (Migne's PP. Lat. cxi. cols. 23-28) there are some phrases which resemble portions of this byran; but Money (ed. 1864, pp. 175, 185) give quife as close parallels from the writings of St. Argustines and others. Augustine and others

Here we are compelled to leave the queetion. The evidence is too scanty to draw a positive conclusion. The hymn is clearly not the work of St. Ambrose nor of Charles the Great. Nor is there sufficient evidence to allow us to ascribe it either to Gregory the Great, to Rhabanus Maurus, or to any of the ecclesiastics connected with the court of Charles the Fat. The references to the hymn do not help us much in determining the authorship, as the following facts will show. The earliest definite allusion to it (apart from the statement of Ekkehard), is that it was need at a Synod at Ehelma in 1949 (see C. J. Hefels's Conciliongerchicate, vol. iv. 2nd ed., 1879, p. 729). Daniel, i. p. 213 (ed. 1855, p. 209) indeed says that it had been used at the "Delation of St. Marculfus" in 898, and to prove this "Delation of St. Marculfus" in 899, and to prove this gives a quotation which he professes to derive from the Annales Ord. S. Benedicti, ed. Mabilion, tom. vi. p. 532. But his date and his reference are equally at fault. The quotation is really from the Acta Sunctions Ordinis S. Benedicti, ed. D'Achery and Mabilion, Seco. iv. pt. it. (vol. vt.) p. 542. Faris, 1680, and forms pert of the secount of the reception of the relics of St. Marculfus (Marcoul) at Prema (Perome on the Somme), not in 1833, but in 1102. Nor has the hymn yet been found in any Mass. earlier than the latter part of the 10th cent. Mose, i. p. 242, indeed apeaks of it as being found in Mass. earlier than Charles (who d. 814), but the earliest Ms., which he used is of the 14th cent., and his statement in probably the result of a mistaken inference from Thomarius. It is true that Thomarius requestly clies is property the result. The star Thomastics frequently cises Vatican sess, of the 8th cent., and it is also true that be includes the "Veni Creator" in his Hymnarius. But in this case it is not allowable to put two and two together, for Thomastics, ii. 375, does not cite any of these early was, as giving the text of the "Veni Creator."

The closing lines:—

have been thought to imply that the hymn was written after the Council of Aschen (Aquisgranum or Aix-la-Chapelle) in 809, when the doctrine of the Double Pro-cression was definitely promulgated. The hymn however does not emphasize the doctrine in any way, and similar language was used in the Western Church from a very early period, iii. Uss. In mediaeval times the singing of this hymn was generally marked with special dignity, by the ringing of bells, the use of incense, of lights, of the best vestments, &c. Its use in the Hour Services at Pentecost can be traced back, with tolerable certainty, to the 10th cent.* The earlier MSS. for the most part allot it only to Vespers (so Jul. A., vi.; Vesp. D., xii.; the Durham Hymnal; Liturg. Misc., 320), and so late as the 14th cent. Radulf, Dean of Tongres, giving the "Veni Creator" for Vespers, says that at the lesser hours "more Romano" the hymn was never changed (Hittorp, Cologne, 1568, col. 1126). But some time before this date it had certainly been adopted in some churches at Tierce, for a St. Alban's Breviary of the 12th cent. (Brit. Mus. Reg. 2 A. xx.) gives it for this service and not for Verpers; and this was also the Sarum nee. Its use at Tierce (in accordance with Acts ii. 15) is said to have originated in the monastery of Cluny, being traced to St. Hugh, Abbot of Cluny (b. 1024, d. 1169) by an anonymous writer cited in the Bollandist Acta Sanctorum, for April 29 (see Annales Ordinis S. Benedicti, vol. v. p. 530). In two Mozambic service-books of the 11th cent., now in the British Museum, viz. a Breviary (Add. 30848), and an Antiphonary (Add. 30850), it is seeigned to Lauds. It is also ordered for use at Lauds, as well as Vespers, in a German Breviary, circa 1100, now in the British Mu-seum (Add. 18302); but otherwise its use at Lauds seems to be quite exceptional.

In the Ordination Service its use has not been traced earlier than the 11th cent. It is not found in the Pontifical of Egbert (circa 950, printed by the Surtees Society, vol. xxvii.,

A clear indication that the hymn was only beginning "A clear indication flust the hymn was only beginning to be known in the 10th cent. is furnished by C. M. Dreves in his Hymnatrius Moistacenets, 1883, p. 93. He prints the text from a ws. of the 10th rent., but there it does not occur in the regular series of hymna, and had evidently only recently come into use at the Abbay (Benedictics) of Moissac (department of Turn et Garonne). This ws. seems to present several textual variations peculiar to itself.

1858), nor in numerous aucient services given by Martene and by Morines; while in some was the reference to it is added, by a later hand, in the margin. It is however in at least three Postificals of the 11th cent., viz. one of Soissons given by Martene (Ordo vil., vol. ii. p. 896); that in the Bodleian as. Liturg. Mrsc. 359; and Samson's Postifical C. C. C., 146, f. 119, perhaps the earliest instance of its occurrence in a Pontifical. In the Sens Missal of 1529, £ clvii., it is given as part of the pricet's preparation for celebrating Mase; and so in the Serum Missel of 1497 (Burntisland reprint, 1961, ff. col. 577); while in the York and Hereford Missals it is ordered to be sung after the Lavabo (see W. Maskell's Ancient Liturgy, pp. 4, 92, 93). In modern Roman Service-books it is given in the Breviery, for Vespers and Tieres at Pentecost; and in the Pontifical for the Ordination of Priests. Consecration of Bishops, Laying the foundation stone of a Church, the Consecration of a Church, the "Orde ad Synodum," and various other services.

It may be added that a full commentary on the theological bearings, and ritual uses of this hymn, will be found in the Abbe S. G. Pimont's Hymnes du Bréviaire Romain, vol. it., pt. ii., Paris, 1884, pp. 125-143. [E. C. S. G.]

The "Veni Creator Spiritus, Mentes" has frequently been tr. into German. Through two of these versions it has passed into English as follows:-

- i. Kemm, Gatt Schöpfer, heiliger Geist. This is a full and faithful version by M. Luther, 1st pub. in Eyn Enchiridion, Erfurt, 1524. Thence in Wackernagel, iii, p. 14; also in Schircke's ed. of Luther's Geistl. Lieder, 1854, p. 25, and in the Unn. L. S. 1851, No. 172. Tr. as:-

The tra, of the Veni Creater Spiritus direct from the Latin into English have been numerous and important. They include the following :---

- I. Come Hely Chest, eternal God. This tr. in C.M. in the Ordering of Priests in The Book of Common Prayer, was apparently printed in the Ordinal of 1549, and certainly in the 2nd book of Edward 6th, where it is given in 7 st. of 8 l. (Brit. Mus.). As it is too long to reproduce in full, we give the first and last stanzas only :-
- (1) "Come buly ghost eternall god Proceeding from Bothe fro the father and the some, the God of sace and lon Visite our myndes, and into ve thy heavenly grace inspire, That in all truths and Godlinesse, we Mais have troe desire. . -

A tr. which seems to be a variation of this text (but regarded by some us an older fr.) is found in The whole Psaller, translated into English metre, &c., John Daye, Loudon, N.D. (Brit. Mus., Lincoln Cathedral Library, &c.).

[Psalters, English, p. 917, § ix.] This is known as Archbishop Parker's Psalter, and was written by him whilst in exile, 1558-1558 (Absolvi Psalterium versum metrico lingua vulgari, Parker's Diary, 1557). The tr. seems to be the preceding rendered into more even feet. It is in 16 st. of 4 l., of which st. i., ii., and zv. and avi. are as follows:

- "Come hely Ghoet: eternali God, Which doest from God proceeds. The father fyrit: and eke the coune, One God as we do reade.
- (2) "Oh visite thou: our minds and harts, Thy heavenly grace inspire: That we in truth: and godliners, May fet our whole desire." ٠
- (15) "Be laude to God: the father hye, And God his fonne prayle ye: Be prayle to God: the holy fpirite, One God in Trinity.
- (16) "Pray we that Christ: the favlour, Vouchiafe his spirits to send: To all which true: professe his name, Till all the world doth ends."

The next form of this tr. is that in "The Ordering of Priests" in The Book of Common Prayer, and given therein in 1662. This is also in 16 st. of 4 l., of which st. i., ii., and zv. and zvi. read as in modern copies of the Prayer Book :-

- (1) "Come, Holy Ghost, eternal God, Proceeding from above, Both from the Father and the Son, The God of peace and love;
- (2) "Vielt our minds, into our hearts Thy beavenly grace impire; That truth and godfiness we may Pursue with full desire."
- (15) To God the Father land and presse, And to His blessed Son, And to the Holy Spirit of grace, Co-equal Three in One.
- (16) "And pray we, that our only Lord Would please His Spirit to send On all that shall profess His Name, From hence to the world's end."

beginning with st. i., have been adopted by a few hymnal compilers.

In Mercer's Ch. Psalter & H. Bk., 1854 and later eds. this tr. is divided into three parts, Pt. ii. beginning with st. vii., "O Holy Ghost, into our minds Send down Thy heavenly light," and Pt. iii. with st. xif., "Of strife and of dissension." Pt. ii. is sometimes used as a separate hymn. W. J. Blew reads, "O Holy Ghost, into our souls."

3. Come, Holy Chost, our souls inspire. By Bp. John Cosin. This is in his Collection of Private Devotions in the Practice of the Ancient Church, called the Hows of Frager, &c., 1627. This book was modelled on the Primers which were extensively used during the reigns of Henry VII. and Elizabeth. It contains devotions and a hymn for each of the Canonical Hours, together with other devotions, hymns, and prayers (see Reprint by J. G. & F. Rivington, London, 1838). This tr. is appointed for the "Third Hour," and is given in 18 lines. It was also given in an unaltered form in "The Ordering of Priests" and "The Consecration of Bishops" in The Book of Common Prayer, 1662. This and the C. M. fr. above are the only metrical hymne which have been legally sanctioned in the Church of England by both Church and State. In the hymn books of the last century Bp. Cosin's tr. is rarely found; but in modern collections it is largely used, and in almost every instance in an unaltered form. In the Gospel Magazine for 1774, p. 449, it is given as a "Hynn to the Holy Spirit, modernized from the Office for Ordination." The opening lines are:—

"Come, Holy Ghost, our souls inspire, And warm with uncreated fire."

The signature "Minimus" is that of A. M. Toplady. This "modernized" form of the text has never come into use, and was excluded, even

- by Toplady himself, from his Ps. & Hys., 1776. This appeared in his Miscellancous Poems, pt. fil., 1693, and the Primer of 1708 and 1732, in 7 st. of unequal length, numbering 39 lines in all. It is found in numerous collections, both of the past and the present centuries, but siways in an altered and abbreviated form. One of the first to adapt it for congregational purposes was J. Wesley, who included it in his Ps. & Hys., 1741, in an abbreviated form. He was followed by G. Whitefield, 1753, A. M. Toplady, 1776, and others, until the adoption of the hymn became general. The variations which have been introduced into the text are so many and various that it is almost impossible to set them forth in an intelligible manner. The text of given hymnal which may be consulted should be compared with the original in the Lyra Brit., 1867, p. 209. In some American collec-tions it begins "O Source of uncreated light."
- 4. Come, Holy Chast, Crester come, And visit all the souls of Thins. By Tate and Brady in the Supplement to the New Version of the Psalms, &c., circa 1700 (3rd ed., 1702). See p. 801, i. This is in LM. in 28 l. It is given in the Scottish Hyl., 1870, as a tr. by Miss Winkworth, in error. It is also in J. Chandler's Hys. of the Church, mostly Primitive, 1841, No. 50.
- 5. Come, Holy Chest, Creator, come, Inspire the [these] seeds of Thine. Tate and Brady. This is the C.M. version in the Supplement as above, circa. 1700 (3rd ed., 1702). It also appears in J.

From this text two or three contos, all | Chandler's Hys. of the Prim. Church, 1837, p. 91, with alterations in the last stanza only; and again in his Hys. of the Church, mostly Primitive, 1841, No. 50, and in each instance without any judication of its source. Hence it is usually attributed to Chandler, but in error.

6. Roly Spirit, gently come. By W. Hammond, in his Ps., Hys., and Spiritual Songs, &c., 1745, p. 205, in 5 st. of 8 l. This was given in an unaltered form in the 1864 ed. of Mercer's C4.

Psatter & H. Bk., No. 234.

7. Come, Hely Chest, Creater bleat, Come, visit Thou each willing broast. By Bp. R. Mant in his Ancient Hys., 1837, p. 62, in 7 st. of 4 l. (ed. 1871, p. 110). Its use is limited.

- 8. Come, Holy Ghost, Creator, come. The 2nd stanza of this fr. in the Irvingite Hys. for the Churches, 1864 and 1871, given as "Tr. by C., 1845," begins: "Thou, Who art named the Paraclete, The heavenly gift, &c." We have not found it elsewhere.
- 9. Come, Hely Chart, Creater, come! The darkness of our minds illume. By F. W. Faber, in his Jesus and Mary, 1849, in 7 st. of 4 i., and again in his Hymns, 1862. In the New Mitre Hymnal, 1875, it is given as "O come, Creator Spirit, come," from the 1871 ed. of Faber's Hymns, No. 40, and ahridged to 5 st. of 4 l.
- 10. Come, O Creator Spirit blest! And in our souls take up Thy rest. By E. Caswall in his Lyra Catholica, 1849, p. 103, in 7 st. of 4 t., and in his Hymns, 1873, p. 58. It is given in saveral modern hymnals.
- 11. Come, O Creator Spirit! Visit this [these] soul of Thine. By E. Caswall. This tr. of a slightly different text from the above, which is from the Rom. Brev., also appeared in his Lyra Catholica, 1849, p. 291, and in his Hymns, 1873. p. 133.
- 12. Greator, Spirit, Lord of grace. By R. Campbell, in his Hys. and Authens, &c., 1850, p. 78, in 7 st. of 4 l. with ll. 1, 2, of st. v. from Dryden. This is found, slightly altered, in a few modern hymnals. It is also in O. Shipley's Annus Sanctus, 1884, p. 170.
- 13. Come, Holy Ghost, Oreator blest, And visit every faithful breast. By Jane E. Leeson in her Paraphrases & Hys., 1853, p. 81, in two parts. Pt. ii. beginning: "Come, Holy Ghost, with sacred fire.
- 14. Came, Holy Ghost, Creator, come, Down from Thy heavenly throne. This is given in the Irvingite Hys. for the Churches, 1864 and 1876, as a "Tr. by J. E. L., 1852," i.e. Jane E. Leeson, as above, No. 13.
- 15. Come, Holy Chost, Crestor blest, And in our only serenely rest. In the Catholic Psalmist, 1858, p. 65, and probably by T. J. Potter.
- 16. Come, Holy Ghost, Orestor blest, Vouchsafe within our souls to reat. This is given in H. A. & M., 1861, and again in 1875. In the index to the latter edition it is said to be by the "Rev. E. Caswall and the Compilers." The Compilers, however, were indebted to Bp. Mant and R. Campbell for one fourth of their cento.

17. Come, Hely Spirit, come, Inspire the scale of Thine. This tr. was given anonymously in the Parish H. Bh., 1863, No. 69. It is apparently Caswall's tr. in 7 st. (No. 11 above) rewritten in s.m. It is the only s.m. tr. of the Veni Creator with which we are acquainted. It was repeated in the Parish H. Bk., 1875.

15. Come, Roly Chost, Creator, come, Frem Thy bright heaving throne. This appeared anonymously in the Hys. for the Year, 1867, and several later Roman Catholic collections.

p. 121, We have also seen two or three additional references to American tra., but have been unable to verify them.

The great similarity which is found in the majority of these trs. suggests that many of the later translators were very much indebted to their predecessors for the tersoness and vigour of their renderings. This suggestiveness is most apparent in the more striking passages of the hymn.

Veni, jam veni, benignissime. [Wkitsuntida Mone. No. 188, gives this, in 26 lines, from a 12th cent. Ms. at Mainz. It is almost identical with a portion of the Oratio also found as No. ix. in the Mediaeval compilation known as the Meditationes of St.

Augustine (Venice, 1553, f. 11). The passage in Št. Aneelm is >

"Veni Jam, veni, benignissime dolentis animae consolator in opportunitatibus, et in tribuiationibus adjutor.
Veni, mundator scelerum, chrator vulnerum. Veni, fortitudo fragilium, relevator labentium; veni, humilium doctor, superborum destructor. Veni, orphanorum pius peter, vidnarum duleis judex. Veni, spes panporum, refocillator deficientium. Veni, navigantium sidus, naufragantium portus. Veni, onnium viventium singulare decus, morionitum unics salus. Veni Sanctissime Spiritus, veni et miserere mei," &c.

Veni Redemptor gentium [omnium], St. Ambrose. [Christmas.] This is one of the twelve hymns assigned to St. Ambrose by the Benedictine editors. It is plainly referred to as the work of St. Ambrose by St. Augustino (Sermo 372), and is definitely cited as his by Pope Celestine, at a Council held at Rome, 430: by Faustus, who in 455 became Bp. of Rhegium (Riez in France), in his Epistola ad Gratum diaconum; by M. A. Cassiodorus (d. 575), in his commentary on the Psalms; and by other early writers. The text in 7 st. is in Daniel, i. No. 10, with further notes at iv. pp. 4, 353 (quoting at length the references by St. Augustine, Pope Celestine, Faustus and Cassicdorus, and citing it as in a 9th cent. Ms. at Bern); in Mone, No. 30, and others. Sometimes a stanza is prefixed, as follows:-

" Intende qui regie laruel, Super cherubin qui sedes, Appare Ephraem, comm excita Potentiam tuam, et veni."

Celestine and Castriodorus bowever cite the hymn as beginning "Veni Redemptor gentium"; and this statizations not appear to be found in any size. Earlier than the 14th cent, and has obtained no currency save in the Cistercian Breviaries. In any case these lines are not by St. Ambrose, for they are simply the Vulgate of Ps. IXXX., which begins: "Qui regiz invacide; qui deducis velut ovem, Joseph. Qui sedes super cherubius, manifestare corum Epiraum, Benjamin et Manuse excita potentium tham, et reni, ut estvoe facias nos."

The hymn is found in the Sarum, York, Aberdeen, Mozarabic of 1502, and other Breviaries; generally assigned to Christmas Eve or Christmas Day. But it is not in the Roman Breviary, and can hardly be said to be in use at the present day, a somewhat unfortunate ecclesiastical prudery having set aside this noble composition. It must however be confessed that a strictly literal English version is hardly desirable for modern congregational use. The imagery is partly borrowed from Ps. xix. [W. A. S.]

Mons, No. 30, gives the "Veni Redemptor" text from a Reichenau Ms. of the 9th cent., a Trier of the 8th or 9th, a Munich of the 10th cent., &c. (prefixing the st. "Intende qui regis" from MSS. of the 14th cent. at Karlsrahe and Lichtenthal). Thomasius, ii. p. 371, cites it as in two Vatioan was, of the 8th cent. It is in five mes, of the 11th cent, in the British Museum, viz. in three of the early English Church (Vesp. D. xii. f. 32 b.; Jul. A. vi. f. 33, and Harl. 2961, f. 226), and two of the early Spanish Church (Add. 30848, f. 24; Add. 30851, f. 120). Also in the Born Me., No. 455, of the 16th cent., and in a se. of the 11th cent. at Corpus Christi, Cambridge (391, p.

In the Latin Hye. of the Anglo-Saxon Ch. (Surtees Society), 1851, p. 48, it is printed from an 11th cent. Ms. at Durham (B. iii. 32, Tom an 11th cent. Ms. at Durham (B. M. 32, 1.18). The text is also in Bossier, No. 26; Wackernagel, 1., No. 12; Hymn. Sarisb., 1861, p. 71; Trench, ed. 1864, p. 87; Migne's PP. Lat. lxxxvi., col. 114; G. M. Drevee's Hym. Moissiacensis, 1888, from a 10th cent. Ms.; Curd. Newman's Hymni Eccleriae, 1838 and 1865, and others.

This hymn has been rendered through the German into English, as follows :---

Veni Saucte Spiritus, Et emitte coelitus. Immoent III. (?). [Whitsuntide.] In annotating this beautiful Sequence we shall deal i. with its Merits, ii. with the MSS. in which it is contained, iti. with its Author-thip, and iv. with the Variations in its Use.

i. Merits. The opinion of critics is unanimous in regarding this Sequence as one of the masterpieces of Latin sacred poetry. We need only quote two notices of it. Clichto-vscus (Elucidatorium, Paris, 1516, f. 171), eays of it;-

eays of it;—

"Nor indeed, in my opluton, can this piece be sufficiently praised; for it is above all praise, whether by reason of its wonderful sweetness along with a most clear and flowing style, or by reason of its agreeable bravity along with wealth and profusion of ideas, especially as almost every line expresses one idea, or sinally by reason of the elegant grace of its structure, in which things contrasted are set over against each other, and most aply linked together. And I well believe that the author (whoever he was), when he composed this piece, had his soul transfused by a certain heavenly awareness, by which, the Holy Spirit being its author, he intered so much sweetness in so few words."

And Archbishop. Trench in his Sec. Los.

And Archbishop Trench, in his Sec. Lat. Poetry (ed. 1864, p. 195) speaks of it as :-

"The loreliest... of all the hymne in the whole circle of Latin sacred poetry," adding that it "could only have been composed by one who had been sequeinted with many sorrows, and also with many consolations."

In Mediaeval times it was often called the Golden Sequence. It is not indeed distinguished by great and absolute originality of ides, for in its leading thoughts it was clearly influenced by earlier pieces, such as the "Sancti Spiritus saisti" (p. $93, 1.), the "Qui procedis" (p. $45, 1.), the "O ignis Spiritus Paracliti" (p. $37, 11.), the "Veni Sancte Spiritus: Reple" (pp. $21, 11., and 1216, 11.). But it combines a staticy grace. a nerfect But it combines a stately grace, a perfect rhythmic melody, and a faculty of saying just the right thing in just the fitting words in such a measure as to disarm criticism, and at once to defy comparison with any other hymn in any other language, and to make it almost impossible to present an adequate translation. It is in five stantas, each consisting of six lines of seven-syllable trochate verse (trochaic dimeter catalectic). The first stanza may be quoted to show its structure:-

" Veni Sancte Spiritus, Et emitte coelitus, Lucis tuse radium.
Veni, Pater pauperum,
Veni, dator munerum,
Veni, iumen cordium."

This verse form has not yet been traced earlier than about 1150; and is never found in the earlier, or Notkerian, type of Sequence, but is always associated with the Sequences of the second period (See e.g. p. 647, ii., and K.

Bartsch's Lat. Sequenzen, 1868, pp. 213, 285). Every third line, we may add, ends in ium, and rhymes with every other third line throughout the Sequence. In the hands of any but a first-rate writer such a verse-scheme would certainly have produced a sense of coldness and artificiality, but here "art conceals art," and the glow of devotion so transferses and transfigures all that one is content to admire the beauty and hardly thinks of the skill.

ii. MSS. The use also show that this Sequence does not date from the earliest period of Sequence-writing. It is indeed found in four ms. at St. Gall, which, for the most part, date from the 11th cent. (Nos. 376, p. 434; 378, p. 232; 380, p. 28; 382, p. 250); but Herr Idtensohn, the librarian, having kindly examined these was, informs me that in no case is this Sequence in a hand earlier than the 13th cent. He adds that it is "everywhere a piece inserted by another, later, hand than that of the Ms. volume in general." agrees with what we have otherwise observed. Up to the present time this sequence has not been found in any MS. earlier than 1200.

For example, it is not in any of the early use, indexed For example, it is not in any of the early Mee, indexed under the article Sequences (p. 1049), nor is it included in any of the 18 Troparies of Limoges, written prior to 1200, the sequences of which are printed by G. M. Drevees, in his Proparium Leavancemes, 1889. It is found in two Mee. of the 18th ceut., now in the Brit. Mus., one 1200, the sequences of which are printed by G. M. Dreves, in the Programs Lessonicste, 1888. It is found in two Mess. of the 18th cent., now in the Brit. Mus., one written in Germany about the beginning of the century (Add. 24895, f. 4360). But such the end of the century (Add. 23955, f. 4360). But also in two early 14th cent. Paris Missals, now in the Brit. Mus. (Add. 18806, f. 1815; Hart. 2891, f. 2480); In a Meriford Missal, circa 1380, and a Fork Missal, circa 1380, both now in the Bolletan &c. It is not in the fine Sarsen Missal of circa 1376, now in the Bolletan (Barlow 5); but it is in the London ed. of 1488, f. 241. In the Lincoln Missal of circa 1400, now in the Brit. Mus. (Add. 1144, f. 3030) it is not found in the offices for Whitematic, but is in an appendix of Sequences, the use of which was permitted, but not of obligation ("ad placitum"). Also in an early Ms. In the University Library at Cambridge (AL t. 10), but in a section of that ms., which was written about the beginning of the 18th cent. The printed text is given in Mose, No. 188, from the St. Gall Ms., No. 378, and later sources; Davied, it. 199, 35, 384, iii, p. 281, v. p. 69, from a Beleinau Ms. 199, 35, 384, iii, p. 281, v. p. 69, from a Beleinau for the Scheiner, 1838 and 1885; F. A. March's Let. Hyz., N. Y., 1875, p. 22, &c. In regard to the statement of Mr. Duffield (see below) that it is contained in the oldest Reichement and Einstedeln ins. we may remark that More discretely in any of the Reichement and Einstedeln ins. we may remark that More discretely in the statement of the Missal and the sources, p. 82), who was librarian there, circa as containing it, is one of the 18th cent. Rindsdein as, which Morel (1868, p. 52), who was libra-rian there, clies as containing it, is one of the 18th cent.

iii. Authorship. Here critics are very for from being at one. The French tradition as a rule has not attempted to affix any author's name to the sequence, and so e.g. M. Leon Gautier, in his Les Tropes, 1886, pp. 7, 130, and his Postic Religiouse, 1887, pp. 17, 18, 46, speaks of it as an anonymous sequence of the second period, written not earlier than the beginning of the 18th cent. It has, however, by others been sacribed to a variety of authors, e. g. (1) to Robert II. of France, (2) to Hermannus Contractus, (3) to Archbishop Stephen Langton, and (4) to Pope Innocent III.

(1) Robert II. of France. During the last fifty years the ascription to King Robert has been the usual one. It rests however on no foundation whatever save the statement of Durandus in his Rationale, St. iv., in the section "De pross sen sequents "(see p. $67, ii.). That section contains less than a dozen lines, but in these surceads in conveying a surprising amount of dubious in-formation. Thus to Robert it ascribes not only the "Your Suncts Spiritus," but also the "Chorus novae Hierasalem" (p. 224, i.), which is much more likely to be by Fulbert of Chartres. Then by a strange perversity it adjudges the "Salve regins" from Hermannus Contractus, and in compensation ascribes to him the "Sancti Spiritus adelt," which is certainly not his. As will be seen by referring to p. 987, ii., Durandus is the only ancient authority who sacribes the "Vent Sancta Spiritus" to King Robert. Neither of the two ancient chronicles check there do so, nor does the Chronicos Thronceuse (to 1226, see Robert II. in Various); and while William of Malmesbury (d. circa 1142) sportice to Robert the "Sancti Spiritus adeit," he does not mention the "Vent Sancte Spiritus "(d. Bp. Stubbs in the Rolls Scriet, 1887, p. 186). And, as noted above, the verse-form is much later than Robert's time. It is possible that Durandus, when he said that Robert composed "sequentism illam Voni Sancte Spiritus," really referred to the "Vent Sancte Spiritus "Reple" (q. v.). Whether or not there can be no doubt that the sacription of the "Vent Sancte Spiritus, Et emitte coellitus" to Robert is without any sufficient reason.

(2) Hermannus Gentractus (b. 1913, d. 1064).

(2) Hermanaus Contractus (b. 1013, (2) marmania commantis (b. 1913, d. 1064). Equally little, or even less, reason exists for ascribing this sequence to Hermannus Contractos. Cardinal Sons, in his Narion Libergicorius, Rome, 1671, p. 338, eags that it "has been by some attributed to Hermannus Contractus." This attribution has recently been warmly opposed by S. W. Duffield, in the Nato Englander, vol. 11, 1982, pp. 513-522, and h. his Lot. Exc. 1999, on. ospoused by S. W. Duffield, in the New Singlander, vol. xiv., 1888, pp. 613-632, and in his Let. Hyr. 1889, pp. 149-168. Mr. Duffield took great pains to make out a good case, but he altogether fails to produce anything that can be called proof in support of his assertions and conjectures. The sequence is ascribed to Hermannus Contractus by no cancient writer, nor by Anselm Schubiger (Superschiel St. Golfens, 1889, who has in recent times devoted most attention to him. It is moreover emittely different in style from any of the pieces which have with some show of reason been secribed to him (see K. Bartsch's Let. Segmensen, 1888, pp. 41, 90, 106; also the note on "Vent Sancte Spiritus: Repis"); and these are all composed in the verse-form of the first 106; also the note on "Vent Sancis Spiritus: Reple"); and these are all composed in the verse-form of the first period of sequence-writing, while, as stated above, this sequence is in the verse-form of the second period.

(3) Bisphan Langton (consecrated Archbishop of Canterbury by Innocent int. on June 17, 1207; performed his first episcopal act in England at Winchester on July 28, 1213; d. July 4, 1228). The secription to Langton is found in a commentary on the Clausia de Bossischus of Meilto of Sardis (d. circa 170), unb. by Cardinal J. B.

is found in a commentary on the Charle de Houseldart of Melito of Sardis (d. circa 170), pub. by Cardinal J. B. Pitra in his Spicilegium Solements, vol. ill., 1836, p. 180, where it is said, "Nevertheless let it suffice to adduce as testimony, what Minguier Stephenss de Longetures, a man venerable in life and doctrine, by the grace of God Architcheop of Canterbury, says in the praise of the Holy Spirit, in that excellent sequence which he composed concerning the Holy Spirit, thus " (than are quoted lines '-12, 19-24, beginning "Consolator of an English Castercian who flourished about 124, and away that this statement "of a contemporary and a of an anguest cancercan with bournance about 12th, and anys that this statement "of a contemporary and a fellow-countryman," who was clearly a careful writer, and skilled in literary matters, ought to carry great weight. It is to the present writer certainly worth recording, but hardly conclusive in the absence of weight. It is to the present writer certainly worsa recording, but hardly conclusive in the absence of further evidence.

(4) Paps Innocent III. The ascription to imposent nu, is found in chapter aviit. of the Pite search Notkert, by Ekkebard v., of St. Gall, as follows:—"There may fitly be added here a conversation which, in our times, took place with the Roman See (*sedem Romanam') concerning the blewed man [Notket]. The venerable Abbot of St. Gail, Ulrich, of plons memory, the sixth of this name (Ulrich v. d. 1188, and Ulrich vi. d. 1218), came to Rome to Pope Innocent III., having been sent on an embeacy by King Frederick the Second, afterwards Emperor [crowned as King at Mains, Pec. 9, d. 1219], came to Rome to Pope Innocent III., having been sent on an embessy by King Frederick the Second, afterwards Emperor [crowned as King at Mainz, Poc. 9, 1212; crowned as Emperor at Aachen on July 28, 1215]. After they had talked together of many thinge, and conferred in turn on various matters, it happened that Mass, concerning the Holy Spirit, with the Sequence "Sancti Spiritus adait nothis gratis," was celebrated before the Pope (Apostolicum), the abbot also being present. That Pope himself had size composed a Sequence on the Holy Spirit, viz.; Yest Sancte Spiritus. When the Mass and the prayers were over, they mat again for conversation, and among other thinge the Pope asked the abbot, saying "Who was your Notker, and in what way do you keep his anniversary?" For there were at Rome certain things written of him in the books of Sequences, which the Pope himself had read. The abbot replied that he was a simple monk... though certainly learned and inly. To whom the Pope rejoined, 'Ro you not keep his festival, &z.?'" [Notker was not however beatified till 1513, See p.

$22, i.] This passage, with the words in italics, is contained in Ekkebard's autograph copy, written about 1224, and now at 55, Gall (MS. No. 556, p. 342). From other sources we know that Urich yr, was sent to Rome other sources we know that Ulrich vt. was cent to Rome by the Emperor Frederick to attend the Lateran Council (118), and the conversation recorded above probably took place either then or at Whitsunide, 1216, for Innocent int, d. July 16, 1216 (see the Mitthellunger survateridudischen Geschichte, St. Gall, vols. xt. p. 130, and xvii. (1878), p. 114). Doubt has been cast on Ekkshard's statement on the ground that he blundered in accribing the "Veni Greator" to Charlemagne. But in the present case it must be ramembered that he was a monk at St. Gall at the time of which he speaks, and there is every reason to believe that he heard the story a monk at St. Gall at the time of which he apeaks, and there is every reason to believe that he heard the story from the lips of Ulrich himself on his return from Rome. The facts above stated concerning the St. Gall smss. afford a strong presumption that the "Veni Sancto Spiritus" was unknown at St. Gall till Ulrich brought it back with him from Rome, and that it was at his instigation that it was the instigation that it was finerted in the early sequentiaties the till. And facility increase it was at health forced in the sary sequentiaties. at St. Gall. And finally Innocent III. was undoubtedly a man of great ability, and much more competent to have written such a poem than any of the others to whom it has been ascribed (see also pp. 1081-1082).

The whole evidence as to authorship may be summed up thus. The Sequence is clearly not earlier than about the beginning of the 18th cent. It is certainly neither by Robert II. nor by Hermannus Contractus. The most probable author is Innocent IIL

iv. Use. As already stated the "Veni Sancte Spiritue" is not found in any of the very early Missals or Sequentiaries. When it began to come into use it did not at once displace the older Whitsuntide sequence, i.e. the "Sancti Spiritus adsit," for that continued, as a rule, to be used on Whitsunday up till the revision of the Roman Missal in 1568-70. Consequently the "Veni Sancte," though occasionally used on Whitsunday (as in the Breslau Missal of 1488), was almost universally appointed for use on one or more of the immediately succeeding week days.

So e.g. the Laugres Missal, circa 1491, assigns it to the Monday; the Angers of 1489 to Tuesday; the Minuter of 1485 to Tuesday, Wednesday and Saturday; the Liepe circa 1485 to Tuesday and Saturday; the flower of 1499 to Wednesday; the Angelsong of 1599 to Wednesday, Friday, and Saturday; the Chalons sur
Marne of 1489, and the Hereford of 1502 to Thursday; and the Paris of 1481 to Saturday. In other Missal; it is given only in the Votive Mass of the Holy Spirit, e.g. in the Magdebury of 1480, the Brizen of 1493, the Sarass of 1496, &c. The Langrat, circa 1491, gives it also in a Mass in time of pesillence. Martens (de antiqua ecleates disciplina) says that in some places such as Limoges and Chalons var Saons, it was sung as a carol in the Cathedral closs after Vespers or Compline on Ascension Day. Ascension Day.

Finally it had the honour of being chosen as one of the four (see p. 1042, i.) sequences which were alone retained in the Roman Missal of 1570, and is there appointed for use on Whitsunday and also throughout the week, the text happily being left unaltered both at that time and at the subsequent revision under Urban viil. (1634). We may add that the text, with a full historical and theological commentary, is givon in Dr. J. Kayser's Beitrüge zur Geschichte und Erklärung der ältesten Kirchenkymnen, vol. ii., 1886, pp. 61-76.

The Veni Sancie Spiritus, Et, has frequently been tr. into German. Through two of these versions it has passed into English as follows:→

L McDgor Geist, du Tröster main. This is a full and good tr. by Martin Moller, in his Meditationes sanctorum patrum, Görlitz, 1584, where it is entitled "A very beautiful prayer to God the Holy Ghost;" and thence in Wackernagel, v.

p. 55. Included in Crüger's Praxis, 1648, Frey-linghausen's Neues geistreiches G. B., 1714 (omitting st. iv.; so in the Una L. S., 1851, No. 171), and others. Bunsen, in his Versuch, 1833, No. 210, follows Freylinghausen, and supplies a new tr. (by himself?) of st. iv. Tr. as:

1. Holy Ghost! my Comforter. This is a full and very good tr. from Bunsen by Miss Winkworth, in her Lyra Ger., 1st Ser., 2nd ed., 1856, p. 103, and her C. B. for England, 1863 (with st. v. rewritten). Included in full in the Wes. H. Bk., 1875; and, abridged, in Alford's Year of Praise, 1867, Scapp's Songs of G. & G., 1872, &c. In T. W. Chignell's Exeter Coli., 1863, it begins "God, our Light and Comforter!" and in Dale's Exet. Rev. H. Rk. Eng. H. Bk., 1874, and some others, "Holy Ghost! the Comforter."

2. Holy Comforter Divine. By Miss Borthwick, omitting st. ii., iv., vi., ix., as No. 87 in Dr. Pagenstecher's Coll., 1864.

Another tr. is: "O Holy Ghost! Thou fire Divine." By Miss Winkworth, 1855, p. 103.

ii. Komm, o hell'ger Gelet, and webe. By Cardinal Melchior von Diepenbrock [b. Jan. 6, 1798, at Bochold in Westphalia; became Prince Bishop of Breslau in 1845, and Cardinal in 1850; d. Jan. 20, 1853], in his Gesammelte Fredigien, Regensburg, 1841, p. 109. Tr. as "Come, O Holy Ghost, and breathe." By J. Kelly, in his Hys. of the Present Century from the German, 1885, p. 69. [J. M.]

The Veni Sancte Spiritus Et has also been tr. direct from the Latin into English as follows:-

1. Come, Holy Spirit, send down those beams Which geatly flow in allent streams. By J. Austin, in his Depotions is the Astient Way of Offices, &c., 1668, p. 410. It is given in several modern Roman Catholic hymnals, including Hys. for the Year, 1867, the Parochial H. Bk., 1880, and others. In these collections it begins "Come, Holy Ghost, send down those beams, Which successly flow in silent streams," as in The Evening Office of 1748. It is a most spirited rendering, and is worthy of wider adoption.

2. Holy Spirit, from on high, Come, and from the can be spart, from an mag, come, and from the opening sky. By W. J. Copeland, in his Hys. for the Week, &c., 1848, p. 105. It was repeated in the Salisbury H. Bh., 1857, and others.

3. Come, O promised Comforter. By A. T.

Russell, in the Dalston German Hospital H. Bk., 1848, and his Ps. & Hys., 1851, No. 126, in 3 st. of 8 l. In Kennedy, 1863, st. i. is given as "Shed, O promised Comforter" (No. 1034). In the Hys. and Songs of Praise, N. Y., 1874, the full text is given in an unaltered form.

6. Holy Spirit, Lord of Light. By E. Caswall, in his Lyra Catholica, 1849, p. 234, and his Hymns and Poems, 1873, p. 123. It is found in several hymn-books in its full and unaltered form, and also altered and abridged as :-

(1) Come. Thou Holy Spirit, come. This arrangement was given in the trial od. of H. A. & M., 1859, and sgain in the let ed., 1861. The numerous alterations therein are added to in the revised ed. of 1875. The test of the Saruss Hys., 1868, is the 1801 H. A. & M. text altered, with a return in some instances to the original tr.

aftered, with a return in some instances to the original re-(2) Hely Spirit, Lard of Life. This, in the Partal H. Sk., 1863 and 1876, is also an altered form of Caswall's tr. (3) Hely Spirit, come in might. This is given in the S. P. C. K. Charch Hyr., 1871, with the omission of Caswall's st. fill, iv., to the great injury of the hymn. There are also several uncalled for alternations.

(4) Come, Then Spirit of all light. This, in Thring's

Coll., 1882, is partly (st. i., iil., iil., l. 6) a recast of Caswall's tr. by Frebendary Thring, but would have been better in Caswall's own words.

In its various forms Caswall's fr. is the most widely used of the numerous renderings of the Veni Sancte Spiritus.

- 5. Come, Holy Spirit, from the height. By F. W. Faber, in his Josus and Mary, 1849, and his Hymns, 1862. It is given in a few Roman Catholic hymnals for Missions and Schools,
- 6. Come, O Spirit, Lord of grace. By R. Campbell, in his Hys. and Anthoms, 1850, p. 80, in 7 st. of 3 l. This is in one or two hymnals only, In Orby Shipley's Annas Sincius, 1884, it is expanded into 10 st., the additional stanzas ii., iv., and vi. being by J. C. Earle.

7. Holy Spirit, from an high, On our deep obscurity. By G. Rorison in his Hys. and Anthems, 1851, No. 95, in 5 st. of 6 I.

- 8. Come, Then Hely Paraelets. By J. M. Neale, in the Hyl. Noted, 2nd ed., 1854, in 10 st. of 8 l. This tr. has passed into a large number of hymnals, and ranks next in popularity to that by E. Caswall noted above,
- 9. Come, Holy Chast! in love, Shed on us from above. By Ray Palmer. First pub. in The Subbath H. Bk., Andover, 1858, No. 451, in 5 st. of 7 l. It is given in several collections in G. Britain and America, including Allon's Cong. Pealmist Hyl., 1886; Martineau's Hymns, &c., 1875, in 4 st.; Laudes Domini, N. Y., 1884.

10. Holy Spirit, come, we pray. By W. Mercer, in the 1864 ed. of his Church Ps. and H. Bk., No. 222, in 10 st. of 3 l.

11. Come, Thou Holy Spirit, nigh; Leave Thy blissful throne on high, By R. C. Singleton, in his Anglican H. Bk., 1868, in 5 at. of 6 l.

12. Holy Spirit, God of light ! Come, and on our inner sight. By H. M. Macgill, in The Juconile Mass. Magazine of the United Press. Ch., Jan., 1868; the United Press. Hyl., 1876; and his Songs of the Christian Creed and Life, 1876. 13. Hely Spirit, Fire divins. By F. H. Hedge, in the Unitarian Hymn [and Tune] Bk., Boston, 1868, in 5 st. of 6 l.

14. Come, Holy Spirit, from above, And from the realms of light and love. By A. P. Stanley, in Macmillan's Magazine, June, 1873, and the Westminster Abbey H. Bk., 1883, in 5 st. of 6 l.

16. Holy Spirit, come and shine Sweetly in this heart of mine. By S. W. Dushield, contributed to Laudes Domini, N. Y., 1884. Another rendering by the same translator is given in his Latin Hymn-Writers, &c., N. Y., 1889, as "Come, Holy Spirit, And send forth the heavenly, &c."

18. Holy Spirit, on us rest. This in T. Darling's Hys. for the Ch. of England, revised ed., 1889, is a cento from Copeland and Caswall.

Although these trs. do not equal those of the Veni Creator Spiritus in number, yet they indicate a long and profound interest in this magnificent hymn.

Veni Sancte Spiritus: Reple. [Whitsuntide]. The text of this antiphon is printed at p. 821, ii. It is found in a ws. of the 11th cent., now in the Brit. Mus. (Harl. 2961, f. 102), appointed for use at Vespers on the Vigil of Pentecost, and reading "in unitatom." Also in another Brit. Mus. Ms. of circa 1100 (Add. 18302, f. 14, and f. 25). In many mss. only the first part ("Veni ... accende") is given, as in a ms. of the 11th cent., new in the Brit. Mus. (Harl. 4951, f. 246), and this form is found in the Sarum Missal of 1498, appointed for the Tuesday and Saturday after Whitsunday, and in the present Roman Missal for Whitsunday and also throughout that week. When Durandus and the carlier writers on Hermannus Contractus ascribed the "Veni Sancte Spiritus" respectively to Robert II, and to Hermannus Contractus, it is not unlikely that they really meant to refer to this antiphon and not to the "Veni Sancto Spiritus, Et emitte"; and the Add. 18302, which was apparently written in Swabia, is also one of the earliest sources of the "Salve regina." (p. 291, ii.) which is most probably by Hermannus Contractus. But there is not anfficient evidence to allow us to assign the antiphon definitely to either of these authors.

This antiphon has passed into English through the German (see p. 631, ii.), and also directly. Among the versions directly from the Latin may be mentioned:-

1. Come, O Holy Spirit! fulfil the hearts of Thy athful ones. By J. D. Chembers, in his Praiser, &c., 1852, p. 186.

2. Come, Holy Ghost, fill the hearts of Thy faithful.
In the Roman Hyl., ed. J. B. Young, N. Y., 1884, p. 41.
See also the Crown of Jerus, 1863, p. 4, and the Atlant Hyl., 1884, p. 103.

Veni, superne Spiritus: Purgata Christi sanguine. C. Cofin. [Whitsun tide.] Appeared in the Paris Brev., 1736 and in Coffin's Hymni Sacri the same year, p. 55. In the Paris and later French Brevs. it is the hymn for the 1st Vespers of Whitsunday. Text in J. Chandler's Hys. of the Primitive Church, 1837, and Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865. Tr. as :-

- 1. Come. Heavenly Spirit, come. By W. J. Blew, in his Church Hy. & Tune Bk., 1852-55, Ember, 9, and Rice's Sci. from the same, 1870.
- 2. Come, O Spirit, from on high. By C. S. Calverley, in the Hymnary, 1872.

Other trs. are:—

1. Come, Spirit from above. I. Williams, in the British Mag., May, 1834; and his Hys. tr. from the Partition Brev., 1839.

2. Come, Holy Ghost, Thou Source of good. J. Chandler. 1837.

3. Descend, Celestial Spirit blest. J. D. Chanders.

4. Spirit Saperne, come down again. "J. M. H." in Lyra Mesrianica, 1864. [J. J.]

Veni, veni, Rex gloriae. [Advent.] Mr. Crippen says he tr. this "from a Ms. of the mr. crippen says he tr. kils "from a Ms. of the 15th century (with music) at Karlsruhe." This text is in Mone, No. 35. Mr. Crippen's tr. appeared in his Ancient Hys. and Poems, &c., 1868, in 23 at. of 4 l. as "O come, O come, Thou glorious King." In Martineau's Hysus, &c., 1873, st. xii., xiii., xvii., xviii., and xix., as given as "Give us, O Fount of Purity." These stantage form a most accordable base. These stauses form a most acceptable hymn on Desiring Holiness. Also tr. by Dr. H. Bonar as "Come, O come, Thou King of glory," 1866.

Venit e coelo Mediator alto. [Passiontide.] This is the hymn at Lands in the office of the Prayer of our Lord Jesus Christ on the Mount of Olives. See a note on this office under Aspice at Verbum Patris (p. 07, ii.). This office appears to be of very recent date, viz. since 1830. It is found in the eds. of the Roman Breviary, pub. at Lyons, 1852, and Tournay, 1879, but not among the offices for universal use. Tr. as:—

- 1. Daughter of Bion, seaso thy hitter tears. By E. Caswall, in his Lyra Catholica, 1849, p. 61, and his Hys. and Poems, 1873, p. 34. It passed, with slight alterations, into the Hymnary, 1872, and others.
- 2. Sinn's daughter, weep no mere. By Sir H. W. Baker, in the trial copy of H. A. & M., 1859, and the ed. of 1861. It was revised for the ed. of 1875. Also in Kennedy, 1863, &c.
- 3. Come from the beavealy thrence above. In the 1860 ed. of the Hy. Noted, No. 152.

From high heaven, the Mediator. J. Wallace. 1874. [W. A. S.]

Verborgne Gotteeliebe du. G. Tersteegen. [The Love of God.] 1st pub. in his Gefalliches Blumengärtlein, 1729, Bk. iii., No. 26, in 10 st. of 7 l., entitled, "The longing of the soul quietly to maintain the secret drawings of the Love of God." Although a fine hymn and much used in English, its German use has been almost confined to the early Moravian collections. Included in full in the 3rd ed., 1731, of the Sammlung geist- and lieblicher Lieder, and omitting st. iv., v., as No. 542, in the Herrnhut G. B., 1735; but not repeated in the Brüder G. B., 1778, or the Kleine Brüder G. B., 1870. Tr. 68;

1. There hidden leve of God, whose height. A spirited tr. by J. Wesley, omitting st. iv., v. [trs. of these sts. by S. Jackson were incorporated when he reprinted Wesley's tr. in his Life of Toratosgen, 1832 (1837, p. 409)], in Ps. & Hys., 1738, and Hys. & Sacred Posms, 1739 (P. Works, 1868-72, vol. i. p. 71). Written while at Savannah, and in 6-line st. Included, somewhat altered, as No. 3 in the Wesley Hys. & Spir. Songs, 1753; as No. 335 in the Wes. H. Bk., 1780 (1875, No. 344); and in the Meth.

New Cons. H. Bk., 1863. It is however generally abridged. At least fourteen centos have been included in various hymnals, but as they are taken from the text of the Wes. H. Bk. it is not necessary here to note them in detail. In one form or other the hymn is found under the original first line in collections since 1866, in Thring's Coll., 1880-82, Snepp's S. of G. & G., 172, 172, Hyd. Comp., 1876, Bapt. Hyd., 1879, Horder's Cong. Hys., 1884, &c., and in America in the Unitarian H. Bk., 1869, Hatfield's Ch. H. Bk., 1872, Epis. Hyd., 1871, &c. Altered forms include :-

1. O God! whose love immease in height (st. i. alt.), in the Moravian H. Bks., 1789-1888.
2. Thou wendrous love of God, whose height (st. i. alt.), New Zealand Hyl., 1872.
3. In mercy, Jesua, Thou hast brought (st. ill.) in J. Bickersteth's Ps. & Hys., 1832.
4. Take, Lord, all self from me, that I (st. vil.) in the Moravian H. Bks., 1789-1888.

In the P. Works, 1868, p. 71, Dr. Osborn notes :-

"The translation [in 1736] agrees with this, except in st. iv., where we read:

" " Ah tear it thence, that Thou alone May'st reign unrival'd Monarch there: From earthly loves I must be free Kre I can find repose in Thee.

But after the ever-memorable 24th of May, 1738, Wesley knew 'the way of God more perfectly;' and wrote as in the text :--

"Is there a thing beneath the sun
That strives with Thee my heart to chare?
Ah, tear it thence, and reign alone,
The Lord of every motion there;
Then shall my heart from earth be free,
When it has found repose in Thee."

"In a final revision for the Large Hyem-book, 1780, he changed 'Be' in v. 2, L. 4, into 'Seem,' and made the closing couplet of v. 6 precatory, in accordance with the two preceding, by changing 'la' in the last line line 'be.'"

Verbum care factum est, Ex virgine Maria. [Christmas.] This hymn exists in a great variety of texts. Leaving out of account the varieties of reading, which are verconsiderable, we may reckon at least five different forms. The two lines above are used in some cases as the introduction, and line 2 as the refrain.

- 4. The earliest form known is in a ms. in the Bibl. Nat-Paris (Lot., 113s, f. 4s, in a hand of the 12th cent.), and thence in E. du Méril's Perise exedites du Mégra Age, Paris, 1854, p. 337. This form is parily in Latin and partly in Provençal French. The Latin stances are:—
  - In hoc anni circulo.
     Fons de suo rivulo.
- 3. Quod vetustas sufficat.
  4. Sine viri copula

- 5. Summi patris filio.
  6. Animal impositum.
  7. O beats femina.
  8. Illi laus et gloris.
- ji. Mone. No. 50, prints it from a ms. of the 15th cent. in the town library at Trier. The stanzas there are 1, 2, 7, 8, and the following:— 14. Reges tres de genti-

The second, written about 1610, has 1, 3, 21, 22, 23, 8, 13, 14, 19, 25, 8.

v. Mose, No. 387, has a form in 29 stanzas from mas, of the 16th cent, at Venice, and the same form is in a Ms. in the Bibl. Nat., Paris (Fonds Fadicus, No. 558, 5, 107), also written in Italy in the 16th cent. In the Paris Ms. it is given as by Jacobus de Benedictis. The text, of Mose Prints It, has stanzas 1, 3, 2, 4, 7, 11, 17, 18, 14, 19, 12, 13, 24, 10, 20, 8, as above. The remaining 12 st. of this text need not here be noted, vi. Wackersaged, 1841. There it is in 14 st., viz. 1, 3, 21, 22, 23, 8, 4, 13, 7, 10, 11, 18, 17, 25.

From this summary it is pretty clear that No. i. is the original, and that Nos. ii. and iii. are forms which were current in Germany in the 14th cent. Stanzas 21-25 seem also to belong to the 14th cent. Stanza 25 might be attached to any hymn of the same metre, and is found in some forms of the "Puer natus" (p. 940, i.). The remaining 12 stanzas of No. v. were probably written in Italy. It may be added that ii, is also in Daniel, iv. p. 157; and vi. in Daniel, i. No. 477, and Neale's Hy. Eccl., 1851, p. 74. See also Wackernagel, i., Nos. 264-266. The text as in Daniel, i. No. 477, beginning In hos and circule, was tr., omitting st. vii., x., xi., by Dr. Neale, in his Med. Hye., 1851, p. 106, as " In the ending of the Year. This was repeated in the 1867 ed. of the Hy. Noted, and in The Office H. Bk., 1889. [J. M.]

Verbum Dei, Deo natum. [St. John the Evangelist.] Archbishop Trench remarks justly, "This sublime hymn, though not Adam of St. Victor's, . . . is altogether worthy of him." It is found in a Ms. of the end of the 12th cent, in the Bodleian ( Litury. Miso. 341. f. 42), and another circa 1200 (Liturg. Misc., 340, f. 141); also in a ms, of the 13th cent. in the British Museum (Arundel, 156, f. 95). Among the St. Gall was, it is found in Nos. 376, 381 of the 11th cent., No. 66 of the 12th cent., and others. It is included in the Mandeburg Missed, 1480, and many later German Missuls, generally assigned to the festival of St. John at the Latin Gate. Pt. ii. begins with st. ix. Volat avis sine meta. The printed text is also in Mone, No. 709; Daniel, ii. p. 166; Trench, ed. 1864, p. 75; and Kehrein, No. 408. Tr. as:-

Verbum Supernum prodiens, A Patre olim exiens. [Advent.] This hymn, a short and good summary of the leading ideas of Advent, is given as No. 33 in Mone, with the remark that it is probably of the second half of the 5th cent. Daniel gives the text at 1, No. 74, and at iv. p. 144 cites it as in a Rheinau ms. of the 11th cent., ranking it as a hymn of the 11th cent. Among the British Museum Mss, it is found in three 11th cent. Hymnaries of the English Church (Vesp. D. xii. f. 29; Jul. A. vi. f. 31 b; Harl. 2961, f. 225b); in an 11th cent. Mozarabic Hymnarium (Add. 30851, f. 112); on 11th cent. Mozarabio Breviary (Add. 30848, f. 3), &c. It is in G. M. Dreves's Hymn. Moissiacensis, 1888, from a 10th cent, ms.; in a ms. of the 11th cent. at Corpus Christi, Cambridge (391, p. 239); in a ws. of the 11th cent, at St. Gall, No. 413; and in the Latin Hys. of the Anglo-Sazon Ch. (Surtees Society), 1851, is printed from an 11th cent. ws. at Durham (B. iii. 32, f. 11). It is included in the older Roman (Venice, 1478), Sarum, York, Aberdeen, and other Breviaries, the Sarum use being at Matine on the 1st S. in Advent, and daily up to Christ-mas Eve. The text is also in Wackernagel, i. No. 55; the Hymnarium Sarisb., 1851, p. 4; L. C. Biggs's annotated H. A. & M., 1867, &c. In the Roman Brev., 1632, it is considerably altered, and begins, Verbum Supernum predicus, E Patris asterno sinu. This text is in recent eds. of that Breviary; in Daniel, i. No. 74; J. Chandler's Hys. of the Primitive Church, 1837, No. 39; and Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiac, 1838 and 1865. [J. M.)

Both forms of this hymn have been tr. as follows:—

i. The Original Text.

1. To earth descending, Word roblime. By J. M. Neale, in the H. Noted, 1852, No. 11, the Hymner, 1882, &c.

Verbum Supernum prodiens, Nec Patris linquens dexteram. St. Thomas of Aquino. [Holy Communion.] Written about 1263 for the office for use on Corpus Christi (see Pange Hagua gloriosi Corporis). It is found in the Roman (Venice, 1478, and, unchanged, in 1632), Mozarabic of 1502, Surum, York, Aberdeen, Paris of 1786, and other Bremaries, its primary use being at Lauds on Corpus Christi

"Most appropriately, says Daniel (I. No. 241), has St. Thomas made his hymn like the well-known hymn for the Nativity of the Lord ['Verbum Supernum prodiens, A Patre olim extens', for as to the Festival of the Eucharist, by which the Word made Flesh will dwell with us for ever, what need is there to explain at length the relationship that exists between it and the Nativity of the Lord?"

The text, in 5 st. and a doxology, is in Daniel, i. No. 241; Hymnarium Sarisb., 1851, p. 123, and others. St. iv. is a fine instance of perfect form and condensed meaning :-

" Se macens dedit socium, Convescens in equitum. Se moriens in prelium, Se reguans dat in praemium."

The last stanza, 0 salutaris hostis, has often been used along with the doxology as a separate hymn, e.g., at the Benediction of the Blessed

3. Word of the Father, Coming from high. J. W. Sacrament. The hymn is found in a Ms. Hewett. 1850. of the 13th cent. in the Bodleian (Ashmole, 1525, f. 175); in a Ms. of the end of the 13th cent. (Add. 23935, f. 4 b), and a 14th cent. Saram Brev. (Reg. A. xiv. f. 95), both in the British Museum; in a 13th cent. Ms. at St. Gall, 503, i., and others. Also in Wackernagel, i. No. 232; Königsfeld, ii. p. 214; Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesias, 1838 and 1865, and

The trs. of this hynm are as follows:-

- 1. The Word, descending from above. By E. Caswall, in his Lyra Catholica, 1849, p. 114, and his Hys. & Poems, 1873, p. 65. It is in the People's H., 1867. In the Hymner, 1882, it is rewritten as, "The Word proceeding from above."
- 2. The Word of God proceeding forth. By J. M. Neale, in the enlarged ed. of the H. Noted, 1854. From the H. Noted it has passed into several collections, and in almost every instance with alterations. In the Salisbury H. Bk., 1857, it begins, "The Word from His eternal home." Another altered form of the text is "The Heavenly Word proceeding forth," in H. A. & M., 1861 and 1875. In the Hymnary, 1872, Neale's tr. is given with st. v., as in H. A. & M.

  11. Proceeding forth, the Word supernal. J. D. Aylward, in O. Shipley's Annus Sonctus, 1884.

The special use of this portion of the hymn is thus set forth in the Dict. of Christian Antiquities: -

"A hymn sung during the Office called Benediction, at the moment when the Tabernsole is opened, in order that the Consecrated Hoes may be removed and placed that the Consecrated Host may be removed and placed in the Monstrance prepared for its solemn Exposition.

"Sometimes also, though less frequently, "O salutaris Hostla" is sung at High Mass, immediately after the Besechicut; not Indeed as an Integral part of the Mass itself, to which it does not properly belong, but in order to prevent the long and distracting pause which would otherwise ensue, when, as is frequently the case in Plain Channt Masses, the Benedictus is too short to fill up the time which must necessarily clame between the Elementer of the Channel Masses. time which must necessarily clapse between the Ele-vation of the Host and the Pater Norter."

This portion of the hymn is not usually tr. distinct from the preceding verses, although in some books it is marked off from the rest by the introduction into the tr. of the Latin line. The tre. are:-

- 1. O saving Host, that heaven's high gate. Printer.
- 1706. 2. O Saving Host which Heaven's Gato. Evening Office. 1746. 3. O Saving Victim, pledge of love. Divine Office.

Vere, Thomas Aubrey de, third a of the late Sir Anbrey de Vere, Bart., was b. in 1814, and educated at Trinity College, Dublin. Whilst Dr. Newman was Rector of the Roman Catholic University, Dublin, he was one of the Professors there. His first volume of Poems appeared in 1842, and since then be has also pub. more than thirty distinct works, many of which are in verse, including Poems, 1855; May Carols, 1857; Postical Works, 1884; and others. A few pieces from his poetical works are given in Roman Catholic collections.

Very, Jones, was b. at Salam, Massachusetts, Aug. 28, 1813, his father, Jones Very, being a shipmaster. He graduated at Harvard College in 1836. He remained at his College, as tutor in Greek, for two years, and then entered the Unitarian Ministry (1843). He has been engaged in the work of a preacher without a pastorate from the first, a great part of his time being devoted to literary pursuits. In 1839 he pub. a volume of Essays and Poems, from which several pieces have been taken as hymna, including :-

1. Father! I wait Thy word. The sun doth stand,

Noting upon God.

2. Father, there is no change to live with Thos.

Peace in the Father's Cure.

3. Father! Thy wenders do not singly stand. The

4. Wilt Thou not vielt me? The Divine Presence desired.

These hymns were included in Longfellow and Johnson's Unitarian Book of Hymns, 1846. In the same collection also appeared:-

I saw on earth another light. The Light Within.
 The bud will soon become a flower. Showing and

7. Turn not from him who asks of thee. Kind Words. In addition the following hymns appeared in Longfellow and Johnson's Hymns of the Spirit, 1864 :--

Americana, 1868; and in Putana's Singers and Songe of the Liberal Faith, 1874. [F. M. B.]

Very, Washington, brother of Jones Very, was b. at Salem, Massachusetts, Nov. 12, 1815. After following mercantile pursuits for some time, he entered Harvard College, and graduated there in 1843. Subsequently he conducted a private school in Salom, where he d. April 28, 1858. Putnam gives three of Very's poetical pieces in his Singers and Songs, &c., 1874, one of which, "There cometh o'er the spirit" (Spring), appeared in Longfellow and Johnson's Book of Hymns, 1816. [J. famous hymn," as D Vexilla Regis prodeunt. V.~H.~C.This "worldas Dr. Neale calls it, has been ascribed to Theodulph of Orleans, to Sedulius, &c. But it is found in all the uss, of the works of Fortunatus, as well as in all the printed editions, and there is no ground whatever for questioning his authorship. In further annotation it will be most convenient to treat (1) of its Text, then (2) of its Origin and some of the allusions contained in it, and lestly (3) of the variations in its Use.

i. Text, MSS., &c. We print first the full original text from Professor F. Leo's ed. of Fortunatus's Opera poetica, Berlin, 1881, p. 34, where it is given as No. 6 in Bk. il., entitled "Hymn in honour of the Hely Cross," and in 8 st. as follows :-

This text Leo prints from a St. Petersburg Ms. of the 8th cent., a Laudun Ms. of the 8th or 9th cent., a Vatican Ms. of the 9th cent. (Regiae, 329), and others. It agrees with the original readings of a 9th cent, Ms. of Fortunatus, now in the Brit, Mus. (Add. 24193, f. 18). In the earliest Hymnaries, &c., it is found in much the same text, e.g. :-

of There is a world syn hath not seen. The Spirit In the so-called Durkon Ritual, an ancient ms, in the Chapter Library at Durham (A. iv. 19, f. 665, written in Most of these hymns are in the Lyra Sac. England in a hand of the 10th cent.), in two Hymnades, written in England in the 11th cent., and now in the Brit. Mas. (Fesp. D., xii. f. 64. and Rowt., 2861, f. 238b), &c. During the 11th cent. it began to be contourney to omit at. ii., vii., viii., and so in the Fesp. D., xii. at. it. was subsequently scratched through, st. vii., viii. being erased (in the Fesp. D., xii., the Latin text of almost all the hymns is repeated along with an Anglo-Saxon interine gloss, the Latin being arranged to suit the order of the gloss. In this form, at f. 65b, the original at. ii., vii., viii. are still found, and there is neither original at. ii., vii., viii. are still found, and there is neither original congloss of st. ix., x.), and the two following stanzas, not by Fortunatus, inserted in their place:—

ix.
"O crox ave, spes unica,
Hoe passionis tempore,
Auge pils justitiam,
Relaque dona veniam.

"Te summa Deus Trinitas, Collandat omnis spiritus, Quoe per crucis mysterium Salvas, rege per saecula."

Among other Mes. which omit at vii., viii. and give ix, x., are the Add. 30348, f. 109, a Breviary written in Spain in the 11th cent., and now in the Brit. Mus.; the Arusalel, 155, f. 1445, a Hymnarium written in England in the 12th cent., and now in the Brit. Mus.; the Arusalel, 155, f. 1445, a Hymnarium written in England in the 12th cent., and now in the Brit. Mus., &c., So also the Mymnarius Moistadeansia, a me. written in France in the 10th cent., and ed. by G. M. Dreves in 1885, p. 45. In the Hart, 2961, as above, the hymn is divided into two parts, pt. l. being st. i.-iv., viii., and pt. ii. beginning "Arbor decors et Julida," being st. v., vi., vii. In a ws. of the 11th cent. now at Corpus Christi College, Cambridge (391, p. 246), st. iv. also immediately precedes st. viii. Other early ms. which contain this bymn, include one of the 11th cent. now in the Brit. Mus. (Jal. A. vi., f. 469); one of the 11th cent. at Durham (B., Iii., 32, f. 23); one of the 18th cent. at St. Gall, No. 196, &c. The variations in the text are somewhat numerous, but we need only mention two, vis. st. vii., l. 3, where the Add. 24193, reads "Focumed," and tx. x., l. 2, where the Arusadel, 156, reads "Collaudet." Danstel, I., No. 119, 31. p. 362, 181. p. 284, iv. p. 70, prints the text with readings from a Fleury Rs. of circa 890, a Rheiman ms. of the 11th cent., de. The printed text is also in Wacktraagel, i., No. 80; the Hymn. Sarisburicans, 1851, p. 71; F. A. March's Lat. Hys., 183, p. 68; Card. Newman's Hymn Exclusive, 1838 and 1865, &c. In the revised Roman Brev. of 1632 the text is of st. I., lii.-vi., ix. x., slightly altered.

ii. Origin and Allusions. To appreciate

ii. Origin and Allusions. To appreciate this hymn we must bear in mind the circumstances under which it was written. The details are of more than usual interest, as a short summary will show:—

Forquatus was then living at Poictiers, where his friend, Queen Rhadegund, founded a numery. Before the consecration of the numery church she desired to present certain relies to it, and among these she obtained from the Emperor Justin II. a fragment of the numery received its name of the Holy Cross. This relie was sent in the first includes to Tours, and was left in charge of the Bishop, in order that he might convey it to Poictiers. Ges the Historia Francouses, by Gregory of Tours [d. 584]. Bk. Lx., Chapter 40.) In the Abbé E. Briand's Satate Radegonde, Poictiers, 1887, pp. 128-130, its Journey to Poictiers is thus described: "Escorted by a numerous body of clergy and of the faithful holding lighted torches, the Bishop started in the zidat of Hungical chants, which ceased not to resound in bonour of the hallowed wood of the Redemption. A lesgue from Poictiers the pous cortige found the delegates of Rhadegund, Fortunatus at their head, rejoicing in the honour which had fallen to them; some carrying ceasers with perfumat incense, others torches of white wax. The meeting took place at Migné, at the place where, twelve centuries and a half later, the cross appeared in the air. It was on this occasion that the chaptur of triumph composed by Fortunatus to calme the artival of the True Cross. . . It was the 19th November, 669."

The hymn was thus primerily a Processional hymn, written for use at the solemn reception of a relic of the Holy Cross. Inspired by the occasion the poet composed this poem of the Crucified King, one of the grandest hymns of the Latin church, in which in glowing accents he invites us to contemplate the mystery of love accomplished on the Cross. The occasion thus gives the key to his choice of subject, and to most of the allusions throughout the hymn. Fortunatus evidently had in his mind, especially in at. v., the old legends of the Tree of the Cross (see under "Pange lingus gloriosi Proclium," p. 880, i.), and designedly used in i. l. 4, the word "patibulum," which means properly a cross, formed thus Y or thus Y; the latter form representing the stem of the tree, with the branches on which, as on a balance, the ransom of the world was weighed (st. vi.). The most interesting of the other allusions is the use made in the 4th stanza of Ps. xovi. 10. Neither in the Hebrew, the present Septuagint, the present Vulgate, nor in the English versions, do we find anything answering to Fortunatus's statement that David spoke of God as reigning "from the tree," i.e. from the Cross.

Justin Martyr however thed the panage as Messianic, and regarded the words and ray $\tilde{c}$how as part of the original ($\tilde{b}$idopes with $Tryph$, sect. 13; see Migne's $P$. Grace. vi., $48); and Tertinlian ($\tilde{d}$goint $kircion$, $B$. till., $18; see Migne's $P$. P. Lat., ii., $47), quotes the words "a ligno" as part of the text of $P$. xevt. 10. These words are also found in many use. of the so-called tlatic version of the Pasiuns, so e.g. in a *Praiter of the 1thic cent. now in the Brit. Mus. ($kg. 2 N. V. 1.112), where the verse reads "Dictie in pationibus dominus regnavit a ligno, et enim correxit ordem," and so in mother *Praiter* of circa 750 ($vsp. A., i. f. $2). In the $Add$, 10546 of circa 550 it reads "Dictie in gentibus quia dominus regnavit, et enim correxit ordem," and so in the Vitellias $E, xviil. f. $3, of the 1th cent.) They also survived in the printed $sarum Missais as a versicle for use on Friday in Easter week and for the Festival of the Invention of the Cross, thus "Dicties in gentibus quia Dominus regnavit a ligno," and this form is also in the present *Rosan Missai, for the Invention of the Rosan Missai, for the Invention of the Rosan Missai, for the Invention of the Rosan Missai, for the Invention of the Rosans Missai, in the ferial office at Eastertide, thus "V. Dictie in notionibus, alleula, $R$, Quia Dominus regnavit a ligno," (see the Marquess of Bute's *Rosans Bres. into English, vol. i., 1878, p. 152). M. Leon Gaudler, in his Les Troper, 1889, p. 187, quotes a Limoges ms. of the 11th cent. (Bib. Nat., Paris, Lat. 1333), as appointing it for the 3rd S. after Raster, and as paraphrasing it thus : "Dictie, concunctl at psallies of southern of the grand of survaint et sedet in trono decomminato Zabulo."

iii. Use. As already stated the first use was as a processional hymn in honour of the Holy Cross. Its subsequent uses include the following:—

The Sarson use was at Vespers on Passion Sunday, and daily up to Maunday Thursday. In the Faris Breuof 1736 is was assigned to Vespers from Monday in Passion Wesk up to Maunday Thursday. In the present Roman Bren, it is used at Vespers on the Saturday before Passion Sunday, and up to Maunday Thursday, and also on the Festival of the Invention of the Cross (May 3); and in the present Roman Missai it is appointed to be sung on the morning of Good Friday, after the ceremony of the Adoration of the Cross, and during the time that the accidence are censing the re-erved sarrament (kept since Maunday Thursday in a side chapel, in the socialied Hold Grave), previous to its being solemniy piaced on the High Altar.

Of the imitations and paredies of this hymn we need only mention two.

We need only mention two.

The first of these is a sequence beginning "Vexilla Regia, prodeunt et fluget," printed by Q. M. Dreves in his Proserium Lemoucenze, 1880, p. 105, from three Limogen was now in the Bibl. Nat., Furis (Lat. 1118, circa 990; Lat. 778 of the 12th cent.; Lat. 1137 of the 11th cent.); being an unhappy combination of Fortunatus with the versicle and antiplon used in the present Haman Bron. at the First Vespers of the Invention of the Crosa. The second, printed by Thomas Wright in the Political Sunge of England, London, 1859, p. 259, begins "Vexilla ragni prodeunt, Fulgat cometa comtum," and is a parody describing the death (1312) of Peter de Gaveston, the invourite of Edward II. of England. (Wright, at p. 269, pub. a second access as the hand. (Wright, at p. 259, pub. a second song on the same occasion, beginning "Pange, lingus, necem Petri qui turbavit Angliam," which is a parody on the "Pange lingua gloriosi Proslium.")

We may add that the text of Fortunatus, with a full critical and theological com-mentary, will be found in the Abbé S. G. Pimont's Hymnes du Brévinire Romain, vol. ii., pt. ii., p. 30, Paris, 1884; and in Dr. J. Kayeer's Beiträge zur Geschichte und Erklärung der ältesten Kirchenhymnen, vol. 1, Paderborn, 1881, pp. 395-411.

The tre. into English of the Vexilla Regis include :--

1. A Broad the Regal Banners die. This fine rendering is in The Office of the Blessed Virgin Mary in English, &c., 1687 (Brit. Mus.) an account of which is given in the Churchman's Shilling Mag, for July, 1876. Hymn No. 189 in Thring's Coll., 1882, is taken from this fr., the text being slightly altered. It is based on the tr. of 1585 noted below, and is by far the best rendering of the Vexilla Regis in C. U.

2. The reyal banner is unfuried. By J. Chandler, in his Hys. of the Primitive Church, 1837, p. 74, in 5 st. of 4 l., and again in his Hys. of the Church, mostly Primitive, 1841, No. 42. It is given in a limited number of hymnals only.

2. Now onward move the standards of our King. By W. J. Copeland, in his Hys. for the Work, &c., 1848, p. 79, in 7 st. of 4 l. Its use is limited.

- 4. Forth fames the standard of our King. By Bp. J. Williams, in his Ancient Hys., 1845, p. 61. This is repeated in a limited number of collections, including Schaff's Christ in Song, 1869, and others.
- 5. Forth comes the standard of the King : All hall, Thou Mystery ader'd. By E. Caswall, in his Lyra Catholica, 1849, p. 88, and his Hys. & Paems, 1878, p. 50, in 7 st. of 4 !. It is given in several Roman Catholic hymn-books for schools and missions.
- 6. Forth goes the standard of the King, The sign of algas, the radiant Cross. This tr. appeared as No. 36 in Stretton's Church Hys., 1850, in 6 st. of 4 l. In the Index it is said to be by Chandler, but its similarity to Chandler's tr. is so faint that the most which can be said of it is that it is Chandler's tr. re-written. It is a most successful rendering of the hymn. In its full, or in an abridged form it is found in later collections, as Murray's Hymnal, 1852, Lowe's Gains-burgh Coll., 1854, and several others.
- 7. The King of Kings His banner rears. By R. Campbell, in his Hys. and Anthems, 1850, p. 65, in 6 st. of 4 l.
- 5. See the reyal banner streeming. By G. Rorison, in his Hys. and Anthems, 1851, No. 59, in 8 st, of 4 1,
- 9. The royal banacre forward go. By J. M. Neale, in his Mediaval Hys., 1851, p. 6, in 7 st. of 4 l., and again in the Hy. Noted, 1852, with the omission of st. vi. It is in C. U. both in Its full and in several altered forms. Amongst the latter are (1) H. A. & M., altered by the Compilers, 1861, and repeated in other collections; (2) F. Pott's Hymns, &c., altered by the Editor, 1861; (S) Nicholson's Appendix Hyl., 1866, beginning with st. iii., "Fulfill'd is all that David ; (4) The Hymnary, altered by the Editors, 1872, and others. When these various forms of Dr. Neale's tr. are taken into account, it is found that his rendering of the Vexilla Regis is more widely used than all others put together.

10. The royal banner forward goes, The Gross's mystery shines to view. By J. A. Johnston in his English Hyl., 1852. In the 1856 ed. he altered it to "See forward the King's banners go," and in the 1861 ed. to "Before us our King's banner

11. The royal banner is unfuried. This, in the Cooks and Denton Hymnal, 1853, is a cento of which st. i. is from J. Chandler as above, and st. ii.-v. are from Stretton's Church Hys., 1850, somewhat altered.

12. Forth goes the standard of our King, The sacred banner gleams on high. This rendering, which appeared in Chope's Hymnal, 1857, and again in other collections, is an arrangement trade from older collections, the principal source being Stretton's Church Hys., 1850, as above.

13. The King's bright banners forward go. This in Kennedy, 1863, No. 601, is J. A. Johnston's 1856 text as above, in a slightly altered form.

- 14, The royal banner is unfurled, And Io! the Cross is reared on high. This rendering in Morrell and How's Ps. & Hys., 1864, in 4 st. of 4 l., is an altered and abbreviated form of the text in Stretton's Church Hys., 1850, as above, with a slight resemblance to Chope's text of 1857. In the S. P. C. K. Church Hys., 1871, No. 118 is a cento beginning with st. i. of this text, and con-cerning which Mr. Ellerton says in his Notes to the Church Hys., 1881, p. xl.:-
- "Hymn 118.... Free imitation, written for Church Hymns in 1871 by Bishop William Walsham How, of the Latin hymn Feetlin Regit product, by Venantius Fortunatus. In the present imitation, little except the first two verses of Fortunatus's hymn remain. The original contains eight verses, the last four being an impassioned apostrophs to the material cross, an alleged fragment of which was amongst the relics for the reception of which the hymn was written. These verses being considered by the Editors of Church Hymns wholly unsuitable for the use of the congregations for which their book was prepared, have been replaced by others."

The text of this Church Hymna cento is thus composed: et. i. from Morrell & How, 1864, unaltered; st. ii. from Stretton's Church Hys., unaltered; st. iii., Morrell & How, 1864, st. iii. rewritten; st. iv., v. new by Bp. How.

16. The Kingly banners onward stream. By R. C. Singleton, written in 1867, and pub. in his Anglican II. Bh., 1868.

16. The King's tright banners forward go. By E. A. Dayman, in the Sarum Hyl., 1868. The opening lines (1 and 2) are from Kennedy's 1863 text, hence the first line of st. ii., " With outstretched hands, transfixed and torn," must be noted.

This extensive list of trs. marks in a striking manner the strong hold this hymn has upon many men. In translating the stanza which has called forth the greatest diversity and skill is the fourth as above.

The finest rendering of these lines which we have seen is that in the Service Book of 1687 (see above), which reads:--

" That which the Prophet-King of old Hath in mysterious Verse foretold, Is now accomplisht, whilst we see God Ruling Nations from a Tree."

The nearest approach to this in dignity and force is Dr. Neale's tr. of 1851. [J. J.]

Victimae Paschali. Wipo (?). [Easter.] This Sequence is an excellent example of the transition from the rhythmical, irregular, unrhymed Notkerian sequences to the regular rhyming sequences of Adam of St. Victor and later writers. It presents several points of interest, and demands a somewhat detailed examination. We shall treat (1) of the Text and MSS., (2) of the Authorship, and (3) of the Uses made of this Sequence.

i. Test and MSS. To show its structure we print the full text, which reads :--

Victimas Paschali Lauden immolent Christlani.

Agnus redemit over; Christus innocens Patri Reconciliavit Peccatores.

III. Mora et vita duello Conflixere mirando ; Dux vitae mortuns

iv. " Die nobie, Maria, Quid vidisti in via?" "Sepulchrum Christi viventis, Et gloriam visti resurgentis : Angelicos testes, Sudarium el vestes. Surrexit Christus, spes mea, Praecedet suos in Galilea," Credendum est magis soli Mariae veraci Quam Judaeorum turbae fallaci. Scimus Curistum resur-rexisse

Otherwise, in most cases, the text is given in full and undirect. The printed text is also in Dandel, il. p. 95, with further notes at II, p. 285, lit. p. 287, v. p. 88; with further notes at li. p. 385, lit. p. 387, v. p. 58; Kehreia, No. 83; Büzzler, No. 78; Wackernagel, I., No. 199; Card. ii. Authorship. As a rule this Sequence has been regarded as of unknown authorship. Of the guesses at its authorship the following may be mentioned:—

(1) Cardinal Bena (Reruss Lieurg., Rome, 1671, p. 336) says that it had been ascribed to Notker. This ascription, however, is quite without ground (see p.

p. 500/says and a services. In a list of authors of sequences, written circus 1300 (see p. 1043), it is ascribed to Robert II. of France. In a list of authors of sequences, written circus 1300 (see p. 1043), it is ascribed to Robert II. of France. This ascription also lacks confirmation (see p. 967, ii.).

(3) Harmanius Contractus. The attribution to Hermanius Contractus, which is mentioned in the Abbé Migne's Encyclopétic Théologique, vol. viii. (Litergrée), Paris, 1844, col. 850, seems also entirely conjectural.

(4) Adam of St. Victor. In the Augustinians Missal of St. Victor. printed at Paris in 1859, it is attributed to Adam of St. Victor. put it is found in mas, written before he was born (see above and p. 14, ii.).

(5) Italian Origin. In the Encleriologist for October, 1864, it is said to be "probably of Italian origin." This appears simply to be a conjecture, and we have been mable to discover anything which can be called evidence in support of it.

unable to discover anything which can be called evidence in support of it.

(6) Wipe. Lastly P. Anselm Schublger, in his Singerschule St. Galless, 1958, ascribes it to Wipe, on the ground that it is marked with his name in an Elmiedelm 28. of the end of the 11th cent., and gives a facelmite (Appn., No. 35) of the part of the Ms. which contains this sequence. Since Schublger's discovery the sequence has generally been ascribed to Wipe (otherwise Wigno or Wighert), who was a native of Burgundy, and a secutar priest. He was for some time chaplan to the Emperors Courad II. (d. June 4, 1039), and Heinrich III., and presented a collection of poems to the former in 1025, and another collection to the latter in 1041; his latest work being a proce history of the former in 1925, and another collection to the latter in 1941; his latest work being a prose history of the Emperor Contad, finished about 1948. His claim to this sequence (marked as his, so far as we can discover, only in this solitary Emissided in ms.) can hardly be regarded as definitely established. Neither of the two earliest St. Gail ms. give his name, and the copy in one of these ms. (No. 340) dates circa 1940 (so also the Echternach Gradual noted above), i.e. more than 20 years earlier than we otherwise hear of Wipo. And there is nothing in the other pieces known as his which would lead us to connect the "Viotimas Paschail" with his name.

ili. Uses. This fine Sequence is simple, scriptural, good in rhythm, and embraces in itself various elements which account for its popularity and long extended use. Luther held it in high esteem, especially admiring the terse and vivid picture of the conflict between Death and Life in st. iii., and practically in-corporated this stanza in his "Christ lag in Todesbanden" (see > 184, 1). Its brevity and picturesqueness led to its speedy adoption in the Missals of various countries for use at the not indicate its use.

Neither the Sorram, York, nor Herrford Missels used it on Easter Sunday or on Low Bunday; the Sorram appointing it for Friday in Easter week, and for the 2nd and leter Sundays up to the Ascension, and the Herrford and rork for Wednesday in Easter week, as also on the 2nd and later Sundays. In the Angert Missel of 1839 it is however appointed for Easter Sunday and for Low Sunday, as well as for Toesday and Wednesday in Easter week; in the Hamburg Missel of 1809 for Easter Sunday, for Thursday, Friday and Seturday in Easter week; in the Urex Missel of 1898 for the B. V. M. at Easteriak, Rr. Other Missel messant various combinaweek; in the Vice Missel of 1435 for the B, V. M. at Easterties, &c. Other Missels present various combina-tions or modifications of these uses, which need not be mentioned in detail. In the Nowan Missel of 1576 it is one of the four sequences which were alone re-tained in that revision, and is appointed for use on Easter Sunday and daily up to Low Sunday inclusive, but not for the later Sundays. In the Parts Evec. of 1680 it forms part of the service for Vespers on Easter Sunday Sunday.

The dramatic possibilities of this Sequence also early attracted attention. It formed a striking feature in many of the Easter Miracle or Mystery Plays, but these we have not space to describe in detail.

(For its use there see a.g. F. J. Mous's Schauspiele des Mittelalters, Karlarube, 1946, pp. 17-27, 128, fcc.; Re-ligates Antiques, ed. T. Wright and J. O. Hallwell, vol. II., 1943, p. 168; E. de Coussemaker's Drumes Litur-giques du Moyes Aps. Rennes, 1980; G. Milchauck's Orter- und Passionaspiele, Wolfenblittel, 1880, &c.)

It was also frequently employed at Matina on Easter Sunday, in the ceremony of the Easter Sepulchre, which was intercalated in the service between the Third Lesson and the "Te Denn." Various forms of this function Various forms of this function are found both in England, and on the continent. Dr. Carl Lange, in his Die Lateinischen Osterfelern, Munich, 1887, given the results of his examination of 224 ms, and printed service books (Breviaries, Antiphonaries, Processionals, Tropories, &c.), ranging from the 10th to the 18th cent., and used in France, Holland, Germany, Austria, Switzerland, Italy, Spain, and England, all of which contain longer or shorter forms of this function, and 68 of which em-body the "Victimae Paschali," either in full or beginning with "Die nobis, Maria." The earliest forms in which he has found the "Vic-times Paschali" included date from the 18th

At p. 62 Large prints from a 13th cent. Ritual for use at Chalcus-sur-Marne. There, after the Third Responsory, two bors vested in white took their places one on the right and the other on the left of the high alter, to represent the angels at the Holy Seputchre; followed by three descens in white dalmatics, coming from the right side and standing before the alter, to represent the Three Marys. The Angels ask the Three Marys. "Whom seek ys in the asynchre?" and they answer "Jesus of Nazareth," The Angels ask the Three Marys "Whom seek ys in the asynchre?" and they answer "Jesus of Nazareth," The Angels, taking off the white attar-cloth, as representing the grave clothes, reply "He is not here." The Marys, tarring to the choir, sing "Alleinis. The Lord has risen." Then, passing down towards the choir, the Flust Mary sings "Victimuse" (st. 1), the Second sings "Agnus redemits" (st. 1), the succentor, coming to the first step of the altar, asks the Flust Mary "Ho nolds" (st. 1v., Il. 1, 2), to which she replies "Angelleos testes" (st. 1v., Il. 3, 4), the Second replies "Angelleos testes" (st. 1v., Il. 5, 6), and the Third "Surrezits" (st. 1v., Il. 7, 8). Then the succentor, turning to the choir, and polating to the First Mary, sings "Credendam" (st. v., Il. 1-3), sud the whole choir sing "Scimms" (st. v., Il. 4-6). In the meantime the Marys have returned to the vestry, and the ceremony ends by the bishop or the succentor beginning the "To Deum."

sequence is included. Even in the use of the "Victimae Paschail" there were great variations. So in a Nürnberg Ausiphonary of the 13th cent. (Large, p. 149), Mary Magdalene sings at. i.-iit., then Peter and John ask her "Die noble" (t. iv., il. 1, 2), to which she replies "Sepulchrum" (at iv., il. 1, 2), to which she replies "Sepulchrum" (at iv., il. 3-8). Then the choir sing "Gredendum" (at iv., il. 1-3), Mary alone the "Scimus" (st. v., il. 4, 6), and the choir "Tu noble" (st. v., il. 4, 6). In the later service books the more dramatic portion of the sequence beginning with the "Die noble" is slowered to the Prag Breviary of 1512 (Large, p. 122) the rubrics provide for a proper Easter sepulchre and for two Marys. There the Bishop asks Mary Magdalene "Die noble, Maria!" the choir singing "Quid vidist! in vis?" and Mary replying "Sepulchrum" (st. iv., il. 3-8), and the choir time singing "Credendum" (st. iv., il. 3-8), and the choir time singing "Credendum" (st. v., il. 1-8). As Dr. Lange requires 171 large octave pages to print and describe the variations of these service-books, we must beg our readers who what for further information to refer to his interesting work. to his interesting work.

As a final proof of the popularity of the "Victimae Paschali," we may mention some of the numerous imitations of it.

Thus M. Leon Gautler, in his 1888 ed. of Adam of St. Victor, prints two sequences, one on St. Victor ("Martyris Victorie laudes resonent Christiani Mortem el") at it. p. 24, and the other for the B. V. M. at Easter ("Virgini Marise laudes intonent Christiani | Eva tristis") at it. p. 343. Both of these are servile indistions of, and indeed borrow a good deal directly from the "Victimes Panchall." and in his 1881 ed. of Adam of St. Victor (pp. 236, 245) Gautier says that in both cases the sacription to Adam is a missiste. Other indistions may be consulted in Kehrein, e.g. his Nos. 152, 177, 215, 235, 233, 535, 565. 233, 525, 565.

The varying forms of the text, together with a full critical and theological commentary, will be found in Dr. J. Kayser's Beiträge zur Geschichte und Erklärung der ältesten Kirchenkymaen, vol. ii., 1886, pp. 87-60.

Victorinus, Santolius. (Santeüil, Jean-Reptiste de.]

Vinet, Alexandre Rodolphe, b. June 19th, 1799, at Guchy, near Lausanne. His father, a man of somewhat stern religion, was schoolmester of the village, and held a small appointment in the Canton du Yaud, Alexandre was appointed Professor of the French language at the gymnasium of Basic, at the age of 20, and occupied this office, with come work for the University, for twenty years.

married. At first opposed to the movement of the Reveil, a deeper knowledge of its principles and deep sympathy with the persecu-tion of its leaders, drew him heartily to its side. His pen was fearlessly used in defence of toleration (Du respect des opinions, 1824), freedom of worship (Mémoire en faveur de la liberté des cultes, 1826), and the separation of Church and State (Essai sur la manifestation des convictions religieuses, et sur la separation de l'Église et de l'État, 1542). No work is more permanently valuable on the subject than the Essai, from the logical sequence of its conclusions from the premises laid down. In 1837 he had been recalled to Lausanne, to occupy the "chaire de théologie pratique," in the Academy. In the end of 1840, however, he resigned the chair, withdrawing at the same time from the national church. He took a prominent part in the preliminary commit-tees for the formation of the "Eglise libre du Canton de Vaud"; but his proposals were largely modified in the final constitution of it, to his deep regret. He had been compelled to withdraw from the discussions by his failing health. His constitution, always delicate, gave way comparatively early, and he d. May 10, 1847. His name is tenderly chorished, not only for his efforts in the cause of religious freedom, but as an Evangelical Divine (Discours our quelques sujets religieux, 1891-41, and Etudes Evangeliques, pub. after his death), and as a distinguished man of letters (see the portrait of him by Sainte Beuve). His articles in the Semeus touched wide and varied subjects of literature with rare delicacy, acuteness, and truth. The most celebrated of his literary works are: Études sur Blaise Pascal, and Études sur la littérature Française au dixneuvième Siècle, pub. posthumously. hymns pub. in the Chants Chretiens are only a few out of the number he wrote. reveal the inner depth of a nature that shoulk from outward demonstration of religious emotion, and are valuable on this account, as well as for that refinement of meditation which places them so high among the Protestant hymns of France. (See p. 309, ii.) [H. L. B.]

Vintimille, Charles Gaspar Guillaume de Vintimille du Luc, was b. Nov. 15, 1655. He was designated Bishop of Marseilles in 1684, but was not consecrated as such till 1692. In 1710 he was translated to the see of Aix (Bouches du Rhône), and in 1729 to that of Paris. He d. March 13, 1746. Under his auspices appeared the new Paris Breviary of 1736 (in which the ancient hymns of the Church were in great measure replaced by those of the Santetills, Coffin, and other recent French writers); the new Paris Missal of 1738; and the new Paris Processional of 1740; all of which were speedily adopted in many other French dioceses. That Vintimille was himself a hymnwriter seems decidedly doubtful. The hymn "O Christe qui noster poli" (p. 825, i.) has sometimes been ascribed to him, but neither in the Cluniac Brev. of 1686 nor in the Paris Brev. of 1736 is it in any way [J. M.] morked as his.

Virgin born, we bow before Thes.

Bp. R. Heber. [Lent.] Appeared in his post-humous Hymns, &c., 1827, p. 54, in 4 st. of 4 l., and appointed for the 3rd S. in Lent. As given in the People's H., 1867, No. 373, the ines "Mary, Mother meek and mild"; are altered to "Mary, Maid and Mother mild." It is otherwise unchanged. [J. J.]

Virginis castae virginis summae decus praecinentes. [Common of Virgins.] Morel, in his Lat. Hymnen, 1868, p. 180, gives a part of this sequence with the note, "This is only the beginning of a rambling and somewhat barbarous sequence in the Ms. collection of P. Brander [St. Gall Ms., No. 546, written in 1507], where it bears the title 'a prolix sequence of some monk of St. Gall." Nesle, in his Sequentiae, 1852, p. 237, ascribes it to Godescaleus or Gottschalck (d. 1050); but the earliest source he quotee is the Tournay Missai of 1540, and there does not seem to be any sat of 1540, and there does not seem to be any reason for accepting this ascription, which is evidently a conjecture. The earliest text known is in the St. Gall Ms., No. 383, of the 13th or 14th cent. The printed text is also in Daniel, v. p. 314, and Kehrein, No. 475. Tr. as "To-day let Christian maidens." In the People's H., 1867, No. 221, and signed "S. M." [i.e. Sister Marion]. [J. M.]

Virginis Proles, Opifexque matris. [Common of Virgins.] This is found in four was, of the 11th cent in the British Museum (Jul. A. vi. f. 67 b; Vesp. D. xii. f. 110; Harl. 2961, f. 249 b; Add. 30851, f. 155); and in the Latin Hys. of the Anglo-Sazon Ch., 1851, is printed from an 11th cent. Ms. at Durham (B. iii. 32, f. 40b); and in a Ms. of the 11th cent. at Corpus Christi Coll., Cambridge (391, p. 274), and the Bern Es. 455 of the 10th cent. It is in two Mss. of the 11th cent. at St. Gall, Nos. 387 and 413. Also in the Mozarabic, Roman, Sarum, York, Aberdeen, and other Breviaries, the Barum use being for one virgin and martyr at 1st Vespers and at Matins. Daniel, i. No. 238, gives the original, and the form in the Roman Breviary, 1632, citing it at iv. pp. 140, 368, as in a 9th cent. Ms. at Bern, a 10th cent. Rheinau ms., &c. Vischer, Christoph, a. of Jakob Vischer or Fischer, burgess at Joachimsthal, in Bohemia, was b. at Josephinsthal in 1520. He matriculated at the University of Wittenberg in Nov. 1540 (m.s. 1544), and was ordained at Wittenberg on Feb. 10, 1544, as pastor and probat at Jüterbegk, near Wittenberg. He was then appointed (in 1552) cathedral prescher and superintendent at Schmsi-kalden; in 1571 pastor and general super-intendent at Meiningen; in 1574 court preacher and assistant superintendent at Celle (Zelle); and in 1577 chief pastor of St. Martin's Church at Halberstadt. He returned to Cells in 1583, as general superintendent of Lüneburg, and d. at Celle in October, 1597 (Koch, ii., 265; Wetzel, i. p. 235, and A. H., i., pt. v. p. 38; Rotermund's Gelebrite Hannover, vol. ii., 1823, p. 40; J. K. F. Schlegol's Kirchen- and Reformations-Geschichte Hannover, vol. ii., 1829, pp. 399-402; MS. from Dr. Ebeling, Celle, &c.)

Vischer was a somewhat voluminous writer. Rotermund gives the titles of 29 works by him. Only one hymn is known as his, viz. :-

The only portion we have been able to find in any work of Vischer's is st. ii. This occurs in his Christicke sund singlitige Britisrung der gnadensrichen Historien des Leydens und Sterbens hochtröstlicher Aufferstehung sind singricher Historien des Leydens und Sterbens hochtröstlicher Aufferstehung sind singricher Historiening des Heispen Gristes, &c., Schmalkalden, 1585 (Brit. Mus.), and is given there in Sermo x. of those on the Resurrection (Auferstehung) as fallows: as fallows :-

"Solche Seufftner erwecket der beilige Geist, utönet in une das wir beten.

"Ach Herr Christe, war Menach und Gott, Durch dein beilig Fünff Wanden rot, Erice mich von dem ewigen Tod, Und troot mich in meiner letzten Not."

The same stanza is found in the ed. Schmalkalden, 1888 [Berlin Library]. The sermons on the Auferstehung seem to have appeared at Frankfurt am Main in 1884 (preface 1882, title 1863, colophon 1862. So the copy in the Vatican Library at Roine). Witterli, No. 344, prints the four stanza form from the text given by J. C. Clearius, Jens, 1710, as a reprint of the original, and as entisled "A children's hymn composed by M. Christoph Vischer for the Christian community at Schmalkaldan upon the strengthening uses of the bitter sufferings and death of Christ Jenus our Saviour." It is also in the Eure. E. S., 1861, No. 122. The trs. are:

1. We bless Thee, Jesus Christ our Lard; For ever he Thy name sakered. This is a good and full tr. by Kennedy, as No. 522 in the Myam. Christ., 1863.

5. With chanks we glory in Thy Crass. This is No. 331 in pt. i. of the Moravian H. Ek., 1784. [J. M.]

Vital Spark of heavenly flame. A. Pope. [The Soul Immortal.] In the Spectator for Nov. 10, 1712, Steele gives a letter sent to him by Pope on the words spoken by Hadrian on his death-bed. This letter, in The Works of Alexander Pope, Esq. . . . Printed verbatim from the Octavo edition of Mr. Warburton. London, C. Bathurst, 1788. Vol. v.. p. 185, is dated Nov. 7, 1712, and begins:-

"I was the other day in company with five or six men of some learning; where chancing to mention the famous verses which the Emperor Adrian spoke on his death-led, they were all agreed that 'twas a piece of galety unworthy of that prince in those circumstances. I could not but differ from this opinion; methinks it was by no means gay, but a very serious soliloquy to his soul at the point of his departure; in which sense I naturally took the verses at my first reading them, when I was very young, and before I knew what interpretation the world generally put upon them.

"I animally agains," blanduls.

Animula vaguia, blandula, Hospes comesque corporis, Que nunc ablbis in loca? Pallidula, rigida, nudula, Nec (ut soles) dabis joca?"

The letter then proceeds with a prose translation of these lines, and a vindication of the same. At the foot of the letter, and after his signature. Pope added the following metrical rendering :-

" Appraxi morientis ad Aximax TRANSLATED.

"Ab fleeting Spirit! wand ring fire, That long hast warm'd my tender breast, Must thou no more this frame !nspire? No more a pleasing cheerful great? "Whither, ah whither art thou flying? To what dark, undiscover'd shore? Thou seem'st all trembling, shiv'ring, dying, And Wit and Humour are no more."

In the Spectator, Nov. 10, 1712, Steele gives this letter verbatim, with the exception of the metrical version at the end. On Nov. 29, 1712, Pope wrote to Steele expressing regret that as this letter was given in his name be bad not an opportunity of setting forth his ideas more fully and accurately. This letter did not appear in the Spectator. On Dec. 4, 1712. Steele wrote to Pope :-

"This is to desire of you that you would please to make an ode as of a cherriul dying spirit, that is to say, the Emperor Adriau's 'Anlanula vagula' put into two or three stantas for music. If you comply with this, and send ma word so, you will very particularly oblige. Yours, &c." (Works, v. p. 188.)

two after the receipt of Steele's communica-

"I do not send you word I will do, but have already done the thing you desire of me. You have it (as Cowley calls it) just warm from the brain. It came to me the first moment I waked this morning; yet, you'll see, it was not so absolutely inspiration, but that I had in my head not only the verses of Adrian, but the fine fragment of Sappho, &c.

" The dying Christian to blu Sout.

"Vital apark of heavily flame!
Quit, oh quit this mortal frame:
Trembling, hoping, lingving, flying,
Oh the pain, the bliss of dying!
Cease, fond nature, cease thy strife,
And let me languish into life.

Hark! they whisper; angels say, Sister spirit, come away! What is this absorbs me quite, Steals my senses, shuts my sight, Drowns my spirits, draws my breath? Tell me, my soul, can this be death?

ш. " The world recedes; it disappears! Heav'n opens on my eyest my ears
With sounds scrapble ring:
Leed, lend your wings! I mount! I fly!
O Grave! where is thy victory!
O Death! where is thy uting?"
(Works, v. p. 190.)

What Steele did with this ode we cannot say. It was certainly not inserted in the Speciator, as is generally supposed. It was included in various editions of Pope's Works, and was taken from thence for use in the hymnals. Collyer included it in his Coll., 1812, No. 627, and since then it has been repeated in numerous hymn-books. In the Cong. H. Bk., 1886, J. Conder gave Pope's original text as No. 612, and a rewritten form of the same, beginning with the same first line, as No. 613. This rewritten form was repeated in his Choir and Oratory, 1837, p. 246, and in his posthumous Hymne of Praise, Prayer, &c., 1856, p. 169.

The "fine fragment of Sappho" referred to in Pope's letter, formed the subject of Addison's article in the Speciator of Thursday, Nov. 22, 1711. Addison gives in his article a translation in Latin by Cutallus, another in French by Bolleau, and a third in English by Ambrose Phillips. It was doubtless to the original, and to these translations that Pope referred in his letter to Steele quoted above. As pointed out by R. Carruthers in his edition of Pope's Poetical Works, 1853, vol. ii., p. 178; and by Miller in his Singers and Songs of the Church, 1869, p. 149, Thomas Flatman's translation of the "Animula vagula, blandula," may have influenced Pope in his "Vital spark," but we are inclined to think that Addison's article in the Spectator, already referred to, had very much more to do with it than anything that Flatman had done.

Vokes, Mrs. A long correspondence has failed to elicit any information concerning this hymn-writer beyond the facts that the earliest work in which her hymne are found is a Sci. of Missionary and Derotional Hys., edited by the Rev. J. Griffin, a Congregational minister at Portsea, and pub. in 1797, Several of these were repeated in J. Dobell's letter, which is undated in his Works, vol. v. p. New Sel. of Seven Hundred Evangelical Hys., 190, but was probably sent within a post or de., 1806. There are also 7 of her hymns, all with the signature "Mrs. Vokes," in W. B. ! Collyer's Coll., 1812. Of her hymns the following, all pub. in 1797, are still in C. U. :-

2. Rehold the expected time draws near. Missions.
2. Behold the heathen waits to know. Missions.
This begins with st. ili. of No. 1.
3. Frond Babylon yet waits her doom. Pall of abylon predicted.

4. Ye messengers of Christ. Missions. [J. J.]

Vom Himmel hoch da komm ich her. M. Luther. [Christmas.] This beautiful Christmas hymn first appeared in the Geistliche Lieder, Wittenberg, 1835, in 15 st. of 41; and thence in Wackersagel, iii. p. 23. Also in Schircke's ed. of Luther's Geistliche Lieder, 1854, p. 12, in the Unv. L.S., 1851, No. 55, &c. In Klug's G. B., 1543, it is entitled " A Children's Hymn for Christmas Eve on the child Jesus, taken from the Second Chapter of the Gospel of St. Luke." It has cometimes been said to be derived, at least in part, from the Latin. To the "Parvulus nobis rescitur" its resemblance is very slight; and this Latin hymn has not been traced earlier than the 1579 ed. of Lucas Lossius's Psalmodia (1st ed. 1553). To the "Nuntium vobis fero de super-Brit. Mus. Ms. of the 12th cent., Hart. 2928 f. 114], it has no relationship whatever, Of the origin of the German hymn, Laux-mann, in Koch, viii. 21, thus speaks :--

"Lather was accusioned every year to prepare for his family a happy Christmes Evers entertsiquent... and for this feetival of his children he wrote this Christmas hymn. Its opening lines are modelled on a song. Aus frameta Landan komm leh her;" and throughout he sneatfully catches the ting of the popular sacred song. It is said that Lather celebrated the feetival in his own homes in this criental fashion. By his orders the first bouse in this original fashion. By his orders the first seven verses of this hymn were song by a man dressed as an anged, when the children greeted with the eighth and following verses."

We may said that Lather took the first stanza almost entirely from the song, which begins:

"Ich komm ans fremden Landen her,

Und bring enot vial der neuen Mähr,
Der neuen Mähr bring leh so viel, Mehr dann ich euch bler segen will."
From the rest of the song Luther did not borrow anything.

In King's G. B., 1535, it is set to the melody of "Aus fremden Landen," or rather, as F. M. Böhme, in his Altdeutsches Liederbuch, 1871, No. 271, gives it "Ich komm aus fremden Landen her." In the Gestliche Lieder, Leipzig, V. Schumann, 1539, this was superseded by the beautiful melody still in use, which is sometimes ascribed to Luther, and is set to this bymn in the C. B. for England, 1863 (set also to No. 57 in H. A. & M., 1875). Tr. as:—

1. From highest heaven good news I bring. By A. T. Russell, as No. 17 in the Delaton Hospital H. Bk., 1848. There st. i. is condensed from i., ii.; and st. ii.-v. are from iii., iv., viii., xv. In his own Ps. & Hys., 1851, No. 43, Mr. Russell omitted the tr. of st. zv. and added a tr. of st. vii.

2. From yonder world I come to sarth. In full, by Dr. J. Hunt in his Spir. Songs of Martin Lather, 1853, p. 30. From this st. vi.-ik., xiii., xiv., beginning "Oh! let us all be glad to-day," were included in the Manchester S. S. H. Bk., in full in the Ohlo Luth. Hyl., 1880. Varying centos, beginning with st. vii., " Give heed, my heart, lift up thine eyes," are in Bp. Bicker-steth's Ps. & Hys., 1858, and his Hyl. Comp., 1876, in the Church S. S. H. Bk., 1879, and others.

4. Good news from heaven the angels wring. This is No. 131 in the Pennsylvania Luth. Church Bi., 1868, in 7 st. (answering to st. i., ili., iv., viii., z., ziii., zv.), of which st. i.-iv., vii. are altered from A. T. Russell, and v., vi. from Miss Winkworth. Repeated in Schaff's Christin Song, 1869, p. 54. St. i.-lii., r., vl., of this form are in the Hys. and Songs of Praise, N. Y., 1874, and the Church Praise Bk., N. Y., 1882.

Vom Himmel kam der Engel Schaar. M. Luther. [Christman.] This is founded on St. Luke ii. 10, 11, and St. Matt. ii. 6; and was apparently written in 1543, and meant for use when his other Christmas hymn ("You Himmel boch") was thought to be too long. It was let pub, in the Geistliche Lieder, Wittenberg, 1543, in 6 st. of 4 l., and thence in Wackernagel, iii. p. 26. Also in Schirck's ed. of Luther's Geistliche Lieder, 1854, p. 15, and in the Unv. Vom Himmel kommt der starke Held. [Christmas.] This bynn appears in the News Hildburghdusisches G. B., 1807 (ed. 1808, No. 170), in 10 st. of 4 l. The two opening lines, but not much more, are taken from a hymn by Dr. Johann Christoph Stockhausen [b. October 20, 1725, at Gladenbach, Hesse; became in 1769 Lutheran superintendent at Hanau; d. at Hanan, Sept. 4, 1784), found in the Neue Hanau Münzerbergsche G. B., 1779, and included in the Württemberg G. B., 1791, in 6 st. The rest is a paraphrase, apparently by J. C. Wagner (q.v.), of the same passage of Holy Scripture as that used by Luther in his "Vom Himmel kam der Engel Schaar," but it has very little resemblance to Luther. The trs. from the text of Bunsen's Versuch, 1833, No. 118, in 9 st., are: --(1) "The mighty Saviour comes from heaven." By Miss Cox. 1841, p. 13. (2) "From Heaven comes the mighty Lord." By Lady E. The text is given in J. Chandler's Hys. of the Primitive Church, 1887, No. 58; Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1833 and 1865; and in L. C. Biggs's annotated ed. of H. A. & M., 1867. Tr. as:—

- O ye who followed Christ in love. By J. Chaudler, in his Hys. of the Prim. Church, 1837, p. 64, and his Hys. of the Church, 1841, No. 35. In 1852 it was given in an altered form (but opening with Chandler's first line) in Murray's Hymnal, No. 32. Micray's alterations were repeated in great part in the trial copy of H. A. & M., 1859, and in the 1st ed., 1861, where the tr. began :-
- How blest were they who walked in love. In this rendering additional changes were made by the Compilers of H. A. & M., thus rendering it a cento by Chandler, Murray, and the Compilers of H. A. & M. This was repeated in a few collections, but omitted from the 1875 ed. of H. A. & M. In Mercer's Ch. Psalter & H. Bh., Orford ed., 1864, No. 430, the opening line is "O ye who follow Christ in love," but the hymn as a whole is from Murray and H. A. & M. The Hymnary, 1872, is the H. A. & M. text with additional alterations.
- 3. Ye patriarche all, and anoient sires. This, in Kennedy, 1863, No. 434, is a cente of which st. ii. ll. 1-4 are from Chandler; et. v., vi. from Murray's Hgl., 1852, the dozology from Bp. Ken, and the rest by the editor, partly from J. A. Johnston's English Hyl., 1856.

2. Ye virgin choirs rejoice. By J. D. Chembers, in his Landa Syon, Pt. ii., 1866, p. 43, and with alterations in the Hymner, 1882.

3. Chant your hymns, ye choice of Virgins. By T. I. Ball, in the 1873 Appx. to the H. Noted.

4. Ye Virgin choirs, with harps of gold. By R. F. Littledule, in the S. Margaret's Hymnal (Kast Grinstead), 1875.

Vox clara ecce intonat. [Advent.] This hymn has been ascribed to St. Ambrose, but is not assigned to him by the Benedictine editors. It is certainly ancient, possibly even of the 5th cent. It is suggested by Rom. xiii. 11 (the Epistle for the 1st S. in Advent), and St. Luke xxi. 25 (the Gospel for the 2nd S. in Advent in Anglican use, for the lst S, in modern Roman use). It is an excellent summary of the leading ideas of Advent, and well fitted for use throughout the season. Daniel, i. No. 73, gives the ancient text, in 4 st. of 4 l. (together with the recast of the Roman Breviary of 1632, which begins En clare vox redarguit), and at iv. p. 143 cites it as in a Rheinau us. of the 11th cent. It is also in G. M. Dreves's Hymn. Moissiacensis, 1888, from a 10th cent. Ms. In the use of Sarum it was assigned to Lauds on the 1st S. in Advent, and daily up to Christmas Eve. Also in the York, Aberdeen, ancient Roman (Venice, 1478), and other Breviaries. In the Mozarabic Breviary of 1502 it is the hymn at Vespers on Wednesday and Friday in the first and third weeks in Advent (see Migne's PP. Lat., lxxxvi. cols. [W. A. S.] 65, 85, 888).

It is found in five Mrs. of the 11th cent. in the British Ruseum, viz. three of the Ancient English Church (Vesp. D. xii. £ 28 5; Jul. A. vi. f. 32; Harl. 2861, f. 2250); and two of the ancient Spanish Church (Add. 30,836, 6.6); Add. 30,837, f. 315). Also in an 11th cent. Mrs. & Corpus Christi, Camiri 189 (391, page 233); in the St. Gall Mrs., No. 413, of the 11th cent. Mrs. in the Lating Hys. of the Anglo-Saxon Ch. (Surveys Society), 1831, p. 37, it is printed from an 11th cent. Mrs. at Durham (B. iii. 32, f. 11). The ancient text is also in Wackernagel i., No. 56; Hymn. Sarith, 1851, p. 6; and Bützler, No. 33; the text of the Roman Barriary of 1832 in Carl. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865, and Biggs's annotated ed. of H. A. & H., 1887. [J. M.] It is found in five was, of the 11th cent, in the British

VOX sonors nostri chori. Adam of St. Victor ? [St. Catherine.] A graceful sequence relating the history of St. Catherine of Alexandria, to be used on her festival, Nov. 25. Gautier, in his 1858 ed. of Adam's Ocuores Politiques, vol. ii., p. 320, gives it among the genuine proses of Adam, but in his ed. 1881, p. 245, he ranks it as doubtful for rhythmical reasons, and so does not print the text, but cites it as in a Gradual of St. Victor before 1239 (Bibl. Nat., Paris, No. 14452), a Paris Gradual of the 13th cent. (B. N. No. 15615), and other sources. Among Missals it found in an early 14th cent. Paris in the British Museum (Add. 16905, f. 309), the Saintes 1491; the Sens 1529, and others. The printed text is also in Neale's Sequentiae, 1852, p. 205; Daniel, v. p. 324; Kehrein, No. 812; and D. S. Wrangham's Liturgical Pactry of Adam of St. Viotor, 1881. Tr. as:—

 Let our shoir with value senorsus. By R. F. Littledale, in the Church Times, Nov. 19, 1864, in 12 st., and again in an altered form in the People's H., 1867, No. 304.

Wackernagel, Carl Eduard Philipp, n.p., was b. at Berlin, June 28, 1800. He studied and graduated Ph. D. at the University of Berlin. In 1829 he became a master in the technical school (Gewerbeschule) at Berlin, and in 1839 master in a private school at Stetten in Württemberg. He was then (1845) appointed professor in the Realgymnasium at Wiesbeden, and in 1849 director of the Realschule at Elberfold. He received the degree of n.n. from the University of Brestau in 1861, and in the same year retired to Dresden, and in the same year retired to Dresden, where he d. June 20, 1877 (Herzog's Real Encyldopädie, xvi. 583; Dr. Ludwig Schulze's Philipp Wackernagel, Leipzig, 1879, &c.).

Wackernagel was an enthusiastic and successful teacher, and the author of various works on mathematics, on orystallography, on German literature, &c. His claim to notice here is through his editions of German hymn-writers (P. Gerkardt, 1843; M. Luther, 1848; J. Herrausan, 1846): his work on Dutch Hymnody (Beifrigs var stedgeridalischen Hymnody (Beifrigs var Geschichte der deutschen Krichenieds in XVI. Johrhundert, Frankfurt am Main, 1855, in which the original works were described. The permanent edition appeared in 5 volu, at Leipzig, 1844–77, as Das deutsche Hirstenied von der ditesten Zeit bis sa Anfang des XVII. Johrhunderts, the preface to the last volume being all that be did not live to complete. Volume i. contains 656 Latin hymno, and a Supplement to the Bibliographic of 1856; ii. (1867) has 1448 places, which are (14 ascepted) by German writers prior to the Reformation; iii. (1870) has 1487 places of the Reformation period; iv. (1614) has 1587 places, all (2 excepted) by German writers from 1534 to 1863. This work is a mouument of care and research, and le indispensable to the student of early German hymnody. The present writer has gladly availed himself of it, and it is only in a very few cases that he has been able to supplement or correct its results.

Wackernaget had a share in editing the Elberfeld G. B. of 1857. He was also one of the original commission appointed to prepare the so-called Eisenach Conference G. B. (see Koch, vii. 112. It was meant to be a general hymn-book for use by the Lutherans over all Germany), but disagreeing with the critical canons of his colleagues, soon left. He afterwards pub. a small collection of standard German hymns, ontitled Kleines Gesangbuch geistlicher Lieder für Kirche, Schule und Haus, Stuttgart, 1860, the greatest merit of which was the beauty of its type. [J. M.]

Wake the song, O Zion's daughter. [Palm Sunday.] This hymn appeared in E. W. Eddis's Irvingtte Hymns for the Use of the Churches, in 1864, and is therein accredited to "J. E. L.," i.e. Jane E. Lesson. It is however a curious cento and is thus composed:—

St. I. Original, by Miss Leeson, based on Dr. Neale's ir. of "Gloria, laus, et honor," in the Hymnal Noted.

St. it. Composed of st. iv. v. of the same tr. by Dr. Neale, with two or three verbal alterations.

Neale, with two or three verbal alterations. St. III. II. 1-4. Altered from a doxology in the Countess of Huntingdon's Coll., 1766, No. 294; Il. 5, 6 from Dr. Neale, as above; and Il. 7-2 added by Miss Leeson.

This cento is of more than usual excellence, and might be used with advantage. [J. J.]

Walker, George, F.n.s., b. 1735, at New-castle-on-Tyne, educated by his uncle, Thomas Walker, dissenting minister at Durham, whom, after further study at Dr. Rotherham's scademy at Kendal, and at Edinburgh and Glasgow, he succeeded in the pulpit there. From Durham Walker removed to Great Yarmouth, and thence in 1772 to the Warrington Academy. While there he pub. The Doctrine of the Sphere. This and his Treatise on Conic Sections are the chief of his mathematical works. From 1774 to 1798 he was minister at the High Psyement Chapel, Nottingham, and took a prominent part in the public life of the town. His sermons on political events of the time attracted widespread attention, as did his tract The Dissenters' Plea; or, an appeal of the Dissenders to the Justice, Honour, and Religion of the Kingdom against the Test Laws. This and other essays on religious and philosophical questions were republished after his death in two volumes of Essays on Various Subjects, with a Memoir, 1809. Four volumes of Sermons on Various Subjects were also published (1808), the first two volumes having first appeared in 1790, during his Nottingham ministry. In 1798 he removed to Manchester, as Professor of Theology in the recently founded Manchester Academy and also became president of the Philosophical and Literary Society. His health giving way he spent the last months of his life in the neighbourhood of Liverpool, and d. in 1807, while on a visit to London. He was buried in Bunhili-fields. For his Nottingham congregation Walker pub.

A Collection of Prolunt and Hymns for Public Worship, unmixed with the disputed destrines of any sect. Warrington, Printed by W. Eyres, for the Editor. 1789.

This is one of the chief of the collections made for congregations of Presbyterians in the period of their transition towards Unitarianism. Of the 387 pealms and hymns 141 ( are taken from Watts, and of the rest the names of 24 authors are given, including T. Scott, Barbauld and Kippis. Walker himself, holding a "tempered Arianism," freely altered the hymns adopted, both for doctrinal reasons, and "to improve the style" of the compositions. He also contributed hymns of his own. Of these the best known are :-

1. Enough of life's vain scope I've trod.

2. Though many faults do me reprove.

Part of "How foolish to oppose to God,"

2. The earth proclaims its Lord. [V. D. D.]

Walker, George, D.D., a of Arthur Walker, a farmer at Hillton of Pitbladde, near Cupar, Fife, was b. at Hillton, Jan. 6, 1783. He studied at the Universities of St. Andrews and Edinburgh; and after being licensed by the Presbytery of Cupar, in 1806, was ap-pointed in 1813 parish minister of Kinnell, near Arbroath. In 1867 he received the degree of D.D. from the University of Edinburgh. He d. at Kinnell on Sept. 11, 1868. He was a scholarly and devout man, with great taste and modest and retiring manners. He pub. :--

(1) Hymns translated or imitated from the German: (1) Hyann intentiales or instance from the Cerman:
Lond., Partidge & Co., 1880. This contains 89 hynns from the German, with a tr. of the "Dies Irae," in all 90.
Many are given in abridged form, and Dr. Walker did not bind himself to reproduce the metre, or even uniformly the ideas, of his originals. By the kindness of his representatives his use copy has been used to identify his tra., most of which are indexed throughout this Dicktowers, though more are in C. M. (2) Preserve and his tre., near of which are indexed throughout this Dictionary, though none are in G. U. (2) Prayers and Hymne: Edin., W. P. Nimmo, 1866. Besides 73 Prayers, &c., this contains $2 original hymne and 14 versions of the "Gloris Patri." A number of the prayers and 42 of the hymne had appeared in his Prayers and Hymne for the Mornings and Evenings of a Week, 1862. [J. M.]

Walker, John, a.p., s. of Matthias Walker, was b. at Silvermines, county Tip-perary, in 1769, and educated at Trinity College, Dublin. He graduated in 1790, and was elected a Fellow on taking Holy Orders in 1791. Seceding from the Church of Eng-land he resigned his Fellowship in 1804, and founded the sect called "Walkeritee." He d. Oct. 23, 1883. He was the author of several mathematical, classical, and other works. His Essays and Correspondence were pub. in 1838. Of two hymns written by him for the opening of the Bethesda Chapel, Dorset Street, Dublin, on June 22, 1794, and which appeared in the Sel, of Hys. for use there, 1814, one, "Thou God of Power and God of Love" (Opening of a Place of Worship), has passed into several collections, including the Irish Church Hyl., 1873; the American Meth. Episco. Hymnal, 1878, and others. [G. A. C.]

Walker, Mary Jane, nee Deck, daughter of Mr. John Deck, and sister of J. G. Deck (p. 185, il.), was married in 1848 to Dr. Walker, for sometime Rector of Cheltenham, and editor of Ps. & Hys. for Public and Social Worship, 1855. Several of her hymns appeared as leaflets; others in her husband's Ps. & Hys., 1855. In that Coll. 9 bear her signature "M. J. W." These are :—

- 1. He came, Whose embassy was peace. Parsiontide.
  2. I journey through a desert drear and wild. The Journey of Life.
  3. Jesus, I will trust Thee, trust Thee with my sonl.
- Trust in Jesus. 4. Lord, Thou didst love Jerusalem. Mission to the
- 5. O God, our Saviour, from Thy birth. Passiontide.

- 6. O joyful tidings let us sing. Sunday School Anni-
- revsary.

  7. O spotless Lamb of God, in Thee. Passiontide.

  8. The wanderer no more will roam. Reconciliation with God.

  1. The Holy Spirit ar
- the Divine Guide.

Of these hymns Nos. 3 and 5 appeared in the 1864 Appendix to Dr. Walker's Coll., and Nos. 2 and 8 are the most popular. [J. J.]

Wallace, James Cowden, was b. at Dudley, circa 1793. He was brother of the Rev. Robert Wallace (1791-1880), Professor of Theology in Manchester New College, and author of Antitrinitarian Biography. J. C. Wallace was Unitarian minister at Totnes, 1824, and afterwards at Brighton and Wareham. He d. at Wareham in 1841. He was a prolific hymn-writer, and contributed various other poetical pieces to the Mouthly Reportery. In a Sci. of Hys. for Unitarian Worship, by R. Walloce, Chesterfield, 1822, there are 13 of his hymns, and in the 2nd ed. of the same, 1826, there are 29 more. There are also 10 of his hymns in the Dukintield Sel. of Ps. & Hys. for Christian Worship, 1822 (still in use), and 64 in Beard's Coll. of Hys., 1837. Of these hymns the following are still in C. U.:—

1. Is there no balm to soften grief? The Efficacy of Prayer (1837).

2. It is not rank, or power, or state. The Universality

3. There's not a place in earth's vast round. God seen in Everything. 4. Through every clime God's care extends. Divine Cure of All.

5. There is an eye that never sleeps. a. The Divine [V. D. D.] Helper in Need.

Wallin, Benjamin, a of Edward Wallin, paster of the Baptist Church, Maze Pond, Southwark, was b in London in 1711. He received a good education under the care of the Rev. John Needham, of Hitchin (father of the hymn-writer of that name), and was for a time engaged in business. But in 1740 he responded to an earnest request to become pastor of the church over which his father had presided, and this position he retained until his death on Feb. 19, 1782. Mr. B. Wallin published nearly forty sermons, charges, and other small religious books and pamphlets. In 1750 he pub. a volume entitled, Rosspecial Hymns and Songs, in Two Parts: Published for the Charlott and Entertainment of true Christians; with authorities at large from the Scripture. The hymns in this vol. are 100 in number, and the tents of scripture illustrated in each stanza are quoted in full in the lower part of the page. The versification is homely and the rhymns are often faulty.

Two hymns from the work are in C. U. :-1. Hall, mighty Jesus [Saviour] how divine. Divine

2. When I the holy grave survey. Faster.

These, with others, appeared in A. M. Top-lady's Ps. & Hys., 1776. They are usually given with alterations, chiefly introduced by Toplady. [W. R. S.]

Walther, Johann, was b. in 1496 at a village near Cola (perhaps Kahla, or clso Cölleda, near Sachsenburg) in Thuringia. In 1524 we find him at Torgan, as bassist at the court of Friedrich the Wise, Elector of Saxony. The Elector Johann of Saxony made him "Sengermeister" (choirmaster) in 1526. When the Electoral orchestra (Kapelle) at Torgau was disbanded in 1530, it was reconstituted by the town, and in 1534 Walther was also appointed cantor (singing-master) to the school at Torgan. On the accession of the Elector Moritz of Saxony, in 1548, Walther went with him to Dresden as his Kapellmeister. He was pensioned by decree of Aug. 7, 1554, and soon after returned to Torgau, still retaining the title of "Senger-meister." He d. at Torgau, perhaps on March 25, or at least before April 24, 1570. (Monatshefte für Musikgeschichte, 1871, p. 8, and 1878, p. 85; Archie für Litteraturgeschichte, vol. xii., 1884, p. 185; Dr. Otto Taubort's Pflege der Musik in Torgan, 1868, and his Gymnasial Singe-Chor zu Torgan, n.D., 1870, &c.)

Walther was more distinguished as a musician than as a hymn-writer. In 1524 he spent three weeks in Luther's house at Wittenberg, helping to adapt the old Luther's house at Wittenberg, helping to adapt the old church music to the Lutheran services, and harmonising the tunes in five parts for the Geyetticks geanagk Buchleyn, pub, at Wittenberg in 1524 (p. 703, ii.). He was also present in the Stadtkirche at Wittenberg, when, on Oct. 29, 1525, the service for the Holy Communion, as rearranged by Luther and himself, was first used in terman. His hymne appeared mostly in his Das christlien Kinderlied. B. Martini Lutheri, Erhalt und Herr. Ro. Auffs new in sechs Stimmen gesetst, und mit etichen tehünen Christlichen Texten, Lateinischen und Testschen Gesengen genhri, &c., Wittenberg, 1866 (prafince dated Torgas; St. Michael's Day, 1665). They are collected by Wackerusgel in his B. Kirchenlied, iii. pp. 187–206 (Nos. 219–220).

No. 133 in his Ps. & Hys., 1851,

- ii. Rerzlich that mich erfreuen. Eternal Life. 1st pub. separately, in 33 st., at Wittenberg, in 1552, entitled "A beautiful spiritual and Christian new miner's song, of the Last Day and Eternal Life" [Königsberg Library]. Thence in Wuckernagel, iii. p. 187, in 34 st., st. 33 being added from the Dresden reprint of 1557. It is set to the melody of a popular song on the Joys of Summer. It is a fresh and beautiful hymn, but is only partially available on account of its length. Wackernagel, in his Kleines G. B., 1860, selects 21 st. as No. 219. The most popular form is that in the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 1530, beginning "Der Bräutgam wird bald rufen." This form has in order st. 31, 8, 9, 16, 18, 17, 13, and appeared in Melchior Franck's Rosetulum musicum, 1628; in Freylinghausen's G. B., 1705, No. 749, &c. Tr. as:—
- 1. Now fain my joyous heart would sing. is a tr. of st. 1, 4, 5, 17, 33, 34, by Miss Winkworth, in her Lyra Ger., 2nd Ser., 1858, p. 228. Her trs. of st. 1, 4, 5, were included in the Eng.
- Presb. Ps. 6 Hys., 1867, No. 325.

  2. Soon will the heavenly Bridegroom come. This is by Dr. Kennedy, in his Hymn. Christ., 1863, No. 1009, and follows the text of the G. L. S., omitting st. 16, 18, 13. It is repeated in the Landes Domini, N. Y., 1884, &c.

3. The Bridegroom soan will call us. By Dr. M. Loy, from the G. L. S. text, but omitting st. 18, 13, as No. 24 in the Ohio Luth. Hyl., 1880.

Another tr. from the G. L. S. text, is "Soon shall that voice resound," by Miss Fry in her Hus. of the Reformation, 1845, p. 36. Her second part, altered and beginning, "Rejoice, the Lord doth guide us," is in J. Whittemore's Suppl. to all H. Bks., 1860. [J. M.]

Wär Gott nicht mit uns diese Zeit-M. Luther. [Ps. ozziv.] This version of Ps. exxiv. was 1st pub. in the Geystliche gesangk Buchleyn, Wittenberg, 1524, in 3 st. of 7 l., and thence in Wackernagel, iii. p. 17. Also in Schircks's ed. of Luther's Geistliche Lieder, 1854, p. 79, in the Unv. L. S., 1851, No.250, &c.

Lauxmann, in Rock, viii. 115, relates that the Elector Johann Friedrich of Saxony, having been comforted by the Superintendent Aquila with this bymn during his capituity after the battle of Mühlberg, 1547, on his release on May 12, 1552, sang the whole of it with grateful heart, as a thankoffering to God,

The tr. in C. U. is:-Had God not come, may larnel say. In full by R. Massle, in his Martin Luther's Spir. Songs, 1854, p. 35. Repeated in Reid's Praise Bk., 1872, the Ohio Luth, Hyl., 1880, and by Dr. Bacon, in his Hys. of Martin Luther, 1884, p. 49.

Wardlaw, Ralph, p.p. This venerable and (in his generation) influential Scotlish divine contributed twelve hymns to the praise of the Church Universal that are likely to live in a humble and useful way. As having so done, and besides edited several collections of hymns, he claims a place of honour in this work. Critically, and regarded as literature, his hymns have little of poetry in them; no "winged words" to lift the soul heavenward. They reflect simply and plainly the lights and shadows of every-day experiences of the spiritual life, rather than its etherialities and subtleties. His "Lift up to God the voice of praise" is the most widely known; and there is a certain inspiriting clangour about it when well song; yet it is commonplace. His "Hail morning, known among the blest," is narrative and presaic, though it filled a gap at the time in Sabbath morning worship. " At the time by God, appointed," "Remember Thee! remember Christ! " and " Contemplate, saints, the source divine," have vanishing gleams of imaginative light and fine and tender emotion. "O how good the hallowed union," "Where the counds of plaintive wailing," and "See the Sun of truth arise," are melodious and singable, and pleasant but shallow. "Christ of all my hopes the ground," (Pt. ii.) "When with westing sickness worn," is much too long, but is a fairly good song of Zion. Wardlaw pub. in 1803 a Selection of Hymns, to displace what was called The Tabernacle Coll., 1800, that had been used by the Congregationalists of Scotland [see Scottish Hymnody], and to which be contributed a few hymns. He was assisted in the preparation of this compilation by Dr. Charles Stuart, of Duncarn. The 1st ed. contained 322 hymns, In 1817 a Supplement was added of 171, bringing up the number to 493. Of these eleven (or twelve strictly) were by Wardlaw. Two of these had previously appeared in the Scottish Missionary Magazine (vol. viii. 48). His hymns bear so very slight a proportion to Dr. Wardlaw's writings as a profound theologien and expositor and thoroughly-equipped controversialist on the chief problems of the period, as to make it necessary to refer the reader to his remarkable Life, by the Rev. Dr. W. L. Alexander, entitled, Memoirs of the Life and Writings of Ralph Wardlaw, D.D. (2nd ed., 1856). Wardlaw was b. at Dalkeith on December 22, 1779, where he received his early education, later attending Glasgow University. His only church was in Glasgow. He d. at Easterhouse near Glasgow on Dec. 17, 1853, and his public funeral is still remembered for the representative character of the vast multitude who attended it. [A. B. G.]

Of Dr. Wardlaw's hymns the following are etll! in C. U.:-

Glad when they saw the Lord. Easter.
 Hall, morning known amongst the blest [saints].

Sunday Morning.

3. Lift up to God the voice of praise. Praise to the Failer.

5. O Lord our God, arise. Hisrions.

6. Remember Theo, remember Christ. H. Com-

6. See the Sun of Truth arise. Christ the Light.

Of these Nos. 3-5 appeared in the Tabernacle Coll. (noted above), 1800. [J. J.]

Ware, Henry, D.D., s. of Dr. H. Ware, paster of the Unitarian congregation at Hingham, Massachusetts, and afterward Hollis Professor of Divinity at Cumbridge, U.S.A., was b. at Hingham, April 21, 1794. Before going to Harvard College, in 1808, he was under the care of Dr. Allyn, at Duxbury, and then of Judge Ware, at Cambridge. He graduated at Harvard in high honours, in 1812; and was then for two years an assistant teacher in Exeter Academy. He was licensed to preach by the Boston Unitarian Association, July 81, 1815; and ordained pastor of the Second Church of that city, Jan. 1, 1817. In 1829, in consequence of his ill bealth, he received the assistance of a co-pastor in the person of Ralph Weldo Emerson. In the same year Ware was appointed Professor of Pulpit Eloquence and Pastoral Care in the Cambridge Theological School. He entered upon his duties in 1880, and resigned in 1842. He removed to Framingham, and d. there, Sept. 25, 1843. His p.p. degree was conferred upon him by Harvard College in 1834. Dr. Ware's publications as set forth in his Memoir, pub. by his brother John Ware, M.D., were numerous and on a variety of topics. He edited the Christian Disciple, which was established in 1813, and altered in title to the Christian Examiner in 1824, for some years before the change of title, and gave it his assistance subsequently. The Rev. Chandler Robbins collected his works and pub. them in four volumes, in 1847. His hymns, many of which are of more than usual excellence, are given in vol. i. Of these the following are in C. U.; in vol. 1. Of these the following are in C. U.;

1. All nature's works His praise declare. Opening of an Organ. Isted Nov. 2, 1822. It is in Horder's English Cong. Hymn. 1884.

3. Around the throne of God The host angelle throngs.

It bears date March 16, 1843. In its original form it is longer than as presented here for 3 at of 8 1.1 verse. It bears date March 16, 1843. In its original form it is longer than as presented here fin 3 et. of 8 1.], and is unsuited to a church-book. The following stanzas, taken from one of the Collections (et. 1., il. are in Long-fellow and Johnson's Rook of Hyz., 1843) are a part of the original, altered and transposed, and thus adopted to sacred worship." (Patinora, 1874, p. 113.)

12. To prayer, to prayer; for the morning breaks. Prayer. This poem of 10 et. of 6. 1. is dated 1828, and given in Lyra Soc. Americans, 1869. and Patinosa, 1874. Two cands therefrom are in C. U. The first begins with et. 1. adopting 18 for Aforsian, and the second begins with st. 1., adapting it for Morning, and the second with st. 11., "To prayer, for the glorious sun is gone," for Evening.

13. We rear not a temple, like Judah of ald. Dedication of a Place of Worthip. This is dated 1838, and is given in Putnam, 1874.

14. With praise and prayer our gifts we bring. Opening of a Place of Worthip. In Date's English Hymn Sk. 1874.

With American Unitarious Dr. Ware ranks very high, and by them his hymns are widely [F. M. B.]

Waring, Anna Leetitia, daughter of Elijah Waring, and niece of Samuel Miller Waring, was b. at Neath, Glamorganshire, in 1820. In 1850 she pub. her Hymns and Meditations, by A. L. W., a small book of 19 hymns. The 4th ed. was pub. in 1854. The 10th ed., 1863, is enlarged to 38 hymns. She also pub. Additional Hymns, 1858, and conributed some pieces to the Sunday Magazine, 1871. Her most widely known hymns are: "Father, I know that all my life," p. 487, ii.; "Go not far from me, O my Strength," p. 486, ii.; and "My heart is resting, O my God," p. 781, i. The rest in C. U. include:—

- 1. Dear Saviour of a dying world. Resurrection,
- (1856.)
  2. In heavenly love abiding. Safety in God. (1850.)
  3. Jesus, Lord of heaven above. Love to Jesus desired.
- (1864.)
  4. Lord, a happy child of Thine, Eccning, (1860.)
  5. My Saviour, on the [Thy] words of truth. Hops in the Word of God. (1860.) Sometimes st. iv., "It is not as Thou will with me," is given separately. 8. O this is blessing, this is rest. Rest in the Love of fests. (1854.)

7. O Thou Lord of beaven above. The Resurrection.
8. Source of my life's refreshing springs. Rest in

God. (1850.)

9. Sunlight of the beavenly day. New Year (1854.)

10. Sweet in the solace of Thy love. Safety and Comfort in God. (1850.)

11. Tender mercles on my way. Praise of Divine

Mercies. (1850.)

12. Thanksgiving and the voice of melody. New Year (1854).

13. Though some good things of lower worth. Lots of God in Christ. (1860.)

These hymns are marked by great simplicity, concentration of thought, and elegance of diction. They are popular, and deserve to be so.

Waring, Samuel Miller, s. of Jeremiah Waring, of Alton, 'Hampshire, and uncle of Anna L. Waring, was b. at Alton, in March, 1792, and d. at Bath, Sopt. 19, 1827. His hymns appeared in his Sacred Melodies, 1826; and from that work the following, which are in C. U., were taken:—

1. Now to Him Who leved us, gave us. Praise to Jesus. Sometimes, "Unto Him Who leved us."
2. Plend Thou, O plead my cause. Jesus, the Advocate Implored.

Warner, Anus, daughter of Henry W. Warner, and sister of Sarah Warner, author of Queechy, and other novels, was be near New York eity about 1822. She is the author of the novel, Say and Seal, 1859, and others of a like kind. She also edited Hys. of the Church Militant, 1858; and pub. Wayfaring Hymns, Original and Translated, 1869. Her original hymns in C. U. include:—

1. Juans loves me, this I know. The love of Jenus. In Say and Seal, 1852.

2. O little child, lie still and sleep. A Mother's Evening Hymn. In Temple Choir. 1867.

3. One more day's work for Jesus. Evening. From Wayfaring Hymns. 1869.

4. The world looks were beautiful. 4.53-44 December 1988.

4. The world looks very beautiful. A Child Pilgrim, circa 1850.

Warren, William Fairfield, p.p., was b at Williamsburg, Massachusetts, in 1833, and graduated at the Wesleyan University in 1853. After spending some time in Germany, he was appointed Professor of Systematic Theology in the Methodist Episcopal Mission Institute at Bremen, in 1861. Returning to America in 1864, he held some important appointments there, ultimately becoming President of Boston University, in 1873. His hymn, "I worship Thee, O Hely Ghost" (Whitsustide), was contributed to the American Meth. Episco. Hymnal, at the request of the editorial committee, in 1877, and was pub. therein in 1878 (Nutter's Hymn Studies, 1884, p. 111). It has passed into other collections. [J. J.]

Warum betriibst du dich, mein Herz. [Cross and Consolation.] Wackernagel, iv. pp. 128-130, gives three forms of the text of this anonymous lyran: No. 130 as the first of Zwey schöne news geistliche Lieder, Nürnberg, N.D., c. 1560; No. 191, from an Enchiridion printed at Hamburg, 1563; No. 192, from the Padanen und Leder, Lübeck, 1567. In his Bibliographie, 1855, p. 279, he had cited it as in Neun schöne geistliche Lieder, Nürnberg, N.D., which he then dated 1556—probably too early. According to Koch, v., 653, it had already appeared as "Czemu sie trosezyse," in a Polish hymn-book ed. by Paster Schlueysu, and pub. at Königsberg in 1559.

This hymn has often been ascribed to Hans Sachs. So Ambrosius Hannemann in his Prodromus Hymnologias, Wittenberg, 1633, Second 10, No. 8, entitles it "Consolution against Tearfulness, Hans Sachs"; and in Jermiss Weber's G. H., Leipzig, 1633, p. 578, it is entitled, "On Famile. A good family hymn. Written for the use of heads of households and their families, by Hans Sachs, of Nürnberg, the well-known German poot."

The hymn has not however been traced in any of the works of Sachs, and the ascription to him seems to be without foundation.

In the 1560 Zivey schole the hymn has 12 st.; in the 1565 Enchiridion there are 14 (Nos. viii., ix. not in 1560). The 1565 is the usual text as in the Unv. L. S., 1851, No. 701; but st. v.-ix., in which the Oid Teslament examples of Elijah, Daniel, Joseph, and the Three Holy Children are cited, are omitted in some collections. It is one of the best German hymns of Cross and Consolution, and is in almost universal German use. Tr. as:—

Why art then thus east down, my heart? By Miss Winkworth, emitting st. v.-ix., in her Lyra Ger., 2nd Ser., 1858, p. 187, and repeated in her C. B. for England, 1863, No. 143.

G. B. for England, 1863, No. 143.

Other trs. are:
(1) "Why thus with grief opprest my heart," by J.
C. Jacobi, 1728, p. 14 (1732, p. 66), repeated in the Loravian H. Bis., 1754, pt. 1, Nos. 141, 317. (2) "Rejolec, my soul, God earcs for thee," by P. H. Mother, as No. 183, in the Moravian H. Bis., 1789 (1860, No. 221). (3)
"Why vex thyeelf with anxious fears," by Dr. H. Mills., 1945, p. 69. (4) "Oh! why art thou so sad, my breast," by Madame de Pootes, in her Prets and Pretsy of Germany, 1868, vol. 1, p. 376. (5) "My soul, why art thou troubled? why," by Dr. G. Walker, 1860, p. 88.
(6) "Why does thou vex thyself, my heart," by N. L.
Prothingham, 1870, p. 200. (7) "Why does thou make lament, my heart," by the Rev. Andrew Carber, in the Quiver, 1881.

Warum sollt ich mich denn grämen. P. Gerhardt. [Cross and Consolution.] Founded on Ps. lxxiii. 29. Appeared in the Crügor-Runge G. B., 1653, No. 240, in 12 st. of 3 l. Theuce in Wackernagel's ed. of his Geistliche Lieder, No. 64, and Bachmanu's ed., No. 29. In Crüger's Fraxis, 1656, No. 320, and the Une. L. S., 1851, No. 784. It is a beautiful hymn, but, like many of Gerhardt's, difficult to translate. It comforted the Salzburg emigrants on their way through Swabia in 1732; it soothed the dying bed of Friedrich Wilholm 1. of Prussia, May 31, 1740; and st. vii. was the last utterance of its author on June 7, 1676. See further, Koch, viii., 471-479. Tr. as:—

1. Why, my soul, thus trambling ever. A good tr. of st. i., iv., vii., viii., xi., xii., as No. 233 in the Anglican H. Bh., 1868, marked as tr. by the Rev. Angelo A. Benson, 1862.

2. Why should sorrow ever grieve me. In full by J. Kelly, in his P. Gerhardt's Spir. Songs, 1867, p. 214. His tre. of st. i., v., x.-xii., are repeated in the Ohio Luth. Hymnat, 1880, No. 420.

Pepented in the Onto Luta, Hymnat, 1880, No. 420.
Other tra. are: (1) "Why should I continue grieving," in the Suppl. to German Pasimody, ed. 1785, p. 59.
Previously in the Select Hys. from German Pasimody, Tranqueber, 1754, p. 01, and as No. 473 in pt. 1. of the Moravian H. Bk., 1754. In the Suppl. of 1805 to the Moravian H. Bk., of 1801, st. vil., x., are repeated altered, and beginning, "With undaunted resolution."
(2) Wherefore should I grieve and pins," by Miss Winknowlk, 1838, p. 198. (3) "Wherefore, then, should I be glosmy," by M. L. Prothingham, 1870, p. 144. [J. M.]

Was Gott thut das ist wohlgethan, So denken Gottes Kinder. B. Schmolck. [Harvest.] lat pub. in his Freuden-Oct in Trawigkeit, Breslau, 1720, No. 39, p. 98, in 6 st. of 8 l., entitled, "The contented heart in a scanty Harvest." In his Klage and Reigen, Breslau, N.D. [1734], No. 77, p. 36, he gave it in 9 st. (st. iv., v., ix., being new), and entitle to "The contented heart in a scanty harvest, 1731." The text of 1734 is No. 1203 in the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863. The German has undergone various recensions, and so e.g. Miss Cox follows that in Bunsen's Versuck, 1833; Miss Warner that in the Berlin G. B., 1829. The text followed in H. A. & M. and the Hymnary is that in Biggs's annotated H. A. & M., 1867, which is based on st. i., iii., vii., viii. of the 1734. Tr. as:-

- 1, What our Father does is well. A free fr. from Biggs's text, by Sir H. W. Baker, as No. 227 in H. A. & M., 1861, with an original develogy. This has been repeated in the Irish Church Hyl., 1873, in Porter's Coll., 1876, the S. P. C. K. Church Hys., 1871, Bapt. Hyl., 1879, &c.; and in America in the Pennsylvania Luth. Ch. Bk., 1868, Prest. Hyl., 1874, &c.
- 2. What God does is done aright. By Mrs. H. M. Chester, as No. 471 in the Hymnary, 1872, from the text of Biggs, with an original doxclogy. Repeated in the Westminster Abboy H. Bi., 1883.

Other trs. are: (1) "Whatever God does is well," by Miss Warner, 1858, p. 255, repeated in Bp. Rylo's Cott., 1866. (2) "What God hath done is done aright," by Miss Coa, 1864, p. 125. [J. M.] [J. M.]

Washburn, Edward Abiel, D.D., was b. April 16, 1819; graduated at Harvard, 1838 : studied theology at Andover and New Haven, and entered the Congregational ministry. In 1841, having been ordained in the Protestant Episcopal Church, he became Rector of St. Paul's, Newburyport, Mess., where he remained till 1851. Spending 1851-52 in Europe, on his return he became Rector of St. John's, Hartford, 1853-62, and Professor of Church Polity in Berkeley Divinity School, Middletown, Connecticut; also Rector of St. Mark's, Philadelphia, 1862-65; and Calvary, New York, 1865-81. He d. Feb. 2, 1881. His works include Social Law of God, 1874, and trs. of Latin hymns. selection from his poems was published in New York in 1881. Some of his tra are given in Schaff's Christ in Song, 1869, and other collections. For these trs. see Index of Authors [F. M. B.] and Translators.

Washburn, Henry S., was b. at Providence, Rhode Island, June 10, 1813; spent his boyhood at Kingston, Massachusetts, and was educated at Worcester and Brown University. Subsequently he was a manufacturer at Worcester and Boston. Since 1875 he has been the President of the Union Mutual Life Insurance Co. Mr. Washburn has held some prominent posts, and has been active in public matters. He has written various hymne and gongs, the best known of which is:-

Let every heart rejoice and sing. National Hymn. This "was written for a celebration in Fancusi Hall, Boston, July 4, 1842, and sung by the Sunday School Children of the city." It was set to music by Garcia, and often subsequently used at home and abroad. The author altered it for The Panimist, 1843, No. 1005; and in that form it has been generally known. [F. M. B.]

Waterbury, Jared Bell, p.p., was h in New York city, Aug. 11, 1799, and graduated at Yale College, 1822. He was for some time pastor of a Congregational church at Hudson, N. York, and then of Bowdoln Street Congregational church, Boston. He d. at Brooklyn, Dec. 31, 1876. He pub. Advice to a Young Christian; The Officer on Duty, and other works. To the Rev. J. Leavitt's Christian Lyre, vol. i., 1830, he contributed the following hymns, each of which was headed, "Written for the Lyre," and signed "J. B. W." :-

1. My Jesus, Thou hast taught. The Love of Jesus, 2. Met, O God, to ask Thy presence. Rependance.
3. O fly, mourning sinner, asith Jesus to me. Promise of Pardon.
4. See Sodom wrapt in fire. Warning.
5. Sinner, is thy heart at rest? The Voice of Con-

 Soldiers of the Cross, arise! Lo! your Leader from the skies. Soldiers of the Cross.
 When, O my Saviour, shall this heart? Desiring Jesus.

In vol. ii. of the same work, 1830, also :-

I have fought the good fight; I have finished my race. Martyr's Death Song.

Another of his hymns is given in the Songs for the Sanctuary, 1865, as:-

Infinite love, what precious stores, Richel of Divine Grace. Sometimes dated 1862.

Of these hymns, Nos. 5, 6, and 9 are the best known. [F. M. B.]

Waterston, Robert Cassle, M.A., S. of Robert Waterston, was b. at Kennebunk, in 1812, but has resided from his infancy at Boston, Massachusetts. He studied Theology at Cambridge; had for five years the charge of a Sunday school for the children of seamen; was associated for several years with the Pitts Street Unitarian Chapel, Boston; and then pastor for seven years of the Unitarian Church of the Saviour in the same city. Much of his time has been given to literature, and a long list of his papers of various kinds is given in Putnam's Singers and Songs of the Liberal Faith, 1874. He also interested himself largely in educational matters. He contributed one hymn to the American Unitarian Cheshire Pastoral Association Christian Hymns, 1844; 8 to his own popular Supplement to Greenwood's Psalms and Hymns, 1845, and others to various works. Putnam gives 20 poetical pieces in his Singers and Songs, &c., 1874, amongst which are the following, which are in C. U. at the present time :-

nre in U. U. at the present time:—

1. In darkest hours I hear a voice. Looking unto terms. Contributed to Puthan's Singers and Songs, &c., 1874, and found in a few collections.

2. In each breeze that wanders free. Nature and the Sout. Pub. before 1863, and again in Putham, 1874. The hymn "Nature, with thernal youth," in Hedge and Huntington's Hys. for the Ch. of Christ, 1863, No. 195, is composed of at. iv-vib. of this place.

2. One sweet (bright) flawer has drooped and faded. Death of a Child. Appeared in the American Untarian Cheshire Pas. Association Christian Hys. 1844, No. 663, and again in Putham, 1874, as "One bright flower, &c." It is in several collections. In the Christian Hys. the heading is "Death of a Pupil;" and Putham, "On the Death of a Child. Sung by ber classimate."

In Puthamon those are atlant misses head.

In Putnam there are other pieces by him which are worthy of attention. [F. M. B.]

Watson, George, s. of F. Watson, b. at Birmingham, 1816, and until the year 1866 was in business in London as a printer. From his office and with his co-operation originated the well-known publications, the Band of Hope Beview, in 1851; and The British Workman, 1855, which were the pioneers of cheap illustrated publications. Mr. Watson's hynn-writing has been limited. Two (see below) appeared in Paxton Hood's Our Hymn Book, 1868; the rest have been facued as fly-leaves, or are still in ms. Those in C. U. are:—

1. O the deep mystery of that love. The Love of Jesus. 1st pub. in P. Hood's Our H. Bk. 1868, No. 139, in 4 et. of 4 l.

2. With the sweet word of peace. Parting. Written in 1867 to be sung at a meeting held in Brighton to say Farcwell to the Rev. Paxton Hood on his leaving his church for a considerable time for change and rest. On his return Mr. Hood included it in his Our H. Hk. 1868, No. 572, in 6 st. of 4 l. It was given with considerable alterations in the S. P. C. K. Charch Hyz. 1871. This lett was repeated in the Scottish Examplical Union Hymnal, 1878, and Is the usually accepted form of the hymn. It has much tenderness and beauty, and is worthy of wide circulation.

Watts, Alaric Alexander, was born in London, Mar. 19, 1797, and educated at the collegiate school of Wye, Kent. After a short engagement as a private tutor, he de-voted himself to literary pursuits. He was voted himself to literary pursuits. for some time editor of the Leeds Intelligencer, and then of the Manchester Courier. Subsequently returning to London, he edited 10 vols of The Literary Souvenir, and 3 vols of The Cabinet of Modern Art. He was also engaged for some time as editor of the United Service Gazette, and contributed to the Standard, and other newspapers. In 1853 he received a royal pension of £100 a year, and an appointment in Somerset House. He d. at Kensington, April 5, 1864. His hymns appeared in his Poetical Sketches, 1822. 3rd ed. 1824. Of these, "When shall we meet again," is found in a few collections.

Watts, Isaac, D.D. The father of Dr. Watts was a respected Nonconformist, and at the birth of the child, and during its infancy, twice suffered imprisonment for his religious convictions. In his later years he kept a flourishing boarding school at Southampton. Isaac, the eldest of his nine children, was h. in that town July 17, 1674. His taste for verse showed itself in early childhood. He was taught Greek, Latin, and Hebrew by Mr. Pinhorn, rector of All Saints, and headmaster of the Grammar School, in Southampton. The splendid promise of the boy induced a physician of the town and other friends to offer him an education at one of the Universities for eventual ordination in the Church of England: but this he refused; and entered a Nonconformist Academy at Stoke Newington in 1690, under the care of Mr. Thomas Rowe, the pastor of the Independent congregation at Girdlers' Hall. Of this congregation he became a member in 1693, Leaving the Academy at the age of twenty, he spent two years at home; and it was then that the bulk of the Hymns and Spiritual Songs (pub. 1707-9) were written, and sung from MSS in the Southampton Chapel. The hymn "Behold the glories of the Lamb" is said to have been the first he composed, and written as an attempt to raise the standard of praise. In answer to requests, others succeeded. The hymn "There is a land of pure delight" is said to have been enggested by the view across Southampton Water. The next aix years of Watts's life were again spent at Stoke Newington, in the post of tutor to the son of an eminent Puritan, Sir John Hartopp; and to the intense study of these years must be traced the accumulation of the theological and philosophical materials which he published subsequently, and also the life-long enfeeblement of his constitution.

Watts preached his first sermon when he was twenty-four years old. In the next three years he preached frequently; and in 1702 was ordained paster of the aminent Independeut congregation in Mark Lane, over which Caryl and Dr. John Owen had presided, and which numbered Mrs. Bendish, Cromwell's granddaughter, Charles Fleetwood, Charles Desborough, Sir John Hartopp, Lady Haver-sham, and other distinguished Independents among its members. In this year he removed to the house of Mr. Hollis in the Minories, His bealth began to fail in the following year, and Mr. Samuel Price was appointed as his assistant in the ministry. In 1712 a fever shattered his constitution, and Mr. Price was then appointed co-paster of the congregation which had in the meantime removed to a new chapel in Bury Street. It was at this period that he became the guest of Sir Thomas Abney, under whose roof, and after his death (1722) that of his widow, he remained for the rest of his suffering life; residing for the longer portion of these thirty-six years principally at the beautiful country seat of Theobalds in Herts, and for the last thirteen years at Stoke Newington. His degree of D.D. was bestowed on him in 1728, unsolicited, by the University of Edinburgh. His infirmities increased on him up to the peaceful close of his suffer-ings, Nov. 25, 1748. He was buried in the Puritan resting-place at Bunhill Fields, but a monument was erected to him in Westminster Abbey. His learning and piety, gentleness and largeness of heart have carned him the title of the Melanchthon of his day. Among his friends, churchmen like Bishop Gibson are ranked with Nonconformists such as Doddridge. His theological as well as philosophical fame was considerable. His Speculations on the Human Nature of the Logos, as a contribution to the great controversy on the Holy Trinity, brought on him a charge of Arian opinions. His work on The Improvement of the Mind, pub. in 1741, is culogised by Johnson. His Logic was still a valued text-book at Oxford within living memory. The World to Come, pub. in 1745, was once a favourite devotional work, parts of it being translated into several languages. His Catechisms, Scrip-ture History (1732), as well as The Divine and Moral Songe (1715), were the most popular text-books for religious education fifty years ago. The Hymns and Spiritual Songs were pub. in 1707-9, though written earlier. The Horae Lyricae, which contains hymps interspersed among the poems, appeared in 1706-9. Some hymns were also appended at the close of the several Sermons preached in London, pub. in 1721-24. The Pealms were pub. in 1719. The earliest life of Watts is that by his friend Dr. Gibbons. Johnson has included him in his Lives of the Posts; and Southey has echoed Johnson's warm eulogy. most interesting modern life is Isaac Watte: kie Life and Writings, by E. Paxton Hood. (For criticism of his work as a hymn-writer, see Hymnody, Early English, § 11., and Psalters, fH. L. B.1 English, § Xv.). A large mass of Dr. Watts's hymne and

A large mass of Dr. Wetts's hymns and paraphrages of the Paslms have no personal history beyond the date of their publication. These we have grouped together here and shall preface the list with the books from which they are taken.

These 454 Hymns and Versions of the Psalms, in addition to the centes which are indicated by the sublines, are all in C. U. at the present time. The more important and best known of Dr. Watts's Hymns and versions of the Psalms have separate annotations under their respective first lines. [See Index of Authors and Translaters.

Waugh, Benjamin, was b. at Settle, in Yorkshire, Feb. 20, 1839, and educated for the Congregational Ministry at Airedale College, Bradford. He has held pastcrates at Newbury, Berkshire, Greenwich, and New Southrate. He has been for several years editor of Cradle, Who rocks it; (2) Sunday Evenings with my Children; (3) The Child of the English Sange; (5) Imperial Legislation and Street Children. Mr. Waugh's hymns have appeared from time to time in The Sunday Magazine, and have not been separately published. Those which have come into C. U. include:—

1. Jesus, the Friend of friendless men. Jesus the Sinner's Friend. 1874.

2. O happy pair of Nasareth. The Child Jesus.

3. O let me see Thy beauty, Lord. The Beauty of the Lord. This is given in a revised form as "Now let us see Thy beauty, Lord," in Horder's Cong. Hymns, 1884.

Mr. Wangh's hymns are for children's use, and are exceedingly fresh and unconventional. Several others of merit might be selected from the Sunday Magazine with advantage to children's hymnody. [W. G. H.]

We all had sinned and gone astray. G. Thring. [The Good Shepherd.] This was the author's first hymn, and was written to the tune "Cambridge New," at his mother's request, in 1861. It was pub. in Morrell & How's Ps. & Hys., 1864; and in his own Hys. Cong. and Others, 1866, p. 11, in 4 st. of 6 l., and entitled, "The Love of Christ." Also given in his Hys. & Suc. Lyrics, 1874, p. 86, and in his Coll., 1882. [J. J.]

We all, O Lord, have gone astray. [The Shepkerd and His wandering Sheep.] This is based upon J. Merrick's version of the last part (Tau) of Ps. exix., pub. in his Ps. of David, &c., 1765. It was given in Cotterill's Sel., 1819, p. 64, and has been repeated in a few collections in G. Britain and America. It was arranged from Merrick by Cotterill. [J. J.]

We are but little children poor weak]. Cecil F. Alexander, née Humphreys. [Holy Baptism.] Pub. in Dr. Hook's Leeds Church S. S. H. Bk., 1850, in 9 st. of 4 l. It is in use, sometimes abbreviated, in its original form ; as " We are but little children weak, the 1868 Appendix to H. A. & M., and numerous other collections: and as, "O Lord, the Holy Innocenta" (st. ii.), in the American Protes-tant Episcopal Hymnol, 1871. In these various forms it is in extensive use. [J. J.]

We bid Thee welcome in the Name. J. Montgomery. [Induction of a Minister.] This hymn is in the m. mss., but is undated. It was pub. in Montgomery's Christian Psalmist, 1825, No. 535, and again in his Original Hymns, 1858, No. 805, in 6 st. of 4 L, and headed, "On the Appointment of a Minister." It is found in many collections, but usually in an abbreviated form.

[J. J.]

We bow before Thy gracious Throne. This, in the American Unitarian Hys. for the Church of Christ, 1858, No. 518, is a cento from two hymns by C. Wesley, st. i., iv. being from "Thou Son of God, Whose flaming eye"; and st. ii., iii. from "Come, O Thou all-victorious Lord (p. $48, ii.), as in the Wes. H. Bk. 1780.

We come, Lord, to Thy feet. [Opening of Sunday School.] This hymn, together with the companion hymn for the Closing of a Sunday School, "O Lord, our hearts would give Thee praise," appeared on a card printed for Sunday-school use by Bp. Pelham, when Incumbent of Christ Church, Hampstead Both hymns were adapted by him from another and now unknown source. The Rev. E. H. Bickersteth included both hymns, with slight alterations, in his Ps. & Hys., &c., 1858, from theuce they have passed into several collections. W. F. Stevenson attributes the former in his Hys. for Church and Home, 1878, to Lady Lucy Whitmore, 1824, but we have failed to find it in her Fundly Prayers, &c., 1824 (see p. 1085, it.), and know of no authority for the ascription.

We give Thee but Thine own. Bp. W. W. How. [Offertory.] Written about 1858, and 1st pub. in the enlarged ed. of Morrell & How's Psalms & Hymas, 1864, No. 197, in 6 st. of 41. From thence it has passed into numerous collections, and now ranks in popularity with some of the best of modern hymas. Of the author's compositions in extensiveness of use it is exceeded only by his "For all Thy Saints who from their Inbours rest." Orig. text, Church Hymas, 1871. The doxology in H. A. & M. and others is an addition. [J. J.]

We have not seen Thy footsteps tread. Anne Richter, nee Righy. [Faith.] The complicated nature of the various forms of this hymn in C. U. requires the reproduction of the original poem, and the texts of some of the hymns adapted therefrom.

1. The earliest date to which we have traced the original poem is 1834. In that year it appeared anonymously in Songs from the Valley: A Collection of Sacred Poetry. Kirkby Lonsdale, 18me. This volume was compiled by the elder daughters of the Rev. W. Curus Wilson. [E. MSS.] At page 130 it reads:—

"Fatre.

"Blessed are they who have not seen, and yet have believed."

- "We have not seen Thy footsteps tread
  This wild and sinful carth of ours,
  Nor heart Thy voice restors the dead
  Again to life's reviving powers:
  But we believe—for all things are
  The gifts of Thing Almighty care.
- We have not seen the billowy sea. Grow calm and still at Thy command, Nor the dim orbs again to see, Beneath the healing of Thine hand; But we believe the Fount of Light. Again could give those eyeballs eight.
- We did not see Thee tread the wave; We did not hear the voice from heaven, Which once with awful warning gave That God's own Son for us was given. But we believe—ob! strengthen Thou The faith which to Thy Name we owe.

WE HAVE NOT SEEN THY

- "We did not see the armed throng
  Steal to the 'garden's 'midnight shade,
  And watch the pain-tree's boughe among.
  Then quali beneath Thy glance afraid:
  But we believe—Almighty love Alone could such dark moments prove.
- We did not see the darkness veil With sudden gloom the noon-day skies; Nor the fierce soldier's cheek grow pale, And priestly mockers veil their eyes: When the proud Boman owned the power Of heaven, 'twas in that awful hour.
- "We did not hear the footsteps fall Within that locally garden ground, Of the all-wakeful continel, Slow tracing there his watchful round; But we believe—the Holy One Bursting that tomb, in glory shone.
- We were not with the chosen few Who saw Thee through the clouds ascend, Who gazed, and wished to follow too, Then on the sarth all prostrate bend; But we believe that mortal eyes Behold the journey to the sides.
- "Chase every shade of doubt away;
  'Light of the World!' in mercy shine;
  Illeme with faith our erring way,
  We would no worship own but Thine,
  Bring us to heaven's peaceful shore,
  And make us Thine for twempre!"

This text was republished in the April number of The Friendly Visitor, 1838, also printed at Kirkby Lousdale, and edited by the Rev. W. Carus Wilson. It is signed "Anne R. Kirton-Liudsey." It is also found in Original and Solect Hymns; A Companion to Select Poetry. Lond. John Van Voorst, 1837, No. 143 (2nd ed. enlarged 1838). The editor of this work was a Miss Little, of Bedford.

- 2. The first adaptation of this poem for congregational use appeared in J. H. Gurney's Lutterworth Coll. of Hys. for Public Worship, 1898, No. 264. It is signed "*American, i.e. from an American source with alterations and additions. From the MSS. of H. J. Buckell (p. 181, i.) we gather that it was the joint production of Gurney and himself. This text is:—
  - We saw Thee not when Thon didst tread, In mortal guise, this sufful earth, Nor heard Thy voice restore the dead, And wake them to a second birth: But we BELLEVE that Thou didst come, And leave for us Thy glorious home.
  - "We were not with Thee on the wave, When Thou the stormy sea condist bind: Nor saw the health Thy blessing gave To lame and sick, to deaf and blind: But we settleve the Found of light Could give the darkened eye-ball sight.
  - "We did not mark the chosen few, When Thou didst through the clouds ascend, First lift to heaven their wondering view, Then to the earth all prostrate bend: But we be live that the mortal eyes beheld that journey to the skies.
  - "And now that Thou dost reign on high, And thence Thy faithful people bless, No ray of glory from the sky Both shine upon our wilderness: Yet we nearly that Thou art there; And sing Thy praise, and lift our prayer."
- 3. The next recast was apparently by H. J. Buckoll, alone (see § 5). It appeared in Ps. & Hys. for use in the Rugby School Chapel (of which he was joint editor with Dr. Goulburn), 1843, No. 53, as follows:---
  - "We saw Thee not when Thou didst tread,
    O Saviour, this our simil earth;
    Nor heard Thy voice restore the dead,
    And wake them to a second blith;
    But use believe that Thou didst come,
    And quit for us Thy glorious house.

"We were not with the faithful few, Who stood Thy bitter cross around Nor heard the prayer for those who slew, Nor felt that carthquake rock the ground; We saw no spear-wound pierce Thy side; Yet we believe that Thou hast died.

No angels' message met our ear, On that first glorious Easter-day, 'The Lord is risen, He is not here, Come see the place where Jesus lay! But see believe that Thou didst quell The bunded powers of Death and Hell.

" We saw Thee not return on high And now our longing sight to bless,
No ray of glory from the sky
Shines down upon our wilderness:
Yet we believe that Thou art there,
And seek Thee, Lord, in praise and prayer,"

4. The next form of the text appeared in J. H. Gurney's Ps. & Hys. for Public Worship, Selected for some of the Churches in Maryle-bone, Lond. 1851, No. 269, and reads:—

1. " We my Thee not when Thou didst come To this poor world of sin and death, Nor e'er beheld Thy cottage-home In that despised Nazareth; But we estateve. Thy footsteps trod Its streets and plains, Thou Son of God.

7. "We did not see Thee lifted high Amid that wild and savage crew, Not heard Thy meck, imploring cry,
Forgive, they know not what they do 't
Yet we believe the deed was done. Which shook the earth, and velled the sun.

 We stood not by the empty tomb Where late Thy excred body lay.
 Nor sat within that upper room,
 Nor met Thee in the open way; But We BELIEVE that angels sale "Why seek the living with the dead?"

4. " We did not mark the chosen few, When Thou didst thro' the clouds ascend, First lift to beaven their wondering view Then to the carth all prostrate bend; Yet was achieve that mortal eyes Babeld that journey to the akies.

5. "And now that Thou does reign on high, And thence Thy waiting people blass, No ray of glory from the sky both shine upon our wilderness; But we serreve Thy faithful word. And trust in our Redeeming Lord.

It will be noted that st. iv., v. are from the Lutterworth Coll., 1888. In a note to this hymn in the "Table of first lines" to the Marylebone Ps. & Hys., Gurney says concerning it :-

"This hymn, and the last hymn in the book, 'Yes God is good,' were suggested by two poems in a small American volume, which were well conceived, but very imperfectly executed. Successive attentions have left nothing of the original compositions remaining but the first four words, and the repeated words, in each hymn. With this acknowledgment, the writer has not scrupted to put his name to them—J. H. G."

The "small American volume" here referred to has not been identified. In the American Sabbath H. Bk., 1858, No. 361 begins with st. ii. of this text, "We did not see Thee lifted high."

5. On the death of Buckell in 1871, a MS. in his handwriting, but undated, was found which contained the Lutterworth text of 1838 expanded into 14 stanzas. With the aid of this Ms, we are enabled to say with tolerable certainty that of the Lutterworth text at. i., ii. were by Buckoll, and st. iii., iv. were by Gurney; the Rugby text, 1843, was by Buckoll; and the Marylebone text, 1851, by Gurney. 6. After the publication of Gurney's text in the Marylebone Pa. & Hys., 1851, complications soon arose mainly in the form of centes. Some of these are :--

(1) In the Hys. for the Chapel of Harrow School, 1255, No. 25 is thus composed, et. I., il. Buckell from the Linterworth Coli.; st. iil., iv., Buckell, from the Rugby Lutterworth Coll.; st. iii., iv., Buckoil, from the Bugby Myssar; st. v., vi., Gurney, from the Lutterworth Coll.

(2) In the American Sabbath H. Bk., 1858, and others, is composed of st. ii.-v. of Gurney's 1851 text, and beging: We did not see Thee litted high."

(3) In Pott's Hys. Fitted to the Order of Common Prayer, Sc., 1861, No. 182, we have Pt. is ti., Gurney, from the Karylebone; st. ii., Hil., Buckoil, from the Latterworth Coll.; Pt. ii., "We did not see Thee litted high," Gurney, from the Marylebone text.

(4) The text of the S. P. C. K. Church Hysser, 1871, No. 581, is: st. i., ii., Buckoil, from the Lutterworth

(4) The text of the 2. C. R. Caurca Ryssey, 1871, No. 541, is: st. i., Buckoll, from the Lutterworth Coll.; st. ill., Buckoll, from the Rugby Hyssus; st. lv., v., Gurney, from the Lutterworth Coll. (5) In the American Unitarian Hy. [and Tune] Bk., 1866, No. 423, is composed of st. il.-iv. of Buckoll's Rugby text alone, and begins "We were not with the faithful faw."

The text by Gurney, as in the Marylebone Ps. & Hys., 1851, is the most popular form of the hymn. It is found in H. A. & M., 1875; the Hy. Comp., 1876; Thring's Coll., 1882, and many others. [J. J.]

We in the lower parts. [Holy Communion.] This cento appeared in the 1874 Suppl. to the New Cong. H. Bk., No. 1242. It is thus composed: st. i. and iii. are from No. 97 of C. Wesley's Hys. on the Lard's Supper, 1745; st. ii. from No. 81 of the same; and st. iv. and w. from another source. [L. 1.] and st. iv. and v. from another source. [J. J.]

We limit not the truth of God. G. Bauson. [Profound Depth of Holy Scripture.] This hymn was given in the Leeds H. Bk., 1853, No. 409, in 5 st. of 8 l., and headed with the following extract upon which it was based :-

"He charged us before God, and His blessed angels, if God should reveal anything to us by any other instrument of Ills, to be as ready to receive it as any truth by his ministry; for he was very confident the Lord had niore light and truth yet to break forth out of His body word." Narrative of Paster Robinson's Address to the Pilgrim Hathers,

This note, together with the hymn, also appeared in Mr. Bawson's Hys., Verses, and Chants, 1876. [J. J.]

We love the place, O Lord [God]. W. Bullock and Sir H. W. Baker. [The House of God.) In its original form this hymn aupeared in Dean Bullock's Songs of the Church, Halifax, N. Scotia, 1854, pp. 37, 38, as follows:

"THIRD SUNDAY AFTER EPIPHARY. " Lard, I have loved the habitation of Thy house."
Paulm xxvi. 8.

"We love the place, O Lord,
Wherein Thine bonour dwells;
The joy of Thy abode
All other joy excels.

"We love the house of prayer,
Wherein Thy servants meet;
For Thou, O Lord, art there,
Thy chosen ones to great.

" We love the secred font Wherein the Holy Dove Pours out, as He is wont, The effluence from above.

"We love our Father's board, Its altar steps are dear; For there in faith adored, We find Thy Presence near.

" We love Thy saints who come Thy mercy to proclaim, To call the wanderers home, And magnify Thy name.

"Our first and latest love
To Zion shall be given—
The House of God above,
On earth the Gate of Heav'n."

2. This text, which has many features of excellence, underwent the following changes at the hands of Sir H. W. Baker, in 1860, and was pub. in H. A. & M., 1861, as follows, the italics being Sir H. W. Baker's alterations and additions:—

"We love the place, O God, Wherein Thine honour dwells; The joy of Thine shode
All earthly joy excels.
"It is the House of prayer,
"Herein Thy servants meet; and Thon, O Lord, art there Thy chosen flock to greet.
"We love the sacred Font;
For there the Holy Dove
To powr is ever wont
His blessing from above.
"We love the sacred from;
Gh what on earth so dear?
For there, in falch adored,
We find Thy Presence near.
"We love the Word of Life,
The Word that tells of peace,
Of comfort in the strife,
And joys that never coase.
"We love to sing below
For mercies freely given;
But Oh! we long to know
The triumph-song of keaven.
"Lord Rens, give us grace
On earth to love Thee more,
In heaven to see Thy Fuet,
And with Thy saints adore."

This form of the hymn has passed into most extensive use in all English-speaking countries, and has been translated into several languages

3. A third form appeared in Harland's Church Psalter and Hyl., enlarged ed. 1867, the opening stanza of which begins:—

"O Lord, we love the place
Wherein Thine honour dwells;
The sweetness of Thy grace
All other joy excels."

This is based upon the H. A. & M. text; but is very inferior as a piece of literary workmanship.

4. A fourth form is given in Thring's Coll., 1882. Of this st. i., ii. are by Bullock, with "Ged" for "Lord," in st. i. l. 1; st. iii. li. 1, 2, Bullock, l. 3, Bullock altered by Thring, l. 4, Bullock altered by Baker; st. v. by Thring; st. vi. li. 1-3, by Thring, l. 4, Bullock altered by Baker. This is a good cento and worthy of more extensive use.

[J. J.]

We have Thee, Lord! yet not alone. Julia A. Elliott, nee Marshall. [Love for Christ.] This appeared in her husband's Ps. & Hys., 1835, in 6 st. of 4 double lines. Although not separately numbered as such, it is really a hymn in two parts, Pt. ii. beginning with st. iv., "We love Thee, Lord! because when we, &c." It has passed into a few collections. [J. J.]

We plen foundations for the dead. J. Montgomery. [Foundation Stone of a Cometery Chapel.] The ms. of this hymn is dated "May 5, 1848." The hymn was written for the laying of the foundation-stone of the chapel for the Church of England portion of the Sheffleld General Cemetery. Montgomery's hymn, "Father of glory, God of grace," was written for the Opening of the same, and is dated "June 27, 1850." Montgomery d. on April 30, 1854, and was buried under the shadow of the spire of this chapel.

We sing the praise of Him Who died. T. Kelly. [Passiontide.] Appeared in Hymns by Thomas Kelly, not before Published, Dublin, 1815, No. 52, in 5 st. of 4 l., and headed, "God forbid that I should glory save in the Cross: Gal. vi. 14." Here st. v. reads:—

"The balm of life; the cure of woe;
The measure and the pledge of love:
"Tis all that sinners want below;
"Tis all that singels know above."

In later editions of Kelly's Hymns this stanza is altered by Kelly to:—

"The balm of life, the cure of woe,
The measure and the pledge of love;
The sinner's refuge kere below,
The angel's thome in heaven above,"

This authorised text is that usually found in modern collections. In H. A. & M., 1861, an additional stanza was given by the Compilers. The use of this hymn in all Englishspeaking countries is extensive. It has also been tr. into several languages. The Rev. L. C. Biggs's rendering into Latin of the H. A. & M. text in his annotated edition of H. A. & M. 1867, begins "Landes canamus mortai." Lord Selborne [Sir R. Palmer] said at the York Church Congress, 1866 [Report, Hymnody] that this hymn "is distinguished by a calm subdued power, rising gradually from a rather low to a very high key [quotes, and continues]. I doubt whether Montgomery ever wrote anything quite equal to this." In several collections this hymn begins with st. ii., "Inscribed upon the Cross we see." An adaptation of the original text for use at Holy Communion is given in the Memoir of S. Medley, by his daughter, pub. in Liverpool in 1883. It begins with the same first line, and was probably made by Medley.

We sing to Thee Whose wisdom formed. [Divine Use of Music.] This appeared in The Whole Book of Psalms: with the Usual Hymns and Spiritual Songs. Together with all the Ancient and Proper Tunes sung in Churches, with some of Later Use. Composed in Three Parts. . . . By John Playford, London, 1677, p. 293, in 7 st. of 4 l, and a dozology. It was included in the 6th ed. of the Supplement to the New Version, 1708, but has fallen out of use. Its original title is, "On the Divine use of Musick." [J. J.]

We thank, Thee, Lord, for this fair earth. Bp. G. E. L. Cotton. [Flower Services.] Pub in Hys. for use in the Chapel of Marlborough College, 1856, No. 94, in 4 st. of 4 l., and again in the enlarged edition of 1869. It has passed into numerous collections, and usually with the change of two or three words in the whole hymn. [J. J.]

We walk by faith and not by sight. H. Aiford. [St. Thomas.] Appeared in his Ps. & Hys., &c., 1844, p. 108, in 4 st. of 4 l., and again in his Year of Praise, 1867, No. 249. It is also given in the Westminster Abbey H. Bk., 1883, and others. [J. J.]

Wearied in the strife of sin. Bp. E. H. Bickerstell. [Ascension.] This bymn was pub. as a leaflet, with music by Dr. Charles Vincent, in 1887. It is in 7 st. of 4 l., headed "Crucified and Crowned," and dated "Ascen-

Weary of earth, and laden with my sin. S. J. Stone. [Lent.] Written in 1868, and 1st pub. in the same year in his Lyra Fidelium, p. 44, in 8 st. of 4 l. It is based on Art. 10 of the Apostles' Creed, "The Forgiveness of Sins," and was written, originally, for a parochial mission. In 1868 Mr. Stone revised it for the Appendix to H. A. & M. From H. A. & M. it has passed into numerous collections in G. Britain and America. It is one of the most tender and plaintive of Mr. Stone's bymns. In the American Laudes Domini, 1884, it is divided into two parts, pt. i. being st. i.-v.; and pt. ii. st. vi.-viii., altered to "O Jesus Christ the righteous! live in me." [J. J.]

Weary of this wordy strife. C. Wes-ley. [For Unity.] 1st pub. in 7 st. of 6 l. at the end of J. Wesley's Sermon on 2 Kings x. 15, in 1755. (P. Works, 1868-72, vol. vi. 71.) Two centoe are in C. U. (1) "Weary of this wordy strife," in the Westminster Abbey H. Bk., 1883; and (2) "My brethren, friends, and kinsmen these," in the American Church Praise Book, N. Y., 1882.

Webb, Benjamin, M.A., was b. in London in 1820, and was educated in St. Paul's School; whence he passed to Trinity College, Cambridge, in 1838, B.A. 1842, M.A. 1845. Ordained by the Bishop [Monk] of Gloucester and Bristol he was Assistant Curate of Kemeston in Gloucestershire, 1848-44; of Christ Church, St. Paneras, 1847-49; and of Brasted, Kent, 1849-51; at which date he was presented to the P. C. of Sheen in Staffordshire, which he held until 1882, when he became Vicar of St. Andrews, Wells Street, London, In 1881 the Bishop [Jackson] of London collated him to the Prebend of Portpool in St. Paul's Cathedral. Mr. Webb was one of the Founders of the Cambridge Camden, afterwards the Ecclesiological Society; and the Editor of the Ecclesiologist from 1842 to 1868, as well as the General Editor of the Society's publications. His first appearance in print was as joint editor of Bp. Montague's Articles of Inquiry in 1841; in 1848 he was joined with Mr. J. M. Neale in An Escay on Symbolism, and A Translation of Durandus; in 1847 he put forth his valuable work on Continental Ecclesiology; in 1848 he was joint editor with Dr. Mill of Frank's Sermons, for the Angle-Catholic Library, and with the Rev. J. Fuller-Russell of Hierurgia Anglicana. After the decease of his father-in-law (Dr. Mill), he edited Dr. Mill's Catechetical Lectures, 1856; a second edition of Dr. Mill's Christian Advocates Publications on the Mythical Interpretation of the Gospels, 1861; and of Dr. Mill's Sermons on our Lord's Temptation, 1873. He was also one of the editors of the Burntisland reprint of the Sarum Missal. One of his most valuable works is Instructions and Prayers for Candidates for Confir-mation, of which the third edition was pub. in 1882. Mr. Webb was one of the original editors of the Hymnal Noted, and of the sub-Committee of the Ecclesiological Society, sion Day, 1887." It is No. 236 in the 1890 ed. some of the hymns. In conjunction with the of the H. Comp.

[J. J.] Rev. Canon W. Cooke he was editor of the Hymnary, 1872, for which office his habitual reconstruction and composition of the words of the authors used at St. Andrew's, Wells Street, as well as his connection with the Humnal Noted, eminently qualified him. His original hymns contributed to the Humnary. 1871 and 1872, were:-

1. Assessor to thy King. St. Bartholomew. In the Hymnary, 1872.

9. Behold He comes, thy King most holy. Advest.
Originally written to be sung in St. Andrew's Church, Wells Street, as an authem to the music of Schumann's Advent-lied, and afterwards pub. in the Hymnary, 1872.

3. Praise God, the Holy Trinity. Hymn of Fatth. Originally written for use in St. Andrews, Wells Street, and subsequently in the Hymnary, 1872.
4. Praise the Rock of our salvation. Dedication of a Canch. Pub. in the Hymnary, 1872. Mr. Webb's authorised text is in the Westminster Abbey H. Bk.,

5. Ye angel hosts above. Universal Praise to God. In the Hymnary, 1872.

Mr. Webb's tra are annotated elsewhere-(See Index of Authors and Translators.) He d. in London, Nov. 27, 1885. [Wm. C.]

Wedderburn, James, John and Robert, were the three som of James Wedderburn, a Dundee merchant. James, the eldest, entered the University of St. Andrews in 1514. He afterwards went to France, and on his return produced tragedies and comedies in Scotch which roused the rage of the eccle-siastics, who forced him to flee, in 1540, to France, where he d., probably at Dieppe, about 1550. John, the second son, graduated N.A. at St. Andrews in 1528. Having entered the priesthood and officiated at Dundee, he fell under suspicion of heresy, and fled in 1539 to Wittenberg, where he associated with Luther, Melanchthon, and other Reformers. There in his exile, doubtless under Luther's influence, he wrote and translated many of the psalms, hymns and ballads commonly known as The Guds and Godlie Ballates. After the death of James v. (Dec. 13, 1542), he returned to Scotland, but was forced in 1546 again to flee. He d. in England in 1556. Robert, the youngest son, graduated M.A. at St. Andrews in 1530. He entered the priesthood, and was Vicar of Dundee in 1553. He seems to have written a number of the "Ballates" proper. To him Dr. Laing would ascribe the remarkable Complayed of Scotland, a satirical poem first pub. at St. Andrews in 1549. (See Scotlish Hymnely, § 3; and the works by Dr. Laing and Dr. Mitchell mentioned in the Appendix to that article.) [J. M.]

Weep, mourner, for the joys that fada, W. Kaoz. [Heaven.] 1st pub. in his Harp of Zion, 1825, in 2 st. of 11 l., and entitled "Heaven." It is based on Job xix. 26. It was also included in his Poems, &c., 1847, p. 181, but is unknown to the hymnels in that form. As early as 1844 it was given in an altered form as: "O weep not for the joys that fade," in the American Unitarian Christion Hymns, of the Cheshire Pastoral Association, and, later, in other American collections, in most of which it is ascribed to Knowles, in [J, J] appointed to arrange the words and the music of that book; and was also the translator of Wegelin, or Wegelin, then superintendent (Ephorus) of the Evangelical college at Augsburg, was b. at Augsburg Jan. 11, 1604. After studying at the University of Tübingen (st. a. 1626), he was for a short time paster at Budweiler, and was appointed in 1627 fourth discours of the Franciscan (Barfüsser) church at Augsburg. In 1629, along with 13 other Evangelical pastors, he was compelied to leave Augsburg by the decree of Restitution (see p. 1090, ii.) enneted by the Emperor Ferdinand III. After Gustavus Adolphus had become master of the city, in 1632, Wegelin was recalled to the Barfüsser Kirche as archidiaconus. In 1633 he was appointed preacher at the Hospital Church of the Holy Ghost, but in 1635, as a result of the battle of Nördlingen (Sept., 1634), he was again forced to flee from Augsburg. He found refuge at Pressburg, in Hungary, where he became pastor, and afterwards Senior, Inspector, and Doctor of Theology. Ho d. at Pressburg, Sept. 14, 1640 (Koch, iii. 169; Goedeke's Grundriss, vol. iii. 1887, p 161, &c.).

Wegelin's hymns are simple and natural, and are the productions of an earnest, true-hearted and good pastor rather than of a skilful poet. Goodeke, as above, gives lists of their first lines from his (1) Augpurger Bet Bitchlein, Nürnberg, 1636 [cupy in possession of Pastor E. Krauss of Greifswald. There are also eds. which have the engraved title dated 1836, and the printed title dated 1848, a copy of the law on the Library, and a copy of the law in the Library of the Prediger Seminar at Hannovar], and from his (2) Hand-Land-wik Rand-Bitchien, Nürnberg, 1637 (Gittingen Library). Some 20 of his hymns were included in J. M. Dilherr's G. R., Nürnberg, 1634 (p. 201, ii.), and other collections of the 17th cent.

The only hymn by Wegelin which has passed into English is:-

Allein and Christi Himmelfahrt. Ascension. This is his most popular byrnh. 1st pub. 1876, as above, p. 609 (Göttingen copy p. 662, Hannover copy p. 581), in 3st of 7 1. entitled, "iv. Short Paelm of Praise on the Ascension of Christ;" repeated in Dilhert's G. B., 1654, p. 594. In the Lüneburg G. H., 1661, No. 112, it is reast and begins, "And Christi Himmel-Fart allein"; this recast being probably made by the compiler Ernst Semmemann (1658 convector of the Lath school at Celle, 1661 pastor of St. Alexander's Church at Rinbeck or Einbeck, in Hannover; d. at Embeck, Nov. 17, 1670). Both forms are given in the Leipzig Forzath, 1673, Nos. 38s and 389, and in the Unn. L. M., 1851. Tr. 83:—

388 and 389, and in the Uso, L. N., 1851. Tr. as:—

1. Raise your Devotion, mortal Tengues. By J. C. Jacobi, in his Paul. Ger., 1722, p. 24; repeated, altered, in his 2nd ed., 1702, p. 41. In 1722 it is marked as tr. from the second form of Wegelin's hynn; in 1702 as from J. Zwick's Auf diesen Try bedenken soir. It may be regarded as a very free tr. from Wegelin; with the first shanz taken from st. v., vi. of Isane Watts's "the sannah to the Prince of Light." The 1732 text was included as No. 443 in pt. i. of the Moreview H. Bk., 1754, with a new tr. of et. iil. added. This tr. of st. iii. was omitted in the 1758 and later eds. In the edition of 1866, No. 170, only st. I., ii. of Jacobi are retained.

2. Since Christ in gone to beaven. His home. This

9. Since Christ is gone to beaven, His home. This is a good fr. from the second form, by Miss Winkworth, in her Lyris Ger., 2nd set., 1858, p. 47; and in Schaffe Christ in Song, 1869, p. 314. In her C. E. for Regiond, 1863, No. 64, it is attered in metre.

Wegleiter, Christoph, s. of Leonhardt Wegleiter, book-keeper at Nürnberg, was b. at Nürnberg, April 22, I659. In 1676 he matriculated at the University of Altdorf, and so distinguished himself by his poetic gifts that he was, in 1679, received by S. von Birken as a member of the Pegnitz Shepherd and Flower order, and in 1680 was at once capped M.A. and laureated as a poet. After studying at other German universities, and making a lengthened tour (1685-88) in Germany, Holland, and England, he was appointed, in 1688, Professor of Theology at the University of Altdorf, and also diacoms of the Town Church there; receiving from the University the degree of D.D. in 1697. He d. at Altdorf Aug. 16 (13?), 1706 (Knch, iii., 502; Blätter für Hymnologie, 1885, p. 178; 1886, p. 157; 1887, pp. 30, 31; Will's Nisnbergisches Gelehrten Lexicon, pt. iv. p. 187, &c.). Wegleiter was a successful professor, and an editying preacher of the school of Spener and Francke. His hymns, some 25 in all, are thoughtful, original, and devout, but somewhat artificial in style. Six were contiliuted to the 2nd ed., 1691, of the Pegnits Society's Poetisches Andocktickary (p. 858, i.), and the rest spenered in various hymn-books of the period.

The only hymn by Wegleiter which has passed into English is:—

Beschwertes Hers, leg ab die Bergen. Sunday Norwing. 1st pub. in the Geistliche Hertzens-Marie, Schleusingen, 1701, No. 487, in 8 st. of 8 l., entitled Sunday Hymn," and marked as by "B. Christ. Wegleiter." Included in the Unv. L. S., 1851. Sometimes erroneously ascribed to B. W. Marperger. Tr. as:— erroneously ascribed to B. W. Marperger. Tr. as:— Encumber'd heart! lay by thy sorrow. This is a good tr., omitting st. vi., vil., by Miss Cox, in her Sacred Hymns from German, 1841, p. 59. Her tra. of at. ii., iv., ii. 1-4; vill., ii. 1-4, beginning, "My God, I now appear before Thre," are included in the Hedge & Huntington Hyst. for the Ch. of Christ, Boston, U.S., 1833, No. 9.

Other trs. are:—
(1) "O'orborden'd Heart, thy Labour baulch," by H.
J. Buckell, 1842, p. 1. (2) "Now weary heart! thy cares dismiss," by Lady K. Fortescue, 1843, p. 15. (3)
"Now, heavy heart, away with sorrow," by Miss Morington, 1863, p. 147. (4) "My burdened heart, throw off thy rares," by Br. J. Juthrie, 1869, p. 114. (5) "O burden'd heart, cast off thy sorrow." This is No. 1012 in Roid's Praise Bk., 1872.

Weingäxtner, Sigismund. Very little is known of this author. His name appears as "Sigismund Weingart" in the Index of Authors prefixed to the 766 Geistlicke Psalmen, &c., pub. at Nürnberg in 1607, but no biographical particulars are there given. He is generally said to have been a preacher in or near Heilbronn. But Koch, ii. 300, says that no preacher of that name ever held office in or near Heilbronn on the Neckar; and conjectures that he may have been of Heilsbronn in Bavaria. As to Heilsbronn, Dr. Zahn, now of Neuendettelsau in Bavaria, informs me that there was no preacher of that name near Heilsbronn, and that he has been unable anywhere to trace this writer. Goedeke, in his Grandris, vol. ii., 1884, p. 198, says, "he seems to have been of Basel," but for this also there is no clear evidence.

"S, W. Anfi Jesum Christum stebt all mein Thun, 765." " Auff meinen lieben Gott, traw ich, 836."

The latter has been tr. into English, viz.:— And meines lieben Gett. Trust in God. Included, 1807, as above, p. 336, in 5 st. of 5 l., entitled, "Another benutiful hymn"; but, as will be seen above, no initials are attached to it in the 1807 index of First Lines. Later compilers, however (such as Jeremlas Weber in his G. R., Leipzig, 1638, p. 187; marked as "Another. Sigis-mundt Weingartners"), transferred the initials given in the 1801 index, and so ascribed "Auf melnen lieben Gott," to Weingartners. This ascription is probably a missake. L. Curtza in his D. Philipp Nichai's Ichen and Lieber, 1859, p. 10, ascribes the hymn to Friedrich Beurhaus, since 1857 procector of the school at Dortmund (d. 1609), but this also lacks unfirmation. Wackgraught, "p. 433, gives it as amonymous, printing it from M. Yulpius's G. B., 1608, with a second form from J. Aldesberger's Geberböcklein, Kürnberg, 1611. Whoever was the author the hynn is certainly a good one, and has been a great favourite in Germany. In the Univ.

L. S., 1851, No. 894, et. 1.-iv., vi. are as in 1607, and et. v. is one of the et. added in C. Demantina's Threnodiac, Freiberg, 1620. The trt. in C. U. are:—

On God in all my wees. This is a good fr. of st.
 i.-iv. of the 1607, by A. T. Russell, as No. 231 in his I's. & Hys., 1861.

2. In God my faithful God. This is a good and full tr. from the 1607, by Miss Winkworth, in her C. B. for England, 1863, No. 147, slightly altered in her Christian Singers, 1868, p. 156. Repeated, omitting st. iv., in the Ohio Luth. Hyl., 1880.

Other tre. are:-

(1) "In God the Lord most just," by J. C. Jacobi, 1722, p. 62; repeated in the Moravica H. Bk., 1734, pt. i., No. 474. (2) "I trust my blessed God," by M. L. Prothingham, 1870, p. 219.

Weisse, Michael (Weiss, Wiss, Wegs, Weys, Weyss), was b. circa 1480, in Neisse, Silesia, took priest's orders, and was for some time a monk at Breslau. When the early writings of Luther came into his hands, Weisse, with two other monks, abandoned the convent, and sought refuge in the Bohemian Brethren's House at Leutomischl in Bohemia. He became German preacher (and apparently founder of the German communities) to the Bohomian Brethren at Landskron in Bohemia, and Fulnok in Moravia, and d. at Landskron in 1534 (Koch, ii. 115-120; Wackernagel's D. Kirchenlied, l. p. Fontes rerum Austricarum, Scriptores, vol. ii. pt. ji. p. 227, Vienna, 1863, &c.).

Weisse was admitted as a priest among the Reethren at the Syuod of Brandels, in 1531, and in 1532 was appointed a member of their Select Council, but he had previously performed important missions for the Brethren. He was, e.g., sent by Bishop Lucas, in 1522, along with J. Rob or Horn, to explain the views of the Bohemian Section to Lather; and again, in 1524, when they were appointed more especially to report on the practices and boliness of life of the followers of the German Reand bolimes of life of the followers of the German Reformers. Ho was also entrasted with the editing of the formers. Ho was also entrasted with the editing of the first German hymn-book of the Bohemian Brethren, which appeared as Eta New Gescraphethen at Jungen Bunzel (Jung Banzlau) in Bohemia in 1531 (see pp. 158, i., and 157). This contained 155 hymns, all apparently either translations or else originals by himself. The proportion of tre. is not very clear. In the preface to the 1531, Waisse addressing the German Communities at Fulnek and Londskron says, "I have also, according to may power, put forth all my shiftry, your old hymn-book as well as the Bohemian hymn-book (Gentonal) being before me, and have brought the same sense, in accordance with Holy Scripture, into German rhyms." So Johann Rob in the preface to the 1514 cd. speaks of himself as correcting "hymns which he (i.e. Weisse) transferred from Bohemian into German "; and the 1539 edspeaks of Weisse as having "begon to trouslate the Bohemian) Cantional, and rendered 143 hymns into German." Mr. Müller, however (see p. 157), has only been able to identify 12 as trs. from the Bohemian.

Luther called Weisse "a good poet, with somewhat erroneous views on the Sacramental hymns had been revised by Roh (1544), included 12 of his hymns in V.
Babt's G. B., 1534. Many of his hymns in yelligious tone is carnest and manly, but yet tender and truly devone, and the best of them are distinguished by a certain charming simplicity of thought and expression.
At least 119 passed him the German Lutheren hymnformers. He was also entrusted with the editing of the Puly devoir, and the best of them are changement by a certain charming simplicity of thought and expression. At least 119 passed into the German Lutheran hymn-books of the 16th and 17th centuries, and many are still in use. Three are annotated in this Dictionary at pp. 395, ji. ; 623, i.; and 886, i.

The following hymns by Weisse have also passed into English :-

i. Christus ist erstanden, Von des Todes Banden. Easter. 1st pub. 1531 as above, and thence in Wackernagel, iii. p. 273, in 7 st. of 4 l. It is suggested by the older hymn, "Christ ist erstanden" (p. 216, t.). In the Unv. L. S., 1851, No. 129. The fr. in C. U. is:--- Weissel, Georg, s. of Johann Weissel, judge and afterwards burgomaster at Domnan, near Königsberg, was b. at Domnau in 1590. He studied at the University of Königaberg, from 1608 to 1611, and thereafter, for short periods, at Wittenberg, Leipzig, Jena, Strassburg, Basel and Marburg. In 1614 he was appointed rector of the school at Friedland near Domnau, but resigned this post after three years, and returned to Königsberg to resume his studies in theology. Finally, in 1623, he became paster of the newly erected Altrossgart church at Königshere, where he remained till his death, on August 1, 1635 (Koch, iii. 180; Altereussische Monatsschrift, 1867, p. 430; Goedake's Grun-driss, vol. iii., 1887, p. 122, &c.).

Weissel was one of the most important of the earlier hymn-writers of Prussia. His hymns, about 20 in all, are good in style, moderate in length, and varied in metre. The earliest seem to have been written for use at the consecration of the Altrossgart church on the 2nd S. in Advent, 1623. The majority are for the greater festivals of the Christian year. The best are No. it, below, and those for the dying. They appeared mostly in the Königsberg hymn-books, 1833-1656, and in the Preussische Fest-Lieder, pt. I., Elbing, 2642; pt. II., Königsberg, 1644 [Berlin Library],

Those of Weissel's hymns which have passed into English are:-

i. In finstern Stall, o Wunder gross. Christmas. 1st pub. in B. Derschau's Ausseriesene geistliche Lieder, Königsberg, 1639, p. 7, in 5 st. of 5 l. In the Preussische Fest-Lieder, pt. i., 1642, No. 14, it is entitled "On the Birth of Christ, Lux in tenebris lucet," and in the Index is marked as by Georg Weisselius. Repeated in the Königsberg G. B., 1650, p. 66, and as No. 168 in the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863. The fr. in C. U. is:—

O miracle of love and might! This is a somewhat free tr., omitting at, v., by Dr. Kennedy, as No. 104 in his Hymno. Christ., 1863.

il. Macht hook die Thür, das Thor macht weit. Advent. This is a Hymn of Triumph for the Entry of the King of Glory, founded on Ps. xxiv.; and is one of the finest German Advent hymns, 1st pub. in the Preussische Fest-Lieder, pt. 1., 1642, No. 2, in 5 st. of 8 l., marked as "On the 1st S. of Advent," and in the Index marked as by Georgius Weisselins. Included in Crüger's Praxis, Frankfurt-am-Main, 1662, and most later books, as e.g. the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 1599. The trs. in C. U. are:—

1. Lift up your heads, ye mighty gates. a good and full tr. by Miss Winkworth, in her Lyra Ger., 1st Ser., 1855, p. 10, and her C. B. for England, 1863, No. 25. In the Cong. Church Hyl., 1887, the Evany. Hyl., N. Y., 1880, and others, the original form is followed. In the Bapt. Ps. & Hys., 1858; Hapt. Hyl., 1879; Horder's Cong. Hys., 1884, and others, II. 7, 8 of each stanza are omitted. In Schaff's Christ in Song, 1869, p. 17, ll. 1-4 of each stanza are given, and then ll. 6, 7 of st. iv., v. are added as a sixth st,-this form being followed in the Hys. & Songs of Praise, N. Y., 1874; Meth. Epls. Hyl., 1878, and other American Colls. Other forms are:

forms are:—

(1) Behold One cometh from afar (1, alt.). This (partly from Mercer) is in the 1874 Suppl., to the New Cong. H. Blc., and the 1874 Appx. to the Leads H. Blc., (2) Behold He cometh from afar. In J. L. Porter's Coll., 1876, altered from No. 1.

(5) Oh! hallowed is the land and blest (iii. 1. 1, alt.). In the American Subout H. Blc., 1888, &c.

(4) O blest the souls, for ever blest (lii. 1. 1, alt.). In Bys. of the Spirit, Boston, U.S., 1864.

(5) Fling wide the partals of your heart (Iv.). In the American Unitarian H. Blc., 1889.

2. The mighty gates of earth unber. This is by W. Mercer, based on Miss Winkworth's tr., in his Church P. & H. Bk., 1857, No. 14 (Oz. ed., 1864, No. 71), repeated in Kennedy, 1863.

Another tr. is: "Lift up, lift up your heads, ye gates," by G. Moultrie, in his Esponenie of S. Doroisea, 1870.

iii. We ist drin Stachel nun, e Ted? Easter. Founded on 1 Cor. xv., 55-58. 1st pub. as No. 3 in pt. ii., 1644, of the Preussische Fest-Lieder, in 5 st. of 8 l., entitled "For the Easter festival, and in the index marked as by Georgius Weisselius. Thence in the Königsberg G. B., 1650, p. 193, and others. The form which has passed into English is that in the Hannover G. B., 1657, No. 74, in 10 st., repeated as No. 315 in the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863. This, beginning "O Tod, we ist deln Stachel nun," is entirely rewritten, probably by Justus Gesenius. Tr. as :-- O Boath! where is thy ornal sting ! This is a full and good version of the 1657 text, as No. 80 in the Ohio Luth. Hyl., 1880, marked as a compilation, Weissensee, Philipp Heinrich, was b. Feb. 6, 1673, at Vichberg, near Gaildorf, Württemberg, where his father was pastor and consistorishrath. He studied at the University of Tübingen, and, after acting as assistant to several clergymen, became, in 1697, a tutor to the court pages at Stuttgart. In 1703 be was appointed a tutor in the clergy training school at Maulbronn, and in 1708 in that at Blaubeuren. He was then appointed, in 1722, prelate at Blaubeuren, and in 1727 took up residence at Stuttgart as prelate of Hirseu and member of the Württemberg consistory. For political reasons he was removed, in 1740, to Denkendorf near Esslingen, as Probet and General Superintendent. He d. at Denkendorf, Jan. 6, 1767, being then the Father and Senior of the Lutheran Church in Württemberg (Koch, v. 79; B. Haug's Idederdichter des wirtenbergischen Landgesung-buchs, 1780, p. 42, and Appz. ii., &c.).

Websenses was one of the earliest friends of Foreign Missions, being specially interested in that to Malabar. He was a good poet, and in 1713 pub. a German metrical version of Thomas & Kempis's Imitation. The most important of his hymnis were contributed to the 2nd ed. of J. A. Grammlich's Fiertsig Betrachtungen von Christi Leiden und Tod, auf die Vierteig Tugen in den Fusten, Stuttgart, 1727 (Berlin Library. The 1st ed., 1722, has no hymne).

Those of Weissensee's hymna which have passed into English are :-

i. Der Tod kemmt an : da soll ich ringen. For the Dying. 1st pub. 1727, as above, p. 144, in 4 st. of 6 l., as the companion to Meditation on St. Luke xxii. 44. Included in Kuapp's So. L. X., 1837 and 1965. In Bunsen's Fersick, 1833, No. 888, it begins "Kommt an der Tod, da ich soll ringen." The tr. in C. U. is:

When the last agray draws nigh. This is a good tr. of st. 1., iv., by Miss Winkworth in her Lyra Ger., let Ser., 1858, p. 239; repeated as No. 548 in the Pennsylvania Lath. Charch Bk., 1868.

ii. Jeen, hiff betan: und bete du Treuer. Prayer.

u. Jean, nur basen: und bete du Treuer. Prayer. Ist pub. 1727 as above, p. 124, in 4 st. of 6 l., as the companion to Meditation x. on St. Luke xxil. 40. Included in the Württemberg G. B., 1742, No. 94 (1842, No. 265). Tr. as "Help me to pray, Lord! and make supplication," by J. D. Burns in his Memoir and Remains, 1869, p. 232. [J. M.]

Welsh Hymnody. No reasonable doubt can exist as to hymns being sung in the early British Church, People whose muse always sang the praises of men, whether kings, warriors, or patriots, would searcely fall to pour forth their feelings of devotion, and to give the highest scope possible to their muse in the form of hymns or secred lyrics. In the works of Taliesin, who is supposed to be a bard of the sixth century, reference is made to the hymnology of that period, "Nid cerddor cel-fydd ni molwy Ddafydd; nid cywir ceiniad ni molwy y Tad"; that is, "No musician is skilful unless he extole the Lord, and no singer is correct unless he praises the Father."

In the works of Llawdden, a bard who took a prominent part in the reformation of Welsh poetry in the year 1451, some reference is also made to the hymnology of the mediaeval period :-

" Mi a lunial fon lanwaith, Gywyddau a Salmau saith; A naw emyn o newydd A phawh gair I Fair fydd."

Tudur Aled, also, says that in heaven it will be a part of the saints' supremest joy to sing the Virgin's praises :-

"Cawn wynfyd, cawn y Wenfair, Cawn y nef oll, canwn i Fair,"

In the year 1340, Davydd Ddu o Hiraddug Vicar of Tremeirchion, and Canon of St. Asaph, composed some hymns, perhaps the first Wolsh hymns, since the early Church hymns were lost. He also translated the Te Deum. in the Welsh metre known as Hypynt or Vaulted Strain. His sacred poem, Am Ddiwedd Dyn a'i Gorph, is printed in the Myvyrian Archaeology of Wales. Also a very poetical translation of the Officiam B. Mariae from Latin into Welsh by him, fills thirty columns of the first volume of the Myvyrian Archaeology.

At the time of the Protestant Reformation the Welsh appeared to have lost the spirit of sacred song. On the Continent the Reformation was the signal for an outburst of vernacular hymnology. Luther's hymns and psalms fired the hearts of his followers, so that his opponents feared his hymns more than his sermons, and England and Wales caught the i, Established Church.—In the years 1549-62, Sternhold and Hopkins gave to the English people the Metrical Psalms; but Walcz had to wait many years for the appearance of a poet whose name is now familiar to all Welshmen, as well as the task he so admirably performed—Salmau Edmund Prys.

- 1. Vicar Prichard, commonly known as Vicar Rees Prichard (p. 909, i.), did good service as a hymnologist. It appears that his book called Canwyll y Cymry; or, the Welshman's Candle, was at one time much used, and some of its quaint verses sung as hymns, probably for the want of something better, for in his days the voice of sacred song and praise was scarcely heard in Wales. His compositions were in use before Archdescon Prys's Psalms were published. On the decay of religion in Wales, according to one author, when the recognised teachers of the people neglected their duty, The Welshman's Candle appeared and was extensively circulated. Much of it was sung, for it served as a kind of Welsh hymnbook. It was the beginning of a new era. The following is one of his hymns, that was much used before and after Archdescon Prys's Psalms appeared. The title is:-Mawlgan am gariad Crist at y byd (or, Praise for Christ's love for the world):-
  - Rhyfedd fawr gariad Mab Duw at y byd, Pan ddoth ef o'r Nefoedd i'n prynu mor ddrud; Myfyriwn i goflo am garlad Mab Duw, A'i foith wastadol tra byddom ni byw, Cyflawnodd y Gyfraith, boddlonodd ei Dâd, Fe brynodd ein pardwn, fe'i sellodd â'i waed; Fe'n dygodd ni eilwaith i beddwch â Duw, Molianwn yr Iesu tra byddom ni byw. Fe ddug ar y Croesbeen ein pechod bob un, Fe'n golchodd o'r belau a'l wir waed al bun ; Fe'n gwnaeth yn frenhinol offeiriaid i Dduw, Molianwn yr leen tra byddom ol byw. Gogoniant a gallu a diolch bob pryd, A fo i'r Glân Drindod o'n prynn mor ddrod i A mawr-glod a moliant i'n Prynwr a'n Pen, A d'weded pob Cristion yn wastad, Amen."

This may be taken as a specimen of his style, and of the early hymns that were heard from every mouth in the Principality before the time of Archdoacon Prys. "It is scarcely credible," says Canon Williams, "with what avidity and pleasure the work was received, read, repeated, and it may be said, sung by the people."

2. Archdeacon Prys (p. 916, ii.), however, is the connecting link between our Hymnology and the Reformation period. It was in the year 1621 that he turned the Psalms into a metrical shape, in order, as he quaintly puts it, "that the Weish people might be enabled to praise God from their hearts." It was a glorious task. His version of the Psalms is still used. Some have thought it dry and stiff, but on the whole the task was admirably performed. The Ven. Archdeacon Prys was a man of deep learning and picty. He was educated at St. John's College, Cambridge, where he took his degree. He assisted Dr. Morgan in the translation of the Welsh Bible; and from his Metrical Psalms, Englynion, Cywyddau, and other things composed by him, we have abundant evidence that he was a man of culture, taste and capacity, and that he possessed the religious spirit that could enter into sympathetic relations with the authors of the Psalms, and interpret them from his inmost soul. In some cases, indeed, his rendering of the Psalms, and his recasting them as it were in his own mould, sheds a flood of light on their meaning. His version of the latter part of the 110th Psalm has been pointed out as an illustration of this: "He shall drink of the brook in the way, therefore shall be lift up the head."

"O wir frys i'r gyflafan hon, Fe ff o'r afon ness.
A gaffo, ar ei ffordd yn rhwydd.
Yr Arglwydd a'i dyrchafa."

That of itself is a sufficient commentary on the Psalm, and its reference to the sufferings and exaltation of the Messiah. It has been said that the Archdescon's translation of the Psalms is dry and rugged, and that in several places he is guilty of breaking the fixed rules of poetry, and of frequently ignoring the principle of metres so thoroughly developed in Welsh poetry. This, I believe, is a mistake. The old poet, if fairly dealt with, shows that he understood and recognised the principles of rhyme and metre, and the various ways of measuring and adorning Welsh poetry, and their development into a system and rules of art. I do not say that his metrical Psolms are faultiess, but I hold that he is not so guilty of the fault called camacentad, as some have accused him of being. I believe he has respected the rules of rhyme and rhythm, and where he is thought guilty of trampling on those of metre, he is skilfully avoiding doing so by changing the metrical feet and autometers [cyhydeddau a'r corfannau]. The ninety-second Psalm, in which occurs the famous stanza .~

Next to the Archdescon's comes the name. of Rowland Vaughan (p. 1208, 1), a gentleman, a scholar, and an excellent poet, although his chief mark was made as a translator of hymns, &c. His translation of that beautiful hymn, "Veni Creator Spiritus," is well-known. Whether he translated the original Latin or however, differ, the Welsh being a little shorter than the English, but in sweetness, vividness and strength the Welsh far surpasses the English. We quote the opening stanza of each, together with the original:— " Veni Creator Spiritos Mentes tuorum visita, Imple superna gratia, Quae to creasti pectora." "Come, Holy Ghost, our souls inspire, And lighten with celestial fire: Thou the anointing spirit art Who dost thy seven-fuld gifts impart." "Tyr'd Yabryd Glân i'n c'lonau ni, A dod d'oleuni nefot; Tydi wyt Yabryd Crist, dy ddawn Sydd fawr lawn a rhagorol."

Rowland Vaughan's tr. of the Veni Creator Spiritus, and Galarnad Pechadur, ought to be remembered, for we have nothing more beautiful in the whole range of Welsh Hymnology,

4. Elis Wyn o Lasynys (p. 1295, ii.), (or Bardd Cresg) should be mentioned in connection with this period. One of the best Welsh hymns we have was composed by him. and was as much admired then as it is now, It is a funeral hymn, or, as the Welsh people call it, "Emyn Cynhebrwng, neu Wylnos." It always appeared in Welsh editions of the Prayer-book after 1710 :-

"Myñ yw'r Adgyfodiad mawr, Myñ yw gwawr y Dywyd; Caiff pawb a'm cred, medd f'Arglwydd Dduw, Er trengn, fyw mewn eiffyd. A'r sawi sy'n byw mewn ufudd gred Imi, caiff drwydded nefol, Na allo'r Angau brenhin braw, Ddrwg iddaw yn drag 'wyddol. Yn wir, yn wir, medd Gwir ei Hun, Pob cyfryw ddyn sy'n gwrando Fy nghair, gan gredu'r Tad a'm rinces, Mae didranc emioes ganddo. Some of his works are mentioned in his biographical notice, q.v.

5. The Rev. Griffith Jones (2. 605, ii.), of Llanddowror, published a hymn-book under the title of Caspliad o Hymnan, gan y Parch. Griffith Jones. (A Collection of Hymns by the Her. Griffith Jones.) We have not been able to find any hymns composed by this celebrated clergyman. The hymns in his collection were selections from the works of different authors, The Rev. Griffith Jones has been called the morning star of the Reformation in Wales. His voice had been heard speaking against corruption and sins rempant in Wales more than twenty years before Rowland and Harris Williams of began to rouse the country. Williams of Pautycelyn refers to this in his elegy to the Rev. Griffith Jones:-

" Dyma'r gŵr a dorrodd allan, Ronyn bash cyn torsi'r wawr; Had fe hauodd, fe eginedd, Fe ddaeth yn gynbauaf mawr."

His collection of Hymns is not in use now, though some of the hymns it contained are still sung by Welsh congregations.

6. The Nev. Evan Evans (Glangeirionydd), is the chief hymnologist of this century. He published two books of hymns and tunes between the years 1829 and 1841. He was Vicer of Rhyl, and died in the year 1850. "Ar lan Iorddonen ddoin," and "O Dduw, he i'm dwhed!" are two of his hymne that the English of Bishop Cosin we are not able "Ar lan Iorddonen ddofn," and "O Dduw, to decide. The English and Welsh metres, rho i'm dy hedd," are two of his hymns that have been sung, and are still sung with unc-tion by many Welsh congregations. Most of his hymns are tender and plaintive. His collections of hymns and tunes are not in use in the Welsh Church now, but in every edition of bymns published in Wales by Churchmon and Dissenters, since his time, his hymns always appear among the choicest. Several hymn-books have appeared for use in the Established Church in Wales, from time to time, since the days of the Rev. Griffith Jones. Often clergymen composed and collected a number of hymns for one or two or more parishes. This seems to have been the state of things during the greater part of the seventeenth century. After that larger collections were published, but with no efforts to secure for the Welsh Church one general hymn-book. The hymns sung by the Church were much the same as those sung by Nonconformists throughout Wales.

7. The Rev. Robert Davies, M.A., published a collection of hymns which proved useful in parts of North Wales. It was called :--

Hymnan or Wyllan ac Praprydiau Spleny: Logg, wedi eu caspiu alian o waith gradunal andwyr, yn nghyd ag amryw rui newyddion; that is, "Hymna on the Feneta and Fishe of the Church of England, collected from the works of different authors, with several New Hymns, by the Rev. Robert Davies, n.a., of Cambridge, and Curate of Shuddlan, in Flintshire."

Singularly the book has no date. It was published at Denbigh. Several of its hymns are found in the collections of the present day.

Another hymn-book which was in use in many churches, was called Daniel Jones's Book. The Rev. Daniel Jones was a celebrated clergyman in South Wales. He was Vicar of St. Dogmell's in Pembrokeshire. His book is still used in some parts of Wales. Another collection was called The Bishops' Hymn-book. This was collected and published under the direction of the four Bishops, and was an attempt to provide a book for the general use of the Church in Wales. The attempt was not successful; for some reason or other the work failed to commend itself to the universal favour of the Welsh Church.

8. There are three collections which have had a large circulation, and are now used throughout the Principality. (1) Hymnus Hés a Newyld, or "Hymns Ancient and Modern," London, Haddon, 1868, 555 H.; enlarged in 1875 to 596 H., not to be confounded with the English hymn-book of the some name, though the Introits are added, and it is of a similar school. (2) The Rev. Canon Daniel Evans's book, Hymnan a Thonau, London, Novelle, 1865, 504 H.; and the (3) Emynydd by the late Rev. T. Williams, Rector of St. George, dedicated to the Lord Bishop of St. Asaph.

These three books contain many of the some hymns, being selections from the works of Williams of Pantycelyn, Morgan Rhys, Anu Griffithe, Rev. E. Evans, and translations from English collections. These hymns as yet belong to no party in the Church, but are hymns that may be sung by all. Complaints are made by some clergymen that many of the hymns are of too subjective a cast, and that they should be replaced by hymns more objective in character, and there is also a demand for more Sacramental Hymns. There is now [1886] in course of preparation, by the Rev. Elis Roberts, Vicar of Llangwn; and the Rev. W. G. Thomas, Vicar of St. Assph, a new hymnal which is intended, in accordance with the Bishop of St. Asaph's desire, to be a good and acceptable hymnal for the use of the Church in Wales.

ii. Calvinistic Methodists.

1. During the latter part of the eighteenth century a complete change came over the country. The cold negligent spirit which had characterised the first half, disappeared, the people were shaken from a long deep sleep, and with the revival came a love for hymns and spiritual songs. The Methodist revival is a starting point from which has been unfolded a rich and pure literature that will bear comparison with anything of the same nature produced by the most cultured nations. Foremost in the rank of religious poets stands the Rev. W. Williams (b. 1717, d. 1791) of Pantycelyn. He was a most prolific writer. It is a matter of history that his sacred songs and hymns did more than anything else to arouse the people and create a taste for reading in all parts of Wales. The extensive circulation and the universal reception given to his hymns published at different times between the years 1744 and 1758, must lead us to believe that they carried a mighty influence, and were a great factor in the education of the people of Wales. People who could not themselves read soon learnt the liymns, and thousands of people knew a great many of them by heart. All his works appeared in one volume in 1753, and contained upwards of 800 hymns. They are still in general use in the Established Church, and among the different denominations.

 Morgan Rhys, of Llanfynydd (d. 1776), worked well to build up Welsh hymnody. There are about two hundred of his hymns now extant. Many of them are the favourite hymns of Welsh congregations. The follow-

"O agor fy llygaid i weled"
"Dyma Geidwad i'r coiledig"
"O garlad, o garlad, aurieldrol ei fraint," &c., have found their way into every collection of hymns by Churchmen and Nonconformists. He was a contemporary of Williams of Pantycelyn, and belonged to the same religious body. 3. The Rev. David Morris, David Charles, and Thomas Charles, have contributed to the hymnology of Wales. The well-known hymn, "O fryniau Caersalem ceir gweled," by the Rev. D. Charles, of Caermarthen, is to be found in all Welsh hymnals. The Rev. Thomas Charles, of Bala, the eminent divine, and one of the founders of the British and Foreign Bible Society, and organizer of the Sunday School as it now exists in Wales, has left behind him only one hymn, but of such a beautiful character as to make Welsh people wish he had done more in that direction. This hymn is in the Calvinistic Hymn-book, now in use among that body throughout the country. It begins, "Dyfais fawr trag wyddol guriad." In that book it is divided into two parts with five verses in each part. The Rev. D. Charles, jun., is the translator of "Jornsalem, my happy home," as "O Salem, fy anwyl gartrefic."

4. The Calvinistic Hymn-book that we have just referred to, was published by the authority of the General Assembly of the Calvinistic Methodists, and is perhaps the most perfect hymnal in Wales. It is the only hymn-book used among the congregations of that body throughout the Principality. A list of the authors from whose works the hymne are selected is given in the beginning of the book, and the number of authors is over fifty, but by far the greatest number of hymns is taken from W. Williams of Pantycelyn. The book was prepared by a committee appointed by the General Assembly, and bears the date of

iii. Congregational.

1. One of the first editions of hymns, if not the first over published, for the Congregationalists in Wales, was by the Rev. T. Baddy, in 1703, about 14 years before Williams of Pantycelyn was born, and about 82 years after the appearance of Archdescon Prys's Psalms. Baddy published an edition of hymns under the title of Sucramental Hymns, and also a translation of Thomas Doolittle's Christian's Passover, to which were added six hymns to be sung after receiving Holy Communion.

2. In the year 1714, the Rev. D. Lewis, Newport, published Heavenly Songs and Spiritual Hymns. Nothing is known of him beyond the fact that he was a minister of the gospel in Bouth Wales.

3. In 1742, the Rev. Herbert Jenkins issued his Hymnau Duwiol. Mr. Jenkins was a minister at Maidstone, where he d. in 1772, after a ministry of more than 24 years.

4. David Jenes, of Caio, is known as the translator of Dr. Watts's works. He published his translation of Watte's Pealms in 1753, and soon afterwards a translation of Watte's Divine Songe.

5. The Rev. Ioan Thomas, of Rhaisdr, published many editions of hymns between the years 1776 and 1786, under the titles of Caniadau Sion, and Hymnau yn perthyn i'r Drysorfa Euraidd (or, "Hynns relating to the Golden Treasury" [a Magazine]). There are extant about 187 of his hymns, many of which are still used in many congregations.

6. The Rev. Thomas Williams (q.v.), of Bethesda'r Frô, was a prolific hymn-writer. He published his first collection of hymns in 1812. They became very popular among the Independents, and other denominations in Wales.

- 7. The Congregationalists have had several collections of hymns since the publication of Watte's Hymns, &c. In 1840, Mr. Even Ed-wards, of Mold, brought out a collection, and Dr. Rees published the Perganiedydd (or, "The Sweet Singer") in 1847. Another collection by the Rev. E. Griffiths, of Swanses, appeared in 1857; and Caledfryn's Collection, in 1861. Their best collection is Aberth Moliant, pub. in Liverpool (?), chief ed. Dr. W. Rees
- 8. The collection known as S. R., published
- in 1841, is still used by some congregations.

  9. The collection of hymns and tunes in general use among the Congregationalists at present, is Jones & Stephens, published in 1868; and a 2nd ed. by Stephens in 1869. This last book contains the principal hymns of Williams of Pantycelyn; D. Jones, of Caio, D. Williams, Ann Griffiths, Edward Jones, B. Francis, and others.

iv. Baptiets.

1. The first collection of hymns belonging to the Baptist denomination in Walcz, was by the Rev. Joseph Harris [Gomer], 1821, and this was their only book for many years. The hymns it contained were principally selections. but it contained also many new hymns by "Gomer" himself and his talented son, Ieuan Ddu, also by the Rev. Benjamin Francis, Titus Lewis, and D. Saunders. It contained about 800 hymns.

2. Later the Rev. Daniel Jones, of Liverpool, made a large collection which was adopted by several congregations, but although in contained many excellent hymns, new and old, it never reached a second edition. After that, the Rev. Robert Jones, Llandlyfni, issued a collection containing new hymns by himself and others. This obtained considerable patrouage among the churches in North Wales, and is still in use in some congregations.

3. In the year 1867 another collection made its appearance, compiled by the late Rev. Lewis Jones, of Pwllheli, containing about 1200 hymns. This is extensively used in both

South and North Wales.

4. There are also several local hymn-books in use in a few churches in South Wales. In some cases a collection is confined to one congregation.

- 5. Lately, however, another candidate has made its appearance, and has secured a very large circulation. It is called *Llawlyir Mol*iant (or, "The Hand-book of Praise was prepared by a committee appointed by the Carnaryon Association, and first published in 1881. It contains 422 hymns and 125 tunes. Between 30,000 and 40,000 copies of this book have been sold.
- 6. A new edition of J. Harris's (Gomer's) book was published, but arranged differently from the first. "Gomer's" arrangement was topical or doctrinal, but the arrangement of this edition is metrical.

v. Wesleyan Methodists.

1. The Weslevan Body has a large collection of hymns from different sources which was pub. at Llanidices in 1846. It contains 1040 hymns. This hymnal was prepared by persons appointed by the Synod. The work is also recommended by two Chief Ministers from North Wales, and two from South Wales. Some of the hymns are very good, Several of the hymns are by Williams, of Pantycelyn (with alterations), and other Welsh hymn-writers. Many of the Wesleys' hymns are translated in this hymnal, and with other translations from the English have become favourite hymns among the congregations of the Welsh Wesleyans.

vi. Unitariane.

The Welsh Unitarians, like their brethren in England, developed in the 18th cent. chiefly out of the old Presbyterian congregations; passing through the same stages of Arminian and Arian doctrine. [Cf. Valt. Hymnody.]

1. The first book to be used in their congregations appears to have been the trans-lation of Watts's Psolms, by David Jones, of Caio, 1758.

2. In 1796 Rev. Josiah Rees, of Gellionen, pub. a collection of bymns, and the year following a selection from Watts's Pacims. The bulk of these are D. Jones's translations, but hymns are added from other authors, the editor himself, his father, Owen Rees, Sol. Harris, of Swanses, who contributed a trans-lation of Addison's "Spacious firmament," Jenkin Jones, D. Lloyd, David Davis, &c. A new ed. was pub, in 1834 with considerable additions.

3. The great hymn-writer of the Unitarians is Edward Williams (Iolo Morgamog), (1745-1826). He pub in 1812 a collection of 204 original Paalms, and in 1834 his son brought out a further collection, 211 in number. There was a new ed. 1857. Iolo has also left a collection of about 2000 hymns in Ms.,

besides those published.
4. In 1857, Rev. John Jones, of Aberdare, brought out a collection of hymns, 208 being by Edward Williams, 68 by Thomas Evans, and some by the editor and his brother Roes Jones.

5. But this and other earlier collections are now superseded in congregational use by the collection of his son, Rev. B. J. Jones, minister at Aberdare.

"Engends a Fuel a Gueddi; or, Hymns of Prates and Prayer," collected by R. J. Jones, Aberdir. Jen-kin Hawell, Printer, 1878. Seconded, 1883.

This collection of 379 hymns is excellent, and is modelled on the plan of Dr. Martineau's Hymne of Praise and Prayer. It contains hymns from many sources, including translanymms from many sources, including translations of several in C. U. 'The translations of Dr. Newman's hymn, "Lead, kindly light"; "Nearer, my God, to Thee," and of "For ever with the Lord," are specially good. The names of the 64 authors from whom the hymns are taken, and a very useful glossary, form a part of the book. The bulk of the hymns are by Edward Williams. Other authors of original hymns are Thomas Evans, Owen Reca, Josiah Rees, Jenkin Jones, David Davis, Rees Jones (Amnon), William Thomas, the Editor, &c. In style, order and perspicuity, it is second to no book of the kind ever published in Wales.

vii. General Survey.—Passing from the Collections to the Hymns, we find that Welsh hymnody is, to a great extent, a home production, and is almost, but not entirely, confined to home use. There are a dozen or two of Welsh hymns which have become the favourite hymns of English congregations, most of which are by Williams of Pantycelyn. We give the first lines in Welsh and English. Some were composed in English, and have not been translated into Welsh, such as:-

(i) "Hark! the voice of my beloved."
(2) "Jesus, lasd us with Thy power."
(3) "O for a strong foundation" (Author unknown).
(4) "Jesus is all my hope."

The last is one of Williams's English hymns. The following Welsh and English hymns are also by Williams :-

(5) "Inso, Iesu, 'rwyt ti'n ddigon." "Jenus, Thou art all-sufferent."

- (6) " Arglwydd, arwein trwy'r anialwch," " Guide me, O Thou Great Jekowak,"
- (7) "O lachawdwr pechaduriaid."
  " Great Redeemer, friend of sinners."
- (8) "Good babell yn ngwlad Gosen." "Fix, O Lord, a tent in Gothen."
- (*) " Pa'm y caiff bwystilled theibus."
  " Why should cruel beasts be suffered."
- (10) " Dros y bryniau tywyll ziwliog."
  " O'er the gloomy hills of darkness."

This last hymn is famous in the Missionary fields, and has been translated into many languages. In the Cashmere districts, in India, most successful Mission work is carried on under the care of Wetsh Calvinistic Methodist Missionaries. The Khassi Hymnal, 1877, consists of 242 hymns, some original, but mostly translations from the latest collection of the Welsh Calvinistic Methodists, is the official hymn-book of the Mission.

Ewald says that Hebrew poetry has a simplicity and transparency that can scarcely be found anywhere else, and a natural sublimity that knows but little of fixed forms of art: that even when art comes into play, it ever remains unconscious and careless of it. Compared with the poetry of other nations and ancient peoples, it appears to belong to a simple and child-like age of mankind, overflowing with an internal fulness and grace that troubles itself but little with external ornament and nice artistic law. Much of this is applicable to Welsh religious poetry. In spirit, character, figures of speech, and emotional language, it may be aptly compared with the Hebrew. Williams of Pantycelyn, Morgan Rhys, D. Williams, and Glangeirionydd, and Islwyn, especially turned to the world of nature, at-tentively regarded it and used it; and entered into deep fellowship with it in its various phases, not for itself alone, but (like the Hebrew prophet), on account of its relation to their own souls. Nature to them spoke the language of heaven; all forces—animal, vegetable, and physical, attracted them to God. Williams of Pantycelyn, in some of his hymns, makes the most beautiful use of the floral world, as well as of the physical. Nothing could excel the faithfulness to nature, the vividness and the graphic powers of these hymna :-

"Planna'r egwyddorion hyny, Yn fy nghalon bob yr un, Ag sydd megle peraroglau Yn dy natur di hun; Biodan hyfryd, so. Fo'n disgleirio dae'r a nan. Rwyf yn card'r paretinion At y creigiou earth y ay, r eu traed ac ar eu dwylaw 'N celsio dringo i fyny fry , Ar fy neulin, Minau ddof I ben y bryn."

Williams's true and intense admiration of the beauties of nature, and his reverence for its sublimities, may be seen in the use he made of it to express his own experience, which indeed has been the experience of humanity in all ages of the world.

Next to Williams of Pantycelyn comes another Williams, almost his equal as a poet-David Williams, of Llanbedr-y-Fr6. Many of his hymns are popular, and some of them are very beautiful. Morgan Rhys, as a hymn-writer, stands almost abreast with those we have named. Several of his hymna have a sacred interest for thousands of Welshmen; and many have a grand martial sound which is most inspiriting. T. Williams, Betheada'r-Frô, is another writer of great merit; often in his hymns we have the utterances of penitence and prayer, the breathings of a weary pigrim, and the "yearning plaintive music of earth's sadder minstrelsy," followed by jubilant strains and peals of victory, as in:—

" Maa pren wedi 'i gael Mewn dyrys anial dir, Yn plygu 'i frig, yn cymheli pawb I fwyta 'i firwythau pur."

Welsh hymn-writers, in common with others, differ in style, but meet on the wide field of subjects suggested by the Gospel. Their works are rich in narrative and scriptural allusion, in praises for redemption, in utterances of penitence and self-abasement, and in vivid description of the Christian warfare. Williams of Pantycelyn surpasses all in the expression of the yearnings of the heavenly home-sickness; in devout tenderness, often rising into rapture, wherewith his faith clasps the crucified Saviour, when wrapt in contemplation of the glory of Jesus as the Head of the Church militant and triumphant; and also in the doubt and maturity of his theological thoughts. [See Various.]

Wenn mein Stündlein fürhanden ist. N. Herman. [For the Dying.] This beautiful hymn, probably the linest of its author, appeared in his Historien von der Sindfudt, &c., Wittenberg, 1562, in 4 st. of 7 l., entitled, "A spiritual song, in which supplication is made for a happy flual hour, on the saying of Augustine:—

'Turbabor, sed non perturbabor, Quia valnerum Christi recordabor.'"

Thence in Wachernagel, iii. p. 1211, and in Ledderhose's ed of Herman, p. 104. Wachernagel also gives the hymn as lengthened in the Bonn G. B., 1575, to 11 et., being the above 4, the 5 st of Herman's hymn, "Da nun Elias seinen Lauft," and 2 st. not by Herman, as v. and x. This st. v. (which Mützell, No. 247, quetes from Dret schine geistliche Lieder, Cöln, 1574), as altered in the Leipzig G. B., 1592, is generally attached to Herman's original 4 st., as in the Unv. L. S., 1851, No. 848, in 5 st. Tr. as:—

1. When Thou shalt close my fleeting day. A good tr. of st. i.-iti., by A. T. Russell, as No. 247 in his Ps. & Hys., 1851. In Koncedy, 1863, it begins, "When death shall close our fleeting day," and this form is in Dr. Thomas's Augustine H. Bk., 1866, and the Ibrax Hyl., 1871.

2. Mine hour appointed is at hand. A full and very good tr. by R. Massle, contributed as No. 482 to the 1857 ed. of Mercer's C. P. & H. Bk. (Ox. ed., 1864, No. 385), and thence in his Lyra Domestica, 1864, p. 134. Repeated in the Wos. H. Bk., 1875, and the Moravian H. Bk., 1886.

3. When my last hour is close at hand, My last sad, &c. A full and very good tr. by Edgar Alfred Bowring, made at request of the Queen for use at the funeral of the Prince Consort in St. George's Chapel, Windsor, Dec. 23, 1861, and printed as the first of the Two Chorales then sung. St. iv., v., beginning "I shall not in the grave remain," are set to music and were sung. The full tr. is printed, without music, between the two chorales. The second chorale is. "To Thee, O Lord, I yield my spirit" (p. 301, il.) In full in the H. Bk. for St. Aidan's College, 18.14, and omitting st. iii., in Adam's Ch. Pastorals, 1864, the Luth. Ch. Bk., 1868, and others. St. iv., v. beginning "I shall not in the grave remain," are given as a separate hymn in Kennedy, 1863.

4. When my appointed hour is come To pass from earth, &c. A good and full tr. in the Eng. Presb. Ps. & Hys., 1867, No. 67; and repeated in Dale's Eng. H. Bk., 1874, and C. N. Hall's Christ Ch. Hyd., 1876. St. iv., v. are from the Bowring version, No. 3.

5. When my last hear is close at hand, And I must, &c. A good and full tr. by Miss Winkworth, in her C. B. for England, 1863, No. 193, rewritten and improved in her Christian Singers, 1869, p. 143. In the Ohio Luth. Hyl., 1880.

Other tre. are: (1) "Jesus, by Thy Almighty pow'r," as No. 832 in the Moravian H. Bk., 1789 (1849, No. 1201). (2) "When now the soleran hour is nigh," by Dr. H. Mill., 1885, p. 343. (3) "When death arrives, and I must go," by Dr. G. Walker, 1860, p. 104. [J. M.]

Werde munter, mein Gemiithe, Und ihr Sinnen geht herfür. J. Rist. [Evening.] Probably Bist's finest hymn. 1st pub. in the "Dritte Zehen" of his Himlische Lieder, Lüneburg, 1642, p. 45, in 12 st. of 3 l., entitled, "A Christian Evening Hymn, with which to commit onceelf to the protection of the Most High." Included in Crüger's Prazis, 1656, No. 26, and most later hymn-books, and in the Unv. L. S., 1851, No. 537. The sixth stanza has been a special favourite in Germany, and was (so Koch, viii. 191) repeated in their last moments by Johann Georg, Duke of Mecklenburg, 1075, and Moritz Wilhelm, Duke of Sachse-Zeitz, 1718. Tr. as:—

1. Rouse thy saif my Soul and gather. In full, by J. C. Jacobi, in his Psalmodia Garmanica, 1722, p. 113. In his ed., 1732, p. 176, slightly altered, and thence as No. 480, in pt. i. of the Moravian H. Bk., 1754. In the Moravian H. Bk., 1754. In the Moravian H. Bk., 1769, a considerably altered form of st. vii., ix., v., beginning, "Author of the whole Creation," was included as No. 762 (1886, No. 1184), and this passed into J. Montgomery's Christian Psulmist, 1825, J. A. Latrobe's Coll., 1841, and P. Maurice's Chord H. Bk., 1861.

2. Sink not yet, my soul, to slumber. A very good tr., emitting st. viii., ix., by Miss Winkworth, in her Lyra Ger., 2nd Ser., 1838, p. 78. From this st. i.—iv., xii., were repeated in Ps. & Hys., Bedford, 1859; i.—iii., in the Eng. Presb. Ps. & Hys., 1867; and i., ii., x., xii., in the Ohio Lath. Hyl., 1880. Other centos are:—

Father, merciful and holy (st. ii.), in Accepted, 1883, and Dr. Thomas's Augustine H. Bk., 1898, No. 174.
 Have I, Lord, from Thee departed (st. vi.), in Dr. Thomas's Augustine H. Bk., 1866, No. 504.

In her C. B. for England, No. 167 (set to the beautiful melody of 1642, by J. Schop), Miss Winkworth omitted the trs. of st. iii., v., xi.

3. How, awake, my soul, my senses. A tr. of st. i., v., vii., xii., contributed by Miss Borthwick to Dr. Pagenstecher's Coll., 1864, No. 180.

Other trs. are: (1) "Thou, my Soul, thy Thoughts be raising!" by H. J. Buckoll, 1844, p. 75. (2) "Be thou glad, my immost being," by N. L. Frukkingham, 1870, p. 169.

grave remain," are set to music and were sung. The full tr. is printed, without music, between the two chorales. The second chorale is, "To Adapted to the Circumstances of Public Worship, &c., 1782, No. 26, in 7 st. of 4 i., and headed, "Thro' much tribulation we must enter the kingdom of God: Acts xiv. 22." In Conder's Cong. H. Ble., 1836, st. i.-iii. are given as, "As strangers here below." This form has been repeated in later hymnals. [J. J.]

Wesley Family, The.—This very remarkable family is almost as interesting from the hymnologist's as from the Church historian's point of view. The father and his three sons all wrote hymns which are suited for public worship, while one of the daughters, Mehetabel, though not strictly speaking a hymn-writer, wrote poetry of a religious tendency, which sometimes rises to a higher level than that which her father or any of her brothers with the possible exception of Charles—ever reached. The well-known history of the Wesleys at Epworth gives us a vivid picture of the good side of the life of a clergyman's family in the early part of the eighteenth century. Though the admirable wife and mother was unquestionably the central figure of the group, and perhaps the ruling spirit in the household, yet from the stand-point of this work, the futher holds the more prominent place, because it was he and not Mrs. Wesley who both set the example of writing poetry himself, and transmitted the taste to his children. To him also, no less than to Mrs. Wesley, may be traced some of the characteristics which are more or less common to all the family. The chief of these characteristics were clear, vigorous, common-sense, a high standard of faith and morals, an acuteness of intellect sharpened to the finest possible point by education, a certain manliness and robustness of character, which is as conspicuous in the females as in the males, and an outspokenness and even brusqueness of manner which, did we not know the affectionate relationship which always subsisted between all the members, we might have expected to have led to ruptures between them. Owing to the great reputation which John Wesley has attained, and the vast numbers of those who revere him as their spiritual leader, the history of the Wesley family is tolerably familiar to most people, and it will therefore be sufficient in this article to touch briefly upon the leading events in the lives of those members of it who were writers of sacred poetry.

i. Samuel Wesley, M.A., the elder, was b. in 1662 at Whitchurch in Dorsetshire, of which parish his father, John Wesley, was Vicar until the Act of Uniformity caused him to resign his living. He was educated at a Dis-senting academy by a Mr. Morton, and was designed for the Nonconformist Ministry. But having been, on account of his talents, selected as a champion to defend the dissenters against some severe invectives, and having commenced a course of controversial reading for this purpose, he was led by his studies to embrace the opposite views, and became, and continued through life, a pronounced churchman. With the impetuosity which was a family trait, he set forth on foot to Oxford, and entered him-self at Exeter College. In spite of his straitened means, he managed to keep his

He then received Holy Orders and took a curacy of £28 a year. Having held this curacy for a year, he obtained a naval chaplainey, and then took snother cursey in London. About the year 1690 he married Susanna, daughter of Dr. Annesiey, a famous Nonconformist minister, and a scion of the noble house of Anglesey. The wife, like the husband, had been brought up as a dissenter, but at the early age of 13 she had come over to the Church of England, and was afterwards a Jacobite in politice. In 1693 Mr. Wesley was presented to the living of South Ormsby in Lincolnshire. He was also chaplain to the Marquis of Normanby, afterwards Duke of Buckingham. In 1697 he was appointed by the Crown to the Rectory of Epworth, and there he spent the remainder of his life, nearly forty years. The first part of his residence at Epworth was marked by a series of troubles arising partly from his pecuniary embarrassments, which increased with his increasing family, partly from the animosity of his parishioners, who resented the part which he felt it his duty to take, as a staunch churchman, in politics, and partly from unfortunate accidents. These troubles reached their climax in 1705, when he was thrown into Lincoln gaol for debt. They are graphically described by his own pen.

"I have been thrown behind," to writes to his good friends at Oxford, "by a series of misfortunes. My Parsonage Barn was blown down ers I had recovered the Taking my Living; My House great part of it burnt down about 2 years since. My Flax, great part of my Income now in my own Hands, I doubt wilfully fird and burnt in ye night, whilst I was hat in London. My Income sunk about one half by the tow price of Grain and my credit lost by the taking away my Regiment. I was brought to Lincoin Castle June 23rd last past. About 3 weeks since my very makind Reople, hinking they had not yet done enough, have in yenight stabbed my 3 cows, we were a great part of my poor Numerous Family's Subsistence,—For we's God forgive them."

Some points in this letter require explana-tion. When he speaks of being in London, he means on Convocation business; for he was elected Proctor for the Diocese, and in one of his absences Mrs. Wesley instituted those religious meetings at the Rectory which are thought by some to have been the pre-cursors of the Wesleyan Society Meetings, "His Regiment" was a Chaplaincy in the army which had been given him in reward for a poem in praise of the Duke of Marl-borough. The last and worst of the many fires through which he suffered was in 1709, when the rectory was entirely burnt down, and the present house erected in its place, The latter part of his time at Epworth was more free from troubles. He met with many generous friends who enabled him to emerge from his pecuniary difficulties, the firmest and most constant of these friends being the admirable Archbishop of York, Dr. John Sharp; his sons grew up to be a comfort and a credit to him; his income was slightly increased by the addition of the neighbouring living of Wroot; and his parishioners gradually became more tractable. The annoyance caused by the famous Epworth Ghost can scarcely be reckoned among his serious troubles. In 1731 he met with an accident which probably hastened his end, and in 1785 he passed away and was buried in Epworth terms and take his degrees at the University. | churchyard, leaving behind him the character of an excellent parish pricet, a good husband t in the Dancind. But all that he wrote was in and father, and a man of very considerable abilities and attainments.

Mr. Wesley was a somewhat voluminous writer. His first publication was a volume of poems buring the unpromising, not to say repulsive, little of Raggett. It appeared in 1885. In 1691 he became the clerical corpersonnes in 1992. In 1992 the Decame the clerical correspondent to the Attention Garacte (afterwards Mercury) pub. by his brother-in-law, John Dunton. In 1893 appeared an Heroic Form on the Life of Our Bessed Lord and Savious Jesus Christ. This was decleated to Queen Mary, and led to his appointment to the living of Epwarth. In 1895 be pub. Hegies on Queen Mary and Archbishop Tillotson; and in 1898 A Sermon prenched before the Society for the Heformation of Manneys. The English are rather fulsome and in bad tasts according to the standard of the present day; but should be remembered that high-flown panegyris were the fashion of the age. The Sermon is a spirited and energetic defence of the "Societies," which were regarded, with summ numbicion by many high-churchwen. regarded with some snaption by many high-churchmen, but of which Mr. Wesley, like his friend Robert Nelson, was a warm supporter. In 1700 he published The Pions was a warm supporter. In 1700 be punchased The Func-communicant rightly prepared; or a Discourse con-cerning the Blessel Sacrament, de., With Fragers and Bysans incled to the steered parts of that holy office. To which is added A short Discourse of Baptism. In this work appeared his version of the "Great Halle!" or "Paschal Hymn." In 1704 he pub. The Bistory of In 1704 he pub. The Bistory of the Old and New Testaments in Verse, in three volum the Old and New Taxaments in Verse, in three volumes, which he dedicated to Queen Anne. This, Illin his Life of Christ, was Mustrated with numerous and costly engravings. In 1705 he pub, a poem of nearly 600 lines on the "Battle of Blenheim," entitled Nariborough, or The Pate of Europe. For this he was rewarded with the Chaplaincy of Colonel Lepell's regiment, but his political exemies at Epworth soon succeeded in getting him deprived of this office. In 1707 appeared A Reply to Mr. Pataer's Visitication of the Learning, Loyalty, Morals, and most Christian Schaviour of the Dissenter towards the Chareh of England. This originated in Morals, and most Christian Behaviour of the Dissenters towards the Church of England. This originated in the publication, without his consent or knowledge, of a Letter he wrote to a friend Concerning the Education of the Dissenters in their Prisone Academies. The letter was attacked anonymously and defended by Mr. Wesley in a pamphiet (1704). The pemphiet was answered by Mr. Palmer. After this, Mr. Wesley's pen seems to have rested for some time; but during the last ten years his life he was engaged in his elaborate Dissertation on the Book of Feb., the incessant labours upon which are said to have hastened his end. This work was dedicated to Queen Carolline, the wife of George 11., and presented to her by John Wesley some months after the author's destile.

Thus Samuel Wesley had the honour of dedicating works to three Queens. There is yet one more poem attributed to Mr. Wesley, but it seems very doubtful whether he was the real, or at any rate, the sole author. It is entitled Expolis' Hymn to the Creator, and is a sort of Christian Pindaric Ode of considerable length, written in the classical style affected in the 18th century. Dr. Adam Clarke tells us that the 218, is partly in the hand-writing of Mehetabel Wosley; and internal evidence certainly points to her as the chief author; for it bears traces of a far more delicate and elogant touch than Mr. Wesley ever showed that he possessed; while Mehetabel's other writings are fully equal, if not superior, to it. In fact, it must be confessed that the bulk of Mr. Wesley's poetical writings are tedious and pressic. He had the disadvantage of being over-praised at the outset, and of winning a reputation which he was unable to sustain. Nahum Tate, the Laurente, and others lauded his Heroic Poem in absurdly extravagant terms; Ralph Thoresby refers to him as "that noted poet Mr. Wesley," and Thomas Hearne alludes to him in similar terms. The reaction was sure to come, and his poetry began to be laughed at. Swift and Pope thought very elightly of it, and he appears to have narrowly escaped being pilloried | great uncle on the maternal side.

the service of virtue and religion; to use the words of his relative, Thomas Fuller,* he " had drunk more of Jordan than of Helicon." Perhaps if he had written less, and spent more time in claborating what he did write, he might have been more successful; but, after all, the "Divine afflatus" must have been wanting; and the best service which he rendered to sacred poetry was in being father of his children.

ii. Samuel Wesley, M.A., the younger, was the eldest child of Samuel and Susanna Wesley, and was born in or near London in 1691. He received his early education from his mother, who always took a special interest in him as her first-born. In 1704 he went to West-minster School, where he was elected King's Scholar in 1707. Westminster had, under the mastership of Dr. Busby for 55 years, attained the highest reputation for scholarship, and Samuel Wesley, as a classical scholar, was not unworthy of his school. In 1709, Dr. Spratt, Bishop of Rochester, patronised the young scholar, and frequently invited him to Bromley. In 1711 he went with a Westminster studentship to Christ Church, Oxford, and having taken his degree, returned to Westminster as an Usber. He then received Holy Orders and became an intimate friend of Bishop Atterbury, who was then Dean of Westminster. His intimacy with this prelate was a bar to his advancement, and he was bitterly disappointed at not being appointed under-master at Westminster when that post was vacant, But he was faithful to his friend in his adversity, and the banished preinte warmly appreciated his attachment. In 1782 he was invited, without solicitation, to accept the head-moster-ship of the Free School at Tiverton, and here he spent the remainder of his life. He strongly disapproved of John and Charles Wesley's proceedings; but though the brothers expressed their opinions to one another with characteristic frankness, the disagreement did not cause any interruption in the friendly relations between them. Samuel Wesley was universally acknowledged to be an honest, conscientious and deeply religious man. Ho was a most uncompromising High Churchman both in the political and the theological sense of that term; and there is no doubt that he was the mainstay of the Weeley family at Epworth. His kindness to his father and mother was unbounded, and he acted like a father to his younger brothers and sisters. He also took a great interest in works of charity, and was one of the first promoters of the Westminster Infirmary. He died at Tiverton in the 49th year of his age, Nov. 6, 1739. His epitaph in Tiverton Churchyard does not exaggerate his merits, when it describes him as"a man for his uncommon wit and learning, For the "a man for his uncommon wit and learning, For the benevolence of his temper, and simplicity of manner, Deservedly loved and esteemed by all: An excellent Preacher; But whose best sermon Was the constant example of an edifying life: So continually and scalously employed In acts of beneficence and churity, That he truly followed His bleesed Master's example in going about doing good; of such scruptions integrity, That he declined occasions of advancement in the world,

Through fear of being involved in dangerous compliances; And avoided the usual ways to preferment as studiously as many others seek them."

Samuel Wesley pub. in 1736 A Collection of Poens on several occasions, some of which are full of a rather coarse humour, but all of a good moral and religious tendency. This n good moral and religious condesor. This work was reprinted in 1743, and again by W. Nichols in 1862. Dr. Adam Clarke specifies eight hymns of S. Wesley's composition which were in use among the Methodists of that time (1823). The Wesleyan Hymn-book of the present day contains five, the best-known of which is "The Lord of Sabbath let us His other writings are scarcely of praise." sufficient importance to claim a notice in this brief sketch.

iii. Jehn Wesley, N.A. The life of the next brother is, or easily might be, so familiar to every one in its every detail that it will suffice to give the barest outline of his career. John Wesley was b. at Epworth Rectory in 1703, and, like the rest of the family, received his early education from his mother. He narrowly escaped perishing in the fire which destroyed the rectory house in 1709, and his deliverance made a life-long impression upon him. In 1714 he was nominated on the foundation of Charterhouse by his father's patron, the Duke of Buckingham, and remained at that school until 1720, when he went up, with a scholar-ship, from Charterhouse to Christ Church, Oxford. Having taken his degree, he received Holy Orders from the Bishop of Oxford (Dr. Potter) in 1725. In 1726 he was elected Fellow of Lincoln College, and remained at Oxford until 1727, when he returned into Lincolnshire to assist his father as curate at Epworth and Wroot. In 1729 he was summoned back to Oxford by his firm friend, Dr. Morley, Rector of Lincoln, to assist in the College tuition. There he found already established the little band of "Oxford Methodists" who immediately placed themselves under his direction. In 1735 he went, as a Missionary of the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel, to Georgia, where a new colony had been founded under the governorship of General Oglethorpe. On his voyage out he was deeply impressed with the piety and Christian courage of some German fellow-travellers, Moraviana. During his short ministry in Georgia he met with many dis-couragements, and returned home saddened and dissatisfied both with himself and his work; but in London he again fell in with the Moravians, especially with Peter Böhler: and one memorable night (May 24, 1738) he went to a meeting in Aldersgate Street, where some one was reading Luther's preface to the Epistle to the Romens. There, "About a quarter before nine, while he was describing the change which God works in the heart through faith in Christ, I felt my heart strangely warmed. I felt I did trust in Christ, Christ alone, for salvation; and an assurance was given me, that He had taken away my sins, even mine, and saved me from the law of sin and death." From that moment his future course was sealed; and for more than half a century he laboured, through evil report and good report, to spread what he believed to be the everlast-more sermons, publishing more books of a practical sort, and making more converts than any man of his day, or perhaps of any day, and dying at last, March 2, 1791, in harness,

In this sketch we are only concerned with one of the many phases of his infinitely varied life; but that by no means the least impor-tant phase. The popular conception of the division of labour between the two brothers in the Revival, is that John was the preacher, and Charles the hymn-writer. But this is not strictly accurate. On the one hand Charles was also a great preacher, second only to his brother and George Whitefield in the effects which he produced. On the other hand, John by no means relegated to Charles the exclusive task of supplying the people with their hymns. When he speaks of the Evangeliatic work, his general expression is, "My brother and I;" and when he speaks of the hymns, it is still, "My brother and I." John Wesley was not the sort of man to depute any part of his work entirely to another; and this part was, in his opinion, one of vital importance. With that wonderful instinct for gauging the popular mind, which was one element in his success, he saw at once that hymns might be utilized, not only for raising the devotion, but also for instructing, and establishing the foith of his disciples. He intended the hymns to be not merely a constituent part of public worship. but also a kind of creed in verse. They were to be "a body of experimental and practical divinity." "In what other publication," ho saks in his Preface to the Wes. H. Bk., 1780 (Preface, Oct. 20, 1779), "have you so distinct and full an account of Scriptural Christianity; such a declaration of the heights and depths of religion, speculative and practical; so strong cautions against the most plausible errors, particularly those now most prevalent; and so clear directions for making your calling and election sure; for perfecting holiness in the fear of God?" The part which he actually took in writing the hymns, it is not easy to ascertain; but it is certain that more than thirty translations from the German, French and Sponish (chiefly from the German) were exclusively his; and there are some original hymns, admittedly his composition, which are not unworthy to stand by the side of his brother's. His translations from the German especially have had a wide circulation. Although somewhat free as translations they embody the fire and energy of the originals. (For further information see the article on Methodist Hymaody.)

iv. Charles Wesley, M.A. But, after all, it was Charles Wesley who was the great hymnwriter of the Wesley family,-perhaps, taking quantity and quality into consideration, the great hymn-writer of all ages. Charles Wesley was the youngest son and 18th child of Samuel and Susanna Wesley, and was b. at Epworth Rectory, Der. 18, 1707. In 1716 he went to Westminster School, being provided with a home and board by his elder brother Samuel, then usher at the school, until 1721, when he was elected King's Beholar, and as such received his board and education free. While he was at Westminster, his father reing Gospel, travelling more miles, preaching | ceived a letter from a wealthy Irishman, asking him if he had a son named Charles, and if so offering to adopt him and make him his heir. The acceptance of the offer was left to Charles himself, who declined it. In 1726 Charles Wesley was elected to a Westminster studentship at Christ Church, Oxford, where he took his degree in 1729, and became a college tutor. In the early part of the same year his religious impressions were much deepened, and he became one of the first band of "Oxford Methodists." In 1735 he went with his brother John to Georgia, as secretary to General Ogiethorpe, having before he set out received Descon's and Priest's Orders on two successive Sundays. His stay in Georgia was very short; he returned to England in 1736, and in 1737 came under the influence of Count Zinzendorf and the Moraviana, especially of that remarkable man who had so large a share in moulding John Wesley's career, Peter Böhler, and also of a Mr. Bray, a brazier in Little Britain. On Whitsunday, 1737, he "found rest to his soul," and in 1738 he became curate to his friend, Mr. Stonehouse, Vicar of Islington, but the opposition of the churchwardens was so great that the Vicar consented that he "should preach in his church no more." Henceforth his work was identified with that of his brother John, and he became an indefatigable itinerant and flekt preacher. On April 8, 1749, he married Miss Sarah Gwynne. His marriage, unlike that of his brother John, was a most happy one; his wife was accustomed to accompany him on his evangelistic journeys, which were as frequent as ever until the year 1756, when he ceased to itinerate, and mainly devoted himself to the care of the Societies in London and Bristol. Bristol was his head-quarters until 1771, when he removed with his family to London, and, besides attending to the Societies, devoted himself much, as he had done in his youth, to the spiritual care of prisoners in Newgate. He had long been troubled about the relations of Methodism to the Church of England, and strongly dis-approved of his brother John's "ordinations." Wesley-like, he expressed his disapproval in the most outspoken fashion, but, as in the case of Samuel at an earlier period, the differences between the brothers never led to a breach of friendship. He d. in London, March 29, 1788, and was buried in Marylebone churchyard. His brother John was deeply grieved because he would not consent to be interred in the buris!ground of the City Boad Chapel, where he had prepared a grave for himself, but Charles said, "I have lived, and I die, in the Communion of the Church of England, and I will be buried in the yard of my parish church." Eight dergy-men of the Church of England bore his pall, He had a large family, four of whom survived him; three sons, who all became distinguished in the musical world, and one daughter, who inherited some of her father's poetical genius. The widow and orphans were treated with the greatest kindness and generosity by John Wesley.

As a hymn-writer Charles Wesley was unique. He is said to have written no less than 6500 hymns, and though, of course, in so wast a number some are of uniqual merit, it is perfectly marvellous how many there are which rise to the highest degree of excellence. His feelings on every occasion of importance, whether private or public, found their best expression in a hymn. His own conversion, his own marriage, the earthquake panic, the rumours of an invasion from France, the defeat of Prince Charles Edward at Cultoden, the Gordon riots, every Festival of the Christian Church, every doctrine of the Christian Faith, striking scenes in Scripture history, striking scenes which came within his own view, the deaths of friends as they passed away, one by one, before him, all furnished occasions for the exercise of his divine gift. Nor must we forget his hymns for little children, a branch of sacred poetry in which the mantle of Dr. Watts seems to have fallen upon him. It would be simply impossible within our space to enumerate even those of the hymns which have become really classical. The saying that a really good hymn is as rare an appearance as that of a comet is falsified by the work of Charles Wesley; for hymns, which are really good in every respect, flowed from his pen in quick succession, and death alone stopped the course of the perennial stream.

v. Mehetabel Wosley. Here, strictly speaking, the list of hymn-writers in the Wesley family ends; but the sketches would scarcely be complete without some mention of one who, if she did not write hymns, showed plainly that she could have done so with a success which might have rivalled Charles's own. Mehetabel Wealey had an exquisite poetic genius, which was cultivated by a careful study of the best models—Latin and Greek, as well as English, for she was an accomplished scholar. all the Wesleys, except Samuel and Charles, she was most unfortunate in her marriage; her husband, Mr. Wright, a plumber and glazier, was quite incapable of appreciating her refined mind, and, being a man of no principle, sought relief from society in which he must have felt uncomfortable in low company and pursuits. The neglected Hetty was most unhappy, but her very unhappiness lent a pathetic tenderness to her poetry, which is one of its chief charms. As her name is unknown among hymn-writers, one or two extracts from her poetry seem necessary to justify the mention of her in this connection at all. What glorious hymns might have been written by the author of the following exquisite lines!

A Mother's Address to her Dying Infant.

"Tender soffman ! infant mild!
Perfect, purest, brightest child!
Transient matre! besuleous clay!
Smiling worder of a day!
Ere the last convolute start
Rends thy unresisting heart,
Ere the long enduring swoon
Weigh thy precious eyelfed down;
An regard a mother's mean,
Anguish deeper than thy own.
Fairest eyes, whose dawning light
Late with rapture blest my sight,
Ere your orbe extinguish! d b:
Bend their trembling beams on me!
Drouping sweetness! verdant flower!
Bloomling, withering in an hour!
Ere thy gentle breast sustains
Latest, flerest, mortal pains,
Hear a suppliant! let me be Partner in thy destiny!
That where'er the fatal cloud
Must thy radiant templee shroud;

When deadly damps, impending now, Shall hover round thy deathed brow, Diffusive may their influence be, And with the blossom biast the tree!"

It is a great temptation to go on quoting this exquisite writer. Her "Lines written when in deep anguish of spirit"; her "Epitaph on herself"; "The Resignation; a penitant heart hoping in God" (which really might be used as a hymn); her "Farewell to the world"; her "Address to a Husband"—all maintain the same high level. But it must be remembered that Mehetabel Wealey was a hymn-writer only "in posse," not "in esse," and can therefore only claim a passing notice. լմ. Ֆ. Օ.Դ

The hymns by the Wesley family are naturally most extensively used in the Methodist Societies throughout the world. Usually they are given in the hymn-books with little or no alteration. The American Methodist Episcopalian Hymns of 1849 is an exception. The texts in that collection are more mutilated than in all other Methodist hymn-books put together. A large number of the Wesley bymns are annotated under their respective

It must be noted that the Wesleyan authorities, in the revised edition of their Coll. of Hys. for the Use of the People called Methodists, 1875, decline to distinguish the hymns which appeared in the joint works of the two brothers. They say :-

"The letter W. is affixed to those hymns which first appeared in publications for which the Wesleys were jointly responsible; in this case it cannot be determined with certainty to which of the two brothers a hymn should be ascribed." (Preface to the "Index to the Hymns.")

It has been the common practice, however for a hundred years or more to ascribe all translations from the German to John Westey, as he only of the two brothers knew that language; and to assign to Charles Wesley all the original hymns except such as are traceable to John Wesley through his Journals and other works. In this Dictionary this course has been adopted throughout,

Two works remain to be noted: (1) Collection of Psalms and Hymns, Charles Town. Printed by Lewis Timothy, 1737; and (2) The Postical Works of John and Charles Wesley: Reprinted from the Originals, with the last Poems of Charles Wesley not before Published.
Collected and Arranged by G. Osborn, D.D.
Lond.: Wesleyan-Methodist Conference Office,
1868-72. In 13 vols, The first of these works has been reprinted in facsimile from the only known copy now existing, together with a Preface by Dr. Osborn. Lond.: T.
Woolmer, 1882. The second contains facsimile reprints of the titles of the above Table of Titles; Introductions and notes by Dr. Osborn; the usual Index of first lines to vols. i.-viii.; and an Index to the first line of every verse (except the first in vols, i.-viii.), extending to 239 pages, the joint work of the Rev. Julius Brigg, then of Hawes, Yorkshire, and Mr. William Sugden, B.A., Head Master of the Weeleyan Normal Training Institution, Westminster. The accuracy and completeness of the latter Index merit the highest

In addition to a large number of hymna from the above works which are annotated elsewhere in this Dictionary (see Index of Authors and Translators) the following are also in C. U. The sublines indicate altered texts of or centos from the hymns:-

The translations by John Wesley from the German are given in vols, i. ii, of the Poetical Works, and number 32. They can be easily identified and their history, together with the history of the originals, traced through the Index of Authors and Translators.

The foregoing list of original hymns, in addition to those by the Wesleys annotated elsewhere, all of which are in C. U. at the present time, and most of which have formed an important part of Methedist hymnody for more than a hundred years, shows the ener-mous influence of the Wesleys on the English hymnody of the nineteenth century. West, Robert Athow, an editor and author, was b, in England in 1802. In 1843 he went to America, and was the official re-porter of the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church in 1844. He was also one of the committee appointed by that Conference to prepare a Standard edition of the Methodist Hymn Book. That collection appeared as Hymne for the Use of The Methodist Episoopal Church, in 1849. To it West contributed two hymns-(1) "Come, let us tune our loftiest song" (Praise of Jesus), and (2) "Now, Lord, fulfil Thy faithful word" (On behalf of Ministers). (Nutter's Hymn Studies, 1884, p. 82.)

Wetzel, Johann Caspar, s. of Johann Michael Wetzel, shoemaker at Moiningen, was b. at Meiningen, Feb. 22, 1691. He matriculated, at Easter, 1711, as a student of theology at the University of Jena, and after-wards went to Halle. After varied tutorial work, &c., he was appointed, in 1727, disconus at Römbild, where he eventually became archidiaconus. While returning from a visit to the Bad Liebenstein he was unable to procced further than Meiningen, where he d. Aug. 6, 1755 (Koch, v. 507, &c.).

Aug. b, 1700 (A.008, v. 007, 60.).
Wetzel claims notice here as the best of the earlier German hymnelogists. His two most important works, in which he gives notices of more than 1100 hymneriters; are (1) Hymnepocographic, pub. at Hermitods, pt. i, 1719, ii. 1721, iii. 1724, iv. 1725; and (2) Analesta Hymnico, pub. let Goths, vol. i, pts. 1-3 in 1761, pts. 4-6 in 1752; vol. ii, pt. 1 in 1753, pts. 3-4 in 1751, pts. 4-6 in 1752; vol. ii, pt. 1 in 1753, pts. 3-4 in 1754, pts. 5, of in 1755. The style of these works is executable, but they contain much useful matter, and still rank as standard authorities.

Of Wetzel's original hymns, 62 in all, the most im-falls as standard authorises.

Of Wetzel's original hymns, 62 in all, the most important appeared as his Heilige und dem Herrn geneld seets Andackies-Prichte, in 5 pia., such with 10 hymns, pub. at Goburg 1; . ii. in 1713; iii., iv. in 1711; v. in 1722. One of these hymns has been tr., viz.:—

Gott sorgt für mich, was sell ich sorgen. Trast in God. 1st pub. in pt. v., Coburg, 1722 as above, as No. vii., entstied a "Devotional hymn on the Providence of bod," and in 9 st. of 6 l., each status beginning and ending with the words, "Gott sorgt für mich." In the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 21 erroneously ascribed to B. Schmolck, Tr. as "God cares for me; why need I sorrow," by Mice Manington, 1863, p. 30. [J. M.]

What alls my heart, that in my breast? G. Wither. [Sleoplessness.] 1st pub. in his Hatchich; or, Britan's Second Remembrancer. London, 1641, Pt. i., No. 20, in 4 st. of 8 l. It is introduced by the following note:-

"When we cannot sleep at seasonable times, vain inusings and want of right meditating on God, is frequently chief cause of uncest. Therefore this meditation directeth to the remedy of such untimely watchfulness,"

The hymn is included in Farr's reprint of the Hallelujah in 1857, and thence it passed, with slight alterations, into Kennedy, 1863, No. 845. [W. T. B.] No. 845.

What are these in bright array? J. Montgomery. [All Saints.] Pub. in his Greenland and other Poems, 1819, p. 185, in 8 st. of 8 l., and headed "Saints in heaven." It was repeated in Cotterill's Sel., 1819, No. 204; in Montgomery's Christian Pealmist, 1825, No. 559; and in his Original Hymns, 1853, No. 237. It is given in several collections in G. Britain and America, and come-times as, "Who are these in bright array?" In R. Biogham's Hymno. Christ. Latina, 1871, it is rendered into Latin as "Quid sint cohortes lucidæ."

What care the saints of God, if they. G. Moultrie, [Confessors.] Pub. in his Hymns and Lyrics, 1867, p. 150, in 9 st. of 6 l., and headed "Hymn for Festival of Confessors." In an abbreviated form it is found in the 1869 Appendix to the S. P. C. K. Ps. & Hys.; Thring's Coll., 1882, and others. [J. J.]

What countless crowd on Zion stands. J. Anstice. [All Saints.] 1st pub. in his posthumous Hyans, 1836, p. 37, in 6 st. of 4 l., and again in The Child's Christian Year, 1841. In the Bap. Ps. & Hys., 1858, st. i.-iii., vi., iv. are re-written (from 8.8.8.6.) in o. H. լյ, յ,դ

What grace, O Lord, and beauty shone. Sir E. Denny. [The love of Jesus.] Appeared in his Sch. of Hys., 1839, No. 32, in 5 st. of 4 l.; and again in his Hys. and Poems, 1848, p. 71, and later editions. It has passed into most of the hymn-books of the Plymouth Brathyon and also into most of Plymouth Brethren, and also into several other collections, [J. J.]

What is earth with all its treasures?

[Missions.] Appeared anonymously in W. Urwick's Coll. of Hys. adapted to Cong. Worship, Dublin, 1829, No. 343, in 6 st. of 4 l., and headed "The dark world enlightened by the Saviour's glory." In addition to an abbreviated form b ginning with st. i. there are also "Earth is but the land of shadowa" (st. ii.), and "O Thou Sun of glorious splendour" (st. ii.) in C. U. [J. J.]

What is the thing of highest [greatest] price? J. Montgomery. [The Soul.] Pub. in his Christian Psalmist, 1825, No. 504, in 6 st. of 4 l.; and again in his Original Hymns, 1853. It is found in a few modern books in G. Britain and America. [J. J.]

What is the world? a wildering mase. J. Montgomery. [Holy Scriptuse a Light.] In his Poetical Works, 1851, p. 304, Montgomery dates this hymn "1815"; but in his newspaper, the Sheffield Iris, of 1817, he printed it in 3 st. of 6 1., and dated it "February, 1817." Under these circumstances it is difficult to say which of these dates is correct. The hymn was repeated in Montgomery's Greenland and Other Paems, 1819, p. 187; his Christian Psolmist, 1825, no. 548; his Poetical Works, 1828, and his Original Hymns, 1853, No. 26. It is also found in Cotterill's Set., 1819, and in several of the older and modern hymn-books. It is not, however, a good example of Montgomery's powers as a writer of hymns. [J. J.]

What liberty so glad and gay? J. Keble. [Forgiveness of Enemies.] Written Feb. 7, 1826, on the words "Lord, how oft shall my brother sin against me, and I forgive him?" St. Matt. xviii. 21, and pub. in his Caristian Year, 1827, in 12 st. of 4 l. as the poem for the 22nd S. after Trinity. In Elliott's Ps. & Hys., 1835, st. x.-xii. were given as "Thou ransomed sinner, wouldst thou know?" This has been repeated in later collections, but is not in extensive use.

What! never speak one evil word? C. Wesley. [Holiness desired.] This cento is thus composed: St. I., ii. are from Wesley's Short Hymns, 1762, vol. ii., No. 753, on James iii. 2; and st. iii., iv. from the same, vol. i., No. 854, on Ps. ciii. 8. In this form it appeared in the Wes. H. Bk., 1789, No. 353, and has been repeated in several collections. Original texts in P. Works, 1868-72, vols. xiii. and ix. [J. J.]

What shall we ask of God in prayer? J. Montgomery. [Prayer.] Written in 1818, and first printed on a broadsheet with Montgomery's "Prayer is the soul's sincere desire," "Lord, teach us how to pray," and "Thou, God, art a consuming fire," for use in the Nonconformist Sunday schools in Sheffield and the neighbourhood. It was included in Cotteril's Sel., 1819, No. 281, in 4 st. of 8 1, and headed, "Ask and ye shall receive that your joy may be full." In Montgomery's Christian Psalmist, 1825, No. 68, is was given with the change, in st. tv., l. 1 of "with" to by, and in 8 st. of 4 l. It is usually given in an abbreviated form. In some American hymn-books a cento from this hymn is given as "Father of all our mercies Thou." [J. J.]

What shall we render. E. Parson, née Rooker. [Praise.] Ist pub. in J. Curwen's Child's Own H. Bk., 1840; and subsequently in Mrs. Parson's Willing-Class Hymns. It was composed for the Air by Mozart, commonly known as "Life let us cherlsh," and is given in several collections. [J. J.]

What sudden blaze of song. J. Kebie.
[Christmas.] Pub. in his Christian Year,
1827, in 11 st. of 6 l., as the poem for Christmas Day. In the American Chusch Pastorals, Boston, 1864, st. i., v., ix. are given in au altered form, but beginning with the same first line.
[J. J.]

What the my frail eyelids refuse.

A. M. Toplady. [At Night.] Pub. in the Gospel Magazine, Dec. 1774, in 6 st. of 8 l., entitled "A Chamber Hynn," and signed "Minimus." Also in Sedgwick's reprint of Toplady's Hymns, &c., 1860. It was given in its original form in several of the older lymnbooks, but in Collyer's Coll., 1812, it was divided into two patts, Pt. i. being camposed of st. i.-iii., and Pt. ii., beginning, "Inspirer and Hearer of prayer," of st. iv.-vi. From that date the first part fell gradually out of use, whilst the second part rose to great popularity, and has been rendered into several languages. The tr. into Latin by R. Bingham in his Hymno. Christ. Latina, 1871, begins, "O Tu precum inspirator."

What various hindrances we meet. W. Comper. [Exhortation to Prayer.] Appeared in the Olney Hymns, 1779, Bk. ii., No. 60, in 6 st. of 4 l., and headed "Exhortation to Prayer." It has passed into numerous collections, and sometimes in an abbreviated form. Dr. Hatfield, in his Church H. Bk., N. Y., 1872, dates it 1772. By this he probably means the date of its composition. We cannot, however, find any authority for that date. In R. Bingham's Hymno. Christ. Latina, 1871, 5 stanzas are rendered into Latin as "SI precibus solium Genitoris adire velimus."

Whate'er to Thee, our Lord, belongs. [Holy Baptism.] This is the first of 13 "Single Verses on Baptism" given in Rippon's Bap. Sel., 1787, Nos. 455-476. The authors of these stanzas are; st. i. iii.-v., B. Beddome; ii. xi., J. Stemett; vii.-ix., H. F.; x., H.; xii., G.; and vi. and xiii. anonymous, but pessibly by Rippon. The object of this arrangement of these stanzas is thus stated by Rippon in a note:—

"As it is now pretty common to sing by the water side, and as some of our brethren in the country give out a versect two, while they are administering the ordinance, it to hoped these single verses will be acceptable." In the American Bap. Hymn [and Tune] Bk., Philadelphia, 1871, st. iii., iv. and vi. are given as "Behold the grave where Jesus lay." The same arrangement with the addition of st. vii. had previously appeared in the Baptist edition of the Sabbath H. Bk., 1858. [J. J.]

Original Hymns, 1853, No. 64, it was given with the change, in st. iv., l. 1 of "with" to trace. P. Doddridge. [Transignration.] by, and in 8 st. of 4 l. It is usually given in an abbreviated form. In some American hymn-books a cento from this hymn is given as "Father of all our mercies, Thou." [J. J.] Hymns, &c., 1755, No. 188, in 6 st. of 4 l.; and again, but with alterations, in J. D. Humphreys's edition of the same, 1839, No. 204. The original text is that in C. U. [J. J.]

When bending o'er [on] the brink of life. W. B. Collyer. [Death anticipated.] Pub. in his Coll., &c., 1812, No. 827, in 6 st. of 4 l. It is found in several modern hymnals, but usually in an abbreviated form. It presents death in its saddest form, and embodies a prayer for divine assistance. In several American collections, including the Meth. Episc. Hymnu, 1849; their new Meth. Hymnal, 1878; and others, it is rewritten in s. M. as, "When on the brink of death." [J. J.]

When blooming youth is snatched away. Anne Steele. [Death and Burial of a Young Person.] Ist pub. in her Poems on Subjects Chiefly Devotional, &c., 1760, vol. i. p. 106, in 6 st. of 4 l., and headed "At the Funeral of a Young Person." Also given in the 1780 ed., of the Poems, and in D. Sodgwick's reprint of her Hymns, &c., 1863, p. 66. The form of the text usually found in American hymn-books is "When those we love are snatched away." This was given in the Prayer Bk. Coll., 1826, in 5 st., and is found in later hymnals. Another strangement in 3 st. is in use in G. Britain. It appeared in Bickersteth's Christian Psalmody, 1833, as "When youth or age is snatched away." The text in Common Praise, 1879, is in 5 st., the last of the original boing omitted, and the rest somewhat altered.

When brothers part for manhood's race. J. Keble. [St. Andrew.] Written Jan. 27, 1822, and included in his Christian Year, 1827, in 11 st. of 4!. Two centos from it are in C. U.; the first beginning with the opening stanza, and the second with st. vi., "First seek thy [the] Saviour out, and dwell."

Their use is limited. [J. J.]

When came in flesh the Incarnate Word. J. Anstice. [Christmas.] Pub. in his posthumous Hymns, 1836, p. 17, in 6 st. of 4 1. It is given in Hys. for the Use of the University of Oxford in St. Mary's Church, 1872, and several other modern collections in G. Britain and America. [J. J.]

When Christ His body up had borne. H. More. [Whitsuntide.] This is the opening line of a hymn in 14 st. of 41, entitled "An Hymn upon the Descent of the Holy Ghost at the Day of Pentecoet," which appeared in More's Divine Hymns appended to his Divine Dialogues, &c., Lond. 1668. This hymn was rewritten in 15 st. by J. Wesley, and included in the Wesley Hys. and Sacred Poems, 1739, beginning "When Christ had left his flock below." From this revision, st. vi.-xv., slightly altered, were given in the Wes. H. Bk., 1780, as, "Father, if justly still we claim" (No. 444); and "On all the earth Thy Spirit shower" (No. 445). These bymns have been repeated in many collections in G. Britain and America. Wesley's full revised text is in the P. Works, 1868-72, vol. i. p. 165. The first stanza of "Father, if justly still we claim" is by J. Wesley (1739). Dr. More's original text of the remaining stanzas of the two hymns is;—

- vi. "The Spirit of holy Zeal and Love And of Differning give us, Lord; The Spirit of Power from above, Of Unity and good Accord;
- vii. "The Spirit of convincing Speach, Such as will every Confeience Imite, And to the heart of each man reach, And sin and Errour put to Right;
- viii. "The Spirit of refining Fire, Searching the inmoit of the mind, To purge all foul and fell desire, And kindle Life more pure and kindle,
- ix. "The Spirit of Faith in this thy Day Of Power against the force of Sin, That through this Faith we ever may Against our Luste the Conquests win.
- x. "Pour down thy Spirit of inward Life, Which in our hearts thy laws may write, That without any pain or furife We naturally may doe what's right.
- zi. "On all the Earth thy Spirit pour, In righteousness it to renew: That Satan's Kingdome 's may o'repow'r, And to Cantan's Sceptre all fabrue.
- xil. " Like mighty Winds or Torrent flereo Let it Withflanders all o'zerun, And every wicked law reverle, That Faith and Love may make all one.
- xill. "Let Peace and Joy in each place foring, And Righteoufnefs, the Spirits fruits, With Mecknefs, Friendfulp, and each thing That with the Christian fpirit fulls.
- ziv. "Grant this, O holy God and true, Who th' ancient Prophets didt infpire; Hafte to perform thy Promife due, As all thy Servanta thes delire."

A comparison of Wesley's version with this original shows most forcibly how a well conceived but indifferently executed composition may be turned to good account by an experienced hand. The rest of More's hynns, aix in all, are worthy of attention. [J. J.]

When Christ the Lord would [shall] come on earth. H. Alford. [St. John Baptist.] In the Author's Hys, for the Sundays and Festivals throughout the Year, 1836, this hynu was appointed for St. John Baptist's Day: but on its transference to his Ps. & Hys., 1844, it was given for the 3rd S. in Advent, No. vi., and marked in error as having been pub. in that collection for the first time. It is found in his Year of Praise, 1867, and Poetical Works, in the 8th ed. of which it is dated 1835. Orig. text, in the S. P. C. K. Church Hymns, 1871. It is in somewhat extensive use, and sometimes in an altered form, as in the Murray's Hymnal, 1852, with the same first line, but much altered and with the addition of a new stanza. [J. J.]

When darkness long has veiled my mind. W. Coneper. [Peace.] let pub. in B. Conyer's Coll., 1772, in 4 st. of 4 l., and headed "Trials overcome by Hope." When included in the Olney Hymns, 1779, Bk. iii., No. 23, it was expanded into 6 st. of 4 l., and headed, "Peace after a Storm." In its full, or in an abbreviated form, it is found in several hymn-books in G. Britain and America, both old and new. Although not referred to, so far as we can find, in Cowper's Memoirs, it was evidently written at or about the same time as his "God moves in a mysterious way" (p. 438, l.).

When gathering clouds around I view. Sir R. Grant. [In Trial and Temptation.] Appeared first in the Christian Observer, Feb. 1806, in 6 st. of 6 l., and signed "E. Y. D. R."; and again in the same magazine in Feb. 1812 accompanied with a letter explaining that it had been sent in an altered form, and signed as before. In 1895, Elliott included it in his Ps. and Hys., No. 342, with a note in the Preface to the effect that it had been revised by the Author for that Collection. It was also given in the Author's Sacred Poems (pub. by his brother) in 1839, p. S, the text being that of 1812. Three texts of this hymn thus exist, and all by the author; (1) the first in the Christian Observer, 1806; (2) the second in the same, 1812, and in the Sacred Poems, 1939; (3) and the third in Elliott's Ps. and Hys., 1835. Of these the second text is that usually received as authorized, and is given as such in Lyra Britannica, 1867, and in Lord Selborne's Book of Praise, 1862. The hymn is based on Heb. iv. 15, " For we have not a High Priest," &c., and is often given in an abbreviated form. In R. Bingham's Hymno. Christ. Latina, 1871, 4 stauzas are rendered into Latin as: "Quum circumcirca glomerantia nubila cornam."

When God of old came down from heaven. J. Keble. [Whitsuntide.] lat pub. in his Christian Year, 1827, in 11 st. of 4 l., as the poem for Whitsunday. In an abbreviated form it is in extensive use. A cento therefrom is given in a few American hymn-books as "Lo, when the Spirit of our God." In Bp. Wordsworth's (St. Andrews) Series Collectarum, &c., 1890, sts. j., iii., iv., vi., vii., ix., and xi. are rendered into Latin on "Olim cum Dominus supera descendit ab arce." (J. J.)

When His lost sheep the Shepherd finds. [The Lost Sheep.] This appeared in the Uttoxeter Sci. of Ps. & Hys., 1805 (p. 1084, ii.), and is also in Cotterill's Sci., 1819, and later hymnals, and is sometimes given (but in error) as an altered form of J. Needham's "When some kind shepherd from his fold " (p. 798, ii.).

When I can read my title clear.

I. Watts. [Assurance of Faith and Hope.] Appeared in his Hys. and Spiritual Songs, 1707, in 4 st. of 4 l. It is headed "The Hopes of Heaven our Support under Trials on Earth." Its use in G. Britain and America is very extensive. The text has undergone several alterations at the hands of Bickersteth in his Ps. & Hys., 1883; Elliott in his Ps. & Hys., 1885, and others. The most important is Bickersteth's rendering of st. iv.:-

"There, anchor'd safe, my weary soul Shall find eternal rest. Nor storms shall beat, nor billows roll, Nor fears useful my breast."

It is hard to see that this is an improvement upon Watte's original :-

"There shall I hathe my weary soul In seas of beavenly rest, And not a wave of trouble roll Across my peaceful breast.

The original text of the whole hymn, as in the Hy. Comp., is that most commonly used. Miller (Singers and Songs, 1869, p. 140) points out that the opening lines of the hymn,-

" When I can read my title clear To manaions in the skies," are used by Cowper in his poem on Truth (pub. in 1782), in his comparison of the lot of Voltaire and that of the poor and believing cotteger, who

Just knows, and knows no more, her Bible true A truth the brilliant Franchman never knew: And in that charter reads with sparkling . Her title to a treasure in the siries."

When I can trust my all with God. J. Conder. [Resignation.] Written on the death of one of his children, Jan. 1818, and included in hie Star in the East, &c., 1824, p. 113, in 5 st. of 6 L, headed "On the death of an Infant Son," and accompanied with the footnote "C. J. C. ob. Jan. 1818." In Con-No. 311; and these were repeated in his post-humous Hys. of Praise, Prayer, &c., 1856. This form of the hymn is that in C. U. in G. Britain and America.

When I resolved to watch my thoughts. Anne Steele. [Ps. zzziz.] Pub. in her Poems on Subjects chiefly Devotional, 1760, vol. ii., p. 168, in 13 st. of 4 l.; in the 2nd ed. of the Poems, 1780; and in Sedgwick's reprint of her Hymns, 1863, p. 171. It is not in C. U. in its original form; but from it the following are taken:

1. Almighty Eaker of my four) frame. This cento, composed of st. iv.-vit. was given in Rippon's Bap. Sct., 1787, as a bymn on "The Shortness of Life." It is found in many hymnais in G. Britain and America.

2. O God, to Whom my life I awe. This, in the Primitive Methodist Hymnol, 1887, is the above cante with the opening stance rewritten. [រ. រ.]

When I survey life's varied scene. Anne Steele. [Resignation.] lst. pub. in her Poems on Eubjects chiefly Decotional, 1760, vol. i., p. 134, in 10 st. of 4 l., and entitled "Desiring Resignation and Thankfulness." It was repeated in the new ed. of her Poems, &c., 1780; and again in Sedgwick's reprint of her Hymns, 1863. As a whole it is not in C. U. From it, however, the following centos are found in modern hymn-books :-

1. When I survey life's varied some, in the Irish Church Hymnol, 1873, is composed of st. i., ii., viii. and Church Hymnal, 1873, is composed of st. i., it., viit. and ix., slightly attered.

2. Father, whate'er of earthly bliss. This was given in Toplady's Ps. & Hys., 1776, No. 214, and thus came into use in the Church of England. From Toplady it passed into Rippon's Bap. Sci., 1787, and thence into modern Monconformist collections. Its use is extensive. It is composed of st. viit., ix., slightly attered. A Latin rendering, "Quidquid optatum famulo precant," by the Rev. R. Bingham, was pub. in his Hymno. Cartet. Lating, 1871.

3. Lord, teach me to adore Thy hand. No. 178, in the Scottleb Pret. Hymnol, 1876, is composed of st. ii., viii. ix. and x. unalisred.

4. My flox, whate'er of earthly bliss. In T. Derling's Hys. for the Ch. of England, 1887. It is composed of st. viii.-x., and a devology so in the original.

Taking these centos together this hymn

Taking these centos together this hymn has a wider circulation than any other of Miss Steele's compositions. [J. J.]

When I survey the wondrous Cross. I. Watts. [Good Friday.] This, the most popular and widely used of Watts's hymns, appeared in his Hys. and Spiritual Bongs, 1707 and in the aplaymed of 1709 as:— 1707, and in the enlarged ed. 1709, as:-

" Crucifizion to the World, by the Cross of CHRIST.

"Oracyrane.

Gal. vi. 14.

1. "When I survey the wond'rous Crofs
On which the Prince of Glory dy'd,
My richest gain I count but Lo2s,
And pour Contempt on all my Prids.

Forbid it, Lord, that I should beaft
Save in the Death of Carrer my Goo;
All the vain Things that charm me moft,
I factified them to his Blood.

 See from his Head, his Hands, his Feet, Sorrow and Love flow mingled down!
 Did e'er fuch Love and Sorrow meet, Or Thorns compose to rich a Crown!

4. " [His dying Crimion, like a Robe, Spreads o'er his Body on the Tree; Then am I dead to all the Globe, And all the Globe is dead to me.]

5. "Wers the whole Realm of Nature mine, That were a Prefent far too finali; Love to amazing, to divine, Demands my Soul, my Life, my All."

The first to popularize the four-stanza form of the hymn (st. iv. being omitted) was G. Whitefield in the 1757 Suppl to his Coll. of Hys. It came rapidly into general use. In common with most of the older hymns s few alterations have crept into the text, and in some instances have been received with favour by modern compilers. These include:

St. it. l. 2. "Save in the Cross," Madan, 1760.
St. itl. l. 2. "Love flow mingling," Salisbury, 1857.
St. iv. l. 2. "That were a tribute," Cotterill, 1819.
"That were an offering," Stocotl, 1821.

The most extensive mutilations of the text were made by T. Cotterill in his Sel., 1819; E. Bickersteth in his Christian Psalmody, 1833; W. J. Hali in his Mitre H. Bk. 1836; J. Keble in the Salisbury H. Bk. 1857; and T. Darling in his Hys. for the Church of England, 1857. Although Mr. Darling's text was the only one condemned by Lord Selborne in his English Church Hymnody at the York Church Congress in 1866, the mutilations by others were equally bad, and would have justified him in saying of them all, as he did of Mr. Darling's text in particular:—

"Turns is just enough of Watts left here to remind one of Horace's saying, that you may know the remains of a post even when he is torn to piecea."

In the 1857 Appendix to Murray's Hymnal; in the Salisbury H. Bh. 1857; in H. A. & M. 1861 and 1875; in the Hymnary, 1872; and in one or two others a doxology has been added, but this practice has not been received with general favour. One of the most curious examples of a hymn turned upside down, and mutilated in addition, is Basil Woodd's version of this hymn beginning "Arise, my soul, with wonder see," in his undated Ps. of David, &c. (ofrea 1810), No. 198.

The four-stanza form of this hymn has been translated into numerous languages and dialects. The renderings into Latin include: "Quando admirandam Crucem," by R. Bingham in his Hymno. Christ Latina, 1871; and "Mirabilem videns Crucem," by H. M. Macgill in his Songs of the Christian Creed and Life. 1876. The five-stanza form of the text as in H. A. & M. (st. v. being by the compilers) is tr. in Bp. Wordsworth's (St. Andrews) Series Collecturum, 1890, as "Cum miram intucor, de qua Prasstantior omni." In popularity and use in all English speaking countries, in its original or in a slightly altered form, this hymn is one of the four which stand at the head of all hymns in the lengths language. The remaining three are, "Awake, my soul, and with the sun;" "Hark! the herald angels sing;" and "Rock of Ages, eleft for me." (See English Hymnody, Early, §§ XII. XIII., and the New Supplement.) [J. J.] head of all hymns in the English language.

When Israel freed from Pharach's hand. I. Watts. [Ps. caiv.] Written in lections the opening 1712, and sent by Watts, with a letter, to the His heavenly home."

Speciator, in which it appeared on "Tuesday, August 19, 1712," No. 461, in 6 st. of 41. as a rendering of Ps. oxiv. In the letter Watts explained the origin of his rendering, it being to show the force and wisdom of retaining the Name of God to the end of the paraphrase as in the Pealm, and not to introduce it at the beginning as had been previously done by others. The paraphrase was given in Watte's Ps. of David, 1719, with the alteration of et, ii. Il. 3, 4 from-

" The streams of Jordan saw, and fled With backward correct to their head,"

" Jordan beheld their march, and fied With backward current to his head."

The New Cong., 1859, and others give the text of 1719. [J, J,]

When Israel, of the Lord beloved. Str W. Scott. [Omnipresence.] This hymn appeared in Scott's Ivanhos, 1817, Chap. 40. It is thus introduced :-

"It was in the twilight of the day when her trial, if it could be called such, had taken place, that a low knock was heard at Rebecu's prison-chamber. It disturbed not the inmate, who was then engaged in the evening prayer recommended by her religion, and which concluded with a hyran we have ventured thus to translate into English,

"When Israel, of the Lord beloved,
Out of the land of boodage came," to.

The hymn extended to 4 st. of 8 1. The imaginary trial referred to was that of Rebecca the Jewess by a court of the Order of the Templars for sorcery, the charge being that she had bewitched one Brian de Bois-Guilbert, one of the Knights, into breaking several of the rules of the Order. When stripped of these romantic surroundings, it yet remains a striking hymn. It is based on Pa ev. It is found in several modern collections; and has been rendered into Latin by H. M. Macgill in his Songs of the Christian Creed and Life, 1876, as "Execute Israele Servitute de cru-deli." In the American Unitarian Hys. of the Spirit, pt. iii., is given as, "O present still, though still unseen." [J. J.]

When Israel press'd by Pharach, stood. J. Montgomery. [Thanksgiving on being rescued from Drowning.] Pub. in his Christian Pealmist, 1825, No. 529, in 6 st. of 4 h., and headed, "For a Sermon before a Society for the Recovery of persons apparently Drowned." It was repeated in his Orig. Hys. 1853, p. 308. [J. J.]

When Jesus left His Father's throne. J. Montgomery. [Child's Hymn.] From a flyleaf preserved with the "M. MSS." we find this hymn was written for the Hallam Sunday School, near Sheffield, and is dated as having been used there on Oct. 26, 1816. In 1819 it was given in Cotterill's Scl., No. 258, in 5 at. of 41., and entitled "Children Praising Christ." In 1825 it was republished in a re-written and extended form of 8 st. in Montgomery's Christian Psalmist, No. 597, with the new title, "Children recalling Christ's Example and His Love." This text and title were repeated in his Original Hymns, 1853, No. 326, the added stanzas being iii., iv., and v. In Cotterill's Set the opening line is "When Jesus left the throne of God." In some collections the opening line is "When Jesus left

When languor and disease invade. A. M. Toplady. [Affiction and Death.] In the Lady Huntingdon Coll. of Hys., 1780, there is as No. 288, "When languor and disease invade," in 8 st. of 4 L, and beaded "Meditation on God's Love," and as No. 263 "Sweet to rejoice in lively hope," in 6 st. of 4 l., and headed "Funeral," the two hymns thus making 14 st. of 4 l. These two hymns, with an additional stanza (x.), were given in the Gospel Magazine, Oct. 1796, as a single poem, with this note appended thereto:-

"This hymn was written for the late Countess of Huntingdon, at her request, when in illness, by the Rev. Mr. Toplady, and kindly given to the publisher as it originally stood, by the Right Hon. Lady Ann Erskine."

From the poem as thus printed we find that No. 288 above was composed of st. i.-vii. and xiv., and No. 263 of st. viii., ix., xi.-xiii. and xv. Stanza x. was not used. The centos from this poem now in C. U. are:-

How blest to rest in lively hope (st. viii.). In Windle's Met. Psalter and Hyl.
 Sweet to reflect how grace divine (st. iv.). In some American collections.

Sweet to rejoice in lively hope (st. viii.). In a few American collections.

'Tin sweet to rest in lively hope (15. viti.). In

6. "In sweet to test in fively hope (a. v.c.). In C. U., in G. Britath and America.

5. When languor and disease invade (at. t.). In extensive use in most English-speaking contaries. The full text of the poem is in D. Sedgwick's reprint of Toplady's Hys. and Sucred Poems, 1880. [J. J.]

When like a stranger on our sphere. J. Montgomery. [Public Hospitals.] Of this hymn there are two texts, details of which are as follows:-(1) It was written for the opening of the Sheffield Infirmary, October, 1797, and printed in Montgomery's Iris newspaper, Oct. 6, 1797. In 1819 it was included in Cotterill's Sel., No. 246, in 4 st. of 8 l., and entitled "At a Sermon for an Infirmary." In 1825 this text was repeated, with slight alterstions, in Montgomery's Christian Psalmist, No. 531, broken into 8 st. of 41., entitled "For a Public Hospital." (2) Amongst the M. MSS. there is a MS. of this hymn in 10 st., and thus dated: "Revised, June 2, 1844." It is this revised text which was given by Montgomery in his Original Hymne, 1859, No. 286, under the heading "Hymn for the Opening of the Sheffield Infirmary, October, and from which Dr. Kennedy, in his Hymso. Christ., 1863, and other modern editors have taken their text. The older hymn-books have the text as in Cotterill's Sci., whilst most of the modern collections follow that of [J. J.] the Original Hymne, 1853.

When marshall'd on the nightly plain. H. K. Whits. [The Star of Bethlehem.] Appeared in Collyer's Sel., 1812, No. 862, in 6 st. of 4 l., and headed "The Star of Bethlehem." It has much biographical interest, in that it gives a poetical version of the author's change of mind from a species of scepticism to the faith of Christ. The special personal interest is introduced with st. iii., "Once on the raging seas I rode." This also forms the beginning of a cento from this hymn given in one or two American hymnbooks.

4 L, and headed "Christ's Agony and Crucifixion." In the American Unitarian Bk. of Hys. 1848, No. 144, it was given in a re-written form of 5 st. The alterations were made by S. Lougfellow, one of the editors. This text has passed into several hymn-books in G. Britain, as in Thring's Coll., 1882; with a doxology. Horder's Cong. Hys. 1884, &c.; and as "When my love to God grows weak," in Martineau's Hymns, &c., 1873.

When on her Maker's bosom. Bp. R. Heber. [Epiphang.] Appeared in his posthumous Hymns, &c., 1827, p. 33, in 6 st. of 4 l. and appointed for the 2nd S. after Epiphany. It is found in a few modern hymn-books only.

When on the giddy cliff I stand. T. Haweis. [The Sea in the hands of God.] Pub. in his Carmina Christo, 1792, in 6 st. of 4 L, and based on Jeremiah v. 22. It passed into Collyer's Coll., 1812; H. W. Beecher's Plymosth Coll., 1855; and a few bymnals in G. Britain of a later date. [J. J.]

When our heads are bowed with woe. H. H. Milman. [Litany in Lent. Buriel.] Appeared in Bp. Heber's posthumous Hymns, &c., 1827, p. 114, in 6 st. of $ l., and the refrain, "Gracious Son of Mary, hear." It was appointed for the 16th S. after Trinity, and is based on the Gospel of that day, the raising of the widow's son at Nain, but deals only with the sad side of that event. Although it has become one of the most popular and widely used of Milman's hymns, yet it was not included by him in his Ps. and Hys., 1837, nor in any subsequent edition. In Biokersteth's Christian Pealmody, enlarged ed., 1841, No. 122, the hymn begins with st. v., "When the heart is sad within," and the text is re-arranged thus, st. v., vi., i., ii., iii., and a new stanza. This last stanza is repeated in Bp. Bickersteth's H. Comp., 1870. The refrain "Gracious Son of Mary, hear," has exercised the ingenuity of many editors of hymn-books. The following list of changes in that one line, although not complete, is yet sufficiently long to illustrate the difficulty of maintaining unity in these matters.

1. "Gracione Son of David, hear." Eliott. 1835.
2. "Jesus, Son of David, hear." Biokersteth. 1841.
3. "Son of Man, O Jesu, hear." Emplish Hyl. 1882.
4. "Jesus, Son of Mary, hear." Herray's Hyl. 1862.
5. "Gracious Lord of Mercy, hear." It Lowe's Hys.

1854, 6. "Jesu, born of Woman, hear," S. P. C. K. ed., 1863.

7. "Jeen, Man of Sorrows, hear." Alford. 1867.
8. "Jeen, Loving Saviour, hear." Windle. 1864.
8. "Gracious Saviour, hear." Souttisk U. P. C. 1852.
10. "Oracious Son of David, hear." Horder. 1884.

The text of this hymn as in H. A. & M., 1861, has been tr. into Latin by the Rev. C. B. Pearson in Biggs's appotated ed. of H. A. & M. 1867, as "Tristes, orbos lacrymantes." [J. J.]

When spring unlocks the flowers. Bp. R. Heber. [Spring.] 1st pub. in the Christian Observer, 1816, p. 27, in 4 st. of 8 l., headed "Spring," and signed "R." In Heber's posthumous Hymns, &c., 1827, p. 98, it was repeated, after revision by himself, in 4 st. When my love to Christ [God] repeated, after revision by himself, in 4 st. grows cold [weak]. J. R. Wreford. [Passiontide.] Contributed to J. R. Beard's Unitarian Coll. of Hys. 1837, No. 140, in 6 st. of The text in U. U. is that of 1827. [J. J.]

When the Architect Almighty fashioned had the heaven and earth. Bp. C. Wordsnorth of Lincoln. [Consecration of a Church.] Appeared in his Holy Year, 1862, p. 221, in 10 double st. of 41., and headed "Consecration of Churches, or Laying the First Stone." In the 3rd ed. of the Holy Year it was repeated in two parts, Pt. ii. beginning "O'er the Font's baptismal waters may the Holy Spirit move." Usually this hymn is given in an abbreviated form, that adopted by the S. P. C. K. Church Hymns, 1871, being the most popular. For its special purpose, for use at the Consecration of a Church, it is one of the fluest hymns in C. U. [J. J.]

When the earth was full of darkness. J. M. Neale. [St. Margaret.] Written for the use of the Sisters of St. Margaret's, East Grinstead, as a hymn for St. Margaret's Day, at Lands, probably for the Festival of July 20, 1865, and first printed in the Church Times, July 15, 1865, where it is signed "J. M. N." In 1866 it was included, with slight alterations, in Dr. Neale's Original Sequences, Hymns, and Other Ecclesiastical Verses. With further alterations and the omission of st. v. it was also given in the People's H., 1867, No. 263. [J. J.]

When the Lord of Hosts ascended. Bp. C. Wordsworth. [Whitsunday.] ist pub. in his Holy Year, 1862, p. 103, in 9 st. of 8 t. In the 3rd ed. of the Holy Year, 1863, it was given in two parts, Pt. ii. being "Not in fire from heaven descending," the text throughout being revised by the author. Three centos therefrom are in C. U.: (I) Opening with st. i.; (2) "Guide of sinners, go before us;" (8) "Holy Ghost, Divine Creator." [J. J.]

When the wild [dark] waves round us roll. Bp. W. W. How. [St. Peter.] Pub. in the enlarged ed. of Morrell and How's Ps. and Hys., 1884, in 6 st. of 4 l. In the S. P. C. K. Church Hys., 1871, Thring's Coll., 1882, and others, it reads, "When the dark waves round us roll." It is a very popular hymn and is found in many collections. [J. J.]

When this passing world is done. R. M. MoCheyne. [Debtor to Christ.] Printed in the Scottish Christian Herald, May 20, 1837; and repeated, in his Songs of Zion appended to his Memoir and Remains, 1844, in 9 st. of 6 l., and headed "I am Debtor." As a whole it is not in C. U.; but the following centes therefrom are in C. U.:—

1. When this passing world is done. Various centes of unequal length, with this as the opening stanza are in C. U. in G. Britain and America.

2. When I stand before the threne. This cente, in Romeny, 1803, and others begins with st. iii.

3. Chosen not for good in ms. This cente is in extensive use. It begins with st. vi.

4. Oft I walk beneath the cloud. In use in G. Britain and America. It opens with st. vi.

When these centos are taken into account it is found that this is the best known and most widely used of the author's hymns. Original text in Lyra Brit., 1867. [J, J] stanza to events which took place at "Jehovah-jireh," "Bethel," "Mahansim," "Peniel," "Jehovah-nissi," &c. Each stanza is headed with the name of the place, and a reference to the passage in Holy Scripture which is dwelt upon by the writer. The cento, "God is in the loneliest spot," in the American Church Pastoruls, 1864, is from this hymn. [J. J.]

When waves of trouble [sorrow] round me swell. Charlotte Elliott. [In Afliction.] This hymn, based upon St. Matt. xiv. 27, appeared in the 1834 Appendix to the Invalid's H. Bk., No. v., in 4 st. of 4 l. Subsequently it was given in the body of that collection; and is also found, unaltered, in Snepp's Songs of G. & G., 1872. [J. J.]

When, within sight of danger's hour. H. Alford. [St. Peter.] 1st pub. in his Ps. & Hys., 1844. No. 85, in 3 st. of 4 l., and appointed for St. Peter's Day. It was repeated in his Year of Praise, 1867, No. 257, and is also found in other collections. [J. J.]

When wounded sore the stricken soul. Cecil F. Alexander. [Passiontide.]
Appeared in her Hys. Descriptive and Devotional, &c., 1858, No. 12, in 5 st. of 4 l., and headed "Passion Week." It was repeated without alteration in her Legend of the Golden Prayers and Other Poems, 1859, p. 141, with the new heading "Touched with the feeling of our infirmities." It is found in many hymnbooks in G. Britain and America, and usually in an unaltered form. [J. J.]

Whence do our mournful thoughts arise P. I. Waits. [Consolation.] 1st pub. in his Hys. and Spiritual Songs, 1707, in 5 st. of 4 l., and based upon Is. xl. 27-30 (ed. 1709, Bk. i. No. 32). Another form of this hymn was given in the 1745 Draft of the Scottish 7 st. of 41. as "Why pourst thon forth thine anxious plaint?" In the Drafts of 1751 and 1781 further alterations were introduced until it assumed the authorized form as in the Trs. and Paraphs. of 1781. In the markings by the eldest daughter of W. Cameron (p. 200, ii.) the alterations of 1781 are said to be by him. The designation of the hymn is L. by him. The designation of the hyran is I. Watts, 1707; Trs. & Paraphs., 1745; W. Cameron, 1781. In the American Prayer Book. Coll., 1826, and several later hymnals it begins "Why mournest thou, my anxious soul?" Sometimes at. iv.-viii are found as a soparate hymn, beginning, "Supreme in wisdom as in power," as in W. F. Stevenson's Hys. for the Church and Home, 1873. In one or two American Unitarian hymnels a cento therefrom is also given as "Mere human power shall fast decay." In Jane E. Leeson's Paraphrases and Hys., 1853, the 1781 text is rewritten in three parts as:—(1) "Thus saith the Holy One, to Whom"; (2) "O Jacob and O Israel"; (3) "God giveth power unto the fatter" faint."

Where God doth dwell, sure heaven is there. J. Mason. [Praise to, and Joy in God.] This cento in Spurgeon's O. O. H. Bk. When thy faith is sorely tried. J. God.] This cento in Spurgeon's O. O. H. Bk., Conder. [Divine Footprints.] This hymn appeared in his posthumous Hys. of Praise, compiled from Mason's Spiritual Songs, or Prayer, &c., 1856, in 8 st. of 4 l., and headed Songs of Praise, 1683, thus:—st. i., ii. from Divine Footprints." The idea is to devote a Song 25, st. v.; st. iii.—v. from Song 24, st. i. ii.; st. v. from Song 27, st. iv., 11. 5-8 re-Beyond this we have no information, and the written. The result is a pleasing hymn of hymn must remain "Anon." [J. J.] Praise and Joy.

Where high the heavenly temple stands. M. Bruce, [The Divine Mediator.] This hymn, which we have ascribed to M. Bruce on evidence given in his Memoir in this work (p. 187, i.) was written probably about 1764-65, for a singing class in Kinness-wood, Scotland, and was first published by J. Logan in his Poems, 1781, p. 117, No. 9, 38 his own. In the same year (1781) it was given, with slight alterations, in the Scottish Translations and Paraphrases, No. 58, se a second rendering of "Heb. iv. 14 to the end." The alterations extended only to the following:---

St. 1., 1. 4, "The Guardian," for "The Patron."
St. 11., 1. 1, "their murely," for "in mercy stood; " 1. 3,
"his mighty plan," for "his plan of grace;" 1. 4,
"The Savieur and the friend of man," for "The Guardian God of human race."

In the markings of the Trs. and Paraphs. by the eldest daughter of W. Cameron (s. 200, ii.), the text of 1781 is ascribed to J. Logan. The bymn is found in numerous collections in G. Britain and America, and is of great merit. The hymn "He, Who for men their Surety stood," in Kennedy, 1863, No. 953, is st. ii., iv.-vi., in a re-written form. [J. J.]

Where shall my wondering soul begin? C. Westey. [Praise for Pardon and Peace.] Written in May, 1788, together with the hymn, "And can it be that I should gain?" (p. 64, i.), on the occasion of the great spiritual change which the author then underwent. Minute details of the event ere given in the author's Diary, May 21-23, 1738. Its biographical interests, together with that of "And can it be," &c., are not inconsiderable, showing as they do the struggles and triumphs of a sincere and cultured man. This hymn was 1st pub in the Hys and Sacred Poems, 1789, in 8 st. of 6 l., and again, with the omission of st. vi., in the Wes. H. Bk., 1780, No. 29, from whence it has passed into other collections. Original text P. Works, 1868-72, vol. i. p. 91. Dr. Osborn's note on this hymn, vol. i. p. 91, is:-

"Probably the hymn written on his conversion by Charles Wesley. Compare his Journel, under date May 23, 1733: 'Least of all would he [the enemy] have nated what things God has done for our souls... In His name, therefore, and through His strength, I will perform my yows unto the Lord, of not hiding His rightsousness within my heart, if it should ever please Him to plant it there' (vol. i. p. 34). The same hymn was probably sung next day, when his bother John was able to declare, 'I believe' (lb. p. 35)."

Further extracts from the Journal are given in G. J. Stevenson's Meth. H. Bk. Notes, 1883, p. 40, together with other comments which are worthy of attention, but are too lengthy to transcribe.

Where'er have trod Thy sacred feet. Lent.] In the "Notes and Illustrations" to Church Hys., 1881, Mr. Ellerton says of this hymn, "It is hymn 205 in the enlarged edition of Morrell & How's Psalms and Hymns, 1864. Bishop How found it in a small hymnel compiled for All Saints' Church, Blackheath, where it is attributed to 'Neals, But it is not in any publication of Dr. Neale's."

Where'er the Patriarch pitch'd his tant. J. Montpowery. [Abraham, the Father of the Faithful.] Written "Jan. 5, 1894" [M. MSS.], and pub. in Leifchild's Original Hymas, 1848, No. 25, in 6 st. of 4 l.; and again in Montgomery's Original Hymns, 1853, No. 39. It is given in a few modern hymnbooks only.

Wherefore so heavy, O my soul? E. Caswall. [Resignation.] Pub. in his Masque of Mary, &c., 1858, p. 226, and again in his Hys. and Poems, 1873, p. 255, in 4 st. of 4 l., and entitled "Resignation." In some hymn-books it is given as, "O why so heavy. O my soul?" Ita use is limited. [J. J.]

Wherefore, we sinners mindful of the love. W. Bright. [Holy Communion.] This hymn was pub in The Monthly Packet for October 1873, in 6 st. of 6 l. without signature, and entitled "The Eucharistic Presentation." In the following year Canon Bright included it is his Hamman Param Bright included it in his Hymne and Poems, 2nd ed., 1874. From thence et. iii.-vi. passed as, "And now, O Father, mindful of the love, into the revised ed. of H. A. & M. in 1875. [W. T. B.) Full original text as above.

Wherewith, O God, shall I draw near? C. Wesley. [Lent.] 1st pub. in the Hys. & Sacred Poems, 1739, p. 88, in 13 st. of 4 l., and based on Micah vi. 6, &c. (P. Works, 1868-72, vol. i. p. 276). It is given in centos in the hymn-books as follows:-

1. Wherewith, O God, shall I draw user' In the Wes. H. Bk., 1786, No. 123, and several modern collections. It is composed of 16 stanzas, st. iv., vii. and zi.

2. Wherewith O Lord, shall I draw near? In A. M. Toplady Pt. & Hys., 1276, No. 47, and later hymnocoks in the Church of England. It smbodies at 1-iii.

vill.-xili, signify sitered.

3. Joses, the Lamb of God, hath bled. In several modern collections. It begins with st. x.; but the composed of et. xii., xiii.

1. See, where before the throne He stands. Usually composed of et. xii., xiii.

[J. J.]

Which of the [mighty] petty kings of earth? C. Wesley. [Guardian Angels.] Given from the Wesley MSS. in Dr. Leifchild's Original Hys., 1842, and again in the Weeley P. Works, 1868-72, vol. xiii., in 6 st, of 8 l. It is based on Heb, i. 14. A cente therefrom is sometimes found beginning with st. iii., "Angels, where'er we go, attend." [J. J.]

While carnal men, with all their might. B. Beddome. [Zeal and Diligence.] This hymn appeared in Rippon's Baptist Sel., 1787, in two parts as follows: Pt. i. consisted of 8 st. of 4 l.: Pt. ii., beginning "If duty calls and suffering too," in 7 st. of 4 l. From Pt. ii. the hymn "Alike in happiness and woe," in the Bap. Ps. & Hys., 1858, is taken, the stanzas having been re-written throughout. In Beddome's posthumous Hymns, &c., 1817, portions of the hymn as in Rippon are given as Nos. 161 and 216. [J. J.]

W. Jowett. [The Judgment.] This is in Verses written on Various Occasions for Friende. London, 1843. Printed for Private Distribution, p. 4, in 2 st. of 4!. In a note to four hymns, of which this is the last, reads:— "The four preceding hymns were written (by William Jowett) at the request of the late Dr. Jowett, to accompany some selections made by his dear and intimate friend, the Rev. C. J. Latrobe, from compositions of Michael Haydn."

This hymn has appeared in a few collections, as Kemble's Ps. & Hys., 1853, and others. The Verses, &c., 1843, also include "Thoughts suggested by the Collects." [J. J.]

While for Thy saints who poured abroad. Bp. R. Mant. [Thanksgiving for the Church Reformers.] Appeared in his Ancient Hymns, &c., 1887, p. 138, in 4 st. of 8 l., and headed "Hymn of Thanksgiving for the Church's Reformers" (ed. 1871, p. 233). In Common Praise, 1879, No. 364, "Lord, in Thy truth Thy church delights," is a cento from this hymn. [J. J.]

While health and youth and strength remain. [Early Piety.] This hymn appeared with three others including "Praise the Lord, ye heav'ns adore Him," on a supplementary sheet appended to the musical ed. of the Foundling Coll., 1796, and to the book of words issued in 1801. In the 1809 ed. of that Coll. it was included in the body of the work, and thence passed, in 1810, into J. Kempthorne's Ps. & Hys., No. exeviii, in 4 st of 4 1., and somewhat considerably altered. Although still retained in the Foundling Coll., it has almost altogether fallen out of common use. On the authority of D. Sedgwick this hymn is usually ascribed to J. Kempthorne, but there is no evidence whatever in his favour. Its ascription is Anon. Foundling Coll., 1796.

While in sweet communion feeding. Sir E. Denny. [Holy Communion.] Ist public his Sci. of Hys., 1839, No. 292, in 2 st. of 81. It was repeated in his Hys. and Poems, 1848, and 1870, and has also passed into several collections in G. Britain and America, including Snepp's Songs of G. & G., 1872; Hatfield's Church H. Bk., N. Y., 1872, and others. [J. J.]

While justice waves her vengeful hand. Anne Steele. [National Humiliotion.] This hymn was written for the National Fast of Feb. 11, 1757, and pub. in her Poems on Subjects Chiefly Devotional, 1760, vol. i. p. 250, in 9 st. of 4 l., and headed "National Judgments deprecated. On the Fast. Feb. 11, 1757." It was also given in D. Sedgwick's ed. of her Hymns, &c., 1863, p. 116. This hymn is usually given in an abbreviated form as in the American Presby. Sel. of Hymns, Philadelphia, 1861.

While midnight shades the earth o'erspread. C. Wesley. [Midnight.] Pub. in the Hys. and Socred Poems, 1739, p. 35, in 6 st. of 6 l. (P. Works, 1863-72, vol. i. p. 49), and entitled "A Hymn for Midnight." In the P. Works, Dr. Osborn adds this note on the title:—

"In some editions this title was changed to 'A Midnight Hymn for one under the Law.' Wesley saw how this phrase had been misapprehended; and in a copy of the 5th edition now before me, it is corrected with his own hand to 'A Midnight Hymn for one convinced of Sin.'"

The hymn was written about 1737, and sets forth the unsettled state of his mind at that time. In the Wes. H. Bk., 1780, No. 148,

J. Wesley gave it with the omission of sts. I., ii., and a few verbal changes. T. Jackson in his Memoirs of C. Wesley (small ed. 1848, p. 51)

"On the 18th December, 1736, he [Wesley] says, 'I began my twenty-seventh year in a murmaring, disconsented spirit; reading over and over the third of Job.' While in this state of mind, he wrote the 'Hymn for Midnight,' which is strikingly descriptive of his defective creed and gloomy feelings. He had no hope of permanent happiness, but by the dissolution of his earthly frame. [Si. i. and ill. quoted: then he proceeds.] To this fine composition his brother afterwards gave an evangelical character [in the Wes. H. Bk. as above] by substituting the word 'faith' for 'death 'in the line 'Since death alone nonfirms me His ']. Thus aftered, it no longer appears as the desponding language of a Christian, expecting to be made free from sin and its attendant misery only by the hody's dissolution; but so the prayer of a weeping penitent, who is convinced of his guilt and corruption, and is looking for a present deliverance from them through faith in the blood of the atonement."

The Wes. H. Bk. form of the hymn begins with st iii., "Fain would I leave the world below," and is that which is in C. U. in G. Britain and America.

[J. J.]

While my Jesus I'm possessing. [Good Friday.] This hymn appeared in The Kendal H. Bk., edited by J. Allen (p. 50, L), 1757, No. 54, in 6 st. of 8 l. In its original form it has almost entirely passed out of C. U. From this hymn 24 lines were re-written by W. Shirley, and included in the 1770 ed. of the Countess of Huntingdon's Coll. of Hymns, as:—" Sweet the moments rich in blessing," in 3 st. of 8 l. The original lines are:—

St. 1l. "O how happy are the moments
Which I here in transport spend!
Life deriving from Hie torments
Who remains the sinner's Friend.
Here I'll sit, for ever viewing
How the blood flows from each veln;
Every stream, my soul bedewing
Mortifiee the carnul flame.

St. lil. "Really blessed is the portion Destined me by sovereign grace;
Still to view divine compaction
In the Saviour's bruised face.
"Its my fixed resolution,
Jasus Christ, my Lond, to love;
At His feet to fix my station,
Nor from thence a bair's breadth move.

St. iv. "Filled with sinner-like contrition,
With my tears His feet I'll baths;
Happy in the sweet fruition
Of my Saviour's painful death,

St. v. "May I still enjoy this feeling, In all need to Jesus go; Prove His wounds each day more healing, And from hence salvation draw."

These lines were manipulated by W. Shirley late the following hymn:—

"Sweet the moments, rich in blessing Which tefore the Cross I spend; Life, and health, and peace possessing From the stiner's dying Friend. Here I'll sit for ever viewing Merey's streams in streams of blood; Precious drops my soul belowing Plead and claim my peace with God.

"Truly blessed is this station
Low before the Cross to lie;
While I see divine compassion
Floating in His languid eye;
Here it is I find my heaven,
While upon the Lamb I gate;
Low I much? Por much forgiven,
I'm a miracle of grice.

"Love and grief my heart dividing, With my tears His feet I'll balks; Conttant still in fatth abiding, Life deriving from His death. May I will enjoy this feeling, In all need to Jesus go: Prove His wounds each day more bealing, And Huarelf more depty know!"

In Cooke and Denton's Church Hymnal, 1853, No. 72, Shirley's st. i. and ii., Il. 1-4 were given, with slight alteration, and the following lines were added to complete the hymn in 3 st. of 8 l.:-

"Lord, in ceaseless contemplation
Fix our bearts and eyes on Thee,
Till we taste Thy whole salvation,
And unveil'd Thy glories see. "For Thy sorrows we adore Thee,
For the griefs that wrought our peace;
Gracious Barrour I we implore Thee,
In our hearts Thy love increase.
Unto Thee, the world's Salvation, Eather Solvit unto Thue Father, Spirit, unto Thee, Low we bow in adoration, Ever-blassed One and Three."

This text, with one or two slight alterations, was repeated in the Hymnary, 1872. The alterations and additions in 1853, and the changes in 1872, were by Canon William Cooke and Mr. Webb. In H. A. & M., 1861, Canon Cooke's arrangement, reduced to 4 st. of 4 l., was given as No. 95, st. i.-ili. being from Shirley, and st. iv. part of the additions by Canon Cooke as above. This text was repeated, with slight changes and the addition of st. iii., ll. 1-4, from Shirley as above, in the Hy. Comp., 1870; in the S. P. C. K. Church Hymne, 1871; Thring's Coll., 1882, and many Other errangements from Shirley's othera. text are in C. U. in G. Britain and America, and can be tested by Shirley as above. The H. A. & M. text has been rendered into Latin by the Rev. R. Thornton, D.D., in Gittley and Thornton's Fasciculus, 1866, and L. C. Biggs's annotated ed. of H. A. & M., 1867, as "Sauve tempus et serenum;" and by Hodges in his The County Palatine, &c., 1876, as "Ter beatse dulces hors: " and the Hy. Comp. text, with the omission of st. iii., by the Rev. R. Bingham in his Hypno. Christ. Latina, 1871, as, "O quam dulce at beatum." Both these forms have also been rendered into other languages. The full original text by J. Allen of "While my Jesus I'm possessing," is in Lyra Britannica, 1867. [J. J.]

While saints and angels, glorious King. J. Montgomery. [Charitable Objects.] Pub. in Dr. Sutton's Ps. & Hys., . . . . Sung at the Parish Church, Sheffield, 2nd ed., enlarged, 1816, No. 102, in 6 st. of 4.1. It was proceed in Catallille Co. 2, 1816. No. 255. repeated in Cotterill's Sel., 1819, No. 255; in Montgomery's Christian Psalmist, 1825, No. 540, and in his Original Hymne, 1858, No. 345. In the last two works it is headed "For the Children in a Charity School." It was probably written to be sung at an anniversary of one of the Sheffield Charity Schools Sometimes it begins with st. iv. as "Father Thy heavenly gitts afford." [J. J.]

While shepherds watched their flocks by night. N. Tate. [Christmas.] Appeared in the Supplement to the New Version (p. 801, 1), in 1702, in 6 st. of 4 l., and in all later editions of the same. In full, or in an abbreviated form, it is found in most hymn-books in English-speaking countries. Original text in the Hy. Comp. In addition to the original, two additional versions are in

" While humble Shepherds watch'd their Flocks in Bethleh'ms Plains by Night, An Angel sent from Heav'n appear'd and fill'd the Plains with Light."

The alterations were confined to this stanta. On its adoption in the revised Braft of 1751, and again in the authorized issue of the Trs. and Partpht., 1761, the concluding lines of the last stanza read:—

"Good-will is shown by Reav'n to man, and never more shall cases."

This arrangement of the text has been in C. U. for more than 100 years.

2. On Judah's plains as Shepherds kept. This is found in one or two American collections only.

The original bas been tr. into several languages. Those in Latin include; (1) "Pastorum in pecudes noctu rigilante caterva," by Lord Lytelton, 1866; and (2) "Noctivagos, acclinis bumo, pastoria pubes," by C. S. Calverley, both in L. C. Bigge's annotated ed. of H. A. & M., 1867; (3) "Over dum custodientes," by R. Bingham, in his Hymno-Christ. Latina, 1871; and (4) "Pro grege Pastores vigilabant nocte silenti," by Bp. Wordsmorth (6) A notarrol in his Series. Wordsworth (St. Andrews) in his Series Collectarum, dc., 1890.

[New Year.] Pub in his Twenty Six Letters on Religious Subjects, &c., by Omieron, 1774, in 3 st. of 8 l., and headed, "For the New Year." It was repeated in R. Conyer's Ps. & Hys. the same year, and again in the Olney Hymne, 1779, Bk. ii., No. 1. It is in extensive use in G. Britain and America. In some collections st. ii., iii. are given as, "As the winged arrow flies," but this is not so popular as the full text. [J. J.]

White, Henry Kirke, remarkable both for the early development of his genius and for the untimely termination of his brief life of splendid promise, was b. at Nottingham, March 21, 1785. His father was a butcher, but his mother must have been a superior woman, since for a number of years she successfully conducted a boarding-school for girls. The writing-master in her establishment was for some time Henry's teacher, and under his instruction he made remarkable progress in Latin and other subjects. At the age of 13 he composed the lines "To an early Primrose," which were subsequently printed with his poems. At 14 he left school, and was put to the stocking-frame in order to learn prac-tically the business of a hosier; but, disliking the employment, he was removed to an attorncy's office in Nottingham, with a view to the legal profession. All his spare time was now devoted to literary pursuits, the acquisition of languages, and the composition of poetical and other contributions for the periodicals of the day. At the age of 15 he obtained from the Monthly Preceptor a silver medal for a translation from Horace, and a pair of globes for the best description of an imaginary tour from London to Edinburgh. When only 17 he was encouraged to publish his Clifton Grove and other Poems, which were certainly excellent as the compositions of a mere boy. About this time he was inclined to acepticism, but through the perusal of Scott's Force of Truth and the arguments and appeals of a young triend, R. W. Almond (afterwards Rector of St. Peter's, Nottingham), he was led to carnest faith in Christianity. His wellknown hymn "When marshall'd on the nightly plain" is understood to be a figurative description of his spiritual experience at this period. He now desired to become a Christian minister, and through the general control of the second and the second at the rosity of his employers he was released from his articles in 1804. With the help of the Rev. C. Simeon and other friends, he became a student of St. John's College, Cambridge. There he speedily distinguished himself, and the highest bonours seemed within his grasp; but over application to study destroyed his health, and he fell ill and d. Oct. 19, 1806, in the 22nd year of his age. Universal regret was expressed at his untimely end. Southey published his Remains, accompanied by a short memoir. Lord Byron composed some beautiful lines on the sad event. Josiah Conder and others wrote commemorative verses. The entire literary young manhood of England and America second moved with sympathy. A monumental tablet, with a medallion by Chantrey, was erected in All Suints Church, Cambridge, at the expense of a citizen of Boston, in the United States. Ten hymns are ascribed to H. K. White, which were printed by the Rev. Dr. W. B. Collyer in his Suppl. to Dr. Watte's Psalme & Hymns Lond. 1812. Of these four of the most popular are annotated as follows: "Awake, sweet harp of Judah, wake," p. 103, ii.; "Christians, brethren, ere we part," p. 221, ii.; "Much in aorrow, oft in woe," p. 773, ii.; "When marshalled on the nightly plain," p. 1371, i. These are all in extensive use. The rest, all in C. U. at the present time, are:-

1. O Lord, another day has flown. Evening. From this the hyun. "O let Thy grace perform its part" is taken.

2. O Lord, my God, in mercy turn. Penitence and Whitfield, Frederick, B.A., s. of H. Whitfield, was b. at Threapwood, Shropshire, Jan. 7, 1829, and educated at Trinity College, Dublin, where he took his s.a. in 1859. On taking Holy Orders, he was successively curate of Otley, vicar of Kirby-Bavensworth, senior ourate of Greenwich, and Vicar of St. John's, Bexley. In 1875 he was preferred to St. Mary's, Hastings. Mr. Whitfield's works in prose and verse number upwards of thirty, including Spiritual unfolding from the Word of Life; Voices from the Valley Testifying of Jesus; The Word Unveiled; Gleanings from Scripture, &c. Several of his hymns appeared in his Sacred Poems and Prose, 1861, 2nd Series, 1864; The Casket, and Quiet Hours in the Sanctuary. The hymn by which he is most widely known is "I need Thee, precious Jesu" (p. $57, 1). Other hymns by him in C. U. include :-

L. I have a Great High Priest above. Christ the High

8. There's naught on earth to rest upon, God Unchangeable.

9. When dead in sin and far from God. Redemption.

All these hymns, with the exception of No. 3, are in his Sacred Poems and Prose, 1861, and several of them have been printed as leaflets, and set to special music. The Sacred Poems, &c., contains 26 hymns, some of which are of considerable merit. [J. J.]

Whiting, John Bradford, M.A., s. of the Rev. James Whiting, M.A., Chaplain under the Hon. E. I. C., was b. at Campore, India, and educated at Caius College, Cambridge, where he held a Scholarship and an Exhibition, and graduated B.A. 1850, and M.A. 1853. On taking Holy Orders he became Ourate of Saffron Walden, 1851: Vicar of Bloomfield, 1861; and Vicar of St. Luke's, Ramsgate, 1875. He was also Chaplain to Bp. Wigram (Rochester), 1864-67, and Commissary to the Bishop of Niger, 1881. His Hymna for the Catholic Church was pub. in 1882. It contains 510 hymns, a few of which are new, but none are of his composing. (See England, Hymnody, Church of.) [Ĵ. J.]

Whiting, Mary Bradford, was b. at Bloomfield, Essex. She is daughter of the Rev. J. B. Whiting, Vicar of St. Luke's, Ramsgate. To her father's Hys. for the Church Catholic, 1882, she contributed:--

1. Come ye yourselves apart and rest awhile. The way is weary, &c. Holy Communion.
2. O Sun of truth and glory. Morping.

7. What was the holy Joy, O Lord. Work.
The heat of these hymne was Nos. 1 and 7. The best of these hymns are Nos. 1 and 7, and all are worthy of attention.

Whiting, William, was b. in Kensington, London, Nov. 1, 1825, and educated at Clapham. He was for several years Master of the Windowster College Choristers' School. His Rural Thoughts and other poems were pub. in 1851; but contained no hymns. His reputation as a hymn-writer is almost exclusively confined to his " Eternal Father, strong to save" (p. $56, L). Other hymns by him were contributed to the following collections :-

i. To the 1869 Appendix to the S. P. C. K. Ps. & Hus.

Whitmore, Lady Lucy E. G. [Staffordshire Hyma-becks, § v.]

Whittier, John Greenleaf, the American Quaker poet, was b. et Haverhill, Massa-chusetts, Dec. 17, 1807. He began life as a farm-boy and shoomaker, and subsequently became a successful journalist, editor and poet. In 1828 he became editor of the American Manufacturer (Boston), in 1830 of the New England Review, and in 1836 (on becoming Secretary to the American Anti-Slavery Society) of the Pennsylvania Freeman. He was also for some time, beginning with 1847, the corresponding editor of the National Era. In 1840 he removed to Amesbury, Massa-chusetts, where most of his later works have been written. At the present time [1890] he lives alternately at Amesbury and Boston. His first poetical piece was printed in the Newburyport Free Press in 1824. Since then his publications have been numerous, including :-

Notwithstanding this extensive use of por-tions of Mr. Whittier's poems as hymns for congregational use, he modestly says concerncongregational use, he modestly says concern-ing himself: "I am really not a hymn-writer, for the good reason that I know nothing of music. Only a very few of my pieces were written for singing. A good hymn is the best use to which poetry can be devoted, but I do not claim that I have succeeded in composing one." (Author's MS.) We must add, how-evez, that these pieces are characterized by rich poetic beauty, sweet tenderness, and deep sympathy with human kind. (See also Index of Authors and Translators.) [J. J.]

Whittingham, William. [014 Version, § ix. 8.]

Whittingham, William Rollinson, D.D., LLD., was b. in New York, Dec. 2, 1805. J. Logan. [God Omnipotent.] Pub. in the Scottish Translations and Paraph., 1781, as a paraphrase of Job xxvi. 6, &c., in 9 st. of 4 l. It is rarely found outside of the Trs. and Paraphs. We have ascribed it to J. Logan on evidence given under Bruce, M., p. 188, ii. [J. J.]

Who is this so weak and helpless? Bp. W. W. How. [Life and Death of Jesus.] This very beautiful hymn in the form of question and answer, on the Life and Death of our Blessed Lord, was pub. in the 1867 Supplement to Morrell and How's Ps. & Hys., in 4 st. of 81. It was revised by Bp. How for the S. P. C. K. Church Hymne, 1871. It is found in a large number of modern hymnals. [J. J.]

Who says, the wan autumnal sun? J. Keble. [Burial. The Widow at Nain.] Dated Sep. 27, 1822, and pub. in the 4th ed. of the Christian Year, 1828, in 13 et. of 5 l., and based upon St. Luke vii. 13, 14, "And when the Lord saw her, He had compassion on her," &c. In R. T. Lowe's Hys. for Christian Seasons, Gainsburgh, 1854, st. iv.-vi., ix. and x., were given as "Who says the widow's heart must break?" In Kennedy, 1863, No. 1328, there is another hymn from this poem and beginning with the same opening line. It is composed of st. iv.-viii. Each of these arrangements forms a good hymn, [J. J.]

Why dost thou best so quick, my heart. F. W. Faber. [Prayer.] Pub. in his Jesus and Mary, &c., 1849, in 12 st. of 4 b. and headed, "Sweetness in Prayer." It was also given in his Hymns, 1862. In Martineau's Hymns, &c., 1873, the cento, "Thy home is with the humble, Lord," is composed of st. viti., ix., and xii. Sometimes it is given as "Thy home is with the humble soul." [J. J.]

ginal Sequences, Hymns, and other Ecclericatical Verses, 1866, p. 75, in 4 st. of 9 l., and headed, "At a Funeral." The hymn for Burial at Sea, "We give his body to the surge," No. 516, in the Hymnary, 1872, is based thereupon. It is one of a very limited number of hymns adapted to that occasion. [J. J.]

Why should I fear the darkest hour? J. Newton. [Jesus All and in All.] Printed in the Gospel Magazine, June, 1771 in 8 st. of 8 l., headed "In uno Jesu omnis," and signed "Omicron." It was included in the Olmey Hymns, 1779, Bk. iii., No. 46, with the heading "Jesus my All." It has passed into a large number of hymn-books both old and new. It is usually abbreviated. [J. J.]

Why should I sorrow more? [Confidence in the Promises.] This hymn in Spurgeon's O. O. H. Bk., 1866, is W. Williams's hymn "My God, my Life, my All," rewritten for that collection by Mr. Spurg-on. Williams's original appeared in bis Gloria in Excelsis, or Hys. of Praise to God and the Lamb, Carmarthen, 1772, No. 67, in 4 st. of 81. [J. J.]

Why should our teers in sorrow flow? [Death of a Minister.] Appeared in the Missionary Minsterl, Lond., 1826. It was by "O. P.," the anonymous compiler of that collection of missionary hymns. It was reprinted in Pratia's Ps. & Hys., 1829, No. 569, in 6 st. of 4 l. From that collection it passed into many hymn-books, especially in America, and is in somewhat extensive use. [W. T. B.]

Why should the children of a [the] King. I. Watta. [Assurance through Faith.] Pub. in his Hys. and Spiritual Songs. 1709, Br. i., No. 144, in 4 st. of 4 l., and headed. "The Witnessing and Scaling Spirit." It was adopted by G. Whitefield in his Coll. of Hys., &c., 1753; A. M. Toplady in his Ps. & Hys., 1776, and others amongst the elder compilers. It is also widely used in G. Britain and America. [J. J.]

Why will ye lavish out your years. P. Doddridge. [Care of the Soul.] In the D. MS. this hymn is undated, but is placed between two hymns which are dated respectively Out. 29, 1735, and November 16, 1735. It was pub. in Job Orton's posthumous ed. of Doddridge's Hymns, &c., 1755, No. 206, in 5 st. of 4 L, and again in J. D. Humphreys's ed. of the same, 1839, No. 229. It is given in most American hymn-books as "Why will ye waste in trifling cares?"

Whytehead, Thomas, M.A., s. of H. R. Whytehead, Rector of Crayke, and Prebendary of Lincoln, was h. at Thormanby, Nov. 30, 1815. He was clucated at Beverley Grammar School, and St. John's College, Cambridge. He was Bell University Scholar; he also won the Chancellor's medal for English Verse twice; the Hulsean prize of 1885; and other distinctions. He was also twenty-second senior optime in the Mathematical Tripos, and second in the first class in the Classical Tripos; B.A. in 1837, and Foundation Fellow of his college the same year. In 1838 he was classical lecturer at Clare College, but left the University for the Cursey of Freshwater, Isla of Wight, on taking Holy Orders in 1839.

In 1841 he was appointed Chaplain to Dr. Selwyn, Bishop elect of New Zealand, and sailed for that country in 1842. He was appointed the first Principal of the Collego which the Bishop established in New Zealand; but owing to the rupture of a blood vessel shortly after landing in New South Wales, he never took any duty in New Zealand. The little time and strength which remained to him he spent in correcting the Maori translation of the Bible and Prayer Book. The end came, however, only too soon, and he d. at Waimate, N. Zealand, March 19, 1849. The esteem in which he was held is emphasised by the fact that "When the new chapel of his collage [St. John's Cambridge] was erected and the vaulted roof was enriched with a series of figures, bautifully executed, according to the several successive centuries of the Christian era, the five which received the distinguished bosour of being selected to represent the nineteenth bosour of being selected to represent the nineteenth occurry, all members of his college, were Henry Martyn, William Wilberforce, William Wordsworth, James Wood, and Thomas Whytehead."—(Mission Life, July 1873, p. 390.)

Whytehead's Poems were pub. by Rivingtons in 1842, and his College Life, posthumously in 1845. In the former there are seven "Hymns towards a Holy Week." Of these "Last of creation's days" (Sixth day) and the widely known "Sabbath of the saints of cid" (q.v.). Five days before he died he wrote to a friend:—

friend:—
"I took up the translation of the Evening Hymu (four verses for service) into Maori rhyming verse, the first of the kind of the same metre and rhythm as the English. Two hundred and fifty copies have been printed, and sung in church and school by the natives, and several of them came and sang under my window. They call it the 'new bymn of the sick minister.' Bishop Ken's lines ['Glory to Thee, my God, this night'] it is very hard for one to compress within the same bounds in a rude language. However it is done, and people seem pleased with ft; and it is a comfort to think one has introduced Bishop Ken's beautiful hymn into the Maori's evening worship, and left them this legacy when I could do no more for them."

Wie ein Vogel lieblich singet. [Morning.] This hymn, which Miss Winkworth appropriately entitles "A Morning Song of Chadness," is included as No. 207 in the Getatreiche Paulmen und Gesänge, Marburg, 1722, in 6 st. of 8 l. It had previously appeared in the ed. of 1690 [Marburg University Library]. In J. Kibner's Christliche, Harfentöne, Hamburg, 1840, p. 239, st. i., iv., vi. are given, marked as "from the year 1580"; and this text is in Knapp's Ev. L. S., 1850, No. 2265 (1865, No. 2823). We have failed to trace the hymn carlier than 1690. The tr. in C. U. is:—

As a bird in measlows fair. A good ir. from Knasp, by Miss Winkworth, in her Lyra Ger., 3nd Ser., 1858, p. 73; repeated in Mrs. Brock's Children's H. Bk., 1881, p. 73; repeated in Mrs. Brock's Children's H. Bk., 1881, p. 75; England, 1963, No. 161, Miss Winkworth rewrote it to the original metro, and there it begins, "As a bird at dawning singeth."

Wie soll ich dich empfangen? P. Gerhardt. [Advent.] 1st pub in the Creger-Runge G. B., 1653, No. 77, in 10 st of 8 l., reprinted in Wackernagel's ed. of Gerhardt's Geistl. Lieder, No. 3, Bachmann's ed., No. 22, and the Unv. L. S., 1851, No. 21. It is founded on St. Matt. xxi. 1-9, the Gospel for the first B. in Advent. The allusions in st. vi.-ix. would suggest that it was written during the Thirty Years' War. It is one of Gerbardt's finest productions, and is probably the best German Advent hymn. Tr. as:—

- 1. How shall I meet my Savieur. In full, by J. C. Jacobi, in his Psalmodia Germanica, 1722, p. 8 (1732, p. 3, slightly altered). Included in the Moravian H. Bk., 1754, and repeated, altered, in later eds. (1886, No. 33). Varying centes under the original first line, but from the Moraviau text, are found in Montgomery's Christian Psalmist, 1825, Dr. Pagenstecher's Coll., 1864, Latrobe's Ps. & Hys., 1841, and Bp. J. M. Wigner now resides near London, and has been for many years in the India Home Civil Service. He is connected with his father's church, and has done much to promote the spiritual welfare of the young. is the author of several hymns, three of which are in the Baptist Ps. and Hys. for School and Home, 1882 :-

1. "Come to the Saviour now!" Invitation. 2. "Lost one! wandering on in adness." Return to God.

3. "Lo, a loving Friend is waiting." The Call of

The first of these is in the Bap. Ps. and Hys., 1880, and is dated 1871. [W. R. S.)

Wigner, John Thomas, was b. at Harwich, in or about the year 1815. When a youth he removed to Burnham, in Essex, where he became a member of a Baptist church. In 1836 he entered Stepney College as a student for the ministry, and in 1840 became pastor at Lynn, in Norfolk. From Lynn he removed in 1866 to Brockley, near London, where very shortly a new chapel was built for him, in which he continues to minister. Mr. Wigner was one of the committee which brought out, in 1858, the wellknown Baptist Hymn-book Ps. & Hys. He was the editor of the Supplement to that book, which appeared in 1880, and was also editor of the Baptist Ps. and Hys. for School and Home, 1882. In these books two of his hymns were included: (1) "Hark! 'tis the song of heaven" (The Angels' Song at the Birth of Christ), and (2) "O Lord, revive Thy work" (Prayer for a Revival). A third, which appears in the above-named School H. Bk. is an adaptation by Mr. Wigner of a well-known bymn by Mrs. Reed, "O do not let the word depart" (Expostulation with the Awakened). [W. R. S.]

Wilhelm (II. or IV.), Duke of Saches-Weimar, a of Duke Johann of Sachse-Weimar, was b in the castle of Altenburg, April 11, 1598. He studied for some time at the University of Jena, devoting himself especially to music and mathematics. On the outbreak of the Thirty Years' War he espoused the cause of Friedrich v. of the Palatinate. At the battle of the Weisse Berg, wounded, and at the bettle fought near Stadt-lohn, in Westphalia (Aug., 1623), he was at first left for dead, and then taken prisoner by Tilly. In 1625 the Emperor allowed him to go free, and he assumed the government of Weimar. When Gustavus Adolphus came to Germany (1630), Wilhelm did not join him till after the battle of Breitenfeld (Sept., 1631), and in July, 1635, he was one of the consenting parties to the Peace of Prague, between Saxony and the Emperor, in consequence of which the Swedish troops made various inreads on his territory. When the final partition took place, in 1644, between himself and his surviving brother (Sachee-Weimar fell to Wilholm, and Gotha to Ernst) he set himself earnestly to restore prosperity and godliness in the regions under his rule. He also found more time (especially after the peace of Westphalia, 1648), to devote to his studies in poetry and music, and B.A. and B.SC. in the London University. Mr. | to the adornment of Weimar. He d. at Wei426; Bode, p. 172, &c.).

Wilhelm joined, in 1817, in founding the Fruitbearing Society, the great German Literary and Patriotic Union of the 17th cent.; and, after the death (1850) of Ludwig, Prince of Athalt-Colten, became its head. Weimar thus became the centre of its operations, in the direction of which the Duke was assisted by Georg Neumark (p. 796, i.). Neumark, in his Palmones, 1680, p. 449, speaks of the Duke as having "composed several hymna, as well-known in this place, especially the short Hymn of Peace "Gott der Friede hat gegeben."

Besides this hymn on Peace only one other is known as Wilhelm's, viz. :-

Herr Jesu Christ, dich zu uns wend. Public Worship. This was included as No. 124 in the 2nd ed., 1651, of pt. i. of the Cantionale Sacrum, Gotha (1st ed. 1646), in 4 st. of 4 L, entitled "To be sung before the Sermon." As no author's name is there given, and as it did not appear in any of the three parts of the original ed, of 1646-48, the Duke's authorship is deci-dedly doubtful. So far as yet traced the Duke's name was not attached to it until in the Altdorf Lieder frend of 1676 (Fischer's Supplement, p. 71). In J. Niedling's Handbücklein, 4th ed., 1655, p. 746, it appears without author's name (Niedling, be it observed, was living at Altenburg), and entitled "A heartfelt petition of pions Christians for grace and the help of the Holy Spirit, during Divine Service, before the Ser-mon." Koch says it was in the 1st ed., 1638, of Niedling, but this appears to be merely a guess, for the earliest ed. of Niedling which he describes at iii., 109, is that of 1655; and if it were in Niedling's 1638 ed., this circumstance would make the Duke's authorship still more unlikely. Whoever the author was the hymn soon became justly popular, and in 1678 was formally directed to be sung in all the churches in Saxony on all Sundays and festivals. It is a simple and forcible hymn, which survived the Rationalistic period, and is found in all recent German hymn books, e.g. in the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 356. Tr. as:-

I. Lord Christ, reveal Thy boly Pace. In full by J. C. Jacobi, in his Psal. Ger., 1722, p. 42 (1732, p. 69). Repeated as No. 322 in pt. i. of the Moravian H. Bk., 1754 (1886, No. 724), and > Williams, David, a contemporary of William Williams (1717-1791) and author of numerous Welsh hymns. He also wrote English hymns, some of which were pub. in a small tract of 24 pp., entitled, Joy in the Tents of Zion, or a Few Gospel Hymna, Brecknock, 1779. These hymns are rough, and in the style of W. Williams. There is a wild Welsh beauty about them which makes itself felt under the restraints of a gloomy Calvinism and a half foreign language. The original [W. T. B.] tract is very rare.

> Williams, David, of Bethesda'r Frô, was a minister with the Independents in South Wales. He was b. at a farm-house, called Trehedyn, near Cowbridge, Glamorganahire. In 1812 he published a collection of hymns, which he called Llais y Durtur, or The Voice of the Turtle Done. In 1824 he published a new edition under the title of Dyfroedd Bethesda, containing 148 hymns and 10 songs. Many of his hymns are still used by all deno-[W. G. T.] minations in Wales.

> Williams, Edward, or Iole Merganug, the greatest Welsh scholar of his time, published two vols. of hymns under the title Saiman yr Eglwys yn yr Anialwch, "The Pealms of the Church in the Wilderness." He is the chief author of the Myvyrian Archaeology of Wales. His hymns were chiefly [W. G. T.] used by the Unitarians.

> Williams, Helen Marla, daughter of Charles Williams, an officer in the Army, was b. in the North of England in 1762. Through the influence of Dr. A. Kippis (a. 625, L) whose help she sought in London, her first poem, Educin and Elbruda, a legendary tale, was pub. in 1782. This was followed by An Ode on the Peace, 1783, and Pern, a Poem. These were all included in her Poems, 2 vols., 1786, 2nd ed. 1791. Being connected by her sister's marriage with a French Protestant family, she resided in Paris during the period of the Revolution and the reign of Terror. There she became well known as a political writer of strong republican sympa-thies, but her too independent expressions of opinion led to her temporary imprisonment by Bohespierre. Her Letters from France, 1790, were pub. in England and America, and in a French translation, in France. She also pub. Letters containing a Sketch of the Politics of France from the 31st May, 1793, till the 28th of July, 1794, 2 vols., 1795, and other works of a like kind; some additional Poems, and a tr. of Humboldt's Personal Narratives of his Travels, 1815. The closing years of her life were spent at Amsterdam, in the house of her nephew, Athanase Coquerel, a pastor of the Reformed Church there. Miss Williams d. in 1827. From her Poess, 1786, the following hymus have come into C. U.:

> 1. Hy field, all nature owns Thy away. Nature speaks of God. In Martineau's Hymns, 1840.
> 2. While Thee I seek, protesting Power. Safety in God. This hymn was in Dr. Priestley's Eirmingham Coll., 1790; in Kippid's Coll., 1795; the Rector Coll., 1801; and atmost every other Unitarian collection to the present time. In the New Cong. H. Bl., 1839; it begins "While Thee I seek, Almighty Power;" and in several collections a cento beginning "Father, in all our [my] comforts here," is given as in Stowell's Ps. d Hys., 1831 and 1877, and several others.

[V. D. D.]

Williams, Isaac, B.D., was b. at Cwmcynfelin in Cardiganshire, Dec. 12, 1802, where his mother happened to be staying at her father's house at the time of his birth. But his parents' house was in Bloomsbury, London, his father being a Chancery barrister at Lincoln's Inn. He received his early education from a clergyman named Poleliampton, with whom he was at first a day pupil in London, but whom he afterwards accompanied to a curacy at Worplesdon, near Guildford, All Mr. Polehampton's pupils (15), with the exception of Isaac Williams and his two older brothers, were being prepared for Eton, where great stress was laid upon Latin versification; and it was in these early years that Isaac Williams acquired his fondness for, and proficiency in, this species of composition. In 1814 he was removed to Harrow, where Mr. Drury was his private tutor. He gained several school prizes, and became so used, not only to write, but to think, in Latin, that when he had to write an English theme he was obliged to translate his ideas, which were in Latin, into English. In 1821 he proceeded to Trinity College, Oxford, that college being chosen on the advice of Mr. Drury; and in his second term he was elected scholar of Trinity. In 1823 he won the University Prize for Latin Verse, the subject being Ars Geologica. The gaining of this prize was indirectly the turning point of his life, for it brought him into close relationship with John Keble, who may be termed his spiritual father. He had been previously introduced to Mr. Koblo by the Vicar of Aberystwith, Mr. Richards, whom he had mot at his grandfather's house. But there was no intimacy between them until he had won the Latin Verse Prize, when Mr. Keble came to his rooms and offered to look over the poem with him before it was recited and printed. This led to an intimate acquaintance which ripened into a warm friendship of infinite benefit to Isaac Williams's spiritual life. Mr. Keble offered to take him with him into the country and read with him during the Long Vacation, without any payment. Robert Wilberforce, then an undergraduate of Oriel, was also to be of the party. They settled at Southrop, near Fairford, a name familiar to the readers of Keble's Life. Here Issac Williams made the acquaintance of Hurrell Froude, who was also reading with Mr. Keble, and this acquaintance also ripened into a friendship which was terminated only by death. Keble was like a boy with his pupils, entering with zest into all their amusements, but he also exercised a deep influence over their religious characters, especially that of Isaac Williams. Williams spent this and all his subsequent Long Vacations at Southrop, and became more and more influenced for good by Mr. Keble. He also became a great friend of Sir George Prevost, then an undergraduate of Oriel, who afterwards married his only sister. During one of these sejourns at Southrop, Keble showed Williams and Fronde a Ms. copy of the Christian Year, but, strange to say, the young men did not appreciate its beautics. Williams's intimacy with Keble caused alarm to Mr. Hughes, the successor of the Vicar of Aberystwith who had first brought the two together; Mr. Hughes was greatly shocked to hear that he was a friend of Mr. Keble of Oriel, and mid he would introduce him to a most excellent and promising person there, a Mr. Newman, whom the evangelical vicar knew in connexion with the Church Missionary Society, and who would, he doubtless thought, supply an antidote to Keble's High Church opinions. Williams was an undergraduate at Oxford, though he was a member of Trinity College, he spent much of his time at Oriel, attracted thither, not only because it was Keble's college, but also because he had many friends there, the chief of whom were the Wilber-forces, Ryder, Anderson (now Sir C. Anderson), Hurrell Froude, and Sir G. Prevost. As an accomplished scholar who had the benefit of Keble's tuition, it was naturally expected that he would take a high degree; and so, no doubt, he would have done, had he not attempted too much. In spite of the warnings of friends, he resolved to aim at a "double first," and, as mathematical studies were not to his taste, the labour over this uncongenial work in addition to the necessary preparation for the classical school was too severe for him; his health broke flown, and he was obliged to be content with a pass degree. In 1829 he was ordained to the cursey of Windrush, about twelve miles from Fairford where Keble then lived, and about twenty from Bisley, where his brother in-law, Sir George Prevost, who was now married, was curate. But he did not stay long at Windrush. Passman though he was, he competed successfully for a Trinity Fellow-ship, and had to return to Oxford the same year as college tutor. He lived on terms of great intinacy with Hurrell Fronde, then Fellow of Oriel, and was introduced by him to J. H. Newman, to whom he was much attracted, like almost all who were brought into contact with that remarkable man. The attraction appears to have been mutual, and Williams became Newman's curate at S. Mary's, Oxford, which then included the village or rather hamlet of Littlemore. In 1842 he married Caroline, the third daughter of Arthur Champernown, of Dartington Hall, Devon, left Oxford, and went to Bialey as curate to Mr. T. Keble. So far as his outer life went, little more need be said. Nothing seems to have occurred to ruffle its placid course, except one episode which occurred in 1841-2. When John Keble resigned the Poetry Professorship at Oxford, he was naturally anxious that his friend Williams should be his successor. Not only was there a warm personal friendship and an entire sympathy of opinion on the most important of all matters between the two men, but on the score of poetical merit, Williams seemed to him obviously the proper person. He had already published several of his poetical works, and his reputation as a sacred poet was second only to that of Keble himself. But he was also identified in a peculiar way with the Tract writers. He had actually written that Truct which, next to the memorable Tract 90, had given the greatest offence of all, viz.: Tract 80, on Reserve in the Communication of Religious Knowledge, and he was also known as the especial friend and late coadjutor of Nowman. It is not, therefore, surprising that vehement opposition was raised against his election. A rival candidate was found in the person of Mr. Edward Garbett, of Brasenose, a First Classman, but quite unknown in the domain of poetry. There was really no comparison whatever between the fitness of the two candidates, but that counted for little when men's minds were heated by the "odium theologicum. It became simply a party question; but a public contest was happily averted by a private comparison of votes, when it was found that there was a large majority of votes in favour of Mr. Garbett. Mr. Williams was much hurt-not by the opposition of the Low Churchmen, for he expected that,—but by the desertion of several whom he counted upon as friends. He withdrew from Oxford and from public life (which had never possessed much attraction to a man of his retiring and studious habits) altogether. He remained at Bisley until 1848, when he removed to Stinchcombe; and there he lived until his death. From time to time some cultured and thoughtful work from his pen was given to the world, but that was all; and when the sunconcement that he had quietly passed away on SS. Philip and James' Day, May 1, 1865, appeared, the outer world bed almost forgotten that he was still living, though it had not forgotten, and will not, it is hoped, while the English language lasts, ever forget his writings. He died of a decline, the seeds of which had long been sown.

As a devotional writer both in prose and verse the name of Issue Williams stands deservedly high, but as a writer of hymns for congregational use, he does not, either for quantity or quality, at all reach the first rank. Indeed, it would have been very distressing to him if he had done so, for he shared the distasts which most of the early leaders of the Oxford movement felt for the congregational use of any metrical hymns apart from the Proller, and it is said that he purposely made his translations of the Hymns from the Parisian Breviary rough, in order to prevent them from being so used. His poetical works are :-- works are:—

(1) The Cathedral, his first publication in verse, issued in the early part of 1838. It was written about the same time as the famous Fract on Reserve, and "in pursuance of the same great object we had undertaken" (in the Thats for the Times). What that object was is intimated in the alternative title, The Cathedral, or the Cathedral and Apottokic Charech in England. It followed very much the same lines as George Herbert's Respit, only it worked out the ideas for more in detail, connecting each part of the edites with some portion of church doctrine or discipline. The whole volume is written in the true spirit of poetry, and some of the someten in it are good specimens of that difficult form of composition; but it contains scarcely any verses out of which even centes of hymns can be formed.

(2.) Later on in the same year (1838) he published a volume, entitled Thoughts is Past Tears, though, as the little implies, many of its contents were written at an arriser date. In fact the composition ranged over a period of at least twelve years. In the writer's own opinion there was more true, poetry in this volume than in The Cuthedral, but the latter had the advantage of being written on one systematic plan, while the Thoughts was a collection of detached poems. The connexion between the four divisions of the volume was, that they were all suggested by the writer's surroundings. Thus the "Golden Valley" was the beautiful district in the neighbourhood of Stroud known by that name; "The Mountain Home" was the writer's own birthplace, Cwmeynfeifn in Caudigansbire; "The River's Bank" was the River Windrush, on the banks of which was the writer's first curacy; "The Sacred City" is Oxford. In a later edition (1852) there is an additional division entitled "The side of the Hill," that is, Stinchcombe Hill, Gloucestershire. Like The Cathedral, this is rather a volume of sonnets and sacred porms for private use, than of hymns in the popular sense of the term, This same volume contains his Religious Latina; or Harriots School Exercises, and his Oxford Prize Poem, Ara Goologica. The Latinity of these poems fully bears not the writer's own remark, that in bis early years he was more at home in Latin than he was in his own language. It also contained a translation of the "Dies Ire, Dies Hill," to which, in the revised and enlarged edition of 1848, were added, under the title of Lyra Eccletistics, a number of translations from other Latin and Greek Hyrons. These translations from other Latin and Hyrons Revenitors. Revenitors. He thought that "the part very lies, and are not respect, as they were certainly not intended, for congregational use, (3.) His next publication was Hysens translated from the Parinian Breviery, 1839. He thought that "the ancient Latin hymns were the best course from which our acknowledged deficiency in metrical pealmody should be supplied, as being much more congenist of the splitt of our own liturgy than those hymns which are too often made to take part in our ancient services;" and he had already published many of the translations which appear in this volume, at lotervals from 1833 to 1837, in the British Hagarise, the church organ which was edited by Hugh James Rose. A few hymns from this volume, e.g. "O Heavenly Jerusalem," "Disposer Supreme," "O Word of God above," have been adopted for congregational use, but most of these are, perhaps purposely, done into such irregular metras, that they are not available for the purpose. Indirectly, however, they have been highly serviceable to the cause of congregational palmody, for Mr. Chandler tells us in the Freface to his Hymns of the Printities Charact that Mr. Williams's translations in the British Hagarine led him to produce that work.

Preface to his Hydras of the Prinattive Charch that Mr. Williams's translations in the British Engurine led him to produce that work.

(4.) The next little volume, Hydras on the Cattchism, was written at Blakey and published in 1842. Its object was strictly practical: it was intended as "an aid towards following out that catechetical instruction which is so easential a part of the church system." It cannot be said that these hymns are likely to be so attractive to children, as, for example, those of Mrs. Alexander, but they are suitable for congregational, or at any rate, for Sunday school use, and one of them, "Be Thom my Guardian and my Guide," has found its way deservedly into most collections.

(5.) In the same year (1842) a much more ambitious work, The Baptistery, also saw the light. One seems to recognize in this work the pupil of John Keble, for its leading idea is very much the same as that of Tract 89, viz.: that earthly things are a shadow of heavenly. It is divided into thirty-two "Images," as the author terms them; it is not easy reading, but it well repays the careful attention which it requires, for both in form and matter it is the product of a true poet. One of the "Images," the 20th, "The Day of Days, or the Grass Manifectation," has supplied our well-known hymn, "Lord, in tits, Thy mercy's day," but the general tenour of the work is quite apart from hymnody.

(b.) The same may be said of The Albar, published in the which takes the second or rest Serament of the (6.) The same may be said of The Altar, published in 1847, which takes the second great Sacrament of the Gospel, as The Buptistary took the first, for the basis of a series of devon meditations, 24 in number. The let a series of devont meditations, 24 in number. The 1st cd. was Illustrated by 34 pictures, one to each meditation, after the fashion of a foreign book which the writer had seen; but the illustrations were thought unworthy of the subject, and the later editions appeared without them. The object of the work was to connect the various events which occurred at the time of our Blessed Lord's Passion with the Bucharistic Service. It consists exclusively of a series of sonnets, and supplies no hymna for compressional this. no hymns for congregational use.

(7.) In the same year (1849) appeared another work of a very different type. It is entitled The Christian Scholar, and its object is "to render the study of the classics subservient to a higher wisdom." It incidentally gives us an interesting insight into the authorise own training under Mr. Keble, for he tells us in the Preface that he himself "distived, not merely moral benefit, but actual religious training from this indirect mode of instruction in another to whom he owes everything that renders life valuable." The plan of the book is, in a word, to take passages from all the chief classical authors, and to give Christian comments on each.

(8) His only other poetical work was Ancient Hymne for Chickren, 1942, which consisted of a reprint, with slight alterations, of 30 of his firs from the Latin, previously published in 1838 and 1839 as above.

Although Isaac Williams's prose writings are as valuable, and perhaps more popular than his verse, yet from the point of view of this article it will suffice to enumerate the principal of them. They include-

Several reviews for The British Critic at various dates; Thoughts on the Study of the Cospets, 1842; Sermons on the Characters of the Old Testament, 1856; Sermons on the Characters of the Old Testament, 1858; The Beninning of the Book of Generic, with Notes and Reflections, 1861; The Pealms interpreted of Christ, vol. i., 1864 (no other volumes were published); A Memoir of the Ren. R. A. Sucking, intel Perpetual Curate of Busage, 1852; A Harmony of the Four Gospets, 1850; Sermons on the Englets and Gospets, vols., 1853; Sermons on the Female Characters of Holy Seripture, 1869; The Apocalypse, 1851, and many other minor works. minor works.

Besides these, he edited a large number of Plain Sermons at different dates by various writers, and he also wrote some of the Tracts for the Times, notably Tract 80 (1838), and 87 (1840), on Reserve in Communicating Religious Knowledge. It is difficult to see why these should have given so much offence. principles on which the conclusion is based are obviously correct. Perhaps the title Reserve was alarming when men's minds were excited by the fear that they were being led by the new Oxford school they knew not whither. These two Tracts, with Tract 86, also by Isaac Williams, would fill an octavo volume of more than 200 pages. Both the character and the writings of Isaac Williams are singularly attractive. They both present a striking combination of qualities which are not often found in union. He was as firm as a rock in the maintenance and expression of his principles, but so quiet and retiring that his personality came far less before the public than that of any of the other leaders of the Oxford movement. His writings are so Christian and unaggressive in their tone that we are won over to his side almost without knowing it. He was a most valuable ally on this very account to his party, and the hymnologist may well regret that he did not devote his exquisite poetical teste, his refined culture, and his ardent piety more to hymn-writing than he [J. H. Q.] did.

Issae Williams's position in hymnody does not lie so much in the actual work which he did, as in the influence he had over others. His tra. from the Latin, mainly through the metres which he deliberately adopted, have not had a wide acceptance in the hymnody of the Church. J. Chandler, however, has left it on record that Williams's trs. in the British Magazine led him to undertake kindred work, and Chandler's trs. are amongst the most popular in the English language. Williams's Hymns on the Catechism, 1842, were with Dr. Neale's Hymns for Children of the eame year the forerunners of the more popular productions on the same lines by later writers. Williams's tra together with the more important of his original hymne may be traced through the Index of Authors and Translators. Of his original hymns the following are also in C. U.:-

1. How solemn, silent, and how still. Obsidence

1. How we will be the first the first three to the first three
God. (1842.)
6. The High Priest once a year. Ascension. (1842.) The dates here given indicate the works in which these hymna appeared. [J. J.]

Williams, John, D.D., LL.D., was b. at Deerfield, Massachusetts, Aug. 30, 1817; graduated at Trinity College, 1835, and was ordained in 1838. From 1842 to 1848 be was Rector at Scheuectady, New York, and President of Trinity College, Hartford, Connecticut, from 1848 to 1853. In 1861 he was consecrated Assistant Bishop of Connecticut, taking, in 1865, the full charge of that diocese. Bishop Williams is an eminent scholar. His contributions to hymnology were Ancient Hymns of Holy Church. Hartford, 1845, being tre. from the Latin; the "Additional Hymns," pp. the Latin; the "Additional Hymns," pp. 81-127, were selected from the trs. from the Latin by Isaac Williams. A few of Bp. Williams's tra. have come into C. U. (See Index of Authors and Translators.) [J. J.]

Williams, William, of Pantycelyn, was the Sweet Singer of Wales. He was b. at Cefn-y-Cood, in the Parish of Llanfair-y-bryn, near Llandovery, in 1717. He was ordained a descen of the Established Church in 1740, by Dr. Claget, Bishop of St. Davids, and for three years he served the Curacies of Llauwrtyd and Llanddewi-Abergwesyn. He never received Priest's Orders. He became early acquainted with the revivalist Daniel Bowlands, and for thirty-five years he presched once a month at Llaullian and Caio and Liansawel, besides the preaching journeys he took in North and South Weles. He was held in great esteem as a preacher. In 1744 his first book of hymns appeared under the title of Halleluiah, and soon ran through three editions. In 1762, he published another book under the title of Y Môr o Wydr, which soon went through five editions. His son John pub. an excellent edition of his hymns in the year 1811. In addition to his Welsh hymns Williams also pub. several in English as:--

(1.) Horannah to the Son of David; or, Hymns of Praise to God, For our plorious Redemption by Christ. Some few translated from the Welsh Hymn-Book, but Some few translated from the Welsh Hymn-Book, but mostly composed on new Subjects. By Wilkiam Williams. Bristol: Printed by John Grabham, in Narrow-Wine Street, 1749. This contains 51 hymns of which it are fr. from his Welsh bymns. This little book was reprinted by D. Sedgwick in 1869.

(2.) Gloria in Brechtis or, Hymns of Praise to God and the Lamb. By W. Williams. ... Carmarthes. Printed for the Author by John Ross, removed to Priory Street and the Chicagh.

Sirect, near the Church, M.DCC.LXXI. This contains 70 hymns, not including parts.

From these volumes the following hymns are in C. U.:-

i. From the Hosannah, 1759:-

- 1. Jesus, my Saviour is enough. Jesus, All in All.
- 2. My God, my God, Who art my all. Communion with God desired.

Williams is most widely known through his two hymns, "Guide me, O Thou great Jehovah," and "O'er those gloomy hills of darkness." Williams d. at Pantycelyn, Jan. 11, 1791. [See Walsh Hymnody.] [W. G. T.]

Willis, Nathaniel Parker, was b. at Portland, Maine, Jan. 20, 1807, and educated at Yale College, graduating in 1826. After writing for a time for the American Monthly Magazine, which he established, and the New York Mirror, into which the former was merged, he was attached to the American Legation at the French Court. His stay in Europe extended from 1831 to 1837. On his return he became in 1839 one of the editors of The Corsair. His works are numerous, and include Sacred Poems, 1843. He d. Jan. 29, 1867. His sister, Mrs. Parton, is the well-known "Fanny Fern." His hymn—"The perfect world by Adam trod" (Dedication of a Place of Worship), was "Written to be sung at the Consecration of Hanover Street [Unitarian] Church, Boston," in 1826, and since then has been widely used, although of F. M. B.1 no exceeding merit.

Willkommen unter deiner Schaar. N. L. von Zingendorf. [Christian Church.] The origin of this hymu was somewhat remarkable. On May 10, 1737, Zinzendorf had been consecrated, at Berlin, by Daniel Ernst Jablonsky (see p. 784, ii.), as Bishop and Ordinary of the Moravian Brethren's Unity. In 1744 J. L. Dober, who had officiated as General-Elder (General-Aelteste) of the entire Moravian connexion, resigned his office. Zinzendorf then held (from Sept. 11 to Sept. 23, 1741) a note-worthy synodical conference at London at which the assembled brethren agreed that no suitable successor to Dober could be found in their midst. On Sept. 16, 1741, they there-fore resolved to beseech the Lord Jesus Christ Himself to take the office of General-Elder of the entire Unity, and, as on casting lots the result was favourable to their wishes, they took for granted that He had assumed this position, and appointed 12 Assistant-Elders (Vice-Aelteste) to form the directing General Conference of the Unity, Zinzendort's power of general superintendence being abolished (see Kock, v. 264). It was on this occasion that Zinzendorf wrote this hymn. Albert Knapp in his ed. of Zinzendorf's Geistliche Gedichio (1845, p. 288), entitles it "When Jesus assumed the position of General-Elder," and dates it Sept. 16, 1741. It was included in Appx. 11., circa 1748, to the Herrnhut G. B., as No. 1778, and in 14 st. of 8 l. In the Brisder G. B., 1778, No. 1099, st. vi.-viii. were omitted, and in the Hist. Nachricht thereto (ed. 1851, p. 188) it is dated "In London, 16 Sept., 1741." Tr. as:—

Wilt Thou forgive that sin when I began. John Donne. [Lent.] Concerning this hymn, to which special reference is made in the article on Early English Hymnody, Izaak Walton says, in his Life of Donne, after quoting the hymn in detail :-

"I have the rather mentioned this hymn for that he caused it to be set to a most grave and solemn time, and to be often sung to the organ by the Choristers of St. Paulis [Cathedrai] Church in his own hearing, especially at the evening service, and at his return from his customary devotions in that place, did occasionally say to a friend, "the words of this hymn have restored to me the same thoughts of joy that possessed my soul in my sickness, when I composed it. And, O the power of Church-music! that harmony added to this hymn has raised the affections of my beart, and quickened my grave of seal and gratitude: and I observe that I always return from paying this public duty of prayer and praise with an unexpressible tranquillity of mind, and a willingness to leave the world."—Walton's Lécez, 1670.

The special sickness during which this hymn was composed fell upon the author during the earlier part of his life. It was sung at St. Paul's Cathedral, at intervals from 1621 to 1631, when Donne died. It was published subsequently in Donne's Poems in 1683; again in 1635, and in later editions, and is has all in 1000, and in later cuttories, and in usually entitled, "A Hymn to God the Rather," Orig. text in Walton's Lives, 1670 (1850, pp. 53-4). [English Hymnedy, Early, § VII.]

Winchester, Caleb Thomas, x.a., was b. in 1847. He is Professor of Rhetoric and English Literature in the Wesleyan University, Middletown, Connecticut. His hymu, "The Lord our God alone is strong" (Dedication of a Science Hall), was written for the opening of the Orange Jadd Hall of Natural Science, Wesleyan University, Middletown. It was included in the Meth. Episco. Hymnal, 1878 (Nutter's Hymn Studies, 1884). [J. J.]

Winckler, Johann Joseph, s. of Gottfried Winckler, town clerk of Lucka, Sachse-Altenburg, was b. at Lucka, Dec. 23, 1670. He became a student of Theology at the University of Leipzig, during the time when A. H. Francke and J. C. Schade were holding their Bible readings, and his sympathics henceforth were with the Pietistic movement. In 1692 he was appointed preacher to the St. George's Hospital at Magdeburg, and afternoon preacher at St. Peter's Church there. He became chaplain to the Prince Christian Ludwig regiment in 1695, and went with it to Holland and Italy. After the Peace of Ryswijk (Oct. 80, 1697) he made a tour in Holland and England. Returning to Magde-burg, he was appointed, in 1698, diaconus of the Cathedral, and in 1703 also inspector of the so-called Holzkreis. Finally, in 1714, he became chief preacher at the Cathedral, and in 1716, also Consistorial rath. He d. at Magdeburg, Aug. 11, 1722 (Wetsel, iii. 437; Grischow-Kirchner Nachricht to Freylinghausen, p. 53; Koch, iv. 983; Blätter für Hymnologie, 1888, p. 170, &c.).

Hymnologic, 1888, p. 170, &c.).

Winckler was a man who had the conrage of his opinions, and his hymn No. iv. below is a picture of the stand be was willing to make when conscience bade him. Not that he was foul of controversy, but rather the reverse. Twice however he raised considerable feeling against himself in Magdeburg, first by the position he took up against thority going, and afterwards by his well-meant attempts to bring about a closer union between the Lutheran and Reformed churches in Prussla. But the opposition he encountered he bore patiently, and in the spirit of his hymn No. i. below. His hymns, some 21 mall, supeared mostly in the Appe. to the 2nd ed., 1703, of H. G. Meuss's Heb-Opfer (p. 799, ii.), in Poret's G. H., Fertin, 1708, and in Freylinghausen's News gentracket G. H., 1714. They rank among the better productions of the earlier Pleidsic writers, and a red distinguished by from faith, exmestness, and pleaversqueness; but are somewhat lengthy and frequently in unusual incress.

Those of Winckler's hymns which have passed into English are :-

i. Meine Seele sanket sich, Resignation. 1st pub. in the 1703 ed. of Neuss's Heb-Opfer, p. 248, in 6 st. of 6 L, entitled "Ps. 62 v. 1. My soul is still towards God." Repeated in Freylinghausen, 1714, No. 511, and in the Unv. L. S., 1851, No. 714. It is a fine hymn on patient waiting upon God's will. Tr. as :-

Yea, my spirit fain would sink. In full, by Miss Winkworth in her Lyra Ger., 1st Ser., 1855, p. 198. In her C. B. for England, 1863, No. 138, it is greatly altered, beginning "In Thy heart and hands, my God"; and this form is No. 419 in the Ohio Luth. Hyl., 1880.

Another tr. is : "Wearlig my spirit sinketh," by Mrs. Bevan, 1858, p. 65.

ii. O sitter Stand, o telig Leben. Christian Simplicity. In Porst's G. B., 1708, p. 519 (1711, No. 642), in 8 st. of 8 l., repeated in Freylinghousen, 1714, No. 822, and in the Unv. L. S. 1851, No. 331. The trs. are :-

1. O sweet condition, happy Living. This, omitting st, iii., is No. 658 in pt, i. of the Moravier, II. Bk., 1754.

2. O blest condition, happy living. This is a tr. of st. i., ii., vi., viii., based on the 1754 version, as No. 441 in the Moravian H. Bk., 1789 (1886, No. 584), lil. Ringe rooht, wenn Gottee Gnade. Christian Warfare. A thoughtful and powerful hymn, included as No. 359 in Freylinghausen, 1714, in 23 st. of 4 L, and thence in the Unc. L. S., 1851, No. 336. Wetzel, iii. 437, says it was written as a hymn on the three favourite Scripture passages of Ursula Maria Zorn, of Berlin, and was 1st pub. at the end of her funeral sermon by Johann Lysius, pastor of St. George's Church, Berlin. Thus st. i .- v. are founded on St. Luke xiii. 24; vi.-xv. on Philipp. li. 12; and xvi.zziii. on Gen. ziz. 15-22. The trs. in C. U. are:

1. Strive, when thou art call'd of God. This is a good tr. of st. i., iii.-vii., xii., xiii., xv., xvi. by Miss Winkworth, in her Lyra Ger., 1st Ser., 1855, p. 46. Repeated, abridged, in Kennedy, 1863; the Harrow School H. Bk., 1886, and Rugby School H. Bk., 1876.

2. Strive eright when God doth call thee. This is a tr. of st. i., iil., iv., xii., xiii., xv., xvi., by Miss Winkworth, founded on her Lyra Ger. version, as No. 128 in her C. H. for England, 1863. Repeated in the Marlborough College II. Bk., 1869.

3. Thou must wrestle, when God's mercy. is a tr. of st. i., ii., r., xxii., signed E. T. L., as No. 230, in Dr. Pagenstecher's Coll., 1864.

Another tr. is: "Wrestle on! for God is pleading," by Miss Burlingham in the British Herald, Sept., 1985, p. 137.

iv, Bollt loh aus Furcht vor Menschenkindern. Adherence to Christ. A hymn on Constancy, and against cowardice and time-serving. In Porst's G. B., 1708, p. 1135 (1711, No. 701), in 17 st. of 4 l. Repeated in Freylinghausen, 1714, No. 541 (entitled " For a Preacher"), in the Unv. L. S. 1851, No. 658, &c. The fr. in C. U. is:-

Shall I for fear of feeble man. This is a vigorous tr. in 10 st. (representing st. i.-lil., zil.-xv., zvil.; st. iv. being freely from vl., vii., and st. v. from viii., xi.), by J. Wesley in the Hys. & Sac. Poems, 1739 (P. Works, 1868-72, vol. i. p. 177). Included in full in the Moravian H. Bh., 1754 (1849, No. 875 abridged). In the Wes. H. Bh., 1780, st. i .- vii. were included as No. 270; st. viii.-x. being added in the ed. of 1800 (1875, No. 279). The full form is in the Meth. N. Conn. H. Bk., 1863, and in Mercer's C. P. & H.

• Dr. J. F. Bachmann in his Zur Geschichte der Ber-Kiner Geaungbücker, 1866, was only able to describe the 3rd ed. of 1713. Winkler, Edwin Theodore, D.D., was b. in Savannah, Nov. 13, 1823, and educated at Brown University. He entered the Baptist ministry in 1846, and subsequently filled several important literary and other appoint-ments in addition to his pastorates. He d. at Marion, Alabama, Nov. 10, 1888. He compiled The Sacred Lute, a Collection of popular Hymns, 1855 (enlarged ed., 1860), to which he contributed 8 hymns, the first lines of which are given in Burrage. (Burrage's Baptist H. Writers, 1888, p. 416.) Some of these have passed into other American collections, including "Our land with mercies crowned." (National Hymn.)

Winkworth, Catherine, daughter of HenryWinkworth, of Alderley Edge, Cheshire, was b. in London, Sep. 13, 1829. Most of her early life was spent in the neighbourhood of Manchester. Subsequently she removed with the family to Clifton, near Bristol. She d. suddenly of heart disease, at Monnetier, in Savoy, in July, 1878. Mies Winkworth pub.:-

Trs. from the German of the Life of Pastor Fischer, the Founder of the Sisterhood of Protestant Deaconesses & Kaiserworth, 1861; and of the Life of Amelia Sieveking, 1861.

Her sympathy with practical efforts for the benefit of women, and with a pure devotional life, as seen in these tra, received from her the most practical illustration possible in the deep and active interest which she took in educational work in connection with the Clifton Association for the Higher Education of Women, and kindred societies there and elsewhere. Our interest, however, is mainly centred in her hymnological work as embodied in her :-

(1) Lyra Germanica, 1st Ser., 1965. (2) Lyra Germanica, 2nd Sar., 1858. (3) The Charale Book for England (containing trs. from the German, together with match), 1863; and (4) her therming biographical work, the Christian Singers of Germany, 1869.

In a sympathetic article on Miss Winkworth in the Inquirer of July 20, 1878, Dr. Martineau says:

"The translations contained in these volumes are invariably faithful, and for the most part both terse and delicate; and an admirable art is applied to the manage-ment of complex and difficult versification. They have here or complex and camerat verances on They five her fact quite the firs of John Wesley's versions of Moravian hymns, or the wooderful fusion and reproduction of thought which may be found in Coleridge. But II lets flowing they are more conscientions than either, and attain a result as poetical as severe exactitude admits, being only a little short of 'native music.'"

Dr. Percival, then Principal of Clifton College, also wrote concerning her (in the Bristol Times and Mirror), in July, 1878:—

"She was a person of remarkable intellectual and social gifts, and very unusual attainments; but what specially distinguished her was her combination of rare ability and great knowledge with a certain tender and sympathetic refinement which constitutes the special chorm of the true womanly character."

Dr. Martinean (as above) says her religious life afforded "a happy example of the piety which the Church of knittle. [Christmas.] Included in the Berlix.

Ringland discipline may implant.... The fast hold she retained of her discipleship of Christ was no example of 'feminine simplicity,' carrying on the childish mind into maturer years, but the clear allegiance of a first usind, familiar with the pretentions of non-Ohristian schools, well able to test them, and undiverted by them from her first love."

Miss Winkworth, although not the earliest of modern translators from the German into English, is certainly the foremost in rank and popularity. Her translations are the most widely used of any from that language, and have had more to do with the modern revival of the English use of German hymns than the versions of any other writer. [J. J.]

Winter reigneth o'er the land. W. W. How. [Winter.] Written for and first pub. in the S. P. C. K. Church Hymns, 1871, No. 64, and from thence has passed into numerous collections. In a few hymn-books, including Sir Josiah Mason's Birmingham Orphanage Hymnal, et. iii.-vi. are given as a hymn, "Sunny days are past and gone," but this mutilated text is not popular. [J. J.]

With heart, and soul, with mind, and might. J. Montgomery. [Sunday Schools.] Printed on a broadsheet for use at a gathering of Sunday schools on Whit Monday, 1851, and included in Montgomery's Original Hymns, 1853, in 6 st. of 4 l. [J. J.]

With joy we meditate the grace. I. Watts. [Our High Priest.] Pub. in his Hys. and Spiritual Songs, 1709, Bk. 1. No. 125, in 6 st. of 4 l. J. Wesley included it with the amission of st. iii. in his Charlestown Ps. & Hys., 1738-7, and again in the Ps. & Hys., 1748. From the latter it passed into G. Whitefield's Coll. of Hys., 1759; M. Madan's Ps. & Hys., 1760, and others. This text, with slight attentions, was given in the Wes. H. Bk., 1875. Another text, found mostly in the Church of England collections, is from Top-lady's Ps. and Hys., 1776, with additional alterations of a later date, the principal sources of which are Stowell, 1881; Bickersteth, 1838, and Elliott, 1835. In common with many of Watts's longer hymns, most forms of the text are abbreviated, and the number and arrangement of stanzas vary considerably. These can be tested by any modern edition of the Hys. & Spiritual Songs. In Harland's Ch. Pealter & Hyl., 1876, it begins, "With joy we celebrate the grace"; and in the Doura and Consor H. Bk., 1863, "With joy we contemplate the grace."

Another form of this hymn was given in the 1745 Draft of the Scottish Translations and Paraphrases, No. 8. This began, "Jesus, the Lord, Who once on earth," and was composed of st. i, ii., new, and the rest from Watts, st. i.—iv. and vi., with st. i. ll. 1, 2, altered. In the 1751 revised ed. of the Draft it was slightly altered, and there began, "Jesus, the Son of God, Who once." Stanza vii. was also rewritten as st. vii., viii. These alterations have been ascribed to Hugh Blair. The 1751 text was given in the authorized issue of the Trs. and Paraphrases, 1781, with st. v., vii., viii. rewritten. In the markings by the eldest daughter of W Cameron (p. 200, 1.), the 1781 alterations are ascribed to him. In Miss Jane E. Leeson's Paraphra & Hys., 1853, the text is reduced to 4 st., and begins with at iii., "To human weakness not severe."

With praise to Thee my strain began. I. Williams. [Charity. Love.] This is the concluding piece of his Hys. on the Catechism, 1842, in 14 st. of 4 l. and is based on the concluding words of the Catechism, "And be in charity with all men." Two centes therefrom are in C. U.:—(1) "All that we know of saints above" (Quinquagesima), and (2) "How shall we shew our love to Thee?" (Brotherly Love). These centes are of merit and will bear wider adoption than is now accorded to them. [J. J.]

With sin I would not make abode. T. H. Gill. [Early Piety.] Written in 1835, and first pub. in his Golden Chain of Praise. 1869, p. 154, in 8 st. of 4 l., and headed, "Early Love. "How good it is to close with Christ betimes!" Oliver Cromwell." In Dale's English H. Bk., 1874, six stansas are given as No. 1184, beginning with st. vi., "Lord! in the fulness of my might." This text is also given in other collections. [J. J.]

With solemn thanksgiving our Lord. H. Blair (?). [Chris's Invitation.] Istappeared as No. 26 in the Draft Scottish Translations and Paraphrases, 1745, as a version of Mat. xi. 25-30, in 8 st. of 4 l. In the Draft of 1781 included, considerably altered, as No. 34, and beginning, "Thus spoke the Saviour of the world," and with st. ii., iii., condensed as ii. Thence with 10 lines altered in the public worship ed. of the Trs. and Paraphra, issued in that year by the Church of Scotland and still in use. In the markings by the eldest daughter of W. Cameron (p. 200, ii.) the original is ascribed to Blair, and the alterations in 1781 to Cameron. The revised text of 1781, omitting st. iii., was included as No. 93 in the Eng.

Presb. Ps. & Hys., 1867, and slightly altered, and emitting st. iii., iv., vii., in Miss Jane E. Leeson's Paraphs. & Hys. for Congregational Singing, 1858, as pt. i. of No. 64. In the American Subbath H. Bk., 1858, No. 505, and Martinesu's Hymns, 1873, No. 122, beginning with st. v. altered, "Come unto me, all ye who mourn."

With thankful hearts our songs we raise. [Holy Baptism.] This hymn is No. 278, in the 4th ed., 1832, of J. Bickersteth's Ps. & Hymns, in 4 st. of 4 l. In common with all the hymns in the collection, it is unsigned, and there is nothing to determine its authorship. It is sometimes attributed to "Bickersteth," but for this ascription we know of no authority whatever. It is in somewhat extensive use in America. [J. J.]

With Thee, Lord, will I walk by day. T. Davis. [Morning.] lat pub. in his Devotional Verse for a Month, 1855, in 4 st. of 4 l., and based upon the words "When I awake I am still with Thee," Ps. exxxix. 18. In 1858 it was included, unaltered, in the Bap. Ps. & Hys., No. 911, and continued in later editions. When given in the author's Fourily Hymnol, 1860, and Hymns Old and New, 1864, st. iv. l. 3, "give" was changed to grant. This rendering was repeated in his dance Sanctus, 1877, p. 246, as the authorized text. [J. J.]

With years oppressed, with sorrow worn. Sir R. Grant. [Ps. Lexi.] Pub. in his posthumous Sacred Poems, 1889, P. 31, in 5 st. of 61. It is in C. U. in its full or abbreviated form, and also as "Thy mercy heard my infant prayer" (st. ii.). [J. J.]

Wither, George, or Wyther—spelled in both ways by himself, the first usually, the second occasionally, e.g. in Prince Henries Obsequies (1612), and erroneously Withers, was b. on June 11th, 1588, at Bentworth, near Alton, Hampshire. He was the only son of George Wither, of Bentworth. His early education was at the Grammar School of Colemore or Colemere, under its celebrated master; John Greaves. After thorough training and discipline here he was entered in 1604 at Magdalen College, Oxford. His tutor was John Warner, subsequently D.D. and Bishop of Rochester. He had only been three years at the University when malicious and ignorant persons persuaded his father that more learning was not required. And so, as he modestly tells us in his Abuses Stript and Whipt (1613), he was withdrawn "without taking any degree," being now destined, as he moderately puts it, "for the plough," that is, for rustic employment on the paternal estate. This proved utterly uncongenial. He is found next at one of the Inus of Chancery, afterwards at Lincoln's Inn. and intimate with William Browne, the poet, of Britannia's Pasterals. His title-pages from 1617 to 1620 self-describe him as "Gentleman," and as "of the Societic of Lincoln's Inne" (Fidelia (1617), and 1st Psalme (1620), and Workes (1620)). But Anthony a-Wood informs us:—

"still his geng after things more smooth and delightful, he did at length make himself known to the world (after he had taken several rambles therein) by certain specimens of postry, which being dispersed in several hands, he became chartly after a public author and most admired by some in that age for his quick advancement in that faculty " (Athenst. Oxon. s. n.).

How uncritical was this miserable criticism, will be understood when it is recalled that amongst these "certain specimens" was the Shepherds Husting under the first form of "A new song of a young man's opinion of the difference between good and bad women" (Peppeian, ad Peroy MS.), Prince Henrie's Obsequies (1612), Epithalamia (1612), and his stinging and patriotically outspoken Abuses Stript and Whipt. The last drew down upon him the wrath of the monarch (James I.) and pobles, and cast him prisoner into the Marshalses. Four large editions within a year, and numerous others up to 1622 and continuously onward (exclusive of the reproductions in his Worker) was the answer of the People to the Upper Ten. While in prison he wrote some of the most delicious of his verse. He likewise composed A Satyre to the King (1615). The wisest fool in Christendom was shrewd enough to perceive that it would be safer to make such a subject a friend than an enemy. He had defuly signed the dedication to the king "his Majesty's most loyall Subject, and yet Prisoner in the Marshalsey." It procured him his release. From this time onward he was perpetually printing something, now in verse and now in prose, until the aggregate exceeded a hundred of books and pamphlets. There are several fairly accurate enumerations of them, e.g. British Bibliographer, i. 174-205, 305-32, 417-40; ii. 17-32, 378-91; Sir Egerton Brydges' Consuria and Restituta; Hazlitt's Bibliography (1867). The Spenser Society reprinted a large portion of the Works in prose and verse; but there was really no editing and no annotation. His successive books are the main facts of Wither's life; yet was he an active member of the nation. Spite of his hard usage and imprisonments, he was loyal as any cavalier. When Charles L proceeded to declare and carry war into his native Scotland against the Covenanters in 1639, George Wither served his Majesty as a captain of horse and quarter-master of his regiment under the Earl of Arundel. How corrowful the wrong-headedness of the king who com-pelled such a true man as Wither to forsake him and prefer the kingdom to the king, as many others who with pathetic reluctance became Roundheads! In 1641-2 he sold his hereditary estates and raised a troop of horse for the Parliament, in whose army ho was promoted to be major. On his colours he carried this motto, Pro Rege, Lege, Grege. Having been taken prisoner by the Royalists, a good-humoured jest of Sir John Denham it is alleged saved his life, to wit, that "his Majesty really must not hang George Wither, for so long as he lives no one will account him [Sir John] the worst poet in England." He was set free. Not long after he was constituted by the Long Parliament a Justice of Peace in quorum for Hampshire, Surrey and Essex. This he held for six years, and afterwards was made by Cromwell Major-General of all the horse and foot in the County of Surrey. On the title-page of his Boni Ominie Votum (1656) in the British Museum there is a contemporary us. note, "lately made Master of the Statute Office." At the Restoration be was shamefully dealt with, and by a vote of the Convention Parliament, was committed to Newgate because of his Voz Vulgi—a noble piece of fiery and idiomatic English, and manly pleading for respect to popular rights and liberties. For his Prisoner's Plea humbly offered (1661) he was again imprisoned, this time in the Tower. He married (Aubrey informs us) Elizabeth, eldest daughter of H. Emerson of South Lanuk, who, he says, was "a great wit and could write in verse too," and was of the same English Emersons from whom the great American Ralph Waldo Emerson descended. He had issue. He was at liberty when he died on 2nd May, 1667. Aubrey states that he was baried within the east doorway of Savoy Church in the Strand, having apparently lived near it, and oither died in the church or in his own house (the phresing being embiguous).

This Dictionary is not a fitting place for any detailed criticism of the superabundant writings of George Wither. James Montgomery, in his admirable Lectures on Poets and Poetry, thus sums up his estimate of him and them:-

and them:—

"There are scattered throughout his multifarious and very unequal productions, many passages of great beauty and excallence. He was avowedly a Christian poet, though he frequently lost his Christian meakness in the heat of potenties; but his seal carried with it avery evidence of honesty; and he was a sufferer atmost to martyriom, both for his loyalty and his orthodoxy, in the troubleus times in which he lived. That he was a poet can maver be questioned by any reader who has taste and sensibility enough to understand and anjoy the exquisitely affecting confession of his obligations to the fluxe. That he was a Christian will be as little questioned by those jethe are most extensively acquainted with the character of his religious compositions" (s. n.).

Arethishap Trench, in annotating a charm-

Archbishop Trench, in annotating a charm-ing sacred song entitled Vanished Blessings ("No voice which I did more esteem, Than music in her sweetest key," &c.), thus annotates :--

"I have detached those two staums from a longer poem of which they constitute the only valuable portion [?]. George Wither ('a most profuse pourer forth of English rhyme,' Pultips calls him) was indeed so intokrable a power in verse, so overlaid his good with indifferent or bad, that one may assily forget how real a gift he possessed, and sometimes showed that he possessed "(Mousehold Book of English Poetry, 1886).

Mrs. Masson says of him--- he is remembered now-a-days as pre-eminently the Puritan poet, whose irrepressible Muse made herself heard even amid the din of civil war" (Three Centuries of English Poetry, p. 375). She quotes his delightful "Christmas" ("So now is come our joyfullest part"), and "Of Poesy" (which Milton did not disdain to utilize), and his "Shall I, wasting in despair." With reference to the "irrepressible Muse" of Wither, it is a felicitous characterisation however regarded, insamuch as so "irrepressible" was he that he actually set up the types and printed off at least one of his bulkier books. Wither's contributions to hymnology are to be found chiefly in the following:-

It is discreditable to the Church of England, It is discreditable to the Church of England, of whom he was a devoted son to the close of his life, and to Nonconformity alike, that many, very many more of his Hymnes and Spiritual Songs have not found their way into their hymnels. A critical yet sympathetic reader would easily find a golden sheaf of musical, and well-wrought sacred song. (See Willmott's Lives of Sacred Posts; Gutch's Collection of Works in 8 vols. Wolff, Jakob Gabriel, LL.D., s. of Jakob Wolff, sometime conrector at Greifswald, was b. at Greifswald in 1684. He matriculated, in 1702, at the University of Greifswald, as a student of law. In 1705 went to Halle, where he graduated LLD. In 1716 he was appointed extraordinary, and in 1724, ordinary professor of law at Halle, and afterwards received the title of Hofrath. He resigned his professorship in 1744, and d. at Halle, Aug. 6, 1754 (Kech, iv. 875; Bode, p. 174; the Grischow-Kirchner Kurzgefasste Nachricht, Halle, 1771, p. 54, &c.).

Wolff's hymne were mostly written early in life, principally during his student years at Halle. He was in thorough sympathy with the characteristic teachings of the Halle Pictists, and his hymne share in their exocleaces and defects. Some of them are of considerable merit, elegant in style, earnest and glowing in devotion, and have attained considerable popularity in Germany. Nincteen were contributed to Fraylinghausen's News printricides G. B., 1714; and these, with nine others, were included in his autograph Ms. (see No. iv. below).

Those of Wolff's hymns which have passed into English are:-

into English are:

i. Es ist gewiss sin küstlich Ding. Patience. 1st pub. 1714 as above, No. 481, In 6 st. of 7 l. In the Hannover G. B., 1740, No. 653, with a new st. as st. vii. Tr. as "It is, indeed, a precious thing," by Hiss Manington, 1853, p. 59.

7. Wold sem der sich mit Fleise bemilhet. Christian Warfare. On True and False Christianity. This hymnis ascribed to Wolff, by Count Christian Ernst of Stoberg Warnigsrode (d. 1771, see p. 546, il.), and by Koch, iv., 270. In the Nachricht as above, p. 54, it is given under Wolff's name; but Kirchare adds that it was not to be found in the autograph ms. of Wolff's hymns which he had bought at Wolff's sale in 1755. It appears in the Berlin G. B., 1711, No. 285, in 11 st. of 61, and was repeated (reading "init Ernst") as No. 235 in Frey-lisafhaisen, 1714 as above. In the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 646. The tr. in C. U. in: "O well for him who all things braves." This is a good and full tr. by Miss Winkworth, in her Lyra Ger., 1st Ser., 1855, p. 187. Her st. ii.—iv., x., xi., beginning, "Who follows Christ, whate'er betide," are included in the Bugby School H. Bh., 1816, No. 309.

Woodd, Basil, M.A., was born at Richmond in Surrey, Aug. 5, 1760. The influences of his home and of his widowed mother were most salutary, and produced the best results. As a boy he studied under the Rev. T. Clarke, of Chesham Bois, and at seventeen he entered Trinity College, Oxford. Taking Holy Orders in 1783, he was chosen lecturer of St. Peter's Cornhill, in 1784; morning preacher at Bentinck Chapel, Marylebone in 1785, and Rector of Drayton Beauchamp, Buckinghamshire, in 1808. Bentinck Chapel being a proprietary chapel, he purchased the lease in 1793, and held the innumbency, together with the Rectory of Drayton, from 1808 to his death on April 12, 1831. He took a deep interest in the great religious societies, and in the anti-alsvery movement. His proce works were not numerous or important. He is associated with hymnody through the publication of the following:-

following:

(1.) The Pecians of Banid. . . . Adapted to the Erroces of the Church of England, do., 1794. 2nd ed. 1890. (2.) The Pealms of Banid and other portions of the Sacred Scriptures arranged according to the Order of the Church of England, for every Sunday is the Pearwater, K.D. circa 1810-20. The Preface is eigned "B. W." (3.) A New Metrical Version of the Psalms and Hymns, adapted to the service of the United Church of England and Ireland. . . . By the Rev. Basil Woodd, M.A., Ec., London: Printed and sold by E. Brigwater, 1821. Dedicated to the Bp. of Durham. A portion of the preface of No. 2 was repeated; but the preface as a whole, was more historical than the preceding. With the exception of 4 bymns, and 4 doxologies at the end, this collection is a reprint of No. 2, with a new titlepage, a dedication, and an enlarged preface.

Very few of Basil Woodd's hymns and paraphrases of the psalms are now in C. U. The best known is "Hail, Thou Source of every blessing" (p. 480, 1). The rest inelude :---

Bp. Woodford's irs. are annotated under their respective Latin first lines (see Index of Authors and Translators). They are good and popular, the best known being "Thee we adore, O hidden Saviour, Thee." [J. J.]

Woodhouse, Charles Goddard, B.A., son of George Windus Woodhouse, born Aug. 16, 1835, and educated at Albrighton and Christ Church, Oxford, graduating S.A. in 1860. He was for some time Vicar of Minsterley, Diocese of Hereford. Hed. Aug. 20th, sterior, Diocese of Leavisian 1876. He was the author of a very tender ning By the Cross upon thy brow," and consisting of 3 st. of 8 l. It was printed on a fly-leaf. In 1881, Prebendary G. Thring recast the hymn, added a doxology, and gave it as "Heavenly Shepherd, Thee we pray," in his Church of England Hymn Book, 1882. [J. J.]

Woodhull, Alfred Alexander, M.D., grandson of John Woodhull, D.D., of Freehold, New Jersey; was b. March 25, 1810, educated for the medical profession, and practiced at Princeton, where he d. Oct. 5, 1936. His hymn, "God of the passing year to Thee," appeared as No. 406 in the official edition of Presbyterian Profess & Hymns, Princeton, in 1829. It has attained to extensive use in the altered form as " Great God of nations, now to Thee." Its authorship was determined by Dr. Hatfield, in his Church Hymn Book, 1872, No. 1295. It is an American National Thanksgiving hymn. [F. M. B.]

Word supreme, before creation.  $J_c$ Keble. [St. John Evangelist.] This hymn is dated "Hursley, April 19, 1856," and was first pub. in the Saksbury H. Bk., 1857, No. 43, in 7 st. of 61. It was repeated in Keble's postb. April 30, 1820, and educated at Merchant humous Miscellaneous Poems, 1869, p. 111, and Taylors School, and Pembroke College, Camin several hymn-books. Mr. L. C. Biggs, in his annotated ed. of H. A. & M., 1867, has drawn attention to the similarity between this hymn and a Sequence of the 11th cent., "Verbum Dei, Deo natum," which, according to Mr. Keble, "probably suggested some of his ideas." It has also a trace of Adam of St. Victor's "Verbi vere substantivi." In his annotated ed. of H. A. & M., 1867, Mr. Biggs has rendered Keble's hymn into Latin as, "Verbum Dei, Increatum."

Wordsworth, Christopher, D.D., was b. at Lambeth (of which parish his father was then the rector), Oct. 30, 1807, and was the youngest son of Christopher Wordsworth, afterwards Master of Trinity College, Cambridge, and Priscilla (née Lloyd) his wife. He was educated at Winchester, where he distinguished himself both as a scholar and as an athlete. In 1826 he matriculated at Trinity College, Cambridge, where his career was an extraordinarily brilliant one. He swept off an unprecedented number of College and University prizes, and in 1830 graduated as Senior Classic in the Classical Tripos, and 14th Senior Optime in the Mathematical, won the First Chancellor's Medal for classical studies, and was elected Fellow of Trinity. He was engaged as classical lecturer in college for some time, and in 1836 was chosen Public Orator for the University. In the same year he was elected Head Master of Harrow School, and in 1838 he married Susan Hatley Freere. During his head-mastership the numbers at Harrow fell off, but he began a great moral reform in the school, and many of his pupils regarded him with enthusiastic admiration. In 1844 he was appointed by Sir Robert Peel to a Canonry at Westminster; and in 1848-49 he was Hulsean lecturer at Cambridge. In 1850 he took the small chapter living of Stanford-in-the-Vale cum Goosey, in Betkhine and for the vost sincton years he record. shire, and for the next nineteen years he passed his time as an exemplary parish priest in this retired spot, with the exception of his four months' statutable residence each year at Westminster. In 1869 he was elevated to the bishopric of Lincoln, which he held for more than fifteen years, resigning it a few months before his death, which took place on March 20th, 1885. As bearing upon his poetical character, it may be noted that he was the bephew of the poet-laureste, William Wordsworth, whom he constantly visited at Rydal up to the time of the poet's death in 1850, and with whom he kept up a regular and lengthy correspondence. Christopher Wordsworth was a very voluminous writer, his principal works being :-

Deling:—
(1) Athens and Attica, 1836; (2) Postpeian Inscriptions, 1837; (3) Greece Pictorial and Descriptive, 1839; (4) King Bisoard VIR's Latin Grammar, 1841; (5) Bentley's Correspondence, 1842; (6) Theophies Anglicasus, 1843; (7) Memoirs of William Wordsmorth, 1851; (8) S. Hippolytus, 1863; (9) Notes of Paris, 1854; (10) A Commentary on the whole Bible, 1868-1870; (11) The Holy Farr, 1863; (12) Church Bistory, 1891-1863; many volumes of Sermons, and an enormous amount of Panyhilets, Advisaces, Latters, Speeches, on almost every subject in which the interests of the church were concerned, and also on subjects connected with classical literature.

Of his many works, however, the only one which claims notice from the hymnologist's point of view is The Holy Year, which contains hymns, not only for every season of the Church's year, but also for every phase of that season, as indicated in the Book of Common Prayer. Dr. Wordsworth, like the Wesleys, looked upon hymns as a valuable means of stamping permanently upon the memory the great doctrines of the Christian Church. He held it to be "the first duty of a hymn-writer to teach sound doctrine, and thus to save souls." He thought that the materials for English Church hymns should be sought (1) in the Holy Scriptures, (2) in the writings of Christian Antiquity, and (3) in the Poetry of the Ancient Church. Hence he imposed upon himself the strictest limitations in his own compositions. He did not select a subject which seemed to him most adapted for poetical treatment, but felt himself bound to treat impartially every subject, and branch of a sub-ject, that is brought before us in the Church's services, whether of a poetical nature or not. The natural result is that his hymns are of very unequal merit; whether his subject inspired him with poetical thoughts or not, he was bound to deal with it; hence while some of his hymns (such as " Hark! the sound of holy voices," See, "See the Conqueror mounts in triumph," &c., "O day of rest and gladness") are of a high order of excellence, others are pressic. He was particularly anxious to avoid obscurity, and thus many of his hymns are simple to the verge of baldness. But this extreme simplicity was always intentional, and to those who can read between the lines there are many traces of the "ars celans artem." It is somewhat remarkable that though in citing examples of early hymn-writers he almost always refers to those of the Western Church, his own hymns more nearly resemble those of the Eastern, as may be seen by comparing The Holy Year with Dr. Mason Neale's Hymne of the Eastern Church translated, with Notes, &c. The reason of this perhaps helf-unconscions resemblance is not far to seek. Christopher Wordsworth, like the Greek hymnwriters, drew his inspiration from Holy Scripture, and he loved, as they did, to interpret Holy Scripture mystically. He thought that "the dangers to which the Faith of England (especially in regard to the Old Testament) was exposed, arose from the abandonment of the ancient Christian, Apostolic and Patristic system of interpretation of the Old Testament for the frigid and servile modern exegesis of the literalists, who see nothing in the Old Testament but a common history, and who read it (as St. Paul says the Jews do) 'with a veil on their heart, which veil' (he adds) 'is done away in Christ." In the same spirit, he sought and found Christ everywhere in the New Testament. The Gospel History was only the history of what "Jesus began to do and to teach" on earth; the Acts of the Apostles and all the Epistles were the history of what he continued to do and to teach from Heaven; and the Apocalypee (perhaps his favourite book) was "the seal and colophon of all." Naturally he presents this theory, a theory most susceptible of poetical treatment, in his hymns even more pro-minently than in his other writings. The Greek writers took, more or less, the same view ; hence the resemblance between his hymne and those of the Eastern Church. [J. H. O.]

WORSHIP, AND THANKS

During the time that Bp. Wordsworth was Canon of Westminster, and Vicar of Stanfordin-the-Vale cum Goosey, he published his collection of hymns as :-

In addition to many of the hymns in the 1863 ed. of The Holy Year being divided into parts, the texts of most of them were revised by the author, and are authorized. [J. J.]

Wordsworth, William, the poet, the s. of an attorney, was b. at Cockermouth in 1770, and educated at St. John's College, Cambridge, where he graduated B.A. in 1791. Devoting himself to literature, and especially to poetry, he gradually rose into the front rank of English poets. His works include Lyrical Ballads, 1798; Poems; The Prelude; The Exercision, 1814, &c. All his poetical pro-ductions were collected and republished under his own supervision in 7 vols., in 1842. He d. at Rydal Mount, near Grasmere, in 1850. Notwithstanding his rank and reputation as a poet, his pieces used as hymns are limited to the following extracts from his poems :-

- 1. Not saldom clad in radiant vest. Christ, the Unchangeable. This is No. v. of five "Inscriptions supposed to be found in and near a Hermit's cell, 1818." It is in 6 st. of 4 h., and is given in his Poetical Work, 1837, vol. iil., p. 286. It is in Stowell's Sci. of Hyt., 1831-77; the American Phymouth Chi., 1855, &c.
- 2. Up to the throne of God is borne. Noorday. This is entitled "The Labourer's Noor-Day Hymn," is dated 1834, and is in 6 st. of 4 l. (P. Works, 1837, vol. v. p. 122.) It is in C. U. In an abridged form, beginning with st. i., and the latter part is also given in Martineau's Hymn, 1840, as "Look up to heaven, the industrious sun," as No. 535.

Worship, and thanks, and blessing. C. Wesley. [Confidence in Jesus.] This hymn "Written after a Deliverance in a Tumult," first appeared in Hymns for those that Seck, | and those that have Redemption, &c., 1747, in 6 st. of 10 l. Of these st. i.-iv. and vi. were given in the Wes. H. Bk. in 1800. In an edition subsequent to that of 1809, et. jv. was also omitted, and in the revised ed., 1875, this form in 4 st. is retained. Orlg. text P. Works, 1868-72, vol. iv. pp. 237-9. It has been suggested that the "turnult" referred to was that which took place at Wednesbury, October 26, 1748. Although this is quite probable it yet lacks certain proof. See G. J. Stevenson's Meth. H. Bls., Notes, 1888, p. 211. [J. J.]

Worthy the Lamb for sinners slain. [Praise to Jesus.] This cento appeared in the General Baptist New Hymn Book, edited by the brothers J. B. and J. C. Pike Baptist Hymnody, p. 115, L.], in 1851; and was repeated in the Bapt. Hymnal, 1879, in 5 st. of 4 l. Of the cento at i., ii. are from J. Montgomery's "Bing we the song of those who stand" (p. 1060, 1), and the rest (iii.-v.) are anonymous, The Rev. W. R. Stevenson, editor of the Bapt. Hymnal, is strongly inclined to think that these stanzas were by the Rev. J. G. Pike, of Derby (with whom he was co-paster for some time), who was the father of the brothers Pike named above: but he was not quite estisfied with his authority.

Wreford, John Reynell, p.n., b. Dec. 12, 1800, educated at Manchester College, York, and in 1826 succeeded the Rev. James Yates as co-poster to the Rev. John Kentish at the Now Meeting, Birmingham. In 1830 he pub. a tr. of Cellerier's Discourse on the Authenticity and Divine Origin of the Old Testament. In the following year, in consequence of failure of voice, he withdrew from the Ministry, and in conjunction with the Rov. Hugh Hutten, Minister of the Old Meeting, opened a school at Edgbaston. In 1832 he pub. a Sketch of the History of Presbyterian Nonconformity in Birmingham; and in 1837, Lays of Loyally, in celebration of the Queen's accession. He also contributed, in 1837, to the Rev. J. R. Beard's Coll. of Hys. for Public and Private Worship 55 hymns, of which the following are still in C. U.:-

3. Lord I believe: Thy power I own. For increase of Finch. In Martineau's Hyman, &c., 1840.

2. Land, while for all manking we pray. Retional Hyman. This is in a large number of collections of various denominations, and in by far the most popular of his hymns. Sometimes it begins with at fil., "O! guard our aboves from every for."

4. When my leve to Christ (God) grows weak. Parnioutide. In Longfellow and Johnson's Unitarian Hys. of the Sporth, Boston, U. S. A., 1864, "When my love to God grows weak." This is repeated in Martineau's Hyman, &c., 1873 (p. 1871, i.).

Wretched, helpless, and distressed. C. Wesley. [Lent.] 1st pub. in Hys. & Sacred Poems, 1742, p. 43, in 8 st, of 8 l., as a second hymn on Rev. iii. 17. In 1780, st. ii. was emitted when the hymn was given in the Wes. H. Bk., No. 105, and in the same form it is still retained. Orig. text P. Works, 1868-72, vol. ii. pp. 92-94. The somewhat peculiar is farnished with this note by Dr. Osborn (P. Works as above).

"This singular transposition of the Prophet's words (Isaiah I. 5) though found in all the editions, must still be regarded as an oversight."

No evidence, however, of its being such is forthcoming, and the revised ed. of the Wes. H. Bk., 1875, retains the old reading. [J. J.]

Wright, Philip James, was b. in London, May 1, 1810. His parents belonged to the old section of the Methodists, but not agreeing with the form of government he found there, he withdrew, and became a member, and subsequently a minister, with the New Connexion Methodists. After labouring most successfully for several years in various circuits, he d. in 1863. His pub. works include:—The Study of Creation, 1848; The Way of Salvation, 1848; the Gathered Rose, 1858. Parious Herrard Study Constitution Constitution of Constitution Constitution Constitution. 1858; Revival Hys. and Spiritual Songs, 1860, &c. The Revival Hys., &c., is composed of 91 of his original compositions. Of these a few were included in the Meth. New Con. Hya. for Divine Worship, 1863. "The Lord of glory left His throne" (Redemption), and "Soldiers of the Cross, Servants of the Lord" (Young Men's Societies), are still in C. U.

Wyatt, Henry Herbert, M.A., was educated at Queen's College, Oxford (s.a. 1844, s.a. 1847), and took Holy Orders in 1845. He was travelling secretary for the S. P. G., 1852-56; incombent of Holy Trinity Chapel, Brighton, 1856-66; principal of the Brighton Training College, 1863-86; and vicar of Bolney, Sussex, 1872-86. In 1886 he became rector of Conington, Ely. Mr. Wyatt has pub. Principal Heresies relating to our Lord's Incarnation, 1881; The Gospel according to St. Matthew, with Explanatory Notes for the Use of Teachers in Schools, 1884; and Ps. and Hys. for Public Worship, 1859 (4th ed., 1868). To this Coll. he contributed in 1859 his well known hymn for National Thanksgiving, "God the Lord has [hath] heard our prayer," It is the Lord has [hath] heard our prayer, given in several collections, including the S. P. C. K. Church Hys., 1871; Thring's Coll., 1882, and others.

Wyn, Ellis, the Author of Bardd Gwag, was b. near Harlech, Merionethshire, in the year 1670. He stands unrivalled as a Welsh prose writer. He was induced by Bishop Humpbreys to enter Holy Orders, and was ordained descon and priest on the same day, and on the next presented to the Rectory of Llaufair. He held at the same time other parishes. In 1708 appeared his admired work, Gweledigaethau y Bardd Crosg, or the "Visions of the Sleeping Bard," which in whiten in the Welsh language. In 1710 he was charged by the Eishops of Wales to superintend a new edition of the Book of Common Prayer. His "Emyn Cynhebrwng" or Funcrat Hymn is found in all Welsh hymnels. He d. in July, 1734, and was buried under the communion table in Llanfair Church.

Xavier, St. Francis, the great missionary saint of the Roman Catholic Church, was the s. of Don John Giasso and Donna Maria d'Azpilqueta y Xavier; he was b. at the castle Xavier, near Pampeluna, Spain, on April 7, 1506, and is known to history by his mother's name. At the age of eighteen he entered the University of Paris, where in due course he graduated, and then devoted himself to teaching. It was here that he became acquainted with Ignatius Loyola the founder of the Jesuits, who was then planning the colossat work which he afterwards accomplished. Xavier became one of the first nine of Loyola's converts, and the most enthusiastic of the little band. The date of the formation of the Order of the Jesuits is given as Aug. 15, 1534, and the place as Moutmartre near Paris. find Xavier at Venice with Loyole in 1587, where the visitation of a hospital for in-curables was assigned to him. Here in the discharge of his duties he gave early evidence of his enthusiasm and self-devotion. He subsequently visited Rome, where with Loyola and others of the Order he was brought. through the influence of the Rector of the University of Paris, who was then at Rome, to the notice of John III. of Portugal, who desired some of them for mission work in India. Circumstances led to the selection of Xavier for the work. He left Rome in March 1540, and set sail on April 7, 1541, for Goa, the chief city of the Portuguese possessions, where he arrived on May 6, 1542. From that time to the day of his death at Sancian, near Canton, on Dec. 22, 1552, he devoted himself to his work in a most heroic and devoted manner, visiting Travancore, Ceylon, Malacca, Japan, and other heathen lands with Cross in hand, and a burning zeal in his heart. Xavior's life has been written by many hands. The roll of deeds which he is said to have done, and the miracles he is said to have wrought, even to the raising of the dead, is long, but many of the alleged facts are open belief. The hymns which are associated with Kavier's name are, "O Deus ego amo Te, Nam prior Tu amasti me" (p. 596, i.), and "O Deus ego amo Te, Nec amo Te ut salves me" (p. 696, ii.) That the first was written by him is next investigation. him is most improbable, the evidence in his favour being absolutely nil. The second may possibly be his (see as above), it breathes his abnegation of self in every word, his spirit in every line. See Murray's Mag. for Oct. 1890, for on interesting account of Goa and its Cathedral, where Xavier lies buried. [J. J.]

Ye boundless realms of joy. Tate & Brady. [Ps. calviii.] Appeared in the New Version, 1696, in 8 st. of 8.1. It is seldom if ever found in its full form in modern collections, but usually as a cento. The metre, which is now somewhat common, is an imitation of John Pullain's version of the same pasium in the Anglo-Generan Pealter, 1561. Pullain's use of this metre is the first instance known in English Psalmody. [Old Version, [J. J.] § ix.]

Ye Christian heroes [heralds], go, proclaim. Draper, B. H. [Farewell to Missionaries.] This is one of two hymns compiled from a poem which first appeared in a newspaper as "Ruler of worlds, display Thy power;" then in Hys. Orig. & Scient., de., Portland, Maine, 1805, divided as two hymns; and again, as a complete poem, in the Baptist Magazine, vol. viii. 1816, p. 88, where it is given in 28 lines, and begins: "Sovereign of worlds, display Thy power." The hymns compiled therefrom are :- compiled therefrom are:—

1. Sovereign of worlds, display Thy power. This canto in 4 st. of 4 l. was given in Fratt's Ps. & Hys., 1829. No. 467, as a "Prayer for the Conversion of the World," and is composed of it. 1-12, 17-21, slightly altered.

2. Ye Christian heroes ! so, proclaim. This hymn is composed of it. 1-128 slightly altered. It is found in several collections, including the Physicath Coll., 1855; the Bap. Prains Ws., 1871, and others. In the Subbook H. Bk., 1853; the Songs of Praise, 1874, &c., it begins "Ye Christian heralds, go, proclaim." heraids, go, proclaim.

The modern use of these hymns is mainly confined to America.  $[J, J_i]$

Ye indolent and slothful! rise. Martin. [Industry.] First appeared as No. 12 in the Draft Scottish Translations and Paraphrases, 1781, as a version of Proverbs vi. 6-12, in 4 st. of 4 lines. In the public worship ed. of the Trs. and Paraphs, issued in that year by the Church of Scotland, and still in use, il. 1, 3, 4, of st. iii. were altered. The markings of the Tra. and Paraphs. by the eldest daughter of W. Cameron (p. 200, il.) ascribe the original to I. Watts (in whose works we have falled to find it), and the alterative of the contract of t tions of 1781, to Cameron. In the Free Church Magazine, for 1847, p. 271, it is pretty clearly shown to be by Martin. Martin is there said to have sent in to the Committee versions of other portions of Holy Scripture, which, though not inserted by them, in the Trs. and Paraphs., he probably justly enough [J. M.] regarded as superior to this.

Ye nations exult; Salvation is nigh. Epiphano.] This hymn appeared in the British Magazine, May, 1832, p. 283, in 6 st. of 4 l., and signed "B. J. W." It has been republished in several collections, including Kennedy, 1863, &c. In Mercer's Ch. Pa. and H. Bk., Oxford ed., 1864, it begins "Ye nations rejoice, Salvation is nigh." [J. J.]

Ye neighbours and friends Of Jesus, draw near. C. Wesley. [Thankegiving for Success of the Gospel.] This is No. 4 of four hymns written after preaching to the New-oastle colliers, and was pub. in the Hys. and Sacred Poems, 1749, vol. i., and again in the P. Works, 1868-72, vol. v., p. 115. Under the date of Nov. 30, 1746, Jackson in his Memoir of the Rev. Charles Wesley, mys ;-

"The very spirited hymn beginning 'Ye neighbours, and friends of Jesus, draw near,' was written by Mr. Charles Wesley 'after preaching to the Newcastic colliers,' and most probably during his present visit to that town. Unfer the date of Sunday, Nov. 30, he uses in his Journal the phraseology upon which the hymn is founded. On that day he preached in one of the stream of Newcastle to listening crowds, who forgot the charpness of the frost while engaged in the worship of Gcd.

and in bearing the word of life and mercy." (Small ed., 1845, p. 191.)

The hymn is in 12 st. of 4 double lines. In the Wes. H. Bk., 1780, sts. i., ii., viii,-xii. were given as No. 38, and this has become its recognized form in later collections. [J. J.]

Ye principalities and powers. G. Rancon. [Burial.] 1st pub. in the Leeds H. Bk., 1858, No. 858, in 5 st. of 4 l., and again in the author's Hymns, Verses, &c., 1876, p. 114. In the Hap. Ps. & Hys., 1858, No. 616, it was given with the omission of st. i., and began "Though tears will fall and hearts are stirred." This form of the text is repeated in later collections. [J. J.]

Ye royal priests of Jesus, rise. C. Wesley. [Holy Communion.] 1st pub in his Hys. on the Lord's Supper, 1745, No. 187, in 7 st. of 4 l.; again in later editions of the same; and in P. Works of J. & C. Wesley, 1868-70, vol. iii. pp. 319-320. Its use is not extensive. This hymn is one of the most pronounced of C. Wesley's hymns on "The Lord's Supper." It is based on a portion of Dr. Brevint's work on The Christian Sacrament and Sacrifice, sect. vi. 2. "Concerning the Sacrament, as it is a Sacrifice. And first, of the Commemorative Sacrifice":—

the Commemorative Secrifice, which by a real obla"Nevertheless, this secrifice, which by a real oblation was not to be offered more than once, is by a devoutand thankful commemoration to be offered up every day. This is what the apostle calls, to set forth the death of the Lord; to set it forth as well before the eyes of God His Father as before the eyes of men; and what St. Austin explained, when he said the holy fiesh of Jesus was offered in three manners; by prefiguring sacrifices under the law before His coming into the world, in real dead upon His cross, and by a commessorative Szerzment after He sacreded into beaven. All comes to this: (1) That the sacrifice in itself can never be repeated; (2) That insvertheless this Szerzment, by our remembrance, becomes a kind of sacrifice, whereby we present before God the Father that pretious oblation of His Son once offered. And thus do we every day offer unto God the meritorious sufferings of our Lord, as the only sure ground whereon God may give, and we obtain, the blessings we pray for, " &c. P. Works, 1883-70, vol. lil. p. 263.

It is curious to note how faithfully C. Wesley reproduces Dr. Brevint's views not only of this aspect of the Holy Communion, but also of its daily administration. It is desirable that all C. Wesley's Hys. on the Lord's Supper be read with the extracts from Dr. Brevint's work, upon which they are based, and with which they are published in the P. Works, as above. [J. J.]

Ye saints! in blest communion. J. S. B. Monsell. [Saints Days, Special and General.] Pub in his Hys. of Love and Praise, 1863, p. 186, and composed of 5 opening stanzes of 8 l.; 19 st. for special days, as St. Andrew, St. Thomas, and others; and a concluding doxology. In this form it was repeated in his Parisk Hymnal, 1873, and in both instances directions were given in a note as to the use which might be made of these 28 st. for special festivals. This hymn suggested to Earl Nelson his well-known "From all Thy saints in warfare, for all Thy saints at rest," p. 89t, ii. [J. J.]

Ye servants of God, Your Master proclaim. O. Wesley. [Missions.] Pub. in Hys. for Times of Trouble and Persecution, 1744, in 6 st. of 4 l., as No. 1 of "Hymns to" be sung in Tunult" (P. Works, 1868-72, vol. iv. p. 51). It is given in its full, or in an abbreviated form in aeversl of the older collections, and especially those of the Church of England. In 1830 a cento was included in the Supplement of the Wes. H. Bk., No. 557, st. i.-v. being from this hymn, and st. vi. from C. Wosley's Funeral Hys., 1746, No. 6, st. v. In the revised ed. of the Wes. H. Bk., 1875, this last stanza was omitted.

Ye servants of the Lord, Each in his office wait. P. Doddridge. [Christian Activity and Zeal.] Appeared in J. Orton's posthunous ed. of Doddridge's Hymns, &c., 1755, No. 210, in 5 st. of 4 l., and headed, "The active Christian"; and again in J. D. Humphreys's ed. of the same, 1839, No. 234. It is in extensive use, and usually in its original form. Sometimes, however, st. v. I. 3, "And raise that favourite Servant's head," is altered to "And raise that faithful servant's head."

Ye simple souls that stray. C. Wesley (?). [Exhortation.] 1st pub. in Hys. for those that Seek and those that Have Redemption, 1747, in 7 st. of 8 l. In 1780 it was given in the Wes. H. Bk., No. 21, with considerable alterations, and the emission of st. iii. The authorship of this hymn has been a matter of dispute for many years, some claiming it for John Wesley on the authority of Mr. Henry Moore, and others for Charles on the word of Dr. Whitehead. The work in which it appeared is known to have been pub. by the two brothers, and the contents were unsigned. Under these circumstances the difficulty of determining the authorship is great. There is some probability in the suggestion that it was written by Charles, and that the extensive alterations made therein for the Wes. H. Bk., in 1780, were the work of his brother. Original text, P. Works, 1868-72, vol. iv. p. 230.

Ye sons of earth, prepare the plough. W. Cooper. [The Souer.] Pub. in the Oney Hymns, 1779, Bk. i., No. 85, in 6 st. of 4 l., and entitled, "The Sower." It is in several modern collections, but it does not rank in popularity with many of Cowper's hymns.

Ye that pass by, behold the man. C. Wesley. [Good Friday.] 1st pub. in Hys. and Sacred Poems. 1742, in 18 st. of 4 1. and entitled, "A Passion Hymn" (P. Works, 1868-72, vol. ii. p. 70). In the Wes. H. Bk., 1780, 15 st. were given as No. 24, the omitted st. being ii., iv., and vii. In the 1809 cd. of that collection the hymn is divided into two parts, pt. ii. beginning with "O Thou dear suffering Son of God." Many expressions in the hymn, such as "Give me to feel Thy agonies," and others, have been much criticised from time to time, and this may possibly account for the omission of the hymn from the revised edition of the Wes. H. Bk., 1875. Both parts, however, are still in use in G. Britain and America.

Xe that put on the heavenly crown. G. Rawson. [Burial. Easter.] Contributed to the Leeds H. Bk., 1853, in 6 st. of 4 l., No. 856. In 1858 st. iii. vi. were given as.

"Glory to Him Who tasted death," in the Bap. Fs. & Hys., No. 273; and have been continued in later editions. The reason of this curtailment of the hymn probably arose from objections to the opening stanzas, and especially to the lines:-

" Brethren in glory, bend ye down, And aid our faitering hymn."

The abbreviation has however changed a funeral hymn into one for Easter. In 1876 Mr. Rawson republished the full text in his Hymns, with the simple change in st. ii. l. 4, of "beside" to "so near the grave." լմ. մ.]

Ye whose hearts are beating high. [Palm Sunday.] Given in his Christian Year, 1827, as the Poem for Palm Sunday, in 6 st. of 8 l., and based on St. Luke xix. 40. In the Leeds H. Bk., 1853, No. 206, it is given in an altered form as "Come, all grateful human hearts." [J. J.]

Ye wretched, hungry, starving poor. Anne Steele. [The Gospel Feast.] 1st pub. in her Poems Chiefly Devotional, &c., 1760, vol. i., p. 17, in 7 st. of 41., and headed "Longing Souls invited to the Gospel-Feast, Luke xiv. 22;" also in the ed. of 1780, and D. Sedgwick's reprint of her Hymns, &c., 1863, p. 10. From this hymn the following abbreviated texts and centos have come into C.U.:-

I. Ye wretched, hungry, starwing poor. In Ash and Evens's Bristol Bap. Colt., 1769, No. 144, and later hymnbooks. Usually st. wil is omitted.

2. Ye wretched, starving poor. This in the American Church Pastorals, Boston, 1864, is composed of st. L.-iv. sworther from C. W. 170 S. W.

rewritten from c.m. into s,m 8. See, Jesus stands with open arms. In the American Bap. Service of Song, 1871, beginning with st. il. Iu the N. Y. Church Praise BL., 1882, st. iv. is also

4. Lo. Jesus stands with open arms. This in the American Prots. Episco. Additional and Selected Hys. from H. A. & M., So., N.Y., 1869 is composed of st. ii., v.-vii. slightly altered.

Through these various forms this hymn is somewhat widely used. [J. J.]

Yea, thou hast drained thy Master's cup. [Conversion of St. Paul.] This cento is in W. J. Blew's Church Hy. and Tune Bh., This cento 1852-55; and Rice's Sel. from the same, 1870, No. 120, in 7 st. of 4 l. St. i.-iii. are a tr. from "Sudore sat tuo fides"; and iv.-viii, from "Sat Paule sat terris datum." Both hymns are by G. de la Brunetiere, in the Paris Brev. of 1680. The tre. are by Mr.

Yes, God is good! in earth and sky. [Goodness of God in nature; or, Flower Services.] The history of this popular hymn is somewhat curious and intricate. It is of American origin and came into modern hymnbooks in the following manner:

 The original hymn appeared in Hys. for Children, Boston, U.S.A., 1825, in 6 st. of 4 l., the opening stanza reading :--

"God is good! each perfumed flower,
The smiling fields, the dark green wood,
The insect fluttering for an hour;
All things proclaim that God is good!"

The editor of this collection is not named. Possibly it may have been Mrs. Follen, the writer of the hymn. The felse motre of the opening line (7's instead of 8's) was probably a misprint. In several instances this line has been republished, notwithstanding the clearness of the error. (See p. 880, i. 4.)

2. In Emily Taylor's Sabbath Recreations, Wellington, Salop, 1826, p. 203, this text was given as an original piece never before published, and signed "E. L. C.," the initials of Mrs. Follen's maiden name. Possibly it was sent in Ms. to Miss Taylor, before it was printed in the Boston Hys. for CMldren.
3. In J. R. Beard's English Unitarian Coll.

of Hys., 1837, it is included as "Yes, God is good! each perfumed flower."

4. The Boston Hys. for Children, or more probably a little undated work called Geme of American Postry, fell into the hands of J. H. Gurney whilst engaged in compiling his Lutterworth Coll. of Hys. for Public Worship. In that Coll., in 1838, No. 299, appeared Gurney's version of the hymn as follows:—st. i., Mrs. Follen, "Yes, God is good leach perfumed flower;" st. ii., iii., new; st. iv., ll. 1, 2, Mrs. Follen, ll. 3, 4, new; st. v., new.

5. The Ps. & Hys. for Pub. Worship, Sel. for some of the Churches in Marylebone, was pub. by Guruey and others, in 1851. No. 300 is Gurnoy's final revision of the hymn. Of this text st. i., by Gurney, reads:-

" Yea, Gon is Goon,-in earth and sky, From ocean-depths and spreading wood, Ten thousand voices seem to cry, "God made us all, and God us coop."

The remaining stanzas are:—st. ii.-v., repeated from the Lutterworth Coll. as above, and st. vi. is now. To this hymn and another "We saw Thee not when Thou didst come" (p. 1248, i.) Gurney added the following note in the Index of first lines:—

"This hymn ['We saw Thee not,' &c.], and the last hymn in the book, 'Yee, God is good,' were suggested by two posms in a small American volume, which were well conceived, but very imperfectly executed. Successive alterations have left nothing of the original compositions remaining but the first four words, and the repeated words in each hymn. With this acknowledgment, the writer has not scrupled to put his name to them—J. H. G."

In this note Gurney has overlooked the fact that, in "Yes, God is good," st. iv., ll. 1, 2 are direct from Mrs. Follen. This form of the hymn, in full or in an abbreviated form, is in extensive use.

 In the Methodist S. S. H. Bk., 1879, No. 73, beginning "Almighty God, Thy works abound" is thus composed: st. i., ii., Anon.; st. iii., viii., from Gurney, 1851, as above.

7. Mrs. Follow's hymn was pub in a revised form in her Poems, Boston, W. Crosby & Co., 1839, p. 119, as "God, Thou art good, each perfamed flower." It was also repeated in the English ed. of her Poems, pub. on The Lark and The Linnet, Hys., Songs, and Fobles, London, Addey & Co., 1854, p. 12, where it begins:—"Thou art good! Each perfumed flower." Putnam, in his Singers and Songs of the Liberal Faith, Boston, 1875, gives the text from the Poems of 1839. [J. J.]

Yes, Lord, my joyful thanks to Thee. S. Browne. [Giving Thanks.] Pub. in his Hys. and Spiritual Songs, &c., 1720, Bk. i., No. 151, in 5 st. of 4 l., and headed "Giving thanks to God always in all things." In Martinean's Hymns, &c., 1840, and again in his Hymns, &c., 1873, it is given as "Great God, my joyful thanks to Thee." [J. J.]

Yes, there are little ones in Heaven. T. R. Taylor. [Infants' Hymn.] This hymn appeared in the Protestant Dissenters Juvenile Magazine, 1833, and again in T. R. Taylor's Memoirs and Select Remains, 1836, p. 245, in 5 st. of 6 l. It is found in C. U. in its original form; and also rewritten as "Children's voices bigh in heaven," in the Bapt. Ps. & Hys., 1858, No. 959, and later collections. The rewritten form of the text is by Mr. George Rawson, and was made for the Bapt. Ps. & [J. J.] Hys., 1858.

Yet a little while: the Lord Gave His saints this precious word. Lady Campbell, née Malcolm. [Second Advent.] The first stanza was written early in Nov., and the remaining two on Dec. 26, 1830, and subsequently pub. in lithograph from the author's ass. It was included in J. G. Deck's Ps. and Hys., Lond., D. Welther, 1842. Pt. i., No. 169; in Walker's Cheltenham Ps. & Hys., 1855; in Harland's Ch. Pealter & Hyl., (J. J.) and others.

Yet there is room! The Lamb's bright hall of song. H. Benar. [Parable of the Marriage Supper.] This most appropriste hymn for Home Missions appeared in 1878. It has been somewhat widely adopted, and is given in the collections of Snepp, Sankey, Thring, and others, and is worthy of this attention. [Մ, Մ.]

Yonge, Charlotte Mary, dan. of William Crawley Yougo of the 52nd Regiment, was b. at Otterbourne, Hants, in 1823. Miss Yongo is widely known as the author of The Heir of Redeluffe, The Daisy Chain, and other popular novels; of a series of historical works for the young, including Stories of English History, 1874, Stories of Greek History, 1876, &c.; of the Life of Bishop Patteson; and as the Editor of the Monthly Packet. In 1841 Miss Yonge contributed two hymns to The Child's Christian Year, which was edited by her mother (see below). The hymns are:—
(1) "Into Christ's flock we are received" (Holy Baptism); (2) "Why lived I not in those blest days?" (St Thomas). [J. J.]

Yonge, Frances Mary, née Bargus, was b. Jap. 13, 1795, was married to William Cinwley Yonge of the 52nd Regiment, and d. Sep. 28, 1868. Mrs. Yonge pub. in 1841, The Child's Christian Year, with a Preface by John Keble. The contents are mainly by J. Anatice, J. H. Newman, I. Williams, and Mrs. Yonge, with a few hymns by Miss Yonge, Mrs. Mozley, T. Whytehead, J. Keble, and others. Mrs. Yonge's hymns are:---

- 1. Behold a Prophet,-yea, and more. St. John
- 2. His are the cattle on the hill. All things for God.
  3. Not only as a marifice. Jesus the Reampte.
  4. Put far from us, O Lord, we pray. Advent.
  5. The Assyrian King in splendour came. Defeat of
- the Assyriant.

The use of these hymns is limited. [J. J.]

You now must hear my voice no more. W. Robertson. [Ascensiontide.] First appeared as No. 13 in the Draft Scottlah Translations and Paraphrases, 1745, as a version of John xiv., 25-29, in 6 st. of 41, and slightly altered in the revised ed. issued in 1751. In the Draft of 1781 it was included as No. 43, considerably altered, and with the Trs. & Paraphs, issued in that year by the Church of Scotland and still in use, st. ii. was re-written, and st. i., l. 8, st. iii., l. 1. were altered from the Draft. In the markings by the eldest daughter of W. Cameron (p. 200, ii.) the original is ascribed to Robertson, and the alterations in 1781 to Cameron. revised text of 1781 is included in the Eng. Press. Ps. & Hys., 1867, and a few other modern hymnals. (Compare the version of the same passage of Holy Scripture "Peace—it was our Saviour's blessing," No. 73, in Miss Lecson's Paraphs. & Hys. for Cong. Singing, 1853.)

[J. M.]

You who dwell above the skies. GSandys. [Ps. czlviii.] This fine rendering of Ps. czlviii. appeared in his Paraphrase of the Pealmes, 1636, in 40 l. It was republished in his Paraphrases upon the Divine Poems, 1638, and in later editions. Also in the Library of Old Authors. In the Wes. H. Bk., 1875, No. 699, it is given in 9 st. of 41. as "Ye, who dwoll above the skies," where the text is but slightly altered. It is worthy of more extended use than is accorded to it in modern hymnals. [See Paalters, English, § x.] [J. J.]

You who the Name of Jesus bear. [Humiliation and Exaltation of Christ.] First appeared as No. 7 in the Draft Scottish Translations and Paraphrases, 1745, as a version of Phil. ii., 6-12, in 7 st. of 4 l. Tho author is unknown. In the revised edition, issued in 1751, st. iii. vii. were altered, and this form was included, slightly altered, as No. 52 in the Draft of 1781 beginning "Ye who the Name of Jesus bear." In the public worship ed, of the Trs. and Paraphs, issued in that year by the Church of Scotland, and still in use, st. v. was re-written, and st. ii., ll. 2-4, st. vi. l. 1 altered. In the markings by the eldest daughter of W. Cameron, (p. 200, ii.) the original is ascribed to Isase Wetts (in whose works it is not to be found) and the alterations of 1781 to Cameron. The revised text of 1781 is included in Pratt's Coll., 1829, the Eng. Presb. Ps. & Hys., 1867, and a few other modern hymnals. St. v.-vii, beginning "Hence God this generous love to men," were included, with an added doxology, in the Twickenham Chapel Coll., 1845, p. 58. In Miss Leeson's Paraphs, and Hys. for Cong. Singing, 1853, it is slightly altered as pt. i. of No. 81; her pt. ii., beginning "Hail, name of Jesus! glorious name," being partly from "All hail the power of Jesus' name." [J. M.]

Young, Andrew, second s. of David Young, for more than fifty years a most efficient teacher in Edinburgh, was b. at Edinburgh, April 23, 1807. After passing through a distinguished eight years' literary and theological course at the University of Edinburgh be was appointed in 1839 by the Edinburgh, he was appointed in 1830, by the Town Council, Head Master of Niddry Street School, Edinburgh, where he began with 80 pupils, and left with the total at 600. In 1840 he became Head English Master of Madras College, St. Andrews, where he was equally successful. Zeller, Christian Heinrich, s. of Christian David Zeller, Hofrath at Hohenentringen, near Tribingen, was b. at Hohenentringen, March 29, 1779. He matriculated at the University of Tübingen in 1797, as a student of law. After completing his studies he chose, however, the profession of teaching. He became director of the Latin School at Zoffingen, Switzerland, in 1809, and finally removed in April, 1820, to Beuggen on the Rhine (Baden), near Basel, as director of the newly founded Institution there, meant for the education of poor children and for the training of teachers for poor children. He d. at Beuggen, May 18, 1860 (Koch, vii. 188, &c.).

Zeller was best known as an educationist, and in connection with the working of the Institution at Beuggen. Itis hymns, which are eimple, Scriptoral and earnest, were written primarily for use at Beuggen, and mostly appeared in the BonateVoiat (Segun in 1828), and other publications of the Institution. They came into notice through their reception into Kaspp's Ev. L. S., 1837. They were collected by Zeller's son, and pub. in 1871, as Lieder der Armenschaltehrer-Anstalt Bengen, 58 being original. Two of these hymne have passed into English, viz.:—

i. Gott bei mir an jedem Orte. Omnipresence. On the joy of God's Presence with us. This appeared in the Monatsblatt in 1828, and was included in the 1871 as above, p. 88. In Knapp's No. L. E., 1837, No. 32 (1865, No. 32), in 6 st. of 6 l.; in the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 1554, &c. The tr. in C. U. is:—

My God with me in every place. This is a good tr., omitting st. v., by Mrs. Findlater in H. L. L., 1st Ser., 1854, p. 30 (1884, p. 33); repeated, omitting st. iv., in Holy Song, 1869, No. 588. In Miss Warner's Hys. of the Ch. Militant, 1858, it begins, "My God is with me every place."

Another tr. is: "God in every place is near me." By R. Massie, in the British Heraid, May, 1886, p. 70, and In Reld's Praise Bk., 1812, No. 438.

ii. Trener Reiland, wir sind hier. Public Worship. This is in the 1871 as above, p. 84. Included in Knapp's Ev. L. S., 1837, No. 857 (1865, No. 1256), in 5 st. of 7 l.; and repeated in the Württemberg G. B., 1842, No. 235. For this hymn Conrad Kocher wrote the well-known melody which in H. A. & M. is called Diz, and which 1st appeared, set to Zeller's hymn, in Kocher's Stimmen aus dem Reiche Gottes, Stuttgart, 1838, No. 201. Tr. as:—

Saviour, here to Thee we come. This is a free tr. of st. i., ii., v., marked as by "F. C. C.," as No. 155 in Dr. Pagenstecher's Coll., 1864. [J. M.]

Zeuch ein zu deinen Thoren. P. Gerhardt. [Whiteuntide.] Appeared as No. 157 in the Crüger-Runge G. B., 1653, in 12 st. of 8 l., vlz. st. i.-viii., xli., xlii., xiv., xvi. of the full form. St. xv. was added in J. G. Ebeling's ed. of Gerhardt, 1666-67, No. 1xxx., and st. ix.-xi. in J. H. Feustking's edition of the same, 1707. The full form in 16 st. is in Wackernagel's ed. of his Geistliche Lieder, No. 32, in Bachmann's ed., No. 25, and the Unv. L. S., 1851, No. 184. It was probably written during the Thirty Years' War. The tre. in C. U. are:—

1. Retake thy own Fossessian. A free tr., omitting st. r.-xli., in pt. ii., 1725, of J. C. Jacobi's Psaimodia Germanica, p. 9. In his ed. of 1732, p. 46, it is greatly altered, and begins, "In me resume thy dwelling." From this form the trs. of st. i., vl., xvi. were included unaltered in the Scottish Evang. Union H. Bk., 1856.

2. Come to Thy temple here on surth. A good tr. omitting st. iv. by Miss Winkworth in her Lyra Germanica, let Ser., 1855, p. 113. From this the trs. of st. i., ii., viii., xiii, were repeated in the Pennsylvania Lath R. Rh. 1865.

in the Pennsylvania Luth. H. Bk., 1865.

8. 0 enter, Lord, Thy temple, A good tr. of st. i., ii., v.-viii., xiv., xvi. based on her L. G. version by Miss Winkworth in her C. B. for vendend, 1863, No. 71. Included in full and unaltered as Nos. 482, 483 in Dr. Thomas's Augustine H. Bk., 1866; No. 483, beginning "All love is thine, O Spirit" (st. vii.). In the Pennsylvania Luth. Ch. Bk., 1868, No. 250 is st. iii., vi., viii., and in the Ohio Luth. Hyl., 1880, No. 106 is st. i., ii., v., xiv., xvi.

Other trs. are: (1) "Retake thy own possession. Thou glorious Guest of Hearts," in Scient H. from Ger. Prof. Tranquebar, 1764, p. 43, and the Suppl. to Ger. Prof. ed., 1765, p. 26. (2) "Come, O Thou Holy Dove," by Miss Duan, 1864, p. 104. (3) "Come, enter Thins own portal," by Miss Cox, 1864, p. 117. [J. M.]

Zihn, Johann Friedrich, was h Sept. 7, 1650, at Suhl, in Thuringis. After studying for some time at the University of Leipzig, he went to Wittenberg, where he graduated M.A. in 1675; and in 1679 was appointed rector of the school at Suhl. In 1690 he became diaconus, and in 1708 archidaconus at Suhl, and d. there, Jan. 16, 1719 (Wetzel, iii. 470; Koch, v. 419, &c.). Zihn contributed five hymns (Nos. 526-530) to the Schleusingen G. B., 1688, the title of which begins, Der kinnelischer Freude zeitlicher Vorschmack. One has been tr., viz.:—

Gott lebet moch, Seele was versaget du dech. Cross and Consolation. 1688 as above, No. 529, in 8 st. of 10 l., marked as by M. J. F. Z. In each stanza II. 1, 2 are as quoted above, and II. 9, 10 are the refrain,

"Seele I so gedenke doch; Lebt doch unser Herr Gott noch."

It is a fine hymn, founded on Jer. z. 10. Koch says it was written in 1682. Included in Freylinghausen's Neues genetroiches G. B., 1714, and recently in the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 844. The fr. in C. U. in:—

God liveth ever! This is a good and full version, by Miss Winkworth in her Lyra Ger., 1st Ser., 1855, p. 33. Repeated in full in Miss Warner's Hys. of the Church Militant, 1858, and in Bp. Ryle's Coll., 1860. Varying centos are included in the Cumbrae H. Bh.; Flett's Coll., Paisley, 1871, and the Brow Hyd., 1871. The form heginning "Our God is good; in every place," in the Hys. of the Spirit, Boston, U. S., 1864, is from 11. 3-6 of st. i., iii., vi., viii.

Other tra. are: — (1) "God liveth still! Trust," &c. By Miss Cox, 1864, p. 129; repeated in the Gilman-Schaff Lib. of Rel. Poetry, 1891. (2) "God liveth still! Wherefore," &c. By R. Massle, in the Day of Rest, 1877, vol. vi. p. 326, [J. M.]

Zinzendorf, Christian Renatus, Count von, second s. of Nicolans Ludwig von Zinzendorf, was b. Sept. 19, 1727, at Herrahut, in Saxony. He received his education from his parents, and from Johann Langguth and others of the Brethren. He was the only son that survived his boyhood, early accompanied his father on his journeys, and was, e.g., in 1743, for sixteen days imprisoned with him at Riga. From 1744 to 1750 he lived mostly at Herrenbaag in Wetteravia, ministoring specially to the single Bretbren. When the community at Herrenbaag was dissolved in 1750, his father summoned him to London. He brought with him the seeds of consumption, which developed in England. He d. in London, May 28, 1752 (Koch, v., 312; Hist. Nachricht (to the Britder G. B., 1778), 1835, p. 192, &c.).

Brider G. B., 1778), 1835, p. 192, &c.).
C. R. von Zinzendorf's hymns were principally written during his residence in London. They are by no means free from the faults and mannerisms of that sentimental and fantastic period of Moravian hymn-writing; and their range of subjects is very limited. Their burden is a deep and intense personal devotion to the crucified Saviour; the spirit being that of his favourite saying, "I have but one passion, and that is He, only He." They were collected by his father, and pub (with a preface dated March 18, 1788), as the lat Appendix to the London G. F. of 1754, with 53 (54) pieces, 9 of which consist of only one satura, 2nd ed. 1756 (See p. 765, ii.) Most of them passed into the Brider G. B. of 1778. Few have passed into English use in non-Moravian hymn-books.

Three of these hymns may here be referred to:—

f. Ach lass and allen Tritten. Sanctification, Written in 1751. Included in the Kleine Brüder G. B., London, 1754. It is No. 64 in the 2nd ed., 1760, of the Appx. of 1755, and repeated as st. ii. of No. 380, in the Brüder G. B., 1778. The tr. in C. U. is:—

Lord Jesus, Thy atenement. This is No. 427 in the Moravian H. Bk., 1789 (1849, No. 588), repeated in Bickersteth's Christ. Psalmody, 1833.

ii. Für uns ging main Herr in Todesmöthen. Passiontide. This is included as No. 166 in the Brüder G. B., 1778, in 10 st. of 8 l. lt is a cento from three hymns in the Appx. of 1755, as above, viz. st. 1-5, 8, 9 are st. 12-15, 17, 11, 18, of No. 28 (this hymn begins "Ach du unaussprechlich nahes Herze"); st. 6, 7 are st. 2, 3, of No. 10; while st. 10 is No. 17. The text of 1778 is in the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 230. The tr. in C. U. is:—

My Redeemer, everwhelm'd with anguish. By J. Swertner, in full, from the 1778 text, as No. 78 in the Moravian H. Bk., 1789 (1849, No. 93). The trs. of st. 1, 2, 6-8, were included in Walker's Coll., Cheltenham, 1855. In the Moravian H. Bk., 1886, No. 82, it begins with st. vi. "Our enraptured hearts shall ne'er be weary."

iti. O susse Scolenweite. This is noted at p. 467, ii.

Not including the above the English Moravian H. Bk., 1886, gives seven bymns with his name, and ascribes portions of four others to him.

Einzendorf, Nicolaus Lurdwig, Count von, was b. at Dresden, May 26, 1700; was educated at the Paedegogium at Halle (1710-1716), and at the University of Wittenberg (1716-1719); became Hof- und Justizrath at the Saxon court at Dresden in the autumn of 1721; received a license to preach from the Theological Faculty of the University of Tübingen in 1734; was consecrated Bishop of the Moratian Brethren's Unity at Berlin, May 10, 1737; and d. at Herrnbut, May 9, 1760.

An adequate skotch of the life and labours of this remarkable man would far exceed the limits of our space. The details of his life are fully given in his Loben, by A. G. Spangenberg, 8 vols., Barby, 1772-75 (English version, abridged, by Samuel Jackson, London, 1838); and good sketches, with references to the fuller biographies, will be found in Kock, v. 248, Herzog's Real-Encyklopidite, xvii. 513, &c. The English reader may also consult. Kübler's Hist. Notes to the Lyra Germanico, 1865, p. 107; Josiah Miller's Singers and Songs, 1869, p. 160; Miss Winkwerth's Christian Singers of Germany, 1869, p. 305, &c. It is impossible to speak of Zinzendorf apart from the religious Communion of which he was the Second Founder; and accordingly an account of his life and labours is given in this Dictionary in the saticle Moravian Rymnody (see pp. 762-789).

Zinzendorf's first hymn was written at Halle in 1712, and his last at Herrnhut, May 4, 1760. Between these dates he wrote more than 2000 hymns. He himself pub an edition of his poems as his Teutsche Gedichte at Herrnhut, 1735 (2nd ed., Barby, 1766), but this only contains 128 hymns. The fullest representation of them is in Albert Knapp's Geistliche Gedichte des Grafen von Zinzendorf, pub. at Stuttgart in 1845 (hereafter, in this article, referred to as Knapp, 1845). This contains 770 pieces, arranged in three books, with an introduction and a biographical sketch by Knapp.

In preparing this edition Knapp had access to much unpublished material in the archives at Herrohut, and found there many of the hymns in Zinzendorf's autograph. But too much of the labour he bestowed thereon graph. But too much of the labour he bestowed thereon was spent in endeavouring, not so much to reconstruct the text from the original sources, as to moderate it. In various instances the hymns are altogether rewritten, so that the form in which they appear is not that in which, as a matter of fact, Zinzendorf did write them, but that in which he might have written them had he been Albert Knapp, and lived in the year of grace 1846. So much is this the case, that comparatively few of the hymns are given in Knapp's ed. in their original form. If not altered they are often either abridged or clise combined with others.

The keynote of Zinzendorf's hymns, and of his religious character, was a deep and earnest personal devotion to and fellowship with the crucified Saviour. religious character, was a deep and earnest personal devolton to and fellowahip with the crucified Saviour. This is seen even in his worst pieces, where it is his perverted ferrour that leads him into objectionable familiarity with seared things both in thought and in expression. If his self-restraint had been equal to his imaginative and productive powers, he would have ranked as one of the greatest German hymnwriters. As it is, most even of his best pieces err in some way or other, for if they are reverent and in good tasts, they are apt to luck concentration and to be far too diffuse. His best hymns, and those which have been most popular in German and English beyond the Moravian connection, are those of the period prior to 1734. Among the thearacteristically Moravian hymns of the period 1734 to 1742 there are also various noble pieces. The later productions, especially from 1743 to 1750, are as a rule oun-sided, unreal, and exaggerated in sentiment, and debased in style; exemplifying a tendency inherited from Scheffler (see p. 1006, i.), and suffered to rauto rlot. Without doubt he wrote too much (especially considering the limited range of subjects treated of in this hymns), and gave too little care to revision and condensation. Yet many of his hymns are worthy of note, and are distinguished by a certain noble simplicity, tree and are distinguished by a certain noble simplicity, tree and are distinguished by a certain noble simplicity, tree graces of Christ, entire self-consecration, willingness to spend and be spent in the Master's service, and fervent brotherly love.

The hymnbooks in which Zinzendorf's productions mainly appeared, or with which they have been associated, are described at length at pp. 787, 768. The more important may for convenience be briefly noted here, as follows:-

convenience be briefly noted here, as follows:—
(1) Summing geistlicher und lieblicher Lieder, Leipzig, 1725, with 889 hymns. The 2nd ed. was pib. circs 1723, and contains an Anhany with Nos. 890-1078 [Berlin Library, El. 2017]; while some copies have a Zugabe with Nos. 1079-1149 [Berlin, El. 2016], and others have also an Andere Zugabe, circa 1730, with lymns 1-44, bound up with them [Berlin, El. 2016, and Eith Mus.]. Zinzendorf's hymns passed into German

Zinzendorf's hymns passed into German non-Moravian use mainly through the Ebersdorf G. B., 1742 (Evangelisches Gesangbuch in einen hinlänglichen Auszug der Allen, Neuern und Neuesten Lieder, &c.), and in recent times through Knapp's Ev. L. S., 1837-1865. Comparatively few are found in non-Moravian English hympbooks prior to 1840, save in the versions made by John Wesley. The translations made by the English Moravians have been very little used by others, except by those who were connected by birth with the Moravians, such as James Montgomery (through whose influence several were included in Mercer's C. P. & H. Bk., 1855 and 1857), J. A. Latrobe and C. H. Bateman. The versions made by English non-Moravians since 1840 have been mostly of hymns which the Moravians themselves had not thought good to translate.

A number of Zinzendorf's hymns are noted in this Dictionary under their German first lines (see Index of Authors and Translators). the larger ed. of the English Moravian H. Bk. of 1886 those which are by Zinzendorf may easily be traced, his name being added to them, and the first line of the original German prefixed. The others which have passed into use outside the Moravian connection, or have been tr. by non-Moraviaus, are here noted as follows:

TEXTI. Was sag' ich die, die mit viel tansend Schmarsen. Peristence. Written in 1737 (Euspp. 1845, p. 122). 164 pub, in Appz. vil., circa 1738, to the Herricket G. B., 1778, st. il., x., beginning "Du treues Hampt'ich sag es mit Empfinden," were included as No. 752. This form is tr. as "Ob., faithrid God! with deep and sad emotion," By Mrs. Findlater. in M. L. L., 1862, p. 45 (1884, p. 211). [See also Appendix.] [J. M.]

Zion stands by hills surrounded. T. Kelly. [The Security of the Church.] 1st pub. in the 2nd ed. of his Hyssas, &c., 1806, in 5 st. of 6 l. (ed. 1853, No. 136). It is in C. U. in its full form, and also in centos, as:—

1. Every human tie may periah. This cento, be-ginning with st. ii., is given in a few American collectlone.

2. On the Rook of Ages founded. In the 1874 Supplement to the New Cong., No. 1216, is at. i., il., iv., v. rewritten.

3. Sion stands with hills surrounded. This slightly altered text is in a few American hymn-books.

Taking the original text and these centos together, it is found that the use of this hymn is somewhat extensive. It is based on Fa. cxxv., 2, and is a vigorous hymn on the Security of the Church of Christ. [J. J.] [J. J.]

Ζοφεράς τρικυμίας. St. Anatolius [Christ Stilling the Tempost.] The Very Rev. S. G. Hatherly, in his ed. of Dr. Neale's Hys. of the Eastern Church, 1882 (4th ed.) says:—

"These Stichers are not in use in the Church Service. They are probably taken by Dr. Neale from the work of some German antiquarian. Sundays of the First Tone are the let after Easter, and the 2nd, 10th, 18th and every eighth following Sunday after Pentacost until the Sunday next before Easter."

It is more probable, however, that Dr. Neale got his text from the "dateless Constantinogot his text from the "dateless Constanting politan book" from whence he said he got his "Art thou weary" (see p. 683, ii.) then that he secured it "from the work of some German antiquarian." Dr. Neale's tr., "Ficree was the wild billow," was pub. in his Hys. of the Eastern Church, 1862, in 8 st. of 8 1, and headed "Stichera for a Sunday of the First headed "Stichers for a Sunday of the First Tone." It was included in the Parish H. Bk., 1863; and subsequently in numerous collections in G. Britain and America. In some hymnals it reads, "Fierce the wild billow was," and in others "Fierce was the (falilee;" but Neale's text is that which is most extensîvely known. [J. J.]

Zwick, Johann, s. of Conrad Zwick, Rathsherr at Constanz, was b. at Constanz, circa 1496. He studied law at the Universities of Basel, Freiburg, Paris, and Padus (where he graduated LL.D.), and was for some time a tutor in law at Freiburg and at Basel. In 1518 he entered the priesthood, and in 1522 on the Upper Danube. Being accused of Lutheran tendencies, he was forbidden in 1523 to officiate, and in 1525 his living was formally taken from him. He returned to Constanz, and was appointed by the Council in 1527 as one of the town preachers. Here he laboured unweariedly, caring specially for the children, the poor, and the refugees, till 1542. In Aug., 1542, the people of Bischofszell, in Thurgau, having lost their pastor by the pestilence, besought Constanz to send them a preacher; and Zwick, proceeding there, preached and visited the sick till he himself fell a victim to the pestilence, and d. there Oct. 23, 1542 (Koch, ii., 76; Herzog's Real-Encyklopädie, xvii. 578, &c.).

Zwick was one of the leaders of the Swiss Reforms Zwick was one of the leaders of the Swiss Reforma-tion. He ranks next to Blaurer as the most important of the early hymn-writers of the Reformed Church. His hymns are collected in Wackermagel, iti., Nos. 672-696. The best appeared in the Niese grangibeak con nii ectionen Praisess und getatichen lieders, pub. at Zurich, 1558 (and ed. 1848 is the earliest now extant), of which he was the chief editor, and which was the first hymn-book of the Reformed Church.

The only hymn by Zwick which has passed into English is:

And shown Tag are dankan wir. Ascension. This probably appeared in the Nine grangiticite, Zürich, 1636; and is certainly in the 2nd ed. of 1640, from which it is quoted in Wackerragel, iii. p. 608, in 5 st. of 7 l., with "Alleinia." It is also in (2) the Strassburg Praimen und geystiche Lieder, 1837, f. 990, and in (3) 8. Salminger's (J. Aberlin's?) Der gants Praiter, ic. (Zürich'), 1637, f. 145 [Brit. Nur.]. In each case it is entitled "Another hymn on the Ascension of Christ," while in 1464 the fire there is even as "III" dien to. while in 1540 the first line is given as "Uff disen tag so denckend wir," in 1837 (2) as "Uff disen tag so dencken wir," and in 1837 (3) as "Auff disen tag so dencken wir," It is the finest of Zwick's by mus, and its spirit of joyful falth, its concisences, and its beauty of form, have kept it in use among the Lutherans as well as among the Reformed. It is No. 153 in the Une. L. S., 1551. The fre. are:—

1. Raise year devotion, mortal tongues. This is noted under Wegelia, J. (q. v.).

3. Ta-day our Lord went up on high. By Miss Winkworth, emitting st. iil., in her Lyra Ger., 2nd Ser., 1859, p. 48. Repeated in Schaffe Christ in Song, 1859 and 1870, and the Schaff-Gilman Lib. of Rel. Poetry, 1881.

Zyma vetus expurgetur. Adam of St. Victor. [Easter.] Gantier, in his ed. of Adam's Ocurres poetiques, 1881, p. 42, gives this from a Gradual of St. Victor before 1239 (Bibl. Nat. Paris, No. 14452), a Paris Gradual of the 18th cent. (B. N. No. 15615), and a Missal of St. Genevieve, c. 1239. It is also found in an early 14th cent. Paris Missal in the British Museum (Add. 16905, f. 146 b); in a Sarum Missal, c. 1370, and a York Missal, c. 1390, both in the Bodleian; in a St. Gall Ms. No. 383, of the 13th or 14th cent., &c. The printed text is given with full notes in Trench, ed. 1864, p. 165; also in Daniel ii., p. 69; Kehrein, No. 91; D. S. Wrangham's The Liturgical Poetry of Adam of St. Victor, 1881, i. p. 80, and others. Of this grand sequence Citchiovaeus says with accuracy:—

"The wonderful mysteries of the Resurrection of our Lord are here set forth, as foreshadowed in the Old Testament by many types, and through the goodness of God explained more clearly to us in the New. And of a truth this pross is almost divine, embracing much in few words, and all distinctly taken from the Secred Scriptures."

In this eulogy Abp. Trench agrees. The explanation of the Scriptural allusions is given | by Abp. Trench, Dr. Neale in his Med. Hys., and Mr. Wrangham in his Liturgical Poetry of Adam of St. Victor. In the Sarum use this was the Sequence on Monday in Easter Week; Paris on the Tuesday; York on the Friday; St. Victor and St. Genevieve on the octave of Easter. [J. M.]

The tre. of this Sequence include :-

1. Purge we out the ancient leaven. By J. M. Neale, in his Mediaeval Hys., &c., 1851, p. 88, in 15 st. of 6 l., the text used being that in Daniel ii., 69. Interesting notes are added explanatory of various and in some cases obscure references in the sequence to figures applied by the early Fathers to Christ and His holy work; and also of the typical teaching of certain his- 1881.

torical events recorded in Holy Scripture and referred to in the sequence.

2. Purps out the leaves eld of siz. By E. H. Plumptre, made for and included in the Hymnery, 1872, in two parts of 7 st., and 2 additional stanzas to be sung at the end of each part. Pt. ii. begins "Shadows of good the law doth show." This rendering is less literal than Dr. Neale's, and the obscure passages are omitted. Dean Plumptre tr. from the Sarum Missal.

Other tre. are :-

1. Let the old leaven be purged out. By C. B. Pearson in the Saram Missai in English, 1863; and his Sequences from the Saram Missai, 1871.
2. Purge the old leaven out, that we. By C. B. Pearson in his Sequences from the Saram Missai, 1871.
3. Purge the old leaven all away. By D. T. Morgan,
