APPENDIX.

PARTS I. AND II.

SUPPLEMENTAL INDICES.

APPENDIX.

The ten years which have elapsed since the first pages of this Dictionary were sent to press have seen many changes and developments in hymnological history and research. Old statements and conclusions have been retested, and in some instances overthrown, and new hymnbooks and hymnological works have been published. Many hymn writers have passed away, and new authors have come to the front. These causes, together with the late arrival of a few leading articles have necessitated this Appendix, which we now give in two parts: Part I. containing these articles, and Part II, those of less importance, together with notes on, corrections of, and additions to the annotations already in the Dictionary. Each Part is arranged in alphabetical order.

APPENDIX.—PART I.

American Hymnody, pp. 67-61. The interest displayed in hymnological studies, and in hymnbook compiling in America since this article was in type, has been great, and has resulted in works of exceptional quality and hymnological importance. The best and most complete hymnological which have been brought under our notice are :---

1. Brangelical Intheran Hymnat. Pub. by Order of the Sc. Lutheran Jaint Symod of Ohio and other States. Columbne, Ohio, 1880. This has 468 Hymns, a large propertion of which are trs. from the German.

2. Hymn-Book of the Evangelical Association. Cleveland, Chio, 1881.

3. The Church Book. Hymns and Tunes for the Une of Christian Worship. Prepared by Leonard Woolkey Basson. New York, 1883, It has 522 bymns, two special develoption a true as to each hymn and cood indices.

doxologies, a tune set to each hymn, and good indices. The 170 authors and translators are fairly representative of the Christian Church; the selection of hymne is, of the Christian Church; the selection of hymns is, from a literary point of view, good; and the theology is decidedly Evangelical.

4. Lander Donied. A Selection of Spiritual Songe, Ascient and Modern. The Century Co., N.Y., 1884 (18t ed. 1878). This new edition contains 1168 hymns, a few pasims in prose, the "Te Beum" and other hymns from the Frayer Book, daxologies, tunes, and 5 indices, including authors and translators, with short biographical notes. The known authors and translators are about 329. These represents a good proportions. magraphical notes. The known nutrous and trabslators are about 522. These represent a good proportion of the best writers, both Ancient and Modern. The tone of the book is bright and joyous, and its literary stantard is, on the whole, excellent, Amongst the American hymn-books of the same (celeslastical and dectrinal character, we know few to equal it as a popular manual for divine worship.

5. Hymns of the Paith, with Pastons, for the Use of Congregations. Edited by G. Harris, p.p., W. J. Tucker, h.D., and E. is. Glessew, a.a., Boston and N. Y., 1987. The editors inform us that "the order of topical arrange ment is determined by the Aposther Creed, which has suggested the title of the book, and has also determined the proportion of its various garts." They also say that "it is not a revision of some existing book determined the proportion of its various garts." They also say that "it is not a revision of some existing book with better tunes of the modern school introduced here and there, but is a fresh work from beginning to ent."
To accomplish the desired end upwards of 280 authors and translators are requisitioned representing most branches of the Christian Church. The selection and presences of the Communication and engineered single arrangement of the hydros, from a non-episcopal standpoint, are excellent. The "Selection of Pealms" from the Authorized Version, and the indicas are of the usual character. This is a valuable collection.

the Authorized Version, and the indices are of the usual character. This is a valuable collection.

6. Songs of Pilyrimage. A Hymnal for the Charches of Christ. By H. L. Hastings. Baston, 1889. This complete edition contains 1932 hymns by over 400 authors and translators, and gathered from about 20 nationalities. It is furnished with a long introduction and several indices. Tunct also accompany the hymns. of the hymns some 450 are original or re-written hymns by the Compiler, a proportion by one hand, and that by no means the best, sufficient in itself to render the book a failure. The collection is longs, combersome, and uninviting.

7. Church Song for the Utes of The House of God.
Prepared by Midaacthon Woolsey Stryker. N. Y., 1889.
This contains 684 hyrons by nearly 300 authors and translators. The hymne are arranged mainly in the order of subjects, and are taken to a great extent from well known writers. It is a sound, solid book, with a strong dash of the editor's persunality.

since we went to press, include :--

1. Hymn Studies. An Illustrated and Annotated edition of the Hymnal of the Mcthodist Episcopal Church. By Hen. Charles S. Nutter. N. Y., 1884. In this the hymna are printed as in the Hymnal, and the Notes, although very short, are carefully written, and generally very accurate. As an annotated hymnel it is very valuable.
2. The Poets of the Church.

2. The Poets of the Church. A series of Hiographical Sections of Hypers Writers, with Notes on their Hymn. By Edwin F. Hatfield, D.D. N. Y., 1884. There are about 300 biographical sketches, with short notes, all (noted above). It is a very readable and remains work.

4. Baptit Bymn-Writers and their Hymn. By Henry E. Burrage, D.D. Portland, Maine. 1883. This is a most exhaustive work on the Baptist hymn-wilters from the beginning of the Baptist movement to the present time. Att nations where Baptist have been located are included. The work is very complete in its range, and is well done. It is strictly denominational, and, as such, is unique of its kind.

5. The Latin Hymn-Writers and heir Hymns. By the late Enmuel Willoughby Duffeld. .. Ellied and Chaptical by Prof. R. B. Thompson, D.D. N. Y., 1889.
This is the most complete and popular account of Latin hymn-writers and their hymns which has been publiabed to date (1889) in the English language. Some of its most important statements and conclusions are, however, certainly most erroneous and misleading.
This arose mainly from the English, French, and German libraries. He was also to dogmatic and selfopinionated to be an accurate and discriminating critic.

The position thus taken by America in

The position thus taken by America in hymnological work during the past ten years is exceedingly creditable to her hymnological students, and surpasses every other Englishspeaking country. See New Supp. [J. J.]

Butler, Henry Montagu, D.D., was educated at Trinity College, Cambridge, and graduated B.A. as Senior Classic in 1855, and became a Fellow of his college in 1855. Tak-ing Holy Orders in 1859, he became Head Master of Harrow School in 1859. position he held until 1885, when he was pre-ferred to the Desnery of Gloucester. He hold the deanery for a short time only, and become Master of Trinity College, Cambridge, on the death of Dr. W. H. Thompson in 1896. Dr. Butler has also held the important appointments of Hon. Chaplain to the Queen: Examining Chaplain to Archbishops Tuit and Benson: Select Preacher at Oxford, 1882; and Preb. of Holborn in St. Paul's Cathedral. Dr. Butler edited the 3rd ed. of Hys. for the Chapel of Harrow School, 1865, and the 4th ed., 1881. (Public School H. Blu., pp. 937-989, where add 4th ed., 1881.) To the Harrow H. Bk. Dr. Butler contributed :--

1. Art thou the Healer that should come. St. John

Ask and ye surely shall receive. Prayer. Last st. by J. Montgomery.
 J. Jesus died for us and rose again. Death and Burial.

4. Lovest thou Me? the risen Saviour cried. St.

6. O merciful and holy. Founder's Day.

6. Rejoice to-day with one accord. Founder's Day.

7. The night of agony inth passed. Good Priday.

8. Where shall we find our mightiest saint? Ft. Past.

Of these Nos. 2 and 3 were given in the 3rd ed. of the Harrow H. Bk., 1865, and the rest were added in 1881. Nos. 3, 5, 6 and 8 uze also in Hys. for the Use of Sherborne Schoo',

The historical and critical works published | Butler's hymns are very lyrical and spirited and are admirably suited to their purpose,

Dutch Hymnody. The Dutch Reformed Church, as the national form of religion in Holland is called, is a Calvinistic body, maintaining a Preabyterian form of government, and has grown up side by side with the rise of the Dutch Republic. Calvinism was a plant of early growth in the Netherlands, where the soil had long been prepared for it by the worldliness of the Church, and the consequent prevalence of Waldensian and Hussite doctrines. Waldo's French tr. of the Scriptures was turned into Dutch rhyme and eagerly caught up by the people. There were also a number of half-Latin, balf-Dutch hymns of the kind introduced by Peter of Dresden, about the year 1440, for the spread of Hussits opinions. A collection of these was printed at Campen (Kompen) in 1550 with the title Sancboezen, inholdende vele suicertieke lovesangen ende leyden, in Latijn en duytsch, gheprent tot Cumpen. Thus the change from Latin hymns to those in the vernacular was very gradual in Holland, as in Germany,

f. Psalters.-1. The spread of Calvinistic rather than of Lutheran doctrines in Holland raised a strong opposition to original hymns, and led to the introduction of metrical psalms. The feeling against hymns grow so strong that it was resolved by three synods that only those should be sung which were found in Holy Scripture. There was no lack of versions to meet the taste for metrical psalms. As early as 1539 a collection was pub. at Antwerp, by Willem van Zuylen van Nyeveldt, and set to music by Gerhardus Mes, under the title Souterliedekens (Psalter Songs). This was so cagerly received that a 2nd ed. was issued the next year; and five other eds, appeared between 1558 and 1566. These pastins were sung in most of the Reformed congregations in Holland, and by the Dutch protestant refugees in England.

2. In 1565 Lucas d'Heere, the artist-poet of Ghent and friend of William the Silent, translated 36 psalms from the French of Marot and Beza; and in 1566 appeared two versions of the whole pealter—one by Uitenhove, the other by Datheen.

3. Johannes Uitenhove was a Ghentish noble who took refuge in England, where he was an elder of a Lasco's Dutch congrega-tion in London. There he pub. in 1551, 25 psalms, which were reprinted at Embden in 1557, and republished the next year with the addition of part of Ps. 119. Soon after, 39 psalms with the Magnificat and Benedictus, appeared without name of place or printer; and in 1561 a selection of 100 of his pealmversions was pub. by the well-known English printer, John Daye. Finally Uitenhove versified the remaining 50 psalms; and the whole collection was then pub. with a preface under the title De Psalmen Davidis in Nederlandischer sangeryme to mette der gemeyate Christi, Londen bij John Daye. 12 Sept. 1566. This version, which like that of d'Hecro was set to the tunes of Marot's French Paulter, 1888, Nos. 5 and 6 being much altered. Dr. was adopted by the Dutch congregations in Netherlands, where it was anticipated by Datheen's version, the preface to which is dated 25th March, 1566.

4. Peter Datheen was a Flandrian monk who renounced his yows and became an ardent preacher of Calvinism. His version of the Psalms was made from that of Marot. It is in the most rugged verse, displays but little poetical ability, and bears evident marks of great haste in its production. It was eagerly received, first by Datheen's own congregation at Frankenthal, and then by other rapidly spreading reformed congregations in the Netherlands. When it appeared, Datheen was preaching with a violent, stormy cla-quence in West Flanders and Zeeland, where immense crowds gathered to hear sermons and to sing pealms in the open air. This was the first great popular phase of the Netherland rebellion, and it helped to popularise Datheen's collection, which was exclusively authorised by a synod at Wezel in 1568. This authorisetion was renewed by later synods, especially by that of Dort, in 1578, under the presidency of Dathcen himself, at which a resolution was passed that only these pealms should be sung in churches, to the exclusion of hyons. Another resolution of the same synod against the use of organs is a further proof of the stern Calvinism of that assembly. About the same time the Dutch congregations in London and at Sandwich urged their superintendents to substitute Datheen's version for that of Uitenhove. This was done with the result that Dathcen's version became the anthorised psalmody of the whole Dutch Reformed Church.

5. A formidable rival appeared, however, in 1580. This was a metrical psalter by the renowned Philip van Marnix van St. Alde-gonde, whom Mr. Motley stylca "poet, orntor, hymn-book maker, burgo-master, lawyer, po-femical divine, soldier." St. Aldegonde, while deprecating the use of hymns other than those of Holy Scripture, added to his psalter metrical versions of the Songs of Moses, Deborah, and Jonah, the Magnificat, Nunc Dimittie and Gloria in Excelsis, the Commandments, Creed, and the Lord's Prayer. He was greatly assisted in this work by Bonaventura Yulemins, tutor to his son, and afterwards professor of Greek, at Leyden. Attempts were made by the synods of Middelburg (1581), and the Hague (1586), to substitute in public worship this new and improved version for that of Datheen, but were defeated by the ultra-Calvinistic party, supported by the influence of the Earl of Leicester. The clergy especially were opposed to any change, an in finel attempt was defeated at the great synod of Dort in 1619. Another century and a half was to clapse before good taste triumphed over Datheen's halting verse.

6, During the 17th cent. many poets and poetasters attempted to improve upon Datheen's version with varying success. A Pealter pub. in 1713 for the use of an Anabaptist community at Haarlem has, in addition to the psalms and a few hymns, a free metrical version of the added psalm in the LXX. "by David when he fought against Goliath." This collection displays considera-

Rugland, but was never much used in the ble poetical ability, and the preface states that Datheen's psolms had been abandoned by all the religious communities in Holland, except the State Church. Besides those already mentioned, Van Abkonde's Naam Register von Nederduytsche Boeken (1745) contains a list (by no means exhaustive) of 32 metrical psolters pub. up to that time, and many of them had passed through more than one edition.

7. In 1696 the attention of the syuod of Friesland was drawn to a revised version of Datheen's Psalter, made by A. Trommius, minister at Groningen (Sachte verbetering van den riim van Dathenus over de 150 psalmen Davids, Amsterdam, 1695). The necessity of improving the psalmody being almost universally admitted, the Synod drew up in 1701 a. scheme, with the co-operation of the theological faculty at the university, for a new Selection of Pealms from existing versions. This scheme however fell to the ground until 1754, when the presbytery of the Hague presented to the Synod of South Holland a proposal to amend certain expressions in Datheen's pealma. Considerable discussion ensued, and lasted throughout Holland for some years, but finally it was agreed by all the Synods that a new selection should be made from three existing versions, and a commission was appointed in 1772 for this purpose. states of each province nominated a minister from each provincial synod (nine in all) and the States-General sent two political and the States-veneral sent two pointest commissioners. The commissioners met at the Hague, in January, 1773, and finished their labours in July. The versions to which their selection was limited were those of Hendrik Ghijsen, 1686; Johannes Eusebius Voct, 1762, and that of a literary society, called Law Day Calve Board, 1761. Laus Deo Salus Populo, 1761. Ghijsen's version was not original, but a compilation from 17 preceding psalters, and was entitled Den Hoonigraat der psalmdichten (Amsterdam, 12no, 1686). Voct's version had been pub. at the Hagne, in 1764, and that of the society Lous Dec, at Amsterdam, in 1761. The compilers had practically therefore a range of 19 psalters, extending over a period of morn than 100 years, from which to select, and they succeeded in compiling a fairly representa-tive and satisfactory Metrical Psalter, which is to Datheen's version what Tate and Brady is to Sternhold and Hopkins. They appended the usual metrical versions of the commandments, Magnificat, Benedictus, Nunc Dimittis, two rhymes of the Creed, prayer before sermon, a grace, and morning and evening hymns, the last named being a free reudering of the hymn Christe, Qui lux es et dies.

8. The new version was gradually introduced throughout the provinces, and was on the whole well received, though in some places it had to encounter much prejudice and opposition, and its enforced use after 1775 even led to open riots in the province of Zeeland. The commissioners had also ventured to suggest that the psalms might be sung faster, but one old-fashiooed precenter staunchly pro-trated that he could not conscientiously sing one verse in less than twelve minutes! The new version was adopted by the Dutch congregation in London, and introduced into the foreign possessions. It is now in general use throughout the Dutch Reformed Church, though the Separatist (Dopper) congregations in South Africa until quite recently still clung to the time honoured doggerel of Datheen. We may note that there is a reprint of Datheen's psalms published in 12mo. at Goninghem, 1865, with the spelling modernised and archaisms explained in the footnotes.

ij. Hymn Books.—Although original hymns were excluded from the public worship of the Dutch Reformed Church, certain paraphrases or versitied portions of the Scripture were retained from the first in addition to the psalms. These were originally the songs of Moses, Issiah, Hezekiah, and of the Three Children, and the evangelical canticles; but later the O. T. canticles were emitted, and metrical versions of the Creed, Lord's Prayer, Commandments, and Morning and Evening hymns were inserted. The oldest Souterliedekens had 12 such hymns; St. Aldegonde's Psaiter had more; even Datheen's had 7, only 5 of which were from the Scriptures, while one was a direct tr. in Old Low Dutch of the hymn "Christe, Qui lux es et dies." But these were evidently intended more for private than for public use, since hymns were regarded with suspicion as savouring of Roman or Arminian doctrines.

2. The want of suitable hymns was gradually however making itself felt, and this feeling was strengthened, by the adoption, among Dutch Lutherans, of frs. from the rich store of German hymnody. A resolution of a Synod at Utrecht, in 1612, had permitted hymns upon the life of our Lord to be sung in public worship, and a collection of 58 such hymne was issued (Lofzaugen der Christelijke feestdagen. Utrecht, 1615, 8vo.). But this attempt of common sense to assert itself over prejudice was promptly suppressed by the resolution of the Synod of Dort (1619), which prohibited the use of any but Datheen's psalms. Hymns were however sung at festivals by several congregations in different parts of Holland, and the Synods of Drenthe and Friesland (circa 1638) recommended their use. To meet the want of suitable hymns, especially in private or family devotions, Willem Statter, minister of Ebergen in Gelderland, pub, in 1659, his Psalmen, Gezangen, en Geeste-lijke Liederen, and composed, in 1661, 10 books of Gezangen which were pub after his death. His books spread rapidly, and soon formed together with the Bible and psalm-book the whole religious library of the country people, and were generally used in family worship.

3. The first religious bodies in Holland to authorise the use of hymns in public worship were dissenters from the Dutch Reformed The Anabaptist Psalter of establishment. 1713 contained an Appendix of 12 hymns for Christmas, Easter, Ascension, Whitsunday, as also Holy Baptism and the Holy Communion. A hymnal for the use of a separatist congrapation at Werkendam was compiled about 1750 by Jacob Groenewegen, and ran through 8 eds. before 1799; and a bulky collection of Menaonite hymns dates from about the same period.

4. The Pealter revision committee of 1773 had discussed the desirability of compiling a l hymnal, but took no further steps in that direction. Mcanwhile the feeling in favour of hymns was spreading among the educated classes, and even among the clergy, whose tastes were being elevated by the use of the improved version of the pealms. The poet Van Alphen in the notes to his Cantatas pub. in 1783 strongly urged "the need in public worship, as well as in private religious assem worsing, as well as in which poetry and music night be combined to meet the wants, the streamstances, and the taste of the day." This circumstances, and the taste of the day." This feeling found expression at the provincial synod of North Holland in 1796, which invited the co-operation of the other provinces. In the meantime Engelbert, Minister of Hoorn, and A. Rutgers, Minister of Haarlem, were asked to give the subject their attention. During the next seven years the matter was discussed with much warmth by the various synods; * Van Alphen contributing towards the discussion a specimen hymn-book of 66 original compositions (Proeve van Liederen en Gezangen voor de openbare Godsdienst. 's Gravenhage 1801, 8vo.), and finally in 1803 a committee of eighteen ministers and elders was appointed by the nine provincial synods to compile a hymn-book for use in public worship in addition to the metrical psalms. The commission held its first meeting at the Hague, on the 27th Sept., 1803, and its last, there also, on the 12th June, 1805. During the interval two other contributions towards the collection appeared, one by Ahasuerus van den Berg, minister of Aruhem and president of the commission, who had also been on the psalm commission of 1773 (Procee van Geestelijke Oden en Liederen. Utrecht: 1804, Svo.); the other by Rhijnvis Feith, ex-elder of Swolle, and a member of the commission (Procve van eenige Geraagen voor den openharen godsdienst, Amsterdam, 1804, 2 vols. 8vo.). The hymn-book appeared in Sept., 1805 (192 hymns, with tunes), as :-- by two bymns from his cantata De koop der zaligheid, besides contributing some irs, from the German.

The Gezangbook was formally adopted by resolution of all the provincial Synods on the 1st January, 1807, and is now, together with the metrical psalms, the authorized hymnal of the Dutch Reformed Church.* Like the revised psalter, it had at first to encounter epposition and prejudice, especially in Flushing and Friesland, but it gradually made its way, and even in private use has entirely superseded all other hymnals, Willem Sluiter's not excepted. Its language, though sometimes stiff and antiquated, is sober and devout, and it contains many beautiful hymna, especially among those which have been tr. from the German.

5. In 1847 the general synod of the Dutch Reformed Church in Holland resolved that an Appendix should be issued, and the work of compilation was entrusted to the standing committee for superintending the publication of the hymn-book. Several successive committees were engaged upon it, the principal share of the work being undertaken by Dr. N. Beets, minister of Utrecht, and Professor Ter Hear of that University, and a considerable number of hymns, translated and original, was collected. In 1865 a synodical committee was appointed to revise the collection and arrange appropriate tunes to the hymns, and in July, 1866, the Appendix was issued as: -- Verrolgbundel op de Evangelische Gezangen.

As the authorised hymnal of the largest Dutch speaking religious body, the Evangelische Gezangen has naturally exercised a very considerable influence over all later Dutch hymnals, most of which have borrowed largely from it. This is especially the case with regard to the Dutch speaking population of South Africa, where there are no less than eight Dutch hymnals in use among different missionary bodies, all of them largely indebted to what may be called the mother hymnal, that of the Dutch Reformed Church. Of sixty-seven hymns which are found in not fewer than five out of these eight hymnals, and may thus be said to have received the hall-mark of almost general approval, twentysix are from this source. Hence such hymns as Op bergen en in dalen; Jezus neemt al zondaars ann; Juich aarde, juicht alom den Heer (Ps. 100, which may almost be called the Cape national hymn), God enkel licht, and others, are familiar as household words in every part of South Africa and in every Dutch speaking congregation of Christians, white or coloured, from Cape L'Agulhas to the Zambezi.

iii. Evangelical Lutheran Hymns.—There is one other Datch hymnal which demands a brief notice. It is that of the Dutch speaking (or as they are commonly called Evangelical) Lutherans. The Reformed or Calvinistic Church of Holland was most intolorant of any dissent, and those congregations which had embraced the Lutheran confession of faith existed only on sufferance, and were not permitted to build themselves Churches, until 1682. Hence the Lutherans adapted their form of worship as far as possible to that of the Calvinists, abandoning the use of the crucifix, alter lights, &c., and even singing metrical pealms, though in a version of their own. In time however hymnals were adopted by the Lutheran congregations of Amsterdam, of Rotterdam, and of the Hague. But besides the inconvenience of having three distinct hymnals, these collections were very meagre in general hynns. Thus of 165 hymns in the Amsterdam collection, 80 were appropriate to festivals only, while many of the Hague hymns were antiquated in form and expression. and needed recasting. The first regularly organized Lutheran Synod in Holland met in 1819, and here it was resolved that a new hymnal should be compiled for general use, which was to include the best hymns in the three existing collections, hymna from the collections of other protestant bodies, and new hymns to be specially composed by the first Dutch poets of the day. The carrying out of this scheme was entrusted to a committee of seven, who met at Amsterdam in 1820, though the result of their labours did not appear until six years afterwards as: — Christelijke Gezangen voor de Evangelische Luthersche Gemeenten in het koningrijk der Nederlanden. Amsterdam, 1826, 8vo.

Amsterdam, 1825, 8vo.

It contained 378 hymns, comprising 125 hymns and 25 pasims from the three old hymnels, 41 from the Dutch Reformed Book, 20 from other collections, and 162 new compositions. The tunes were for the most part the familiar old German chorakes with a few new tunes by the musical editor, Mr. J. W. Wilms. Strange to say the collection did not include "time. Though this book contains some undoubtedly fine hymns, the intricacy of its metres, the length and number of verses (instances occurring of 15, 18, and even 28 verse hymns) combined with the rigid and somewhat antiquated character of the collection as a whole, will prevent its taking a place in the first rank of Dutch hymnody, but it is useful to refer to for the purpose of comparison with other trs. of the same German originals.

iv. Various.—It must suffice only to mention here Uitgezochte Liederen, the modern Dutch Baptist hymnal, containing several good hymns, and the Opwelkingsliederen van Sankey, trs. of Moody and Sankey's Sacred Songs & Solos, pub. at Amsterdam by M. S. Bromet. Of a higher order of merit are Dr. R. Bennick Jansouius's trs. of some of the best Latin hymns and sequences (Gezangen der Kath. Kerk, Hague, 1860), though for metrical reasons not well adapted for congregational use.

v. Conclusion.—In conclusion, it is worthy of remark how very few Dutch hymns are original compositions. This may be attributed partly to the fact of there being so large a store of noble hymns at hand in the cognate German language, which readily lend themselves to translation into Dutch; partly perhaps to the lack of religious enthusiasm and fervour among the Dutch in modern times. There do not seem to be more than about 3000 Dutch hymns extant, and of this number, at least two-thirds, and these the best known and most popular, will be found to be translations. Not, if we except the obsolcte Willem Slutter, is there any one writer whose name stands out

2. The Office Hymn Book, 1889. This is designed as an independent Appendix to the 1876 ed. of H. & A. M., and seems to have been compiled by some one who was not satisfied with the officul Supplement of the Compilers. It is in two Parts. Part I. is set forth as "Constiting chiefly of Modern Hyoms, and of Ancient Hymns not transfalled into their original Metres." Part II. contains The Hymns to be area at Mattins and Exercising Badly throughout the Year, and consists entirely of hymns tr. from the Latin, the total additions being 175 hymns.

Several of the older hymns not commonly used in Public Worship have been omitted, and others of a more modern and popular type have been autstituted. Of these additions those by Bp. Bickersteth, the editor, are very beautiful and of much ralue. The introduction has been rewritten, and the notes to the hymns corrected. Edited by the Rec. Robert Mande Hoorson, M.A., 1889. This work is on the same lines as the annotated edition of H.A. & W. by L. C. Biggs, and includes the Supplement of 1889. It is by no means an accurate work, and arms of its surmises are ware various, as for instance, the quotation of a are very corious, as for instance, the quotation of a Greek Canon from the Office for Christmas Day as possibly the basis of C. Wesley's "Hark, the herald angels sing." Notwishestanding these weak points the book is very readable.

This does not indicate a notable era in the hymnological history of the Church of England, although it is the fullest resume we can present. See New Supp. [J. J.]

Here is the spring where waters flow. [Holy Scripture.] On p. 682, i. six stanzas are given from a poem on The New Jerusalem dated circa 1660, beginning "Jerusalem, my happy home"; and the last three stanzas of the six are set forth as the original of the lines prefixed to some editions of the English Bible which were pub. " in the early part of the 17th cent, and beginning: "Here is the spring whence waters flow." Since that article was stereotyped we have found the same lines in a hymn pub, 85 years before the date given at p. 588, i.

The lines are printed on the page facing the Titlepage of an Edition of the Bible pub. by C. Barker, in London, in 1575, and read, together with the various references to Holy Scripture, as follows:-

" Of the incomparable trea-ture of the kely Scriptures with a prayer for the true use of the same—Graunt this, O heavenly Father, for Jesus Christ's sake. Amen."

We have seen these lines, including the prayer, attributed to Beza. If he had been the author, we should expect to find them in an edition of the English Bible printed at Geneva at or about the same date as the above. In the Brit. Mus. there is a copy printed at Geneva by John Crispin in 1563; but the lines are not therein. Not having any reliable evidence either for Beza or for any other writer, we must therefore give these lines and the prayer as Anon.

The peculiarity to be noticed in the fact that st. i -iii., as above, are also in the broad-sheet maned on p. 582, i. in a slightly different form, we cannot explain. We can only suggest that there is a possible original not yet discovered from which both pieces may have been taken.

Hermannus Contractus, so called because of his crippled condition, is also known as Hermann of Vöhringen, Hermann of Reichenau, and Hermann der Gebrechliche. He was the s. of the Count of Vöhringen in Swabia, and was b. on July 18, 1013. He entered the | school of St. Gall, circa 1020, and soon developed, although so young, an intense in-terest in his studies. It is said of him that he rapidly mastered Latin, Greek, and Arabic. History, music, mathematics, philosophy, and theology engaged his attention, and in each study he attained marked success. Some go so far as to say with confidence that he is. Aristotle's Poetics and Rhetoric from the Arabic, but the statement is disputed by others. At thirty years of age he removed from St. Gall to the monastery of Reichenau, where he remained to his death, Sept. 24, 1054. His name is associated with several hymns of historical importance, and notably the following, which are annotated in this Dictionary :-

1. Alma Redemptoria Mater quae pervia coeli, p.

2. Rez. omnipotens die bodierna, p. 958, ii., 967, ii.,

963, 1. 3. Sancti Spiritus adsit nobis gratia, p. 967, ii.,

93, h. 4. Salve Reginz, p. 891, fi. 5. Venl Sancte spiritus, Et emitta, p. 1218, i., ii. 6. Venl Sancte spiritus: keple, p. 1216, fi. 7. Victimae Paschall, p. 1223, i., fi.

The conclusions arrived at in the appotations of these hymns concerning their respective authorship will be found somewhat adverse to Hermannus's claims with regard to Nos. 2 and 4, and positively against him with respect to Nos. 3, 5 and 7. Some of these conclusions will be found to be utterly opposed to those of Duffield on the same hymns in his Latin Hymn-Writers, &c., 1889, pp. 149-168. This difference of opinion arises mainly out of the fact that the use at St. Gall and at the Brit. Mus. were not examined by Duffield, and are much older and more important than any of those with which he was acquainted. [J. J.]

Horder, William Garrett, was b. at Salisbury, and educated at the City of London In 1862 he entered Cheshunt College as a student for the Congregational Ministry. On leaving College in 1866 he undertook the pustorate of a Congregational Church at St. Helen's, Lancashire. In 1869 he removed to Torquay, and in 1875 to Wood Green, London, where he still resides. Mr. Horder has comniled-

(1) The Book of Praise for Children, 1875; (2) The Poet's Bible, New Testament 1881, Old Testament 1889; (3) Congregational Hymns: A Hymnal for the Prese thurches, 1884. The first of these was incorporated in 1881 in The Book of Praise for Children, pub. by the Congregational Union under the editorship of the Rev. G. S. Barrett. With this latter book Mr. Horder had no association beyond the handing over of the former for the use of the Union, From Mr. Horder's ed. of this collection (the first) a Sel. was pub. in 1883 "For the Use of seventh unidern." The Poet's Bible is valuable collection of prostry for the use of sedents "For the Use of dewish children." The Poet's Bible is a valuable collection of poetry for the use of sudents and preachers. The congregational Hymns is referred to elsewhere (p. 280, ii. 10). In addition Mr. Horder has published the following original works:—(1) Intimations of Insucretality, 1883; (3) The Hymn Lower An Account of the rise and growth of English Hymnology, 1889; (3) The Silent Voice and Other Discourses, 1880.

The Hymn Lover is practically a handbook to Mr. Horder's Cong. Hymns. As in that collection the hymns are gathered from all ages, nations, and churches, opportunity is afforded for the discussion of each epoch of hymn-writing and for the grouping together of interesting particulars concerning hymn-

Mr. Horder has availed himself of with great skill and judgment: and although the out-come is not severely technical, the result is all the more attractive for the general reader. Although hymnologically it is not a scientific production, practically and within its range, it is the most useful and attractive work we have on its special subject. The reproduction therein of specimen hymns of each epoch, is a new and valuable addition to this special kind of work. See NEW SUPP.

Hrabanus (Rabanus) Maurus, a of one Ruthard, was b. probably at Mainz, about 776. At an early age he was sent to the Monastery of Fulda to receive a religious education. In 801 he was ordained Descon, and the following year he went to the monas-tic school of St. Martin at Tours to study under Alcuin, a celebrated teacher of that time, who gave to Hrabahus the name of Maurus to which Hrabanus added Magnentius. On his return to Fulds in 804 he became the head of the school connected with the Monastery. Towards him Ratgar the abbot showed great unkindness, which arose mainly from the fact that Raigar demanded the students to build additions to the monastery, whilst Hrabanus required them at the same time for study. Hrabanus had to retire for a season, but Ratgar's deposition by Ludwig the Pious. in 817, opened up the way for his return, and the reopening of the school. In the meantime, in 814, he had been raised to the Priesthood. Egil, who succeeded Ratgar as abbot, died in 822, and Hrabanus was appointed in his stead. This post he held for some time, until driven forth by some of the community. In 847, on the death of Archbishop Otgar, Ludwig the younger, with whom Hrabanus had sided in his demond for German independence as against the imperadism of his elder brother Lothar, rewarded him with the Archbishopric of Mainz, then the metro-politan sec of Germany. He held this appointment to his death on Feb. 4, 856. He was buried first in St. Alban's, Mainz, and then, during the early days of the Re-formation, in St. Maurice, Halle, possibly because of the opposition he is known to have made to the doctrine of Transubstantiation. With German historians Hrabanus is regarded as the father of the modern system of education in that country. His prose works were somewhat numerous, but the hymns with which his name is associated are few. We have the "Christo sanctorum decus Angelorum," p. 229, fi.; "Tibi Christe, splendor Putris," p. 1178, fl.; and the "Veni Creator Patris," p. 1176, il.; and the "Veni Creator Spiritus," p. 1208, i.; but record Spiritus," p. 1208, i.; but recent research convinces us that the ascription in each case is very doubtful; and none are received as by Heabanus in Professor Dünniler's ed. of the Carmina of Hrabanus in the Poctae Latini aeri Carolini, vol. ii. 1884. Dümmler omits them evon from the "hymns of uncertain origin," (J. J.)

Innocent III., Pope, was a member of the celebrated Conti family, which gave nine Popes to the chair of St. Peter. He was b. at Anagni, circa 1160, and was educated at Rome, Paris, and Bologna. On his return to writers and their work. This opportunity Rome, through his powerful family influence he became a Canon of St. Peter's, a subdeacon before he was thirty, and Cardinal Descon in 1190, and as such was known as Cardinal Lothario. During the Pontificate of Celestine III., having little to do, he wrote his De Contemptu Mundi. On the death of Celestine III. on Jan. 8, 1198, he was ordained Priest, consecrated Bishop, and enthroned as Pope within the few days between that date and Feb. 22, of the same year when he began his Pontifical reign, being at the time about thirty-eight years of age. His reign is well marked in seclesiastical history, although it

July 16, 1216. In hymnody his name is associated with the grand Sequence the "Stabat mater doloross" (p. 1061, i.); and the glorious "Veni Sancte Spiritus, Et emitte" (p. 1212, ii.) In each case, however, there are many reasons to doubt his authorship, or, at least, to accept the ascription with caution. See details as indicated above.

Italian Hymnody.—Although Italy has been renowned for conturies past as a land of music and song, it has been chiefly in the celebration of secular themes that her lyre has been employed. Sacred hymnody, at least since the times of the Renaissance, has been comparatively little cultivated. It is proposed in the present article to give: L A brief sketch of Hymnody in the Italian language from the 13th century to the 19th; and II. An account of its present condition (i.) in the Roman Catholic Church, (ii.) in Protestant communities.

1. Hymnody in the Italian language from the 13th century to the 19th.

1. "It is now," says Prof. Bartoli, in the Encyclo. Britannica, 9th ed., vol. xiii., p. 498, " an established historical fact that there existed no writing in the Italian language before the 13th century." But in the early part of that century lived St. Francis of Assisi (b. 1182, d. 1225), founder of the Franciscan order, and to him have been attributed several short religious poems in the Italian of that period. One, in particular, is famous, known as the "Canticum Solis," or more fully, "Cantico de le creature comunemente de lo finte Sole." True, its authenticity has been the subject of considerable controversy, but it is now admitted that the general sense and many of the expressions are those of St. Francis, though in the lapse of ages the original structure may have been changed into a style more modern and ornate. The following is the text na now given :-

Laudato sia Dio nio Signore, con tutto le creature, specialmente messer lo Fratre Sole, il quale giorna o llumina nol per lui. È ello è bello e radiente con grande splendore; de te, Signore, porta significazione, "Laudato sia mio Signore, per Suora Lunia e per le stelle; il quale in cielo le hai formate chiare a belle. "Laudato sia mio Signore, per Fratre Vento, a per l'Aire e Nuvole è arreno e ogni tempo, per le quale dai a tutté creature sustemamento.

" Laudato sia mio Signore per Suora Acqua, la quale è molto utile, e humile, e pretiosa, e casta.

"Laudato sia mio Signore, par Fratre Fuocho, per lo quale te allumini la notte; e ello è bello e jecondo,

"Laudato sia mio Signore, per nostra Madre Terra, la quale ne sostenta, governa e produce diversi frutti, e coloriti flori, e herbe

"Laudato sia mio Signore, per quelli che perdonano per lo tue amore, e sostemeno infirmitade e tribula-tione. Beati que il che sostemenanno in pace, che de te, Altisalmo, Seranno incoronati."

It is eaid that this hymn used to be chanted by the saint and his companions, and that in his last illness another stanza was added, giving thanks for "our Sister, the Death of the body." [v. - 2. From A.D. 1250 onward, the development of literature in the vernacular was rapid. In the cities of northern Italy the people had been accustomed to listen in the piezzas to the songs of the jongleurs. About this time Giacomino of Yerona, and Bonyecino of Riya, composed religious poems in the Veronese dialect, which were sung or chanted to similar groups of hearers. Their themes were the bless dues of the Babilonia Infernale, and the bless duess of the Genesalemme Celeste. In form, their poems consisted of verses of 13 syllubles, arranged in stanzas of four lines, all lines in the same stanza ending in the same rhyme.
- 8. In the latter half of the 13th century appeared in Italy that extraordinary manifestation of the ascetic spirit, the processions of the Flagellants. Vast bodies of men, women, and even children, girded with ropes and scourging themselves with whips till the blood flowed freely, passed from city to city, with hymns and prayers, and calling on the people everywhere to repent. Their hymns or laude were in the Umbrian dialect, in verses of 8 syllables, and were sung in dialogue.

Towards the end of the century arose in Tuscany a school of lyric poetry represented by Dante (b. 1265, d. 1321) in his Canzoni, and in the next generation by Petrarch (b. 1304, d. 1374) in his somets. But the subject of these compositions was for the most part earthly love, and nothing which these poets wrote resembled what we now mean by hymns.

4. The chief religious poet of the period, leaving out of view Dante's great cpic, was Jacopo dei Benedetti, commonly called Jacopone (b. before 1250, d. 1306, p. 675, ii.). He is usually regarded as the author of the wellknown Latin poem, the "Stabat Mater dolorosa," as well as of its companion piece, not so familiarly known, the "Stabat Mater speciess." He wrote in Italian 211 poetical pieces, which have been arranged in seven books. Some are mere theological dissertations in verse; others are satires, but others approach more nearly the nature of hymns, being short compositions written to popularise a sacred thought or celebrate a festival. "Jacopone," says Prof. Bartoli, "was a mystic, who from his hermit's cell looked forth upon the world, denouncing the immoralities of the age and especially the malpractices of popes Celestine V. and Boniface VIII." Cast into prison for his faithful testimony, his spirit was still unconquered. In his dungeon he composed songs extolling the Divine Love in a striking and original manner. Those were sung throughout the 14th and 15th conturies by the pious members of the reli-gious orders, such as the Minimi, the Jesuates, and the lay schools of the Laudesi, or singers ( of God's praise.

5. Passing to the 15th century we come to Maffei Beleari (b. 1410, d. 1484), a native of Florence, a warm-hearted Christian man and the author both of numerous Laude and of Biblical dramas. The latter were more admired than the Laude. Nevertheless, these hymns of praise, being simple in style, full of feeling, and adapted to popular melodies, became extensively known and were widely used.

6. Belcori had scarcely passed away when there appeared in Florence the famous Dominican monk, Girolamo Savonarola (b. 1454, d. 1498). He not only from the pulpit denounced with prophetic carnestness the sine and vices of the time, but also sought to avail himself in the interests of morality and religion of the power of sacred song. Lorenzo de Medici had written certain vile productions, called Canti Carnascioleschi ("Carnival Songs"), which were sung by the young nobles and populace during the Carnival, and Savonarola, to counteract their influence, composed songs of a different order but similar in form and metre, and capable of being sung to the same tunes. His biographer Villari, however, acknowledges that but little true poetry is to be found in them, only "a temperate tone of decorum and good sense." At an earlier period Savonarola had written certain Cansoni on the Ruin of the World, the Ruin of the Church, and other subjects; but they are poems rather than hymns. Also, he appended to his treatise on the Love of Jesus Christ some Laule e Contemplazioni inflammative ("Exciting Hymns of Praise and Contemplation"), in which he extols the mercy and goodness of the Saviour, and expresses an ardent desire to become one with Christ, being uplifted on the same cross, fixed to it by the same nails, and wearing the same crown of thorus. These hymns, however, are said by Italian scholars to be roughly executed, and could never have been used in public worship.

7. Better than Savonarola's are the lyrics of Girolamo Benevieni (about A.D. 1500). A specimen cited by Villari shows that occasionally he was extremely fanciful, almost passing the bounds of common sense, but a competent judge says of his productions, that they are "sometimes sweet and always warm with religious feeling." Another says that he para-phrased the psalms in a simple, happy, vigorous style, and that some of his hymns belong to the finest lyrical productions of Italy in the 15th century.

8. One other name may be mentioned belonging to this period, that of the highly accomplished Vittoria Colonna, the Marchesa Pescars (b. 1490, d. 1547), a great friend of Michel Angelo. Among other poems she published (about 1540) some of a religious character, called Rime Spirituals. These are described as " the productions of a delicate and sonsitive imitativeness rather than of vigorous and original genius," and there is no evidence that they were ever used as hymna in worship.

9. The latter part of the 16th century was the commencement of a long season of decline in Italian literature, and for nearly 200 years there appeared no religious poet of eminence. Nevertheless, in the years 1688 and 1703 there were published two collections of hymns which claim a brief notice. The first was entitled: Corona di sacre Canzoni, o Laude Spirituali di piu direti Autori (A Chaplet of Sacred Songs, or Spiritual Hymns of Praise, by several devout authors). The names of the authors are not stated, but the editor was Mutteo Coferati, a priest of Florence. Permission to print the 1st ed. was given by the Grand Duke of Tuscapy, Nov. 90, 1687. A 2nd ed., revised and enlarged, was printed at Florence in 1689, by Jacopo Carlieri. It con-tains about 330 hymns. There is no attempt at orderly arrangement, so that from a hymn on the Resurrection of Christ we pass to one on the Nativity, and a composition, whose subject is the Vanity of the World, is followed by one on the Annunciation of the Blessed Virgin. Melodies accompany the hymns.

The other book, printed at Florence in 1703, comprises 212 bynms, all composed by Bernardo Adimari, a priest of the Oratory of S. Filippo Neri. This work consists of three The 1st contains hymns suitable for use at any time; the 2nd, hymns for the fixed prescribed Festivals and for those of the Blessed Virgin; and the 3rd, for the Sundays in Lent and the movable Festivals. To all these hymns melodies are attached, and the following sentence from the preface both shows that they were intended for public use, and throws an interesting light on the usage of those days in regard to sacred song :- "Signor G. M. Casini has not only given the airs to these Little Songs, as may here be seen, but has besides affixed music arranged for four voices, it being the custom in many places for one stapza to be sung by the choir and the other by the people." It may be added that another Florentine poet with the surname of Adimari lived about this time, the Marquis Ludovico Adimari (b. 1644, d. 1708), author of Satires and Sonnets, and prose works of a religious character. Not improbably he was an elder brother of Bernardo Adimari.

10. The middle of the 18th century saw an improvement in Italian literature. Not only did secular poetry revive, as represented by Alfieri, Monti, and others, but the celebrated Doctor and Suint Alfonso Maria de Liquori, distinguished especially for his writings on casuistry and theology, also composed hymns and spiritual songe known to this day throughout Italy. He was b. near Naples in 1696, d. in 1787. Of the special character of his hymns we shall say more when we come to speak of the present condition of hymnody in the Roman Catholic Church of Italy.

11. Another poet of this period composed one fine hymn used in the worship of both R. Catholics and Protestants. This was Metastasio (i.e. Pietro Trapassi, b. at Rome in 1698, d. 1782), creator of the modern Italian opera. The subject of his hymn is "the omnipresence and omniscience of God," and the first stanza ie as follows:-

> Dovunque il guardo giro, Immenso Dio Ti vedo; Nell'opre Tue T'ammiro, Ti riconesco in me. La terra, il mar, le afere Parlan del Tuo potere; Tu sei per tutto, e noi Tutti viviamo la Te,

12. In the first quarter of the 19th century 1 we meet with a hymn-writer in Alessandro Mansoni, author of tragedies and other poems, and of a work of fiction, I Promess Sposi ("The Betrothed"), which has been translated into most European languages. He was b, in 1781 and d. in 1878. His mother was a daughter of the celebrated Beccaria. In 1815 he published a small volume of Inni Sacri ("Sacred Hymns"), their subjects being "The Nativity," "The Passion," "The Resurrection," and "The Name of Mary." A few years later he pub one on "Pentecost." Frof. Bartoli says of these hymns that they have "gleams of genius, especially when the author describes the human affections." Comprising 16 or 18 stanzas each, they are too long for use in ordinary public worship; but a selection of 5 stanzas from the hymn on the "Nativity" is found in two of the Protestant hymn-books mentioned below. The first stanza is as follows:-

> " Ecco el è nato un Parvolo, Ci fu largito un Figlio : Le avverse forze tremano Al muover del suo ciglio ; A l' uom la mano Et porge, Che si tavviva, e sorge Oltre l'autico enor.

Also, eight stanzas from the hymn on "Pentecost" are in the collection edited by Rev. T. W. S. Jones, of Naples (v. infra). One stanza in particular seems to us beautifully descriptive of the effects of the Holy Spirit's presence in the Church :--

> " Come la luce rapida. Piove di cosa in cosa. E i color varti suscita, Dovunque si riposa; Tai risonò moltiplici La voce dello Spiro; L'Arabo, il Parte, il Siro, In allo sermon l'odi.'

13. Luigi Carrer, of Venice (b. 1800, d. 1859), and Francesco Dull Ongaro (b. 1808, d. Jan. 10, 1873), two Italian poets who in their writings chiefly gave expression to intense patriotic aspirations, also wrote hymns, which however we have not met with in any collection intended for use in worship.

14. With a mention of another poet of the patriotic school, Giuseppe Giusti, we may alose this part of our article. Giusti (b. 1809, d. 1850) was the greatest Italian satirist of this century, but in a Roman Catholic Hymnal described below, La Lira Cattolica, we find a brantiful little song of his, entitled "A Mother's Love." He died of consumption at a comparatively early age. The following touching lines, in the translation of W. D. Howell's Modern Italian Poets, are said to be the last which he wrote:-

" For the spirit confused With misgiving and with autrow.

Let me, my Saviour, borrow The light of faith from

O lift from it the hurden Which bows it down before

Thee, With sighs and with weeping I commend myself to Thee; My faded life, Thou knowest, Little by little is wasted Like wax before the fire, Like snow-wreaths in the bosom. Break, Thou, the Res, my Saviour, That binder it from Thre."

And for the soul that panteth For its refuge in Thy

- II. Italian Hymnody at the present time.
- i. In the Roman Catholic Church.
- I. A very competent authority, an ecclesiastic in high position in Rome and a writer for the press, informs us that the Roman Catholic Church has never considered singing by the people in the vulgar tongue as liturgical, the language of the Church being Latin. In Germany and the Slavonic countries popular singing has a certain historic value as regards either the words or music, and on this account its use there is not uncommon, and has been commended by bishops and councils. These, however, have required that the words of new hymns should be always approved by proper authority, and not even in these countries is singing in the language of the people permitted in the celebration of the solemn Mass. If such singing has sometimes occurred in country churches, it has been condemned by provincial councils.

2. But in Italy, our informant tells us, popular singing has no historic importance as regards either words or melodies. The people take part in the worship by singing in Latin the Litany, the Tantum ergo, and other similar portions of the service, and in many places, especially in the country, the people sing in Latin, and with the Gregorian melody (al-though somewhat burbarously) the Credo, the Sanctus, &c., of the solemn Mass.

3. But in extra-liturgical services, e.g. in the daily devotion of the month of May, in popular missions, or in the exercises before and after preaching in congregations of young people and especially of boys, they are accustomed to sing some strophes in Italian. These, however, have no sanction from public authority. The Church does not oppose such singing, but she does not consider it an official matter in which she ought to intervene with her authority.

4. Among hymns and verses of this kind. those most frequently used in the Devotions above-mentioned are the compositions of St. Alfonso Maria de' Liguori (see § I. 9). The English reader may refer to a volume published in 1863, with the title Hymns and Verses on Spiritual Subjects: being the Sacred Poetry of S. Alphonso Maria Liguori, translated from the Italian and edited by Robert A. Coffin (Lond., Burns and Lambert). hymns there given are 49 in number; but the last four, though commonly inserted among the poetry of St. Alfonso, were not composed by bim. The translator has divided Liguor's hymns into 3 classes: (1) Devotional, relating to the Lord Jesus Christ or to the Blessed Virgin Mary; (2) Ascetical; (3) Mystical. Their character may be inferred from some of the titles:-

"To the Infant Jesus," "On the Sacred Heart of "To the lufant Jesus," "On the Sacred Heart of Jeaus," "To the Instruments of the Passion of Jeaus," "Mary our Hope," "Our Mother Mary," "The Mother of Sorrows," "Stanzas for the Evening Exhortations," "The Soul gives itself to Jesus," "How amiable is the Will of God," "The soul enamoured of the Beauty of God," "Dialogue between Jesus and the loving Soul," "The loving Soul in Pasolation."

These hymns abound in utterances of intense devotion; much of the imagery is token from the Song of Solomon, and although here and there are striking thoughts and beautiful turns of language, the expression of emotion ; is often so warm and passionate as to seem unreal to our colder English temperament. It is said that, like some of the Canti of Savonarole, these compositions of St. Alfonso were written for the most part for the use of the people, and intended to replace the profane and pernicious love songs of which the Nespolitans were so fond.

5. In northern Italy a collection of hymns and souge is popular, entitled La Lira Cattolica : raccolta di Sacre Lodi scelle e poste in musica per cura del Cav. Ab. Francesco Faà di Bruno. The 1st ed. appeared in 1854. The 4th is before us, pub. at Turin in 1886. These compositions are used in extra-liturgical services, and are also often sung by peasants at their work in the fields. The Roman ecclesiastic, who is our authority for the statements previously made as to Roman Catholic worship, speaks rather slightingly of this collection, and we can well imagine that, by the more cultivated of the Italians, it is regarded very much as I. Sankey's Sacred Songs and Solos are by many persons in Great Britain. It includes a few hymns by poets of the first rank, but the majority are of a lighter and more popular character, often interspersed with choruses. The names of the authors of some of these latter are E. Bixio, S. Zambaldi, Spaccapietra, and C. C. Berta; but, as the editor of the collection is now deceased, we have been quable to obtain further particulars.

The collection comprises 123 pieces, in 5 sections. The first 24 relate to the worship of God, the Holy Trinity, Jesus Christ from His birth to His ascension to heaven, and to the Eucharist. Then follow 32 in honour of Mary under her various attributes. Twenty others are in honour of certain other Saints, Virgins and Martyrs. The fourth section contains 22 hymns on different subjects, adapted to animate the sonl of the Christian; and the book closes with a number of hymns of an instructive and nortal character suited to the young, together with translations into Italian of the "Dies Iras," "Stabat Mater," and the "Te Deum."

6. In the years 1817 and 1818 there were pub. at Florence two vols. (now bound in one), with the following title :- Inni Sacri e Sequenze del Breviario e Messale Romano tradotti in versi lirioi Toscani dal sucerdoto Arcangelo Lastri Fjorentino con varie dissertazioni per illustrazione dei medesimi. These translations from the Roman Breviary and Missal are often very free and paraphrastic, but the accompanying notes and dissertations are interesting and instructive. The work is adopted for private rather than public use.

7. The last remark holds good in regard to another book, Il Salterio del Pellegrino, per D. Luigi Tosti Cussinese (Palermo, 6th ed., 1860). The contents of this little vol. are not really hymns in metre and rhyme, but devout meditations in the style of the Psalms of the Bible, and for this reason are called "Psalms."

8. It may suffice simply to name Lands Mariane, by Francesco Martello, and Il Salterio Muriano, by Troinni Saverio. works have no special merit, and like the preceding have no Church authority.

9. In closing this section, we may add that although the Roman Catholic Church in Italy does not appear to favour the singing of hymns in the vernacular in public worship, several of her Pontiffs and Bishops during the present century have distinctly encouraged such singing in private. In the preface to La Lira Cuttolica (§ 5), are quotations from official announcements by Popes Pins VII. and Pius IX., and by aix Italian Archbishops, granting indulgences of 40, 80, or 100 days, and even of a year, to those who shall practise this plous exercise with a contrite heart. The object is stated to be "to excite the faithful to the singing of spiritual bymns of praise, and to hinder as much as possible the singing of dangerous profane songs."

ii. Among the Protestants of Italy.

1. The principal Protestant communities in Italy at the present time are the following:-(1) The Waldensians, descendants, ecclesiastically, of the Waldenses of Piedmont; (2) The Free Italian Church ("Chiesa Libera"); (3) The Mission Congregations of the Methodist Episcopal Church of America; (4) The Mission Congregations of the Wesleyan Methodists, in North and South Italy: (5) The Baptists, who have stations in Rome, Turin, Leghorn, Venice and other places; some sup-ported by the Baptists of England, others by the Baptists (Southern Convention) of the U. S. of America; (6) The Brethren ("I Fratelli"), represented in Great Britain by G. Müller, of Bristol [see Plymouth Brethren Hymnedy], having in Italy about 50 small congregations; (7) Missions unconnected with any Denominational Society, as those of Rev. E. Clarke at Spezzia, and Count Pappengouth at Naples. For the use of these communities the following books have been prepared:-

at Naples. For the use of these communities the following books have been prepared:

(1) Salari e Cantici ("Psalms and Canticles"), pub. by the Flurence Tract Society, comprising 120 hymns with appropriate music. The hymns are by more than 20 authors, whose names are mentioned below. We recognize 16 or 17 as trs. from the English or German, principally the former, e.g., Ker's evening hymn; Wesley's "Soldiers of Christ, arise"; Poddiridge's "Beset with somes on every hand"; T. R. Taylor's "I'm but a stranger here." But the greater part are originals. This book is used by the Waldensian Church, the Free Italian Church, the Methodist Episcopalizans, and some Baptlat congregations. Indeed, at the present time it is more widely used than any other Protestant hymnal.

(2) Inni Sacri per use delle chiese, delle scarte, e delle famiglie Evangeliche Italians. Napoli. This book was first prepared in 1870 for the use of the Wesleyan congregations, by the Rev. T. W. S. Jones, superintendent of the mission in South Italy. In 1881 it was re-edited by him and considerably enlarged, and now contains 384 hymns, together with the Te Deam, and other authorns. Mr. Jones informs us that a new edition, to be still further enlarged, is now (1883) in preparation. The hymns are by about 25 different unthors, but the far greater number are by Mr. Jones and Sig. Pretoro (v. infra).

(3) Salani, Inni e tunconi Spirituali, by T. P. Rossetti. Firenze, 1878. This is a collection of 283 hymns, including 18 trs. by Rossetti from I. Kankey's Sacred Songs and Sala, 306 by Rossetti limself, and 61 by Mapici, Rata, Ferretti and others. Of T. P. Rossetti's own hymns 60 were pub. in 1857. The complete collection of his hymns was insned in 1867. and a 2nd ed. with additions from other authors, in 1274.

own hymns 60 were pub. in 1857. The complex voluc-tion of his hymns was issued in 1867, and a 2nd ed. with additions from other authors, in 1874. The book decom of the hymre was lessed in 1887, and 2 and eq. with additions from other junthers, in 1874. The book de-scribed above is called the 3rd ed. The collection is used by the "Brethren," and at Rev. E. Clarke's Mission at Spezzis, and many of the hymns are found in other collections.

These hymns have been favourably reof the Palms. These hymns have been havourably re-ceived by the Christian public of Italy, and some of them will probably be included in future collections. Sig. Tummolo is an evangelist labouring under the direction of the Rev. N. H. Shaw, of Rome. (10) Armonia Biblica ("Biblical Harmony"), by Vinceuzo Bellondi (Rome, 1822), consists of 105 hymns and califora range considered by come to be of an action vanceuzo seuconi (Some, 1822), consists of 105 hymna and religious powns, considered by some to be of superior character. The author is a minister at Venice, labouring under the auspices of the American Baptist Missionary Society (Southern Convention). The book is used in Sig. Belloudi's own congregation, and occasionally in the Baptist Church in Via Teatro Valle, Rome.

- 2. The authors of the hymne in the Protestant Italian Hymn-books include the following :--
- I. Rossetti, Gabriele, author of 7 hymns in Hymnal No. i, and of 15 in No. 2, came to England in 1821 as a political refuges; became in 1831 professor of Italian Literature in King's College, Loudon, and d. in 1854.
- 2. Rossetti, T. Piatrocola, a relative of the preceding, was b. in 1825, at Vasto, in the Abruzzi. As a young man he was connected with the Liberals of Italy, and in Dec. 1851, fled to England. Here, through the influence of Count Guicciardini he was converted. In 1857 he reof Coint tracelardin in was converted. In 1835 he re-turned to Italy, and for 26 years laboured as an evangelist in Alessandria, Turin, and Florence, where hed, in 1883. Most of T. P. Rossetti's bymns are original, but, besides his avowed translations from I. Sankey's 2. 2nd Solos, several others are based on well-known English hymns.
- 3. Micoolini, G., who d. recently, was professor of the Italian language and literature in the Collège of Torre-Pellica. In the books above named 11 hymns are accided Pellica. In the books above named 11 bymns are to him, 8 of which are in No. 1, and 8 in No. 2.
- 4. Mapel, O., Doctor of Philosophy, was a friend of G. Rossett's, and like him a political exist. He d. in London about 1858. To him are ascribed 29 hymns, of which 22 are in No. 1, 27 in No. 2, and 5 in No. 5.
- Tasca, Il Conte Ottavio, of Bergamo, still living, pub, in 1858 a small vol. entitled Inst Cristiani, from which 10 hymns in Nos. 1 and 2 are taken. Most of these are translatious of English hymns.
- 6. Ferretti. Belvatore (b. 1812, d. 1874), lived for a time in England, where he edited a journal entitled, 1/ Eco dt Savonarola, and in 1850 pub. Iran a Salmi ad uso dei Cristiani d' Italia (Lond., l'attridge and Cakey), He afterwards returned to Florence, where he established a Protestant orphanage. Six of his hymns are in C. U.
- 7. Jones, Rev. Thomas W. S., has been a Westeyan missionary in Italy for 26 years, and now resides in Naples as superintendent of the southern district of the Mission. He was not only compiler and editor of Hymna No. 2, but 147 of the hymna are of his composition. A large number, however, are free translations of the best English byznes.
- 8. In Pretore, Michele, Licentiste in Belies Lettres, is a native of the Abruszi, and was a student of medicine, but is now a teacher in the Wesleyan schools. He is the author of 117 hymns in No. 2, many of which are very popular and useful.
- 9. Eigneierdi, Staniales, author of 5 hymns in No. 1, and of 3 in No. 5, was b. in 1811, became a professor in

- In this book are 75 hymns with music. It is pub, by the Tract Society at Florence, and is largely used in Sunday schools. Two or three are translations, the rest pub in 1848, are translations from the French. He d. in one of which was the Pilgrim's Progress. His bymns, pub. in 1848, are translations from the French. He d. in 1868.
  - 10. Mazzarella, Bonaventura, author of one fine hymnin No. 2, is a member of the National Parliament of Italy.
  - 11. Borghi, Ginseppe, author of 3 hymns in C. U., was b. at Bibbiena, in 1790, and d. at Rome in 1847. He was a Canon of the R. C. Church, and author of "Rhus-trations of Petrarch," and other works.
  - 12. Revel, Alberto, p.p., author of 3 hymns in No. 1, is professor of Greek and Hebrew Exegosis in the Waldensian College, in Florence. He was b. about 1840, and is the author of a new translation of the N. Testament, a Hebrew grammar, and other learned works. He re-ceived the degree of n.p. from Edinburgh University.
  - 13. Sciarelli, Francesco, once a Franciscan monk, and one of the band of prissts attached to the army of
  - 14. Ragghianti, Salvatore, also at one time a Franciscan monk; De Sanctia, Giovanbettinta, formerly a teacher of languages and professor of music; Filippini; Mormo; Reals, F.; all of whom have contributed hymns to No. 2, are now (1888) ministers of the Wesleyan charch in Italy. Carile, Giuseppe, now deceased, was also a Wesleyan teacher and minister.
  - 15. Concerning the following we are unable to state any particulars:—Beta, author of 20 hymns in No. 1; Pava, author of 13 hymns in the same book; Pons, B.; Rostagno, F.; Hargolfe; Zons; Harberio, L. M.; Taglislatela; Berrini, O.; Arini.
  - 3. With regard to the form and metres of these Protestant Italian hymns, it may be remarked that the stanzas in most frequent use are of 6 or 8 l. The English c. and s. u. sourcely ever occur. The arrangement also of the rhymes is often rather intricate, and reminds one of the Petrarchian sonnet. regards Subjects, the favourite themes of the native hymn-writers appear to be Redemption through Christ: our Lord's Sufferings, Death, Resurrection, Ascension and Second Advent : and the blessedness of those who believe in Him. There are also a few good hymns to the Holy Spirit; but such subjects as Divine Providence, Christian Work, Death and Heaven, are scarcely touched. Hence, in the hymnals above-named, compositions on these topics are mostly translations. Hymns expressive of the communing of a devout soul with itself in the things of God are also at present rare. Most are in the form of direct address to God as praise, prayer or penitent confession. And the expression of devout affection to God the Father or the Lord Jesus Christ is not stronger or more frequent than in English bymns. In fine, our feeling is that in these poetical compositions of the two Rossettis and other distinguished sufferers in the cause of national freedom, as well as of evangelists connected with the various Missions, we have only a meritorious beginning of Protestant Hymnody in the Italian language. may be its future is beyond our province to predict.
  - 4. In conclusion, we would express our great obligations to the Rev. N. H. Shaw, General Baptist Missionary in Rome, without whose aid in procuring books and communicating in-formation this article could not have been written. Thanks are also due to the Rev. T. W. S. Jones, of Naples; to the Rev. A. De Santi, S.J., of Rome, and to Sig. G. B. Wills, of Florence, for information kindly furnished. [W. B. S.]

Jesu dulcis memoria, p. 586, i. After the sentence, "These stanzas are quite unnecessary to the hymn, &c.," read thus before passing to the printed forms of the text :-

Since the notices here given were electrotyped four other mes. in the Brit. Mus. have been examined. Three of these (Add. 16,975, f. 249 b., of circa 1300: the Reg. 7, A. vi., f. 108, of the 14th cent.; and the Reg. 2, A. ix., f. 86, of the 14th cent.) present nearly the same text as that in Land Misc 668, and confirm the belief that the 42 stanza form of the text is the original. The fourth ms. is also of the 14th cent. (Reg. 7, D. xvii., f. 179 b), but it presents an interpolated and corrupt text, in 53 stanzas, viz.:—1-42, 43, 45-48, 50 (12, 48, 50 being greatly altered); and also 5 stanzas not found in any other us. yet examined. These additional stanzas are:

- 52. Quem diu differs dolco.
  53. Hunc affectum cum sentio.
  54. In hits pierumque gaudeo.
  55. Ta moestorum sotalium.
- Ostende Patri volucra.

It will thus be seen that sts. 43, 45, 48, 50, 52-56 are all at least as early as the 14th cent., though there does not appear to be any reason to regard them as really by St. Bernard; while sts. 44, 49, 51, have not yet been found in Mss. earlier than the 15th

Ken. T., p. 422, t. Since this article was electrotyped the following details concerning Bp. Ken's three hymns have come to -In a Catalogue of the S. P. C. K., pub. in 1707, there appears an entry of a tract entitled, Three Hymns for Morning, Evening. and Midnight, by the Author of the Manual of Prayers for Winchester Scholars. A copy of this hitherto unknown tract has lately come into the hands of Mr. W. T. Brooke, and by him has been passed on to the Brit. Mus. Lib. It is bound up in a volume with two other pamphlets, of which the respective titles are:

policis, of which the respective titles are:

(1) An Exposition on the Church Culculum, or the Practice of Divine Love. Revised. Composed for the Diocese of Bath and Wells. Printed for Charles Brome, at the Gun of the West end of St. Paul's Churchyard. 1903; (2) Directions for Prayer for the Diocese of Bath and Wells. Price 2d. pp. 16; (3) A Morning, Frening, and Midwight Hymn by the Author of the Manual of Prayers for Winchester Scholars. Non. 2 and 3 have no title, but on the last page of No. 3 in "London, Printed at the Gun, at the West End of St. Paul's Church." Paul's Church.

The text of this tract of the "Three Hymns" agrees absolutely with that of 1709, except that in the 10th stanza of the Morning Hymn it reads "not rise again," as in 1705. We may therefore conclude that Ken's revisions, with this exception, were made between 1705 and 1707, the date of the S. P. C. K. Catalogue.

We may add that another cento from Ken's Midnight Hymn is "Blest Jesu! Thou, on heaven intent." in Rice's Hys., 1870.

The Life of Bp. Ken by the late Dean Plumptre was puli, in 1888, in 2 vols. It is by far the best and most exhaustive life of the Bishop, and is worthy of the author's great reputation. See New Surr. [G. A. C.]

O Lord, Thy heavenly grace impart. [Self Consecration.] This hymn is found in Mrs. Lucy Wilson's Memoirs of John Frederic Oberlin. London, 1829, p. 254. It is there printed as part of the account of a service in Waldbach church on June 11, 1820, the description being given from the journal of Mrs. Steinkopff, who, with her husband, Dr. Steinkopff, secretary of the British and Foreign Bible Society, was then visiting the Ban de la Roche. After describing the service, and the sermon on Isaiah liii. 11, she adds :-

"When he had finished, he read some verses of a hymn expressive of entire devotedness to God. 'My dear friends,' said he, 'may those be the feelings of our bearts, and as such let us sing them.' They then sang them de bon cosur. The following is a translation:—

OLD VERSION

" O Lord, Thy heavenly grace impart, And fix my frail inconstant heart; Henceforth my chief desire shall be, To dedicate myself to Thee I To Thee, my God, to Thee!"

Then follow three other stanzas.

Fifty years later the Rev. Daniel Wilson, Vicar of Islington, in a letter of Sept. 15, 1870, to the Roy. James Bonar, of Greenock, regarding this hymn of his wife's, remarked :-

"It was written originally by Oberlin in German. Mrs. Wilson wrote Oberlin's Life. Mr. Steinkopff I think first translated it into English, and then Mrs. Wilson put it into verse."

In the Life however there is nothing to show that the hymn was of Oberlin's own composition. Moreover at p. 257 it is said that the Sunday services at Waldbach were in French, and that the German service was on Friday. As it happens June 11, 1820, was a Sunday, and there is no reason to suppose that the custom was broken, or that either the service as a whole, or this hymn in particular, was in German. No German hymn at all re-sembling it has yet been discovered. It is indeed true that in Oberlin's Schriften, vol. i., Stuttgart, 1843, p. 242, there is a German hymn, the first stanza of which is :-

> "Zeuch Herr, mein unbeständig Herz Durch deine Gnade himmelwärts. Mein cinzig Sehnen lass es sein, Zu werden ganz, O Jesu, dein, Nur dein, mein Gott, nur dein."

The hymn, however, like the rest of the Leben, is simply a tr. from the English Life by Mrs. Wilson, and is not an original German

We have also failed to find a French original, either in Oberlin's hymn-book mentioned at p. 393, i., or elsewhere. Still Mrs. Steinkopff's account, given above, makes it beyond doubt that Mrs. Wilson's English hymn does in some way reproduce (probably very freely) a hymn used at Waldbach, and makes it almost certain that the hynn was in French, but gives no clue to its authorship.

Mrs. Wilson's hymn has enjoyed considerable popularity, and has generally been given in full and unsitered, as in Thring's Coll., 1880-82, and the Free Church H. Bk., 1882. In H. V. Elliott's Ps. & Hys., 1835, it was reduced to L. M., and so in the American Salbath H. Bk., 1858, and others in America. Further altered versions are :-

Jesus, Thy heavanly grace impart. In Bicker-stethic Christian Psatmody, 1833, and others.
 O God, Thy heavanly grace impart. In the Hys. for Holy Trinity, Westminster, 1851, No. 78.

Old Version, Hymns of the (pp. 957-866). In the article on the Old Version the main object was to trace out the origin and development of Sternhold & Hopkins, and the authors of the psalm-versions given in that Psalter. The Hymns therein, the Licence to Print, and the Authority to Use both the Psalms and the Hymne formed but a small part of the scope of the article.

In citing the various editions of Sternhold & Hopkins, on pp. 857-866, several hymns are referred to as forming an integral part of those editions. These include translations of a few aucient hymns; metrical versions of the Creeds, the Lord's Prayer, the Ten Commandments, and the Song of the Three Children; and original hymns on various subjects as "The Lumentation of a Sinner," the "Complaint of a Sinuer," a "Thanks-giving after the receiving of the Lord's Supper," and others. In tracing out the history of those hymns we shall begin with the Partial Pealter of 1561 and the Complete Psalter of 1562. Sternhold & Hopkins, known to many as the Old Version, had an eventful history, as the following Schedule will show. In this Schedule we note (1) the Library in which each Pealter referred to is found; (2) the Date of each Psaller; (3) its Title; (4) the Uso to be made of it by the Pooplo; (5) the Licence and Authority for this Use; (6) the Imprint and Privilego; and (7) Sundry remarks arising out of the foregoing facts.

Before giving the Schedule in detail, we subjoin the titlepages of the four editions of the Psalter which mark the successive stages of its history.

The Schedule in detail, with the emission of the editions in the Brit. Mus. Lib. and elsewhere, from 1567 to 1577, which are all under the ten years' Licence, is as follows:-

From the last date given in the above Schedule (1578) the publication was continued "Cum gratia & privilegio Regise Malestatis," for several years. It finally read "Cum privilegio" only. The printing passed from John Day to his Executors and Successors, then to the "Company of Stationers," and finally to the Universities. The last issue was from Cambridge in 1828. In the Brit. Mus. Lib. alone there are copies of some 600 different editions of this Psalter.

ing facts clearly to the front :-

1. That in 1561 a Partial Psalter with accompanying hymns was published under an Interim Licence for Private Use.

2. That in 1562 the Complete Psatter was issued, together with the Hymns, under a Seven Years' Privilege to print.

3. That in 1566 the Seven Years' Privilege to print was cut short by an Interim Licence for the Public and Private Use of both Psalter and Hymns.

4. That in 1567 this Privilege to print was regranted for Ten Years.

5. That in 1577 this Privilege to print expired.

6. That in 1578 the new Privilege to print was unrestricted as to time, and remained so until the Psalter ceased to be printed in 1828.

7. That the Use (col. 4) was, from 1561 to 1566, for Private Use only.

8. That from 1566 to 1828 it was for both Public and Private Use.

In this Schedule we have used the words Licence and Authority and Imprint and Pririlege (cols. 4 and 5) to distinguish between what seem to us to be two distinct features in the successive titlepages of the Psalter. Taking first the column which is headed Licence and Authority we find the titlepage begins with these few words:-

1561. Feri mete to be used of all sortes of people privatly for their golly solace and comfort. . . Newly set fourth and allowed according, &c. . .

These words were used with respect to the Partial Version of 1561. On the issue of the Complete Version of 1562, it was expanded

This rearranged and expanded wording continued from 1562 to 1566, when it was still further rearranged and expanded to:-

1586. Newlys fet foorth and allowed to bee foung of the people together in Churches, before and after Morning and Buening prayer: as also before and after the Sermon, and moreover in private houses...

In the issue for 1567 (the first of the ten years Licence and Privilege) it reads:—

Newly fet forth and allowed to be fong in all Churches, of all the people together, defore and after Morning and Evening prayer.

In these various editions of the Psalter we begin in 1561 with the simple expression of the authors' opinion that the book is "Veri mete to be vsed of all sories of people privatly;" and to this end it is "Newly set fourth and allowed"; in 1562 it is "Faith-fully perused and allowed" for the same purpose; in 1566 it is "Newlye fet foorth and allowed to bee foong of the people to-gether, in Churches"; and later it is "in all Churches." This gradual expansion of the titlepage of the Peuller os it passed through, what we may term, its period of trial from 1561 to 1578, is of some importance in this inquiry. Although the legal and technical meaning of the words "Newlye set fourth and allowed" is Licenced only, yet, when it reads as it does in the first issue for Public Use in 1566, " Newlye fet foorth and allowed to bee foong of the people together, in Churches, before and after Morning and Euening prayer: as also before and after the Sermon, &c.," we are evidently brought face to face with something more than a simple Licence to a printer to print or publish. This something must have been either a Positive Authority from a definite source, or such Sanction as satisfied both the Clergy and the People. Positive Authority, either by Convocation or by Parliament, is unknown; but a Sanction, which was a sufficient security to both Clergy and Laity, was known and accepted. This lay first in the clause in the Injunctions of 1559, that any intelligible hymn "or song to the praise of Almighty God" might be sung before and after Morning and Evening Prayer; and, second, this was strongthened by the fact that the use in Public Worship of the Psalms and the Hymns, had the willing and cordial approval of the Queen's Censors,* who numbered amongst them the highest Ecclesiastical authorities in the Realm. Strictly speaking the Injunctions of 1559 rendered any action by Parliament or Convocation unnecessary, in that they proceeded directly and absolutely from the Queen's Majesty.

It must be noted also that "whatever be the Legal and Technical Authorization [of this Pealter of its Practical Adoption by the State, the State Services in 1576 [that is, the year before the ten years Licence and Privilege expired], and 1580 [two years after the same was granted, without limitation as to time], which quote it as if it were the only psalm book, are an evidence" of some importance (see p. 364, ii.).

The Privilege to John Day to print and publish began with the issue of the 1561 Partial Version, "Cum gratia & prinilegio Regiss Maiestatis," and continued the same to 1578, and after, with the two limitations only "per septennium" and "per deconnium," as given above.

It is evident to our mind from these facts that at the first the putting forth of the Pealter and the Hymns was a tentative measure only. This tentative measure evidently satisfied the Queen's Censors that the whole book was in accordance with the Reformed Teaching and Ritual, that it was calculated to do good to the people, and that it was r :ceptable to them and to the clergy at large. These authorities therefore deemed it right to raise the book from the position of a private manual into a public and authorized book for use in public worship. This they did by Licencing it to be printed and published with the full knowledge that it was to " bee foong of the people together, in Churches, before and after Morning and Euening prayer: as also before and after the Sermon." Its acceptance was universal, and continuous.

The opening lines of the psalm-versions of this Psalter are given on pp. $46-65. We now give the Hymns

(28) The Song of the Three Children, O all ye works of God the Lorde.

In a Cambridge ed, of the Psalter of 1662. the same hymns are retained. Later the number gradually grow less until they numbered about fourteen.

Of these hymns that which is historically of the most importance is the "Thanksgiving after the receiving of the Lord's Supper":-

The Lord be thanked for His gifts. This was the first metrical hymn written for, and adopted by, the English Reformers for use at the Celebration of Holy Communion. It was first printed, so far as yet known, in the incomplete 1561 Psalter of Sternhold and Hopkins (as set forth above), p. 228, in 31 st. of 4 l., and in this manner:

A thanket gening after the recening of the Lorder Supper.
 Sing this as the c.xxxvii Pealm.

The Lord be thanked for his giftes, And mercy enermore: That he doth fnew unto his faints To him be laude therfore.

The same form of this hymn 🏎 always retained. It passed the ordeal with the Pealter, and thereby attained, in common with the other Hymne named above, an authority coequal and co-extensive with the Psalter itself. It must also be noted that it is an original hymp, and not a Metrical rendering of the Prose tr. of the "Gloria in Excelsis" in the Office for Holy Communion in the Book of Common Prayer. The length of this hymn is somewhat formidable, and in these latter days its 124 lines would be regarded as a tax upon the patience of the congregation. When it is known however that it was sung by those who had communicated, and those who were waiting to communicate, whilst another portion of the people were communicating, that the congregation sat during the time it was being sung, that it could be curtailed if the communicants were few in number, and that its object was, as George Wither says in defence of his hymn of 200 lines for the same purpose (Hys. and Songs of the Church, 1623) to meet the "enstorn among us that during the time of administrating the Holy Sacrament of the Lord's Supper there is some Psalm or Hymn sung, the better to keep the thoughts of the communicants from wandering." its length is understood and accounted for. The practice of sitting during the singing of hymns in the Church of England prevailed in various counties to 1840. In several collections of Ps. & Hys. dating from 1830 to 1840 the duty of standing during the singing of the hymns, as against the practice of sitting, was strongly set forth in the Prefaces thereto. England, Hymnody, Church of, p. 386, ii.] From this it is evident that sitting to sing at the Holy Communion had extended to other parts of divine worship.

The history of the hymns for Holy Com-munion in the New Version of Tate and Brady, which superseded this hymn in Public Use in the Church, is given at pp. 801-8.

Psalters, Versions in German. The German versions of the Psalter have had comparatively little influence on the development of English Hymnody. The present article accordingly has not been planned on the same scale as that on the English Psalters (p. 918), but is merely intended as a brief list of more or less complete versions in German rhymed verse. No versions in blank verse or in rhythmical prose have been included, and as a rule no versions are mentioned unless they contain renderings of at least 50 Psalms. No attempt has been made to include versious written before 1520, or later versions which have nover been printed; and only those works are enumerated regarding which it has been pos-sible to obtain definite information. The titles are given as shortly as possible. The references in square brackets are to the libraries where copies of the various works indexed are at present (1890) to be found. These are principally the British Museum (referred to as B. M.); the Royal Libraries at Berlin and Munich; the University Library at Göttingen; the Town Libraries at Hamburg, Leipzig, and Augsburg; and the library of Count von Stolberg at Wernigerode.

The versions may be classed as follows:--

I. Versions in Germany, not including Roman Cutholic Versions.

1517-1560.

1. During this period many versions of single Psalms were included in the hymnbooks of the Lutheran Church, e.g. 12 in Klag's G. B., 1529, and 19 in Babst's G. B., 1545, while a still greater proportion are found in the Zwickau G. B., 1528, and the Rostock G. B., 1531. But no complete version was adopted for church use unong the Lutherans. Versions of select Psalms were made by M. Luther, J. Jonas, J. Agricola, E. Alber, E. Hegonwalt, L. Spengler, H. Sachs, P. Speratus, J. Graumann, J. Spangenberg, J. Freder, A. Knöpken, J. Böschenstein, V. Triller, and many others. The complete versions were :-

Der gants Psatter. Leipzig, 1842 [Berlin]. By Johann Claus, of Ausbach in Bavaria. In rhymed couplets, but not intended for singing.

2. Her gantz Pualter Bands in grange wegse gestelt. Number, 1642 [H. M. and Wernigerode]. By Hane Gamersfelder, of Burghausen, near Schwelnfurt, Ravaria. A number are recasts of versions by L. Oeler, H. Sachs, and others.

3. Der Psaller, in newe Gesangsweise und künstlicke Reimen gebracht. Frankfurt-am-Main, 1853 [R. M. and Berties]. By Burkard Waltis, completed willo he was paster at Abterode in Heres. It soon came into general favour, though never adopted for church use as [APPENDIX I.]

a whole. Including double renderings it contained in all 155 versions. Of these at least 37 passed into the bymn-books of the 15th cent, and some kept their place till late in the 17th. None have been tr. into English.

2. In the Reformed Church a more prominent place was given to Psalm versions than in the Lutheran, as the following details will show:-

will show:—
In the Constanz New grangetickle of 1638-40, out of 150 pieces 47 were Paalm-versions; in the Strassburg Eurokemasse of 1524-26 out of 30 there were 23; while the Strassburg Paalmen of 1530 contained Paalme only. In the Strassburg Paalmen of 1537 bymns were again added, while in pt. il., Strassburg, 1532, entitled Paalter of as seried attle Paalmen Davids (Massea. The copy is incomplete, with only Ps. 1-113) versions of all the Faalms were included, many being taken from J. Aberlin and J. Dacheer (see below). Both parts, as united in 1539, contained 186 Paalme-versions and 90 hymns. In the succeeding eds. of 1545-60 the number of Faalm-versions was greatly reduced. During this period deached Paalma were versified by T. and A. Blaurer, W. Mensel, W. Dachstein, M. Greitter, L. Oeler, and others, Besides the Strassburg Paalter of 1538 another complete version appeared as:—

Besides the Strasburg Franter of 10.5 another complete version appeared as:

4. Der gantz Psatter Davids . . . . . . . . . Kircheübung, Angeburg, 1538 [Manich]. This is mainly by Jacobs Dacheer, sometime pastor in Augsburg. The versions are poor, and few of them passed into the hymn-books save of Strassburg and Augsburg.

3. Among the minor sects the only Psalmversifiers whose productions passed into the hymn-books of the Evangelical church were J. Aberlin (see below) and A. Reissner. The complete versions were :-

5. Der gante Pratter . . . durch vil berömpter für -- ukndiger Dichler un Fosten. 1537 (Zurich?) [B. M.] Edited by Josephin Aberlin, of Garmenschwiler in Williamberg, who supplied renderings of Psalms not previously versified by others. A number of his versions are in No. 6 below, but few are found elsewhere, save in the Strassburg hymn-books.

Among the Esthusiasts a complete version appeared as:-

 Der new gesang paulter. 1538 (Ulm?) [Berlin].
 This is based on the Constant G. B., 1536, takes 42 versions from Dachect, and Gs from Abenlin, and includes 13 by Signand Salminger, of Augsburg. Edited by Salminger or jointly with Aberlin.

ši. 1561-1617.

During this period a considerable number of detached Psalm-versions appeared; with at least 20 complete versions, one of which, that by Lobwasser, long dominated in the Reformed Church. In the Lutherun Church versions of all the Psalms, collected from various sources, principally from Johann Magdoburg (see below), were included as part of the Kirche-Gesang, pub. at Frankfurt-amof the Kirche-Georg, pub. at Frankrut-an-Main in 1569. Versions of individual Psalms were made by N. Herman, C. Fuger, B. Ring-waldt, N. Selnecker, L. Holmbold, C. Schnee-gass, J. Fischart, D. Wolder, W. Ammonius, J. Mühlmann, and others. In the Bohemian Brethron's Kirchengeseng of 1566 a number of Psalm parising by I. Islacker, P. Harbutt C. Psalm-versions by J. Jelecky, P. Herbett, C. Sirutechko and M. Polycarp were included (600 p. 156, ii.).

The more important complete versions of

this period were:—

Der Pralter Davids gesangemeise, in Dendiche Reissen verfassel. Frankfurt-am-Main, 1666 [Ramburg]. By Johann Magdeburg, diacoms of the St. Katherine's church at Hamburg. Of these versions 68 were included in the Frankfurt Kirchi-Cesing of 1669, and 20 in the Frankfurt Pralmen und Reisinge, 1603.

H. Der Pralter dest Königlichen Tropheten Dendick, in deutsche regnan verstendiglich und deutlich gebrucht. Loipnig, 1513 [Mamburg]. By Ambrosius Lohwasser (p. 668, El.). Lohwasser was of the Lintheran and not of the Referench Church. He not only wrote to the tunes of the French Psalter, including them in four-part harmony, but literally fr. the Mazut-Beza versions. He had written his version in 1665 and shown it to Duke Albrecht of Prussia, but from various reasons it was not then printed, and the Duke's death in 1568 still further then printed, and the Duke's death in 1668 still further delayed its appearance. Employed at first only for private edification this version gradually came into universal use in the Reformed Church, e.g. in Basel, 1606; Shesse Cassel, 1608; Sh. Gall, 1619; Pern, 1620; Zhrich, 1641, &c. This dominant position it retained till the appearance of Jorisaen's version in 1798, and it was in recent times still used in some parts of Switzer-land. It was as warmly opposed as it was warmly welcomed, and was stigmatized by the Lutherans as Calvinistic, as mere rhymer's work, as obscuring the Evangelical spirit of the Paslms, &c., and thus Becker's version of 1602 was published in opposition. To the ed. Evangerical spirit of the Fraums, atc., and thus Becker's version of 1602 was published in opposition. To the ed. of Lobwasser pub. at Herborn in 1593, and in most later eds. there was added an appendix of Ethicke Praisses und geneticities Lieier. Of the melodies many passed into use among the Lutheraus, and also a few of the Dealmangeries. The only are few that Evaluate in the into use among the Lutheraus, and also a few of the Psalra-versions. The only one fr. into English is that of Pa. exxxiv. (see p. 888, H.).

9. Der Pratter Davids Genangeseit, auff die in Lutherischen Kirchen pewöhnliche Melolegen negerichtet. Lelpzig, 1003 (Bertin). By Cornolina Becker (p. 121, 4). This was written as in a genuine Lutherau spirit and to Lutherau tunes, in order to counteract the inflamment of Lubursaarie variaton. It soom obtsined noor spirit and to Inducerati varies, in order to conjectment the influence of Lobwasser's version. It soon obtained popularity, and was set to four-part muste by Seth Calvisius (Leipzig, 1605, &c.), and by Heinrich Schiltz (Freiberg in Saxony, 1828). The complete Psatter was adopted as part of the Weissenfels G. B., 1714, and a large proportion in the Dresden G. B., 1616. A few versions, such as those of Ps. xxiii., cxxi., are still in use in Garmane, and the Sixt of Obserbar was still in use in as those of Ps. XVIII., CXVIII., CXXII., ILE SHII B. 1005 III. Germany, and the first of these has passed into English (p. 132, 1.). 10. Himlische Cantorey, Das ist, Der Pratter Davids, 10. Himlische Cantorey, Das ist, Der Pratter Davids, Georgeosise, and general behavior by Faller and deliver, and dem Feutschen fixt und Version D. Luther's übergesetzt. Hamburg. 1604 [Hamburg. By Franciscus Algornann, a lawyer, and in 1598 Landiscal in the Duchy of Brunswick. Completed in 159s, and thereafter set to music in four parts by the Hamburg organists Jacob and Jerome Pratorius, David Scheidemann and Joachim Decker. Only a few of these versions came into German use. The 2nd ed., Heinrichstade, 1610 [Berlin], was entitled Cithera Davidica.

Other versions of this period were ;---

11. Die Psalmen Davids in Teutische getangreymen. Heblelberg, 1672 [B. M. and Berlin]. By Paul Schede or Melissus, afterwards chief librarian at Heidelberg, where he d. in 1892. It is a version of I's, i.-l. in the Marot-Beza metres.
12. Der Psalter des heiligen Königes und Propheten

12. Der Frauer des heutgen kantges und Projekten Baudie: in kurte einfeltige beutliche Reimen verfasset. Magdeburg, 1574 [Calle]. By Georgius Henninges, preacher at St. Georgius Curch in Hannover, who d. 1589. 13. Praillerium. Dat ist. Die ainkundort un fünfsig Praimes des kailiges Propheten Dovilts. Augsburg. 151; [Dentin] be Gemenhus Studerwichen verselnen.

vi. 1755–1816.

During this period the tendency was to write moral hymns rather than to attempt Psalm-versions. Among the Lutherans the only Paslm-version that need be noted, besides those by Cramer and Lehmus (see below), is 8. G. Bürde's Ps. exxvi. (see p. 194, i.). Íπ the Reformed Church there now appeared a tendency to set aside the version of Lobwasser. The version substituted for Lobwasser in the Alt-Dessau G. B., 1766, is mainly from J. A. Cramer, but partly supplied by the editor, Simon Ludwig Eberhard de Marées (since 1760 court preacher and superintendent of the Reformed Church at Dessau, d. 1820), 11 of whose renderings are repeated in the Anhalt-Dessus G. B., 1830. Later on the version by Jorissen (see below) came into favour. The principal versions of this period are:— not originally intended for church use. A considerable number passed into the hymn-books of the period, e.g. the Alt-Dessau G. B., 1765, Lüneburg, 1767, Schleswig-Holstein, 1780, &c. A few are found in recent collections, e.g. in the Schaffhausen G. B. of 1841.

72. Neue Bereinung der Psalmen, bestimmt für die reformirten tleutschen Gemeinen ein Groffenhadig und Amsterdam. Wessel, 1798 [Wernigerode]. By Matthias Jorissen, in 1792 preacher to the German congregation at Jorissen, in 1792 preacher to the German congregation at The Hague, d. 1823. This was written to replace Lob-wasser's version, did so in the Rhins Land as early as 1800, forms part of the Elberfeld Reformed G. B., 1833, and is the basis of the versions in the Schaffhauen G. B., 1841. A number are included in Knapp's Ev. L. S., in Dr. Schaff's Deutsches G. B., 1860 and 1874, and others.

II. Versions in the German Reformed Church in Switzerland.

As a rule a considerable proportion of Pselm versions are found in the Hymn books used in early times in the German Swiss Reformed Church, e.g., in the Constanz G. B. of 1536-40, the St. Gall of circa 1533, and the Psalmen und geistliche Gesänge, Zürich, 1570; while in the collection of Conrad Wolffhart (pastor of St. Leonhard's church at Basel), printed at Zürich in 1559, versions of all the Psalms are included, principally taken from Burkard Waldis (see No. 3 above). The only complete version which attained anything like general use was that of Lobwasser (see No. 8 above), which continued in almost universal use up to 1775, and was still used in the country parishes of the Canton of Basel, and in the Canton of Appenzell, even after 1830. In the Zürich G. B. of 1787, a number of Psalm versions were included, principally by Salomon Wolff, pastor at Wangen, near Zürich (d. 1810), while the Bern G. B. of 1775 consisted principalty of Psalm versions by Stanfer (see below). Among the recent hymn books that of Zürich, 1853, contains hardly any Psalm versions, and that of Basel, 1854, none whatever; while the Bern of 1858 has 71 (principally from Stepfer and Spreng), the Schaffhausen of 1811 has 74 (principally from Stapfer, Spreng and Jerissen), and the Aargan of 1844 has 42 (partly by Abraham Emmanuel Fröhlich, sometime paster at Mönthal near Brugg, d. 1865). The versions produced in the Swiss Reformed Church were mostly attempts to supersede Lobwesser, but the only two which did so to any extent were those of Stapfer and Spreng. They jnclude-

III. Roman Catholic Versions.

An account of German Paalters would be incomplete without some mention of the Roman Catholic versions. Very little information is however available regarding these, and, excepting those by Ulemberg, they do not seem to possess much intrinsic value or to have exercised any great influence on the development of German Roman Catholic Hymnody. In the ordinary services of the Church the Pasiter continued to be used in the Latin Vulgate version. The German Roman Catholic hymn-books, from the earliest (Michael Vehe's New Gesambüchlein, Leipzig, 1537) onwards, as a rule contained a certain proportion of Psalm-versions, but no complete rhymed German version of the Psalma appears to have been authorised for use in any diocese in Germany. The only complete, or approximately complete, rhyming versions made by private individuals, that it has been possible to trace, are the following :

121. Der gante Paaler, havide, nach der gemeinen allen Kirckischen Latinischen Edition auf verst und Reinweite gar treutich vertendlich und geschicklich gestellet. Cologne, 1574 [Augsburg]. By Rutger Edingius. A few of these passed into the early R. C. hymnbooks.

The above article, though doubtless imperfect, contains an approximately complete list of versions of the Psalter in German rhymed verse, and is much fuller than anything which has yet appeared in Germany. For kind help in its compilation thanks are especially due to in its compilation thanks are especially due to Professor Dr. Oscar von Gebbardt, Berlin; Dr. Eduard Jacobs, Wernigerode; Dr. Laubmann, director of the Royal Library at Munich; Dr. J. Franke, Göttingen; Dr. Dobel of the Town Library, Augstung; Pastor Br. Krafft, Elberfield: Pastor Carl Bertheau, D.D., Hamburg; Seminarichter Wilhelm Bode, Lüneburg; and M. Felix Bovet, Grandchamps, Neuclatel.

Among the non-thyming versions may be mentioned those by Moses Mendellasohn (Berlin, 1783); F. T. von Schönfeld (Vienna and Leipzig, 1788); J. V. F. Zobel (Augsburg, 1790); J. R. Schliner (Bern, 1812); M. Lindemann (Ramberg, 1812); G. F. Hillimer (Breslau; 1817); F. W. Goldwitzer (Sulschah) 1827; J. B. Köng (Augsburg, 1830–31); Ferdinand Sterneder (Line, 1859); Withelm Pisth (Hamburg, 1866); Gustav Bickell (Internet Medical); willo most of the recent German commentaries on the Paulons contain a version according to the parallelisms of the Hebrew. to the parallelisms of the Hebrew.

to the parallelisms of the Hebraw.

We may add that some collections of hymns have appeared under titles which conveyed the erroneous impression that they consisted of Psalm versions, e.g., the Psalmodia Evangetica (Wolfenbittel, 1827) of Albert Litders (Göttingen]; the Hertzens Psalter (Breslau, 1662) of David von Schweintz (B. M.); the Greiffenbergische Psalter und Harfenbut (Altenstettin, 1873–75) of Johann Muller (Bist, and Antig, Society at Stettin); and the Davidischer Harfenspiel (Nitraberg, 1762) of N. E. Zobel (Royal Library, Hannover).

After this article had been finally arranged the interesting work of Dr. O. Wetzstein optified Die religiöse Lyrik der Deutschen im 19 Jahrhundert (Neustrelitz, 1891) came to hand. There at pp. 310, 311 is a long note on recent German versions of the Psalms. Those not noted above are the versions by Hermann Brüssew, photo-grapher in Danzig (Psalmen Davids in Liedern, 1884); by Wilhelm Preger (Psalmbüchlein, Rothenburg on the Tauber, 1886; 2nd ed. Gütersloh, 1888, as Stimmen aus dem Heiligthum) ; and Professor Dr. Watterich (Die Peulmen metrisch übersetet, Baden-Haden, 1890). [J. M.]

Taylor, Bayard, the well-known American author, was b. at Kennett Square, Chester Co., Penn., Jan. 11, 1825, and d. at Berlin, whilst U.S. Ministor to Germany, Dec. 19, 1878. His association with hymnody is very slight, consisting only of a few pieces from his Poet's Journal, &c. These include, "Thou sendest sun, Thou sendest rain"; "God, to Whom we look up blindly," in Horder's Treasury of Amer. Sac. Song, 1900; and "Not so in haste, my heart," in The Pilgrim Hyl., Boston, 1904.

The literal translation of versa 16 is "The Virgin's womb has thou not despised; thus mankind is loosed through the Grace." The copy quoted is Editio xix. anno 1770, pp. 251-256.

3. Read on from p. 1139. ii. immediately before 5 viii. Musical Settings, as follows:-In Appendix B to Mr. Walter de Gray

Birch's volume edited for the Hampshire Record Society in 1889, An Anoient MS. of the 8th or 9th Century formerly belonging to St. Mary's Abbey or Nunnaminster, Winchester, a remarkable text of the Te Deum was printed for the first time, though apparently without the editor's fully perceiving its importance. It is contained in a small Ms. of 7 leaves, now numbered Harl. 7653 in the British Museum, but also bearing the press-mark Add. 5004, and once bound with Add. 5002. It is in a bold Irish hand, apparently of the 8th century (see Brit. Mus. Catalogue of Latin MSS. with facsimiles, p. 61). These leaves contain a certain number of prayers and Litanies and a hymn on fol. 7, headed Oratio, beginning "In pace Christi dormiam | Ut nullum malum uideam—in which Enos, Helias, and Saint Patrick are invoked. The Te Deum runs as follows (fol. 5 B):-

In nomine dei summi. Pater immensae maiestatis per uenerandum filium tuum uerum unigenitum te deprecamur at amoris ardor augeatur in nobis. Sanctum deprecamment amoris ardor augustur in nobis. Sanctum quoque paracietum spiritum orames adiuaare nos. (1) Te dominum con-[fol. 6]-flemmen. Te deum laudamus. (2) Ts asternum putrem cumist terra ueneratur. (3) Albi omnes augoli tibl caell et terras et uniuerase potestates. (4) Tibl cherubin et seraphin incessabili uoce proclamant. (5) canctus sanctus sanctus dominus deus sabaoth. (5) peni sunt cael et terra gioris tua esanna in excelsia. (7) Te gioriosus apostolorum chorus (8) te prophetarum laudabils numerus. (2) Te martyrum sancta conflictus exorçitus. (10) Te per orbem terrarum sancta conflictus ecclesia. (11) patrem lumenase maisetatis. (12) generundam tuum uerum uniganitum fillum. (13) Sanctum quoque paracietum spiritum. (14) Tu rex giorius christe. (15) Tu patri sempitarum es filios [Fol. 6 8] (16) To al liberandum numdum sancipsil hominem non aborruisti uirginis uterum. (17) Tu deutica morte aculeo aperuisti regna caelorum. (18, 19) Tu ad deteram sedis m gioria patris eccaesum turus. (20) Tu ad dextram sedis in gloria patris ecce, uenturus. (20) Te ergo quesumus nobis tuis famulis subneni quos pre-The ergo questions notice that manufacture in a description acquire redemist (21) seterman fac cum sanctia in gloriam intrate;—Beus altissima dans misericordiae qui solus citre peccator fiduciam in tila hora propter multas miserationes tras etc."

It may be noticed that the writer once at least elsewhere seems to write as a woman, as on fol. 7. "Suscipe orationem famulæ tuæ," though here "peccatori" is used.

This text of the Te Deum stands alone in ending at verse 21, which we have seen was concluded to be the original close of the hymn, at any rate in Latin. It agrees with the other Irish texts in the most appropriate and probably correct reading "Tu ad liberandum mundum suscepisti hominem." But it has mondum susceptst hommem." But it has also the following extremely peculiar readings:—in verse (I) the inversion; (3) "caeliet terrae;" (6) the addition "osanna in excelsis"; (9) the omission of "landat"; (16) "aborruisti" for "horrnisti"; (17) the whole verse showing a conflation of two readings, "devicta morte" and "devicto mortis acuico," and esp. "apernisti" without "credentibus"; possibly the correct reading. (18, 19) This reading men residue, but he the reactions. This reading may possibly be the more ancient. It is at any rate more intelligible than "index crederis esse vonturus"; (21) " in gloriam in-trare" may be either the original reading or it may be an attempt to soften "munerari," taken in a Polagian sense.

In any case this text confirms the Irish text in an important particular.

If the legend which connected St. Patrick with Lerins has any foundation (see J. H. Todd's St. Patrick, Apostle of Ireland, p. 836, Dublin, 1964), it might reasonably account for a very primitive text of the To Deum being preserved in Ireland. [JOHN SARUM]

Thomas of Celano. It is somewhat remerkable that neither the date of the birth nor of the death of this writer, whose name is so intimately associated with the Dies Irae, is on record. He was a native of Celano, a small town near the lake Fucino, in the farther Abruzzo, and hence his name of Thomas of Celano. Several of the inhabitants of this town were driven therefrom by Frederick II. in 1223, and Thomas with the rest. He found his way to Assisi, and became a monk there during the lifetime of St. Francis. The Franciscan Order was established in 1208, Thomas was therefore one of the early students at Assisi. He was subsequently "custos of the convents of Worms, Mentz, and Cologne, and afterwards sole custoe of the Rhine districts." The last named appointment he held till 1230, when he returned to Assisi. As intimated above the date of his death is not on record. It is sometimes given as 1255. His claim to the authorship of the Dies Iras is discussed at p. 296, ii. Thomas also wrote a Life of St. Francis. [J. J.]

Viva! viva! Gesu, Che per mio bene. [Passiontide.] The author of this Italian hymn is unknown. In the Index to the People's Hyl. 1867, it is attributed to "S. Alfonso" (Lignori), but we know of no authority for the ascription. The hymn is found in the Raccolta di Orazioni e Pie Opere colle Indulgenze, and is one of the "Aspirazioni Divote" therein. It is usually regarded as being of the 18th cent, but we have failed to trace it beyond this work. The original of the stanzas in C. U., as in H. A. & M. and others, read :-

- " Viva! viva! Gesn, Che per mio bene Tutto il Sangue versò dalle Sue Vene.
- "Il Sangue di Gesu fu la mia Vita; Benedetza la Sua Bontà infinita.
- Questo Sangua in eterno sio Iodato, Che dall' Inferno il Mondo ha riscattato.
- " D'Abele Il Sangue gridava venedetta, Quel di Gesu per noi perdono aspetta
- " Se di tal Sangue asperso è il nostro cuore, Fugge il ministro del Divin furore.
- Se di Gesu si esalta il Divin Sangue, Tripudia Il Ciel, trema l'abisso e langue,
- " Diciamo dunque insiem con energia

Al Sangue di Gesu gloria si dia. Faber in his note appended to his tr. of this hymn says:-

" To all the faithful who say or sing the above Hymn, Pius vii. [1800-1823] grains an indulgence of 100 days; applicable also to the souls in Purgatory."

This hymn has been tr. as:

1. Hail, Jesus! Hail! Who for my sake. By F. W. Faber, in his Kys. for St. Wilfrid's, 1849, p. 5; ha sessed and Mary, &c., 1949; and his Kyssas, 1852. This is given in several collections, including the People's Hyd. 1887, and others.

2. Glory be to Jesus. By E. Caswall, pub. in the Hys. for the Use of the Hirmingham (realory, 1857, in 3 st. of 4 l., and again in his Hyssas and Poops, 1873, as a "Hymn to the Precious Blood." With the omission of st. iv. and v. it was included in H. A. & M., 1861, and since then it has been repeated in many collections either in its full or in an abbreviated form. collections either in its full or in an abbroviated form.

A tr. of the Raccolta di Orazioni, was pub. as The Raccolta: Collection of Indulgenced Prayers. Translated by Ambrose St. John, 1880. In it Caswall's tr. as above was em-

Young, Edward Mallet, M.A., s. of Sir G. Young, Bart., was b. Jan. 24, 1839, and educated at Eton and Trinity College, Cambridge; B.A. first class Classical Honours, 1863, and Fellow of Trinity College, 1865-78. He become Assistant Master at Harrow School in 1865, and Head Master of Sherborne School in 1878. He entered Holy Orders in 1869, and bodied in full at p. 119, and therein it is said was Select Preacher at Cambridge in 1876-79, that the compiler of the Roccolta was a and Hon. Canon in Salisbury Cathedral 1891. In 1888 he edited Hys. for the Use of Sherborne School, an excellent collection for its special purpose, and to it he contributed :-

Lander Domini, N. Y., 1884, begins with st. ii. of Bp.

Woodford's &v.

6. Lord, in thankful love adoring. One stargs only from the "Adoro te," with an original doxology in the Savoy Hymnary, n. p.

Admis superns Spiritus, p. $2, ii. This hymn we find is based upon the "Veni sancte Spiritus Et," (p. 1212, il.), and is found in the Farts Bras., ed. 1222, but not in that of 1736. Concerning the srs. it must be noted that No. 3, attributed to H. Bonar, is really a sr. by him of the Feni superne Spiritus, Pater hesigns.

Adapant tenebrae primas, p. 83, ii. We have found this hymn in a Hosgraphe Hymnessium of the 11th cent. In the Brit. Mus. (Add. 30851, f. 165).

Acterna Christi munera, Et, p. 24, i. The original of the transcript by Junius has been found in the Bodleian. It dates circa 690. (Junius, 25 f. 116.) It is also in a 9th cent. ms. at St. Gall, No. 454; and later Man, classwhere, Acterna coall gloria, p. 25, ii. From E. Caswall's tr. (No. 2) the cento in the Hys. for the Fear, 1867, begins with st. iil. "The star that heralds in the morn ;" and that in Hys. & Songe of Praise, N.Y., 1874, with st. il., "Jesus, be near us when we wake."

Asterne Rex altinging, p. 25, ii. We have found this hymn in several mas, in addition to those named at p. 27, i. The most important of these are the Bern mas., No. 303, ceres 900; and No. 455 of the 10th cent. The Monarabic text, in 12 cts., is in a 10th cent. ms. in the Brit. Mus. (Add. 39846, f. 735).

Asterni Festi gaudia, p. 27, ii. Since this article was in type L. Gaudier has pub, a 2nd ed, of his work on Adam of St. Victor (1881) in which he corrects his first impression that this hymn was by Adam. He omits the text, says it has been falsely attributed to Adam, and is unworthy of him. The earliest ws. which he cites is a Gradial of St. Victor witten before 1230, in which it begins, "Interni festi gaudia." (Bibl. Nat., Paris, Lat. 1462.)

Agnoscat omne seculium, p. 20, i. We have found this in a 9th cent. Hs. In the Brit. Mus. (Add. 2412a f. 125). It is also in a 10th cent Ms. at 8t. Gall, No. 196; and in others of a later date. In F. Leu's ed. of Fortunatus's Opera Postica, 1881, p. 38d, it is given among the pieces falsely serribed to Fortunatus.

Agrus Dai, p. 80, i. This is found in a 18. of the 11th cent, in the Bibl. Nat. Paris, (Lat. 8433); and in another circa 1200, in the Bodleim (Laud Misc. 4, 122). From the German tr. "O Laum Gottes unschuldig," p. 31, i. additional tr. into English include:—
1. O Lamb of God, unspotted, Whose life, By M. W. Stryker (from Knapp), in his Christian Chercis, 185.
2. O Lamb of God, Who bleeding. By T. C. Porter, noted on p. 31, i., is in the Candate Domino, 1859.

Agricola, Johannes, p. 31, i. He matriculated at Wittenberg in 1518 as, "Jamnes Sneder of Eigleben, n.A., of Leipzig," Another tr. of his hymn, "Lei un dir," is "To Thee I send my cry, Lord Jesus," in the Moravian II, Bk., 1886,

Ah! why should bitter tears be shed. [Leath and Durial.] This bymn in the American Unitarian Hys, of the Spirit, 1364, is attributed to "G. S. Barielgh."

Ab, wretched souls who strive in valn, p. 33, i. The following are from this hymn, (1) "My soul no more shall strive in vain"; and (2) "May [Now] I resolve with all was best "..." with all my beart.

Ainalie, Ann Harla, was the author of Letters from the bead to the living, and Boral Letters, the 2nd ed. of which was pub. at Edinburgh, 1812.

and ith cents, additional to those named on p. 227, i. Christe, qui lux es et dies, p. 227, i. This hymn occupies in Dutch hymnody a position which is probably unique, being the only lestance of a hymn pareling without interruption from the arcicat office books of the church into general use among the lieformed. At the reformation in Holland, when hymna were fortiden and only metrical pasims allowed to be sung, a translation of the hymn in very archaic Dutch, "Ghriste der du bist dagh en lieght" was appended to the authorized metrical pasiter of Peter Datheen (1866). When a new and revised pasiter was adopted in 1773, a recast in a freer translation by H. Ghlisen, "O groots Christian, cenvig licht," occupied the same place at the end of the pasiter. From this source it has been adopted into all the hymnals compiled for the use of Dutch speaking mission copgregations in South Africa, where it is so universally popular that a Wesleyan missionary, Mr. Shaw, in his "Memoriats of South Africa," calls it the "leautiful evening hymn of the natives." (J. A. H.)

Christe sanotorum decus, p. 289, ii. The ascription to Hrabanus le very doubtful, and it is not in E. L. Dümmler's ed. of his Carmina, 1984. (See p. 1313, ii.)

Gentiy, my Savieur, let me down, p. 403, 1. This hymn was first printed in K. Sidney's Life of Nowland 1811, 1844, p. 404, and to it he adds the following note:—"This hymn was written by Mr. Hill for the comfort of a dying member of his Surrey Chapel congregation, who received it a few hours before death. I found it amongst his papers, in his own handwriting, and I believe it never has been printed. It is called 'The Prayer of the Dying Christian.'" The hymn is in 8 st. of $1.

Garman Hymnody, pp. 413-418. The monthly German Hymnological magazine (Bhitter für Hymnologica), ed. by Dr. A. F. W. Fischer and Dr. J. Linke (see p. 377, ii.), and which began in 1839, unfortunately ceased to exist with the number for Dec., 1839. Otherwise since 1859 not many important works have appeared which deal directly with German Hymnology. In the new ed. of Karl Goedeks's Grandrias cur Genchichte der deutschen Dichtong, vol. ii., 1884, and iii., 1897, there is a considerable amount of bitlingraphic information regarding German hymn-writers from the Reformation to about 1750; and Dr. Albert Ritschl's Geschichte des Picticana, vol. i., Rom. 1880, il. 1884, ill. 1885, contains many references to hymn-writers and hymns of the Pletistic school.

The only two purely hymnological works which need be noted are (1) Wilhelm Bode's Quellennachweis über die Lieder der hannoverschen und des limehurglachen die Lieder des hannoerreihen und des linehurgischen Gesangbuches, samt den dazu gehörigen Singweisen, Handover, 1881. This is a meet careful and elaborate monograph on the Hannover G. B., 1740; and the Lüneburg G. B., 1767; and has been of great use to the present writer. (2) Dr. O. Wetzstein's Religiüse Lyrik der Heutschen im 19 Jahrhandert, Krustrelitz, 1891. This is very well done, embraces both Boman Catholic and Protestant authors, and the information is imnight up to date. We may add that in 1886 Dr. Flesher pub. the Brat nart of a Stomlement to his Kierchenlichen. the first part of a Supplement to his Archenical-lease in the final part has not yet appeared. The references throughout this Dictionary to German illustrates where certain works are to be found are not meant to be exhaustive, but to supplement those given by Bode.

Glory to the King of glory! Bp. E. H. Bickersteth, [Astention.] Written at Penmanmawr, M. Wales, 1883, and pub. in his From Near to Fear, 1883, p. 93, in 6 st. of 4 double lines. It was included in the 1890 cd. of the Hy. Comp.

Glyde, Elizabeth. In the s. MS. (T. No. 7) there is the following note on this writer and her hymn, "Be with me in the valley" (Death Anticipated):—" Written by Miss Glyde some ten years before it was published. Miss Glyde was the daughter of Mr. Glyde, of Excter, deacen of an Independent chapel there." Suepp. in the 1880 cd. of his Sunge of G. & G., No. 974, gives 1840 as the date of the hymn.

Go, bury the sorrow. [Resignation.] We find this hymn in P. Bilss's Gospel Bongs, Cinciunati, 1814, p. 98, in 3 st. of 4 double lines. The words are given anonymously, whilst the music is signed "P. P. B.," i.e. P. Bliss. In J. D. Sankoy's Stored Songs & Solor this is also the case. There is no authority known to us for attributing the words to Bliss.

The appeared in the English Moravian II. Bla., 1742, in 6 st. of 4 l., the sixth stauza beginning "That heart our Saviour loves." In the 1801 et this stauza was omitted, and the stauza "His blood thy cause will plead," by John Hartloy, was substituted. This form of the text is retained in the 1886 ed. of the same book. In Soden's Universal M. Bla., 1885, No. 255, st. i.—vi. are from the 1742 ed., as above, and st. vii. is the first stauza of the hymn repeated, with slight alterations.

Go to dark Gethsemane, p. 436, ii. Nearly all the alterations in the revised version of this hymn as printed on p. 430 were given in the Leads sel., 1822, No. 894, which shows that the revision was originally made for that Sel. and not for the Christian Padwist.

Geadby, F. W., p. 431, ii. A companion hymn, for Charck Restoration, to his hymn, No. 3, on p. 431, ii., is given in Allou's Comp. Pasipuist Hyl., 1886, as "Our fathers' Friend and God." Original dated 1878.

God bless our native land, [National Hymn.] Several hymns opening with this first line are in C. U. The basis of each is the English National Anthem, "God save the Queen." The most popular form is that which had its origin in America, about 1831, the English form, dating 1838, not being in very general use. The following details and texts are of some interest to hymnologists.

I. The American History and Texts.

i. The Rev. C. T. Brooks, an Unitarian minister, during the time that he was studying at the Divinity School, Cambridge, U.S. A., 1932 to 1835, wrote the following, and to be a tr. from the German :—

" Cod bless our native land! Form may she over stand.
Through storm and night!
When the wild tempests rave,
Ruler of wind and waye.
Fother Eternal, save Us by Thy might!

Lo! our hearts' prayers srize Into the upper skies, Begions of light! He Who lasts heard each sigh, Watches each weeping eye; He is forever nigh, Venger of Right."

il. The next form of this hymn is by the Rev. J. S. Dwight (p. 1660, 21.), and reads :-

" God bless our native land! Firm may she ever stand Through storm and night! When the wild tempests rave, Ruler of wind and wave, Do Thou our country save By Thy great might!

" For her our prayers shall rise To God above the skies: To the down the sails:
On Him we wall.
Thou Who art ever nigh,
Guarding with watchful eye,
To Thee diout we evy,
God save the State!"

The italies in the above indicate the alterations made in C. T. Brooks's text by J. S. Dwight. Putnam says (Songs of the Liberal Antila, 1874, p. 370) that this text "was first introduced, it is supposed, into one of Lowell Mason's singing books." The American authorities ili. The litril form appeared in Hedge and Huntington's Unitarian Hys. for the Church of Christ, Roston, 1853, No. 483. In this at i. and at ii, li. 1-3 are from the second form above. The remaining lines read—

" Thou Who hast heard each sigh, Watching each weeping eye, Be Thou for ever nigh;— God save the State."

ly. The fourth form appeared in the Unitarian Hys. of the Spirit, Boston, 1884, No. 251. In this st. i. is from No. il. as above, st. il. is altered therefrom, and st. iil. is

St. il. " For her our prayers shall be, Our fathers' God, to Thee, On Thee we wait! He her walls Holiness; Her rulers Righteousness; Her officers be l'eace; God save the State!"

St. iii. " Lord of all truth and right. In Whom alone is raight. On Thee we call! Give us prosperity; Give us true liberty; May all the oppressed go free; God save us all!"

v. In addition to the foregoing there are a few variations to be found in some American collections. Practi-cally, however, the above is a resumé of the history of the American hymn.

II. The English History and Texts.

II. The English History and Texts.

1. Under the date of Oct. 17, 1889, William Edward Hickson (d. 1870) then of Fairsest, Wrotham, Kent, wrote to Baniel Sedgwick, claiming that he was the author of "God bless our native land," which he had seen attributed to J. S. Dwight. Sedgwick pointed out that there were two distinct hymns with the same first line, one of which was certainly American in origin, and the other might possibly be by Mr. Hickson. Eventually this proved to be the case. Hickson's account of his hymn is it was written by me in 1836 as a new national authem," and "appeared in the "Second Clars Tune Rook, No. 3, of the Singing Master." The Singing Master was pub. in 1836 (2nd ed. 1837). This hymn is in 4 st. of 8 i. The againg stants reads:—

"God bless our native land!

"God bless our native land! May heaven's protecting hand Still guard our shore! May peace her power extend, Foe be transformed to friend, And Britain's rights depend On war no more."

The full text is in the 1890 Suppl, to the Baptist Pa. & Bys.; the Meth. Free Ch. Hys., 1889; the Cong. Church Bys., 1887, and other collections.

ii. In the Mch. S. S. H. Bk., 1879, No. 569, is an anonymous hymn, which begins:—

"God bless our native land: Her strength and glory stand Ever in Thee."

St. il. is "God smile upon our land," and st. ili.

St. ii. is "God smile upon our rand," and st. ni. "Through every changing scene."

iii. In the Cong. Church Hyl., 1887, No. 554 opens with the same stanza as No. ii., but st. ii. is "God guard our see-girl lend," and st. iii. "God smile upon our land." This is in Christian Hys., 1845.

The texts in these two bynn-books suggest a common original of futer or more stanzas, but this original, if it exists, we have not seen.

God farbid that I should glory. [Charging in the Cross.] In his Notes to the Scottish Prezb. High. of 1976, Mr. Thin says of this hymn, "Anon. Appended to Cottage Sermons, circa 1808.

God made ine for Himself, to serve Him here. Sir H. W. Haker. [Home Mittlems.] Appeared in the Hys. for Hission Churches, Sc., S.D., No. 47, pub. by the Compilers of H. A. & M., and in the 1899 Suppl. Hys. to H. A. & H.

God moves in a mysterious way, p. 433, i. In the Solisbury H. Rk., 1807, this by an is altered to "God deigns to move in mystery."

God of almighty power. [Ounalpresence.] This hymu appeared in the English Rap. Ps. 6 Hym., in 1859, and in the American Subbath H. Hs. in the same year. This points to an earlier source from which the hymn was taken by the chitors of both collections, but this source we have failed to find.

God of our Fatherland, Bp. E. H. Bickerstett. [Mediand Hymn.] Written in 1883, and pub. in his From Fear to Fear, 1893, p. 231, in 4st. of 41. It was included in the Hy. Comp., 1800. In the Jubilec year of the Queen (1887) it was extendedly sung to the tune companied for the Six Chartes Ellery. composed for it by Sir George Elvey.

God, Who is just and kind. J. Patrick. [Ps. zzv.] Cento from Ps. KXV. in his Ps. of Bavid, 1715.

God, Whe madest earth and heaven, p. 440, i. The H. A. & H. form of this hymn is rendered into Latin by "P." in the Guardian, Oct. J. 1879, as:—Qui cushum at terrars, lucem tenchrosque creasti." See p. 1595, i.

William Ellisabeth Ayton, not Etheridge, daugh, of William Ellis Etheridge, was beat Thorpe Hamlet, Norfolk, July 4, 1811; married in 1849 to Mr. C. Goldwin, and d. at Stoke Bishop in 1889. She pub. Songs for the Weary, 1855; and Songs amidat Datty Life. Her hymn in C. U. is "My Saviour, "mid lifes varied scene" (Lent), written whilet yet a girl, and first printed in the Evangelical May., and then in Songs for the Weary, 1872.

Gothe, J. W. von, p. 441, i. The Exeter Unitarian Hyr. Ps. and Anthons, of 1863 and 1884, contains the several additional hymns from Gothe, the trs. in each case being by the Rev. T. W. Chiquell. Some of the versions are very free, and the distinctively Christian character of the trs. is only very family present in the originals.

[J. M.]

Gone is the hollow, murky night. [Morning.] This, in Martinean's Hyans, &c., 1873, No. 17s, is composed of st. Iv.-vill. of T. Doubleday's tr. of "Asterna coeli gloria" (p. 25, il., Ko. 2), in his Hymnerium Anglicanum, 1844, p. 25. This form of the text was given in the Unitarian Bk. of Hys., Boston, U. S. A., 1848, No. 600, and from themee passed into Martineau's Hys., 1873. 1872

Gotob, Frederick William, M.A., LL.D., was b. at Kettering in 1807, and graduated at Trinity College, Dublin. In 1845 he became one of the tutors of the Baptist College, Bristol, and in 1868 its President. He was one of the Revisers of the Old Testament. He is associated with Hymnody through a few trz. from the German, which are noted in this Dictionary. See Index of Authors and Translators for the same. Dr. Gotch de of Cling Belstel May 1, 1890. d. at Ciliton, Bristol, May 17, 1890.

Greaf Shepherd of our souls! O guida. W. Croswell, [The Good Shepherd.] From his Trems, 1880, p. 221, somewhat altered, into Dale's Krightsh H. Rk., 1874. Croswell's title is "Hymn for the First Sunday after Easter."

Great Shapherd of the sheep, Who all Thy flock dost keep. [The Good Shepherd.] This is given in the Scottish Hymnol, 1884, as from an "American" source.

Greek Rymandy, p. 467, il. In 1, 12 from the top, read "whether he believed in the Resurrection of the body."

Greene, Thomas, of Ware, was for some time a member of the Congregational body in that town. In 1778 a minority of the members, of Arian principles, having obtained the lease of the chapt, the majority second and built themselves the "Old Independent Chapel." Mr. Greene was one of those seconders (Miller's Singers & Songs, 1869, p. 314). His Hys. and Prems on Various Subjects, chicky Sacred, were pub. in 1780 (2nd ed., 1797). From this work the hyran "It is the Lord, enthroned in light" (*kesignation*), is taken. In Bickersteth's Christian Psatmody, 1833, it begins, "It is the Lord, my covenant God." In modern collections it is found in both forms. Another hymn from the same work is "The more my conduct I survey" (*Trusting in Jesus), as in Spurgeon's O. O. H. Bk., 1866.

My harp untuned, and laid aside. J. Newton. [Hoping for a flevious.] Appeared in the Ottoy Hymns. 1779, Bk. ii., No. 52, in 7 st. of 4 l., and headed, "Hoping for a Revival." From it the hymn "While I to it my soul gave way," sometimes "While to its grief my soul gave way," beginning with st. iv., is taken. In the Preface to the Oincy Hymns Newton says: "My grief and disappointment [at the downfall of Cowper's health and mind] were great; I hung my harp upon the willows, and for some time thought myself determined to proceed [with hymn-writing] no farther without him. Yet my mind was afterwards led to resume the service." On comparing this extract with this hymn it seems very probable that this was his first effort after resuming his ometime abandoned work.

Noel, was b. in London, April 10, 1817, and d. at 39 Great Camberland Place, Hyde Park, Dec. 7, 1877. Her first hymn, "Braw nigh unto my soul" (Inducelling), was written when she was 11. During the next three years she wrote about a dozan pieces; from 20 years of age to 40 she wrote nothing; and during the next 20 years the cest of her pieces were written. The first edition of her compositions was pub, as The Name of Jerus and Other Verses for the Nick and Loneiy, in 1861. This was sularged from time to time, and its title subsequently changed by the publishers to The Name of Jerus and Other Poons. The 1876 ed, contains 78 pieces. Miss Noel, in common with Miss Charlotte Elliott, was a great sufferer, and many of these verses were the outcome of her days of pain. They are specially shaped "for the Sick and Lonely" and were written rather for rivate meditation than for public use, although several are suited to the latter purpose. Saviour, breathe an evening blessing, p. 935, ii. Bp. Bickersteth, in the 1890 ed. of his Hy. Comp., has changed the opening line of this hymn to "Pather, breathe an evening blessing." His reason is that having substituted what is practically a dozology for Edmaston's original third stanza, he is justified in substituting "Father" for "Saviour" in the opening line of the byma.

is given in several works including Julian Sharman's Powns of Many, Queen of Scots, 1878, as the composition of the lil-fated Queen. It is said that it was written by her on the fly-leaf of her prayer-book (Horas in laudem, B. M. Virgimis) the night before her execution. This book—or at any rate what is regarded as such—is in the library of Stonyhurst College, Lancashire. It has been examined for the purposes of this Dictionary. The Prayer is not therein, nor is there any evidence of any portion of the book having been torn away. This fact ruless a grave doubt as to lis sutherning which we are unable to settle. The Prayer has been tr. by several persons, including J. Fascett, 1782, J. W. Heucett, 1882, p. 145, &c.

Bickersteth. [Good Priday.] Concerning this "Story of the Croes" Bp. Bicketsteth says in als nots thereon in the 1860 ed. of his Hy. Crosp: "These verses on the Passion of Jesus were written by the Editor (1880) on the same lines as 'The Story of the Cross,' by the late Rev. Edward Monro [p. 1873, i.]. For the dramatic conception the Editor is indebted to Mr. Monro; and the measure and structure are the same as his. But the facts dwelt upon are different, and they reflect a different aspect of the Passion. They have been sung for the last ten years in a constantly increasing number of churches during Holy Week, and especially on Good Friday. The Editor has therefore ventured to include them in this Hymnal."

Adeste fideles, pp. 20, 1, 1 1549, ii. The earliest text yet discovered is in a ms. at Stonyhurst College, entitled Cantus Diversi pro Dominicis et Festis per Annum, written in 1751 by John Francis Wade, a priest who often acted as music transcriber. There the text is as in the Ecening Office of 1760, i.e., sts. 1, 2, 7, 8 of the long form (see The Music of the Church Hymnary . . by William Couon and James Love, Henry Frowde, 1901, pp. 5-8). It has been ascribed to Etienne Jean François Borderies (b. at Montauban 1764, consecrated 1827 as Bishop of Versailles, d. at Versailles Aug. 4, 1832), who edited a Breviary (1828) and a Missal (1832) for his dioceso. The Breviary is said to contain hymns by him, but those marked "B" are really by the Abbé Sebastian Besneult. The "Adeste fideles" is not in the Versailles Brev. of 1828, or in the Versailles Missal of 1832. It is in the Graduel noté à l'usage de Versailles, Versailles, 1835, vol. i., p. 185, with sts. 1, 3, 5, 6 of the long form, appointed for "The Nativity of our Lord, at the Midnight Mass. At the Elevation, if that is the custom." Bp. Borderies was certainly not the author of the English form, and the form of 1835 was already in use at St. Omer in 1822 (see p. 20, ii.). He was ordained to the Curacy of St. Jude's, Mildmay Park, N., in 1865; became Incumbent of Christ Church, Everton, Liverpool, in 1871, but he resigned in 1875 in order to devote himself entirely to parochial mission work. He became General Superintendent of the Church Parochial Mission Society in 1877, and Canon Residentiary of Norwich in 1960. He has published twelve vols. of sermons, together with other works. His hymns in C. U., mainly in Home Mission Hymn Books, include :-

Mission Hymn Books, include:—

1. Bow down Thine ear, in merry hearken. (Penttence.) Canon Atthen's account of the origin of this hymn is:—"Mr. Stephens (g.z.), who for long years assisted me in my mission work, shewed me a us, of a hymn in this metre that he had written, and asked my criticism. I was pleased with the general character of the hymn, but it seemed to me to be spoilt by the absence of rhyms in the first and third lines of each verse... I rewrete it, and hence it bears the initials of both of us. It has proved a most useful hymn in our work."

7. O leave we all for Josma. [Confirmation.] Canon Aithen's history of this hymn is:—"I was pressed by my dear father, the late Rev. Robert Aliken, to come and help him in his well-remembered mission at Et. Paul's, Newport, in 1871. I was reluctant to do so, as I had a very large number of Confirmation candidates at my parish in Everton, Liverpool, and was much interested in them. But there was no escape from his orders, and I had to come to his help. He made me preach when I am sure that the people would have much preferred to hear thin, and I retired to my room that night with so much on my mind in connection with my work at home and the fresh responsibilities of the mission that I found it impossible to sleep. At lash I got up, struck a light, and wrote this hymn for my candidates to sing at the enouing Confirmation. It was soung then, and subsequently printed in my Supplement to the Hymnal Companion used at Christ Ch., Everton."

American Hymnody, pp. 67-61 and pp. 1525-25. Since the publication of this Dic-tionary in 1892, considerable activity has been displayed in the compilation and publication of hymnals both officially and by private firms.

This period has been characterized by great improvement in the materials for praise which have been officially provided by the different denominations. These official books, except in the case of the Prot. Episcopal Church, are not of compulsory use. They have, however, now reached to such a degree of excellence that year by year the market for hymnals of an unofficial character narrows perceptibly. once large and profitable trade of hymnal compiling and publishing is fast passing away. Such books continue to appear, and in improved forms, but it is doubtful if recent issues have been profitable. On the other hand, the de-mend for hymn books of a lighter character, for Sunday Schools and informal services of various kinds, has caused a large output of these books. In respect to Sunday School hymnody, several denominations have published hymnals of a higher tone and of a more intellectual character than heretofore.

In the hymnals for Church use there has been a decided advance, especially in catholicity of spirit, in literary merit, and care in editing. The most marked change has been in the elevated character of the musical setting of the hymns. In this direction the Anglican school has been most influential.

Following the order of the original article on this subject (pp. 57-81), we find that the

It contains 675 hymna (of which 372 are new to the Frot. Epice. H. Booke), a large preportion of which are from the Church of England hymnals. hymnals. It is on the usual Anglican lines in arrangement, and has much in common with Hys. A. & M. before the last revision.

ii. Preshyterions. The Presb. Board of Publication, Phila., has broad the following new and official books:—
(1) The Hymnal Published by Authority of the General Anamolity of the Presbyterion. Church in the United States of America, Phila., 1895. It contains 724 hymns with tunes. Musically and postically it marks a long atvance over previous books by the same body. (2) The Chapel Hymnal, Phila., 1898. It contains 370 hymns with tunes. (3) The School Hymnal, Phila., 1888. These hymnals have had a sale to date of over 500,000, and have been adopted by nearly 3,000 churches. This series has proved most successful in elevating the service of praise in the congregations.

By the Southern branch of the Presb. Church (separated from the Northern since the Civil War) an official symnal was published at Richmond, Va., in 1992, as The New Pachus and Hymna Published by Authority of the Presbyterion Church in the Church Assembly of the Presbyterion Church in the Third States by the Hymna with tunes. These hymns have been selected and edited up more conservative lines than the books bested by proceeding from ald writers.

Northern branch of the Church, and Include a large proportion from old writer ill. Congregationalists. By its adoption of the Presbytestan Hymnal of 1885 (re-issued in 1897 as The Hymnal for Use in Congregational Ohurches) and The Chapel Hymnal, and its publication of Filgrim Songs for Sunday Schools, the Congregational S. S. and Publ. Soo, provided official books covering all services. In 1904 it issued The Pilgrim Hymnal, a book of 647 hymns with times, with "Responsive Readings and other salts to Worthip," and full indices. It especially simed to express "communion with God in His nearness and living Presence," and the new seal for social service—rejecting many standard hymna as no longer adequate. To it distinguished for postical excellence. An unofficial book, The Flymouth Hymnal, N. Y., 1832, edited by Dr. Lymna Abbott, on somewhat similar lines, is also of marked literary accellence and of beautiful outward form. The Pastor's edition of the same is of more than usual merit. III. Congregationalists. By the adoption of the Presty letton of the same is of more than usual marit.

1v. Raptists. The American Baptist Publication
Society issued in 1898 a collection of 856 bymns with Society issued in 1898 a collection of 856 Dynas with tunes, &c., as Sursum Corde; A Book of Prates, Pull., It was edited by E. H. Jahnson, n.n., and E. E. Ayres, who also edited the Baptist Hymnal, 1883. The Sursum Carda is well supplied with indices and biographics notes. The main partion of the book is from the old authors. The now element is well to the front, and of good quality. The addition has been done with care, and the collection.

The new element is well to the front, and of good quality. The adding has been done with care, and the collection is a decided success. The Coronation Hymnal, by A. J. Gordon and A. T. Pierson, N. Y., is an unofficial collection of this body, and is decidedly Evangelload in character.

V. Methodists. The Methodist Hymnal, the "Official Hymnal of the Methodist Episcopal Church and the Methodist Episcopal Church and the Methodist Episcopal Church south," was sphilished in August, 1905. It contains 748 hymna, as against 1,127 of the earlier book, of which mly 463 are reatined. The exclusion of many of C. Wesiey's hymna, and the inclusion of a large number of these most valued by other Christian bodies, make the book approximate to the modern type of American hymnals. Both the hymna and trues mark as advance in culture and comprehensiveness. The indices are full and generally reliable. The African Methodist Episcopal Hymna and Tame Book, of which

Bishop Embry was the principal compiler, was published in 1898. It contains by way of introduction a complete reprint of the article on Methodist Hymnody from this

vi. Universalists. Their Church Harmonies, New and Old, Boston, 1895, edited by C. R. Tenney and M. R. Lewis, is a great advance in the hymnody of this body. It is their first hymnal on modern lines.

vii. Instartan. The Hymnal: Amore Bei, compiled by Mrs. Theo. C. Williams, Boston, 1880, and revised in 1887, was primarily published to meet the need of a small book for use in her busband's church in New York. The texts of its 382 hymns are freely altered. Also, in 1890, the Rev. H. Wilder Foote compiled Hys. for the Church Universal, a collection of 647 hymns with times. It is Chiversal, a collection of 547 hymns with times. It is characterised by refluement and catholicity of taste rather than narrow Unitarian restrictions. The official cullection of the Unitarians is Hys. for Church and Home, with Tanes, published by the Section Unitarian Association, 1895. It was edited by Mary Wilder Tileston, It contains many pages in common with Hys. for the Church Universal. This deponding that has not regained its early pre-eminence in hymnal-making, but in recent years there has been great advance in the extent to which the hymnes of American Unitarious are used in the hymnels of other bodies.

viil. Roman Catholic. Congregational singing viii. Roman Catholic. Congregational singing of vernacular hymne in thurches and schools has greatly extended. The Roman Hymnat, published N.Y., 1883, with the Imprimatur of the Archblahop, has been repeatedly printed. Steps have been taken in the preparation of a hymnal which, it is expected, will be authorised for use throughout the United States.

ix. Lutherant, The General Council has contented itself with a new musical setting of its Church Book, with some additional hymns, but Issued in 1896 a revised Sunday School Book of excellent quality. In 1899 the General Synod published the Book of Workley, with Hymns and Tunes, Philla. This was a revision of the earlier book bearing the some name, on motern lines, and with less attention to German hymns than in the Church

x. Referenced Dutch. There has been no recent pubx. Reformed Datch. I here has been no recent pul-lication of an official courch hymnal by this body; but The Church Hymnary, by Edwin A. Bedell, N.Y., 1893, revised edition, 1800, a collection of 934 bymna with tunes, has been authorised for use by the denomination; and a hymnal for Sunday Schools has been prepared by a

al. German Reformed. In 1990, The Hymnal of the Reformed Church in the United States, prepared by a negorneal Crurca in the United Mades, prepared by a Committee appointed by the General Synod, was issued at Cleveland, Ohio. It contains 795 hyuns and times. As a collection, it is not equal in literary merit to most modern hymnals, and scant justice is done to German writers. Of better quality is The Nenday School Hymnal, prepared by direction of the General Synod, and published at 19th to 1980. at Philip in 1899.

at Phila, in 1899.

xii. Various. In 1892 appeared the last of the long series of Dr. C. S. Robinson's hymnals, The New Landes Bonsins, N.Y., The Century Co. It is tunofficial, and possesses the same literary characteristics as Dr. Robinson's carlier books. In Exectivit: Hymns with Tunes for Christics Worship, N.Y., Century Co., 1891; Gioria Boo: A Coll. of Hymns and Tunes for Public Worship, de., N.Y., Funk and Wagnalls Co., 1901; Dr. C. C. Converse's Standard Hymnal for General Use, 1898, and Our New Hymnal, 1896, by It. Phillips, by the same publishers; and College Hymnal, 1896, by M. W. Stryker, are undenominational collections of varying merit. The In Excelsic has attracted most attention, and is a are undenominational collections of varying meria. The In Excelsic has attracted most attention, and in a good and full collection. The University Hymn Book for use in the Chapel of Harmand University. Cambridge, 195, is a small collection designed for a special purpose. The texts are edited with special care, and the nutes are excellent. Amongst other leaves there is no the Associate of the Propose of the Chapel of th axosilant. Amongst other issues there are the Associa-tion Hymn Book for use in Nestings for Men, N.Y., 1904 (Y.M.C.A.); Christian Science Hymnol, Boston, 1805, revised edition 1898; and the German Evangation Synod's Hymnol of the Evangation Church, St. Louis, 1899. The last named is the first collection in English of Akir denocination. Has, and is specially noteworthy in the fulness of its representation of translations from the German which are representation of transmissions room and the selection of the old Chorales. The Advent Christian Hymnal: A Collection of Hymna and Tunes for Public Worship, the standards of the denomination of the denomina A Collection of Hymnus and Tunes for Public Worship, Boston, 1904, selected from the stendpolat of the denomination. Of its 1,079 hymnus over 400 are given without anihor's mains, but a large proportion of these are annotated in this Dictionary. The Swedenborgians issued their Magnifect in 1983. Of undenominational collections perhaps the latest is the Century Co.'s Hymns of Worship and Service, 1995, which is in the nature of an abridged.

In Excisis. In Sunday School hymnody new editions of the well-known books of Dr. Hutchins and Dr. Tucker in Exosisis. In Sanday School hymnody new editions of the well-known books of Dr. Hutchins and Dr. Tucker for Prot. Eplac. Schools have appeared. Besides those already mentioned under various denominations, the following deserve notice for good quality: Physical Bioliowing deserve notice for good quality: Physical Bioliowing deserve hymnol, N.Y., 1892; Prof. Frati's Songe of Worship for the Sunday School, N.Y., 1897; Ives and Woodman's The Hymnol for Schools, N.Y., 1898; In Excelvia for School and Chapel, N.Y., The Century Co., 1800; The Endervor Hymnol, Boston, 1801; and Sankey's Young People's Societies, During recent years the Christian Endeavor and other similar Young People's Societies, During recent years the hymnols of the Moody and Sankey type have plainly least the freshness of their appeal to the public, and while still continuing to appear many recent scamples show signs of a reversion, greater or less, to the standard type of hymnody. This is especially marked in Church Hysms and Gayet Songs, published by the Biglow and Main Co., 1898, which has proved popular, and in the yet more recent vortheted Hymnol. On the other hand, the renewed activity in Evangelistic work has called forth a number of books certainly not above the earlier level. Of these, Songs of Praise, No. 1, is an official publication of the Presbyterian General Assembly's Committee on Evangelistic Work.

As regards the propress of hymnody and the

As regards the progress of hymnody and the period under review, the marked improvement in Church hymnals has been already referred to. To some extent there has been a corresponding increase in the intelligent interest of the public; but in no American Church have the possibilities of Congregational Song been attained. It is felt by some that the hymnody itself requires still further adjustment to present-day beliefs and feelings. It is felt by all that there is need of growth in the true spirit of Congregational praise. One mark of progress is found in the fact that Hymnology has become a recognised branch of instruction in several American Schools of Theology. [L. F. B.]

Amid life's wild commotion, p. 46, ii. This tr. is hy Emma Jane Whately. It is in Abp. Whately's Lectures on Prayer, 1860, p. 192, Amis, Lewis R., born in 1856, and died in 1904, is given in the American Methodist Hyl., 1905, as the author of "Jehovah God, Who dwelt of old" (Dedication of a Place of Worship). (J. J.)

Amor Patris et Filii, verl splendor auxilii. [Whitsuntide.] This is found in a se. of c. 1200 from Thame Abbey, Oxon, now in the B. M. (Burney 357, f. 156), in a 118. of the 12th cent. at Toulouse (162, f. 175; see Catalogue), and others. Printed in Mone, No. 180, Kehrein, No. 137, &c. Tr. as:-

3. Bright angels we have heard on high. In R. R. Chope's Cornis, 1875, No. 30, marked as "Cornish, ak. by R. R. C."

We are unable to say which is the original [J, M.] form of the text.

Angelus ad Virginem Subintrans in conclave. [Aurunciation of the B. V. M.]
This is the sequence which Chaucer (Milleres Tale, 1, 30: "And Angelus ad Virginem be song") represents Nicholas, the clerk of Oxford, as singing in the evening to the accompaniment of his "gay sautrye." It is in the Dublin Troper of c. 1860 (Cambridge University, Add. 710, f. 127), in an early 14th cent. MS. in the B. M. (Arandel 248, f. 154), in a late 15th cent. MS at Emmanuel, Cambridge (84, f. 43b, written in France for use in Scotland), and others. Printed in Misset-Weats, No. 278 and Dreves, viii., No. 51. Tr. as:

Gebriel to Mary want, by J. O'Connor, in the Aracdel Hys., 1902, No. 19, with the Latin text as No. 18. [J. M.]

Anima Christi sanctifica me, pp. 70, L; 1881, L. This is found as an "Oratic" in a Horae written in England c. 1370, and now in the B. M. (Harl. 1260, f. 158) thus :-

J. "O avima Christi sanctifica me, Corpus Christi salva me, Sangula Christi inebria me, Aqua lateris Christi lava me, Passio Christi conforta me.

O bone Jesu exaudi me, Et ve permittas me separari a ie, Ab hoste maligno defeude me, In hora mortis voca me, Et pone me junta te, Ut cum angelis tuis landem te In eaccula sacculorum. Amen,"

It has an introductory note stating that Pope John XXII.

(d. 1334) had granted an indulgence to all who devously (d. 1334) and granted an indulgence to all who devounly said this prayer at Mass between the Elevation and the third "Agrum Dei." Practically the same text is found in a Horac written in Spain c. 1440, and now in the R M. (Add. 2882, f. 419b); in two Horac is the Bodleian (Bodl. 850, f. 5b, of the end of the 14th cent.; Bodl. 113, f. 12b, in an early 15th cent. hand); in a Horac at the Fixwilliam, Cambridge (49, p. 103), written in England c. 1470; except that these all begin "Anima Christi."

The text now in universal use is that in the Ortulus Anime, printed at Strassburg in 1500 by Johann Grüninger, f. clxixò.

This adds after l. 6: "Intra vulnera tua absconde me," and gives il. 10, 11 thus:—
"Et jube me venire ad te Ut com sanctis tois laudem te."

It is the form of 1500 which has been ascribed to St. Ignatius Loyols, who was only b. in 1491. It is often referred to, but never printed in full, in the eds. of his Exercitia Spiritualia printed at Rome, 1548, and Vienna, 1563. In the Cocleste Palmetum of Nakatenus, Cologne, 1669, p. 282, the text of 1590 is given as Brevis et pia Oratic S. P. Ignatio, Fundatori Sociatatia Teru clim familiario i medern ada Societatis Jesu olim familiaris"; in modern eds. (e.g. Malines, 1859, p. 212) as "Brevis et pia oratio S. Ignatii."

oratio S. Ignatii."

The Haures de Lengres, Paris, Vostre, 1502, f. 82b, adds after 1.6: "Sador vultoe Christi virincelasimi sana me"; but this "additional intercession" is not in the text ascribed to Loyols, and is certainly not by him. Various Horae (e.g., No. 57, p. 237, in the Fixwilliam at Cambridge, written in England p. 1460; No. 288, f. 1656, at Tylnity, Cambridge, written in France o. 1440) and after 1.6: "Mors Christi vivifica me." Other forms, varying from all the above and varying from each other, are in a Horae at the Fixwilliam (51, p. 352), written in France c. 1440; in a Horae at Scincy Sussex, Cambridge (60, f. 120), written in England c. 1450; and in a Paulter, &c., at Emmanuel, Cambridge (219, f. 124), written in England c. 1460; and in a Paulter, &c., at Emmanuel, Cambridge (219, f. 124), written in England in the 15th cent. His hymn, "Thou speakest, Lord, our hearts incline" (The Beatistades), was written in 1888 and printed for use in children's services at Salford; then revised by the anthor for the S. S. Hymnary, 1905, Thomas, John, M.A., was b. at Marsteg, Glamorgan-shire, in 1869; educated for the Baptist ministry at Pontypool College and Bangor University College; has been Pastor at Huddersheld, &c., and is now (1906) minister of the Myttle Street Hap. Chapel, Liverpool, Mr. Thomas took his M.A. degree at the London Univer-sity in honours. His connection with hyamody is slight, His hymn "Dear Master, in Thy way" (Adult Baptism) was originally printed in a Baptist newspaper, and then included in The Hap, Charch Hyt., 1900. His published works are mainly on theological subjects.

Tymms, T. V., p. 1190, i. He was President and Professor of Theology at Rawdon Coll., Leeds, 1891–1904, President of the Baptist Union 1896, and received n.o., from St. Andrews in 1897. He now (1996) resides at Benhill-on-Sea. His fine hymn, "How oft an absent I all we mourn" (Neuroest to Christ), was written 1892, and pub. in Good Words, 1892, p. 853, in 11 sts., entitled "Light from Emmans," In the S. S. Hymnary, 1808, No. 465, it is considerably altered, and begins "Let avaning twilight turn to dawn"; at 1, being a combination of 6, 7, and ii, of 4, 5.

5. We the children of the day. Children of Light. Of these, Nos. 1, 2 were written in 1904; Nos. 3, 4, 5 in 1905. (J. M.)

Bartlett, Franklin Weston, p.p., b. at Towards, Pen., Aug. 30, 1843; B.A., Union stephanon of Prudentius, in 576 lines. It is University, N.Y., 1865; Hon. M.A., Williams Coll., Mass.; D.D., Union University; Rector of various churches in Pen. and N. England, and for some time Prof. of Hebrew in Williams Coll. His hymns appeared mainly in the weekly press, including "Thy glorious name of Love" (Sunday): "O God Triune, we praise and bless" (H. Trintiy); "Sun of my life, Thy rays divine" (The Christian's Light). His hynn for H. Communion, "Saviour, Who didst come to give," in The Hymnal of the Prot. Ecology (Burch 1802). The Hymnal of the Prot. Episco. Church, 1892, was first printed in The Living Church, 1885, and passed from thence into several collections. It is a great drawback to Dr. Bartlett's hymns that they have not been gathered together in book form, Βασιλεῦ οὐράνιε, Παράκλητε. [Whitesucide.] This is an idiomelic sticheron (a collection of irregular verses) from the Pentecostarion (the Greek Office for Pentecost), Venice, 1898, p. 188. It was tr. by J. Brownlie and published in his Hymns of the Greek Chusch, 1900, p. 24, in 4 st. of 4 l., as "O King enthroned on high." With the omission of st. ii., it was included in Church Hys., 1908, and The English Hyl., 1906.

Bathed in unfallen sunlight. H. Bonar. [Heaven.] Appeared in the Quarterly Journal of Prophecy, Oct. 1859, then in his Hys. of Faith and Hope, 2nd Series, 1861, p. 25, and again in Hymns by Horatins Bonar, 1904, p. 75, in 6 st. of 7 l., entitled "The New Jernsalem" and dated 1859. In the Baptist Hyl., 1893, sts. iv.-vi., slightly altered, are given as "Fresh from the throne of glory." [J. M.]

Baynes, R. H., p. 119, i. Further information enables us to correct the error in the date of his death at Oxford, on p. 118, I. It took place on March 27, 1895.

Be not swift to take offence. [Patience.] Appeared in G. F. Root's The Coronet, 1865, p. 50, and later collections, including the S. S. Hymnary, 1905, where it is given as Anon., circa 1860.

Be Thou, O God, exalted high. cento in the Bap. Hyl., Phila., 1902, from the N. Version, Ps. Ivii. (p. 800, ii.).

Be Thou, O Rock of Ages, nigh. This is composed of sts. iv., v. of C. Wesley's "Eternal Beam of Light Divine," p. 256, i.

Be Thou with us every day. This, in Horder's Worship Song, 1905, and others, is Pt. ii. of T. B. Pollock's "Jesu, from Thy throne on high," p. 678, L 34,

Beata nobis gaudis, p. 190, i. ditional fre. are:-

1. Hall! joyful day, with blussing fraught, in the Office H. Bk., 1969, No. 757, and 1905, No. 221.

2. Oh joy! because the circling year, in H. A. & M., 1904, No. 179. This is J. Ellerton's tr. "Joy! because the circling year," rewritten, to a plaintong setting, by the Compliens, Ste. iii., iv. seem to be meant as a paraphrase of "Jam Christma astra." y. 576, i.

3. Rejelce! the year upon its way, by R. E. Roberts, in The English Hyl., 1906, No. 151.

Beate martyr, prospers. Prudentius. [St. Vincent.] This is No. V. in the Perifound in two fine mes. of Prudentius in the B. M., both written in Germany, one of the early 10th cent. (Add. 34248, f. 27b), the other of the 11th (Add. 16894, f. 36); and in many other early was, of it, e.g. St. Gall, Nos. 184, 186, of the 10th cent.; also in the various printed eds. of his Opera. In the Mazarabio Brev. of 1502 and the Ambrosian Brev. of 1539 there are centos for " St. Vincent' but it was easily adapted for any martyr, and so the Paris Brev. of 1474 gives it for "St. Agnes," a 14th cent. Ms. in the Bodleian (Ashmole, 1523) for "St. Paneras," &c. Tr. as :-

Blest Martyr, let thy trimmph-day, by A. Riley, in The English Hyl., 1906, appointed for the Common of Martyrs, and taken from II. 1-12, 545-545; which cent, adding II. 552-580, is in Daniel, I., No. 114. [J. M.]

Behold us, Lord, before Thee met, p. 183, ii. 2. As the third stanza of this hymn has been re-written a second time by the Com-we give Canon Bright's original text from the Monthly Packet, Nov. 1867 :-

"From Thee was our baptismal grace,
"From Thee was our baptismal grace,
The hely seed by Thee was sown;
In this full sanlight of Thy face,
We make the three great vows our own,
And ask in Thine appointed way,
Couprm us in Thy grace to-day." [J. J.]

Beim frühen Morgenlicht, p. 128, ii. The version in the Yattendon Hyl., 1899, No. 67 begins "When morning gilds the skies," as in Caswall's version; but after I. 4, "When evening shadows fall," it is quite different, Marked as "tr. by R. B." Repeated in G. B. Woodward's Songe of Syon, 1904.

Believe not those who say. Anne Bronti. [The Christian Life.] This hymn appeared in Wathering Heights, &c., 1850, as a poem in 10 sts, with the title "The Narrow Way." In its adapted form as a hymn it consists of sts. i., v., viii.—x. of the original slightly altered. It is also in most editions of the Brontes' works, the latest being Agnes Grey, Poems by Anne Bronte (Nelson), 1905. [J. J.]

Bell, C. D., p. 133, i. He d. suddenly at the National Club, London, Nov. 11, 1898.

Bell, Maurice Frederick, w.A., s. of G. W. Bell, barrister at law, was b. in London, Sept. 3, 1862. He graduated from Hertford Coll., Oxford (B.A. 1884, M.A. 1887), was ordained D. 1885, P. 1886, and has been since 1904 Vicar of St. Mark, Regent's Park, London. He contributed to The English Hyl., 1906, four trs. (60, 68, 624, 634), and "O dearest Lord, by all adored "(Close of Festival), 1906. [J. M.]

Bellerby, Edward Johnson, MUR.DOC., was b. at Pickering, Yorkshire, March 28, 1858, but resided during most of his early years at Selby. Trained at York Minster by Dr. Mouk, he became organist at Margate Parish Church in 1881; and of Holy Trinity, Margate, in 1884. Although mainly devoted to music, Dr. Bellerby is deeply interested in Foreign Missions, and especially in connection with the C.M.S. His hymu,

C.M. C. His 11414, Shine on me, O Lard Jesus [Hisrions], was written circ. 1894, and first pub, in the C. M. S. Giasser, Feb., 1896, p. 31, with a Scripture reference to each line; and later in the Church Hisz, H. H., 1899; and Hys. of Consecration and Fatth, 1992. Dr. Bellerby has written several additional hymns yet to be published. [J. J.]

Beloved, let us love, p. 162, i. 44. Through the kindness of the Rev. J. T. Wigner, editor of the Bap. Ps. & Hys., 1858, and the Supp. thereto, 1880 (p. 1880, H.), we learn that this hymn, with others, was sent him in Ms, and was included in the 1880 Supp. It is not in Dr. Bonar's Communion Hys., 1881. Mr. H. N. Bonar, in his Hys. by Horatius Bonar, do., 1904, says in his Note, "The only piece printed in this selection which has not already appeared in an authorised collection of my father's hymns is 'Beloved, let us love : love is of God.'...but there is no doubt of its authorship, as I possess the original manuscript." [J. J.]

Bend every knee at Jesus' Name, 1552, ii. This hymn in the Casterbury Hymnal, 1863, and others, is a recast of J. Montgomery's "Bow every knee at Jesus' Name," from his Original Hymne, 1853, No. 75. pilers of H. A. & M. for their new ed., 1904, It appeared in Leifchild's Original Hymna, 1843,

No. 30, as "Bend every knee," &c. In the Montgomery was. it is dated "The Mount, 20 August, 1839," with the additional note, "Sent to Leifchild, 1840." [J. J.] [J. J.]

Benedicite, pp. 124, 1. ; 1555, i. Mr. W. H. Daubney, in his Three Additions to Daniel, 1906, reviews this hymn from a liturgical point of view, and in an interesting manner.

Benedict XIV., Pope (Prospero Lambertini) was b. March 31, 1675, at Bologos. On Dec. 9, 1726, while Bp. of Ancona, he was created Cardinal by Pope Benedict XIII., and in 1731 returned to Bologna as Archbishop. He was elected Pope in 1740, and d. at Rome May 2, 1758. He was an able, learned, and pious man, an excellent administrator and an authority on liturgical and hymnological matters. In vol. vi., Rome, 1751, of his Opera he published the full text of the Offices for the Maternity and the Purity of the B. V. M. Presumably, therefore, the hymns of these Offices are by him. See further notes on (1) Coelo Redemptor, (2) O stella Jacob, (3) Praeclara custos, and (4) Te mater.

Benson, Arthur Christopher, M.A., S. of Archbishop Benson, was b. at Wellington College, April 24, 1862, and educated at Eton and King's Coll., Camb., B.A. (first class Classical Tripos) 1884. From 1885 to 1903 Assistant Master at Eton, and now (1905) Fellow of Magdalene College, Cambridge. His hymns include the following:-

Benson, E. W., p. 188, ii. Abp. Benson suddenly at Hawarden, Oct. 11, 1896.

Benson, Louis FitzGerald, D.D., was b. at Philadelphia, Penn., July 22, 1855, and educated at the University of Penn. He was admitted to the Bar in 1877, and practised until 1884. After a course of theological studies he was ordained by the Presbytery of Philadelphia North, in 1888. His pastorate of the Church of the Redeemer, Germantown, Phila., extended from his ordination in 1888 to 1894, when he resigned and devoted himself to literary and Church work at Philadelphia. He edited the series of Hymnals authorised for use by the General Assembly of the Presby-terian Church in the U.S.A., as follows:—

(1) The Hymnal, Phile., 1895; (2) The Chapel Hymnal, 1898; and (3) The School Hymnal, 1899.

Dr. Benson's hymnological writings are somewhat extensive. They include:-

(1) Hymns and Verses (original and trs.), 1897; (2) The Best Church Hymns, 1898; (3) The Best Hymns, 1898; (4) Studies of Fundiar Hymns, 1903, &c.

Of his original hymns the following have come into American C. U.:--

I. In The Hymnal, 1895 :-

1. O Christ, Who didst our tasks fulfil. For Schools and Colleges. Written in 1894.
2. O risen Christ, Who from Thy throne, For Installation of a Paster. Written in 1894.

II. In The School Hymnal, 1899:-

3. A glory lit the wintry sky. Loneliness of Jenus, Written in 1897.

History in 1897.

Happy town of Salem. Heaven.

Now the wintry days are o'er. Earler.

O sing a suit of fethlehem. Early Life of Jesus.

O one the door to the Saviour. Invitation.

Unt of the skies, like angel eyes. Luklaby.

Out of the skies, like angel eyes. Lullaby,
 Who will teach me how to pray? Prayer.

III, Carey Bonner's Sunday School Hymnary, 1905 :---

The sun is on the land and sea. Horning.
 Our wilful hearts have gone astray. Penitence.
 When I awake from slumber. Horning.

Of the above, Nos. 1-4, 10-12 are from Hys. and Verses, 1897. In the above collection by C. Bonner, Nos. 1, 4, and 6 are also found. Of Dr. Benson's tre. from the Latin one only is in C. U. See "Plaudite coeli, Rideat aether."

As a hymn writer Dr. Benson is not widely known, mainly through the recent publication of his verse. His hymns deserve attention, and will, no doubt, gain the public ear in due time; whilst his hymnological researches and publications are thorough and praiseworthy. [J. J.]

11. Lord, we uplift our voice in supplication. [Even12. Pub., with muste by Dr. C. H. Lioyd, by Novello
4. Co., 1900.

Bigg, Charles, D.D., s. of Thomas Bigg, was b. in 1840 at Higher Broughton, Manchester, and was educated at Manchester Grammar School and at Corpus Christi Coll., Oxford (Scholar 1859; n.a. 1862). He became a Senior Student of Christ Church 1862, tutor 1863, M.A. 1864, D.D. 1876; returning to Christ Church in 1901 as Canon and Regius Prof. of Eccles. History. He was Bampton Lecturer in 1886, and is the author of various theological works. He contributed two tre. (2, 49) to The Eng. Hyl., 1906. In his Wayside Sketches, 1906, there are charming papers on Prudentius, Paulinus of Nola, and Thomas a Kempis. [J. M.]

Bis termss, p. 144, i. The Vatican ws. which contains this hymn is Vat. 82 of the 11th cent. The hymn is early, but is not by St. Ambrose. See Dreves's Aurelius Ambrosius, 1893, pp. 20, 42.

Bishop, Henry Rowley, was b. at London, Nov. 18, 1786, and d. at London, April 30, 1855. See a full notice in the Dict. of Nat. Biog., v., 91. From 1840 he was occasional and from 1843 to 1848 sole conductor of the Antient Concerts. Of his Twelve Coroles . . as sung at the Concerts of Ancient Music, for which (with Words expressly written to them) they were adapted and arranged by Sir Henry R. Bishop, 1844 (B. M. copy is H. 878), some are fairly literal tre. from the German, others have no connection with their nominal originals. Three were noted in this Dictionary, but their source not having been traced in 1892, we now subjoin them :---

1. Beheld, how glerious is you sky, p. 137, ii. This is from "Wie herlich ist die neue Welt" in C. H. Graun's gratorio Der Tod Jesu, 1756 (B. M. copy, H. 1805, catalogued as 1766), the words being by Karl Wilhelm Ramler, b. Feb. 25, 1725, at Colberg, in Pomeranis; 1748, Professor of Literature at the Cadet School in Berlin; d. at Berlin, April 11, 1788.

2. God is our Rafuga in distress, Our Shield, p. 336, i. 8. O let us praise the Lord, With hearts of true devotion, p. 385, ii., Mo. 4. The Winchester H. 186., 1857, alters 5t. i., the original il. 3, 4 being:—

"Whose spirit roams abroad, To calm life's troubled ocean,"

Another fairly close version is, "Wake, O wake! a voice is crying," from "Wachet auf," p. 805, ii. [J, M.]

Blackie, J. S., p. 144, i. Dr. Guthrie was succeeded as editor of the Sunday Magazine by Dr. W. G. Blaikie, and not by Dr. J. S. Blackie. The latter resigned his professorship in 1882, and died March 2, 1895.

Blake, William, p. 1558, ii. Another poem from his Songs of Innocence is "To Mercy, Pity, Peace and Love." In 1789 ed., p. 17, it is entitled "The Divine Image." The English Hyd., 1906, No. 506, ranks it among General Hymns. It is certainly difficult to call it a hymn at all, or to assign it to any special purpose. [J. M.]

Blessed are they whose hearts are pure. Appeared in Dean Alford's Poetical Works, 1845, vol. ii., p. 151, and later as stated on p. 147, il, Blessed be the Fountain of blood. [Good Friday.] In I. D. Sankey's Sacred Songs and Solos: the Church Mission Hymnal, The Mission Hymnal of the C. P. A. Society, this hymn is given without date or authorship.

Blessed Francis, holy father. [St. Francis of Assisi.] This anonymous bymn is in A. E. Tozer's Catholic Hys., 1887 and 1898, as from "Franciscan Manual." It is in the Little Manual of the Third Order of St. Francis, 1899, p. 192; but not in the eds. of 1855, 1869, or 1883, [J. M.]

Bleased Jesus, high in glory. [Even-ing.] Appeared in the Scottish Hyl., 1884; and the Scotch Church Hymnary, 1898, and in each саве вз Апон, Blessed Jesus, life is fair. [Prayer to Jesus.] In S. D. Major's Bk. of Praise, 1869, no. 253, marked as by Mrs. Eliza A. Godwin, 1868. Repeated in many later books, sometimes altered to "Holy Father! life is fair."

Blessing, honour, thanks, and praise, p. 148, i. In the 1903 ed. of Church Hye. the text is C. Wesley's original (with "These" for "Them" in st. iii., l. 5), and as arranged in the Hymnary, 1872.

Blest angels, while we silent lie. This in M. W. Stryker's College Hymnal, 1897, is a cento from Bp. Ken's "Midnight Hymn," p. 680, i.

Blest are the moments, doubly bleat, No. 263 in The English Hymnal, 1906, is taken from W. Wordsworth's "Labourer's Noon-day Hymn," which appeared in his Farrow Revisited, 1838, p. 178, and P. Works, 1837, as "Up to the throne of God is borne' see p. 2994, ii, Blest Spirits of light! Oh! ye have not forsaken. [Guardian Angels.] This is in the Appx. to the N.Y. ed. of E. Caswall's Lyra Catholica, 1851, p. 428, as Auon. In Hys. for the Year, 1867, and others, it begins "Blest spirits of light! Ye who have not forsaken."

Bliss, P., p. 150, i. Two works have been brought to our notice, since the issue of our first edition of this Dictionary, which concern this author, viz. :-

1. Memoirs of Philip P. Bliss. Edited by D. W. Whittle. Contributions by Rev. E. P. Goodwin, Ira D. Sankey, and Goo. F. Hoot. Introduction by D. L. Moody. New York, do.: A. S. Barnet & Co., 1871.

2. My Life and Sacred Songt. By Ira D. Sankey. With an Introduction by Theodore L. Cuyler, D. O. London: Hodder & Stoughton, and Horgan & Scott, 1905.

These works have a special interest for those who use I. D. Sankey's Sacred Songe & Solos, and all of P. Bliss's publications. To Mr. Sankey's My Life, &c., we direct special attention for P. Bliss's hymns:-

"Do you see the Hebrew captive kneeling?" p. 294, "Down life's dark vale we wander." p. 295, "Ho: my compades, see the signal." p. 105, "Tis the promise of God full salvation to give." [J. J.]

Blume, Clemens, was b. Jan. 31, 1862, at Billerbeck in Westphalia. After passing through the Jesuit Gymnasium at Feldkirch in Austria he entered the Society of Jesus. From 1880 onwards he pursued his classical, philosophical, and theological studies at various Jesuit seminaries in Holland and England, and was then for three years one of the masters in the Gymnasium at Feldkirch. After a period spent in the study of philology at the University of Prague, he, in 1896, joined Father Dreves (see p. 1699, i.) in the editorship of the Analecta Hymnica; and in the interests of that publication has searched many libraries in Germany and Austria-Hungary, and from 1899 to 1901 made extended journeys in Italy and France. Since 1903 he has resided at Munich, engaged in completing the Analosta, and in preparing a History of Latin Hymnody to be founded [J. M.]

Bode, Alice Mary, dr. of J. E. Bode (p. 161, ii.), was b. at Westwell, Oxon, during the time her father was Rector of that parish. Her hymn, "Once pledged by the Cross," (Confirmation), was written in 1901 at Notting Hill, London, and first pub. in the 1904 ed. of H. A. & M. Aiming at simplicity and directness, the writer has accomplished her purpose in a pleasing manner. [J. J.] in a pleasing manner, Bohemian Hymnody, p. 155. Strictly speaking, the running title of this article should have been Bohemian Brethren's Hymnody, as there was no intention of in-cluding the Mediaval Latin hymns of Bohemia therein. These hymns have been collected by Dreves, especially in vol. i., entitled Contiones Bohemicz (800 p. 661, 1.).

Holizmanze (860 p. 661, 1.).

The element hymns of the Bohemian Brethren are annetated by R. Wolkan in his Dan Deutsche Kirchenlied der Bohemischen Brüder im XVI. Jahrhunderte, Prag. 1881, pp. 105-179 containing the German first lines, with the Bohemian sources, and details of the extent to which they passed into non-Bohemian German collections; and the same writer has an axticle, dealing also with the Bohemian hymns, in the Herzog-Hanck Realtengshopidia, x., 1991, pp. 428-431. There is a short Kinglish notice to the Boravian Almanack for 1905, 118-129. [J. M.]

Boissiers (Dept. of the Gard), June 7, Algiers, and d. at Nimes, Dec. 29, 1875; was the author of "Seigneurl du sein de la poussière," and not his brother Adrien, as stated on p. 1891, t. The hymn was written Jan. 1, 1837 (Ms. from F. L. C. Boissier's son). H. Downton's tr. was first printed in the Sunday Mag., 1870, p. 353. [J. M.]

Bonar, H., pp. 161, L.: 1564, L. The Rev. H. N. Bonar, Dr. Bonar's son, pub. in 1904, Hys. by Horatius Bonar, Selected and Arranged by his Son H. N. Bonar, With a brief History of some of the Hymns, &c. (London: H. Frowde). From this work we must correct the date of his Song of the New Creation to 1872. have also enriched our pages by additional and expanded notes on several of Dr. Bonar's most widely used hymns. In his biographical notes, Mr. Bonar refers to Dr. Bonar's work as editor Finchley in 1900.

of the Quarterly Journal of Prophecy, begun in 1848, to which he contributed a hymn for each number. We find that the number of hymns contributed thereto is 101, including the following already noted in the Dictionary:

- Angel volces sweetly singing, p. 68, ii. Jan., 1851.
   Accord, Beloved, to the joy, p. 1854, i. 4, July, 1860.
- Beyond the smiling, &c., p. 140, i. April, 1849, Brethren, arise, let us go hence, p. 1554, ii. April,
- 5. Deep down beneath the, &c., p. 161, il, $5. April,
- h. April, 1856.
   Far down the ages now, p. 384, i. April, 1856.
   Finish Thy work, &c., p. 162, i. 89. April, 1857.
   For the Bread, and for, &c., p. 163, i. 30. Jan., 187L.
- 1871.

  9. I weep, but do not yield, p. 559, ii. Oct., 1854.

  10. Lie down, frail body, here, p. 674, L. July, 1856.

  11. No blood, no altar now, p. 1554, i. 6. April, 1858.

  12. No shadows youder, p. 1554, i. 6. April, 1858.

  13. Sounds the trumpet, &c., p. 162, i. 78. April, 1866.

  14. Surely, you heaven, &c., p. 162, i. 78. Oct., 1860.

  15. The tomb is empty, &c., p. 161, ii. 40. Oct., 1858.

  16. Thes in the loving bloom, &c., p. 1189, i. Oct., 1858.

  17. These are the crowns, &c., p. 1555, i. 17. Oct., 1853.

  18. Till the day dawn, p. 1554, i. 23. Oct., 1252.

With Dr. Bonar's poefical productions great difficulty has been encountered by the historian and annotator because of his absolute indifference to dates and details. It was enough for him that he had written, and that the Church of Christ approved and gladly used what, out of the fulness of his heart, he had given her. [J. J.]

These are worthy of notice.

Brainard, Mary G., p. 1854, E. Con-cerning the hymn which bears this signature in I. D. Sankey's Sacred Songs and Solos, "I know not what awaits me," Mr. Sankey says, in his My Life and Sacred Songs, 1906, p. 102:

"When Mr. Blies (the composer of the tune) lost his life in the terrible railroad wheek at Ashtabula, Ohlo (Dec. 30, 1876), his trunk reached Chicago safely, as it had gone before by another train. In his trunk was discovered this hymn. Mr. Rits had corranged the words of the poem to some extent, and had composed the tope. Sentence by scalence the words are full of pathetic interest in connexion with the author's [Bliss's] tragic death so soon afterwards."

The original hymn we have failed to trace. The form in the Sac Songs and Solos is that found, together with the tane, in Mr. Bliss's Bramley, Henry Ramsden, M.A., was b. Breviaries, p. 170, ii. To this may be added :-

- (1) The Momarabic Braviary. Regarding the ancient was of this rite, see Hymnarium, p. 1652, ii. The Add. 30846 is an 11th cent. Breviary written in Spain, but not of the Mocarabic rits. The printed ed. of 1602 is in the B. M. (C. 17, c. 3). The Hymnarium, added in 1776, is not a complication, but is taken direct from a Hymnarium of the 11th cent., then at Toledo, but now at Madrid.
- (3) The Roman. Of late years, especially in France-ravision has been talked of, and the hope has been ex-pressed that permission would be given to use the hymns in their ancient forms. Change has come in the line of least resistance, by addition. A pretty little ed., printed by M. H. Cill & Sons at Dublin in 1904, contains the following Offices with hymns which are not found in the Tournay ed. of 1878 (p. 178, il.)

1. In the body of the Breviary.

Seven Founders of the Servite Order. Feb. 11.
 SS. Cyril and Methodius. July 7.

- Brett, Jesse, s. of Charles Brett of Danbury, Essex, was b. at Prittiewell, Essex, in 1858, and educated at Hatfield Hall, Durham, L.Th. 1888, D. 1888, P. 1889. After holding curacies in Derbyshire and Essex, he became in B. M.) is being ed. for the Henry Stadabaw Society by the Rev. W. H. Frers and Mr. Langton E. G. Brown of Hereford; i. 1804; if, in preparation. In the reprint the rabrics are given in full, the rest of the Offices in outline where they agree with the Offices in the Screen Brew. of 1831, and in full where they differ. Marum Brev. of 1831, and in full where they differ. The four Christmas hymus indexed at p. 178, ii., viz., "Corde," "Corporta," "Bree," and "Juste," are centred from the "Da puer," p. 276, i. The two for SS. Philip and James, viz., "Quos alloquentes angeli," at Leads, and "Apostoli tane mystico" at Maties (not indexed at p. 178, ii.) are parts of "Hymnum canames gloriae," p. 654, ii. The "Veni Creator. . Memento" (also found in a Horae at Emmanuel, Cambridge, No. 72, 1.198, written in England, c. 1410) is made up of st. i. of "Veni Creator." p. 1208, ii., st. iii. of "Christe Redemptor omnium Ex Patre," p. 228, ii., and the st. "Marta plens gratice," which was a kind of stock verse used in many hymns, e.g. Moz. Nos. 404, 408, and Dreset, xil., Nos. 72, 73. The two for St. Ethelhert are parts of the same hymn (I., Sanctorum; It., Digna). The "Puer natus in Bellikhem," appointed for the Epiphany and entitled a Prote, is really a hymn (see p. 840, i.; the Hereford text is sts. 1-ix.). [J. M.]

p. 46.
10. Close beside the heart that loves me. Resting in God. This is one of the author's "Suggestions" based upon the spirit rather than the words of portions of the Greek Offices. It was given in Hymns of the Holy Restern Church, 1902, p. 128.

Mr. Brownlie's translations from the Latin have been adopted in the hymnals to a limited extent only, mainly because the ground had been so extensively and successfully covered by former translators. With the translations from the Greek the case was different, as for popular use few translations were available in addition to the well known and widely used renderings by Dr. Neale. Mr. Brownlie's translations have all the beauty, simplicity, earnestness, this Dictionary. See list, p. 1507, iii. (J. M.)

and elevation of thought and feeling which characterise the originals. Their suitability for general use is evidenced in the fact that the number found in the most recently published hymn-books, including Church Hymne, 1903, The New Office Hymn Book, 1905, and The English Hymnal, 1906, almost equal in number those by Dr. Nesle. Carney, Julia A., née Fletcher, was b. in 1823. She was a teacher for some time in one of the Boston Primary Schools, U.S.A., which was held in the vestry of Hollis Street Church, in that city. This Church was demolished in 1846. It was for use in these Primary Schools that her "Little drops of water " (q.v.) was written in 1845.

Carole, pp. 208, L-218, ii. During the past fifteen years Carols have been produced in great numbers. In a few instances old words have been wedded to new music, but with by far the greater number both words and music are new. Taken as a whole these new Carols are on the old lines, are good, and deserve the attention of all lovers of this section of hymnody. The chief defect is, except in the case of Mr. Chope's collection, the almost universal ignoring of all the great festivals of the Church except Christmas. The extent of the output by the leading publishers since 1890 can be gathered from the following summary:-

Novelto & Co.-The last number of their Christmas Carols which has come under our notice is No. 317. these more than one third have been pub. since 1890, and are by sixty authors and forty-eight composers. From these and other sources the same firm has issued:—

11. Present new Christman varies in Viscous analysis. Written by A. E. Alston. Composed by Robin II. Legge, 1894. In addition to these, Nos. 237-248, of Novello's Caristman Caroti are also by Messrs. Alston and Legge. Both words and music are of the true carol type.

WILLIAM CLOWES & Sons issued the complete edition

12. Carols for use in Church during Christman, 12. Carols for the in Church during Christman, Epiphany, Easter, Alcension, and Horsest, by R. R. Chope, N.A. . . . 1894. This is an enlarged edition of the collection noted on p. $12, ii. (i.) under Mr. Chope's name. The additions include Further Epiphany Carols, and others for the Conv. of S. Paul, Purification of the V. M., Easter, Ascension, Whitaunide, and Harvest, There are appended outline "Carol Services" for use in their the chords of the convenient was the character of the convenient of the character of the convenient of the character church, school, or mission room. For practical use this "complete" edition is of great value.

A. R. MOWBRAY & Co. have published:—

13. The Cawity Cavol-Book for Christmas, Easter, and Ascension-tide. Compiled and arranged by the Rev. G. R. Woodward, M.A., 1901. This contains as carols with music to each, and from sources both old and new. In 1902 this was revised and enlarged to 65 pieces with music to each, as in the first edition, Although limited in design it is excellent in execution, and is supplied with notes of great value to the student in search of data.

With these details additional to those already given in the original article (p. 205, i.) lovers of Carols, both of words and music, are furnished with evidences of the practical value of these compositions in the services of the Church.

Cary, Alice, p. 214, i. From her Ballads, Lyrice and Hymna, N.Y., 1866, the following are in Horder's Worship Song, 1905 :-

7. O Lady, high in glory raised. From "O Lady, high in glory, Whose," p. 945, i.

The Parochial H. Book, 1880, has also the following original hymns by Caswall. As their use is confined to this collection, we give the numbers only :-

Not. 1, 2, 3, 159 (Proms, 1873, p. 463), 209 (1873, p. 288), 299, 324 (1873, p. 323), 327, 402, 554, 556, 558, 569 (1873, p. 334). These are from his Marque of Mary 1858. Nos. 168, 207 (1873, p. 297), 518. These are from his May Pagaont, 1866.

As several of these hymns do not begin with the original first lines, the original texts are indicated as found in his Poems, 1873. [J. M.]

Chadwick, J. W., p. 216, i. Mr. Chadwick's important prose works were the Life of Theodore Parker, 1890, and that of William Ellery Channing, 1903; and his poetical productions A Book of Poems, 1876, and In Nazareth Town and other Poems, 1883. He received his m.a. from Harvard in 1888; and d. Dec. 11, 1904. In addition to "Eternal Ruler of the ceaseless round," already noted on p. 216, ii., Mr. Chadwick's widow has supplied us with the following data concerning his hymns: —

1. Beyond the far harizon. [Heaven.] Written at the request of Stopford A. Brooks for his Christian Hymns, 1301. It is also printed as a leaflet in 5 st. of 31.

2. Light of the world, faint were our weavy feet. [Christ the Light of the World.] Written in June, 1901, at the request of the Bev. S. Collier, Superintendent of the Central Wesleyan Mission in Mountester. As the hymn is regardet by many os an initation of Cardinal Nowman's "Lead, kindly light," See, Mrs. Chan's account of its origin is worthy of attention:—Mr. Collier "raid how amazingly fond the rescued men were of the time 'Sondon,' but that 'Lead, kindly light,' though so heauliful, was not an adequate expression of their feelings, and would I try and write something as tender, but glaider than Newman's lovely hymn. I did my best to express myself, and so gave what was wanted. The hymn was first privited as a broadsheet, and then passed into The Methodist H. Hook, 1904, and other collections. collections.

S. Bilence, O earth, and listen to the song. [Spring.] This bytun is of more than usual excellence, and is worthy of attention. It is printed as a broadsbeet, and may be had at Albemarle House, E. Twickenham. [J, J,]

Christ in His Word draws near, p. 705, ii. (Lynch, T. T., No. 3). In the Memoirs of Thomas T. Lynch, ed. by William White, (London, 1874), we have the author's account of this hymn in his own words :--

" I will quote the hymn with which I commenced my work of song. It was made on the Monday morning before Christmas Day, whilst I was meditating on yesterday's worship. It is now No. 17 of The Rientet: "Christ in His word draws near."

This was in 1854, and it was included in The Rivulet the following year. [J. J.]

Christ, the Teacher, cometh. [Christ the Teacher.] The earliest date to which we have traced this hymn is 1880, in W. R. Stevenson's Baptist School Hymnal, where it is given as from a S. Scholar's H. Bk. It has been repeated in several later collections, and usually as Anon. [J, M.]

Christe coelestis medicina Patris, p. 296, ii. This hymn is in the Einsiedeln Ms. 191, catalogued as at f. 231 in a hand of the 9th cent. Drevee, xxvii., p. 284, prints it from a Mozarabio Humnarium of the 11th cent. in the B. M. (Add. 80851, f. 100, beginning imperfectly with st. vii., 1, 2), from a 10th cent. Mozarabic Hymnarium now at Madrid, from a Fleury Ms. of the 10th cent. now at Orleans (184), from a Fulda MB. of the 11th cent. now at Göttingen (Theol. 231) and others. [J. M.]

Christe lumen perpetuum, pp. 251, L. and 1669, i. (under Ennodius). This hymn has not been traced earlier than to the printed Mozarabio Breviary of 1502, where it is given at i. 57 and again at f. 91 (misprinted exi.). Thence in Dreves, xxvii., p. 76. [J. M.] in Droves, xxvii., p. 76.

Christe lux mundi salus et potestas. [Evening. 2nd S. after Epiphany.] This is printed by Dreves, xxvii., No. 18, from an 11th cent. Mozarabio Hymnarium formerly at Toledo, but now at Madrid, and from the Mozarabic Brev. of 1502; also from the same sources in Migne's PP. Lat., lxxxvi., 215, 924. In Daniel, i., No. 125, and iv., p. 62. Tr. as:

The westering sun rolls down, by W. J. Blew, in his Ch. H. Hk., 1852 (Trin. to Advent, No. 53), repeated in Hys. for the Year 1867, and Tozer's Cath. Hys., 1898. This begins with st. iii. of the Latin. [J. M.]

Christe precamur annue, pp. 361, i. and 1582, i. (under Emostus). This hymn is mentioned in the Rule of St. Caesarius of Arles, c. 502 (see p. 1618, ii.). Droves, xxvii., pp. 24, 78, prints it from an 11th cent. is. at Toledo. &c. It is also in the Mozarabio Broviary of 1502, f. 102 (misprinted xcii.). [J. M.]

Christe qui lux, p. 227, i. This hymn is mentioned in the Rule of St. Caesarius, c. 502 (see p. 1618, il.). Other versions are:-

(see p. 1618, it.). Other versions are:—

1. O Christ, Whe art the Light and Day, Then drivest night and gloom away, in H. A. & M., 1904, No. 106, marked as Copeland and Compilers; but not a single line is exactly from Copeland.

2. O Christ, Whe art the Light and Day, Then drivest darksome night away, based on Copeland in The English Hyl., 1906, No. 31.

3. O Christ, Theu Brightness of the day. By J. D. Aylward, in O. Shipley's Annus Sanctus, 1864, ii., p. 83, and A. E. Tosse's Catholic Hys., 1898.

[J. M.]

Christe, qui sedes Olympo, p. 228, i. The version beginning "Christ, the highest heav'ns enthrone Thee," in H. A. & M., 1904, No. 240, is W. Palmer's tr. altered by the [J. M.] Compilers.

Christe Redemptor omnium Conserva, p. 226, i. Another tr. of the original text is "O Christ! of all Redeemer dear," by G. H. Palmer, based on J. D. Chambers, in the Antiphoner and Grail, 1880, p. 153, and the Hymner, 1904, No. 100.

Another tr. of the " Placare Christe servulis " text is "The Father's pardon from above, the Office H. Bk., 1889 and 1905. (J. M.)

Christe Redemptor omnium Ex Patre, p. 208, ii. Another tr. of the "Jesu Redemptor omnium Quem" text is "O Perfect Noon of Loveliness," by J. O'Connor in the Arundel Hys., 1902, No. 27. [J. M.]

Christe sanctorum decus angelorum. p. 239, ii. Additional tre. are :

1. Christ, the fair beauty of the hely Angels, by G. H. Palmer and M. J. Blacker, in the Antiphoner and Grail, 1860, p. 143, and the Hymner, 1994, No. 28.
2. Christ, of the Angels' praise and atoration. By T. I. Ball in the Office H. Ek., 1889, No. 787, and 1806.
3. Christ, the fair glory of the hely Angels, by Atheletan Riley and Parcy Dearmer, in The English Hyl., 1906, No. 242.

Christi corpus ave, p. 220, ii. Levis assigns the Ms. he used to the 12th cent.

Christi perennes nuntil, p. 281, i. The version beginning "Ye deathless messengers of Christ," in H. A. & M., 1904, No. 196, is marked as Williams and Compilers; but not one line remains as Williams wrote it.

Christians, awake, salute the happy morn, p. 481, ii. Through the kindness and courtesy of Mr. Walter F. Browne, Acting Librarian of Chetham's Library, Manchester, we are enabled to give the following additional information concerning this hymn:

information concerning this hymn:

Anent this hymn, "Christians, awake," the Master of Peterhouse (Cambridge) says, in vol. 34 of the Chetham Society's Publications, 1395, The Poems of John Byrons, 4 vols., vol. 11., Sacred Potats, Part I. p. 19:—

"The Chetham Industry at Manchester preserves in the Libratian's room, carefully framed, the original Ms. of this famous hymn. The title is 'Christmas Day for Dolly.' The verses were therefore designed by Byron us a Christmas gift to his daughter Dorothy (born April 26, 1736, died unmarried, September 19, 1787). ... In a latter dated October 12, 1886, the late Mr. J. E. Beiley writes:—'I lately got an original breadside copy of Christmas, Anake, most likely printed by Orion Adams, Smithy Door (Manchester). Is has a woodcut, and is very carefully printed, showing, I think, that Byrom corrected it. The paraphrase, Hebrews I, is printed in another column beside the Christmas Hymn. It is etiched up with Adams's Meschester Weekly Paper for 1751. As on Christmas Eve, 1766, the organist Wainwright and the singing men and boys of the old chirch came before Byrom's door to sing the hymn, this may be the date of its composition and suddan popularity."

It has been said that the poem appeared in Harrop's Manchester Mercury for 1746. On this point Mr. Browne says :-

"I have not a copy of Harrop's Monchester Mercury for 1746 in our library, but a former librarian conveyed the following information to me:—'This bymn was written in 1745 and printed in Harrop's Manchester Mercury in 1746."

From Dr. W. E. A. Azon's Annals of Marchester, 1886, p. 88, we find that the first number of Hartop's Manchester Mercury is dated March 3, 1752. This is conclusive against the printed date of the hymn being 1746. There is in the Manchester Free Reference Library an undated broadside containing Byrom's two Christmas hymns, "Christians! awake," and "God Who at sundry times in divers ways," which is regarded as the first printed copy of these hymns, but being without date it is of little value in determining the year in which the "Christmas Day for Dolly" was written. From the evidence Dolly" before us the earliest date we can give to the hymn is 1750. Wainwright's tune, to which it was sung by his choir as noted above, is known by the varying names of "Yorkshire," "Stockby the varying names of "Yorkshire," port," and "Mottram."

Christum ducem, p. 282, ii. Also in two mea in the B. M., viz., Hart. 1260, f. 69, and Add. 14845, f. 1b, both being of the second half of the 14th cent.

Christus tenebris obsitam, p. 288, L The version beginning "Now heaven's growing light is manifest," in H. A. & M., 1904, No. 85, is from Isaac Williams unaltered, but omitting the introductory " And." [J. M.]

Cives coelestis patriae, p. 233, u. This is also in a 12th cent. ms. in the University Library, Cambridge (Gg. v. 85). Dreves, ii., p. 94, prints it from a Moissac Hymnarium of the 11th cent., and from a Gottweig Me. of the 12th cent. [J. M.]

Clare, Mary F., p. 1866, ii. In the Standard of June 7, 1899, is the following: "June 5, at Learnington, Margaret Anna Cusack, only daughter of the late Samuel Cusack, M.D., of Dublin, aged 70." In the same paper on the following day, this lady is identified as "Sister Mary F. Clare," the Num of Kenmare, who, on leaving the Roman Catholic Church, lectured extensively on Protestantism. The hymns noted on p. 1556, B., are from her Hymns for Children by a Religious of the Holy Order of the Poor Clares, London, 1862. Two others in 1862 have passed into the Congregational Bk. of Praise for Children, 1881, "O gentle Jesus, had I been" (Christ blessing Children). and "When Jesus was on earth He used " (Jesus, the Healer). [J. M.]

Clark, John, b. in England in 1848, and educated for the Baptist Ministry at Mr. Spurgeon's college. Proceeding to Canada in 1875 he has held there several pastorates of Tryon, Prince Edward Island. His hymn, "With sacred joy, dear Lord, we meet " (For Conferences), is No. 805 in Sursum Corda, Phila., 1893. [L. F. B.]

Clarke, S. C., pp. 235, E.: 1558, E. In addition to the hymns by Mr. Clarke already noted in this Dictionary, the following have come into C. U. during the past few years:—

1. All blassing, honour, glory, might. [Processional.] This hymn, heard upon flev. v. and vill., to music by Mandelssohn, was written in 1892, and published with Mendelssohn's music, adapted thereto for congregational use by Sir J. Stainer. The printed sheet is dated "Thorverton Vicarage, Devon, January Sist, A.D. 1823," It was song at Norwich Cathedral in 1894, and later at other choir feativals. Included in the author's Fastival and other Hyn., 1896, and C. W. A. Brooke's Add. Hys., 1992.

2. Amid the ceaseless strife. [N. George.] First pub in Add. Hys., 1903, to musle by Sir J. Stather.

4. Lord of all sreation. [Offertory.] The note on this hymn in: "Written originally at the request of the Reverend Canou Hervey, and song at the re-opening of Sandringham Church, after restoration by H.R.H. the Prince of Wales." It was sung at the Choral Festivals at St. Paul's Cathedral, 1893; Norwich and Truro, 1894; Ely. 1896, and others. In Festival and other Hys., 1896, and add. Hys., 1993.

5. Lord of power and might, the Giver. [Church Lads' Brigade.] From his Festival and other Hys., 1895; in did Hys., 1993.

6. Once more an end of gloom. [Flower Service.] Included in Add. Hys., 1993.

An extensive collection of Mr. Clarke's

An extensive collection of Mr. Clarke's hymns, together with original tunes, is in the Church House Library, Westminster. Mr. Clarke d. at Penzance, Feb. 22, 1903. [J. J.]

Clarum decus jejunii, p. 236, i. There does not seem to be any reason for ascribing this to St. Gregory. Additional tre. are:

1. It is the glary of this fast, in H. A. & M., 1904, No. 98, marked as by the Compilers. It is really Sir H. W. Baker's version, "Good it is to keep the fast,"

1. What beauty hath this colemn tide, in the New Office H. Bk., 1905, No. 198.

3. The glory of these forty days, by M. F. Bell, in The English Hyl., 1906, No. 68.

[J. M.]

Ocelestis aulae principes, p. 240, 1. J. Chandler's tr. of this hymu "Hail Princes of the host of heaven," from his Hue. of the Primitive Church, 1837, p. 98, is included in Church Hymns, 1908.

Coelestis formam gloriae, p. 240, ii. Additional tra. are:—

1. A wondrous type, a vision fair, based on Neste, in the New Office H. Ilk., 1905, No. 221.
2. An image of that heavenly light, by R. E. Roberts, in The English Hyl., 1906, No. 233.
3. O wondrous type, O vision fair, which was given in the original ed. of Hys. A. & M., 1961, and omitted in the ci. of 1875 (p. 240, ii.), has been reinstated in the ci. of 1875 (p. 240, ii.), has been reinstated in the ed. of 1904. [J, M.]

Coeli Deus sanctiesime, p. 341, 4. Another tr. is "Most boly Lord and God of heaven," by M. F. Bell in The English Hyl., 1906. R. Campbell's tr. "All holy Sovereign of the sky," p. 241 i, 3, has been brought into C. U. through its inclusion in Church Hys., 1908. [J. J.]

Coelitum Joseph decus, pp. 241, i., and 1557, i. See note on "Te Joseph celebrent" in this Supplement.

Coelo datur quiescere, p. 241, ii. Another tr. is "In heaven 'tis given to rest thee," by W. J. Blew in his Ob. H. Bk., 1852, Holy Days, No. 30, repeated in G. R. Woodward's Song: of Syon, 1904, No. 119, and the New Office H. Bk., 1905, No. 514. [J. M.]

Coelo quos eadem gloria, p. 241, ii. ]

Another tr., is " All saints, who share one glory bright," by T. I. Ball, in the New Office H. Bk., 1905.

Coelo Redemptor praetulit. [B, V]M.] This is the Matins hymn in the Office of the Maternity of the B. V. M. The office is printed in full in the Opera (vol. vi., Rome, 1751, with "Coelo Redemptor" at p. 310, and "Te mater alma Numinis" at p. 313) of Pope Benedict XIV., and was authorised by him in 1751 for use in Portugal. It is in the Lisbon ed., 1786, Verna, p. 659; in later eds., e.g. Florence 1780, Veria, p. 605; in later ous, e.g. Provided 1838, Madrid 1868, &c., it is appointed for the 2nd S. in October. Tr. as "The Saviour left high heav'n to dwell," by E. Caswall in his Lyra Cath., 1819, p. 177, repeated in the Birmingbam Oratory H. Bk. and others. [J. M.]

Coelos ascendit hodie, p. 241, ii. The text, as in Daniel, i., No. 492, has not been traced before 1601, and is probably not much earlier than that date.

Coenam cum discipulis. [Passiontide.]
Apparently of about the end of the 14th cent. It is in a Sarum Missal in the Bodleian (Barlow 5, p. 501) in a hand of c. 1400; and in a Here-ford Missal kept in the Bodleian, but belonging to University College, also in a hand of c. 1400. In the York of 1509, the Saintss of 1491, the Paris of 1501, and other Missals it forms part of the Mass of the Five Wounds of Christ. Text in Kehrein, No. 57. Tr. as:-

At the Supper with the Twelve, by J. M. Neale, in his Med. Hys., 1851, p. 71. His true of ets. x., xi., beginning "On the wood His arms are stretch'd," are in G. R. Woodward's Songe of Syon, 1864, No. 24. [J. M.]

Coghill, Annie Louisa, née Walker, daughter of Robert Walker, was b. at Kiddermore, Staffs., in 1836, and married Harry Coghill in 1884. During a residence for some time in Canada several of her poetical pieces were printed in the Canadian newspapers. These were gathered together and published c. 1859 in her Leaves from the Backwoods. In addition to novels, plays for children, and magazine work, she edited the Autobiography and Letters of her cousin, Mrs. Oliphant, in 1898. Her popular hymn, "Work, for the night is coming," p. 317. il., was written in Canada in 1834, and published in a Canadian newspaper, from which it passed, without any acknowledgement of the authorship, into Ira D. Sankey's Sacred Songs and Solos. Authorized text in her Oak and Maple, 1890, p. 17. [J. J.]

Cole. Samuel Valentine, p.p., b. at Machiaeport, Me., 1851, and educated at Bowdoin Coll. and Andover Theo. Seminary, 1887; D.D. 1898. President of Wheaton Seminary since 1897. His Scipio's Garden and other Poems was pub. 1901. From it is taken "O Thou Who sealest up the past" (New Year),
p. 170. It is dated in The Pilgrim Hyl., 1904,

[C. L. N.]

Coleridge, John Duke, Lord, p. 1857, i. He became Lord Chief Justice in 1880, and d. in London, June 14, 1894.

Coles, V. S. S., p. 242, it. Recently additional hymns by Mr. Coles have come into C. U., including:-

1. Almighty Father, Lord most high. [Holy Com-musion.] Written for H. A. & H., and given in the 1904 ed., No. 264, to be sung " At the Offerlory." It is 1904 ed., No. 284, to be sung "At the Offertory." It is admirably suited for the purpose.

2. Father. Whose love we have wrong'd by transgression. This "Litany for Lent," in H. A. 4 M., 1904. No. 633, is a cente from the author's Metrical Litany, pub. by Novello. The Pt. ii. in H. A. 4 M., begins "Curist with the twelve the last Passover keeping."

3. We gray Thee, heavenly Father, p. 282, ii., 5. This bymu, with the exception of st. 1, is entirely rewritten in The English Hyd., 1908.

4. To whe own the faith of Jesus. [B. F. M.] This spected in The English Hyd., 1806, for "St. Mary the Virgin."

For Mr. Coles's tre, see Index of Authors and Translators. [J. J.]

Colesworthy, D. C., p. 243, ii. He d. in 1893.

Collaudemus Magdalense, p. #4, ii. In the Saram use the hymn begins as above. The original form, beginning "Pange lingua Magdalenae," is ascribed to Philippe de Grève (see p. 1600, ii.) by Salimbene in his Chronica (printed at Parma, 1857, p. 65, from a Vatican ms. of the 18th cent.). The "Pange lingua" text is in a ms. of c. 1300 in the Bodleian (Parall. 4800). ii the Bodleian Ms. (Ratel. A. 420); in the Engelberg Ms. No. 104, catalogued as of the 13th cent.; and in later mas. at Einsiedeln (No. 92), St. Gall (16, 386), Darmstadt (952), &c. Other tre. are:-

L Collamianus. IT. as "Sing we all the joys and surrows," by Laurence Housman, in The English Hyl., 1906, No. 250.
iii. O Maria. IT. as "Mary, weep not, weep no longer," by Laurence Housman, in The English Hyl., 1906, No. 231.

Collier, Edward Augustus, a Congregational Minister at Kinderhook, New York State, is the author of "Thou, Lord, art God alone" (Holy Trinity) in the Scotch Church Hymnary, 1898.

Collyer, Robert, b. at Keighley, York-shire, Dec. 8, 1823, at one time a working black-mith, emigrated to America in 1850, where he was a Methodist local preacher until he joined the Unitarians in 1859; and Pastor of the Church of the Messiah, N.Y., from 1879. Has published several works on various subjects. His hymn, "With thankful hearts, O God, we come" (Dedication of a Church and in the Boston Unitarian Hys. for Church and Home, 1895, is given in Horder's Worship Song, 1905, as "Unto Thy temple, Lord, we come," and appointed for Sunday morning. It was written for the Dedication of Unity Church, Chicago (which was burnt in the great fire of 1870), of which he was the first Pastor in 1859. [J. J.]

Come away, where no shadows in a glass, p. 1062, ii. This is given to I. G. Smith in error. It is a part of I. Williams's er, of "Pugnate, Christi milites," p. 941, i. 1.

Come, happy souls, adore His Name. An altered form of T. Baldwin's "Ye happy saints, the Lamb adore," p. 103, il. 3, in the Amer. Sursum Corda, 1898, and others.

Come, Jesus, from the sapphire throne. R. Palmer. [Dedication of a Place of Worship.] Included in his Poetical Works, 1876, p. 78, and dated 1875.

Come, let our hearts and voices join. This is part of J. Swain's "A Friend there is; your voices join," p. 3, i., given in some American hymnals.

Come, let us sing the song of songs, p. 1848, i. This was printed in the Sunday S. Teachers' Magazine for May, 1841, p. 351, as one of the "Original Hymns for the Sheffield S. S. Union Festival, Whitsunday, May 31, 1841." fJ. M.1

Come, O Thou Prophet of the Lord. C. Wesley. [Christ the Interpreter.] From his Hys. for Our Lord's Resurrection, 1746, No. vi., into The Meth. Hymn-Book, 1904, as "Come then, Thou Prophet of the Lord" (P. Works, iv., p. 136). [J. J.]

Come, Sacred Spirit from above. From P. Doddridge's "Hear, gracious Sovereign, from Thy throne," p. 306, i. 21, into a few collections.

Come, sing with holy gladness, p. 379, ii. In the 1904 ed. of H. A. & M. of the original 4 stanzas ets. ii. and iii. are transposed, and iv. is omitted. Church Hys., 1903, and The English Hyl., 1906, retain the original.

Come, Thou almighty Will. cation.] Appeared anonymously in the Amer. Unit. Hys. of the Spirit, 1864, No. 7, in 3 st. of 7 l. It is repeated in later hymnals, and still Anon.

Come ti vede chime di sangue asperso. [Passiontide.] This is in the Lands Spiritual of the Congregation of the Oratory, Rome, 1583, Bk. i., p. 29. In Coferati's Corona di Sacre Cansoni, Florence, 1710, p. 627, as " Come ti vedo aime" (in index ohime). Tr. as "Why do I see Thee crimson'd o'er with blood," by J. O'Connor in the Arundel Hys., 1902, No. 66. ſJ. M.Ī

Come to bless Thy people, Lord, Barbara MacAndrew. [Public Worship.] From her Exclused and other Poems. By B. M., 1871, as "Hymn sung at the opening of All Saints' Church [Hoole], Chester," Boptist Church Hyl., 1900, and others. [J. M.]

Come unto Me, ye weary, p. 263. i. The original text of this bymn is given in several hymnals of a late date, including The Church Hymnary, 1898; Church Hys., 1903; The Methodist Hyl., 1904, and others. In the 1904 ed. of H. A. & M., and The English Hyl. 1906, the last st. is mainly rewritten. [J. J.]

Come, ye faithful, raise the strain, 87, i. The centos from this tr. by Dr. Neale p. 87, i. have undergone some alterations in recent col-lections. These include: (1) Church Hys., 1903, where st. i., i. 8, reads "Thanks and praise "for "Laud and praise," &c.; and st. iii., I. 5. "Thou to-day, amidst Thine own," for "But to-day, amidst the twelve"; (2) H. A. & M., 1904, where the last stanza is entirely rewritten; and (3) The English Hyl., 1906, in which Dr. Neale's text is faithfully followed. It will be noted that the texts of Church Hys. and H. A. & M. are altered to bring the hymn in line with the fact that both Judas Iscariot and Thomas were absent on the first Easter night. Sacred history denies that "twelve" were present. For the original Greek text, see Moorsom's Historical Companion to Hys. A. & M., 1903, p. 88.

Conditor alme siderum, p. 257, Another tr. is "O Maker of the stars of night." in the Yattendon Hyl., 1899, No. 47, marked as "Trans. by R. B."

Congregational Hymnody, Ameri-CRIL. See American Hymnody, & iii.

Congregational Hymnody, English, p. 958-961. During the past fifteen years very little has been done by the Congregational body in the direction of hymn-writing and the compilation of hymn-books. The Congregational Mission Hymnal, c. 1890, has had only a very limited circulation. The Rev. W. G. Horder issued in 1894 Hymns Supplemental to Existing Collections. Later, in 1898, he reduced his Congregational Hymns (p. 260, ii. 10) and these Hymns Supplemental to 803, and published the same as Worship Song, and in 1905 as Worship Song with Accompanying Tunes. In this collection poetic warmth and cultured expression have been sought after and attained. The tone of the book is bright and buoyant and its literary standard is exceptionally high. The Congregational Church Hymnal (p. 260, ii. 1$), in an unaltered form, is still in extensive use.

In 1899 the Congregational Historical Society was founded in connexion with the Memorial Hall, Farringdon Street, London, of which the Rev. T. G. Crippen is one of the Hon. Secretaries. The Library of this Society has a large collection of Congregational Hymn Books, and other publications associated with hymns and hymn-writers. Dr. Williams's Library, London, is also of value in the same direction.

[T. G. C.] The following hymn-writers, all of whom have assisted in building up the hymnody of the Congregationalists, are grouped together here to economise our space :-

Booking, Daniel, sometime Minister of Terling, Exect, author of Spiritual Hymns, &c., Chelmsford, 1782. He died c. 1793.

Clark, John. first Pastor of the Tabernacle, Trow-bridge, pub. Foeest on Several Subjects and Occasions, Trowbridge, 1799, in which are 109 hymns. Born in 1746, died in 1809.

Harrison, Susanna, invalided from her work as Harrison, Busanna, invalues from ner work as a domestic servant at the age of 20, pub. Snegt in the Night, 1780. This included 133 hymns, and passed through ten editions. She is known by "Segone, my worldly cures, away," and "O happy souls that love the Lord." Born in 1752 and died Aug. 3, 1784.

farvis, Mary, dau of Samuel Rowies, of Saul, Glouca, was h, in 1853, and m. 1888 the Rev. George Jarvis, theu Congregational minister at Saushause, Glouca, since 1898 at Colefoni, Glaucs. She contributed devotional poetry to the Sanday at Home and other periodicals, collected as Saushine and Calar. Songs by the Way. By Mary Rowles Jarvis, N.D. (1893). Her hymn:—

O God of ages, in Whose light [Evening], appeared in the Sunday at Home, 1888, p. 409, as "A Hymn for Nightfail," repeated 1895 as above, p. 55. It is in the Public School H. Bi., 1903.

Johnson, Joseph. was b. March 31, 1848, at Basing-stoke, Hants, educated at Cheshaut Colt., entered the Congregational ministry in 1875, and since 1877 has been minister at Achton on Mersey, Cheshire. Concerning the three hymns noted on p. 263, i., the author says :-

1. Doet thou how beneath the burden! "It was written in 1879, and first printed in the Evangelical Mag., May, 1879." In the Hessie Hys., 1801, No. 22.

2. From north and south, and east and west. Originally written in 1884, and first printed in the Evangelical Mag. In later collections it has been considerably altered." In its varying forms it is the most added to the printed in the subsort ways.

siderably altered." In its varying forms is in the access widely known of the author's hymns. Authorised text in Hessis Hys., 1901, No. 26.
3. Lord of the Bea, afar from land. "Written in 1874, and printed in The Caritrian World magazine, 1879." Included in Hessie Hys., 1901, No. 31.

Since 1890 Mr. Coster has held the pastorates of Stroud and of Hessle, near Hull. He retired from the active ministry in 1902. His later poetical works include Collected Poems, 1890; Gloria Christi, 1896; Hessle Hymns, 1901; When the Stars appear, 1903; and Beams of Christ's Glory, 1904. In these works Mr. Coster has maintained his reputation as a writer of hymns. [J, J.]

Courthope, William John, LL.D., son of the Rev. W. Courthope, Rector of S. Malling, was born July 17, 1842, educated at Harrow, and New Coll., Oxford; B.A. (1st Class Lit. Hum.), Newdigate Prize Poem 1864; Hon. p.t.frm., Durham, 1835; Hon. LL.D., Edinburgh, 1898; Professor of Poetry, Oxford, 1895-1901; 1st Class Civil Ser. Comr., 1832. He has much Luddrica Lange, 1869. 1892. He has pub. Ludibria Lunae, 1869; The Paradise of Birds, 1870; and History of English Poetry, 4 vols., 1895-1903. His tra. of Latin hymns, of more than usual beauty and excellence, were contributed to Church See Index of Authors and Hymns, 1903, [J. J.]

Cousin, A. R., p. 204, ii. Other hymns that have passed into use are :-

1. In the songless night, the daylight dreary. Jesus 2. Lord, mine must be a spotless dress. Christour Righteonemess.

O now is the time. Seek the Lord.
 O Then that on the billow. Jesus near,

Of these No. 4 appeared in J. H. Wilson's Songs of Zion, 1862; Nos. 1 and 3 in J. H. Wilson's Services of Praise, 1865; and No. 2 in her own Immanuel's Land, 1876. Mrs. Cousin d. at Edinburgh Dec. 6, 1906, in her 83rd [J. M.]

Cowper, W., p. 265, L. Prof. John E. B. Mayor, of Cambridge, contributed some letters by Cowper, hitherto unpublished, together with notes thereon, to Notes and Queries, July 2 to Sept. 24, 1904. These letters are dated from Huntingdon, where he spent two years after leaving St. Alban's (see p. 265, L), and Olney. The first is dated "Huntingdon, June 24, 1765," and the last "From Olney, July 14, 1772." They together with extracts from other letters by J. Newton (dated respectively Aug. 8, 1772, Nov. 4, 1772), two quotations without date, followed by the last in the N. & Q. series, Aug. 1773, are of intense interest to all students of Cowper, and especially to those who have given attention to the religious side of the poet's life, with its faint lights and deep and awful shadows. From the hymnological standpoint the additional information which we gather is not important, except concerning the hymns "O for a closer walk with God," "God moves in a mysterious way," "Tis my happiness below," and "Hear what God, the Lord, hath spoken." Concerning the last three, their position in the Ms., and the date of the last from J. Newton in the above order, "Aug. 1773," is conclusive proof against the common belief that "God moves in a mysterious way" was written as the outpouring of Cowper's soul in gratitude for the frustration of his attempted suicide in October 1773.

Cox, Frances E., p. 268, i., b. May 10, 1812, d. Sept. 23, 1897.

Craigie-Halkett, Violet Mary, b. at the Royal Military College, Camberley, Surrey. Her hymn-

Twee upon this happy morn [Christmas] was written in 1904, pub. by the S. S. Uniun, with music by Ferris Tosse (MUS.OC. Oxon.), and included in the S. S. Hymnary, 1905, No. 17. [J. M.]

Crawford, Thomas, was b. in 1850 at Falkirk, Scotland, and now (1906) resides at Stroud Green, London, His hymn ;-

Bales the song of brimaph, swall the strains of joy [Service for Christ], gained a first prize for words and nusts (both original) in a S. S. Unite competition, 1883. Buth are in the S.S. Hymnery, 1905, and the words in Voice of Praise, 1887, School Hys., 1891, and others. [J. M.]

Creighton, Mandell, p.p., was b. at Carlisle, July 5, 1843, consecrated Bishop of Peterborough, 1891, translated to London 1896, and d. at Fulham, London, Jan. 14, 1901. For details of his career see the most interesting Life and Letters, 1904, ed. by his wife. He was the author of only one hymn, "O Thou Who gavest power to love" (Holy Matrimony). This he wrote in London, early in 1900. He gave a copy in Ms. to the Hon, Sarah Kathleen, daughter of the 4th Lord This he wrote in London, early in Lyttleton, who had it printed, and it was first used on April 26, 1900, at 8t. Margaret's Church, Westminster, on the occasion of her marriage to Mr. J. C. Bailey, of Egerton Gardens, London. It is in Ep. Creighton's Life & Letters, 1904, vol. ii., p. 515, and The English Hul., 1906. [J. M.] English Hyl., 1906.

Crewdson, Jane, p. 288, ii. The following additional hymns by Mrs. Crewdson have recently come into C. U. through The Buptist Church Hymnal, 1900:-

- For the somehine and the rain. Harrest.
   O Fount of grace that runneth o'er. Public Worship.
   There is an unsearchable juy. Joy in God.
   When I come with troubled heart. Prayer.

These hymns are all from her A Little While, and Other Pooms, 1864. [J. J.]

Crippen, T. G., p. 1568, ii. In 1896 Mr. Crippen was appointed Librarian at the Congregational Hall, Farringdon Street, London. In addition to his Ancient Hymns and Prems, Translated from the Latin, 1869, he has contributed numerous hymns to various periodicals, especially the Evangerical Magazine. His bynn "O Thou Who givest corn and wine" was written for Band of Hope gatherings in Chronicle. It is in the Sunday S. Hymnary, 1905, and others. [3. 3.]

Crosswell, W., p. 289, ii. On the title-page of his Poems, 1861, this author is given as W. Croswell, and the best authorities are in favour of this spelling of the name.

Crucis Christi mons Alvernae, pp. $71, ii. and 1558, ii. Mount Alverna or Verna is in the upper valley of the Arno. St. Francis of Assisi went there in Aug. 1224 to keep a fast of forty days before the festival of the Archangel Michael (Sept. 29). The date given for the conferring of the stigmes is Sept. 14, 1224, Holy Rood day or the day of the Elevation of the Cross. But as that lay and the two days following had already been assigned to other festivals, the celebration of the Stigmatization was fixed on Sept. 17. Pope Paul V. (1605-1621) allowed the general use of the office, but it was not included in the body of the Roman Breviary till after 1632; the Paris ed. of 1642, e.g., gives it in the General Appendix. Dreses, iv., p. 140, prints the "Crucis Christi" from a 15th cent, Ms. at Salzburg. [J. M.]

Criiger, Johann, pp. 271, ii.; 1553, ii. A complete copy of the earliest Berlin ed. of the Praxis noted at p. 371, i. has recently been discovered, and proves to be of 1647. In addition we may note that :-

addition we may note that;—
The 5th Berlin ed., 1653, of the Prawir noted at p. 1658, ii., is now in the Royal Library at Munich. The Breslan Town Library has a copy of the 7th Berlin ed. 1657. The 10th Berlin ed. 1661 is at Wernigerote. The 6th Berlin ed. was not known in time to be used throughout this Dictionarys. Speaking generally it may be said that the hymns by Franck and Gerhardt, noted as in the Crigar-Runge G. B., 1685 (p. 273, i. zo. 4), and in the Frankfurt (C. Rökein) ed. of 1685 of the Prawis, are all in the Berlin ed., 1655, of the Prawis. [J. M.]

Crux, ave benedicts. [Holy Cross Day.] Probably of the 17th cent. It is in the Symphonia Strenum, Cologne, 1695 (ed. 1707, p. 196), the Psalteriolum Cant. Cath., 1710, p. 277, Daniel, ii., p. 349, Trench, ed. 1864, p. 302, &c. Tr. as "Hail be thou! blessed Cross," by G. R. Woodward in his Songs of Syon, 1904. [J. M.]

Cullen, John, was born in Ireland, Oct. 15, 1837, and educated at St. Aidan's college, from which he was ordained D. in 1865 and P. in 1866. After acting as Curate in several parishes he became Vicar of Radcliffe-on-Trent in 1874. He has also been engaged on the staff of the Church Parochial Mission Society. His poetical works are Poems and Idylls, 1882, 3rd ed., 1904; Songs of Consolation; Hymns of the Holy Spirit, &c. A few of his hymns are in C. U., mainly in America. There are several others also which are worthy of attention.

Cum rex gloriae Christus. [Easter.] This antiphon or reponsory is found in a 10th cent. Ms. at Einsiedeln (121, p. 393). Anselm Schubiger in his Sängerschule, 1858, pp. 54,85, ascribes it, apparently without reason, to Notker Balbulus, and gives a copy of it with the melody (Example 40 from the Einsiedeln us. 33, of c. 1300). At Echternach (Gradual of 12th cent., Paris, Lat. 10510; see Ad. Reiners in his Tropen ... Gesonge, 1884, p. 73), and many other places, it was used as an antiphon at the 1885, and first printed in the Sanday S. Procession on Easter Day. At Hereford it was used as an Antiphon on Easter Eve at the midnight procession to the Easter Sepulchre in the Cathedral (H. B. S. reprint, vol. i., p. 324). Also in Danist, ii., p. 315. It is practically the same as a passage in a sermon ascribed to St. Augustine in Migne's PP. Lat. xxxviii. 2061. Tr. as "When Jesus Christ, the King of glory," by G. R. Woodward in his Songe of Syon, 1904, No. 41.

Cum sit omnis caro foenum. Philippe de Grece. [Ask Wednesday or Lent.] This is in a me of the end of the 13th cent., now in the B. M. (Egerton 274, f. 27b) which contains the poems of Philippe de Grève. Also in a ms. of the 18th cent. at Evreux (S9, f. 3; see Catalogue), apparently written at Lyre, near Évreux. Dreees, xxi., No. 142, prints it from the Egerton 274, from a 18th cent. Ms. at Florence (Laurent. Pl. zxiz. i.), and from the Aquileia Missal of 1508. Sometimes erroneously ascribed to St. Bernard of Clairvaux; cf. Hanréau's Poèmes ... Baint Bernard, 1890, p. 29. Also in Trench, ed. 1884, p. 255. Tr. as:-

Easter Day comes on but alowly, a very free versim by J. M. Neale in bis Carols for Easter Fide, 1854, No. 24; repeated, beginning with at ll., "Of the bour that comes to sever," in G. R. Woodward's Songs of Syon, 1904, No. 21. [J. M.]

Ounliffe, William, s.a. Ordained from St. Aidan's Coll. D. 1884, P. 1886, Curate of Great Horton, Yorkshire, 1884-93, and from 1893 Vicar of St. Chrysostom, Bradford. Graduated at Trin. Coll., Dublin; B.A. 1900; M.A. 1905. His hymn:—

O God, our Father, in compassion bear [On behalf of the Parish], was written in 1897, and pub. in 3 st. of 4 l., with music by Dr. G. C. Martin, by Novello & Co., in the same year. In Brooke's Additional Byt., 1903, it is abbreviated to 6 sts.

Da Jesus an dem Kreuze stund, p. 164, i. Another &. is:--

While Jesus hung upon the Rood, by G. R. Woodward in his Legends of the Saints, 1898, p. 65, and his Songe of Syon, 1904, No. 38. This resily follows the Latin tr., "In crucis pendens arbore [stipite]," in the Symphonia Symmun, Cologne, 1685 (1707, p. 60), and Baniel, IL, p. 348.

Da Jesus in den Garten gieng. [Passiontide.] This is found in many different forms. The text tr. is that of the Audernach G. B. (R. C.), 1608, in 5 sts.; thence in Wackernagel, ii., No. 1192, H. Bone's Cantate, ed. 1879, No. 132, &c. Tr. as:—

When Jesus to the garden came, by G. R. Woodward in his Songs of Syon, 1804, No 32. [J. M.]

Da, puer, plectrum, p. 276, 1. This is tr. by Mr. R. F. Davis in his Hys. of Prudentius, 1905, pp. 95-109. Nine sts. of the Corde natus portion, beginning "Of the Father's heart begotten, Ere the world from chaos rose," are in The Engl. Hyl., 1906, slightly altered by the [J. M.]

Damiani, Peter, p. 278, i. His hymns have been collected, with a biographical notice, in Dreves, xlviii., Nos. 16-73; the "Ad perennis," p. 13. 1. as No. 66; the "Crux mundi," p. 273, i., as No. 18; the "Gravi me," p. 451, ii., as No. 63; and the "Paule doctor," p. 887, i., as No. 45. [J. M.]

Dankt Gott dem Herren, p. 579, 4 Another tr. is :-

Thanks to God, the Lord of glary, by Alexander Brown, contributed to the Scottish Congreg. Hyl., 1983.

Darker and darker fall around, [Evening.] Appeared in William Young's Catholic Charatist, 1842, No. 60, in 13 st. of 4 l. as "Hymn of the Calabrian Shepherds," and repeated, abridged and altered, in the Arundel Hys., 1902. In the Unitarian Hys. of the Spirit, 1864, No. 60, sts. i.-iv. of this text and two stanzas, possibly by S. Longfellow, the editor, were given as, "As darker, darker, fall around." This cento, usually abbreviated, is found in several collections in G. Britain and America, including the Scotch Church Hymnary, 1898, The Filgrim Hyl., 1904, and

Davis, Robert Furley, M.A., was b. Jan. 22, 1866, at Nottingham, and educated at St. John's Coll., Cambridge (B.A. 1888, M.A. 1896). He is now (1906) senior classical master at Campbell Coll., Belfast, Ireland. He is the author of seven trs. in The Hymns of Prudentius, Translated by B. Martin Pope and R. F. Davis, 1905, one of which is in The Engl. Hyl., 1906, No. 613. [J. M.]

Day after day I sought the Lord. J. C. Hare. [Ps. xl.] From his version of Ps. xl. in his Portions of the Psalms in English Verse, 18:39, Pt. i., into The Meth. H. Bk. 1904. The second part of the sams version begins "Shew forth Thy mercy, gracious Lord" (see p. 924, 1). [J. J.]

Days and moments quickly flying, p. sez, ii. The variations in the text of this hymn in recent collections are numerous and complicated. Taking the latest and most important we have in order of publication the following :-

1. The Scottish Church Hymnary, 1888. Stanzas 1.-lv. are from B. A. & M. (complete edition), the refrain, "i.lie passeth soon," as et. v. and sts. vl.-ix., with slight alterations, from Church Hys., 1871.

2. Church Hys., 1903. Sta. i.-iv., the corresponding stanzas from H. A. & M. (complete edition); v., the refrain "Life passeth," Ec., from Church Hys., 1871.

Demarest, Mary, née Lee, b. at Corton Falls, New York, in 1838, married to Mr. Demarest, and d. at Pasadena, California, in 1887. The story of her poem, "I am far frae my hame," which is given as a Sacred Song by I. D. Sankey in his Sac. Songe & Solos, was written in 1861, and printed in The New York Observer. Its history, too long for quotation here, is given in Mr. Sankey's My Life and [Ĵ. J.j Sacred Songs, 1906, pp. 161-2.

Desere jam, anima, p. 269, ii. This is in a ms. at Marseilles, No. 437, which the Catalogue dates as 14th cent., and in Migne's PP. Lat. cxlix. 591. In a ms. of c. 1350 in the Bodleian (Bodl. 57), it begins at f. 153 with "Mens, affectus, ratio"; the "Jesu mi duleissime" portion beginning at f. 155. In a 14th cent, Ms. at Cambridge (Trinity Coll. 226, f. 5), it begins "Jesu mi duleissime," each section being headed with an illumination, and with a much longer text than that in Migne. Dickinson, Charles Albert, D.D., an American Congregational Minister, b. at Westminster, Vermont, July 4, 1849, and graduated at Harvard University in 1876. He held various charges to 1890, when he retired through ill health, and returned to Ceres, California. His hymn-writing has been mainly for the young. Several of these hymns are in the Christian Endeavour Hymnal and other cullections. The most widely known are "O golden day, so long desired," and "Blessed Master, I have promised" (Consecration to ] Christ). This latter was written Jan. 4, 1900. [C. L. N.]

9 God, our Father, Thee we praise. A good and full version, by John Julian, in the S.P.C.K. Ch. Hyt., 1903, No. 42.

Dies irae, pp. 195, i., 1559, ii. It seems practically certain that the "Dies irae" was written in Italy in the 18th cent.; was originally meant for private devotion; was throughout in three-line stanzas (ending either with the "Oro supplex," or with "Ut consors beatitatis"); and that to adapt it for public devotion the "Lacrymosa" and "Pie Jesu" were added on The "Lacrymosa" is certainly older than Thomas of Celano, and is found, e.g., in Mone, No. 296, as a portion of the "Libera me, Domine," from a ms. at Karlsruhe of about 1200. (See p. 1559, il. An earlier form of the "Libera" is in a Bodleian Ms. written in Cornwall in the 10th cent., and now Bodl. 572, f. 49.) See also Dreves, xlix., pp. 369-390.

Dreses, xlix., pp. 369-390.

The "Dies line" liself, it may be added, bears such a strong resemblance to an earlier poem on the Day of Judgment that one can hardly help thinking that Thomas of Celano knew it. This piece, beginning "Quique de morie redempit," is printed in Dreses, xxiii., in two forms: No. 73 from a 10th cent. us. formerly at 68, Martiat in Limoges (Paris, Lat. 1154); and No. 80 from the Brussels us. (1351), also of the 10th cent. The "Dies irea" has been found in its current form in a 13th cent. us. at Naples (ci. G. 38); and the pages containing it are photo-lithographed in F. X. Haberl's Magister Charolis, Regensburg, 1900, pp. 237, 238. The variations from the text printed at p. 285 are:—1. 7, Surget; 11. Cum; 12. Judicando; 15. Causeldit; 23, Salvando; 26, Quia; 28, laguna; 42, perenne; 41, antrictis; 49, acrinis; none of these variations being of any importance.

Various tre, have appeared since the list at pp. 297-201 was made up, but none of them seem to have come into use. Recent books have generally adopted the version of Dr. Irons (p. 298, No. 7), sometimes slightly altered, as in The English Hyl., 1906, No. 351, where it begins The English Hyl., 1900, 170, 551, many, and in "Day of wrath and doom impending," and in Dignare me, O Jesu, rogo Te, p. 201, t. This is in the Symphonia Sirenum, Cologne, 1695 (ed. 1707, p. 150); but not in the Hymnodia Sucra, Mainz, 1671.

Divine crescebas Puer, p. 302, ii. The tr. in Hys. A. & M., 1904, "The Heav'nly Child in stature grows," is the text of the old edition, with st. ii. and iv. rewritten, very much [Ĵ, J,] to the detriment of the hymn.

Doane, William Croswell, D.D., s. of Bp. G. W. Doane (p. 305, it.), was b. at Boston, Mass., March 2, 1832, and ordained D. 1858, and P. 1856, in the Prot. Episco. Church of America. He was Rector of Burlington, N.J., Hartford, Conn., and Albany; and since 1869 Prot. Episco. Bishop of Albany. He is the author of a Biography of his father, and other works. His fugitive verse was collected and pub. [in 1902], as Rhymes from Time to Time. His hymn, "Ancient of Days, Who [that] sittest throned in glory" (Holy Trinity), was written for the Bicantenary of the City of Albany, 1886. In some collections it begins with st. ii., "O Holy Father, Who hast led Thy children." For full text see The Hymnol, ed. 1892, of the Prot. Episco. Church of America, No. 311. Bp. Donne is n.n. of Oxford, and LLD. of Cambridge. [L. F. B.]

In addition to these hymns which have come into C. U., Mr. Draper has written many others of merit which are worthy of attention. They

1. Hymns for Holy Week, being translations from Hymns of the Greek Church, with Six Originals, &c.,... London: H. Frowde, 1598 (see No. 8 above). This contains 13 original and translated hymns.

2. The Victoria Book of Hymns, 1997.

3. A Memorial Service for them that are Pullen Askep in Christ. London: H. Frowde, 1898, 4 hymns (including No. 9 above).

4. The Way of the Cross (Oxford: A. R. Mowbray & Co.), x.D., with music by Dr. Sweeting.

Mr. Draper's hynna are so scattered in the Guardian, Church Monthly, and sundry magazines that it is a matter of some difficulty to trace them out. They exceed sixty in all, and are worthy, taken as a whole, to be published as a volume of sacred verse. TJ. J.1

Draw, Holy Ghost, Thy seven-fold veil. An altered form in the Hys. for the Use of Bedford School, 1900, of sts. vii.-x. of J. Kehle's "The shadow of the Almighty's cloud," p. 1157, f.

Dreves, Guido Maria, was b. Oct. 27, 1854, at Hamburg, where his father Lebrecht Dreves (author of the excellent trs. of Latin hymns pub as Lieder der Kirche, 1846; 2nd ed. 1868) was notary public. He went with his family in 1862 to Feldkirch, in Austria, and, after passing through the Gymnasium there, entered the Society of Jesus in Nov., 1869; pursuing his philosophical and theological studies in the Jesuit seminaries at Münster in Westphalia, Blyenbeek in Holland, and Ditton Hall, near Liverpool. Since 1885 he has been almost exclusively occupied with hymnological re-scarches, which have made him visit most of the principal libraries of Europe. He is now (1906) living at Munich, having left the Society of Jesus on Nov. 29, 1905. He has pub, a vol. of original sacred verse in German (Krdaze ums Kirchenjahr, 1886); a German Hymnbook (O Christ hie merle, 1885); an ed. of the Latin Hymnen Johanns von Jenstein (1886); a new ed, of the Hymnarius Paraclitensis of Peter Abelard (1891); a new ed. of the hymns of St. Ambrose (Aurelius Ambrosius, 1893), &c. His great work (in which he has been assisted since 1896 by Father Clemens Blume, and more recently also by the Rev. H. M. Bannister) is the monumental Analecta Hymnica Medii Acri, of which no fewer than 49 vols. have now appeared (see Latin Hymnody, p. 1662, i.). When the series is concluded, he hopes to found upon it a new History of Latin Hymnody, which will no doubt be of immense service for the period from 800 to 1500.

It seemed desirable to indicate the fact that a hymn had been printed in the Analecta Humnica of Dreves and Blume. The more Hymnica of Dreves and Blume. important instances are noted under the first line of the Latin, the remainder are indexed here, the first references being to the vol. and page in Dreves.

Ecce dies nobis anno revoluta peracto. St. Paulinus of Nola. For a Patronal Saint.] This is the eighth "Carmen Natalitium" of St. Paulinus, i.e. the eighth of the series of poems which he wrote annually for the festival of St. Felix of Nola (fl. 257). It was evidently written for January 14, 401, when the Goths, under Alaric, were devastating Italy; Paulinus, confiding in the protection of St. Felix, hopes for better times. M. Emile Chatelain in his Notice sur les MSS. de Poesies de S. Paulin de Nole, 1880, pp. 23-25, cites it as in a Bobbio Ms. of the 9th cent., now at Milan (Ambros. C. 74, sup.) a 9th cent. Ms. in the Bibl. Nat., Paris (Lat. 13026), &c. Printed text in Migne's PP. Lat., LXI. 638. Tr. as:—

Edwards, Basil, M.A., a of the Rev. S Edwards, was b. in 1846, and educated at the Bristol Grammar School, and G. and C. Coll., Cambridge; B.A. 1868, M.A. 1872. Ordained in 1869. After holding several curscies he became Rector of Blaisdon in 1877, and of Ashleworth in 1890. His Songs of a Parish Pricet were pub. in 1888. His hymns in C. U. include :-

1. A widow's hand in days of old. [Almapiving.] Written at Baisdon, for the Songs of a Parish Priest, and "suggested by observing that a very poorly widow almost gave since at Holy Communion" (Author's MS.). Included in H. A. & M., 1904.

2. Chiling through the shadows, [Processional.] Written at Troubridge for Aimor Charda, pub. 1875. "This hymn took shape in my mind from the sight of Salisbury Spire and Cross vising through the morning mists on the day of my Ordination to the Priesthood in 1870." Included in H. A. & M., 1904.

[J. J.]

Eia mea anima, p. 1561, ü. The full text of this hymn is also in Dreves, xlviii., p. 515. Another tr. of the "Hen quid jaces" text is "Ah! Lord God, the world's Creator," by G. R. Woodward in his Songs of Syon, 1904. [J. M.]

Eia, O dulcis anima. [Holy Communion.] Mone, No. 281, gives this from a 15th cent. us. at Munich (Clm. 3012) as an "Exhortation to the soul at the reception of the Body of Christ." In a ms. of c. 1300 in the B. M. (Arundel 374, f. 77) it begins "Eis, dulcis anima"; in a ms. of 1518 at Berlin it begins "Ecce, dulcis anima" (No. 849, f. 50; so Catalogue). Tr. as :-

L. Haste, my seul! then sister awest, by J. D. Chambers, in his landa Syon, 1957, p. 226. In the Hyl. for St. John's, Aberdeen, 1870, No. 228, it begins "Heste, my soul, thy Lord to greek."

Elliott, Charlotte, pp. 328, 1; 1561, ii, j Further research enables us to give amended dates to some of her hymns as follows :-

1. With tearful eyes I look around (No. 5). This is in the 1835 Appendix to The Invalid's H. Hk.

2. My only Saviour, when I feel (No. 8). Also in the 1835 Appendix.

3. Father, when Thy child is dying (No. 11). in the 1833 Appendix.
4. I want that adominates

4. I want that adorning divine, p. 559, i. In the Christian Romembrancer, 1849, p. 22. [J. J.]

Elliott, Emily E. S., p. 328, E. The following additional hymns by Miss Elliott have recently come into C. U.:-

- 1. Brothers, sisters, pray for us, [Histonaries Furewell.] Appeared in the C. M. Gleaner, Sept. 1895, p. 149, and entitled "The Missionaries Departing Petition." In the Church Miss. H. Bl., 1899.
- 2. Rabboni, Master, we have heard. [Consecration of Self to Duty.] In the C. M. Cleaner, Dec. 1895, p. 195. It was sung for the first time at the Ulcaners' Union Anniversary, 1895. In the Church Miss. H. Bk., 1889.
- 3. Full consecration! heart and spirit yielded. [Full Consecration.] Given in Hys. of Consecration and Faith, 1902.
- 4. They come and go, the seasons fair. [Second Advant.] In the C. M. Glezner, Nov. 1891, p. 172, as "What will be when the King comes?" It was song for the first time at the Glezners' Union Anniversary, Oct. 30, 1891. In the Church Mits. H. Bk., 1899.

Miss Elliott was born at Brighton, July 22, 1836, and died at Mildmay, London, Aug. 3, [J. J.] 1897.

Ellison, John Henry Joshua, M.A., son of Canon Ellison, formerly Vicar of Windsor, was born at Edensor, Derbyshire, on March 18, 1855, and educated at Eton and Merton Coll., Oxford; B.A. in honours 1878, M.A. 1881. Ordained in 1880 to the Curacy of Maidstone, he became Dom. Chap. to Abp. Tait 1881-2; Curate of Kensington 1883-85; Vicar of St. Gabriel, Pimlico, 1885-94; and since 1894 Vicar of Windsor. He was successively Hon. Chap., Reader, and Chap, in Ord. to Queen Victoria, and is at present (1906) Reader to the King at Windsor Castle, and Chaplain-in-Ordinary. His very striking hymn for Foreign Missions, "O living God Whose voice of old," was written for the Jubilee of the S.P.G., and first appeared in the S.P.G. Hys., Sonnets, and other Poems, for the Bicentenary, 1900, No. xiv., and in the 1904 ed. of Hys. A. & M. [J. J.]

Elpis, p. 329, i. Recent researches have led us to conclude that there is no reason to regard Elpis as the author of Aurea luce, p. 92, 1; and that none of the early MSS. attribute it to her. She is not mentioned as a hymn-writer by recent authorities on carly Latin Hymnody, e.g., by Ebert or Manitius (p. 655, i.), or by Rietschol (Herzog-Hauch Realencyklopädie, 1901, xi., pp. 399-409).

The traditional account of her, p. 329, i. (as given in the Alogia Meniorum, 1680, p. 103, of Jerome of Ragues, and more fully by Darras, Hitt, de l'Eglire, 1862, vol. xiv., p. 264, &c.), is that she was b. at Messina in Sicily, was the first wife of the philosopher Roethius, shared bis exile, and d. at Pavla (not Padua) about 493, having to a non who herems commits in the war-see. shared bis cxite, and d. at Pavia (not Padua) about sus, leaving two sons who became consuls in the year 500. Isochibus, however, was born little, if any, extier than 475, and did not go into exile before 522, being at that time the hashand of Rusticiana, whose two sons by Boethius were consuls in the year 522 (Poic. Christ. Biog., i., 371; Erach and Gruber, Encyklop. J. X., p. 224, &c.).

En dies est dominics, p. $30, ii. In the 1904 ed. of Hys. A. & M. the Compilers' altered form of Dr. Neale's tr. as "Again the Lord's old and "Complete Edition" is on sale, its own day is here," is re-written in several lines, and st. v. is entirely new. [J, J.]

England Hymnody, Church of, pp. $31, ii. and 1580, i. Since the issue of this Dictionary in January 1892 great interest has been manifested in the Church of England in hymnological matters, and much activity has taken place in the compilation and publication of hymnals for use in public worship. Omitting Mission hymn-books both for home and foreign work, and collections for the Universities, Colleges, and Public Schools, which are dealt with elsewhere, we have the following, viz.:—

1. The Yattendon Hymnol, 1899. The full title of the book of words of this collection is The Small Hymn-Book. The Word-Book of the Yattendon Hymnal. There is also a musical edition. The hymnus number 100 only, As a book for common use in divine worship it is too limited in extent and design; but as a small quarry for hymnal compilers it is of value, especially for translated hymns. It was compiled by Mr. B. S. Bridges.

2. Additional Hymns with Tunes for Use with any other Church Hymnal, 1903. This collection was compiled by the Rev. C. W. A. Brooke. The numbering of the hymns begins with 801 and extends to 973. The Preface states that "this book is designed for use with and not in place of other Church Hymnals. Hence those hymns which are found in all such books, and without which no Church Hymnal would be complete, are not included." design of the book as thus outlined is good, and its execution well done.

3. Church Hymns, S.P.C.K., 1903. This collection was compiled by a Committee whose names are given in its Preface. The old edition of 1871 was withdrawn by the Society and the Committee were given a free hand in the compilation. With regard to English and American hymns the original texts were in almost all instances reproduced, the exceptions being confined to the correction of false rhythms; the change, in a few instances, from the singular to the plural; and the bringing of physical and scientific allusions in line with modern knowledge and ascertained facts. With translations from other languages the Committee gave themselves greater latitude. A notable feature of the collection is the section of "Hymns of the Ancient Church," containing 23 hymns for Daily Services, all and execution as a hymnal it is admirable. 4. Hymns Ancient and Modern for Use in the Services of the Church, 1904. This collection, so long and eagerly expected, has been received with great coolness. The changes in the texts of the hymns which appear in this new edition are very numerous, and also in many instances weak and unnecessary. A praiseworthy desire to obtain more exact renderings of the Latin hymns than those given in former editions of this collection has frequently resulted in bringing to light various physio-logical details which in those editions were veiled in paraphrases, and thus better suited for use by mixed congregations. Taken as a whole, and judged on its own merits, this new edition is a strong book. Whilst, however, the written before the eighth century. In design growth in public favour will be slow, notwithstanding the publication of alternative texts of a hymn or two, the reprinting of some favourite tunes, the publication of the texts of the Latin hymns therein (1907), and the issue of the Historical edition now (1907) in the press.

5. Sings of Syon. A Collection of Hymns and Sacred Poems mostly Translated from Ancient Greek, Latin, and German Sources, 1904. The editor of this collection is the Rev. G. R. Woodward. It contains, in the 2nd edition (1905), 217 hymns and doxologies. This limited provision for congregational use is explained in the Preface, in which we are informed "that this book is not intended to compete with existing hymnals, but only to supplement them." The keynote of the col-lection is also supplied in the Preface: "In England of to-day we have two classes of people to consider, the faithful, and the enquirers after truth. For the former Songs of Syon has been compiled." Another feature is the music (Plainsong Melodies, &c.), with which we have not to deal except to set forth the cause of the unusual metres which abound in the book.

 The Hymner, Containing Translations of the Hymns from the Sarum Breviary, together with Sundry Sequences & Processions from Various Sources, 1904. The editor is the Rev. G. H. Palmer, and the collection contains 134 trs. from the Latin. The Preface says: "In this little volume are contained translations of all, save two, of the Hymns from the Sarum Breviary. . . . Of the total number [in the book] nearly one half are from the pen of the late Dr. J. M. Neale, of whose vigorous and scholarly renderings the editor has gladly availed himself,"

7. The New Office Hymn Book. A Com-panion to the Book of Common Prayer, 1905. This is an expanded form of the Office Hymn Book, 1889 (p. 1620, t.), and the enlarged edition of the same, 1895. The total number of pieces, including prose and verse, is 860, and it is no longer designed as an Appendix to any other hymnal. Its divisions are: Part I. "Introits, Graduals, &c," . . in Prose and Verse; Part II. "Office Hymns," consisting of trs. from the Latin. Part III. "Hymns New and Old, Secred Songs and Carols." The book is somewhat confusing in its design, and, with the exception of the renderings from the Latin by Dr. Neale and a few other well-known translators, the tra.

8. The English Hymnal, 1906. This collection is edited by six prominent members of the ultra-Anglican party in the Church of England, and is the finest hymnal from their point of view in the English language. If some fifteen to twenty hynns at most were eliminated it would be a formidable rivel to the new edition of Hys. Ancient and Modern. An abridged edition, omitting Nos. 185, 195, 208, 213, and 350, and giving alterations in Nos. 184, 200, 218, and 253 (pub. March 1907), has removed many, but not all, the objections against it as a companion hymnal to The Book of Common Prayer.

With respect to historical and biographical companions to hymnals, Mr. Moorsom's second edition of his Historical Companion to Hymna Ancient and Modern, 1903, is the only work of the kind of any importance. This edition is well done, and in the face of the fact that the Editor is totally blind, it is a marvel of accuracy both in its historical details and in the original texts of the translated hymns, which are given in full. From specimen pages of the Historical ed. of Hys. A. & M. now (1907). in the press, this, we judge, will be a valuable addition to hymnological literature. [J. J.]

Έξεγερθέντες τοῦ ὕπνου, p. 1668, ii. From the Horologion, Venice, 1896, p. 2. This work contains the Offices for the eight canonical hours, this hymn being for early morning. Additional trs. are :-

From the calm of sleep awaking. By J. Brownile, in his Hys. of the Holy Eastern Church, 1902, p. 74.
 Rais'd from sleep with meraing light. By G. R. Woodward, in his Songs of Sport, 1904.

The original Greek is in an early 12th cent, MS. in the Bodleian (Baroc. 21, f. 176). [J. J.] Es ist ein Ros entsprungen, p. 364, & Other trs. are:

1. The noble Stem of Jesse, by G. R. Woodward, in his Hys. and Carole, 1897, No. 2.
2. I know a plant—it springeth. From sts. i., ii., xxi., of the Spring 1994, No. 132.

Essery, William Alfred, was born in the parish of St. Mary Redeliffe, Bristol, Oct. 16, 1830, and educated at Cheshunt College. He was Minister of the Marlborough Congregational Chapel, Old Kent Road, London, for 23 years, when he retired through ill-health in 1883. He died suddenly in 1904. Five of his hymns were included in Essory and Proudman's London Chants, Anthems and Melodies, 1870, and 118 in his Hys. of Penttence, Prayer, and Praise, 1872. A few of these have come into C. U. in temperance and other colls. [J. J.]

Est-ce vous que je vois, p. 1686, ii., under Pollock, T. B. This hymn by J. Bridaine is in Cantiques . . . de Saint Sulpice, Paris. 1765, p. 126. His own Cantiques Spirituels, &c., were pub. at Montpellier in 1748.[J. M.]

"Εστωσαν ύμῶν αὶ ὀσφύες περιεζωσμέναι. These are the opening words of St. Luke xii. 85-40. The passage is rendered by G. R. Woodward in his Songs of Syon, 1904, into metre as "O let your loins be girt agen.

[J. J.] This in Eternal Son, eternal Love. This in the 1904 ed. of the Meth. H. Bk., No. 43, is an altered form of Pt. ii. ("Son of Thy Sire's eternal love") of "Father of all, whose powerful voice," p. 368, ii.

Evans, A. E., p. 357, ii. Although appointed Sec. to the S. A. M. Soc. he did not take up the work. He d. May 21, 1896.

Evans, William Edwin, b. at Balti-more, July 11, 1851. He is a Minister of the Meth. Episco, Church, South, has held several pastorates, and has been Chaplain at Randolph-Macon College. Of his verses contributed to various periodicals," Come, O Thou God of grace [Dedication of a Place of Worskip] is given in the Amer. Meth. Hyl., 1905. [L. F. B.]

Even as those mysterious four.

This, in the H. Book for the Use of Wellington | College, 1902, is composed of sts. iii.-vi, of J. Keble's "O who shall dare in this frail scene," p. 618, i. 12, slightly altered.

Everett, William, M.D., s. of the Hon. Edward Everett, was b. at Watertown, Massachusetts, Oct. 10, 1839, and educated at Harvard Coll. and Trinity Coll., Cambridge, England, M.A. 1869. He became Latin Tutor in Harvard Coll. in 1870, and Assistant Professor of Latin in 1873. He entered the Unitarian Ministry in 1872. Putnam gives six of his hymns in Singers and Songs, &c., 1874, p. 504. The best are "Deal gently with us, Lord" [God's tenderness], from the American Christian Begister, 1866; and "Almighty Father, Thou didst frame" [God the Father], "written for the Unitarian Festival at the Music Hall, May 27, 1869." He has pub. Callege Essays; School Sermons, and other works. He is LLD. of [C. L. N.] Williams College, Mass.

Ex more docti mystico, p. 369, i. In the 1904 ed of Hys. A. & M., to the tr. as in the old edition "By precepts taught of ages past," a new stanza (iv.) has been added by the Compilers, and ll. I, 2 of the present st. viii. are re-written.

Ex quo salus mortalium, p. 359, i. The recast version of I. Williams's tr. as given in the old ed. of Hye. A. & M .- " For men the Saviour shed "-made by the Compilers in 1861, is replaced in the 1904 ed. by "Our Lord the path of suffering trod," by I. Williams, but with many alterations, the omission of Williams's st. v. and the addition of "Alleluia" to each stanza.

Exite filiae Syon, videte vestrum regem. [Passiontide.] Probably written in Germany in the 17th cent. It is in the Mainz G. B. (R. C.), 1661, p. 268, the Hymnodia Szera, Mainz, 1671, p. 52, and in Daniel, ii., p. 348. In Königsfeld, ii., p. 342, it begins "Exite Sion filiae." Tr. as:—

Daughters of Sion, see your Eing, by J. M. Nesle in his Med. Hya., 1851, p. 151, repeated in G. R. Woodward's Songs of Syon, 1964, No. 27. [J. M.]

48. Hail, sainted Mungo, hall. From No. 8.
49. I bow to Thee, sweet will of God. From "I worship Thee," p. 569, il.
50. They whom we loved on earth. From "O it is sweet to think," p. 368, i.
51. Vincent! like Mother Mary, thou. From No. 25.

When Dr. Faber's hymns which are in C. U. are enumerated, the total falls little short of one hundred. In this respect he outnumbers most of his contemporaries. [J. M.]

Fagan, Frances. In The Sunny Side, N.Y., 1875, two hymns which have come into use in G. Britain are signed "Fanny Fegan." These are:-

Mine be the tongue that always shrinks. Kindness.
 The still small voice that speaks within. Conscionce.

Miss Fagan was a Sunday S. Teacher in connection with Dr. W. H. Farness's Church at Philadelphia. Her hymns appeared in her Hys. for the Sunday S. of the First Cong. Unitarian Church, Phila., 1866. [J. M.]

Fain, O my babe, I'd have thee know, p. 987, i. This hymn, by Mrs. Seffery, appeared in the Evangelical Mag., May, 1809.

Fain would my soul with wonder trace. J. A. Knight. [The Meroies of God.] From Dobell's New Sel., 1806, No. 419 p. 626, ii.) into a few American hymnals.

Farin. A pen-name of Mrs. Grace W. Hinsdale.

Farrar, F. W., p. 365, ii. Dr. Farrar became Dean of Canterbury in 1895, and d. at Canterbury, March 22, 1903. His Life, &c., by his son, was pub. in 1904.

Father, blessing every seed-time. This is an altered form of Dr. Monsell's "Bounteous blesser of the seed-time," p. 763, i. 41. In some collections it is appointed for "Bogation Days," as in The Hymnary, 1872, where it is wrongly given to Judith Madan. [J. M.]

Father, hear Thy children's praises, p. 187, i. This is altered in the Hys. for use in the Chapel of Marlborough College, 1899, to " Father, hear the thunkful praises.

Father, I know that all my life, p. 367, ii. Appeared in a Sel. of Scripture Poetry, edited by L. Squire, 1848, p. 124.

Father, live, by all things feared. C. Wesley. [Dazology.] From Hys. and Sacred Poems, 1740, p. 100, and Hys. to the Trinity, 1746, No. iii., into The Meth. Hymn Book, 1904. (P. Works, iii., p. 345.)

Father of mercies, condescend. This hymn has been attributed to J. Lawson, p. 667, I., and to T. Morrell, p. 770, i. We find that the claim of authorship put forth for J. Lawson must be abandoned, p. 1568, ii.

Father of mercies, in Thine house, p. 370, i. Since the pub. of this Dict. in 1892 the following facts concerning this hymn have come under our notice :-

At the Ordination of Abraham Tozer at Norwich, June 20, 1743, the sermon was preached by the Rev. R. Frost, and the Charge delivered by Dr. Doddridge. The Sermon and Charge were pub together the same year. At the end of the Charge this hymn is printed together with this "Postscript," by Dr. Hoddridge:—

"As the Went of Praims or Hymns, peculiarly suitable to these Occasions, has often been regretted an our opensation parts, when we have generally been confined to the 132nd or 133rd Praims, I was desired by ment of the Isan or Isan France, I was tended by everal of my Brettren to publish that ushick followed this Charge; and I accordingly do it without any further Apology. The Keader will easily perceive it is a Kind of the outer Paraphrase on Eps. iv. 8 and seq. And it is One of some Hundreds lying by me on a Variety of Scripture Subjects."

The original pamphlet is in the Church House Lib. See there Frost, Richard. [J. J.]

Father of mercies, let our praise. This, in the Marlborough Coll. Hymns, 1899, is an altered form of T. Cotterill's "Father of mercies! let our songs," p. 363, ii. 3.

Father, Thy Presence ever near. Senediction.] This bymn was given in [Benediction.] This hymn was given in Longfellow and Johnson's Hys. of the Spirit, 1864, No. 135, in 3 st. of 4 l., and signed in the Index "N. Hale." In The Pilgrim Hyl., Boston, 1904, st. i., ii. are repeated with the same A Nathan Hale, b. Nov. 12, 1818, signature. is known to us, but we are unable to identify him as the author of this hymn,

Father, to Thee our life is owing. H. J. Buckell [Commemoration.] Written H. J. Buckell. [Commemoration.] Written in 1842, and first pub. in Ps. and Hys. for the use of the Chapel of Rughy School, 1848, no. 52, and appointed "For the Sunday nearest to the 12th June," with the note :-

one 1211 Julie, With the BOIC:—

"Dr. Arnold died, most suddenly, on Sunday morning, June 13th, MDOCKLII, the day before his 47th birthday.
For some time before his death, and in the hour of mortal agony, his mind constantly dwelt on our Saviour's words,
'Thomas, because thou hast seen me, thou hast believed; blessed are they that have not seen, and yet have believed.'"

See Dean Stanley's Life of Dr. Arnold, 1844, vol. ii., p. 324, and slee note the author has worked in the passage from St. John, xx. 29, in sts. iv., v. of the hymn, [J. M.]

Father, Who art alone. Edith J. [For Absent Ones.] Given in Mrs. Hawkins's Home Hymn Book, 1885, No. 171, in 5 st. of 6 l., and signed "E. J." In some later collections the signature is expanded into "Edith J." A desire is expressed by the authoress that she may remain unknown. Another hymn, "Holy Father, throned on high" (On behalf of Orphans), is given in the Home H. Book, 1885, with the "E. J." signature. [J. J.]

Fether! Whose love from highest heaven. This in the Clifton College  $\bar{H}$ . Bk., 1894, is an altered form of "Father of heaven, whose love profound," p. 369, i.

Fearless, calm, and strong in love, p. 575, i. 3. This hymn is by T. Davis, p. 272, ii. It was ascribed to E. H. Jackson in error.

Felix dies, quam proprio, pp. 874, ii.; 1868, ii. In the 1904 ed. of Hys. A. & M. the old tr., "O blessed day when first was poured," is in great part rewritten, only two lines romaining as published by J. Chandler in 1837. The text of The English Hyl., 1908, No. 36, is J. Chandler's, with the omission of his st. iv. and a recast of the doxology. [J. J.]

Felix per omnes festum mundi cardines. St. Paulinus of Aquileia (?). [SS.Peter and Paul.] This is evidently later than, and modelled on, the "Aurea luce," p. 98, i. In the modelled on, the "Aurea luce," p. 98, i. In the Poetas Latini Aevi Carolini, Berlin, 1881. i., p. 136, it is given among the doubtful poems of Paulinus (b. 726, d. 802) sometime Patriarch of Aquileia. It is in two eleventh cent. Mss. in the B. M. (Vesp. D. xii., f. 84b; Add. 30848, f. 168b), in a Bodleian Ms. of c. 1925 (16923, f. 180b), and many others, Printed text in Drevet, ii., p. 53; Werner, No. 136; Daniel, i., No. 226, iv., p. 164, &c. The complete poem was tr. by J. D. Chambers in his Landa Syon, 1866, p. 77, as "With joy to-day through-out the confines of the earth." Two portions were also used for festivals of St. Peter alone :-

i. Petrus bestus extensions of St. Peter slone:—
i. Petrus bestus extensions agreed. [St. Peter: Chains.] In the Roman Bree., Venice, 1478. In the Roman Bree., 1832, it begins "Miris media," and this form is tr. as "Right wondownly released, see Peter freedom gains," in the Office H. Bk., 1889, No. 777 (1905, No. 248).

Felkin, Ellen Thorneycroft, née Fowler, the elder daughter of Sir Henry Fowler, and granddaughter of the Rev. Joseph Fowler, Weslevan Minister, was married to A. L. Felkin, Senior Assistant Master of Eltham College, in 1993. Her hymn, "Now the year is crowned with blessing" (Harvest), is No. 945 in The Meth. H. Book 1904. In addition to several popular novels, she published Versee, Grave and Gay, 1901. From this work, p. 35, the above hymn is taken. [J, J,]

Ferguson, Andrew Carswell Fergus, was b. in 1855 at Alexandria, near Dumberton, The family soon after removed to Dumbarton and then to Glasgow, where he attended the University. In 1880 he entered the Theological Hall of the U. P. Church, and in 1883 that of the E. U. Church. On Oct. 15, 1884, he was inducted as minister of the E. U. Church at Arbroath. He resigned this charge on Oct. 9, 1888, and in the following year went to Australia. He is now (1905) officiating at Northcote, near Melbourne. His hymn,

Dear Lord, I now respond to Thy sweet call [Frith and Fenitence], was written in 1884, and appeared in the Glasgow Christian Neur of Sept. 19, 1885. It is repeated, unaftered, in the Scottish Presh. Church Hymnury, 1298, No. 177, and in other colls. [J. M.]

Field, Eugene, an American journalist who has written somewhat extensively for children, was b. at St. Louis, Missouri, Sep. 2, 1850, educated at the University of Missouri, and d. Nov. 4, 1895. His published works include Little Book of Western Verse, 1889: Second Book of Verse, 1891; and Love Songs of Childhood, 1894. A limited number of his hymns are in C. U. in America, and specimens of his verse are given in Horder's Treasury of Amer. Sacred Song, 1900, pp. 283-287. See also "There burns a star o'er Bethlehem town." [J. J.]

Finita jam sunt praella, pp. 278, ii.; 1563, ii. This is in the Symphonia Sirenum, Cologne, 1695 (ed. 1707, p. 96); but not in the Hymnodia Sacra, Mainz, 1671. In Church Hys., 1903, F. Pott's authorised tr., as in 1871, "The strife is o'er, the battle done," is given with the omission of his st. iv. The Hys. A. & M., 1904, text is that of the old edition, with a slight alteration in st. i., and the restoration of Mr. Pott's original st. iv. [J. J.]

Fischer, A. F. W., p. 277, i. Dr. Fischer had begun collecting materials for an anthology of German 17th cent, hymns, This work is being completed by Pfarrer W. Tümpel as Das deutsche evangelische Kirchenlied des siebzehnten Jahrhunderts (Gütersloh, Bertelsmaun), i., 1904; ii., 1905; iii., 1906. A few hymns in these vols, have been traced to sources earlier than those mentioned in this Dictionary, and for convenience this additional information is given here:-

Forty days Thy seer of old, p. 1579, i. This hymn by Jackson Mason is reduced to 6 sts, in the 1904 ed. of Hys. A. & M., and begins with st. iii., "Forty days of Eastertide."

Forward! be our watchword, p. 884, In Mrs. Alford's Life of Dean Alford, 3rd ed., 1874, pp. 447-8, Mrs. Alford says:—

"On Whitson Tuesday, June 14th (1870), the tenth [7 ninth] Festival of the Parochial Choirs of the Canterbury Diocesau Choral Union was celebrated by a service oury processon unions union was celebrated by a service in the Cathedral, performed by 800 vol.es., . . After it was over he made arrangements with the Noclety for the performance at their next Festival (Whitsun Tuesday, 1971) of a Processional Hymn, for which he furnished the words and music. It was his last composition of this kind."

In the Life of J. G. Wood, the Precentor at that time of the Choral Union, 1890, pp. 47-51, we have a fuller account of the origin of the hymn, to this effect :-

The Pean composed a hymn at Mr. Wood's request. On receiving it he pointed out to the Dean "that the hymn, while excellent in its way, was not at all adapted to be sung upon the march. Would be kindly go into the Cathedral, walk slowly along the course which the procession would take, and compose another hymn as he did so." That the lean did, and "Forward! be our watchword" was the result. The Dean also supplied the treble and bass, and Miss Lindsay (Mrs. J. Worthington Risa) the alto and tenor of the tune which was sing at the Festival.  $[J,\ J,]$

Forward, soldiers, bold and fear-less. [Christian Conflict.] This is in the Cong. Mission Hyl., 1890, and others. In School Hys., 1891, it is ascribed to Henry Downton, but his son thinks this is a mistake. It is a mission hymn, evidently modelled on "Ho, my comrades," p. 150, i. [J. M.]

"Stand still and see!" yes, see to-day. Confidence.
 Thou wit show me, Mighty Father. The Way of Life.
 Trust and tremble—that is all. Trust in God.

Fox, Eleanor Frances, daughter of the Rev. B. E. Fox, was b. in London, Feb. 24. 1875. In common with her father and other members of her family, Miss Fox has taken great interest in the work of Foreign Missions, on behalf of which she has written several hymns for the Church Missionary Society. Of these hymns the following are in the Church Miss. H. Bh., 1899:—(1) "God of all pity and all power." (2) "I know that Jesus died for me." (3) "Saviour to Whom the sound of sorrow's sighing."

Fox, Henry Elliott, M.A., son of Henry Wetson Fox, b. at Musulipatam, S. India, on Oct. 21, 1841, and educated at Harrow and Trinity Coll., Cambridge; B.A. (3rd class Cl. Trip.) 1864; M.A. 1869. Ordained in 1869, be was Curate of St. Ebbe, Oxford, 1869-73; Vicar of Christ Ch., Westminster, 1873-82, and of St. Nicholas, Durham, 1882-1895. From 1895 he has been Hon. Sec. of the C.M.S. He is also Commiss. for Uganda (1890), and Mombasa (1900). His deep interest in Foreign Missions is well known. He became a Preb. of St. Paul's in 1901. His hymns in C. U. include the following :-

1. O King of glory, God of grace. [Foreign Missions.] Written in 1999 for the centenary of the C.M.S., and included in the C.M. H. Hk. of the same year.

2. Send forth the Gospel. Let it run. [Foreign Missions.] Contributed to the C. M. H. Bk., 1899, and repeated in Byt. of Occusion. and Faith, 1902.

same Mag., March, 1823, p. 182, the same text is repeated, with the following Preface:-

"A hymn sold to be composed by the Rev. Reginald Heber (the newly appointed Bishop of Calcutta) for the purpose of being sing in Whittington Church, Shrepshire, in which parish a Missionary Association was formed on Shuday, April 16, 1820."

The Editor was evidently unaware that the bymn was written for and sung in Wrexham Parish Church in 1819, and that he had printed [J. J.] it in his Mag. in July, 1821,

From Sion's hill my help descends. E. Osler. [Ps. czzi.] Included in the Mitre H. Book, 1836, in 3 st. of 4 l., and the Hys. for Use in the Chapel of Marlborough [J. J.] College, 1899.

Gannett, William Channing, M.A., s. of Dr. Ezra Stiles Gannett, was b. at Boston, March 13, 1840, and educated at Harvard Coll., 1860, and the Divinity School, Cambridge. Entered the Unitarian Ministry in 1868, and after filling several pastorates he became Pastor of the Unitarian Church at Rochester, N.Y., 1889. Mr. Gannett's hymns, mainly written for special occasions, were included in great By the Rev. Reginald Heber." This is the part in The Thought of God in Hymns and earliest printed text we have seen. In the Poems, Boston, 1st Scries 1885, 2nd Scries 1894, the combined production of F. L. Hosmer (q.v.) has arisen, mainly, we think, from the fact that and himself. Of Mr. Gannett's hymns the the opening line of Mrs. Gates's hymn, written following are in C. U.:-

These annotations are based upon Ms. notes kindly supplied by the author. The use made of Mr. Gannett's hymns shows that their poetic beauty, and loving sympathy with all things beautiful and pure, are widely appreciated in America and to a limited extent in Great Britain also.

Ganse, H. D., p. 404, i. He d. Sept. 8, 1891. The following hymns, additional to those already noted, have recently come into C. U. :-

1. The blessed saints about Thee. [Second Advent.]
Dated 1887. Included in Stryker's Church Song, 1889, and his College Hymnol., 1997.
2. It was no love of mine, dear Lord. [Love.] Dated 1887, and included in Stryker's collections. [L. F. B.]

Garrett, Charles, was born at Shaites-bury, 1823, entered the Wesleyan Ministry in 1849, President of the Conference in 1882, and died in 1900. His hymn, "There is a glorious work" (Temperance), is No. 959 in The Meth. Hymn Book, 1904. [J. J.]

Gates, Ellen, p. 1565, i., now (1906) of New York city, was born at Torrington, Conn., and married to Isaac E. Gates. Her poems, &c., were published as Treasures of Kurium, 1895. Concerning Dr. March's hymn, "Hark! the voice of Jesus crying" (q.v.), and Mrs. Gates's "If you cannot on the ocean," some confusion in 1860, and the first line of Dr. March's second stanza are nearly the same, i.e., "If you cannot on the ocean," and "If you cannot cross the ocean." The incident which associates the late President Lincoln's name with this hymn is thus set forth by Mr. Philip Phillips in his Singing Pilgrim, 1866, p. 97:—

Singing Pilgrims, 1866, p. 97:—

"The words of this truly beautiful song ['If you cannot on the occan'] were written by Mrs. Elien H. Gates... When our lamented President Lincoln heard Mr. Phillips sing it at the Hall of Representatives in Washington, Feb. 29, 1865, he was overcome with emotion, and sent up the following written request igiven in facsimile on p. 91 to Hon. Wim. H. Seward, Chairman, for its repetition:— Near the end let us have "Your Mission" [the title of the hymn] repeated by Mr. Phillips. Don't say I called for it. A. Lincoln."

It was through this incident that the hymn became known through America as " President Lincoln's favourite hymn."

Gates, Jessie Rose. Concerning Mrs. Gates we can ascertain nothing beyond the fact that her hymn "There is a peace that cometh after sorrow" [Peace] in Sursum Corda, Phile., 1898, appeared in the Century Magazine, 1897. [L. F. B.]

Gates, Mary Cornelia, née Bishop, daughter of William S. Bishop, of Rochester, N.Y., was married in 1873 to Merrill E. Gates, Secty, to the U.S. Indian Commissioners. Her hymns:-

1. Sand Theu, O Lord, to every place [Missions], dated 1888 2. Thy love to me, O Christ (Union with Christ),

are included in Sursum Corda, 1898. [L. F. B.]

Gerhardt, Paulue, pp. 409, U., 1565, L. The most recent ed. of Gerhardt's hymns is in vol. iii. of the Fischer-Tümpel Deutsche evangelische Kirchenlied des Siebzehnten Jahrhunderte, 1906, Nos. 389-495. In fixing the text the compilers have been enabled to use the recently discovered 1647, 1653 and 1657 Berlin eds. of Cruger's Praxis Pictatis Melica. [J.M.]

German Hymnody, pp. 418-418, 1666, Some of the German reviewers of the Dictionary of Hymnology complained that no attempt was made to give a sketch of the history of Roman Catholic vernacular hymns since the Reformstion. That, however, was Dr. Schaff's misfortune rather than his fault. The only book on the subject then available was Dr. K. A. Beck's Geschichte des Katholischen Kirchen-Medes, Cologne, 1878, and Dr. Schaff might well be pardoned if he gave up in despair the f attempt to form a sketch on that. So far as the present writer has been able to discover, no adequate history of the period has yet appeared. The sketch by Dr. W. Bäumker in the Kirchenlexicon of Wetzer and Welte (vii., 599-623), so far as the Post-Reformation period is concerned, is little more than a list of hymn books. The excellent sketch of modern Catholic Religious Poetry in Dr. O. Wetzstein's Religiöse Lyrik der Deutschen im 19. Jahrhundert (Neustrelitz: Barnewitz Hofbuchhandlung, 1891, pp. 7-123) begins practically with 1800, and is of little use in compiling an outline of the history of hymns, properly so called. Only a mere fraction of the hymns in the German Catholic collections can be traced to their authors; and so, e.g., in Father Dreves's O Christ hie merk (Freiburg : Herder, 1885) only 18 of the 150 bymns have the names of authors given, and of these four are by Gerhardt and one by Lavater. Dr. W. Bänniker's Katholische deutsche Kirchenlied in seinen Singueisen (Freiburg: Herder, i., 1886, iii., 1891) is indeed a first-rate piece of work, based throughout on the original sources, and with a great amount of useful bibliographical and biographical material; but it is, after all, a history of certain selected melodies, and only incidentally of certain hymns which happen to have been set to them. The University of Breslau recognised the merit of the work by conferring the degree of D.D. on its author; but the occlesiastical authorities allowed him to remain the priest of an obscure country parish, where he d. March 3, 1905, without being able to see the last volume through the press, leaving that to his brother, Professor Clemens Bäumker. Dr. Johannes Zahn happily lived to complete his monumental work on the Melodien der deutschen evangelischen Kirchenlieder, aus den Quellen geschöpft (Gütersloh: Bertelsmann, 6 vols., 1889–93); and Dr. Robert Eitner also saw the completion of his most useful Biographisch-Bibliographisches Quellen-Lexicon der Musiker und Musikgelchrten (Leipzig: Breitkopf & Härtel, 10 vols., 1900-1904). The Allgemeine deutsche Biographie, the great German biographical dictionary, concluded the letter Z in vol. 45, 1900, and has since been publishing supplemental volumes, but has not yet followed the example of the Dictionary of National Biography, by issuing an Index and Epitome. The eighth and last-completed volume of Goedeke's Grundries (see p. 1565, i.) appeared in 1905. The Blätter für Hymnologie (p. 1565, i.) was incorporated in the issues of the Siona (Gütersloh: Bertelsmann) in 1892 and 1893, was then pub. separately (Kahla: F. Beck), but finally ceased with the number for Dec. 1894. The only recent purely hymnological work of importance is the Deutsche evangelische Kirchenlied des siebzehnten Jahrhunderts (Gütersloh: Bertelsmann) begun by Dr. A. F. W. Fischer and carried on by W. Tümpel, vol. i. 1904, ii. 1905, iii. 1906, Dr. A. F. W. Fischer's Kirchliche Dichtung hauptsächlich in Deutschland (Gotha: Perthes, 1892) is written in text-book style. A more popular sketch is the Geschichte des deutschen erangelischen Kirchenliedes, by Wilhelm Nelle (Hamburg: G. Schloessmann, 1904); and the same publisher has issued a series entitled Unsere Kirchenliederdichter (vol. iv., 1905), with interesting and careful sketches of individual hymn-writers, by various authors, with many portraits and other illustrations. Wilhelm Nelle also prepared a good and careful ed. of the hymns of Tersteegen (Gütersloh: Rectalenge 1807) Bertelsmann, 1897).

Gilbert, Rosa, née Mulholland, dau. of J. S. Mulliolland, M.D., of Belfast, and wife of Sir John T. Gilbert, is the author of Fagrant Verses, 1886, and many novels, &c. Her hymn, " Give me, O Lord, a heart of Grace " (Resignation), is in Horder's Worship Song, 1905, and others. It is from her Vagrant Verses, p. 154, where it is given as "A Prayer." [J. M.]

Gilder, Richard Watson, I.I.D., was b. at Bordentown, N.J., Feb. 8, 1844, and oducated at a Seminary at Flushing, I.I. He was associate-editor of Scribner's Monthly (now The Century) from its commencement in 1870 to 1881, when, on the death of J. G. Holland, he became editor-in-chief. His poetical works are somewhat numerous, and include The New Day, 1875; Lyrics, 1885; Two Worlds, 1891; Foems and Inscriptions, 1901; and In the Heights, 1905. His hymus in C. U. are:—

1976. 1885, p. 5.

2. Forgive, O Lord, the doubts that break Thy promises to me. [Doubting repented of.] Pated 1279, in The Fügrim Hyl., 1904. [J. J.]

Gladstone, William Ewart, was b. at Liverpool, Dec. 29, 1809, d. at Hawarden, May 19, 1898, and was buried May 28, 1898, at Westminster Abbey. For the details of his career see his Life by John Morley, B vols., 1903. His connexion with Hymnody is slight. Two trs. into Latin are noted at pp. 633, ii., 972, i., and one into Italian, p. 463, ii. Mrs. Gladstone in 1898 contributed to Good Words, p. 483, a poem on the Holy Communion, beginning, "Lord, as Thy temple's portals close," in ten sts., dated May 1836. It gives a most interesting picture of the period and of the devotional feelings of the author. sage to her teacher:—"Tell Miss — that when I came to the valley of the shadow of death Jesus was there to meet me." Those words Inspired her song. It was re-ited on Sunday, Feb. 23, 1845, by the Rev. John Bristow while preaching her funeral sermon in Castle Street theore, Excerc. It was printed soon after, and repeated in the Christian Remarktrancer, 1859, p. 16, where it began, "Oh! meet me in the valley."

[J. M.]

Go, bury thy sorrow, p. 1566, i. In the Notes of Joy, 1869, the original of this hymn, with music by Mrs. J. F. Knapp, is given as "Bury thy sorrow, The world has its share." Possibly the words are also by Mrs. Knapp, but this is not stated as being so, and the authorship is open to doubt. See p. 1609, i. [J. J.]

"Go forth," the Lord has said. This most popular of his hymns is "O Master, let ! hymn, in the Church Missionary H. Bk., 1899, No. 9, is compiled from Bp. C. Wordsworth's "The Banner of the Cross," p. 1894, i. 23.

Go, messenger of peace and love, p. 480, ii. Appeared in the Evangelical Mag., 1822, p. 260.

God moves in a mysterious way, p. 438, i. In the MS. volume referred to under Corper, W., p. 1625, ii., this hymn is given at pp. 204-5, between a letter from J. Newton dated "Olney, Nov. 4, 1772," and another hymn by Cowper, "Tis my happiness below," given as "by Mr. W. C. of Olney, 1773." This supports the conclusion as set forth on p. 428, i., that the hymn was not the outcome of his attempted suicide in October 1778. The concluding lines of the hymn read in the MS.:—

"The bud may have a bitter tuste, But wait to small the flower."

This, as is well known, appeared in print as:—

"The bud may have a bitter taste,
But sweet will be the flower."

God of my [our] life, to Thee I [we] call, p. 485, ii. In Church Hys., 1903, No. 288, the text of the 1st ed., 1871, is repeated in 5 st. of 4 l., with the restoration of Cowper's criginal text in st. iv. This text of 1903 is also given in the 1904 ed. of H. A. & M. instead of that of 1861; and is composed thus; st. i., Cowper, i. from No. 19, Bk. 3, of the Olney Hys.; ii., st. ii. from No. 18 in the same Bk. 3; iii. iv., from No. 19 as above, and st. v. by an unknown hand from the S.P.C.K. Hymns, &c., 1852. Other arrangements of Cowper's text are found in recent hymn-books in G. Britain and America, the exact nature of which can be determined by reference to the Olney Hys.

God of the ocean, earth and sky, p. 1395, i. 1. In several modern American collections, including the Boston Hys. for Church and Home, 1905, this hymn takes st. i. from J. R. Wreford, as above, and sts. ii.—v. from S. Longfellow's "God of the earth, the sky, the sea."

God that [Who] madest earth and heaven, pp. 440.i.; 1567.L The two-stanza form of this hymn we find appeared in a volume of Sacred Poetry adapted to the Understanding of Children and Yould. For the Use of Schools. Dublin. Pub. by Direction of the Commissioners of National Education... 1838. It is given on p. 16 as an "Evening Hymn," the first line being "Lord, that madest earth and heaven." The second stanza is:—

"Guard us waking, guard us sleeping;
And, when we die,
May we, in Thy mighty keeping,
All peaceful lis.
When the last dread trump shall wake us,
Do not Thou, our Lord, fornake us,
But to reign in glory take us,
With Thee on high."

Probably this stanza was written by Dr. Whately for this collection of Sacred Poetry, &c. He was Archbishop of Dublin at the time.

The two stanzas were repeated in the Archbishop's Lectures on Prayer, London: John W. Parker & Son, 1860, p. 185. Frevious to this, the hymn in this two-stanza form had come into general use through the Marylebone Ps. & Hys., 1851, as detailed on p. 440, i. The added stanzas given in W. Mercer's H. Bk., 1864, are:—

 "And when morn again shall call us To run life's way, May we still, whate'er befall us, Thy will obey.
 From the power of evil hide us, In the narrow pathway guide us, Nor Thy smile be e'er denied us The livelong day."

4. "Holy Father, thronod in heaven,
All holy Son,
Holy Sphirt, freely given,
Blest Three in One
Grant Thy grace, we now implore Thee,
Till we cast our crowns before Thee,
And in worthler strains adore Thee,
Whilst ages run."

God the all-merciful, earth hath forsaken. This, in the American Protestant Episcopal Church Hymnal, 1889, is a cento from "God the all-terrible," p. 440, I., sts. i. and iv. being by H. F. Chorley and ii., iii. by J. Ellerton as in Church Hys., 1871.

God the Father, God the Word, This Metrical Litany, in The English Hymnol, 1906, No. 653, is taken from Dr. Littledale's "Litany of the Blessed Sarrament," in The People's Hymnol, 1867, No. 598. It is abbreviated; the petitions are rearranged, and the refrain is altered, but in all other respects it is the same Litany. [J. M.]

God the Father, Who in mercy. A. M. Y. Baylay. [Burial.] Written for The New Office H. Book, 1905.

Church Hys., 1903, and several other collections in G. Britain and America, and is extensively used at Whitsuntide gatherings. Its original tune is "St. Margaret," by E. H. Lemare, sometime organist of St. Margaret's, Westminster. [J, J]

Graham, Thomas, n.A., b. Sept. 14, 1837, and educated at St. Paul's School, London, and Trinity Coll., Camb.; B.A. (Sen. Opt.), 1860, M.A. 1865, D. 1862, P. 1863. Curate of St. Margaret's, Westminster, and Vicar of several parishes in succession, including St. Paul's, Canonbury, London, 1880-5, St. Bride's, Liver-pool, 1885-93, and since 1898 of St. Peter with Christ Church, Southborough. His bynn:—

When the King comes back from the far-off land [Advent], was written for the congregation of St. Paul's, Canoubury, "in joyful anticipation of the Advent." It was first printed as a leaflet, and then included in the Church Miss, H. Bk., 1899, and the C. P. Aid Missis, Hyl., 1897. Mr. Graham was also the composer of the time "Edith," which usually accompanies the hymn.

Mr. Graham is the author of A Popular Commentary on the Book of the Revelation. [J. J.]

Graham, William, b. 1810 at Clough, Autrim, was ordained in 1836 as Presbyterian minister of Dundonald, near Belfast. In 1842 he was appointed by the Irish Presbyterian he was appointed by the first Frestyterian Assembly as missionary to the Jews, and worked at Damsseus, at Hamburg, and at Bonn. He retired in 1883, and d. at Belfast, Dec. 11, 1883. His hymn "O Jesus, sweetest, holiest name" (p. 1583, fi.), is in his Fifty Songs of Zion, London, 1837, No. 41. [J. M.]

Gray, Herbert Branston, p.p., s. of

Thomas Gray, was b. April 22, 1851, at Layton House, Putney, London, educated at Win-chester, and at Queen's Coll., Oxford (Scholar 1870, R.A. 1874, M.A. 1877, D.D. 1892), and was ordained D. 1877, P. 1878. He was appointed assistant master at Westminster 1875; Headmaster of Louth Grammar School 1878; Headmaster of Bradfield Coll., Berks, 1880, and has been Warden since 1881. His hymn:—

Praise to our God, Who with love never swerving [End of Term], was written in 1893 and first printed to The Bradfield Coll. Supp. to H. A. & M. in 1895. It is in the Public School H. Ek., 1903, No. 197. [J. M.]

Great Framer of unnumbered worlds, p. 517, ii. s. This is given to Sidney Dyer in error. It is by G. Dyer, noted at p. 1186, i. In Kippis's Sel., 1795, No. 687.

Great God, what do I see and hear? The texts of this hymn as set forth on p. 464 have been used by compilers of hymnals since 1892 almost without exception. In the 1904 ed, of H. A. & M., there is, however, a notable change in st. i., L 2, where we read " The doom," instead of "The end of things created." Why this alteration has been made, with the divine declaration, "Behold, I make all things new." still standing in the Bible, is more than we can determine. (J. J.)

Great God Who madest all for man. G. Thring, [Temperance.] First pub. in Church Hys., 1903.

1. At the Front, O loving Saviour. [H. Baptisse,]
2. Hear an other of the message. ['hariy.]
3. Hear the angele telling. [Christmas Carol.]
4. Hymne of thankfulness we raise. [Dedication Fasticals.]
5. Jean, by Thy Lenten Fast. [Lent.]
7. Saviour, hear us, as we plead. [Lent.]

To the 1904 ed. of Hys. A. & M., Miss Greenaway contributed the following:--

8. For the dear ones parted from vs. [Absent Friends.]

Greenstreet, Annie Louise, née Ashley, dr. of William Ashley, schoolmaster, of Sheffield; b. Feb. 17, 1835; mar. Mar. 7, 1876, to W. T. Greenstreet, Sheffield. Her poetical pieces were pub. as Heart Yearning after Home, &c. By A. L. Ashley (Sheffield: T. W. Hall), 1871. Her popular hymn, "A little talk with Jesus" [In Affiction], is taken from this booklet of verse. It was written at a time of greet tried and affiction. time of great trial and affliction.

Gregory, Arthur Edwin, D.D., s, of Benjamin Gregory, D.D., was b. at Southampton, Nov. 80, 1853, and educated at Manchester Grammar School and Didsbury College. He entered the Wesleyan Ministry in 1877, became Vice-Principal of the Wesleyan Children's Home and Orphanage, 1898, and Principal, 1900. He was one of the secretaries of The Methodist H. Book (1904) Committee, He is Editor of The Preacher's Magazine, and sundry books for Bible students. His Fernley Lecture was delivered in brief at the Conference held at Sheffield in 1904, and pub in full as The Hymn-Book of the Modern Church, Brief Studies of Hymns and Hymn-Writers. It is an extended and reliable resume of the subject. Its facts have been collected with great care, and are presented in a clear and scholarly manner. Primarily intended to illustrate the contents of The Methodist H. Book of 1904, it has gone far beyond this limit, and is a valuable contribution to hymnological literature. [J, J]

Gregory I., St., Pope, p. 469, i. We have been unable to discover any grounds which justified the Benedictine editors and Daniel in printing certain hymns (see p. 470, i.) as by St. Gregory. Modern scholars agree in denying him a place among hymn-writers; e.g., Mr. F. H. Dudden, in his Gregory the Great (London, 1905, vol. i., p. 276), says "The Gregorian authorship of these compositions [the hymns printed by the Benedictine editors] however cannot be maintained ... Gregory contributed ... nothing at all to the sacred music and poetry of the Homan Church."

Grignon, Louis Marie, s. of J. B. Grignon, Sieur de la Bacheleraie, was b. Jan. 31, 1673, at Montfort, near Rennes, and is generally known as Grignon de Montfort, or as de Montfort. He was ordained priest in 1700, and devoted himself principally to conducting missions and retreats, after 1711 in the diocese of La Rochelle. He d. April 28, 1716, at Saint-Laurent-sur-Sevre, Vendée. In 1833 he was decreed the Venerable, in 1870 advanced to the grade of the Blessed, but has not yet been formally canonised. His hymns were collected as Cantiques des Missions composés par Louis-Marie Grignon de Monifort, Poitiers, 1763, the most complete and authentic ed, being that of Poitiers, 1865. The two best known in English are :-

1. Benissons & jamais. [Thanksgiring.] 1885, as above, p. 137; in the Abbé Sautin's Reneil de Prières et de Cantiques, 1998, No. 49, &c.; tr. as:—

11. United the Univitian Standard with firm and fearless hand. [Courage for the Christian Warfare.] This begins with st. iv. of her bymn, "Unfur! the Christian Standard, lift is manfully on high," written at Perty Bar, Sap. 23, 1872; pub. in her Under the Surface, 1874; and her P. Works, 1884, II.

12. Unto him that hath Thou givest. [Crosch in Grace.] Written at Leasowes, April 13, 1876. P. Works, 1884, II. 259.

Of these hymns Nos. 8, 4, 6, 7, 8, 9, and 12 were pub. in the first instance in J. Mountain's Hys. of Consecration and Faith, 1876. At the present time (1907) the number of Miss Havergal's hymns in C. U. reaches nearly one hundred. [J. J.]

Hawker, R. S., p. 499, I. The statement on p. 499, respecting the death of R. S. Hawker, is an error through imperfect information. He d. at Plymouth on March 25, 1875, and was buried in the cemetery of that town. His life and works have been set forth in The Vicar of Morwenetow, by S. Baring-Gould, 1876; 3rd ed. 1899; Memorials, &c., by F. G. Low, 1876; and The Life and Letters of R. S. Hawker, by C. E. Byles, 1905. [J. J.]

Hawkes, Henry Warburton, b. at Kendal, 1843, for sixteen years minister of the North End Mission, Liverpool, from 1891 to 1900 of the Bootle Free Church, since 1906 of West Kirby Free Church. Editor of Hye. of Help and Songe of Praise, 1882; and Hye. and Sucred Songs for Church and Home, 1891, Reprinted and enlarged, 1898. The ed. of 1898 has about 100 of his own hymns and adaptations for popular tunes.

Hay, John, diplomat and author, b. at Salem, Ind., Oct. 8, 1838; graduated at Brown University 1858; admitted to the Ill. Bar; Paris, Madrid, and Vicana, and Ambassador at the Court of St. James. In 1879-81 he was First Assistant Sec. of State, and from 1898 Sec. of State in the Cabinets of Presidents McKinley and Roosevelt, to his death July 1, 1905. His publications included Castilian Days, 1871; and, with J. G. Nicolay, Abraham Lincoln: A History, 10 vols., 1887, &c. In 1871 he also pub. Pike County Ballads, and in 1890 Poems. Of his poems the following are in C. U. as hymns:-

11. From Sinai's cloud of darkness. [Law and the Gospel.] This begins with st. ii. of his poem, "Sinai and Calvary," in Poems, 1890, p. 182. Asked for its date and origin, Mr. Hay said: "I wrote the hymn several years ago, because I felt like it. I can say nothing more intelligible than that." It was included in the New Laudes Powist, N. Y., 1892.

2. Lord, from far-severed climes we come. [Work on for God.] In the summer of 1895, at his summer home at Lake Sanapes, Mr. Hay was asked to write a hymn for the opening of the 18th International Christian.

Endeavour Convention, at Washington, the following year, but declined on the ground that his verse-writing days were past. But in the following spring he sent this hymn, with the statement that there was no obligation to use it. In his as, it is entitled "An Invocation." It use it. In his as, it is entitled "An invocation. If was sung at the opening of the Convention of 1898, and again at the Convention of July 4, 1908, when the open-ing exercises assumed the form of a memorial service, as his body was being borne to the grave. It is in several American collections. In The Methodist Hyl., N.Y., 1945, it opens with st. it., "Defend us, Lord, from every ill." The original is in 4 at 4.

ill." The original is in 4 st. of 4 l.

8. Not in dumb resignation. [Submission.] Appeared in 3 st. of 8 l. in Harper's New Monthly Magazine, Oct. 1891, and entitled "Thy will be done." Given with alterations in Dr. L. Abbott's Plymouth Hyl., N.Y., 1884.

Mr. Hay was for some time an office bearer in the Presbyterian Church of the Covenant, Washington, D.C. [L, F, B.]

Haycraft, Margaret Scott, née Mac-Ritchie, born at Newport Pagnell, Bucks, now (1906) resides at Bournemouth. She contributes to various periodicals, has written many services of song, and several vols. of prose and verse. At the request of the Rev. C. Bonner she contributed the following (with a few shorter pieces) to the Christian En-deavour Hyl., 1896, the S. S. Hymnary, 1905, and the Junior Hyl., 1906.

Bless the Lord for ever, Still his praise prolong.

 Green the bille and levely. Boykood of Jesus.

Written 1904; 1805, No. 201.
3. In golden light of early days. Children's Fraises.
1905, No. 58.

4. Let there be light at eventide. Parting Hymn,

4. Let there be light at crossing for all my need. 1896, No. 165.
5. Thou art my Shepherd, Caring for all my need. 18. zaiii, This is in W. B. Bradhiny's New Golden Shower, 1886, p. 107, and Garrion, 1887, p. 219, marked as by Miss Thaibetimer (in Hys. and Chorat Songs, Manchester, 1904, No. 207, as "O God, my Shepherd, 1904, No. 207, as "O God, my Shepherd, Mrs. Hayeraft revised ats, I., ii, and wrote an original final st. This is the S. S. Hymnary text, 1905. [J. M.]

Hayes, Alfred, M.A., son of E. J. Hayes, Town Clerk of Birmingham, was born at Wolverhampton in 1857, and educated at King Edward's school, Birmingham, and New College, Oxford. At the present time (1906) he is the Secretary of the Midland Institute, Birmingham. He has pub. The Last Crusade and Other Poems, 1886; The March of Man and Other Poems, 1891, and other poetical works. His hymn "Two thousand troubled years" (Christmas) was written at the request of a friend, circa 1896, and pub, with music by Sir was private secretary to Pres. Lincoln; served F. Bridge (Novello & Co.). It was included in in the Civil War; member of the Legation at Horder's Worship Song, 1905. [J. J.)

He leadeth me, O blessed thought, p. 494, i. Mr. Gilmore's hymn in its original form had a refrain of two lines only. In its popular form this has been expanded into four lines (the addition being by an unknown hand), as in P. Phillips's Singing Pilgrim, 1866. The hymn is very popular in America. [L. F. B.]

He leads us on By paths we did not know, [God's Guidance.] This appears in Our Home beyond the Tide (Glasgow, 1878, p. 84), a little book compiled by Ellen E. Milos, where it is given as Anon. It is in various recent hymnals, and sometimes, as in the Meth. Free Ch. Hys., 1889, No. 509, marked as "Count Zinzendorf, about 1750. Tr. H. L. L." We have failed to find any trace of it in Miss Borthwick's works. seems to be the composition of a Unitarian who desired to write a companion hymn to Miss Borthwick's version from Zinzendorf, "Jesus, still lead on " (p. 569, il.). In the Unitarian 1873 Supp. to their Sunday School H. Book, it begins, "God leads us on," &c. [J. M.]

He wants not friends that hath Thy love. R. Buzter. [The Communion of Saints.] This, in The Engl. Hyl., 1906, No. 401, is a cento from Baxter's poem, "The Resolution," in his Poet. Fragments, 1681, pp. 51-61. The poem is headed "Written when I was silenced and cast out," and dated Dec. 3, 1663. The first stanza is "Lord, I have cast up the account."

He Who a little child began, in the Scottish Cong. Hyl., 1903, is taken from "A little child, the Saviour came," p. 2, u.

Hear what God the Lord hath spoken, p. 602, ii. In the ms. volume described under Cowper, W., p. 1625, it., this hymn, given at pp. 211-213, concludes a letter from J. Newton which is dated "Aug. 1773." See Notes and Queries, Sept. 24, 1904. [J. J.]

Hearn, Marianne [Farningham], pp. 602, ii.; 1567, ii. Miss Hearn pub. in 1903 Harvest Gleanings and Gathered Fragments. Other hymns by her in C. U. include:-

1. Anywhere with James. (Follow Chvist.) In her Lays and Lyrict, 1850, p. 163.
2. Unrist, we children sing to Thee. (Praise to Jesus.) Written for C. Donner's Garland of New S. S.

2. Christ, we children sing to Thee. [Praise to Jesus.] Written for C. Bonner's Garland of New S. S. Music, 1881 (1884, No. 2).

3. He smiled as Ke stretched out His hand in glad welcome. [Cod's Call.] In the Baptist Justice Hyl., 1808, No. 175.

4. Just as I am, Thine own to be. [Follow Christ.] Contributed to the Voice of Praise, 1827, No. 348. Suggested by Miss Elliott's better-known hymn.

5. Little feet are passing. [The Way to Heaven.] In her Poena, 1869, p. 271.

6. Sing, for the world rejoiceth. [Springs.] Contributed to the Voice of Praise, 1837, No. 440.

We way note that "Father! shide with us."

We may note that "Father! abide with us," p. 365, il., is by her, from Lays and Lyrics, 1860, p. 143. [J. M.]

Heath, Eliza. Her hymn, "Praise the Lord; sing 'Hallelujah'" [Easter], appeared in the Irvingite Hys. for the Use of the Churches. 1864 (dated in the Index of the 1871 ed., No. 159, as 1852), and passed from thence into the Church Hymnary (Scottish), 1898. We have no information regarding the authoress, except the notice in the Standard of Dec. 29, 1905: "On Dec. 27th, 1905, at No. 4, The Cloisters, Gordon Square, Eliza Heath, in hon 76th hear." her 76th year. [J. M.]

Heaven is here, where hymns of gladness. An altered form in the Amer. Pilgrim Hyl., 1904 (attributed there to John Quincy Adams), of "Heaven is here, its hymns of gladness," by J. G. Adams, p. 16, L 1.

Heavy, O Lord, on me Thy Judgments lie, p. 1587, i. This appears in the Miscellany Poems (1693, pt. iii., p. 305), of Dryden and others as "Considerations on the Righty-eighth Psehn, by Mr. Prior." [J. M.]

Hedge, F. H., p. 504, i. B. Dec. 12, 1805. Heer Jesus heeft een Hofken. [The Lord's Garden.] This is in the Geestlijche Harmonie, Emmerich, 1633, p. 87; and is included in the Oude en nieuwe Kerstliederen, ed. J. A. and L. J. Alberdingk-Thijm, Amsterdam, 1852, No. 137. Tr. as:-

Our Master hath a garden which fair flowers alorn. By the Rev. S. S. Greatheed, in the Ecclesiciogist, 1856, p. 60. Included in the Feople's Hyl., 1881, S. Margarat's Hyl. (Bast Grimstead), 1892, Arundel Hys., 1902, and the New Office H. Bk., 1905.

Held, Heinrich, p. 507, il. The account given in the Fischer-Tümpel Deutsche evangelische Kirchenlied des siebzehnten Jahrhunderte, vol. i., 1904, p. 360, states that Held was b. July 21, 1620, at Guhrau, in Silesia, settled as advocate at Fraustadt in Posen, became in 1657 town clerk at Altdamm, near Stettin, and d. Aug. 16, 1659, at Stettin. This, if correct, explains why so many of his hymns are first traceable in Pomeranian books, and explains why his posthumous work on Prosody should have been prepared for publication in 1661 by a Stargard bookseller. [J. M.]

Hemans, Felicia D., p. 608, I. No. 11, "I hear thee speak of the better land," and No. 12, " Leaves have their time to fall," appeared in J. Curtis's Union Coll., 1827, p. 274, i., and then in her Poetical Works, 1828.

Hensley, L., p. 511, i., was b. May 20, 1824, and d. suddenly in a railway train, near Great Ryburgh, Norfolk, Aug. 1, 1905.

Her Virgin eyes saw God incarnate Ther Virgin eyes saw God incarnate born. T. Ken. [The Mother of our Lord.] This, in The Engl. Hyl., 1906, No. 217, is a certo of lines gathered together from a poem entitled "Sion: or, Philothea," in Bp. Ken's Works, 1721, vol. iv., pp. 370, &c.; the cento beginning at the line "When she to Bethlem came that happy morn."

Herbert, Annie. This name is given by Mr. Sankey in his My Life and Eacred Songs, 1906, as the writer of the hymn, "When the mists have rolled in splendour "(We shall know as we are known), and was sung by him for the first time in the Free Trade Hall, Manchester, in 1883. It has become one of the most popular of his Sacred Songe and Solos. [J. J.]

Here let Thy holy days be kept. From J. Pierpont's "O Bow Thine ear, Eternal One," p. 895, it. 18.

Heri mundus exultavit, p. 513, i. and 1570, it. The "Heri mundus" text is in a MS. of c. 1200, written apparently at Citeaux, and now in the B. M. (Add. 15722, f. 55b). The "Mundus heri" text is in Dreves, viii., p. 213. We must note that Dr. Neale's tr. "Yesterday with exultation" first appeared in his Hys. of the Eastern Church, 1862, p. 8, and then in his Med. Hys., 1863.

Herr! du hast in deinem Reich. Noumann. [On the Angels. For children.] Appeared in the 9th cd. c. 1700, of the Breslan Kirchen- und Haus-Munic (see p. 794, ii.) at p. 1100, misprinted 2000, as the second hymn on the Angels. In the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 1351. Tr. as:—

In Thy heavenly Kingdom, Lord. By Alexander Brown, contributed to the Scottish Congregational Hyl., 1903, No. 533. [J. M.]

Herzlich Lieb, p. 1004, ii. Another tr. Herzhen Lieu, p. 100z, n. 1520. A. 18: St. 18: "Ah! good Lord, Thine own dear Angel send," by G. R. Woodward, beginning with st. iil., as No. 210 in his Songs of Syon, 2nd ed., 1905. [J. M.]

Herzliebster Jesu, p. 517, E. Additional tre. are:-

1. Ah, hely Jesu, how heat Thou offended. In the Fattanton Hyl., 1899, No. 42, marked as "Retrans. from St. Augustine, by R. B.," and with the note at p. 11; "I have retranslated S. Anselm no suit the tune." Repeated in The English Hyl., 1998, No. 79.

1. Ah! dearest Jesu, what was Thy transgression, Also a very free version, by G. R. Woodward, in his Songs of Syon, 1994, No. 31.

[J. M.]

He's come, let every knee be bent, p. 1570, ii. We have found this in The Divine Companion, or David's Harp new Tun'd, By Henry Playford, 3rd ed. (not in the 1st), 1709, p. 22, as "An hymn for Whit Sunday," in 8 st, of 4 l. [J. M.]

Heu! Heu! mala mundi vita, p. 618, ü. Also in a ms. of c. 1300 in the B. M. (Arundel 374, f. 89b, as "Heu! hou! mundi vita"), in an 11th cent. ms. at Bern, No. 424, &c.

Heut triumphiret Gottes Sohn. [Easter.] This appeared in 16 sts. in the Kinderspiegel, printed at Eisleben in 1591, of Caspar Stolshagius, then Lutheran pastor at Iglau in Moravia, and may possibly be his (see Bidtler für Hymnologie, 1883, p. 92). It passed, in varying forms, into the Lutheran hymnoboks after 1600, and has been ascribed, without reason, to Basilius Förtsch. Jacob Ebert and others. In the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 298. Tr. as:-

To-day, God's only-getten Son. By G. R. Woodward, in his Songs of Syon, 1904, No. 50. [J. M.]

Heywood, John, b. in 1808, and d. July 13, 1887. He was printer and postmaster at Heywood, Lancashire, and founder of the Heywood Advertiser, which attained its Jubilee in 1905. He was the author of the hymn "Sabbath Schools are England's glery," which was written in Bethel Street Methodist Chapel during a sermon in which the preacher exclaimed "Sabbath schools! they are the glory of England." This was c. 1843. The hymn was printed as a leaflet, and was widely used in Lancashire for many years. (See Heywood Advertiser, June 16, 1905.) [J. J.]

Hic est dies verus Dei. [Easter.] Probably by St. Ambrose. In the Rule of St. Aurelian of Arles (d. 555) it is appointed for the whole Easter season up to Whit Sunday, at Matins and Vespers. Dreves, in his Aurelius Ambrosius, 1893, p. 136, prints it from the Vatican Reg. 11, f. 293b, of the 8th or 9th cent., and others (see also up. 57, 70, 123). It is in a Ms. of c. 890 in the Bodleian (Junius 25, f. 129), and many later. Printed text in Werner, No. 58. Mone, No. 167, Daniel, i., No. 59, and iv., p. 17, &c. Tr. as:—

This is the day the Lord hath made, In unbe-clouded light array'd. By G. R. Woodward, in his Songs of Syon, 2nd ed. 1905, No. 203. [J. M.]

Hic functionis dies est. [Burial of the Dead.] This is in a 10th cent. Mozarabio Hymnarium formerly at Toledo and now at Madrid, and in the slightly later Mozarabic Hymnarium in the B. M. (Add. 30851, f. 161): in both cases beginning "Hine functionis. Printed text in Dreves, xxvii., No. 210; Migno's PP. Lat., lxxxvi., 923, &c. Tr. as:—

To day the parsing bell doth toil. By G. R. Woodward, in his Songs of Syon, 1904, No. 137. [J. M.] [J. M.]

Hie reparandarum, pp. 521, i., and 1570, ii. This is printed in Hartel's ed. of the Epistulae of St. Paulinus, of Nola, Vienna, 1894, p. 279 (Corpus Scriptorum, vol. 28), from a 10th cent. Ms. in the Bibl. Nat., Paris (Lat. 2122), and others. (J. M.)

Hickson, William Edward, s. of William Hickson, boot manufacturer, of Smithfield, London, was b. Jan. 7, 1803; retired from business 1840; d. March 22, 1870, at Fairseat, Sevenoaks, Kent. Three pieces from his Singing Master, 1836, have come into somewhat extensive use.

1. God bless our native land (p. 1568. ii.)
2. Join now in praise, and sing. [Praise to God.]
1836, as above (ed. 1840, pt. v., No. 62). It was rewritten by the Rev. C. H. Bateman as "Come, children, written by the new v. v. A. hanceman as "Cone, chapten, join to sing" (p. 24, ii.).

S. Now to heav'n our cry [prayers] ascending. Got mead the right. (National.) 1836, as above (reprint ou cards, No. 85). This is repeated in W. B. Bradbury's Foung Medichist, 1845, p. 122, and many later American backs. books.

With regard to "God bless our native land." we find that in the 1st ed. of the Singing Master, 1836, Hickson's hymn was in 3 stanzas [J. M.] only (p. 1566, ii.).

Hilary, St., pp. 522, i., and 1570, ii. lsidore of Seville and Jerome both speak of Hilary as a hymn writer, but it is by no means certain that any of his genuine hymns have survived. Mr. E. W. Watson, in his St. Hibary of Politiers, Select Works, 1899 (Select Library of Nicene and Post-Nicene Fathers, vol. ix.), discusses the subject in his Introduction, pp. xlvi.-xlviii., and concludes that none are genuine. He thinks that the recently discovered Liber Hymnerum (see p. 1670, ii.) may have been compiled in Hilary's time, but that he cannot be accepted as the author of any of the surviving hymns in that collection. Canon A. J. Mason in the Journal of Theological Studies, vol. v., April, 1904, pp. 413-432, thinks that the recently discovered hymns are genuine, collects many parallel passages from the undoubted works of Hilary, and is indeed inclined to attribute also the "Lucis largitor splendide" and the "Hymnum dicat" (see pp. 523, ii.; 642, i. ii.) to St. Hilary. A later article by the Rev. A. S. Walpole (vol. vi., p. 599, July, 1905), while accepting the newly discovered hymns, and the "Hymnum dicat," adds various reasons against accepting the other hymns attributed to Hilary by Daniel (see p. 522, ii.). [J. M.]

Himmel-blau, dieh beschan. [Holy Communion.] This appeared in the Heil- und Hülfs-Mittel, Brix, 1767, p. 328, in 3 sts. In many recent R. C. books, e.g. the Trier G. B., 1846, p. 131, and the St. Gail  $G.\ B.$ , 1863, it begins "Himmelsan, light und blau." Tr. as:—

1. Heaven, steep, bine, and deep. By Miss Hoppus, as No. 305, in E. Paxton Heal's Children's Chair, 1870.
2. O vanit of heaven, clear and bright. In Hys. and Songs for Catholic Children, N.Y., 1870, p. 25, and the Rev. Alfred Young's Cath. Hyd., N.Y., 1884, No. 101.
3. Clear want of heaven, sarriedy blue. By Father Matthew Bussell, in the Besteuper of the Nicreel Heavel, April 1879, 2013.

April, 1872, p. 175, and his festers and frompline, 1200.

4. Fair blue sky, up on high. By faith Renoul, in her fer Sucrum, 1200, p. 44.

[J. M.]

Hincks, T., p. 526, t. He d. Jan. 25, 1899.

Hinadale, Grace W., née Haddock, p. 526, H. She d. Aug. 31, 1902. Her pen name is "Farin."

Hodder, Edwin, p. 1571, i., was b. Dec. 13, 1837, at Staines, Middlesex, and went to New Zealand in 1856. After his return he joined the English Civil Service in 1861, retiring in 1897, and finally resided at Henfield, Sussex. He d. March 1, 1904. He was the author of many works, biographical, devotional and other, the earliest being Memories of New Zealand Life, 1862, and the latest The Life of a Century, 1900. His hymns appeared in his New S. S. H. Bh., 1863, and 2nd ed. 1808, including :-

- Father, give us now Thy blessing. Close of School.
   Land, we bring our work to Thee, Christian Service,
   The night was wild, and stormy winds. It is I.
- 4. The Saviour loves all children. Jesus the Child-
- rea's Friend.
  5. Thy Word is like a garden, Lord. Holy Scripture.

Bernaul, new Pean of St. Patrick's, in Indbin, and Dr. Akkisson, Professor of Sanskrit, in the University of Dublin; vol. i., with introduction and text of the Latin and Irish hymns and glosses, and a glosser, set a glosser, set in the Irish prefaces, &c., and most interesting and full notes. Rather curiously there is no alphabett at index of the first lines of the hymns.

(b) Add. 30851. The hymns of this Ms. together with the hymns in Ant. 20844-46, and in the Mozarabic Ms. now at Madrid. Indeed and Compostells, are printed in vol. xxvii. (Hymnodia Gotica, 1997) of the Andesta Hymnica of theyers and Blame. The Add. 30851 has also been et. in full by J. P. Gilson for the Henry Braishaw Society, 1998, as The Mazarabic Phatler. By the help of these we have been able to identify the remaining bynns of this Ms.—

1. "Addant particle Analysis virginium" [SS. Justina and Ragina], f. 137, heginning with st. vi., 1.4.

2. "Anni paracte civicule, Soluta curst temporum." [New Year.] This is at f. 110b before the Hymnorum, and is not printed in Deves From this ass, but only (No. 186), from an 11th cept. Ms. at Madrid (University Library, 30) where it begins imperfectly "Iwe none, sancte domine."

3. "Christe coelestic medicina Patrix" [For the Sicki], f. 180, with st. vii., 1.4.

I bow to Thee, awest will of God. This, in the Scotch Church Hymnary, 1898, is another cento from F. W. Faber's "I worship Thee, sweet will of God," p. 559, il.

I come, Thou wounded Lamb of God. This, in Gloria Deo, N.Y., 1900, is an altered form of "I thirst, Thou wounded Lamb of God," p. 558, i.

I dared not hope that Thou wouldst deign to come. Edwin Hutch. (The Holy Spirit.) From his Towards Fields of Light, 1890, p. 25. It is usually given as in Horder's Hymne Supp. to Existing Colle., 1894, "I dare not hope that Thou," &c. [J. J.]

I heard a sound of voices. G. Thring. [The Song of the Redeemed.] Written in 1886, and published with music by H. S. Irons (Novello & Co.) the same year. It was sang at several Choral Festivals and ultimately appeared in Church Hys., 1903. [J. J.]

I know in Thee all fulness dwells. This, in the 1904 ed. of The Meth. H. Bk., No. 311, is a cento from "Jesu, if still Thou art to-day," p. 589, ii.

I lay my sins on Jesus, p. 558, il. The Rev. H. N. Boner, in his Hymns by Horatius Bonar, 1904, pp. x., xi., xxxi., says that his father's hymn-writing began during his residence at Leith, 1834-1837, in a desire to provide something which children could sing and au-Selecting two preciate in divine worship. Selecting two tunes, "Heber," and "The Flowers of the Forest," he wrote to the former "I lay my sins on Jesus," and to the latter "The morning, the bright and the beautiful morning." These were printed on leaflets and distributed in the schools, and were the first of Dr. Bonar's long series of hymns, Mr. Bouer continues the history :-

"After a little it became obvious that, if the interest "After a little it became obvious that, if the interest and improvement in the service ware to be maintained, more byttens must be provided. My father made careful search through various books, and selected a few pieces which seemed to be suitable; there he caused to be printed on sheets along with three new ones from his own pen; 'i was a wandering sheep' [p. 569, ii.]... 'There was glainess in Zion',... and 'For thee we long and pray' [p. 161, ii. 1]. [J. J.]

I love to think of the heavenly land, p. 1578, i. This hymn is by Lewis Hartsough; see p. 1669, ii.

I sought the Lord, and afterward I knew. [He first loved us.] An anonymous and undated hymn in The Pilgrim Hyl., 1904.

I think when I read that sweet story of old, p. 703, i. In his Hymns and Hymn Writers of the Church Hymnary, 1899, p. 272, the Rev. J. Brownlie says: "From an account which she [Mrs. Luke] has kindly sent of the origin of her popular hymn, we take the following :-

'I went in the year 1841 to the Normal Infant School in Gray's Inn Road to obtain some knowledge of the system. Mary Moffat, afterwards Mrs. Livingstone, was in Gray a lim Rocat to obtain some kilowedge of the system. Many Moffat, afterwards Mrs. Livingstone, was there at the same time, and Sarah Roby, whom Mr. and Mrs. Moffat had rescued in infancy when buried alive and had brought up with their own children. Among the marching pieces at Gray's Inn Rocat was a Greek aft, the pathos of which took my fancy, and I searched Watts and Jane Taylor and several Sunday school hymn books for works to suit the measure, but in vain. Having been recalled home, I went one day on some missionary business to the little town of Wellington, five miles from Defines to the intic town of weilington, are must from Taunton, in a stage coach. It was a beautiful spring norming; it was an hour's ride, and there was no other hadde passenger. On the back of an old envelope I wrote in pencit the first two of the versea, now so well known, in order to teach the tune to the village school supported by my stepmother, which it was my province to visit. The third versews added afterwards to make it a missionary hymn."

The Rev. James Mearns has traced out some of its earliest appearances in print :-

1. Both hymn and tune (Salamis) were printed in the Sunday S. Parcher's Magazine, 1841, on two unnumbered pages after p. 911 with the title "The Child's Desire: a Greek Air. Words by Miss Thompson, of Poundsford Park."

2. In the Union Hymn Book for Scholars, 1842, No. 67, 3. The Union Hymn Book for Sunday Schools, 9th ed., Bristel, 1844, No. 291. 4. In the Juvenia Missionary Mag., June 1846, with the third stauza added.

The Greek Melody, commonly called " Salamis," is in the musical edition of The Church Hymnary, 1898; the S.P.C.K. Church Hymns, 1903, and other hymnals.  $[J,J_1]$

I wait for Thy salvation, Lord. A part of I. Watts's "Out of the deeps of long distress," p. 1240, ii. 857, into The New Ps. & Hys., Richmond, Va., 1901.

Ich glaub an Gott in aller Noth [Trust in God.] In Bünmher, iii., No. 181, this is cited as in the Duderstadt G. B. (R. C.), 1724. If Thou impart Thyself to me. A cento from Pt. ii. of "Jesu, if still Thou art to-day," p. 599, ii, Immaculate Mother. [B. V. M.] This is in the Parochial H. Bk. of the Rev. A. Police, Boston, U.S., 1897, No. 228, entitled "Hymn in honour of our Lady of Lourdes." In Tozer's Cath. Hys., 1898, it begins "Immaculate Mary," and is marked as a tr. from the French. The tune in both cases is the Lourdes "Ave Maria" tune, but the words are Lourdes Avenum and the Lourdes hymn (Pèlerinage National, 1899, p. 214, beginning "L'heure était venue,") and do not suggest a [J. Italian Hymnody, p. 1532. The Dublin Review for January, 1897, has, as its fifth article, "Notes on Catholic Hymnology. A Criticism of Dr. Julian's Dictionary." This can hardly be called a judicial or impartial survey, but it has some clearming descriptive passages, and is the work of one who has really studied Italian Hymnody on his own lines. With the help of the chies given, the present writer has been enabled to indicate the following sources of information regarding Italian vernacular hymns; the references added in brackets are the press marks of the British Museum copies.

The Inni Sucri Volganizati of G. F. Bilancini, issued by authority at Rome, in 1726 (1220, b. 30), consists up to p. 123 of versions of the Breviary bymns. The catato p. 123 of versions of the Berviary bymns. The catalogue of the Licco Musicale at Bologna, 1885-1833 (11947. g. 13), contains descriptions of many works in the department of secred music; only one page, however, is devuted to cataloguing Laudi Fpirituali. The most interesting and useful guide to early vernicular hymns is an article by A. Feist in vol. xiii., pp. 115-185, of the Laischrigt für Homanische Philologie, 1898 (PP: 6044, ac.), which gives the first lines of 1981 hymns, with references to the collections where they are to be found. The Laudi del Piemonte of Fardinando Gabotto and Dellino Ord, 1891 (12226. cc.) gives 48 places from a 15th cent. xs. at Turin, with a useful list, in the preface, of previous collections of Laudi Spirituali. The Poesie populari religians of Professor Giuseppe Ferrare, Bologna, 1877 (12226, bbbb.), are taken from a 14th cent. xs. at Ferrare, and his Recoilta di Sucre Poesie populari fatto all Stonanti Pellegrint, Bologna, 1877 (307. oc. 1), fatto all Stonanti Pellegrint, Bologna, 1877 (307. oc. 1), na at retears, and his account at some rocuse popularist at Givenant Policyrint, Bologue, 1877 (30% oc. 1), from a 18th cent. Ms. at Ferrars. The Rind of Prove de buon Scoole della Lingua, by Telesforo Bini, Lucca, 1852 (12228. d. 4), are also taken from Mss. Other recent republications of early Laudi Spirituali are indexed in P. Runge's Die Lieder und Meiodien der Geitsler, Lelpsig, 1900, pp. 45-85 (1898. ff. 38); and in Attilio. Pagliani's Catalogo generale della Libreria Radiana, Misa, vol. ii., 1908, p. 438 (B. Rl. e. 3). A few specimens of early Laudi are given in Ernesto Monaci's Crestomasia italiana det primi secoli, Città di Castello, i., 1869, ii., 1897 (12941. h. 28); and in Engenia Levi's Lirica italiana antica, Florence, 1905 (11427. e. 38). Among the more important collections of Laudi Spirituali in the British Museum may be mentioned those of Feration Razal, Venice, 1563 (K. s. f. 10), and his Santsario di Laudi, Florence, 1509 (11427. ee); the Laudi Spirituali of the Fathera of the Oratory at Rome, Bk. 1., 1882, Rk. v., 1598 (D. 33. b); and the Corona di Sarre Carsoni, Florence, 1710 (A. 671), the enlarged ed. of Coferrati's collection, noted et p. 1533, ii.

These works, it must be added, relate almost fatta di Giovanni Pelleprini, Bolegna, 1877 (307, 00, 1), from a 15th cent. us. at Ferrara. The Rimi e Prote

These works, it must be added, relate almost entirely to the period before 1600. It would give great pleasure to us and to all students of Italian Hymnody if the Dublin Reviewer would supplement his 1897 article by a history of the vernacular hymnody of Italy since 1600. [J. M.]

It is in the Scotch Ch. Hymnary, 1898. [J. B.]

Jenner, H. L., p. 1574, L. Bp. Jenner was b. in 1820, and d. in 1898. In C. W. A. Brocke's Additional Hys., 1903, Nos. 962-966 are by Bp. Jenner and "A. Jenner." They are by hip, sender and the "Catechism in Verse," and consist of 50 stanzas and a "Kyrie," They are well adapted for singing in connection with catechising in Church and School.

Jerusalem et Sion filiae. [Dedication of a Church.] Sometimes ascribed to Adam of St. Victor, but M. Gautier in his ed. of Adam, 1894, p. 250, says the rhythm differs from that of Adam, and that the ascription is doubtful; consequently he does not print the text. He cites it as in two Paris Graduals of the 13th cent. (Bibl. Nat., Lat. 15615, and Arsenal 110), but says it is not in the early Graduals of St. Victor or of St. Geneviève. It is in a Gradual written in England c. 1275, and now in the B. M. (Add. 12194, f. 142b); in a Sarum Missal of c. 1250, now at Manchester, f. 241; in the Sherborne, Arbuthnott, Westminster and other Missals, sometimes as "Hierusalem et Sion." Mone, No. 254, prints it from a 12th cent. Ms. at Cohnar. Also in Daniel, ii., p. 74, v., p. 106; Kehrein, No. 870, &c. Tr. as:—

1. Jerusalem and Bion's daughters fair. By C. B. Penram, in the Sarum Missal in English, 1868, p. 263, and the New Office H. Mr., 1305, No. 150.

2. Syon's daughters! Saints of Jerusalem. By M. J. Macker, in the Hymner, 1882 (1904, No. 118), 3. Sion's daughters! Sons of Jerusalem. By G. G. S. Gillett, in The English Hyl., 1986.

[J. M.]

Jeruselem luminosa, p. 579, ii. Another tr. is by J. Brownlie, in his Hys. of the Early Church, 1896, p. 149, as "O City girt with glory."

Jerusalem, my happy home. The Author of, p. 585, i. 5. This has recently been ascribed to Lawrence Anderton, alias John Brereley (s. of Lawrence Anderton, of Lostock, Lancs.; b. 1575, educated at Christ's Coll., Cambridge; entered the Society of Jesus at the age of 28; employed in London 1624-1641; d. in Lancashire April 17, 1643), but this ascription rests on the supposed fact that the signature in the Add. 15225 is J. B. P. After carefully examining this MS., we are still inclined to believe that the signature is F. B. P., and that the author was some as yet unidentified R. C. priest of the period. [J. M.]

Jerusalem! my happy home. The Eckinton C. text of, p. 588, i. (v.). Since the issue of this Dictionary in 1892, we have come into possession of a copy of the "Eckinton t"," referred to in Williams and Boden's Col. of Six Hundred Hys., &c., p. 563, î. (v.). It is entitled :-

Failms and Hymns for Public or Private Devotion, Sheffield: Printed at the Britismia Press by J. Northall. Sold by him, J. Rmith and J. Invalley, Chesterfield, 1795. It contains 47 patim versions, and

The preface is signed "Joseph Dromohead" and dated "Eckington, Jan. 1st, 1795." It reads:-

"Buring at the request of the Rector, Mr. Alderson, 589, i. This is in the Symphonia sirenum, undertaken a new edition of the Eckington Psalms and Hymns, I have attempted to improve the selection both by omissions and additions. . . I should have liked to prefix the Author's name to every Psalm or Hymn: but of some I did not know the authors, and in others I have used as much liberty of altering and inserting lines and stauzas as to leave the claim of authorship doubtful."

In the collection one psalm version (Ps. cxiv.) is signed "Bromehead," and five of the bynus "B." One of the five hymus with this signature is "Jerusalem, my happy home." It is number xxxii., entitled "Heaven," and signed "B." The text is the same as Williams and Boden, as given on p. 583, i., with "Eden" instead of "Edens." Upon this evidence we withdraw the statement on p. 583, i. in favour of J. Montgomery, and assign the hynn to Joseph Bromehead. We may add that in Mont-gomery's Christian Psalmist, 1825, the hymn is given anonymously. This is additional evidence against the claim made in favour of Montgomery's authorship.

Jervois, William Henry Hammond, M.A., was b. in Oct. 1852 on the Isle of Alderney, where his father, W. F. D. Jervois, afterwards Lieut.-General, was then stationed. He was educated at Rugby and at Trin. Coll., Oxford (B.A. 1876, M.A. 1878), and was ordained D. 1878, P. 1879. He became Vicar of St. Mary Magdalenc, Munster Square, London, in 1896, and d. Aug. 5, 1905. He was, until his death, a member of the Committee who compiled The Engl. Hyl., 1906, and contributed to it:-

Jesu, at Whose supreme command, p. 584, i. Another cents from this hymn by C. Wesley is "Blest Jesn, at Thy gracious word," in the Rugby School Hys., 1906.

Jesu Corona celsior, p. 584, i. This hymn was probably written in Italy. It is in two Vatican Mss. of the 11th cent., viz., 82, f. 237b, and 7172, the Hymnary of St. Severinian at Naples. Also in two 11th cent. mss. in the Chapter Library at Verona, 108, f. 210b, and 109, f. 41b. Another tr. is :-

O Jesu, Crown above the aky, in the Offics H. Bk., 1889, No. 802, and 1905, No. 280. [J. M.] [J. M.]

Jesu, Corona Virginum, p. 584, ii. Another tr. is: "O Jesu, Thou the Virgins' Crown," in H. A. & M., 1904, No. 212, marked as Neale and Compilers; but only three lines survive as Neale wrote them. In The English Hyl., 1906, Dr. Neale's original tr., "Jesu, the Virgins' Crown, do Thou," is given in an [J, M,]unaltered form.

Jesu dukcis memoria, pp. 585, ii.; 1536, ii. The present writer is still inclined to believe that this hymn is by St. Bernard, that it was originally in 42 stanzas, and that it began "Duleis Jesu." Another early Ms. beginning thus is the Troyes, No. 852, of c. 1200. An additional tr. is:-

Jesu, how sweet the thought of Thee! At Thy dear name all corrows fiee, in the Fattendon Hyt., 1899, No. 32, marked as "Trans. by R. B." [J. M.]

Jesu dulcissime E throno gloriae, p.

Cologne, 1695 (ed. 1707, p. 161); but not in the Hymnodia Sacra, Mainz, 1671. Another br. in :-

Jesu, my Lord, mighty to save. This, in the 1904 ed. of The Meth. H. Bk., No. 437, is the old hymn, "The Lord unto my Lord hath said," p. 1861, ii. 77, with the omission of sts. i. and vili.

Jesu nostra redemptio, Amor, v. 589, ii. The text of Church Hys., 1903, is that of the Complete Edition of Hys. A. & M.; the 1904 Hys. A. & M., the same text with st. i. rewritten; and The English Hyl., 1906, J. Chandler's original tr. with the addition of [J, J,]a doxology.

598, Jesu, quadragenariae, p. Additional tre. are :-

1. O Jeau, Thou didst consecrate in H. A. & H., 1984, No. 97, marked as by the Compilers; st. i. being a new and better version; sts. ii.-vi. being the version of 1875, which began 'Jesu, our Leuten fast of Thee,' and was taken mainly from J. W. Hewett (see p. 588, if the content of the con

Jesu, Redemptor omnium, p. 583, ii. R. M. Benson's tr. of this hymn as in the Complete Edition of Hys. A. & M., "O Thou Whose all-redeeming might," is repeated without change in The Empirick Hyl., 1996; but in the 1991 ed. of Hys. A. & M. it is revised, the changes being restricted for the most part to II, S and 4 in sts, i.-iv., the most striking being 8t. iv. :-

" And, freed from every tain of sin, As he hath won may also win "; altered to

"And, aided by his proyers, may gain The cleansing of our guilty stain."

In The New Office H. Book, 1905, the text of its edition of 1895 is repeated with slight alterations. It begins with the same first line as the old Hys. A. & M. tr., but differs in several instances, and accords more with the Hys. A. & M. 1904 text.

Josu Redemptor [Salvator] saeculi, Verbum Patris Altissimi, p. 598, i. In Church Hys., 1903, the text of the tr., "Jesn, the world's redeeming Lord," is that of the old ed, of Hys. A. & M.; whilst that of the 1904 death in 1788, and included in P. Works, x., ed. of Hys. A. & M. is a revised form of the p. 282. In the 1904 ed. of The Meth. Hymn-Compilers' old text. [J. J.]

Jesus Christus, nostra salus, p. 556, L In Preves, xlv., pt. ii., p. 105, this is given in 10 sts. The initial letters of sts. i.-viii, make the acrostic "Johannes"; sts. ix., x. are probably later additions. Another tr. is :-

Jesus, ever loving Saviour. [For a Happy Peath.] This is in the Holy Family Hys., 1860, No. 92, and marked as from the Hymn Book of the Holy Family, Claphan, but is not in the 1st ed., 1854, of that collection. It is given in many later hymnals, including Tozer's Catholic Hys., 1898, &c. [J. M.]

Jesus, gentlest Saviour, p. 598, ii. In the 1904 ed. of Hys. A. & M., an entirely new cento is given from Faber's hymn. The sts. are in the order named, vi., ii., iv., ix., viii. and vi. repeated. The text is unaltered.

Jesus! my happy heart, p. 1676, i. This hymn begins with st. ii. of "Bright angels who attend around our alter now," in the Amer. ed. of E. Caswall's Lyra Catholica, N.Y., 1851, p. 466, entitled "The Vow," and marked as "By a Sister of Charity." Thence it passed into Hys. of the Ages, 1858, and others. [J. M.]

Jesus, my Saviour, look on me, p. 828, ii. 83. This hymn is in The Christian Remembrancer, 1848, p. 13. It is sometimes given with the name of J. R. Madduff as the author, and as " Jesu, my Saviour," &c.

Jesus, our triumphant Head. J. Hart. [Ascension.] From the 1762 Supp. to his Hymns, No. 36, in 6 st. of 4 l., into a few collections, usually abbreviated.

Jesus, when He left the sky. [Christ's love of Children.] This hymn has appeared during the last forty years or more in a great number of hymn-books for children, generally as the production of "Mrs. Mary Bumsey," and sometimes dated 1848. One of the latest collections in which it appears is The Meth. H.-Book, 1904. [J. J.]

Johannes sahe durch Gesicht. P. Gerhardt. [Heaven.] In J. G. Ebeling's ed. of Gerhardt's Geistliche Andachten, 1667, No. lxxxiv., in 9 st. of 11 l., entitled "From the 7th chapter of the Revelation of John." In Wackernagel's ed. of his Geistliche Lieder, No. 120, and Bachmann's ed., No. 114. Tr. as:—

Johnson, Catherine, née Hardenbergh, p. 1875, t. Mrs. Johnson, dr. of John H. Hardenbergh, was b. at Auburn, N.Y., in 1835, and m. in 1860. Her hymn, "An earthly temple here we build," was written in Fittsburgh for the dedication of a church in 1866; and her "The whole wide world for Jesus," on May 9, 1872, for a meeting of the Woman's F. Miss. Soc. of Baltimore. Her children's hymn, "We are so happy, God's own little flock," is widely used in America. [L. F. B.]

Johnson, Elias Henry, p.p., has been since 1882 Professor of Systematic Theology in Croser Bap. Theo. Seminary, Chester, Pa. He was b. at Troy, N.Y., Oct. 15, 1841, and graduated at Rochester. After acting for two years as assistant paymaster in the U.S. Navy he was ordained to the Baptist Ministry, and served in several pastorates. He edited Songs of Praise for Sunday Schools, 1882; was assistant editor of the Bap. Hymnal, 1882; and also editor of Our Sunday School Songs, 1885, and Sursum Corda, 1898. He is also the author of several prose works. His hymn, "Father almighty, trembling I bow to Thee" (Holy Trinity), in Sursum Corda, 1898, No. 314, is dated 1867.

Jones, John Samuel, b. in London in 1831 and ordained in Ireland in 1858. He has held several benefices, including St. Philip, Clerkenwell: Christ Church, Liverpool; and Knight's Enham, Hauts. His hymns include:—

1. I was made a Christian. [For the young.] Written about 1880 for use at Enham Sunday School, and pub. in The Children's Hyan Book, 1881, and sunsequently in the 1804 ed. of Hya. A. & M.

2. Now the busy week is done. [Saturday Evening.]
This hymn is attributed on p. 1589, ii., to the Rev. S. J.
Jones, Rector of Batsford, in error. It was contributed to the 1889 Suppl. Hys. to Hys. A. & M.

Mr. Jones's latest work is A Christian Week:

Joy-bells are sounding sweetly. [New Year.] Given anonymously in the Scottish Hymnal, 1884, and the Scotch Church Hymnary, 1898.

Jubes: et, in pracceps aquis, p. 807, ii. The version, "O Father, Who the earth hast given," in H. A. & M., 1904, No. 441, begins with st. ii. of "Thou spakest, Lord," in the 1873 ed., No. 40. The second st. of the Latin begins "Hanc tu celendam, qui tuis." [J. M.]

Jussu tyranni pro fide, p. 609, i. The additional stanza (iv.) in the 1904 ed. of Hys. A. & M. is from the Parish H. Book, 1863, and Church Hys., 1871.

Just as I am, without one pleap. 609, ii. In the Record, Oct. 15, 1897, Bp. H. C. G. Moule of Durham, then Principal of Ridley Hall, Cambridge, gave a most interesting account of Miss Elliott, and of the origin of this hymn. Dr. Moule, who is related to the family, derived his information from family sources. In an abbreviated form this is the beautiful story:—

beautiful story:—
"Ill-health still beset her. Besides its general trying influence on the spirits, it often caused her the peculiar pain of a seeming useleseness in her life while the circle round her was full of unresting serviceableness for God. Such a time of trial markett the year 1834, when she was furty-five years old, and was living in Westfield Lodge, Brighton. .. Her brother, the Rev. H. V. Elliott [p. 528, ii.] had not long before conceived the plan of St. Mary's Hall, at Brighton, a school designed to give, at nominal cost, a high education to the daughters of dergymen; a noble work which is to this day carried on with admirable ability and large success. In aid of St. Mary's Hull there was to be held a bazoar. .. Westfield Lodge was all satir; a very member of the large circle was occupied morning and night in the preparations, with the one exception of the ailling sister Charlotte—as full of eager interest as any of them, but physically it for nothing. The night before the bazoar she was kept wakeful by distressing thoughts of her apparent neclessness; and these thoughts passed—by a transition easy to imagine—into a spiritual conflict, till she questioned the reality of her whole spiritual life, and wondered whether it were anything better after all than an illusion of the ernotions, an illusion ready to be sorrowfully dispelled.

Belovel, 'Just as I am.'

"As the day were on, her elster-in-law, Mrs. H. V. Elliott [p. 329, i.]... came in to see her and bring news of the work. She read the bynn, and asked (she well might) for a copy. So it first stule out from that quiet room into the world, where now for sixty years it has been sowing and reaphing, till a multitude which only Gud can number have been blessed through its message."

Dr. Moule follows with a statement that the hynn was printed in the Invalid's H. Book, 1834. With a copy of that book before us we can positively say it is not there. Its earliest date of publication in that collection was the edition of 1886. The actual date, month and day of the bazaar we are unable to trace; noither have we seen, after an extended search, any printed form of the hymn of an earlier date than 1836.

Ken, Thomas, pp. 422, i., 1627, ii. Since the publication of this Dictionary in 1892, two copies of Bp. Ken's Hymne have been discovered. As they throw an important light on the question of the original publication of the Hymne, we give the following details:-

i. The first is a pamphlet of twelve pages, and in its present form it has no title-page. On the first page the hymns are headed :-

A Horning and Evening Hymn, Formerly made by & Reverend Bishop.

Following on the same page is the Morning Hymn in 12 sts., and the Evening Hymn in 13 sts. At the end of the Evening Hymn there is the following colopbon:-

London: Printed for Rich. Smith, Bookbinder, in New-street, near Peter-lane, 1892.

This is the earliest printed form of the two hymns yet discovered.

ii. The second pamphlet begins with this "Advertisement":—

Anvernmentent. The Author Anding imperfect and surreptitious Copies of these Hymns printed without his Encodedge and much against his WIL was presuaded to publish them in his own Defense; Otheriolish echould not have sent things so very isconsiderable to the Press.

Following this Advertisement, and on the upper part of p. 1, we have the following :-

Three Hymns. By the Author of the Manual of Prayers for the Use of the Scholars of Winchester College.

The hymns follow in their order. Morning Hymn is in 14 sts., the text being the same as that of 1695 on pp. 618, ii., 619, i., with l. 1 of st. iii. as "Let all thy converse be sincere": the Evening Hymn in 12 sts. with the same text as on pp. 619, ii., 620, i.; and the Midnight Hymn with text in 13 sts. as on p. 630, i., ii. The colophon reads :-

London: Printed for Ch. Brome, at the Gun, at the West End of St. Paul's Church, 1894.

At p. 617, t., it is noted that in the 1074 ed. of the Manual of Prayers for Winchester College, the scholars received the direction to "Be sure to sing the Morning and Evening Hymn in your chamber devoutly," &c. This direction clearly indicates that for twenty years or more the Morning and Evening Hymne, and possibly the Midnight Hymn also, were sung by the Winchester scholars before the earliest printed text, that by Rich. Smith, was issued in 1692. Had the scholars printed slips or as. copies of these hymns from which they sang during those twenty or more years? The form in which they had the hymns during that time we know not, but the fact that they had them is beyond dispute. From the data thus supplied, we feel justified in concluding that :-

1. From 1674 the Morning and Evening Bymns, and possibly the Midnight Hymn also, were sung at Winchester, and probably a year or two before that date.

2. That the scholars used either printed or na sheets of the hymns.

3. That Rich Smith got possession of one of these sheets, and published the same, without the Author's "Knowledge and much against his Will," in 1692.

4. That Ken, displeased with Rich. Smith's publication of his Hymns in an "imperfect and surreptitious" form, "was persuaded to publish them in his own Defence," through Charles Brome, in 1094.

ally from that of Ken as in Brome, the most marked feature being the absence of the Doxology from the Morning Hymn and its inclusion in the Evening Hymn, as st. xi. of the thirteen of which the hymn is there composed.

Smith's pamphlet is in the Hymnological department of the Church House Library, Westminster, and Brome's in the  ${f B}$   ${f M}$ ,  $\{{f J},{f J},{f J}\}$

Kerr, Robert P., D.D., b. at Greens-borough, Alabama, graduated at Union Theo-logical Seminary, Va., 1873, and was ordained by the Presbytery of Lafayette, 1874. His Hys. of the Ages, a collection on conservative Evangelical lines which hardly justified its title, was pub. in N.Y., 1891. In it appeared his hymn," Blessed country, home of Jesus," 1891, A later hymn, "Galilean King and Prophet," is dated 1901. [L. F. B.]

Kidder, Mary Ann, nee Pepper, p. 1876, i. Mrs. Kidder d. at Chelsea, Mass., Nov. 25, 1905. She was a member of the Methodist Episco. Church, and resided for 46 years in New York City.

Kimball, Harriet M., p. 684, ii., b. Nov. 2, 1834, and a Roman Catholic. From her hymn, "Jesus, the Ladder of my faith," p. 624, iii. 3, another cento, beginning "Sweeter to Jesus when on earth," is taken. It is in The Pilgrim Hymnal, 1904. [J. J.]

Kind words can never die, p. 1575, i. Given in Horace Waters's New Sabbath School Bell, No. 1, 1859, No. 1, p. 24, as "Words by M. Music by Sister Abby of the Hutchinson Family." The words, therefore, must remain Anon, for the present. [J. M.]

Kindly Spring again is here. J. Newton. [Spring.] The hymn in The Council School H. Bk., 1905, is a cento, sts. i.-iii. being from J. Newton's "Pleasing spring again is here," Olney Hys., 1779, Bk. 2, No. 33, somewhat altered, and st. iv. by another hand. In The English Hyl., 1906, there is another cento beginning with the same altered first line. [J. J.]

King, Henry Melville, D.D., an American Baptist minister, b. at Oxford, Maine, Sept. 3, 1838; educated at Bowdoin College, (1859) and Newton Theo. Justitution (1862), and entered the ministry in 1862. He was from 1863 to 1882 Pastor of Dudley Street Bap. Church, Roxbury, Mass., and since of Emmanuel Bap. Church, Albany, N.Y. Besides several prose productions, he is the author of the following hymus in  $C,~\mathbf{U}:=$

1. Christ, our Shepherd, leads us still. [Christ the Divine Leader.] Intel 1866.
2. Holy Rabe, Mary's Son, Gaim the night, &c. [Christians.] Dated 1885, and revised 1891.
3. O Thou, with Whom a thousand years Are but as yesterday. [For Assiverance.] Luted 1871.

These hymns were included in Sursum Corda, 1898. [L. F. B.]

King of glory, King of peace. G. Herbert. [Praise to God.] From his Temple, 1633, p. 140, in 7 st. of 4 l. and entitled "Praise." It is usually abbreviated as in The English Hymnal, 1906, the H. Book for the Use of Wellington College, 1902, &c. [J. J.]

Subsequently Rector of Eversley 1844-1875; Canon of Chester 1869-1873; and Canon of Westminster 1873-1875. He held also other important appointments. He died at Eversley, Jan. 23, 1875. Canon Kingsley's prose works are too well known to be enumerated here, and his poetical productions have little in common with hymnology. Three of his pieces have come into use as hymns:-

1. Accept this building, gracious Lord, [Hospitals.] Mrs. Kingsley's account of this hymn is:—"On the 4th of December [1871], Lord Leigh laid the foundation stone of the working metr's block of the Queen's Hospital at Birmingham with masonic honours, and the following simple hymn, which Mr. Kingsley had been requested to compose for the occasion, was simply a choir of 1,000

*Accept this building, gradious Lord,
No temple though it be;
We raise it for our enfering kin,
And so, good Lord, to Thee.'"
The hymn in full follows in 6 st. of 4 l. (Charles Kingsiey: His Letters and Memoirs of his Life 1876, vol. H., p. 370.) From this the hymn, well-known in American collections and in a few in Great Britain, *From Thee all skill and science flow," is taken. It is

"From Thee all skill and science flow," is taken. It is composed of sts. ill.-vi.

2. My fairest shild, I have no song to give you. [Parity and Courage.] Appeared in his Analometic and Other Poons, 1888, p. 64. In 2 st. of 6 is and entitled "Farewell." In the Life and Works of Kingsley, Poons, vol. 16, 1902, It is given in 3 st. of 4 L, and inscribed to C. E. G." and the appended date is "Fobrary I, 1866." The addition of the extra stanza, as given in Mrs. Kingsley's thartes Kingsley: His Letter, 60., 1876, vol. ii., p. 233, is thus explained: "The Parewell' to his niece Mrs. Theodore Waldron, then Charlotte Grenfell, was written this year 1886) and os the second to his meet by a Theodore Wanton, then Charlotte Grenfell, was written this year [1856], and as the second warse, by some mistake, was not published, it is given entire here." At the end of the poem this place and date are given as "Ray Lodge, 1856." The lines so frequently included in hymnals for Girls' High Schools, "Be good, sweet maid, and let who will be clever," are from this poem.

3. Who will say the world is dying ? [The Coming Kingdom.] In his Audrometic and Other Poems, 1858, p. 173, in 3 st. of 8 l. and entitled "The World" Age." It is dated 1849. In Horder's Worzhip Song, 1905. [J. J.]

Kipling, Rudyard, the well-known poet and story-teller, was b. at Bombay, India, Dec. 30, 1865, and now (1906) lives at Burwash in Sussex. His noble poem, "The Recessional," was written in 1897 at the time of the Diamond Jubilee of Queen Victoria, contributed to the Times for July 17, 1897, and first published by the author in his The Five Nations, 1903, p. 214. beginning "God of our fathers, known of old" (National). It has passed into Sureum Corda, Phil., 1898, The Engl. Hyl., 1906. [J. M.]

Klantendorffer, P., p. 825, i. It ought to have been stated that his hymn, "Weil dieser Tag," is from the Bohemian of J.Blahoslav. See pp. 156, i. (5) and 160.

Know ye the Lord doth take away? This opening line of each stanza of No. 175 of Hys. A. & M., 1904, is an altered form of "Know ye the Lord hath borne away?" (p. 1189, ii. 2) in the Hys. A. & M., Supp., 1889. The rest of the hymn is unaltered. [J. J.]

Κύριε έλέησον, 'Αντιλαβοῦ. litany.] After the Choir has said the Rope thrice, The Litany of the Deacon begins, Αντιλαβού, σώσον. It is in the Greek Offices, but its author is unknown. The original APPLACEOU, OBJOR. It is in the Greek Offices, but its author is unknown. The original text is in Dr. Littledale's Offices. . . of the morn."

Welsome the glad returning morn. By E. Caswall, in his Masque of Mery, 1888, p. 336. In Hys. for the Fact 1887, it begins "Hall use the glad returning morn."

Holy Eastern Church, 1863, p. 6, and an English prose tr., p. 126. The original has been tr. into metrical verse by J. Brownlie, in his Hymns of the Greek Church, 1900, p. 84, and is in Church Hys., 1903, and The English Hyl., 1908, as "God of all grace, Thy mercy send."

Kynaston, Herbert, D.D. (formerly Snow), nephew of Dr. H. Kynaston, was educated at St. John's Coll., Cambridge, B.A., Senior Classic (bracketed), 1857; p.p., 1882. Sometime Fellow of his Coll., Assist. Master at Eton, Principal of Cheltenham Coll., &c., and Prof. of Grock, &c., in Durham University and Canon of Durham, 1889. His bymu, "Father of light, O hear us who cry to Thee for light" (Divine Enlightenment desired) was written in 1878 for the Hys. for Use in the Chapel of Cheltenham College, 1878, and repeated in later editions. [J. J.]

Lacey, Thomas Alexander, s. of G. F. Lacey, was b. at Nottingham, Dec. 20, 1853. He entered Balliol Coll., Oxford, as an exhibitioner in 1871 (B.A. 1876, M.A. 1885), was ordsined D. 1876, P. 1879, was from 1894 to 1903 Vicar of Madingley near Cambridge, and since then has been Chaplain of the London Diocesan Penitentiary. He was one of the Committee who compiled The Engl. Hyl., 1906, 2000 and the Engl. Hyl., 1900 and the Engl. Hy and contributed to it twelve tre. (8, 66, 67, 69, 104, 123, 124, 174, 208, 226, 249, 325), also one unpublished and one previously published original, viz.,

I. O Faith of England, taught of old. [Church Infence.]

He contributed a number of hymns to the Choix de Cantiques, Paris, 1812, ed. by his brother Louis, also 8.1. (De Backer, 1893, iv. 1413). One, which appears in 1842, No. 8, and has not been traced earlier, may be his,

O Divine Enfance (The Chibl Jenus the Model of Children), tr. as "O Divinest Childhood," by E. Caswall in his Magne of Mary, 1858, p. 296. In the Parachial H. He., 1860, it is in two parts, separately numbered, the second beginning "Come, ye little children."

[J. M.] Lancaster, Mary Ann Elizabeth, née Shorey, was b. in London, Jan. 27, 1851, and now (1906) resides in Forest Drive, Leyonstone, Essex. She is the author of many hymns and poems which have appeared as leaflets, in her The Broken Angel, and other l'oems, 1892, and elsewhere. Three of thom, first printed in the Baptist newspaper and included in the 1902 ed. of Hys. of Consecration and Faith, are:-

1. I have a Friend so precious. [The Lore of Christ.]

Written one Sunday morning in the summer of 1830. White busy with household affairs some thoughts suggested by the sermon heard the previous evening (on St. Matt. xi. 29) at Leytonstone, began to shape themselves in rights for Ibec. 26, 1890, and then in the Broken Angel, 1892, p. 53. It has had a circulation of over 127,000 in leaflet form, and has been pub. in sheet form by Messes, Weekes & Uo. as My Lord and I, set to a melody said to have been sung in France by the persecuted Humenoods three hudded varies are. to a melosy said to have been sung in France by the persecuted Huguenots three hundred years ago.

2. Think of Jesus in the morning. [The Thought of Jesus.] Written Nov. 1900 and printed in the Baptist in Dec. 1900.

3. Walking with Jesus day by day. (Consecration.] Pub. in the Haptist in Sept. 1894.

Sec a fuller notice in the Baptist, July 18, 1962, p. 37. Mrs. Lancaster, we may add, is a member of the Church of England. Her nom de plume is "L. Shorey," hence the name "Mrs. L. Shorey" in some collections. [J. M.]

Lanier, Sidney, b. at Macon, Ga., Feb. 3, 1842, and educated at Oglethorpe Coli., Ga., where he graduated in 1860. He was one of tho earliest volunteers in the Confederate Army, and after the war he devoted himself to music and literature. He d. at Lynn, N.C., Sep. 7, 1881. His Poems were collected and pub. by his widow (New York), in 1884. Two of his hymns are:

1. Then God, Whose high eternal leve. [Holy Matriarony.] This is dated "Macon, Sep. 1865," and is found in his Poems, p. 233.

2. Into the woods my Meater went. This is a poem rather than a hymn, and might pass for a circl. It is given an No. 745 in the Methoditi Hymnal, N.Y., 1865.

In early life Lanier was a member of the Presbyterian Church, but gradually lost sympathy with organised Christianity. [L. F. B.]

Larcom, Lucy, p. 1576, ii. The extended use of this writer's hymns justifies a more detailed account of her life and work than is given on y. 1876. She was h, in 1824, and worked from 1837-45 in the mills of Lawrence, Mass., then engaged in elementary teaching 1846-49, became a student at Monticello Female Seminary, Alton, Ill., 1849-52, and then entered upon advanced teaching in higher-class schools, and literary work. She edited with J. G. Whittier, Child Life in Poetry, 1871; Child Life in Prose, 1873; Songs of Three Centuries, 1875. &c. Her own works are Poems, 1869; Childhood Songs, 1875; Wild Roses of Caps Ann, 1881: Poetical Works, 1885; At the Beautiful Gate; And Other Songs of Faith, 1892. Her autobiography was pub. as A New England Girlhood. She d, in 1893. In addition to "When for me the silent our," of her hymns the following are in C. U.:-

The above notes are from the Brit. Museum copies of Miss Larcom's works, Lasst uns erfreuen herzlich sehr. [Easter.] This is in the Catholische Kirchen-Greang, printed by Brachel at Cologne in 1625 [B. M.], p. 232, and apparently in the ed. of 1623 (see Bäumher, i., No. 280). It is in Hommel's Geistl. Volkstieder, 1864, No. 92; H. Bone's Cantate, ed. 1879, No. 262. Tr. 28:—

1. Rejoice all ye that sorrowed sore, by J. O'Connor, in the Arundel Hys., 1902, No. 89.

In the St. Gall G. B. (R. C.), 1863, No. 55, it is altered, and begins "Frohlocke aller Engel Heer," and this form is tr. as :-

2. Sing to the Lord, ye angels high, by Mise Huppus, in E. Paxton Hood's Children's Choir, 1870. [J. M.]

Since this Latin Hymnody, p. 640. article was written a great deal has appeared in print on the subject. The mass of material has indeed become so enormous that years of study would be needed in order to gain an intimate acquaintance with it. After the completion of the Analecta Hymnica of Dreves and Blume, these editors propose to issue a history of Latin Hymnody based on the materials available in 1884, and on the materials which have come to light since that date. When this history has appeared it will be comparatively easy to found a sketch upon it. The general histories of Bähr (p. 855, i.), Ebert (p. 855, i.), and Duffield (p. 1528, i.), and the excellent sketch by Bäumer in Wetzer and Welte's Kirchenlexikon, vi., 519-552, are all somewhat out of date. We subjoin the most important of later works:-

The Geschichte der Christlich-lateinischer Poesie bis zur Hätte des 8. Jahrhunderts (Sintitgart, 1991) by M. Manithus is very good and except), but desis only with the earlier period, is now not quite up to date, and, as it very rarely gives the first lines of the poems, can only be used to full advantage by one who has access to a large reference library. The most recont skutches of importance that the investit writer has soon are those in the reference horary. The most recome assesses of importance that the present writer has seen are those in the Grandriss der roudnischen Philologie, ed. Gustav Gröber (Mrassburg: J. Trübuer), vol. ii., pt. L. 1902, pp. 323–339, and by Professors Rietschel of Leipzig and Drews of Giessen in the Herzog-Hauck Realsneyklopädis,

There is a good survey of recent work to Canon U. Chevaller's Remaissance des Eindes Literpiques, first public the Université Catholique (Lyone: E. Vitte), 1897 and 1896; pt. i., relating to England, pt. ii., relating to France. Canon Chevaller has issued in his Ribbiotreque Litergiques several vols. of hymnological loterest (see Sequences, p. 1700, ii., and Propes, p. 1718, i.); including an historical sketch with useful bibliographical notes (Poicsie Eithrypique du Royen Age, Lyone: E. Vitte, 1993), a prettily printed collection of hymns and sequences, Poicte litergique traditionactic de Egipus Catholique on Occident (Tournet, 1894), and, most important of all, Poèsie liturgique traditionnelle de l'Eglius Catholique en Occident (Tournel, 1994), and, most important of all, the Repertorium Hymnologicum: Catalogue des chants, hymnes, proses, sequences, tropes, en usage dans l'Eglius latine depuis les origines jusqu'à nos jours (Lovvaln, vol. 1, 1992; il., 1997; supplement, 1904). The Repertorium has been severely criticised by Clemens Blume, in his Repertorium Repertorii: Kritischer Wagneiser durch U. Chesalier's Repertorium Hymnologicum (Leisente, 1901). This public of all feithers of with any contraction of the cont in his Repertorium Repertorii: Kritischer Baquesian durch U. Gaenalier's Repertorium Hymnologicum (Leipzig, 1901). Ilut in spite of all fallings of plan and execution, the Repertorium is an indispensable guide, giving as it does, under two alphabets, notices of Statz pieces (Nos. 1-2:2256 in A-Z, in vols. I., il.; and in the Supplement. Nos. 22256-14827), the two opening lines of each piece being printed, with notes on the sources where they are found, and on the literature relating to them. lating to them, 410. Boncore de Sancia Victoria, i.e. hymns, &c., by Poncore of Santa Victoria, apparently a priest attached to St. Pater's at Rome; printed from his autograph, of 1840, now in the Chapter Library of St. Peter's at Rome.

48. Hymnographi Latini, This is the first of two or more vols. mount to content the collected hymns of some of the present further than the state of 48. Hymnegraphi Latini. This is the first of two or more vols. meant to contain the collected hymns of soms of the more important writers; and lucludes those of Adam de is Basele, Canon of Lille; Ademar de Chabannes, monk of Aogonième; Adaibert de Tournel, Rishop of Mende; Anselm of Aosta, Archibshop of Canterbury; Eussehus Bruno, Bishop of Angers; William de Mandagot, Cardinal Bishop of Paleirlon; Jeroma (John) of Werdea, Crior of Mondese, mear Salzburg; John of Jenstein, Archibshop of Paleirlon; Jeroma (John) of Werdea, Crior of Mondese, mear Salzburg; John of Jenstein, Archibshop of Paleirlon; Jeroma (John) of Werdea, Crior of Mondese, mear Salzburg; John of Jenstein, Archibshop of Paleirlon; John Maulmun, Prior of Livry, who d. 1803 (see p. 1861, ii); Matthew Ronto, monk at Monte Olivete, near Siena; Peter Abelard (see p. 7, i.); Peter Damial (see p. 75, i.); Peter Damial (see p. 75, i.); Peter Damial (see p. 75, i.); Wido of Ivres, in North Italy; and Wolstan, monk of St. Nwithin's priory at Whithester; also three sets of pieces by unknown Cistercian monks.

The Analesta Hymnica is a wonderful montment of learning and industry, and when completed, will deserve, and need, very full indexes; at present there are more than fifty Indexes of first lines to cousuit, and as the second line is never given there are scores of idenas the second line is never given there are scores of blenas the second line is never given there are accres of identical entries. As a bys-product the editors have issued two vols. of Hymnologische helfrüge. One of there is Blume's review of the Repertorians noted above. The other is Godescalous Lintpurgensis, by Dreves (Leipzig, 1837); being the life and works, including the sequences, of Godeschalck, sometime monk at Limburg, on the Hardt, in Rhenish Bavarla, finally provest of the cathedral church of Aachen (Aiz-la-Chapelle), who d. 1988. It is this Gottschalck who is really referred to at pp. 204, i. 555-662; 815, i. 1225, i.; but there seem no reasons whatever for ascribing either the "Cantamns caucit" or the "Virgines castae" to him.

Leonard, Frederick, b. 1830; d. 1867. Author of "Constant as Thy mercies are" (Praise) in Horder's Worship Song, 1905.

Lester, John Henry, M.A., of St. John's Coll., Cambridge; B.A. in honours, 1868; M.A., 1871. Ordained in 1868, he held several appointments, including the Rectory of South Hackney, 1885-90, and Diocesan Missioner in the diocese of Lichfield, 1880-85. In 1884 he became a Prebendary of Lichfield, and in 1890 Bector of Lexdon, Essex. His The Lichfield Church Mission H. Book, 1883, was revised as The Lichfield Mission H. Book (N.D.). To the former he contributed:—

- Hark, my soul, the sound of voices. Heaven Desired.
   Hush, my soul, what voice is pleading? The Voice
- S. O happy land of Paradise. Heaven.
  4. O come ye redeemed, Praise of Jesus.
  5. O colemn hour, so strange and still. Repentance.
  6. Until He come! Ah, yes. Awaiting the End.

To these in the revised edition he added four original Metrical Litanies. [J. J.]

Let all the world rejoice. J. Hunt. [Praise to God.] One of the original hymns in his Spiritual Songs of Martin Luther, 1853, p. 136, entitled "The Majesty of God." Given, slightly altered, in Hys. A. & M., 1904. [J. M.]

Let every ear attend. This is a recast of I. Watts's C. M. "Let every mortal ear attend" (p. 1236, i. 98) into S. M., given in a few American collections.

Let God, the God of battle, rise. Tate and Brady. [Ps. kwief.] Pub. in the New Version, 1698, in 85 st. of 4. l. The version "The servants of Jehovah's will," given in some American colls., is an altered form of portions of this Psalm, beginning with st. iii. [J. J.]

Let me suffer, let me drain, p. 541, L This hymn by Mrs. Howitt is the opening bymn in Lays of the Sanctuary, 1859. It subsequently appeared in Lyra Brit., 1867, but was not contributed thereto as a new composition for that special work. [J. J.]

Let us, brethren, let us gladly. II. Bateman. [Christian Servies.] From his Heart Melodies, 1862, No. iii., into the S. S. Hymnary, 1905, as "Let us, brothers," &c.

Let vain pursuits and vain desires, p. 1577, L, has been traced to E. N. Goviner's Lewis, Henry King, was b. Feb. 10, 1823, at Margate, became a medical publisher in Gower Street, London, and d. in Jan. 1898. His hymns appeared principally in two collections which he ed., viz., Songs for Little Children, 1879, and Songs for Little Singers, 1880, enlarged ed. 1881. Three have passed into various books for children ;-

1. A little tiny bird. God's Care. 1879, No. 139, 2. God is near me when the light, God is near. 1879, No. 106; previously in Horder's Bk. of Praise for Children, 1875, p. 51.

3. Who is this [He] that claims my heart. God's Claim. 1879, No. 131.

Lewis, Howell Elvet, M.A., b. April 14, 1860, and educated for the Congregational Ministry. After holding several charges in the country, he removed to London in 1898. His Sweet Singers of Water, 1889, contains trs. of standard Welsh hymns. They are well done, and worthy of attention on the part of hymn-book compilers. Mr. Lewis is m. A. of the University of Wales. Lift up, lift up your voices now. Saster.] This hymn, in the American Episco-[Easter.]pal Hyl., 1892. No. 119, is a mosaic made up of fragments of Easter hymns, pieced together of fragments of Easter hymns, pieced together without any regard to the continuity of the originals. It is principally from Dr. Neale's "The foe behind," &c., p. 1148, ii.; from his tr. of "En dies est dominiea," p. 380, ii.; and Mrs. Charles's version of "Aurora lucis," p. 94, i. (Voice of Christian Life in Song, &c., 1858. p. 100: "The morning kindles all the sky.") This cento is repeated in several American collections. collections. FJ. M.3

Lift up your hearts! We lift them, Lord, to Thee. H. M. Butler. [Thanks-giving and Praise.] Contributed to the Harrow School H. Bk., 1881, from which it has passed into several later collections, including The Public School H. Book, 1903, The English Hymnul,  $(J,J_*]$ 1906, and others.

Light of the world, Thy beams I bless. This, in the 1904 ed. of The Meth. H.-Bk., No. 464, is composed of sts. i., ii. from C. Wesley's "Are there not in the labourer's day" (p. 78, ii.), and sts. iii.-v. from his "But can it be that I should prove," in Hys. & Sac. Poems, 1749. (P. Works, 1868-72, iv., 479.) [J. M.]

Liguori, Alfonso Maria de', pp. 1634, il., 1877, i. In 1892, the trs. of Liquori's hymns were not noted in detail because the originals were not accessible. We have lately found the Canzoneine Spirituali . . di Sant' Alfonso Maria de Liguori, Turin, 1830, in the library of the Oratory, London, and discovered that Bp. Coffin was merely the editor of the 1863 vol. of All those noted below are by Father Edmund Vaughan (q,v). In 1863, nos. 7, 16 below are ascribed to Mgr. Falcoja and Mgr. Majello, but Father Vaughan now informs us that he thinks they were probably by St. Alfonso. Some of the 1863 trs. appeared previously in Hys. for the Confraternity of the Holy Family, 1854, and in Holy Family Hys., 1860. The best-known are:-

Lindenborn, Heinrich, PH.D., was b. at Cologne, June 6, 1712, and d. at Bonn, April 21, 1750. He pub. in 1741 at Cologne the curious hymn book, Neues Gott und dem Lamm ge-heiligtes Kirohen- und Hauss-Gesang der ... Tochter Sion, which completely breaks away from the traditional type of hymn book, and consists entirely of originals and translations by himself. Seven of the original hymns are in Latin: and of these three are annotated in this Dictionary, viz.:-

Almum fiamen, vita mundi, pp. 64. 4.; 1550, ii. Codant justi signa luctus, pp. 215, ii.; 1565, ii. Tandem luctus, tandem fluctus, p. 1709, ii. [J. M.]

Idenquent tecta Magi, p. 677. The version "From the princely city," in the New Office H. Bk., 1905, No. 379, is Chambers's, alightly altered.

Little children, praise the Saviour, p. 1677, i. We have traced this hymn to the Juvenile Harmonist, published by the Sunday School Union c. 1837 or 1838, where it appeared anonymously, and apparently for the first time. It is in several modern collections, including the Scotch Church Hymnary, 1898, and others. [J. B.]

Little children, wake and listen, [Christmas.] Appeared anonymously in the S.P.C.K. Appendix, 1869; Horder's Book of Praise for Children, 1875; and many others of later date, including the Scotch Church Hymnary, 1898, &c.

Little drops of water, p. 679, i. When this Dictionary came into circulation in America, in 1892, the authorship of this hymn was claimed by Mrs. Julia A. Carney (q.v.)as against Dr. Brewer. After prolonged searching and correspondence we find that a hymn by Mrs. Carney was printed in a Reader published for use in the Boston Primary Schools, U.S.A., in 1845. This American text is that given on p. 679. From this it will be seen that Dr. Brewer began his version of the hymn in 1848 by adopting the opening stanza of Mrs. Carney's version of 1845, and adding thereto four inferior verses of his own. Mrs. Carney's text, with variations in most collections, is that now (1906) in C. U. Dr. Brewer's version is unknown to modern hymn books, [J. J.]

Livermore, A. A., p. 680, ii. He d. in 1892.

Lo! He comes with clouds descending, p. 691, L. In the various hymnals published since 1892, there is no uniformity either in the text or in the stanzas used by the compilers. In every instance, however, which has come under our notice the cento has been compiled from the texts as set forth in detail on pp. 681-2.

Lo! on a narrow neek of land. C. Wesley. This cento in the American Meth. Hymnal, 1905, begins with st. ii. of "Thou God of glorious majesty" (p. 1169, ii.), at which place we discussed the origin of the verse, "Lo, on a narrow neck of land." Recently a claim has been made in America to the effect that a hymn beginning with this verse has been discovered among some MSS. of the Georgia Historical Society. The Rev. C. S. Nutter says, in the American Christian Advocate, Mar. 3, 1894, p. 6:-

That the was, had been examined by Mr. Fronklin H. Heard, a magazine writer, who found that, during Charles Wasley's residence in Georgia in 1736 he resided for a time on Jekyl Island with General Oglethorpe and his family. To the wife of General Oglethorpe, who was staying at Syaranah, he wrote from Jekyl Island in 1736: "I Last evening I wandered to the north end of the island, and sloud upon the unrown pathy which was lasted in will need to upon the narrow point which your ladyship will recall as there projecting into the ocean. The wastness of the water, as compared with my standing-place, called to mind the briefness of human life and the immensity of its consequences, and my surroundings inspired me to write the enclosed hymn, beginning.—

" Lo! on a narrow neck of land, Twist two unbounded seas I stand," which, I trust, may pleasure your ladyship, weak and | p. 209, into the 1904 ed. of Hyv. A. and M.

feeble as it is when compared with the sough of the sweet Psaimist of Israel."

From these details we are led to conclude that C. Wesley must have incorporated this hymn in "Thou God of glorious majesty, which was published in the Wesley Hys. & [J. J.] Sacred Poems, 1749.

Lo, what a pleasing sight. This in a few collections is a rewritten form in S. M. of Watta's C. M. rendering of Ps. exxxiii., from his Hymns, do., 1707, and his Ps. of David, 1719, where it begins "Lo, what an entertaining sight" (p. 1240, i. 304.).

Lob sey Gott, p. 402, i. Another tr. is :-Let God, our Maker, Lord of Spring, by G. R. Woodward, in his Songs of Nyon, 2nd ed., 1985, No. 215.

Lobe den Herren, p. 683, i. Another

Praise to the Lord, the omnipotent Sovran, be given, by G. R. Woodward, in his songs of Syon, 1904, No. 193.

Lockwood, Amelia de F. In The Pilgrim Hyl., Boston, 1904, the hymn, "Saviour, Who Thy life didst give" (For the Baptism of the Spirit), is given with this name as the writer. Beyond this we have no information.

Longfellow, B., p. 886, i. Since Mr. Longfellow's death on Oct. 3, 1892, his hymns have been collected by his niece, Miss Alice Longfellow, as Hymns and Verses (Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1904.) From this work we find many of the hymns signed Anon, in the Index to Longfellow and Johnson's Hys. of the Spirit, 1864, were his; several of these, including E, Osler's "O God unseen, yet ever near," were popular English hymns which he rewrote from his own theological standpoint. These rewritten hymns are very widely used by Unitarians and others. During the last ten years the following additional hymns by S. Longfellow have come into C. U.:-

1. Eternal One, Thou living God. Faith in God. God of the earth, the sky, the sea. God in Nature.
 God's trumpet wakes the slumbering world. Call to duly.

4. light of ages and of nations. God in and through all time.

5. Lo, the earth is usen again. Spring. (1876.)
6. Now while we sing our closing pastus. Close of Morship.

7. O Life that maketh all things new. Unity. (1874.)
8. O Thou in Whom we live and move. The Divine

O. The summer days are come again. Summer. From his hymn, "The sweet [bright] June days are come again."

10. Thou Lord of file, our saving health. In Stoknett. (1884.)

Of these hymns Nos. 2, 3 appeared in the Hys. of the Spirit, 1864, and all with the dates appended in Bys. and Verses, 1904. [J. J.]

Look down, sweet Saviour, from Thy holy place. F. Oakeley. [Good Friday.] From his Lyra Liturgica, 1865, p. 94, given as "The Prayer for all estates of men. Adapted from the Missal." Repeated in the Arundel Hys., 1902, no. 64. [J. M.]

Lord, all I am is known to Thee. This is another altered form of I. Watts's " In all my vast concerns with Thee." p. 1240, i. 284.

Lord, be Thy Word my rule. By. C. Wordsworth, of Lincoln. [Confirmation.] From the 5th ed., 1872, of his Ho'y Year, Lord, dare we pray Thee dwell within.

J. Ansice. [The Holy Spirit Appeared in his Hymns, 1836, No. 26, in 28 l. A cento in the Marlborough Coll. Hymns, 1899, begins "How dare we pray Thee dwell within?" The text of this cento is much altered from the original.

[J. J.]

Lord, diemiss us with Thy blessing, p. 687, ii. The date of Hawker's 11th ed. of his Ps. & Hys. as 1811 is an error. The 13th ed. is dated 1807. In his "Advertisement" to this ed. the author says that alterations found in the texts of various hymns were introduced in that edition. This hymn is one of those which underwent alterations. The copy of the 13th ed. to which we refer is in the Church House Library, Westminster.

Lord, enthroned in heavenly splendour, p. 1854, ii. The text of this hymn as given in the 1904 cd. of Hys. A. & M. includes a verse of Dr. Bourne's original text (st. v.) omitted by the Compilers of the former edition. It has slight alterations also which were sanctioned by the author. In The English Hyl. the old text of Hys. A. & M. is repeated. [J. J.]

Lord! for to-morrow and its needs. [Strength for the Day.] The authoress, who desires to remain anonymous, informs me that this poem was written in 1877, and was first printed in the English Messenger of the Sacred Heart (Jan. 1880, p. 20, and signed "S. M. X."). It has been widely used, but generally altered and abridged. The full and correct form is in her In Hymnis et Canticis. Verees Sacred and Profane, by a Sister of Notre Dame (S. M. X.), 1903, p. 28. These Verses were mostly written at Liverpool, for the students of the Liverpool Training College. [J. M.]

Lord, help me to resign My doubting heart to Thee. [Resignation.] Anon, in the Amer. Sursum Corda, 1898, No. 556.

Lord, I believe Thy word of grace, p. 689, ii. This opening line should read "Lord, I believe Thy work of grace."

Lord, in this Thy mercy's day, p. 696, B. In the 1st ed. of The Baptistery, 1842, this is given at p. 297 from "Image the Twenty-second."

Lord Jesu, think on me, p. 760, ii. In Church Hys., 1903, the cento is composed of Mr. Chatcheld's original tr., sts. ii., iii., v., vi., vii. and ix., as slightly altered in Thring's Coll., 1882; and in the 1904 ed. of Hys. A. & M. the sts. from the original tr. are ii., iii., v., vii., unaltered except that the opening words read "Lord Jesus," &c. [J. J.]

Lord Jesus, bless us ere we go. An altered form of F. W. Faber's "Sweet Saviour," &c., p. 1107, ii.

Lord Jesus, we believing. This hymn, dated on p. 1184 i. 3, as 1861, appeared in the London Inquirer, Dec. 1839, p. 620.

Lord, let Thy goodness lead our land. On p. 1578, i., this hymn is said to be taken from F. Doddridge's hymn, No. 269, in his Hymns, 1756. This is an error. It is from his "Salvation doth to God helong," p. 1569, 5. 11.

Lord of all with pure intent. C. Wesley. [Holy Baptism.] One of his Hys. on the Four Gospels left in Ms. at his death in 1788, and included in P. Works, xi., p. 119. In The Meth. Hyma-Book, 1901.

Lord of our life, and God of our salvation, p. 699, i. In the Life of Edward Bouverie Purey, by Canon Lidden, this is looked upon as an original English hymn.

"It was at this time that he [Philip Pussy] composed the well-known 'Hymu of the Ghurch Militant.'
'It refers,' he writes to his hotber,' to the state of the Church 'what is to say, of the Church of England in 1834—assalled from without, enfectled and distracted within, but on the eve of a great awakening" (vol. 1, 1893, pp. 208, 299).

At p. 699, i., this hymn is described as "rather founded on the German than a tr."; but it bears too much resemblance to the German to be regarded as entirely original. The Engl. Hyl., 1906, gives the text of 1840. Except that in 1840 st. ii., l. 3 is "darts of venom," iii., l. 2 is "when sin itself," and v., l. 3 is "or, after."

Lord of the sinless world above, p. 693, i. This hymn was given in the London Inquirer, Feb. 1839, p. 100, as "Hymn to be sung by the children of St. Mary's, Newington." It began "Lord of the countless worlds above," and is signed "W. J. I. 1837." [J. M.]

Lord, Thy people guide and keep. This, in C. W. A. Brooke's Additional Hys., 1903, is a slightly altered form of Bp. How's "Lord, Thy children guide and keep," p. 695, ii.

Lord, when in Simon's house of yore. [Mary's Love and Gift.] This is given in the Preeb. New. Ps. & Hys., Richmond, U.S.A., 1901, as by "Sarah E[dwards] Henshaw, 1878."

Lord, when my soul her secrets doth reveal, p. 678, i. This hymn is given in error to Dr. Ray Palmer. It is by Lord Selborne (Sir Roundell Palmer), and is that noted under Psaiters, English, p. 832, i. 317. [J. J.]

Lord, with glowing heart [I'd] I'il praise Thee, p. 824, 1.4. A full account of this hymn, but too long for insertion here, is given in the Phila. Forward (in Studies of Familiar HymnsbyLouis F. Benson, p.p.), vol.xxi., No. 26. A copy of the article is among the Broadsheets, Julian Coll., Church Ho., Westminster. [J. J.]

After following his medical profession for a time, he became minister of Prospect Street Presbyterian Church, Hull, in 1868, and d. from an accident, at Portree, Aug. 22, 1865. Seventeen of his hymne are in W. Reid's Praise Bk., 1872. Of those the best known is "We praise Theo, O God, for the Son of Thy love" (Praise to " (Praise to God), written 1868, recast 1867.

McKeever, Harriet Burn, b. at Philadelphio, Pa., Aug. 28, 1807, and d. at Chester, in the same State, Feb. 7, 1887. She was ongaged in educational work in Philadelphia for many years, and was associated with St. Andrew's Episcopal Church in that city. Her hymns, written in some instances for use in St. Andrew's, were collected and published as Twilight Musings, in 1857. From this volume we find that "Jesus, high in glory," p. 1574, it., was written by Miss McKeever. [J. B.]

McKenzie, W. S., p. 1673, ii. Another of his hymns, "Child of God, when thou art weary" (Rest in the Lord), is included in the Bap. Sursum Corda, Phila., 1898, and dated 1891. He d. June 13, 1896.

Maclagan, Abp. W. D., pp. 709, i.; 1578, ii. At the present time all Abp. Maclagan's hymns are in C. U., and most of his tunes likewise. With regard to the latter, it is exceptional to find so many tunes by the author of popular hymns sharing the same popularity in the principal hymnals. In Church Hys., 1903, and Hys. A. & M., 1904, combined, there are eight of his tunes, whilst the hymns are six in all.

McSorley, Catherine Mary, Her hymn, "We thank Thee, O our Father" (Praise to God), in Church Hys., 1903, is from the Irish Church Hyl., Appx., 1891.

Ordained in 1892, be became in 1906 Vicar of St. Mark's, Marylo-bone, London. Several of his hymns have appeared in the Church Monthly and other periodicals. The best known is "Here we stand to face the combat" (Confirmation), in C. W. A. Brooke's Add. Hymns, 1993, [J. J.]

Magnae Deus potentiae, p. 711. Another tr. is :-

O Severeign Lord of Nature's might, a full and good version by W. J. Courthope in the S.P.C.K. Church Hys., 1903, No. 66.

Magno salutis gaudio. [Palm Sunday.] Included in the Benedictine ed, of the Opera of St. Gregory the Great (Paris, vol. iii., 170a, col. 879), but without reason. In some of the early Mss., e.g. Brussels 1351, f. 65b, of the 9th cent., and Verona Chapter Library, 90, f. 131, of the 9th cent., it begins" Magnum salutis gaudium." Printed text in Werner, sautus gancium. Printed toxt in Werner, No. 42; Daniel, i., No. 150, ii., p. 382, &c. In the Roman Breviary. Venice, 1478, there is a cento for St. Mary Magdelen, beginning with st. iii., "Nardi Maria pistici," and this in the Roman Brev., 1632, begins "Maria castis cellis." Tr. as:—

This is altered in the Public School H. Bk., 1903, to "Make haste, my soul, to live,"

Maker of the human heart. This cento, in the Hys. for Use in New College Chapel, Oxford, 1900, is composed of sts. iv.-vi. of Dean Stanley's "O frail spirit, vital spark," p. 1087, ii.

Manning, Card. Henry Edward, p.p., was b. July 15, 1808, at Copped Hall, Totteridge, Horts, and was educated at Harrow and at Balliol Coll., Oxford. He was sometime Archdeacon of Chichester, joined the Church of Rome 1851, became Archbishop of Westminster 1865, and Cardinal 1875, d. Jan. 14, 1892. See the details of his career in the Life by E. S. Purcell, 1895, in A. W. Hutton's Cardinal Manning, 1892, &c. He was a voluminous writer, a famous preacher, and a well-known philanthropist and temperance worker. His connection with hymnody was slight. He contributed a tr. to the Holy Family Hys., 1960, noted under Grignon, L. K. The only original hymns we have been able definitely to trace to him are the following, contributed to the Catholic Parochial H. Bk., 1873 (Nos. 358, pts. i.—iv., 359), viz. :-

1. All creatures of Thy hand are good. Temperance.
2. I promise Thee, sweet Lord, that I. Temperance.
4. O holy Patrick! Ireland's samt. S. Patrick.
5. O Jesus! Who for love of me. Temperance.

The following March, D., p. 1578, ii. details concerning Dr. March's hynm, " Hark ! the voice of Jesus crying," have been furnished us by himself :-"It was written at the impulse of the moment to follow a sermon I was to preach in Clinton St. Church to the Philadelphia Christian Association on the text Is, vi. 8. That was some time in 1868."

The original text in full is in The Hymnal, (Presb.), Phila., 1895, No. 361. Dr. March declines to accept the interpolations which have been made in this hymn. We must note also that the incident given in Brownlie's Hymns and Hymnwriters of the Church Hymnary (Scottish), p. 303, relative to this hymn and President Lincoln, is incerrect. It relates to Mrs. E. Gates's "If you cannot on the ocean. p. 1565, i. b. [L. F. B.]

Maria flos, orbis hono« [B. V. M.] This is in the Andernach G. B. (R. C.), 1608, with a German text beginning "Maria rein, du hast allein" (see Büumker, i., pp. 169, 333, who thinks the Latin is a tr. from the German). The German text is in Wackernagel, v., No. 1463; the Latin text is in the Arundel Hys., 1902, No. 181. Tr. as:—"Hail, God's own Bride," by J. O'Connor, in the Arundel Hys., 1902. It is a very free version. [J. M.]

4. Now the Lord our souls has fed. Holy Communion. Also in the Church Miss, H. Bk., 1899.
5. O Lord, I come to Thee. Christ our strength,
6. This day the Lord has spoken. Dedication of self

All these hymns were written for use at Conventions at Keswick and elsewhere, and are of a simple and devotional character. [J. J.]

Martin, H. A., p. 715, ii. In the 1904 ed, of Hys. A. & M. a new hymn by Mr. Martin is included for Passiontide, "Alone Thon trodd'st the wine press, and alone." It was written in Holy Week, 1878. All Mr. Martin's hymns given on p. 715, ii., are still in C. U. [J. J.]

Martyr Del qui unicum, p. 716, ii. Additional trv. are :-

1. Then Martyr of unconquered might, in the Office H. Hr., 1988, No. 786, and 1905, No. 271.
2. Martyr of God, whose strength was steeled, by P. Dearmer, in The English Hyl., 1905.

[J. M.]

Mason, A. J., p. 1679, i., s. of G. W. Mason, was b. May 4, 1851. Dr. Mason has had a most distinguished career, and has held important appointments in addition to those named on p. 1579, i., including that of Select Prescher at Oxford. In 1895 he became Lady Margaret Prof. at Cambridge, and Canon of Canterbury; and in 1903 Master of Pembroke Coll., Cambridge. In addition to other works he pub. in 1875 The Persecution of Diocletian, and in 1902 Ministry of Conversion. His hymns, noted on p. 1879, i., were retained in the revised ed. of Hys. A. & M., 1904 (Nos. 1, 2, 3, were written about 1886, and 4 in 1874). His hymn on the Seventh Word on the Cross, "The life-long task was done," written in 1902. was also included therein. His tra. of the "Salve, festa dies" hymns for Easter, &c., are aunotated under their Latin first lines. [J, J]

Caroline Atherton, Briggs, dr. of Dr. Calvin Briggs, of Marblehead, b. there July 27, 1823, married Charles Meson, a lawyer at Fitchburg, in 1858, and d. there June 13, 1890. Methodist Hymnody, pp. 788, i., and 1579, ii. Since the publication of this Dictionary in 1892, the history of Methodist Hymnody in Great Britain presents several features of interest and importance. Continuing the history from pp. 798, i., 732, i., and 1579, ii., and follow-ing the order there given, we have to record the following facts and details :--

i. Weeleyen Methodists. The revision of the Collection of Hymns for the Use of the People called Methodists, of 1875, added a large number of hymns thereto which were new to Methodist congregations, but it was carried out in too conservative a spirit. The Methodist Churches soon desired a more catholic hymnal. In 1900 the Wesleyan Methodist Conference appointed a Committee "to consider the principles on which the new Hymn Book shall be compiled," and in 1901 a larger Committee was appointed "to make a selection of hymns for publication as a new Connexional Hymn Book." Of this Committee the Rev. Dr. W. T. Davison was Chairman, and the Revs. Nehemiah Curnock, John Telford, and Arthur E. Gregory, Secretaries. In addition to the members appointed by the British Conference, representatives were appointed by the Irish Conference, the Methodist New Connexion Conference, and the Methodist Reform Union. This Committee also acted in harmony with the Australian Methodist Church, by which The Methodist Hymn Book was accepted, an Appendix of 47 hymns being added to secure copyright in the Australian Colonies. The co-operation of so The co-operation of so many branches of the Methodist Churches justified the title of the new book, which is an important manifestation of Methodist union. Another innovation was the appointment on the Committee of a few laymen—amongst whom was the Rt. Hon. Sir H. H. Fowler, M.P., who took an active part in the work.

The publication of The Methodist Hymn Book in 1904 marks an era in Methodist Hymnody. in 1993 marks an era in Methodist Hymnody. John Wesley's name disappeared from the title page, and his famous Preface was omitted. The new Preface gives an historical survey of the various books issued, from the publication in 1779 of 'Wesley's Collection of Hymns for the Use of the People called Methodists to the final edition of "Wesley's Hymns with a New Supplement" in 1875. The arrangement and classification of the hymns is new, but many of Wesley's titles are retained, and some of the Wesley's titles are retained, and some of the sub-sections are almost wholly by the Wesleys. In the section headed "The Gospel Call," out of 76 hymns 57 are by Charles Wesley; in "The Christian Life," containing 289 hymns, "The Christian Life," containing 229 hymns, 164 are by C. Wesley, and 20 are translations by J. Wesley. The whole work contains 981 hymns (really 980, as "Rock of Ages" is given in two forms). Of these, 446 are ascribed to C. Wesley, 8 to J. Wesley, 26 are translations by J. Wesley. Other writers largely represented are: Watts 65 (a greater number than in any other representative modern collection), Montgomery 15, Ellerton 12, Doddridge 11, Cowper, Heber, Bonar and Miss Havergal 10 each. Of translations 8 are by Dr. J. M. Neale and 13 by Miss Winkworth.

The great majority of the new hymns are naturally those which have already found a place in recent hymnals; those which are not yet in common use are rarely of special value. Modern Methodism is represented not only by W. M. Bunting, Dr. Punshon and Dr. Jenkins, whose hymna appeared in the previous edition, but by Drs. Stephenson, Lyth and Burton, E. J. Brailsford, E. Boaden, C. Garrett, A. H. Vine, and by James Smetham—the poet-painter—Messrs. C. L. Ford, and J. E. Vanner, and Miss Bradfield,

The Methodist Hymn Book preserves nearly all that is best and most characteristic in Wesley's hymns; it includes all the great hymns common to evangelical churches, and, whilst peculiarly rich in hymns of personal experience and ovangelistic enthusiasm, pro-vides, as preceding editions had not done, a fair number of hymns on the Church, hymns for children, hymns relating to Christian philanthropy, temperance, &c. It retains its distinctively Methodist character, but, notwithstanding the large number of Wesley's hymns, has lost the provincialism of its predecessors, and has gained vastly in catholicity of tone and teste.

Its reception by the Methodist Churches was phenomenal. More than a million and a half copies were sold within twelve months of publication, and a quarter of a million of the Tune Book, which had been prepared by a Committee, with the editorial assistance of Sir Frederick Bridge.

Three additional collections of hymns for special use have also been published.

(1) The Young People's Hymnal (1896), prepared under the direction of the Wesleyan Book Committee, contains 214 hymns. The special feature of this collection is the brightness and devoutness of the hymns selected. It is intended rather for up-growing youths and maidens than for little children, and is also worth consideration by compilers of School Hymn Books. Shortly after its publication it was adopted as the Wesley Guild Hymnal. For general use it is disadvantaged by the Committee's exclusion of all hymns included in the Wesleyan Hymn Book of 1875.

(2) The Supplemental Hymnary (1897), compiled by Dr. T. Bowman Stephenson, and containing a number of original hymns, had a considerable circulation.

(3) The People's Hymnary, 1906. contains 504 hymns, and is intended to take the place of The General Hymnary (1889). It is a commonplace collection.

Contemporaneously with the publication of The Methodist Hymn-Book, a facsimile edition of "the Third Edition corrected" of Wesloy's Hymns was issued by the Methodist Book Room. This is the edition of 1782, and was the last edited by John Wesley himself. It is regarded as the Standard Edition of Wesley's bymus.

Two works have recently been published in connection with the new hymn-book: (1) The Methodist Hymn-Book Hitustrated, by John Telford, B.A., 1906. In this every hymn has been annotated, and there is a large amount of interesting information gathered from many sources. In this direction this Dictionary has been extensively used. (2) Half Hours with The Methodist Hymn-Book, by Mary Champness, 1906, is a pleasantly-written book of notes and anecdotal comments upon many hymns.

ii. Methodist New Connexion. No hymn book of any kind has been published by this body since 1892. As noted above, the Conference was represented on the Committee which compiled The Methodist Hymn Book, and that collection has been officially adopted by the denomination.

iii. Primitive Methodists. The Primitive Methodist Hymnal of 1887 is still in use, without addition or alteration. A new edition of their Sunday School Hymn Book was published in 1902, and a collection for Hame Mission Services in 1904.

iv. Methodist Free Churches, Their hymn book referred to on p. 731, i., as in preparation in 1888, was issued in 1889, p. 1579, ii. 1, and is now in use. No additions have been made to the Sunday School Hymn Book of 1888. Their Hymns of Light and Life, 1896, contains 332 hymns for Christian Endeavour Societies, Mission Services, &c.

This summary reveals great activity on the part of the Weslovan Methodists in hymnological matters during the past decade. With other branches of the Methodist family very little has been done, and that little has not been of the highest merit. [A. E. G.]

Missions Hymnody, Church of t England Home. Every great Evangelistic movement has been accompanied by an catburst of song. This was pre-eminently the case with the spiritual revival in the latter part of the eighteenth century under the influence of the Wesleys. The Olney Hymns, which appeared in 1779 (p. 867, ii.), also played an important part in the Evangelical movement ia the early years of the nineteenth century. The same was true of the great revival move-ment which occurred in 1858 and 1859. A large number of fervid hymns date from that time, and several small collections were pub., some of which are still in use. It is not, then, to be wondered at that when the Church of England awoke to the importance of special evangelistic efforts, a fresh development in hymnody should accompany the mission movement. Our purpose now is to trace the rise and development of this Home Mission hymnody of the Church of England. For all practical purposes the following details will present the salient features of the movement.

1. The Gamous Landon Twelve Pays' Mission in 1869, with which the movement was inaugurated in the Church of Eugland, did not, so far as we know, produce any collections of hymns for the use of the mission. Possibly in some instances special hymns may have been printed on sheats for the services. It was, we believe, in the Liverpool Mission of 1873 that the first collection of Home Mission Hymns was compiled. This was done by the senior Secretary of the Mission, the they. W. Hay Aitken, at that time Incumbent of Christ. Church, Everton. This collection was considerably enlarged by Mr. Aitken in 1876, and for the first time a complete set of tunes, many of them original, was published under the musical editorship of Mr. James Wangh, Organist of St. Nicholas, Liverpool. This collection, with some alight additions and alterations, was accepted by the Protestant Episcopal Church of America during the New York Missions of 1885, and character of the protein Mission Society. In 1888 Mr. Aitken Church Parochial Mission Society. In 1888 Mr. Aitken consulted a considerable number of his brother missioners with a view to its enlargement, and a new edition any collections of hymns for the use of the mission. with a view to its enlargement, and a new cilition followed, and this revised edition has since been officially nanowea, and the revised entition has since been officially accipited as the authorised herms-book of the Church Parochial Mission Society. The musical edition was edited by Dr. Rightson. It is entitled Hymns for a Parochial Mission, with accompanying Tunes; also short Litterfies for Mission Services, Lundon, a.D. [1888]. It contains several original hymns and tunes.

contains several original hymns and tunes.

2. About 1873 there appeared a collection of a similar kind to the above as Special Mission Hymns. It was edited by the Revs. Shotto D. C. Donglas and W. H. Chapman, and was used first in the Mission at Al. Saints, Berby, in 1873. It has been considerably enlarged, and supplied with suitable tunes, as Hymns for Special Services and Prayer Meetings (Berness & Son, Decby).

3. Avenues the scaling Mission Mymnals was the

3. Amongst the earliest Mission Hymnals was the Durham Mission Hymn-Hook, c. 1974. It was salited by Canon Kaymer, and revised by Canon Body, who contributed to it two original hymns. It contained 127 poses we it two original hymnis, it contained 127 bynnis, with a later Supplement of an additional 10. It has a large circulation, and is deservedly popular. A number of appropriate Pasims and the Te beam, tagether with some forms of Mission Services, are printed with it.

4. In 1874 The Mission Hymnal was published by

4. In 1874 The Mission Hymnai was published by Bennuse & Son. It was compiled by the Rev. E. Husband of St. Michael's, Folkestone, and contains a Pri-face by Canon Body. A later Supplement was added with 41 hymna and 35 original tunes.
5. The Lichfield Church Mission Hymn-Book, 1983, was one of the earliest products of the Mission Movament. It was compiled by Prebendary Lester, who was for some time Diocesan Missioner of Lichfield, assited in the last edition by Canon Bodington, whose suggestions. for some time Diocesan Missioner of Lichfield, assisted in the last cition by Canon Bodington, whose suggestions he adopted "as far as possible." It contains 102 hymns, amongst which the 10 original hymns by the Compiler must take a high place. His tender and beautiful hymn "Hush my soul; what voice is pleading?" may be considered a model of what a mission hymn should be. The compilation is the work of an experienced Missioner, and the lymns are for the most part well chosen. The last cition with tunes is The Lichfield Mission Tune-most (Deby; Benrose & Son, M.D.).

8. In circa 1983 the Rev. J. H. Shaw, formerly Vicar of St. Paul's, Canonbury, published through Bemrose & Son, Derby, a Hymnal for Charch Missions. It is an admirable selection, with 138 very well chosen bymns, arranged with much care and judgment.

7. The Rev. James Stephens issued in 1928 his

7. The Rev. James Stephens issued in 1823 his Mission Hymns. This has been twice enlarged and now contains 113 byrans, with 37 tunes. It contains several byrans by the compiler, some of which have obtained considerable popularity. Some of the tunes by Mr. Boyden Smith are of considerable merit.

Mr. Boyden Smith are of considerable meril.

8. The London Mission Hymn-Book was, we understood, originally compiled for the third general Mission in Laudon in 1884. It contains a large number of well selected hymne suitable for Parochial Missions, and is published with accompanying tunes by the S.P.C.K.

9. The Mission Hymnat of the Church Pastoral Aid Society, 1897, contains 243 hymns and tunes. It is atranged, like many other similar books, on the alphabetical system, which certainly has a good deal to commend it in so far as facility of reference is concerned. It involves, however, the sacrifice of that methodical arrangement of hymns according to subjects which is so great a help to a preacher in his selection of hymns appropriate to his sermon, an arrangement the Westers tangit us to value.

10. Hymns and Litenies for Parochial Missions and Retreats (Parby: Paroch & Sons, N.D.), was compiled by the Rev. P. B. Simeon, from 1873 to 1877 Missister in the diocese of Lichfield, and, 1884–1892, of St. Georges Cathedral, Grahamstown, South Africa. The Grahamstown edition of the collection was cancilcoed for use in the discuss by the Bishop of Grahamstown.

Although this may not exhaust the Mission hymnels published for use in the Church of England, the summary contains all of any importance to elucidate the rise and development of the movement.

In most of these collections there is a large infusion of hymns from Mr. Sankey's Bongs and Solos. It should be frankly recognised that whatever be our estimate of the literary value of the hymns, or the musical merits of the tunes with which they are associated, they have obtained such general acceptance amongst the masses that it is almost impossible to dispense with them in Mission work. Probably it is their unpretentious simplicity that constitutes their charm and accounts for their extraordinary popularity, while it provokes the criticism of those who set art before utility.

Monsell, J. S. B. Since the article on pp. 762-3 was written, copies of the original editions of Dr. Monsell's works have come into our hands, and from them we have to make the following corrections, the numbers following being those given to the first lines of the hymns on pp. 762-8;-

- 18. So tesch me, &c. Hys, and Hisc. Poems, 1837, p. 30.
  17. The broken, &c. " p. 48.
  18. Then art near, &c. " p. 21.

  60, 61, 62, 64, 65. Prayers and Likanies, 1861.
  63, 66-70. Hys. of Love and Praise, 1862.
  72. My slna, &c., , , 1806, p. 34.
  73. I hunger, &c., , , 1806, p. 126.

- It will be seen from this list of additions and corrections that Dr. Monsell multiplied his works by giving much the same material under new titles, and that his Prayers and Litanies of 1861 were unknown to us when the original article was written. We can sincerely add that few hymn writers are so perplexing to the [J. M.] annotator as Dr. Monsell.

A supplementary series of articles appeared in the Moravian Messenger for 1905, with short notices of authors and hymns not found in the ed. of 1849, but included in the enlarged ed. of 1886.

(By a curious oversight the particulars of the He of John Chandler are given under the name of Edward Caswall. In the case of Ferguson, R., the missing number is 1198; in the case of Rosenroth, C. K. vou, the missing number is 1157.)

(now at the Oratory in London), he speaks of it as merely reflecting the original. It was printed as a leaflet for the Month of Mary, 1847, and was included in the Raw. J. B. Morrie's version of The Month of Mary, by Father Maccarelli (2nd ed. 1842, p. 18. I am indebted to the Rev. V. Hayles of the London Oratory for pointing out the above facts.) It is in the St. Illifrid's Hys., 1849, p. 18, Janus and Mary, 1845, p. 83, and recently in the Arwardel Hys., 1902, and many others.

My Hope, my Portion, and my God. An altered version of sta iii.-vi. of I. Watts's "Long have I sat beneath the sound," p. 884, ii.

My Jesus, I love Thee, I know Thou art mine. [Jesus All in All.] This anonymous hymn was given in The London Hymn Book, 1864, and later in several other collections, including Ira D. Sankey's Sacred Songs and Solos, 1881, No. 374. In Snepp's Songs of Grace and Glory, 1872, and a few others it begins "My Sardour, I love Thee," &c. In these two forms it is somewhat widely used in Home Mission collections. [J. M.]

My Lord, my God! if fear or shame, This is the same hymn as "O Lord, my God! if fear or shame," p. 1581, i.

My Lord, my God, what willest Thon? [The Will of God.] This anonymous hymn in Tozer's Catholic Hys., 1898, and others appeared in Hys. for the Year, 1867, No. 74.

My Lord, my Life, my Love. [God all and in all.] This is in the Yattendon Hyl., 1899, No. 35, marked as "adapted by R. B." It is based on I. Watts's "My God, my Life, my Love," p. 1231, I., but is much superior to its original. In The Eng. Hyl., 1906. [J. M.]

My Lord, my Master, at Thy feet adoring, p. 1566, it. In Hys. A. & M., 1304, the last stanza of this hymn has been rewritten.

My times are in Thy hand, p. 681, i. a. This hymn first appeared in vol. i. of The Tract Magazine (R.T.S.), March, 1824, p. 32, in 6 st. of 4 l., entitled "My times are in Thy hand, Pealm xxxi. 15," and signed "Spes." Mr Lloyd, the author, was at that time an official of the R.T.S. The original text reads as in the The Church Hymnary (Scottish), 1898, No. 288, with st. iv., Il. 3-4, "Those hands," &c., "Are now," &c., to which must be added st. v., which is omitted in almost every collection:—

"My times are in Thy hand,
Jesus, my Advocate;
Nor shall Thine hand be arretch'd in valu
For me to supplicate."
[J. J.]

Mysterium mirabile, p. 794, L. Chevalier, in his Repertorium, No. 11830, cites this as in Officia Propria, Grenoble, 1711.

Mystical Rose! by God's own hand, [B. V. M.] This is in St. Winifred's H. Bk., 1854, No. 5, the Crown of Jesus, 1862, St. Dominio's H. Bk., 1901, and others.

Nason, E., p. 784, ii. He d. in 1887.

Never forget the dear ones. [Home.] The tune by Dr. G. F. Root with the title from the first line of this hymn has led many to assume that he was the author of the words also. Bo far as we can gather this is not so. It is, however, in his Young Men's Singing Book, N.Y., 1855, and thence in the Toxic.

Solfa Reporter, March, 1856, p. 117. In the S. School Hymnary, 1905, it is given as Anon., circa 1850. We know of no authority for this date. [J. M.]

Nevin, E. H., p. 789, i. He d. 2 June, 1889. New, H., p. 1196, E. He d. in 1893.

New Version, Supplement to the, p. 801, 4. In the Julian Collection at the Church House, Westminster, there is a copy of the 52mo ed. of the N. V. dated 1699, with which is bound up a copy of the Supplement. The title of the Supplement is practically the same as given at p. 801, 1, but ends thus:—

"Frinted by J. Replintfall, and sold at Stationers' Hall, near Ludgate, by D. Brown, at the Bible without Temple-Barr, J. Wild at the Elephant at Charting-Cross, and most Booksellers, 1700. Price in sheets, 6d., to be sticked singly, or to bind up with the foresaid Version."

The pieces contained are the same as those in the 3rd ed. of 1702 [B. M.] and the same as those in the 4th ed. of 1704, which professes to be "corrected and enlarged."

It is instructive to note also the following extracts from the Letters from the late Most Reverend Dr. Thomas Herring, Lord Archbishop of Canterbury, to William Duncombe. Eq., deceased, from the year 1728 to 1757, London, 1777.

"Letter xxxvii. Croydon House, Nov. 5, 1732."
"The new edition of Tate and Brady is not yet come out that I know of. The emendations suggested wrive much approved of, but my authority to alter them made a matter of some doubt; so the middle way was taken, of correcting the errors * * not the imperfections."

To this there is the footnote:-

"In the edition of these Pealms, 1727, there were above two hundred errors of the press."

The Letter xxxviii., Nov. 25, 1753, contains the following:—

"I have heard nothing of the edition of Tate which you said you would leave for me at Lambeth. If there is time it shall be mude proper use of; and I am sure, thanks are most justly due to you on that affair."

The footnote to this letter is:-

"Mr. Duncombe's corrections, above mentioned (as appears from another letter, dated June 16, 1753), were sent by the Archbishop to Mr. Richardson [King's Printer] for a new edition of Tate's Paalms then preparing."

The letter of June 16, 1753, is not in the printed book of 1777.

It is evident from the copies of Tate and Brady which were in use at the time when it was superseded by the modern hymn-book, that this revision was never accepted or put into circulation by the King's Printer. [J. M.]

Nawell, Ebenezer Josiah, M.A., a. of C. W. Newell, was b. in Southwark, Surrey, June 22, 1853, entered Worcester Coll., Oxford, as an exhibitioner in 1871 (B.A. 1876, M.A. 1878) was ordained D. 1890, F. 1891, and has been since 1900 rector of Neen Sollars, Salop. His hymn,

We peaks Thy Name, all holy Lord [St. David], was written 1898, and first printed in the Northern Churchern and St. David's Weekly, Feb. 29, 1896, as a hymn of the Weish Saints, for St. Iavid's Day, with T versee. In The Kupi. 1926, No. 211, with three versee, relating to St. David alone.

[J. M.]

Newell, William, D.D., b. at Littleton, Mass., Feb. 25, 1804, educated at Harvard, entered the Unitarian Ministry in 1830, retired in 1868, and d. in 1881. In Putnam's Singers and Songs, 1874, there are 11 of his hymns and poems. His "All hail, God's angel, Truth" [ (Thanksgicing), is in Horder's Worship Song, with Tunes, 1905. [J. J.] with Tunes, 1905.

Newman, Frederick William, was b. at Falmouth, Corawall, May 26, 1856. In 1877 he entered as one of the first four students in the Scholae Cancellarii, Truro, and was ordained D. 1879 and P. 1880. After filling several curacies he became Vicar of St. George's, Truro, in 1889. His hymn "Jesus, Lord of our salvation" (St. George's Day), was written on April 6, 1890, as a Processional for use on St. George's Day in his church. It is printed as a leaflet in 7 st. of 6 l. When included in the 1904 ed. of H. A. & M., sts. ii, and vi. were omitted, and slight alterations were made in the rest of the hymu. [J. J.]

Newman, Card. J. H., pp. 803, il.; 1591, ii. The following are also in use at the present time, but, except No. 13, almost exclusively in R. C. collections. The dates in brackets are those given in Newman's Verses, 1868; all thus marked were composed in the Birmingharn Oratory at these dates:-

Mon parts solo sanguine, p. $10, t. The text of the altered tr. by I. Williams, in the "Complete Edition" of Hya. A. & M., is recast by the Compilers in the 1904 ed. of their coll., whilst the original first line, "Not by the Martyr's death alone," is retained. [J. J.]

North, Frank Mason, p.p., b. at New York, Dec. 3, 1850, graduated at Wesleyan University 1872, and entered the ministry of the Meth. Episco. Church 1872. In 1892 he became Correspondence Secretary of the New York Cit: Church Extension and Missionary | berg (104; see Catalogue, pp. 120, 207); in a Soc., and is now (1905) editor of The Christian City. His hymns in C. U. include:—

1. Jeans, the calm that fills my breast. [Peace.] In the Physicath Rul., 1894; Sursum Cords, 1898; The Methodist Hyl., 1905, &c.
2. When cross the crowded ways of life. [City Missions.] In The Methodist Hyl., 1905. [L. F. B.]

Not so in haste, my heart. [Trust in God.] Dr. W. G. Horder's note on this hymn, in his revised ed. of The Treasury of Amer. Sacred Song, 1900, p. 367, is:-

"'Wait' [i.e. this hyan] has been attributed to Bayart Taylor, but I am in some doubt whether it is actually from his pen. I do not find it in his works. It appeared in the Botton Transcript about twenty years ago, signed B. T., which may or may not have stood for Bayard Taylor."

We may add that in the Amer. Pilgrim Hyl., 1904, it is given to Bayard Taylor, and dated 1876, but we have failed to find it in any of his works.

The Bod-Notker, Balbulus, p. 819, i. leian possesses an early 11th cent. Notkerian Troper (Selden, supra 27, now 3415) written in Bavaria, probably at Heidenheim or at Eichstädt. This contains the whole of the first series noted at p. 813, except Nos. 3, 6, 15, 19, 42; of the second series it has Nos. 48, 52, 53, 56, 58, 59, 61, 65, 68, 78, 79, 82, 85, 86, 93, 99, 102, 103, 109. It adds the following :---

- 115. Diem celebremus virginia, die, sia. St. Walpurge,
- 113. Fulget dies praeclarus concils. St. Widhald.
  117. Ormis terrarum regio. St. Washubald.
  118. Summa stirpe genita. Nativ. B. V. H.
  119. Vent Spiritus asternorum alme. Pentecat.

Of these No. 115 is Dreves, M., No. 353; 117 is M., No. 375; 118 is x., No. 17; No. 116 is Kchrein, 748; 119 is Kchrein, 131. There is no reason to think that any of these five are really by Notker.

In the Notkers Sequenzen, by J. Werner (Aarau, 1901), the eight Mss. indexed at pp. 812-815, are fully described and indexed (further enquiry proves that the St. Gall No. 376 conenquiry proves that the St. Gall No. 376 contains No. 18, i.e. "Hanc concordi," and the St. Gall 381 contains No. 86, i.e. "Miles inclite"), with a considerable number of other was, at Zürich and elsewhere; the only additional 11th cent. was, being the Rheiman 132 and the St. Gall 382. The final result is that Werner thinks the following may be accepted as genuine, viz. :---

Nos. 1-5, 8-14, 16-10, 20-31, 33, 34, 86-41, 43-47; also 53, 59, 59, 70, 86, 103, 113; so that, e.g., of those ranked at p. 815 as possible, he only accepts No. 86.

Two interesting monographs dealing with Notker and his time are Die Dichterschule St. Gallens und der Reichenau unter den Karolingern und Ottonen, by Paul von Winterfeld, in the Neue Juhrbücher für das Klassische Alterium, Leipzig, 1900, pp. 341-361; and the Geschichte der Schule von St. Gallen, by P. Gabriel Meier of Einsiedeln, in the Jahrbuch für Schweizerische Geschickte, Zürich, 1885 (vol. x., pp. 35-128). Paul von Winterfeld, before his early death, had been preparing a critical ed. of Notker's Sequences for the Poctae Latini Aevi Carolini; and a critical ed. is promised in the Dreves-Blume Analecta [J. M.) Hymnica, Novas athleta Domini. [St. Dominic.] This, probably of the 13th cent., is in Mone, No. 890, from a 15th cent. Ms. at Karlsruhe. It is also in a 13th cent. Dominican Brev. et Engel-

Now the labourer's task is o'er, p. 519, i. The addition to this hymn of the stanza for use at a "Burial at Sea" was adopted by the Hymn-Book Committee of the S.F.C.K. at the suggestion of the Rev. B. Black, Vicar of Ramsey, Hunts, and first appeared in Church Hyums, 1903. It was repeated in H. A. & M., 1904, with the change of "its dead" to "ker dead." [J. J.]

Now the wings of day are furled. An altered form of S. A. Brooke's "Now that day its wings has furled," p. 118, ii. 6, into the Amer. Pilgrim Hyl., 1904. In the 1891 ed. of his Christian Hys., the author has changed the opening line of his hymn to "Now the eyes of day are furled."

Nu scylun hergen hefeenricaes uerd. Caedmon. [Praise to God.] Bede (Eccles. Hist., Br. iv., c. 24) tells us that these verses were composed by Caedmon at Whitby about 680 (see p. 444, l.), and gives what may be called a Latin prose tr. of them. In a ms. of Bede's History written about 740 (Cambridge Univ. Lib., Kk. v. 16), the vorses are given in the original Northumbrian, and the page containing them is reproduced in the Facsimiles (1st Series, pt. ix., 1879, plate 140) of the Palaeographical Society. The text is on the range graphical Society. The text is also in various more accessible sources, e.g., J. Earle's Anglo-Sazon Literature, 1885, p. 101 (with an English prose tr.), R. Wilker's Gesch. der Engl. Lit., 1896, p. 31, &c. They have been tr. into verse as "We praise the King of realms on high," by R. M. Moorsom, by high life Paradotte of the state of the same of the in his Renderings of Church Hymns, 1901, p. 60, and his version is repeated, unaltered, in [J. M.] Church Hys., 1903.

O day, most calm, most bright. G. Herbert. [Sunday.] Appeared in The Temple, 1633, as the poem for "Sunday." In Herbert's Life, by Izaak Walton, the fifth stanza is thus referred to:-

"The Sunday before his death he rose suddenly from his bed, or couch, called for one of his instruments, took it into his hand, and said:—

"'My God, my God, My music shall find Thee, And every string Shall have his attribute to sing."

"And, having tuned it, he played and song :-" 'The Sundays of man's life."

Although this piece is really a poem rather than a hymn, it is included in a few collections, including the Hymnal eppended to An Order of Prayer for Use in the Royal College of St. Peter, Westminster, &c., 1889. [J. J.]

- O Deus, ego amo Te, Nam prior, pp. 896, i., and 1682, ii. This is in the Symphonia Strenum, Cologne, 1695 (ed. 1707, p. 144); but not in the Hymnodia Sacra, Mainz, 1671.
- O Deus ego amo Te, Nec amo, pp. 836, ii., and 1589, ii. The history of this hymn has recently been investigated by Father F. X. Drebitka, of Kalocsa, in his Hymnus Francisci Faludi, Buda-Pest, 1899; and in the Monnmenta Xaveriana, Madrid, 1899, &c., vol. i., p. 938, &c., but it is still rather obscure. It seems fairly certain that the original was a Spanish or Portuguese sonnet, and was written by St. Francis Xavier in the East Indies about 1546 (see Drebitka, p. 16). The sonnet beginning "No me nueve, mi Dios, para quererte" is in 1900, p. 934, printed from the Epitome de la vida y muerte de San Ignacio de Loyda, Roermond, 1662, as being used dally by St. Ignatius in his devotions, nothing being said of the authorship. The Latin version beginning "O Deus ego amo Te, Nec amo " is neither the authorship to the collection of the same than the said of the same than t earliest nor the only version; and there is no reason to suppose that it is by Xavier. Father Drebitka ascribes it to Francis Garcia, 1672 and 1676, but it had already appeared in the Coeleste Palmetum, Cologne, 1669, p. 491, ed. by W. Nakatenus. The earliest Latin version quoted by Drebitka is by Joannes Nadasi in his Pretiosae occupationes morientium, Rome, 1657, beginning "Non ras movet, Domine, ad amandum Te," at p. 18. He gives also another version by Nadasi in 1665, at p. 19; one by Petrus Possinus in 1667, at p. 19, &c. At p. 26 he prints a version beginning "Amo Deum, sed libere," from Georg Naray's Lyra Coelestis, 1695; but this must be earlier, for it is this version which Scheffler tr. in 1668 (see p. 596, E.). We may add that in Garcia the "O Deus" ends--

"Solum, quia Rex meus es."

and in Nakatenus it ends-

Solum, quis Rex meus es, Et solum quis Deus es."

In the Arandel Hys., 1902, No. 144 is Caswall's version, altered and beginning "I love Thee, Lord, yet not because," and in the 1904 ed. of Hys. A. & M. the last stanza is rewritten. [Ĵ, M,] O eyes that are weary, and hearts that are sore. [Faith in Jesus.] hymn is sometimes attributed to J. N. Darby, with varying dates, the earliest being 1822; but we have found no certain evidence of his anthorship, and must leave it in doubt. earliest date to which we have traced it is 1858. when it appeared in the American Sabbath H. Bh. and Miss Warner's Hys of the Church Militant simultaneously. Its use is almost entirely confined to America, and in later col-[J. M.] lections the text is much altered.

duction de M. de Marolles, Paris, 1662, p. 667, as "Joyous Chant for the time of Easter." The work is dedicated to Monseigneur Mole, who d. 1656, and the approbation of the Paris Doctors of Divinity is dated Oct. 12, 1650. We may add that the text of The English Hyl., 1908, is that of Dr. Neale, "Ye sons," &c.: Church Hys., 1903, is old Hys. A. & M.; The New Office H. Book, 1905, the same with the addition of Dr. Neale's final stanza; and Hya. A. & M., 1904, their old text partly rewritten by the Compilers as "O Sons," &c. [J. M.]

O for a closer walk with God, p. 629, ii. In Notes and Queries, July 30, 1904, in one of a series of the poet Cowper's hitherto unpublished letters, under date of Olney, Dec. 10, 1769, after referring to the serious illness of his friend and companion, Mrs. Unwin, in words of great beauty and tenderness, he adds :-

friend and companion, Mrs. Unwin, in words of great beauty and tenderness, he adds:—

"When I consider the great meetness to which the Lord has wrought her for the inheritance in light; her most exemplary patience under the sharpest sufferings; her truly Christian humility and resignation; I am more than ever inclined to believe that her hour has some. Let me engage your payers for her and for me. You know what I have most need of upon an occasion fitted this. Pray that I may receive it at His hands, from whom every good and parfect gift cometh. She is the chief of blessings I have met with in my lourney, since the Lord was pleased to call me, and I hope the influence of her edifying and excellent example will never leave me. Her illness has been a sharp trial to me. Oh! that it may have a sanctified effect, that I may rejoice to surrender up to the Lord my dearest comforts the moment He shall require them. Oh! for no will but the will of my Heavenly Father!

"I return you thanks for the verses you sent me, which speak sweetly the language of a Christian soul. I wish I could pay you in kind; but must be contened to pay you in the best kind I can. I began to compose them yesterday morning [Dec. 9, 1769], before daybreak, but fell askep at the end of the first two lines: when I awaked again, the third and fourth were whispered to my heart in a way which I have often experienced:—

"Oh for a closer walk with God
A calm and Heavenly frame,
A light to shine upon the road.

"That leads me to the Lamb."

[Here follow the remaining firestanzas of the hymn, and the letter concludes:] "I am yours, my dear Amet, in the bands of that Love which cannot be quenched, &c."

"W. C."

The light which this letter throws upon the hymn, is intensed and contents, &c.

"W. C."

The light which this letter throws upon the hymn is intense and searching. We read a new and pathetically personal history and meaning in the earnest and throbbing lines, and are brought face to face with an agony which would have been voiceless but for the mercy and goodness of God.

O gentes omnes terrarum. [Pe, czvii.]At the end of the Bodleian copy of the Liber procum publicarum, printed at Oxford in 1615 for the use of Christ Church, there is an appendix of six printed pages with Latin versions of Pss. 43, 114, 117, 119 (part), 138, 150, the version of Ps. 117 beginning as above. (Note from Mr. F. Madan: The Appz. is not in the Brit. Mus. copy.) This version is not in the eds. of 1639 or 1660. But in the Psalmi aliquot Davidici in metrum Latinum traducti . . . in usum Academiae cum Conciones kabeantur ad Clerum, Oxford, 1660 (bound up with the Brit. Mus. copy of the Liber precum, 1660), it appears as "O gentes omnes undique," the text of sts. i., ii. being revised and a new Glorie substituted. The text of 1660 is still sung in the University Church at the Latin service on the first day of Term, and is in the Public School H. Bk., 1903. In the Hugby School H. Bk., 1857 and 1906, it is given as "O omnes gentes undique," with an English version beginning "O all ye nations, praise the Lord" (see p. 937, i.). Dr. W. M. Furneaux made a new version in 1902, and this, which begins "O, all ye nations everywhere," is in his Comp. to the Public School H. Bk., 1904. [J. M.]

O God, my strength and fortitude. T. Sternhold. [Ps. xviiii.] This version of the xviiith Psalm appeared in the Old Version, 1561, and was repeated in all the subsequent editions of the Old Version. In the older hymn-books a cento therefrom was in somewhat extensive use in G. Britain and America. It began,

"The Lord descended from above And bow'd the heavens high:
And undermonth His feet be cast The darkness of the sky," and consisted of sts. ix., x. and i., in the order named. In some collections the second line reads "And bow'd the heavens most high," and an additional stanza is placed between sts, ii. and iii., as "He sat serene upon the floods," an altered form of Steruhold's version of Ps. xxix, 10.

O God of Bethel, by Whose hand, p. $32, 1., iii. R. Darracott's version of this hymn was included in The Star of the West, being Memoirs of the Life of the late Risdom Darracott, London, 1813, pp. 40, 41, as a hymn written after his marriage, which took place in Dec. 1741. Hence has arisen the modern claim for Darracott as the author of the hymn, as against the claims of Doddridge. The Darracott version, as the editor of the Memoirs remarks, excites "no high idea of his poetic genius." Besides rewriting the hymn to adapt it to his circumstances in 1741, Darracott added the following concluding stanza:—

"For if, O Lord, Thou ours will be,
We can give up the rest,
Our souls possess'd alone of Thee,
Are indiniedy blast."

[J, M.]

O God, Thou in Thy love [didst] dost make. An altered form of "O Saviour! Thou this day didst make," from J. S. B. Monsell's "The world to-day divides its year," p. 1156, ii.

O God, Thy children gathered here, p. 604, il., No. 4, is given to S. Johnson in error. It is by S. Longfellow.

O God, to Whom our fathers prayed. H. L. Hastings. [Resignation.] From his Songs of Pilgrimage, 1886, in which it is dated 1883.

O God, unseen yet ever near! Reveal Thy presence now. This hymn, in 3 st. of 4 l., was given in Longfellow and Johnson's Hys. of the Spirit, 1864, as No. 44, and entitled "At the Fountain." In the index it is signed Anon. It is, in fact, E. Osler's hymn in a rewritten form, 7 of its 12 lines being direct from Osler (see p. 383, i.). In modern Amer. collections it begins "O God unseen, but ever near," and is expanded into 16 lines, the increase being attributed to S. Longfellow. This form is in several American hymn-books, including The Ptigrim Hys., 1904. [J. J.]

O God, while generations flee Like leaves. [God our All.] An anonymous and undated hymn in The Filgrim Hyl., 1904.

- O God, Who workest hitherto. This, in the American Pilgrim Hymnal, 1904, begins with st. iii. of T. W. Freckelton's hymn, "The toil of brain, or heart, or hand," p. 1196, i., as in Horder's Cong. Hymns, 1884.
- O Gott, du Tiefe, p. 637, il. Another cento from J. Wesley's tr. is:—

Thy hand, O God, Thy forming skill (et. iii.), ip the Seth. F. C. Hys., 1889, No. 7.

- O Gracious God, in Whom I live. This is a cento from Anne Steele's "Alas! what hourly dangers rise," p. 54, L
- O happy band of pilgrims, p. 884, I. The text of this bynn in Church Hys., 1903, is Dr. Neale's original with st, iii, as the first part of st. iv. in 8 lines, and an alteration in st. v., l. 1. That in H. & A. M., 1904, is a new cento, with alterations, from Dr. Neale's full text of 1862. The English Hyl., 1906, has Dr. Neale's text with alteration as below. The original of st. v., l. 1, is "What are they but vaunt-couriers." This is given in Church Hys. as . . . "but Hie heralds"; in Hys. A. & M. as . . . "but the couriers"; and in The English Hyl. as . . . "but forerunners."
- O Haupt voll Blut, p. 635, i. The version by Dr. Alexander, "O Sacred Head! now wounded," appears, with alterations made by the compilers, in the S.P.C.K. Church Hys., 1903, No. 141, as "O Sacred head! sore wounded, With grief and shame weighed down." The fourth stanza would give the spirit of the original better if it read thus:—

"Be near when I am dying;

Oh! show Thy Cross to me;
Thy death, my hope rapplying,

From fear shall set me free." [J. M.]

- O Holy Saviour, Friend unseen, p. 886, ti. In the 1835 ed. of The Invalid's Hymn Book, No. 68, this hymn begins, "Holy Saviour, Friend unseen."
- O how the thought that we shall know, p. 637, i. We have traced this byma to J. Swain's Walworth Hymns, 1792, p. 130.
- O Jesu Christe, wahres Licht, p. 836, i. The version in the S.P.C.K. Church Hys., 1903, No. 203, beginning "O Christ, the true and only Light," is taken from the trs. by Ball and Russell noted at p. 838, i. [J. M.]
- O Jesu, strong and pure and true. W. W. How. [Commemoration.] Written for the Jubilee of Marlborough College, 1899, and included in the Hymns for Use in the Chapel of Marlborough College, 1899. It has passed into the Hys. for the Use of Rugby School, 1896; the Public School H. Book, 1908, and others. [J. J.]
- O Jesus, I have promised, p. 639, t. The original text of this hymn, as in the 1869 Appendix to the S.P.C.K. Ps. & Hys., has been restored in the 1904 ed. of Hys. A. & M. "O! let me feel Thee near me," in the Boston Hys. for Church & Home, 1895, is composed of sts. it. and iii. of this hymn. The original appeared as a leafact (No. 1468), issued by the S.P.C.K. in 1868 as "Hymn for the Newly Confirmed."

  [J. J.]

- O Jesus, make Thyself to me, p. 839, i. Included by Miss Elliott in A Christian Remembrancer, 1870, p. 32.
- O Jesus, Saviour, from on high. T. E. Branen. [Divine Aid desired.] Written in 1872 to the tune "Es ist das Heil uns kommen her," for Hys. for Clifton College, 1872, No. 26.
- O join us, Lord, to those above. This, in the Clifton College II. Bk., 1894, is a cento in an altered form from C. Wesley's " Come, let us join our friends above," p. 248, i.
- O King of kings, Whose reign of old, Bp. W. W. How. [National Thankegiving.] Written for the National Thanksgiving at the celebration of the Diamond Jubilee of Her Gracious Majesty, Queen Victoria, 1897. With slight modifications it can be made of general application, as in the Council School H. Bk., 1905.
- O Lord, if in the book of Life. Beddome. [Joy.] This is an altered form of his "Dear Lord, if in the book of life," from his Hymns, &c., 1817, No. 268.
- O Lord, in me there lieth nought. [Ps. cxxxix.] From The Psalmes of David, &c. (ed. 1823, p. 266), by Sir P. Sidney and his sister, probably by the latter, into Horder's Worship Song, 1905. See Sidney, P., p. 1057, L.
- O Lord, in Whom are all my springs. [Life in God.] An anonymous and undated hymn in Dr. J. Hunter's Hys. of Faith & Life, 1889, and the Amer. Pligrim Hyl., 1901.
- O Lord of heaven and earth. This, in the Amer. Sursum Corda, 1898, begins with st. ii. of E. H. Plumptre's "Lo, summer comes again," p. 897, L. 3.
- O Lord, Who taught to us on earth. R. Massic. [Christian Brotherhood.] Pub. in the 2nd Series of his Lyra Domestica, 1864, p. 151, and entitled "Christian Brotherhood." In a slightly altered and abbreviated form it is given in The Methodist H. Book, 1904, as "Lord, who hast taught to us on earth." [J. M.]
- O Love of God most full. O. Cluie. [The Love of God.] This is given in The Pilgrim Hyl., 1904, as by "O. Clute," We have no further information.
- O lues qui mortalibus, p. 842, i. Another tr. is "In the light all light excelling," by H. N. Oxenham in his Sentence of Kaires, enlarged ed., 1867, p. 178, and Tozer's Catholic Hys., 1898. The version in Church Hys., 1903, is that of Hys. A. & M., 1889. Hys. A. & M., 1994, is the same text with slight variations as "Great God, Who bid," &c. [J. M.]
- O lux beata Trinitas, p. 842. ii. In The English Hyl., 1996, the version is that of Dr. Nealo; and so also in Church Hya., 1903, but with st. ii., 3, from Caswall. In Hys. A. & M., 1904, the version is theirs of 1861, as "O Trinity, most blessed light," with st. ii., S, 4, rowritten. For the version "As fedes the glowing orb of day," see p. 843, H. 10. [J. M.]

- Lutheran Book of Worship, 1899, as by this
- O Mary, my mother, most lovely, most mild. [B. V. M.] This is in St. Patrick's H. Bk., 1862, No. 71, without name of author. Repeated in Hys. for the Year, 1867, and later collections.
- 'O μονογενής Τίος, p. 480, i. This is fr. as "O Word Immortal of eternal God," by T. A. Lacey for The English Hyl., 1906.
- O Mother! most afflicted. [Passiontide.] This is given anonymously in the Cath. Parochial H. Bk., 1873, No. 257, in Tozor's Cath. Hye., 1898, and others.
- O, my Saviour, lifted. Bp. W. W. How. [Good Friday.] From Hys. for Mission Services, 1876, No. 59, and his Hymns, 1885, No. 47, whereit is given in 6 st. of 41., and entitled "The drawing of the Cross," into the 1904 ed. of Hys. A. & M., with the omission of st. ii. [J. J.]
- O nata lux de lumine, p. 644, il. Printed text in Werner, No. 22, from the Rheinau Mes. 82 and 91, now at Zürich. Another tr. is:-
- O Light of Light, by love inclined, by Laurence Housman, in The English Hyl., 1996. [J. M.]
- O North, with all thy vales of green. W. C. Bryant. [Foreign Missions.] This is in his Poetical Works, ed. Parker Godwin, N.Y., 1883, vol. ii., p. 228, reprinted from his privately printed Hymns, 1869. It is headed "Thou has put all things under His feet," but bears no date or place of composition. Its. phraseology is more suited for use in N. America than in G. Britain, but it has passed into various English colls., s.g., the Scotch Ch. Hymnary, 1898, Worship Song, 1905, The Eng. Hyl., 1906, &c.
- O Pater Sancte, mitis atque pie, p. 845, i. Additional tre. are :-
- 1. Father Most Holy, mereiful and loving, Jesu, Redeemer, by A. E. Al-ton, in his Some Liturgical Hymur, 1903, No. 16, and in H. A. & M., 1904, No. 189.
  2. Holiest Father, Mereiful and Loving, based on Blew, in the New Office H. &k., 1905, No. 226.
  3. Father most holy, mereiful and tendor, by Percy Dearmer, in The English Hyl., 1906, No. 150. [J. M.]
- O qualis quantaque lactitia, p. 846, ti. This is also in a ms. of c. 1480 at Zwolle. See O. A. Spitzen's Natezing op mijn Thomas a Kempis, 1881, p. 60. Another tr. of the "Astant" text is "Quires of Angels stand before Him," by G. R. Woodward, in his Songs of Syon, 1904, No. 183. [J. M.]
- O quam juvat, fratres, Deus, p. 848, i, Another tr. is:-

Happy are they, they that love Gad. A free version, sts. iv., v. being practically original, in the Faltendar Rpl., 1899, No. 3t, marked as "Trans, by R. R." He peated in The English Hyl., 1996, No. 298. [J. M.]

- O qui tuo dux martyrum, p. 846, S. The version in Church Hys., 1903, is based throughout on that in I. Williams's Hys. Tr. from the Paris Brev., 1839, p. 58, but only two lines are exactly from it; and st. vi. is from I. Williams's tr. of Miris probat, p. 738, i. In Hys. A. & M., 1904, their version of 1861 is again altered, only one line remaining as it was tr, by I. Williams in 1889, [J. M.]
- O man of God, arise. Haslan K. O sacrum, sacrum convivium, p. 847. i. Fenner. [A Call to Duty.] In the Amer. The Antiphon "O sacrum convivium" formed part of the Office for Corpus Christi drawn up by St. Thomas of Aquino, and seems to have been composed by him. It is in a Ms. of the second half of the 14th cent, now in the B. M. (Add. 14845, f. 43b).

O Sanctissima, O piissima. [B. V. M.] The original form, in one stanza, is in J. G. Herder's Stimmen der Völker in Liedern, ed. Johann von Müller, Tübingen, 1807, p. 175, as "To the Virgin Mary, a Sicilian Sailer's Hymn": with the original melody (in the Hyll Comp. called "Sicilian Mariners"). Herder had collected these folk songs about the year 1776. Two later forms have passed into English. The first is in the Crown H. Bk., 1862, with two additional sts. adapted from the Marian Autiphons, "Tota pulchra" (Reg. 2 B. v. of c. 1070; H.B.S. vol. xxi., 1902, col. 6), and " Sicut lilium " ( Westminster Miesal, H.B.S. reprint, col. 1858, from a Ms. of c. 1400). second is in J. Mohr's Manual of Sacred Chant, 1877, p. 482, with four additional sts, which appear to be modern. Tr. as:-

1. 0 most hely, 0 most pure, in the Crown H. Bk.,

1862, No. 198.

2. O most hely one, O mest pitiful, by J. O'Connor, in the drawdet Hys., 1902, No. 189, with the Latin text, as in Mohr, as No. 188.

[J. M.]

O Saviour Christ, our woes dispel. This is composed of a portion of H. Twells's " At even ere the sun was set," p. 88, B.

O sellg Haus, p. 848, 1. The version beginning "O happy home, where Thou art loved the dearest," in the Scottish Ch. Hymnary, 1898, No. 475, and the Meth. H. Bk., 1904, No. 899, is Mrs. Findlater's tr. of 1858, altered, with her permission, to a more singable metre. [J. M.]

O Shepherd of the sheep, p. 249, ii. 4. Of this text, st. v., ll. 3, 4 have been rewritten in Hys. A. & M., 1904, to the manifest advantage of the hymn. The old Hys. A. & M. text is retained in The English Hyl., 1906. [J. J.]

O stella Jacob fulgida. This is the hymn at Matins on the Festival of the Purity of the Virgin Mary. This office is printed in full in the Opera (vol. vi., Rome, 1751, p. 314, &c.) of Pope Benedict XIV., and was authorized by him in 1751 for use in Portugal. It is now said as a Greater Double, on the 30th of October. It is in the Rom. Brev., Lisbon, 1786, Pars. Aut., p. 516, and later eds. of the R. Brev. Tr. as:-

Star of Jacob, ever beaming, by E. Caswall in his Lyra Catholica, 1849, p. 181, and his Hys. & Poems, 1873, p. 97. It is in several R. C. collections. [J. M.] [J. M.]

O Thou Eternal Victim, elain, p. 850, t. We find that the form of this hymn, "O first in sorrow, first in pain," attributed to Dr. Kennedy at p. 850, t., is in the Denton and Cooke Church Hyt., 1863, No. 77. In the Sherborne School H. Bk., 1888, it is given as by J. Moultrie. Under these circumstances it difficult to determine by whom this recent is difficult to determine by whom this recast from C. Wesley was made, (J. J.)

O Thou, my Light, my Life, my Joy. [For Providence and Grace.] This hynn is attributed in several. American collections to J. Montgomery, and dated 1825. It appeared in Montgomery's Christian Psalmist, 1825, No. 168, without signature, and is not included in the section in that work which is devoted to his own productions, neither is it in his Original Hymne, 1853. It is to the present Anon. [J. J.]

O Thou Who hast redeemed of old. C. Wesley. [The love of God desired.] The cento in the Baptist Church Hyl., 1900, No. 241, is composed of st. i. from this hymn, Hys. and Sac. Poems, 1749, and ii.—iv. from "Oh Thou Who hast our sorrows borne," p. 1265, i. 401. [J. J.]

O Thou Who wouldst not have. Composed of sts. v. and vi, of " And am I born to die?" p. 63, i., in The Meth. H. Bk., 1904.

Thou Whom all Thy saints adore. C. Wesley. [Opening of Divine Service.] The second of two hymns on "Entering into the Congregation," in Hys. and Sac. Poems, 1742. (P. Works, ii., p. 226.) In the American Meth. Hymnal, 1905. [J. J.]

O Thou, Whose chosen place of birth. [Work amongst the Poor.] Horder's Hys. Supplemental, &c., 1891, and The Methodist H. Book, 1904, this hymn is given as by "W. S. Peterson." Beyond this we have no information. (J. J.)

O what can little hands do P p. 1684, This hymn is by Grace W. Hinsdale, and is included in her Daily Meditations for Children, 1868, p. 30 (Brit. Mus. copy). From this we gather that Mrs. Hinsdale's peu-name was "Farin." Farin." [J. J.]

O what hath Jesus bought for me? This, in the 1904 ed. of The Meth. H. Bk., No. 857, is a cente from the old hymn "And let this feeble body fail " (p. 65, ii.).

O when shall I see Jesus, p. 871, i. Mr. C. Graves of Barneval, N.Y., informs us that this hymn is in an American hymn-book entitled The Christian Harmony, or Songeter's Companion, by Jeremiah Ingalls . . Exeter, New Hampshire . . . Henry Ranlet, 1805. Its actual authorship, however, is still somewhat uncertain. [J. J.]

Oakley, Ebenezer Sherman, M.A., 8. of the Rev. Henry Oakley, Congregational Minister, was b. Dec. 24, 1865, at Richmond, Yorks. He studied in arts at Glasgow Univ., and in theology at Airedale Coll., Bradford, and the Univ. of Glesson, and took his M.A. at the Univ. of Allahabad in N. India. He is now (1906) missionary of the L.M.S. at Almora in N. India, and Principal of Ramsay College there. He contributed three hymns to Dr. John Hunter's Hys. of Faith and Life, 1889 and 1896, from which Nos. 1 and 2 passed into the Public School H. Bk., 1908, and Worship Song, 1905.

1, Enduring Soul of all our life. (Waitmatide.)
Written 1886; in Hunter, 1889, No. 176.
2. In life; sarnest morning. [life] in God.] Written 1886; in Hunter, 1889, No. 551, entitled Stude: $\foatie{x}$

3. O Holy Child of Bethlehem. [Devotion to Christ.] In Hunter, 1896, No. 360. [J. M.] [J. M.]

Oi παίδες εὐσεβεία, p. 232, i. From Dr. Neale's tr. is taken "The shepherds keep their flocks by night," in G. R. Woodwards, Songs of Syon, 1904.

Old Version, pp. 657, i., to 668, il., and forcing language beyond its legitimate and 68, i., to 1541, ii. In the history of the Old specific meaning. The Church Hys. text 1585, i., to 1541, ii. In the history of the Old Version in this Dictionary, three editions of this work were noted as missing at the time of publication in 1892. These were: The Geneva edition of 1558 (p. 887, ii., §iii.; the London edition of 1562 (p. 860, i., § vi.); and an edition noted in Watts's Bibliotheca, as 1559 (p. 858, ii., § iv.). Of these, a copy of each of the editions published in 1358 and 1562 has been found. The details concerning these are:—

 The Geneva Edition of 1558,—This copy. which is in private hands, measures 3f inches by 2g inches, the margin having been reduced to the lowest possible limits without injury to the text. It consists of two separately paged parts, the first being :-

The Forms of Prayers and Ministration of the Sacra-ments, &c. . . . Printed at Geneva, By James Poullain and Antonie Rebul, M.D.LVIII.

The second part is :-

Praimes of David in Englishs Motre by Thomas Sterneholde and others: conferred with the Borne, and in certain places corrected, as the fanje of the Prophet required: And, In this Second Edition are added eleven me, newly composed . . . James V. If any be afficied, let him pray, and if any be mery, let him fing Pfalmes.

This edition contained the additions of nine psalms by Whittingham and two by Pollain, as conjectured by N. Livingston (see p. 657, il., § iii.). It was described by us in the Times Literary Supplement, Sep. 19, 1902, p. 277.

2. The London Edition of 1562. The full title-page of this copy is:-

The whole Books of Pfairnes, collected into Englyfk metre by T. Starnhold, I. Hopkins, & others: conferred with the Ebrue, with a pt Notes to fynge them withat, Faithfully perufed and allowed according to theoret appointed in the Quaner moteffice injunctions:

—Very mete to be ifed of all fortes of people privately for their folice & comfort: laying apart all unguly Singes and Ballades, which tende only to the norifhing of oyee, and corrupting of Youth [Texts]. . . . Haprinted at todom by John Day, dwelling over Aldersguic, Oum gratia & privilegio Regie Matefiasis per Septennium, 1862.

This copy is in the John Rylands Library, Manchester, and has been carefully collated by Mr. Mearns. It answers in every respect to the description on p. 880, i., § vii.

Although the edition of 1559, which is still missing, is of no practical value in the history of the Old Version, its recovery would be of bibliographical interest and value. [J. J.]

Omnes una celebremus, p. 868, ii. Iu ams. of at latest 1478 in the Chapter Library at Posen, this is appointed for use "In Summer, on Sundays" (see J. Danko's Vetus Hymnarium scolesicatioum Hungariae, 1893, p. 103). It is also in the Hungarian Missal (Dominorum Ultramontanorum) of 1480, and the Gran Missal of 1484 (see Misset-Weale, i., p. 558, and ii., p. 237). p. 237).

On the resurrection morning, p. 1534, E. In the Church Hye., 1903, the line "Father, sister, child, and mother," reads, " Father, mother, children, brethren," and the definite fact that there are brothers as well as sisters in most families is recognised in this bymn we believe for the first time. The child received the sanction of the author. We fail to see the value of substituting "the recaried body" for "the tired body," as in Hys. A. & M., and one or two others. [J. J.]

Once to every man and nation. J. R. Lowell, [Decision. National.] This, in This, in Horder's Hys. Supplemental, 1894, and Worship Song, 1905, and in The Eng. Hyl., 1908, is a cento from "The Present Crisis," which begins "When a deed is done for freedom," in Lowell's Poems, vol. ii., Boston, U.S., 1849, p. 53, dated December, 1845. The crisis was the war with Mexico. Lowell held that the war was unjust, and that annexation would only enlarge the area of slavery. [J, M]

One more day's work for Jesus, pp. 699, ii. 6, and 1994, i. 8. This hymn is by Anna. Warner, and the tune usually associated with it is by R. Lowry; hence the error on p. 699, ii. 6.

One Thy Light, the temple filling. This in Hys. A. & M., 1904, is composed of sts. v.-x. of J. Keble's "Lord of Life, prophetic Spirit, p. 69, il. The Book of Prayers for Cuddesdon College, in which the original appeared, is dated 1856, the hymn being on p. 109. [J. J.]

Onward, brothers, onward. [Processional.] An anonymous hymn in The Methodist H. Book, 1904. It is an evident imitation of "Onward, Christian soldiers," and is found in the Hys. for Mission Churches, published in 1885 (No. 128), by the Compilers of Hys. A. & N, [J. J.]

Onward, Christian soldiers, p. 870, E. The line in this hymn, "We are not divided," has been brought into agreement with the facts as existing in the Church of Christ today, by the alteration which it has undergone in the 1904 ed. of Hys. A. & M.; it reads "Though divisions harass." [J. J.]

Opus peregisti tuum, p. 878, H. Other tre. are :-

1. Thy work on earth, 0 Christ, is done, in H. A. & H., 1904, No. 170, marked as by the Compilers. It is based on Chandler. The original of st. iv, is:—

" lilic patronus, pontifex, Pacis sequester, que in tua semel profudit caritas, Offerre pergis sanguinem."

2. Thy Sacred case, O Lovd, is run. This is in O. Shipley's Annus Sunctus, 1884, pt. i., p. 154, and marked as by R. Campbell and J. C. Farle, and in Tozer's Catholic Hys., 1898.

3. The version in Charch Hys., 1805, is mainly lifty. A. & M. 1851, text, returning to Chandler in ste. ii., iii. It begins "O Saviour, Who for me hast trod."

"Otav č\(\text{\text{$\psi}}\) of $\text{$\epsilon}\) of $\text{$\epsilon}\) of $\text{$\epsilon}\] of $\epsilon\] of $\text{$\epsilon}\] his Hys. of the Greek Church, 1900. [J. M.]

"Όταν τίθωνται θρόνοι. [Last Judgment.] This is found in the Greek Vespers service for the Saturday before Sexagesima Sunday (Triodion, Venice, 1898, p. 22; printed as verse in Mone's notes to his No. 295). Tr. of the original is taken as a son; but this is as " Ere passing the portals of death, fellowmortals," by G. R. Woodward in his Songs of ! Byon, 1904, No. 178. {J. ML]

Ού θέλω δὲ ύμᾶς ἀγνοεῖν, ἀδελφοί. [The Resurrection.] These are the opening words of 1 These, iv. 13-18, which have been rendered into metre as "Concerning them which are asleep," by G. R. Woodward, and given in his Songs of Syon, 1904. [J. J.]

Our Father which in heaven art. J. Bunyan. [Lord's Prayer.] From his Book for Boys and Girls, 1686, p. 8, into the Council School H. Bk., 1905.

Our fathers' God, to Thee. [National Hymn.] This bymn in the Amer. Hymnal of the Prot. Episco. Church, 1892, is composed of st, i. of S. F. Smith's "My country, 'tis of thee" (p. 1063, I. 18), so altered as to be almost unrecognisable; st. i. of C. T. Brooks's hymn (p. 1566, i. 1) also altered; and st. ii. of J. S. Dwight's "God bless our native land" (p. [J. J.] 1666, ii.).

Our souls shall magnify the Lord, p. 875, E. This hymn originally appeared in Collyer's Hymns, &c., 1812, No. 917.

Owens, Priscilla Jane, was born July 21, 1829, of Scotch and Welsh descent, and is now (1906) resident at Baltimore, where she is engaged in public-school work. For 50 years Miss Owen has interested herself in Sundayschool work, and most of her hymns were written for children's services. Her hymn in the Scotch Church Hymnary, 1898, "We have heard a joyful sound" (Missions), was written for a Sunday-school Mission Anniversary, and the words were adapted to the chorus "Vive le Roi" in the opera The Huguenots. [J. B.]

Oxenham, Henry Nutcombe, B.A., Was b, at Herrow in 1829, educated at Harrow, and Balliol Coll., Oxford (B.A. 1850, U.A. 1854). He was in 1856 curate of St. Bartholomew, Cripplegate, London. After joining the Church of Rome in 1857 he was for some time master at St. Edmund's Coll. near Ware, and then at the Oratory School, Birmingham. He d. March 23, 1888. His hymns and tre. are principally in his Manual of Devotions for the Blessed Sacrament, 1854, and his Sentence of Kaires, 1854 (2nd ed. 1867). See Index of Authors and Translators. [J. M.]

P.

Page, Edgar, p. 1585, i. In his Sacred Songs, &c., Mr. Sankey attributes the hymns "I've reached the land of corn and wine," and "Simply trusting every day," to "Edgar Page," as stated on p. 1895, i.; but in his My Life and Sacred Songs, 1906, he gives both to "E. P. Stites," together with some details concerning them, but without any reference to the change in his ascription of authorship.

Falmer, Alice, nee Freeman, b. at Colesville, N.Y., in 1855, and graduated from Michigan University, 1876. She took great interest in education, and held several responsible positions in connection therewith, including that of Dean of the Women's Department of the University of Chicago 1892-95. She held the degrees of PH.D., L.H.D., and LL.D. Married in 1887 to Prof. George H. Palmer, IL.D. She d. suddenly in Paris in 1902. Her hymn "How sweet and silent is the place" (H. Communion) was written in 1901. [M. C. H.]

Palmer, Edmund Stuart, w.s., was b. Dec. 31, 1856, at Wherwell Priory, Hants, and educated at the Univ. of Edinburgh (M.B. and C.M., 1882) and Cuddesdon College. Peace of God, which knows no measure. [Peacs of God.] These eight lines were given in the Unitarian Book of Hya., Boston, U.S.A., 1846, as "Anonymous." It has been repeated in many hymnals to the present time, but its author has not been discovered. Line 5, usually given as the opening line of st. ii. when the hymn is divided, is C. Wesley's "Come, Almighty to deliver," from his "Love Divine, all loves excelling," and the rest are lines rewritten from the same hymn. [J. J.]

Peace, perfect peace, in this dark world of sin, p. 888, i. Bishop Bicker-steth's son, the Rev. S. Bickersteth, p.p., Vicar of Leeds, has kindly furnished us with the following history of this hymn :-

"This hymn was written by Bishop Edward Henry Bickersteth, p.p., while he was spending his summer holiday in Harrogate in the year 1875, in a house facing the Stray, lent to him by his friend Mr. Armitage, then Vicar of Casterion.

Vicar of Casterton.

"On a Stunday morning in August, the Vicar of Harrogate, Canon Gibbon, happened to preach from the text, "Thou will keep him in perfect passes whose mind is stayed on Thee," and altitude to the fact that in the Hebrew the words are "Poace, peace," twice rejected, and inspirity translated in the 1611 translation by the phrase, "Perfect peace," This sermon set my father's and the relation on the sublect He altered the server found in phrase, "Perfect peace." This sermon set my father's mind working on the subject. He always found it easiest to express in verse whatever subject was uppermost in his mind, so that when on the afternoon of that Sunday he visited an aged and dying relative, Archdeacon Hill of Liverpool, and found bim comewhat troubled in mind, it was natural to him to express what troubled in mind, it was natural to him to express in verse the spiritual comfort which he desired to convey. Taking up a sheet of paper he then and there wrote down the hymn just exactly as it stands, and read it to this dying Christian.

"I was with my father at the time, being home from school for the summer holidays, and I well recollect his coming in to tea, a meal which we always had with him on Sunday afternooms, and saying, "Children, I have written you a hymn," and reading us "Fesse, perfect peace," in which, from the moment that he wrote it, he never made any alteration. never made any alteration.

"I may add that it was his invariable custom to expect each one of us on Sundays at tea to repeat a hymn, and he did the same, unless, as frequently happened, he wrote us a special hymn hipself, in which way many of his hymna were first given to the Church.

"It is not always noticed that the first line in each verse of "Peacs, perfect peace," is in the form of a question referring to some one or other of the disturbing experiences of life, and the second line in each verse endeavours to give the abswer. Some years later than 1875 an invaild wrote to my father pointing out that he had not met the case of sickness, which induced him to write two lines which appropriately can be added, but which he himself never printed in his own hymn-book, so that I do not know how far he would wish them to be considered next of the hymn. part of the hymn.

"The bymn has been translated into many tongues; and for years I doubt if my father went many days without receiving from different people assurances of the comfort which the words had been allowed to bring to them. The most touching occarion on which, personally, I even heard it song was round the grave of my eldest brother, Bishop Edward Bickersteth (of South Tokyo), at Chiselden, to 1887, when my father was chief mourner."

"This answer!" interesting account of this

This unusually interesting account of this widely used hymn will be of permanent interest to lovers of this lyric, and will set at rest all speculations as to its origin and design. [J. J.]

Pearce, Lydia Freeman, née Moser, dr. of Roger Moser, b. at Kendal, 1841, and m. in 1870 to the Rev. R. J. Pearte, D.C.L., now (1905) Vicar of Bedlington, Northumberland. Mrs. Pearce is deeply interested in Foreign Missions, and has written several poems in reference thereto which have been printed from time to time in the C.M.S. Gleaner, &c. One of these, "In the hollow of His hand" (The Missionary's Farewell), has been set to music by her son, R. F. Pearce, and pub. by Novello & Co. Her hymn:

O Bon of Man! Greet Sower [For Sowers' Bands] was written in 1893 for the Durham Sowers' Band, of which Mrs. Pearce was the secretary for some years. It was privately printed, and then included in the Church Miss. H. Rk., 1899, No. 200. It is well adapted for Sowers Bands and kindred gatherings.

Pestel, Thomas, one of the chaplains to King Charles I., was Rector of Packington, Leics., until he was sequestrated from it by the Westminster Assembly in 1646. His hymns appeared in his Eermons and Devotions old and new. Revived and publisht as an obligation of gratitude to all such of the nobility, gentry and clergy as retain the noble conscience of having ministered to the weak condition of the Author, now aged 73 . . . by Thomas Pestel, the meanest among his late Majesties Chaplains in Ordinary, Loadon, 1659 (B. M. copy is 4452. sa.). He seems to have died soon after the publication of this work. The Sermons are of 1638 and other years. Of the poetical pieces two have come into use :-

1. Bairest of Morning Lights appear. [Christmas.]
In 1608, as above, as "A Pealm for Christmas Day Morning." The Emplish Hyl., 1908, gives siz. v.-ix., beginning "Behold, the great Creator makes," as No. 29.

Pise, Charles Constantine, was b. in 1802 at Annapolis, Md., graduated at Georgetown, D.C., and was ordained in 1825. He was for some time attached to St. Patrick's Church, Washington, and while there, was, by the influence of Henry Clay, appointed chaplain to the U.S. Senate, the only time the post has ever been held by a Roman Catholic. In 1849 he became Rector of the Church of St. Charles Borromeo in Brooklyn, N.Y., and d. at Brooklyn, May 26, 1866. Two hymns by him are in the Appa. to the N.Y. edition of E. Caswall's Lyra Catholica (1851, pp. 422, 427), and are ropented in Hys. for the Year 1867, viz.:—

Pitié, mon Dieu! c'est pour notre Patrie. [Sacred Heart of Jesus.] This hymn has evidently been written since 1870, and is found in the Paray-le-Monial Pèlerinage National of 1873, p. 30, the Abbé Saurin's Recueil de Prières et de Cantiques, 1899, No. 160, and many other recent French books.

The earliest source we can discover is the Echo de Four-viers, April 26, 1873, p. 203, where it has no author's name. A reply from M. Blanchon, of Lyons, informs us that It was written early in 1873 by father, M. Jean Blanchon, founder and first director of the Echo de Fournière, was first published there, and first used at the Paray-le-Moulai Pilgrimage in 1873.

The hymn has been tr. as:—

Pity, my God; 'tis for our loved land. A free version by Canon Laurence Toole (q.u.) in Canon L. G. Vere's Cush. H. He., 1877, No. 36, the C.SS.R. Appx. of 1835 to Hys. for the Year, No. 312, Tozer's Cath. Hys., 1898, and others.

Pope, Edward. From J. Telford's The Methodist H. Book Illustrated, 1906, we learn that Mr. Pope, a brother of the Rev. H. J. Pope, D.D., Wesleyan Home Missionary Secretary, was born at Hull in 1837. In 1863 he founded the Wesleyan German Mission in London. He took up his residence at Geraldton, Western Australia, in 1891, where he now (1906) resides. For his tr. of "Jesu, geh voran," soe under the same.

Pope, Robert Martin, M.A., s. of Rev. H. J. Pope, D.D. (ex-President of the Wesleyan Conference), was b. in London, Jan. 4, 1865, and was educated at Manchester Grammar School, Victoria Univ., Manchester, and St. John's Coll., Cambridge (B.A. 1887, M.A. 1896). He entered the Wesleyan Ministry in 1883 and is now (1906) stationed at Oxford. He was joint author of The Hymns of Prudentius, translated by R. Martin Pope and R. F. Davis, 1995, being a verse tr. of the Cathemerinon of Prudentius with notes. Two of Mr. Pope's versions are in The Engl. Hyl., 1906, Nos. 54, 55. He also contributed articles on Latin Hymnody, with some original tre, to the London Quarterly Review, July 1905 and Jan. 1906, with a supplemental note in July 1905 containing two trs. into Latin verse, Popple, Maria, p. 1197, f. She was b. in 1796.

Potter, T. J., p. 901, E., was b. June 9, 1828 (not in 1827), ordained 1857, and d. Aug. 31, 1873. The hymn:—

Pracelera custos virginum. [Purity of the B. V. M.] This is the Vespers hymn of an office authorised in 1751. (See "O Stella Jacob," p. 1683), and found in later editions of the Roman Brev., e.g., the Lisbon ed. 1786, Aest., p. 515. Also in Daniel, iv., p. 340. Tr. as:—

Bleet Guardian of all virgin souls, by E. Caswall, in his Lyra Catholica, 1849, p. 179; repeated in the Cath. Hyl., 1860, No. 75, the Arundel Hys., 1902, No. 186, and others.

Praecursor altus luminis, p. 808, ii. This is also in a 9th cent. Ms. at Trier, No. 1245, f. 159. The version:—

The high forerunner of the morn, in H. A. & R., 1994, No. 235, is marked as "Neale and Compilers," but only three lines remain as Neale wrote them. St. ill. is made to relate entirely to St. John the Baptist, as Bede meant it to do.

Praecursoris et Baptistae, p. 396, i. This is in an early 14th cent. Paris Missal in the B. M. (Add. 16905, f. 260). Also in a ms. in the Communal Library at Assisi (695) written in France in the 13th cent., apparently at Paris (see U. Chevalier's Bibliothèque Liturgique, vii., p. 385). It cannot therefore be by Pistor, who was still living in 1414. [J. M.]

Praise the Lord! ye heavens, adore him, p. 903, il. Mr. W. T. Brooke informs us that he has discovered a leaflet with this hymn thereon, which was printed for General Use, and which he regards as an older copy of the hymn than that noted on p. 803, il. That this may be so we admit, but that it is so is open to question, seeing that the leaflet is neither signed nor dated. The authorship and date of the writing and first printing of the hymn are therefore still open to investigation and research. The "Rev. Mr. Hewlett," referred to on p. 803, il. 1, was John Hewlett, b. 1762, became Morning Preacher at the Foundling, about 1802, d. in London, April 13, 1844, and was buried in the vaults of the Foundling Chapel. [J. J.]

Praise to the Holiest in the height, p. 804, II. The Dream of Gerontius appeared in The Month for May and June, 1865. This hymn is in the June number, p. 537, as sung by the First Choir of Angolicals. A copy of the rare first separate ed. of The Dream (1866) is in the Brit. Mus., and another in the Church House, Westminster.

Praise ye the Lord! all nature join [Ps. cl.]. This is in the Amer. Presb. Ps. & Hys., 1843, as the second version of Ps. cl. In their New Ps. & Hys., 1901, erroneously given to "Isaac Watts, 1707."

"Prichard died in 1644, and after his death his poems were collected and published under the title Canwyll y Cymry (The Wetshment's Candle). [See p. 1849, il.] About 50 editions have been issued, and they are still popular. Hymns selected from the Canwyll y Cymry appear in most Welsh hymu-books, and translations made by the Rev. Juhn Gambold appeared in the 1754 Moravian Hymn Book [p. 796, ii. 5]. Selections also from the Canwyll y Cymry, for the use of the children in Welsh schools, were made by the Rev. Griffith Jones of Llandowror, and published as "Pigion Prydyddiaeth Pen-Pardd y Cymry. This was circulated in large numbers as a means of conveying religious truths to poor ignorant people and to children. A hibtiography of Prichard is given in F Cymrarodor," vol. xiii. [J. J.]

Primers, pp. 909-812. The Rev. Edgur Hoskins devoted much time to the history of Primers, and finally published the results in Horae Beatae Mariae Virginis, or Sarum and York Primers, with kindred books and Primers of the Reformed Roman Dee, together with an Introduction. By Edgar Hoskins, M.A., London. 1901.

In 1902 the Rev. E. S. Dewick edited for the Henry Bradshaw Society, Factimiles of Horae de Beata Maria Virgine from English MSS. of the Eleventh Century. In this work the MSS, which are reproduced are Reg. 2 B. v.

and Tiberius, a. iii. at the British Museum. At p. 811, i., "relics apparently of some lost Primer" are referred to. This Primer has been found. It is in the Bodleian, and is dated 1673. Mr. Orby Shipley gave an account of it in The Mouth for July 1895. [J. M.]

Quaker Hymnody. Although the writing of hymns and sacred poems by members of the Society of Friends, both in Great Britain and America, including the well known names, Bernard Barton and J. G. Whittier, is a matter of history, the singing of hymns in any of their services has been an innovation within the past trates at Dambeck in the Altmark. In vol. iii. fifty years. A member of the Society has kindly communicated the following information:-

"The singing of hymne by Quakers arose in this manner. About 50 years ago [c. 1855] the Quakers started Sunday schools for men, and they strongly urged all men attending these classes to attend some place of worship, not necessarily a Quakers' hiesting House. Finding that a great many of the scholars still did not attend any place of worship, evening meetings were started in almost all the large towns and cities, which were called 'mission meetings,' and here hymns wers always sung. Hymns are never sung in the regular Quakers' Meeting, but only at these 'mission meetings,' It was always the custom in Quaker families for the children to rectie hymns on Sunday nights; and it was also the custom for the boys and girls at the Quaker schools to rectie them. About 50 years ago [c. 1855] John Ford, who was the headmaster of the Quakers' school at York, made a collection of hymns, and this book has been known ever alone as John Ford's Hymn. Book. The way be made his collection was by writing to leading Quakers and asking them to send him a list of their favourite hymns, and from these lists he made his collection." cullection."

This collection contains 400 hymns, and is supplied with an Index of Authors and Translators, and also with a list of suggested Tunes. For its purpose as a compilation it is remarkably good.

Quem pastores laudavere. [Christmas.] The oldest form known is in a Hobenfurt MS. of the 15th cent. (see F. X. Haberl's Kirchen-musikalisches Jahrbuch, 1888, p. 36), where it is in 3 sts. with the melody always sung to it, as in Dr. J. Zahn's Pealter und Harfe, 1886, No. 24. In many parts of Germany it was sung in Pre-Reformation times by the children at the first Matins and Vespers of Christmas; and was similarly used, in Latin, by the Lutherans in some parts of Germany at least as recently as 1855 (see Daniel, iv., p. 258; Fischer, ii. 182, 225, &c.). In addition to his hymns noted on p. 951, ii., he has written and pub. mainly in sheet form many others, the most important and best-known being :-

2. O glarious Maid, exalted far. This is a tr. of "O glarious Remina," by Percy Dearmer, in The English Byl., 1806, No. 215.

Qui procedis ab utroque, p. 945, i. 1.

The form in the New Office H. Bk., 1905, No. 488, beginning "O Thou, the weary pilgrim's Rest," consists of sts. ix., x., xi., xiii, of Caswall's mights, and our music was intentionally of the popular kind. I wrote the first stansa, and sent it to two gentlemen for music. The music which seemed to me to best suit the words was written by T. G. Tomer, teacher of public schools in New Jersey, at one time on music (which was revised by Dr. J. W. Blechoff, the organist of rhy church), i wrote the other stansau." The hymn became at once popular, and has been translated into several languages. In America it is in numerous collections; and in G. Bittelin, in The Charch Hymnary, 1898, Horder'r Worship Song, 1905, The Methodist H. Bh., 1904, and others. It was left undersed by Dr. Rankfin, but I. D. Sankey gives it as 1882. B. Bk., 1904, and others. It was left undated by Dr. Rankin, but I. D. Sankey gives it as 1882.

2. Beautiful the little hands. [Little ones for Jones.] Given without date in Gloria 100, New York, 1900.

Dr. Rankin's trs. include versions of German, French, Latin, and Welsh hymns, His con-tributions to the periodical press have been [J. J.] numerous.

Rawes, Henry Augustus, D.D., whose name is associated with Roman Catholic hymnody (see p. 276, 11, 81, 32, and Index, p. 1817) both as translator and compiler, was the son of the head master of Houghton-le-Spring Grammar School. He was b. Dec. 11, 1820, and educated at Houghton-le-Spring, and Trinity Coll., Camb., B.A. 1849, M.A. 1852. The Latti was written in 1795; the tr. is decidedly archate in style, e.g., Collin's "Mundoque das printeredia" is much more modern than "To set the world upon its base." [J. M.]

Receive. O Lord, in heaven above. St. Ephraim of Edessa. [For a Vigil.] This version, by Professor F. C. Burkitt, was first pub. in The English Hyl., 1906, No. 194. The original "Qubbel, Maran ba'úth kullan" is in S. Ephraim's Opera (Rome, 1732-46, vol. vi., p. 536), as Paraenesis lxvi. It was first printed in the Maronite Ferial Offices, and is also found among the Canticles at the end of Nestorian Psalters, as the hymn for the Necturn of Thursday. Raymond, Bossiter Worthington, Regina coeli lastare, p. 854, i. This is PH.D., was b. in Cincinnati, Ohio, April 27, 1840. found in many MSS, of the 14th cent., e.g., the Harl. 1260, f. 172, and the Add. 23145, f. 137, in the B. M.; the Bodl. 62, f. 52b, and Rawl. lit. d. 4 (15846), f. 188, in the Bodleian, &c. It was in use among the Franciscans in 1249 (see Lucas Wadding's Annales, i. 703). But the ascription to Pope Gregory V., who d. 998, seems to be unfounded (see Dr. Martin Rule's St. Anselm, 1883, i., p. 44: "A pretty legend; it reminds us of the 'Regina coell lactare' which the angels sang in the hearing of St. Gregory"). The Pope Gregory to whom the legend originally astribed it was Gregory the Great, who d. 604. See also note on "Salve regina," p. 1697, ii. In Card. Tommasi's Opera, iv., p. 100, from a 12th cent. antiphonary at Rome. [J. M.]

Reinmar, p. 955, i. The Mances Ms. was restored to Heidelberg Univ. Library in 1888.

Rejoice, O land, in God thy might. [National Thanksgiving.] This, in the Yattendon Hyl., 1899, No. 54, is marked as "Words written for this Canon [Tallis, Mode viii.] R. B. 97"; i.e. it was written in the Jubilee year 1897. Again, at p. 54, it is marked as "Words by R. B. written for this restored tune as sung at Wells Cathedral." The tune is that to Ps. Invii. in Parker's Pealter (see p. 917, il.). In The Engl. Hyl., 1906, it is set to Wareham. [J. M.]

Rejoice to-day with one accord, p. 965, il. This hymn by Sir II. W. Baker is given in the H. Book for the Use of Wellington College, 1902, in a recast form of two stanzas.

Ride on, ride on in majesty, p. 961, i. In the 1903 ed. of Church Hys. and in The English Hyl., 1966, the original text of this hymn is restored.

Riley, John Athelstan Laurie, u.s., s. of John Riley, Mytholmroyd, Yorks, was b. in London, Aug. 10, 1858, and educated at Eton and at Pembroke Coll., Oxford (B.A. 1881, M.A. 1883). He has been since 1892 a member of the House of Laymen of the Province of Canterbury. He was one of the compilers of The Engl. Hyl., 1906, and contributed to it seven tre. from the Latin (34, 185, 193, 195, 213, one from the Greek, beginning," What sweet of life endureth," from Roia του βιου, p. 699, i., and the following originals:-

1. Come, let us join the Church shove. Martyrs.
2. Saints of God 1 Lo, Jesu's people. St. Eartholometer. The initials of the lines form the acrostic Saint Bartholomew; it is really a general byun for Apostles.
3. Ye watchers and ye holy ones. Universal Praise (J. M.)

Ringwaldt, B., p. 661, ii. Another tr. of the "Es ist gewisslich" is "That great day of the Lord draws nigh," by M. W. Stryker, in his Song of Miriam, 1868, p. 74, and Church Song, 1889, No. 652.

Rise, glorious Conqueror, rise, p. 181, ii. 4. An altered form of this hynn in a few collections is "Rise, glorious Victor, rise, Ritter, Fanny Malone, née Ray-mond, b. in 1840, and d. in 1890. She was the wife of Dr. Frederic Louis Ritter, and was known as a writer on musical subjects, and as a public singer in New York. Her publications include Woman as Musician. 1877; Some Famous Songs, 1878; Songs and Ballads, 1887; and some tre. from the German (see Index of Authors and Trs.). [L. F. B.]

Roberts, Daniel C., p.n., of the Prot. Episco. Church in America, b. at Bridge Hampton, L.I., Nov. 5, 1841, and graduated at Gambier College, 1857. After serving for a time as a private in the Civil War, he was ordained in 1866. He is at present (1905) Rector of Concord, N.H. His hymn, "God of our fathers, Whose almighty hand" (National Hymn), was written in 1876 for the "Centennial" Fourth of July celebration at Brandon, Vermont. In 1892 it was included in the Prot. Episco. Hymnal, and again in Sursum Corda, 1898. [L. F. B.]

Roberts, Richard Ellie, was b. in London, Feb. 26, 1879, and now (1906) is a journalist, &c., residing at Dorchester, Oxon. He contributed four trs. to The English Hyl., 1906.

Robilliard, H. W., is given as the author of "God of love, our Father, Saviour" (Consecration of a Church), in the Amer. Prot. Episcopal Hyl., 1892. It is deted 1888.

Robinson, C. S., p. 969, i. He d. at N.Y., Feb. 1, 1899.

Robinson, Joseph Armitage, D.D., Dean of Westminster since 1902, of Christ Coll., Camb. (B.A. 1881, M.A. 1884, D.D. 1896), sometime Fellow of his College, Norrisian Prof. of Div., Camb., Rector of St. Marg., Westminster, and Canon of Westminster, &c., is only slightly associated with hymnology. His hymn, "Tis good, Lord, to be here" (Transfouration), was written c. 1890. It was included in the 1904 ed. of Hys. A. & M., and supplies a long-felt want with respect to hymns on the Transfiguration.

Rock of Ages, cleft for me, p. 370, i. In the Times, June 3, 1898, Dean Lefroy of Norwich has a letter respecting this hymn, together with one from Sir W. H. Wills on the same matter. The burden of this correspondence is a claim made by Sir W. H. Wills as to the origin of this hymn. His statement is:

"For same years he [Toplady] was Corate in sole charge of my parish of Blagdon, on the Mendips, about eight miles from Wells and four miles from Wrington, where Hannah More long resided at Barley Wood.

"Toplay was one day overtaken by a beavy thunderstorm in Parrington Coombe, on the edge of my property, a rocky gien running up into the heart of the Mendras range, and there, taking shelter between two massive plers of our native limestone rock, he penned this hymn, Rock of Ages."

On turning to p. 970, i., we find that the first stauze of this hymn was printed in the Gospel Magazine for Oct. 1775, and the full text in the same magazine for March 1776.

Toplady was Curate at Blagdon from April 1702 to April 1764. This gives some twelve years or more from the alleged circumstances of its composition to the printing of the first stanza in 1775, and of the full hymn in 1776 in the Gospel Magazine. To this element of delay in the printing of the hymn we must add that it was used by Toplady, not as an illustration of a providential deliverance in immediate danger in a thunderstorm, but as an argument against John Wesley's doctrine of the possibility, if not certainty, of absolute holiness in men. Its title—"A living and dying PRAYER for the HOLIEST BELIEVER in the World," is clear evidence of Toplady's object in first printing the hymn,

From enother source we were informed that the tradition concerning its composition in Blagdon during Toplady's residence there from 1762 to 1764, and during a thunderstorm, was old and widespread. We have put this to the test, and find that the alleged composition, as so fondly believed in, was never heard of in the parish until the advent of Dr. John Swete as Rector in 1850, that is, 75 years after its first stanza appeared in the Gospel Magazine. Our witness is the schoolmistress who was teaching in the parish school when Dr. Swete came to the parish and who is still (1907) alive, Dr. H. B. Swete, now Reg. Prof. of Divinity, Cambridge, who was Curate to his father at Blagdon from 1858 to 1865, cannot trace the tradition beyond his father's statement. Beautiful as the tradition is, we must have clearer and more definite information concerning it before we can accept it as an undoubted fact. [J. J.]

Roman Catholic Hymnody, English, p. 978, 1586. On the general subject of R. C. Hymnody, see an interesting series of articles in the Month (Feb. and March, 1894, and July and Sept., 1895), by Mr. Orby Shipley; and an edifying and diverting paper, from the standpoint of the hymnal compiler, by the Rev. T. E. Bridgett, in the Month for Dec., 1895. To the Roman Catholic hymn-books noted at v. 978 add :--

1. Catholic Choralist. By William Young, Dublin,

5, St. Patrick's Hymn-Book: Dublin, 1890. Ed. by the Rev. E. Gaynor. This gives special prominence to hymne for the "Sacred Heart of Jesus," and to hymne by the Rev. M. Russell and Sister Mary Downing.

S. George's Hymn-Hook: London, 1894. A revised and enlarged ed., with an Appendix for Ransomers, of the collection of the Rev. J. W. Rocks (p. 376, il.,

7. The Parochial Hymn-Book: Boston, U.S., 1897. This is the final ed. of the Parochial H. Etc., 1880 (see p. 976, ii., No. 35); and in it the editor, the Rev. Anatole Police, very wisely cut out more than half the hymns of the 1680 ed.

8. Arundel Hymne and other Spiritual Praises. Chosen and edited by Herry, Duke of Norfolk, and Charles T. Gatty, P.S.A.: London, 1902. The sim of the compilers was evidently to meet the wants of devout and cultured people. From a literary standpoint, it is the best B. C. hymnal with which we are acquisited (see below).

Hymns. By the Rev. William Buckley. A small collection of popular hymns, with melodies.

11. Cathoric Church Hymned. Kithed by A. E. Tozer: New York, 1905. The distinctive feature of this book is the large number of tre. from the Latin and Greek, many of which are by Ir. J. M. Neale.

12. Hymns for the Use of the Birmingham Oratory: Birmingham, 1906 (see below). Previous ada, 1850, 1854, 1857, 1852, 1875, 1858, &c.
We understand that the Roman Catholic Bishops are now preparing a hymn-book which is to have universal authority throughout England.

13. Though not a hymn-book, mention should here be made of the wonderfully varied and carefully edited anthology of pieces from many authors and many languages collected by Mr. Orby Shipley, as Carmina Marking, London, 1893; vol. il., 1862.

In some notices of this Dictionary it was said that Roman Catholic hymns and hymnwriters were inadequately treated. When the Dictionary was planned out, Mr. Earlo agreed to write the general article on R. C. Hymnody, and one or two biographical notices (e.g., at p. 105, i.); but he would not undertake to select the more important R. C. hymns for annotation, and no other member of the R. C. Church could be found to do the work, or to co-operate in doing it. In order to make the treatment fairly adequate, so far as the original English hymns are concerned (the trs. in the R. C. hymn-books were almost all noted in 1892), we have taken the following as the basis of annotation in this New Supplement :-

- The Gratory Hymns as rearranged in 1867, with the Supplement of 1903.
   A. E. Tozer's Catholic Hymns, 1898.

- 2. Arundol Hymns, 1902. 4. Hymns for the Live of the Birmingham Oratory, 1906.
- 5. Hymns for the Year, 1867 (see p. 875, ii.). The Hymns for the Year gives no indication whatever as to anthors or sources, and several of the hymns therein are unknown to modern hymn-books.

Notices of various Roman Catholic Hymnwriters will be found in the body of this Dictionary, and in the present New Supplement in the alphabetical order of their names. Others are grouped here as follows :-

Bagshawe, Edward Gilpin, s. of R. R. Bagshawe, Comriy Coutt Jodge, was b. in London Jan. 12, 1820. He studied at St. Mary's Coll., Occott, and took his n.a. at London University. For kind assistance in annotation we are indebted to many correspondents, especially to Archbishop Bagshawe, Monseigneur Ward, the Rev. J. F. Bacchus, Vincent Hayles, John Norris, John O'Connor, J. H. Pollen, J. D. Rousselle, Matthew Russell, George Stebbing, and Edmund Vaughan; and Messrs. C. Gatty and Orby Shipley. [J. M.]

Romanis, William, M.A., b. in 1824, and chucated at Emmanuel Coll., Camb., B.A. in honours, 1846, M.A. 1849, D. 1847, P. 1848. From 1846 to 1856 he was Assistant Master in the Classical Dept. of Cheltenham Coll. Subsequently he was Curate of Axminster; then of St. Mary's, Rosding. In 1863 he became Vicar of Wigston Magna, Leicester, and in 1888 of Twyford, Hants. He retired from active work in 1895, and died in 1899. His Sermons Preached at St. Mary's, Reading, were pub. in 1862; 2nd series, 1864. His hymns in C. U. are:-

1. Dark lies before us, hid from mortal view. [For Divine Guidance.

2. Lord, who shall sit beside Thee! [SS James and John.]
3. Round me falls the night. [Evening.]

These hymns appeared in the Wigeton Magna School Hys., 1878, and are also given in The Public School H. Bh., 1903. Nos. 2 and 3 are in The English Hyl., 1906. [J. J.]

Rossetti, Christina G., p. 278, i. The following hymns by Miss Rossetti have recently come into C. U.;-

1. A burdened heart that bleeds and bears. [Lent.] In her Time Files: A Reading Diary, ed. 1897, p. 59, for March 26; and her Verzez, dc., ed. 1898, p. 113. Included in Charch Hys., 1903.

2. Give me the lowest place, not that I dare. [Humility.] From her Prince's Prograss, 1866, p. 216.

3. In the bleak midwinter. [Christman.] In her Poctical Works, 1904, p. 22d, as "Before 1872"; repeated in The English Hys., 1906.

4. None other Lamb, none other Name. [Jens., All, and in All.] From her The Face of the Decp., dc., 1892 (3rd ed. 1895, p. 176); and her Verzes, dc., 1898, p. 35. It is the second of two postical meditations on Rev. v. 6. In Church Hys., 1903.

It is the second of two postical meditations on Rev. v. 6. In Church Hys., 1993.

5. The shepherds had an angel, [Christmas.] In her Foctical Vorks, 1944, p. 187, this is entitled "A Christmas Carol. For my Godehidren," and dated a October, 1856." Repeated in the S. S. Hymnary, 1995.

6. We know not a value of that River. [The River of the Exernal City.] In The Face of the Beened City.] 1892 (3rd ed. 1898, p. 523), as a poetical meditation on Rev. XXII. 1, Also in her Verses, &c., 1893, p. 81.

Additional works by Miss Rossetti to those named on p. 978, i., include Time Flies, A Reading Diary, 1885; Called to be Saints, 1831; Seek and Find, 1870; The Face of the Deep, A Devotional Commentary on the Apocalypee, 1892; and Verses ... reprinted from Called to be Saints, Time Flies, The Face of the Deep, 1893. It must be noted that (1) the hymn attributed to her, "Dead is thy daughter; trouble not the Master," is not by her, but by Mrs. C. F. Alexander, with whose name it appeared in Lyra Mystica, 1865; and (2) her "I would be gone; God bade me stay," is from her Prince's Progress, 1866, p. 204. Miss Rossetti d. Dec. 29, IJ. J.1

Rous, Francis, pp. 818, ii.; 997, ii.; 979, i., 1023, i. The history of the Rous version of the Psalms is still rather obscure. At p. 918, ii., it is said to have been first pub. 1641, and reprinted with "further changes" in 1643. The present writer has been allowed to compare the-

Broke of Psalmes in English Moster. Printed for Henry Tutill, Bookseller at Rotterdam, 1638, with the Psalmes of David in English Vester, at firth by Francis Rous. ... London, Printed by James Young, for Philip Newill, at the signe of the Gun in Ivie-lane.

The preface is the same in both, and a careful collation of a considerable number of the versions showed no variations except in spelling, the only variation observed being that the ed. of 1643 adds, after Ps. 150, a supplement of-

Psalmes of harder and lesse usual Tunes corrected, and the Tunes not altered; with versions of Pss. 51, 111, 112, 113, 120, 121, 122, 124, 125, 126, 127, 130, and 148.

The Pealter of 1647, said to be in the B. M. by Mr. Glass, p. 85 (see p. 926, il.), is not by Rous, but is a reprint of the Bay Psalm Book [J. M.] noted by Glass at p. 82.

Rusling, J., p. 981, t. 258, b. 1788, d. 1839. From this American writer there is a mutilated fragment in Stryker's Coll. Hyl., 1904; "The morn, O Christian, breaketh o'er thee" (Death and Heaven anticipated). In H. W. Beecher's Plymouth Coll., 1855, this hymn begins "Christian, the morn breaks sweetly o'er thee." It is usually dated 1832. [J. J.]

Salve mundi domina, y. 889, L. This is Dreves, xxx., p. 93, from a Munich Ms. (Clm. 2990) of 1476 and other sources.

Salve mundi salutare, p. 888, t. M. Hauréau in his Poèmes latine attribuée à Saint Bornard, 1890, pp. 70-73, states that he has only been able to find this in three MSS. in French libraries, two at Paris (Bibl. Nat., Lat. 10622, and Arsenol 858) and one at Grenoble (406), all of the 15th cent.; and says it seems incredible that it can be a genuine work of St. Bernard. It is also in a 15th century Ms. at Munich (Cha. 13132); in a 15th cent. Ms. in the B. M. (Reg. 2 a. ii., f. 245b), and others. But it has not been found in any Ms. before 1300. A complete tr. of the hymn by Mrs. E. M. Shapcote, as "O Saviour of the world, I cry to Thee," was pub in 1873, in A Rhythmical Prayer to the Sacred Members of Jesus hanging upon the Cross. Another ir.

Balve caput text is: "O Sacred Head, sore wounded, befiled and put to scorn," in the Yastendon Hyt., 1899, No. 62, marked as "Tr. for this tame by R. R." It is repeated in The English Hyt., 1866.

Salve, O sanguis Christi, p. 1688, ii. This is by the editor, Michael ab Isselt, a native of Amerifoort in Holland, who in 1589 was living at Nymegen in Holland. He afterwards became preacher to the Italian merchants at Hamburg, and d. there Oct. 17, 1597. In the ed. of 1593 it is also at p. 122. [J, M,] Salve regina, pp. 991, il., and 1588, ii. In the Annales ordinis Cartusiensis ab anno 1084 ad annum 1429, by Carolus de le Couteulx, vol. iv., 1888, p. 73, under the year 1239, it is said that Pope Gregory IX. (d. 1241) decreed the universal use of the "Salve regina," and that it had previously been in use among the Carthusians, probably from the foundation of the Order. In a Feather written at Peterborough c. 1250, and now in the Royal Library at Brussels (9961, f. 129, now 593), there is the following note:-

"St. Pernard, abbot of Clairvaux, seeing two sonis kept back and bindered in their ascent to heaven by a Rept tack and bindered in their ascent to nearen by a host of demons barring their way, heard these souls call-ing upon the belp of the Bleesed Mary, and chanting this antiphon, which immediately were liberated from the demons by two angels sent by the Virgin Mary, and taken up into heaven: Antiphon Salve regins unsert-cordine. (Sea L. Delish's Melanges de Patingraphie, 1999). 1880.)

It will be observed that here, as in all the carly Mss., the antiphon begins "Salve regina misericordiae," In another Peterborough ms. now at Sidney Sussex, Cambridge (No. 95 of c. 1400, not paged), there is a series of curious tales, relating miracles performed by the B, V. M. on behalf of those who sang this antiphon in her honour (see the 1895 Catalogue, pp. 87, 88). The antiphon is given, with the melody, in a Durham Ms. of the 12th cent. now at Trinity, Combridge (1227, f. 59). Additional frs. are:-

1. Kail to the Queen that reigns above the sky. In the Arundd Mys., 1902. No. 163, this is indexed as 77. 1637.
2. Kail ! Queen of heaven! the Queen Star. A free version by Dr. John Lingard! (the well-known Roman Catholic historian, b. at Winchester, Feb. 6, 1771; d. at Homby, Lanca. July 17, 1851) oh a broadsheet in the B. M. (H [22]), which the Cashingue dates 1842. Bir. Gillow in his Bick. of Eng. Cuth., iv., p. 274, says it appeared in Lingard's Hannal of Prayers, York, 1840. It is in the Birmingham Orstory H. Ek., 1860. No. 100, the Arandal Hys., 1902, No. 194, and many others, and is the version referred to at p. 806, 1,, tinder Jones, E. T., 2 as "Star of the Sas."

3. Kall! Holy Queen, enthron'd above, in the Roman Hys., N.Y., 1884. 1. Hail to the Queen that reigns above the sky.

Salvete Chrieti vulnera, p. 682. i. This is in the Roman Breviary, Venice, 1798, Appendix, p. 60.

Sampson, J. W., p. 1583, ii. Her hymn "Weary of wandering long" appeared in W. B. Bradbury's Golden Censer, 1864, p. 65, as by "Miss J. W. Sampson, Utica, N.Y." Other hymns with the same signature include "Sweetly sing, sweetly sing," in Bradbury's Golden Chain, 1861, p. 70, and "O, the Sabbath morning, beautiful and bright," in Happy Voices, 1865, No. 161. [J. M.]

Banctae Syon, p. 292, ii. This is found in p. 1485 Ms. Missal of Jamièges, now at Rouen (301), in the Geneva Missal of 1491, the Lausanne of 1493, the Evreux of 1497, and others (see Missel-Weals, i., p. 501; ii., pp. 52, 452, 450). [J. M.]

Sancte Dei pretiose, p. 932, it. Dreves, xlviii., No. 79, the three-stanza form is ascribed to Eusebius Brune, who became Bishop of Angers in 1047, and d. 1081. For his tr. as noted on p. 992, il., 1, "Saint of God, elect and precious," Dr. Neale took st. i. from this text, and sts. ii., iii, from the later German text as in Daniel. [J. M.]

Sancti venite, corpus Christi sumite, , 995, i. This is in the Henry Bradshaw p. 995, i. This is in and Antiphonary (pt. i., facsimile, f. 10b; pt. ii., p. 10), beginning "Sancti venite, Christi corpus sumite." Canon Warren in his notes at pp. 44-45, referring to the fact that in the last stanza the Ms. reads " Alfa et n," says " It is very likely that these symbols were stamped upon the Eucharistic wafer bread."

wafer bread."

There is a curious story told in the Leabhar Breaz, or Specified Bank (a us. of the 14th cent. in the Library of the Royal Irish Academy at Publin), in its mozes on the hymn of St. Sechnall (which begins "Audite was made in Ireland"). St. Sechnall composed this bynn in honour of St. Patrick, to make peace with him. The reason, says the Speckled Book, was "because of the annoyance Sechnall gave Patrick. In saying, 'a gool man were Patrick were it not for one thing, viz. the small extent to which he preaches charity." When Patrick heard it, he went to Sechnall in great anger, sechnal had just finished mass, except group to Christ's Lody, when it was told him that Patrick was coming to the place in great anger against Sechnall. The latter thereupon left the obtation on the alter, and bowed down to Patrick. So they made peace then, Patrick and thereupon left the oblation on the altar, and bowed down or Patrick. No they made peace then, Patrick and Sechanii. And whilst they were roing round the semetery, they heard a choir of angels singing around the oblation in the church; and wint they sang was the hymn beginning. Sancti weifte, Christi corpus. &c. Hence this hymn is sung in Ireland when one goes to the body of thrist, from that time onward." (See the Irith Liber Hymnorum, H. B.S. ed., vol. ii., p. 5).

Another tr. is:---

Another 17. 18: 1.

1. Draw pigh and take the Boly of the Lord, in Hyt. A. & M., 1904, No. 289, merked as by Neale and Compilers. The revision is skillful, at once more happy and more fathful than Noale. It differs materially from the Compilers' old text.

2. The text in Charch Hyt., 1903, as also that in The English Hyt., 1908, is Dr. Neale's tr. unalitered. [J. M.]

Sanctorum meritis inclita gaudia, p. 893, ii. In H. A. & M., 1904, No. 201, beginning "The triumphs of the Saints, The toils they bravely bore," is marked as Neale and Compilers. It is Neale's, i., ii., v. altered, with n new tr. of st. vi.

Sandya, G., p. 994, i. Another cento from his Paraphrase upon the Pealmes of Pavil, &c., 1836, as "Let God, the God of battles, rise" (Ps. lzviii.), is in the Hymn Book for Use in Wellington Coll., 1902. [J. J.]

Sankey, I. D., p. 894, i. During the past fifteen years Mr. Sankey's Sacred Songs and Solos have had a very large sale, which has justified him in increasing the number of songs and hymns, including "New Hymns and Solos, to 1200. In 1906 he published My Life and Sacred Songs (London: Morgan & Scott). In addition to the "Story of his Own Life," the work contains an account of the most popular of his solos, with interesting reminiscences of the spiritual awakening of many who were influenced through his singing of them in matched through his singing of them in public. In this respect it corresponds in some measure with G. J. Stevenson's Methodist II. Bla, &c., 1888 (p. 1094, i.). It is an addition to the Sacred Songs and Soles, which will be held in esteem by many. In addition to his hyrun, noted on p. 904, ii., Mr. Sankey gives details of the following: details of the following:

1. Out of the shadow-land into the sunshine. [House Anticipated.] Mr. Sankey's account of this hymn is:—"I wrote this hymn specially for the memorial service held for Mr. Mooly in Carnegie (141), where I also saving it as a solo. It is the last secret song of which I wrote both the words and music. The idea was suggested by Mr. Moody's last words, 'Earth receies; heaven opens before me. . Go! is calling mo, and I must go.' On account of its regular association with my fellow-labourer. account of its peculiar association with my fellow-labourer in the Gospel for so many years, the words are here given in full." The hymn follows on p. 186, in 3 st. of 4 L and a chorus.

4.1. and a chorus.

2. Rejoice! Rejoice! our King is coming. [Advent.]

Mr. Sabkey writes remearaing this hymn:—"During one of my trips to Great Britain on the ss. City of Rone a storm raged on the sea. The wind was howling through the rigging, and waves like mountains of form were breaking over the low of the vessel. A great fear had fallen upon the passengers. When the storm was at the writer we all thought was might soon as to always the storm was at had fallen upon the passengers. When the storm was at its worst, we all thought we might soon go to the bottom of the sea. The conviction came to me that the Lord would be with us in the trying hour, and sitting down in the reading room, I composed this hymn. Before reaching England the tune had formed itself in my mind, and on arriving in London I wrote it out, and had it published in Sacred Songs and Solos," where it is No. 524 in the cl. of 1888.

From M. Co. 2011.

From Mr. Sankey's autobiographical sketch we gather that he was born at Edinburgh, in Mestern Pennsylvania, Aug. 28, 1840, joined Mr. Moody in 1871, and visited England for the first time in 1873. The original of the Sacred Songe, &c., of 23 pieces only, was offered as a gift to the London publishers of P. Phillips's Hallowed Songe, and declined by them. It was subsequently accepted by Mr. them. It was subsequently accepted by Mr. R. C. Morgan, of Morgan & Scott, and is now a volume of 1200 hymns.

From a return kindly sent us by Messrs. Morgan & Scott, we find that the various issues of the Sacred Songs and Solos were:-

In 1873, 24 pp. ; 1874, 72 pp. ; 1876, 163 hymns ; 1877, 271 hymns ; 1881, 441 hymns ; 1888, 750 hymns ; 1903, 1200 hymns.

In addition, The Christian Choir, which is generally associated with the Sacred Songs and Solos, was issued in 1884 with 75 hymns, and in 1896 with 281. The New Hymns & Solos, by the same firm, were pub. in 1888. [J. J.]

Savage, Minot Judson, p.p., was born at Norridgewock, Maine, June 10, 1841, and educated at Bangor Seminary, where he graduated in 1864. From 1867 to 1873 he was a Congregational Minister, and then he joined the Unitarians, and has now (1906) a charge in Boston. He has published several works, including Poems, Boston, 1882. He also edited, with H. M. Dow, Sacred Songs for Public Worship, Boston, 1883, to which he contributed 46 original hymns. In hymnals other than this, of his hymns the following are in C.U.:-

1. Dost then hear the bugle sounding. Conservation.

to Duty.
2. Father, we would not dare to change Thy purpose, kc. Prayer.

3. O God Whote law is in the sky. Consecration to Duty.

4. O star of truth down shining. Truth.

5. The God that to the fathers revealed His holy will.

The very blossoms of our life. Holy Baptism.
 What purpose burns within one hearts. Joining in Church Fallowship.

S. God of the glorious summer hours. New Year, This is in D. Agate's Sunday S. H. Bk., 1881, No. 371, and dated 1875. From the Sunsay Side, N.Y., 1875,p. 119.

Some of these hymns are given in Hunter's Hys. of Faith and Life, Glasgow, 1889, and recent American hymnals.

Saviour, Blessed Saviour, p. 985, ii. The concluding lines of st. ii. of this hymn as in the 1871 ed. of Church Hymns, "Farther, ever farther," read in the original Ms. :--

"Lovingly to bear them, Saviour, to Thy fold."

The Compilers altered these lines to :-

" In Thy love recalling Wanderers to Thy fold,"

Under date of Oct. 24, 1899, the late Preb. Thring requested the Hymnal Committee of the S.P.C.K. to restore the original reading as above in the then forthcoming revision of Church Hys. This request was complied with in the 1903 ed. of that collection.

Saviour! Thou of life the lender. A mutilated form of a portion of J. Burton's "Saviour, while my heart is tender" (p. 188, l. 13).

Savonarola, Girolamo, p. 1583, i. His hymns were printed in a collected form as L'oesie di Fra Girolamo Savonarola tratte dall' Autografo, at Florence, 1862. A number of them had appeared in Fra Scrafino Razzi's Laudi Spirituali, Venice, 1563, and elsewhere. The best-known is:-

Gised somme conforts. [Passiontide.] This is in 1862 as above, No. xii., p. 27, entitled "Praise to the Crucified." Also in Rassi, 1563, f. 4, in Eugenia Levi's Lirica Hattina, Florence, 1993, p. 118, &c. 77. ms "Jesus, Refuge of the weary," by Jane Francesca Wilde. Contributed to R. R. Maiden's Life and Martyridon of Savoarrold, 1863, i. p. 376; ternined in her own Poesas by Spirassa, Dublin, 1864, p. 199. See further p. 1874, ii.

Baw ye never in the meadows. CecilAlexander. [Divine Providence.] Published in her Hys. for Little Children, 1848, in 10 st. of 4 l. "Day by day the little daisy," in the Scotch Church Hymnary, 1898, begins with st, vi. of this hymn. [J. J.]

Say not the law divine, p. 116, ii. 8. This hymn by B. Barton is slightly sitered and arranged in another metre in Horder's Hys. Supplemental, &c., 1894, and his Worship Song, 1905, as "Say not the word." [J. M.]

Scandinavian Hymnody, pp. 393-1003. See an article by Dr. Friedrich Nielsen in the Herzog-Hauck Realencyklopādie, X., 1901, pp. 438-443. An authorised Danish Psalmebog for Kirke og Heim was issued in 1899. [J. M.]

Schlör, Aloys, D.D., was b. at Vienna, June 17, 1805, and took the degree of D.D. at the University of Vienna in 1832. From May 10, 1842, to his death he was father confessor at the Theological Seminary (Spiritual des Priester-seminars) at Graz, Styria, Austria, He d. at Graz, Nov. 2, 1852. His well-known hymn, " Dem Herzen Jesu singe" (p. 1828, ii.), was written in 1852. [J. M.]

Schmücke dich, O liebe Seele, p. 1014, L Another tr. is :---

Dook thee, O my soul, with gladness, by G. R. Woodward, in his Songs of Syon, 1994, No. 16.

Schubart, C. F. D., p. 1017, i. The tr. of "Urquell aller Scligkeiten" as "Though by sorrows overtaken," was made by the Hon. Edward Charles Hugh Herbert, who was brother of Mrs. Philip Pusey. He was b. March 30, 1802, and d. May 30, 1852. This information we have received from Mrs. Clara Fletcher, daughter of Philip Pusey.

Scorn not the slightest word or deed. [Power of Little things.] This hymn has been traced to Adams and Chapin's American Hys. for Christian Devotion, 1846 (p. 68, il.), where it is given as from the "London Inquirer." Later collections, both in America and at home, attribute it to T. Hincks; but it is not in his Vespers, 1868, and we have failed to trace it [J. J.]

Scottish Hymnody, p. 1000, it. Since 1890 there is little to record. The Anglo-Genevan Psalter, of 1558, referred to as " lost" at p. 1021, IL, is described by Dr. Julian in the Times, Sep. 19, 1902, p. 277. Details of the same are also given under Old Version, p. 1684, i. The 1568 copy of the Gude and Godlie Ballates, referred to at p. 1021, ii., was ed. by Professor A. F. Mitchell for the Scottish Text Society, 1897. The Rev. Dr. Rerison, of Dalserf, has recently been investigating the sources of the Psalter of 1650, and has identified the Rotterdam Psalter of 1638 (p. 927, ii., No. 64) as the first ed. of the version of Francis Rous. The version of Sir William Mure, as far as available (Ps. 1-51. 100-150, from two ass. in the Euing Collection in Glasgow University Library, and one in the Laing Collection in Edinburgh University Library), was ed, by William Tough, for the Scottish Text Society, as vol. ii. (1898) of The Works of Sir William Mure of Rowallan. revision of the Psalter of 1650, made by the elders of the Glassite Congregation at Edinburgh (principally by aid of the Revised Version of the prose psalms, and the metrical version of Robert Boswell, as noted at p. 929, ii., No. 174), was pub, as The Book of Psalms in Metre, Edinburgh, 1902.

The only recent hymn book of any importance is The Church Hymnary authorised for use in Public Worship by the Church of Scotland, the Free Church of Scotland, the United Presbyterian Church, the Presbyterian Church in Ireland (London: Henry Frowde, 1898). In the interesting volume of notes by the Rev. John Brownlie, entitled The Hymns and Hymn Writers of the Church Hymnary, Henry Frowde, 1899, pp. 1-9, there is a full account of the origin and preparation of this book, begun 1893 by a joint Committee of the three Scottish Churches, after 1895 with the co-operation of representatives of the Presbyterian Church in Ireland. It contains hymns 1-625, doxologies 626-689, ancient hymns 640-649; and is one of the best hymn books of recent times, catholic, comprehensive, and remarkably faithful in reproducing the texts of the authors. The musical edition, under the chief editorship of Sir John Stainer (same title, publisher, and date), takes high rank as a worthy example of present-day worship song. A very careful and accurate series of notes appeared as The Music of the Church Hymnary and the l'salter in Metre, its Sources and Composers, by William Cowan and James Love. Henry Frowde, 1901. The only other hymn books which need be mentioned are (1) The Scattish Congregational Hymnal (Edinburgh: Publications Committee of the Congregational Union) [1903], compiled by a Committee of which the Rev. Alexander Brown (p. 1618, ii.) was convener. Nos. 1-485 are reprinted from the Evangelical Union Hyl., 1878 (p. 1027, i.); Nos. 436-535 are mostly hymns found also in the Congregational Church Hyl., 1887 (p. 260, ii.), and the Rev. W. G. Horder's Cong. Hys., 1884 and 1894. (2) The Bible Hymnal, Compiled by W. Lancelot Holland, M.A., Minister of the Gospel, Edinburgh (Edinburgh: W. B. Hunter, 1894). With 356 hymns, and 45 pages of prefatory matter, mostly derived from this Dictionary. Mr. Holland was then incumbent of St. Thomas's English Episcopal Chapel, Edinburgh, [J. M.]

Scriven, Joseph. Mr. Sankey, in his My Life and Sacred Songs, 1906, p. 279, says that Scriven was b. in Dublin in 1820, was a graduate of Trinity Coll., Dublin, and went to Canada when he was 25, and d. there at Port Hope, on Lake Ontario, in 1886. His hymn:—

What a Friend we have in Jesus [Jesus our Friend] was according to Mr. Sankey, discovered to be his in the following manner: "A nelighbour, sitting up with him in his illness, happened upon a manuscript of "What a Friend we have in Jesus." Heading it with great delight, and questioning Mr. Seriven about It, he said he had composed it for his mother, to confort her mad he had composed it for his mother, to conflort her in a time of special forrow, not intending any one else should see it." We find the hymn in H. L. Hastings's Social Hys., Original and Selected, 1865, No. 242; and bis Songs of Pillgrimage, 1836, No. 1291, where it is attributed to "Joseph Scriven, cir. 1855." It is found in many modern collections.

Scudder, Eliza, pp. 1035, i., 1589, i. Miss Scudder d. in 1896. Her Hys. & Sonnets, with biographical notes, &c., by Horace E. Scudder, was pub. by Houghton & Mifflin, 1897. In The Pilgrim Hyd., 1904, the hymn, "Thou Life within my life," begins with st. ii. of "From past regret and present [faithlessness] feebleness," p. 1035, i. 1), which was written in Feb. 1871. Another of Miss Scudder's hymns is " Let whosoever will enquire" (New Heaven), from which " My God, I rather look to Thee," in Horder's Worship Song, 1905, is taken. [J. J.]

Se questa valle di miserie piena. [Heaven.] This is in the Laudi Spirituali of the Congregation of the Oratory, Rome, 1583, bk. i., p. 2. In Coferati's Corona di Suore Canzoni, Florence, 1710, p. 625. Tr. as:

If this poer vale, with helpless sorrow teeming, by J. O'Connor, in the Arandel Hys., 1902. [J. M.]

Sears, Septimus, p. 1589, i., was b. Jan. 5, 1819, at Chatteris, Cambs., and in 1849 became minister of the Particular Baptist congregation at Clifton, Beds. He went to Brighton after an attack of heart disease in 1877, and died there Dec. 26, 1877. His hymns appeared in his Clifton Hymns, N.D., 1865, the three noted being Nos. 856, 361, 362. [J, M,]

See the leaves around us falling, p. 585, I. This hymn appeared in The Christian's Magazine. 1760, p. 86, as "The Fall of the Leaf; a Sacred Ode," and again in the Gospel Magazine, Sept. 1769, p. 447.

Seidenbusch, Johann Georg, at Munich, April 5, 1641, ordained Priest in 1666; founded the Oratory of St. Philip Neri at Aufhausen, and d. Dec. 10, 1729. He edited the Aufhausen G. B., 1687, in which is given:—

Remark her, the Creaturen all (Holy Communion), p. 62, which Esumker, iii., No. 57, thinks is most likely to be his. It is in many later books, including H. Bone's Cantate, ed. 1878, No. 272. Tr. as "Come all ye creatures of the Lont," by G. R. Woodward, in his Secret of No. 1994. Songs of Syon, 1904.

Sequences, p. 1041, ii. Since this article was written a great deal has been done, principally by the Analecta Liturgica and the Analecta Hymnica, in the way of publishing "inodited" Sequences (the word "inedited" practically denotes pieces taken from Mss. or from books printed before 1560, which had not been included in hymnological works printed between 1840 and 1887); end as the abovenamed works have added more than 3,300 to the 895 printed by Kehrein in 1873 (see p. 1049, i.), the number of Sequences written before 1560 and which in 1906 can still be described as " inedited " can only be small. The details of these two works are as follows:

of these two works are as follows:—

I. The first part of the Analotta Liturgica of Mr. W. H. James Weale and the Abbé E. Misset (referred to be this Emplement as Misset Weale) appeared in June, 1888, the pixtenth part in Oct. 1901. It contains an all 912 "inselfited" Exprences (most of which have also been printed in the Analotts Hymnisca), principally from MSS, and printed Missats found in English and French libraries. It indexes and prints the "inselfied" Sequences of the MSS, c. w. and of the Hergford and French English and also indexes and prints the "inselfied" Sequences of the following MS. English Uses:—

i. Cerne in Dursch. The Book of Cerne (see p. 1222, i.) as atteint as Sequenciary written for use at Cerne C. 1409 (L. p. 572).

bridge, includes a Sequentiary written for use at Cerne c. 1400 (l., p. 642).

ii. Dublin. The Tropary of St. Patrick's at Dublin is in the University Library at Cambridge, and dates c. 1860 (ll., p. 79). Several of the pieces are hymne rather than Sequences, and the last of the series, not printed in Misset-Weate, are neither secred nor moral.

iii. Victaminater. The Misset of St. Peter's Abbey at Westminater. The Above The complete text of the Dean and Chapter (ii., p. 176). The complete text of the Missel has been most carefully edited by Pr. J. Wicknam Legg for the Henry Bradshaw Society, i. 1891, iii. 1937; the first lines of the sequences are not indexed separately, but are included in the "Index of Liturgical Forms."

Isturgical Forms."

is. Merborne in Dorset. The Bitsal of this Abbey, written c. 1405, is in the Duke of Northumberland's library at Aluwick Castle (il., p. 514).

c. Canterbury (!). The Missal now No. 135 in the Arsenat Library at Paris, was certainly written in England, c. 1239, for use in the province of Canterbury (il., p. 651); Mr. Weals suggests for Minster in Thanet, but Bir. Pannister regards it as really a Sarum Missal, perhaps meant for use at London.

if. Whithy. The Bissal of Whithy Abbey (not indexed in Missal Wale), and dates c. 1390. The "insellted" Sequences are printed in the Madelson (Liturg. Miss., 390, now 15850), and dates c. 1390. The "insellted" Sequences are printed in the Analesta Hymnica, vii., No. 205; viii., Nos. 27, 125, 151; x., Nos. 211, 232, 284, 288, 372; xxxiv., No. 247; xl., No. 134.

wiii. Spatiling (?). The Gentlemen's Society of Spalding

wil. Faciliting (?). The Gentlemen's Society of Spalding possesses a Kirura Missal, said to have belonged to Spalding Abbey—at any rate, written for use in the discose of Lincoln about 1380. The sequences are the same as those in the Barlow 5 (p. 1042, ii.), except one for the Translation of Ft. Hugh of Lincoln, beginning, "Suitat odor renovatus in Juveptne aquilles," which seems to be "inedited," and two printed by Kökrön, vis., "Gloria Sanctorum" (K., No. 396), and "Gaude vige mater Christi" (K., No. 239). It is cited, but not indexed, in Missel-Weale.

II. The Analotte Hymnics devotes no less than nine volumes to "Sequentiae Ineditae"; vill., ix., x., ed.

by Father Dreves; xxxiv., xxxvii., xxxix., xill., xilv., by Father Biume; and xl., which includes a great number from English sources, by the Rev. H. M. Bennister. These nine volumes include SS12 sequences of all ages and of all branches of the moliseval Letin Church (those from English sources principally in vili., x., xl.), ed. with admirable skill and patience.

III. Two vols. of the Abbé U. Chevaller's Möbiobèque Liturgèque also contain a considerable number of Sequences, viz., vii., 1900, pp. 338-394, from a 18th cent. French MB. now in the Communal Library at Assistin (No. 685); and ix., entitled Tropaire-Presser de L'abbaye Sastri-Martin de Montaurio (1901), from a MB. of the 1th cent., more probably written at Moisson, now in the Bibl. Nat. at Paris (Nosr. Acq. 1871). The "incilted" Sequences of these two MBS. are also printed in the Mandatota Spanston. Analosia Hymnica.

The limits of our space will not allow us to repeat the information in Misset-Weals regarding the mss. i.-v. above; and the references to Dreves will show the "inedited" Sequences of No. vi. But two other MSS. not hitherto indexed may here be noted.

exis. Survey Missis of c. 1250. This was apparently written at Exeter, was recently in the possession of Lord Crawford (Lat. 24), and is now in the private library of Mars. John Rylands, of Manchester. It is the earliest known Survey Missis (the most complete list of Ms. Survey Missis is that by Mr. Bannister in the Fracts on the Mars, Henry Bradshaw Society, 1904, pp. xiv., xr.), and is a splendin speciment of 13th cent. work, in wonderful preservation. The Fequences are collected together at ft. 234–255, with melodies throughout on a tour-line stave. Sixty-one are also in the Rawlow ft on 1604. It is the rest are poted below.

collected togsther at ff. 234–255, with melodies throughout on a tour-line stave. Sixty-one are also in the Barlow 5 (p. 1642, ii.); the rest are noted below.

1816. Chichester Sequentiary. This is contained in a set. of c. 1275, kept in the Bodielan, but belonging to University College (No. 148). The Sequences occupy ff. 165–40, and have melodies throughout on a four-line stave. Of the 60 sequences 60 are in the Barlow 5 (p. 1042, ii.); the rest are noted below.

Of the Sequences in vii. and viii., twenty are already indexed at pp. 1043-1050. Of these six are in the Ms. e, and three others in the us. q. : the remaining cloven are :-

Shapcote, Emily Mary, née Steward (p. 1589, ii., as Mrs. Shepcote), was b. at Liverpool in 1828, and m. in 1856 the Rev. E. G. Shapcote (1852, curate of Odiham, Hants, later Missionary in S. Africa under the S.P.G.). In 1866 she was received into the Church of Rome, and her husband two years later. She now (1906) resides at Torquay. The Hys. for Infant Children (p. 1539) were pub. by Masters in 1852 (not 1840), those marked E being by Mrs. Shapcote, those marked A by her aunt, Mary Steward, those marked v by her sister, Eleanor Steward. Her more recent hymns appeared principally in her Eucharistic Hours, 1886. Those in C. U. include:- include:—

1. Heavanly Father, from Thy throns. [Litary.] In 1852 as above, No. 20, the second st. beginning, "Jesus, Saviour, holy, mild." In Church Hys., 1871 and 1993, and others, it is given, with many slight alterations, as "Jesus, bely, undefiled" (p. 1569, ii.)

2. O Jesus, dearest Locd, I ray to Theo. [Holy Consensions.] In 1886 as above, p. 112 dated Clapham, 1876. It was rewritten by Dr. H. A. Rawes in his Little Handbook of the Archanfraterwitz of the Holy Ghost, 1879, as "O Jesus, hidden God, to Thee."

3. Queen of the Holy Rosany. [E. V. M.) Written about 1882, and included in St. Bowinie's H. Ek., 1886 and 1901, A. E. Tose's Cath. Hys., 1888, &c.

Her tr. of "Salve mundi salutare" is noted.

Shirley, i.e. Sir John Skelton, p. 1708, ii.

Shirley, James, p. 1589, ii. In vol. vi. of Alexander Dyce's ed. of Shirley's Works (1833) there are two pieces which have passed into some modern hymn-books,

1. The glories of our blood and state. [Righteourness Immortal.] In 1833, p. 338, from Shirley's Contention of Ajax dust Unyases, seems III. In W. J. Fox's Hys. and Atthems, 1841, and others, it begins "The glories of our mertal state."

3. Oant Thom, dear God, fargive so soon. [Pastion-tide.] In 1833, p. 502, from a Ms. copy of Shirley's Ferres and Please, made about 1880, and now in the Bodteian (18417 = Rawl. Pact. 88). In the Anglican M. Bit., 1871, No. 357, fit begins "Canst Thou, good Lord, targive so soon." [J. M.] . пои, дока! [J. M.]

Shorey, L. See Lancaster, Mary A. E.

Show me Thyself, O holy Lord. [Penilence.] This is given anonymously in the American Phymouth Hymnal, 1893, in 5 st. of 4 1., and again in The Baptist Church Hymnol, 1900.

Shubhka l'rakhmaik Mshikha malkan. [For the National Church.] To his tr. of this hymn in his Renderings of Church fr. of this hymn in his henderings of Chartin Hymne, 1901, p. 40, as "His the glory, His the honour," the Rev. R. M. Moorsom adds the note, "See Festival Night Service, East Systam Daily Offices, p. 158"; ed. by A. J. Maclean in 1894. The hymn is there for Sandays, for the Hallowing of the Church. It is by Mar George, who was Bishop of Nisibis in Mesopotamia about 670 (see Dist, of Chr. Biog., ii. 642, under Georgius 17); and is, Professor Burkitt informs us, found with his name in a Nestorian Psalter of the 13th cent, now in the Brit. Mus. (Add. 14675). Sometimes erroneously ascribed to Ephraem the Syrian, [J. M.]

Shurtleff, Ernest Warburton, b. at Boston, Mass., April 4, 1862, and educated at Boston Latin School, Harvard University, and Andover Theo. Seminary (1887). Smith, W. C., p. 1064, i. The following additional hymns by Dr. Smith have come into C. U., mainly through The Baptist Church Hymaai, 1900 :-

1. Earth was waiting, spent and restiess. Christmas,

- 2. Faint and weary Jesus stood. Our Lord's Temptation.
  - If any to the feast have come. Holy Communion.
     The Lord bath had His face from us. Providence.
     To me to live is Christ. Union with Christ. Providence,

These hymns appeared in his Hymns of Christ and the Christian Life, 1867, pp. 111, 122, 241, 10, and 36, respectively. A collected ed. of his Postical Works (not including his hymns) appeared in 1902. Other hymns that have come into use are :--

Girl your loius about with truth. Manliness.
 Jesus, unto Whom we pray. Christ like Way.
 One thing I of the Lord desire. Consecration.

Nos. 1, 3 are from his Thoughts and Fancies for Sunday Evenings, 1887, pp. 3, 84. No. 2 is from his Hys. of Christ, 1867, p. 31. [J. J.]

Smyttan, G. H., p. 1064, ii., b. in 1822; resigned the Rectory of Hawksworth, 1859, and d suddenly at Frankfort-on-the-Main, Feb. 21, 1870. The Rev. G. W. Mackenzie, Chaplain at Frankfort, has supplied us, under date of April 16, 1902, with the following pathetic details respecting the death and burial-place of Mr. Smyttan:-

"He was buried, not in Frankfort great Cemetery, but in a newer one on the other side of the river Main. Having died suddenly, and being entirely unknown here, no relatives being with him, and there being no possibility of communicating with them, he was entered simply as Engitan, England, and buried amongst the poor in an unpurchased grave. I stood before the spot to-day, but all record of him has disappeared. Another cross troves it to the memory of one, who side them cross covers it to the memory of one who died about twenty-five years afterwards, and who is buried above twenty-five years afterwants, and who is buried above Mr. Smyttan. I was informed that in (1 think) sixty years hence, all traces of the various occupants will be entirely cleared away. My informant knew nothing about the cross, if any, which covered Mr. Smyttan's r-mains. He thought that if there were one it would have been utilized for someone else."

Ve may add that in Lyra Eucharistica there ore three hymns by Smyttan in addition to "Jesu, ever present," p. 1064, E. [J. M.]

Society of Friends. See Quaker Hymnoly,

Soden, A. J., p. 1065, ii. Mr. Soden became Vicar of Scamblesby, Lincolnshire, in 1891, and pub. Hys. on the Ten Commandments, 1896.

Sol praeceps rapitur, p. 1668, I. In Chevalier's Repertorium, No. 19103, this is cited as in Traile abr. Sto. Volonte de Dien (1805). In the Officium Sanctissimae Voluntatis Dei: The Office of the most holy Will of God; Translated by Rev. F. C. Husenbeth, Norwich, 1846 (kindly lent by Mr. Orby Shipley), it is given at p. 60 thus :-

Sol praeceps rapitur, proxima nox adeat; Ne divinus amor pectore languest, Haec complenda dies est Digna vesperis hostia.

"Ut Christus moriens in cruce spiritum Commendana, potrias tradidit in manue, Totam mens nieg sammo Se valt tradere numini.

Ejus sub piacito nibil aliud volena Curans vei meditans tota reponitur Et tranquilla quiescit Cunctis et sibi mortus.

"Vivam, non ego jam; sed Deus omnino In me vivat amans, regnet et imperet, Et mi Sancta Trins sit Totum semper in omnibus. Amen."

The tr. by Husenbeth at p. 61 begins " The son declines, the night draws near." In the well-known version by Caswall, which begins "The sun is sinking fast," the first st. is a paraphrase of st. i, the other sts. of the Latin are each expanded into two of the English version, producing a hymn in every way superior to its original. [J. M.]

Soldiers of Christ arise, And put, Church Hys., No. 546, is C. Wesley's original text with the ulteration of st. v., l. 4, from "And stand entire at last" to "And victor stand at last," The cento " To God your every want," in the American Methodist Hyl., 1905, is composed of at. xii., xiv., and xv. of this Soldiers of the Cross, arise, Gird you, &c., p. 1066, ii. This hymn appeared in Morrell & How's Ps. & Hys., 1864 (not 1854).

Solemne nos jejunii, p. 1068, E. This has been ascribed to C. Coffin, but it is not in his Hymni Sacri, 1736, and in the Paris Brev., 1736, Verna, p. 132, it does not bear his signature. In the Châlons-sur-Mazne Brev., 1736, Verns, p. 130, it begins "Profana cessent gandia." In Church Hys., 1903, "Once more the solemn season calls," we have the old Hys. A. & M. text; but in the 1904 ed. of Hye. A. & M. st. iii. is omitted, and st. v. is rewritten. [J. M.]

Solemnitas sancti Pauli, p. 1580, L. This is in a Sarum Missa, of c. 1250 now at Manchester (Crawford Lat. 24, f. 242b). In the York use it begins "Sancti Pauli conversio."

Foote's Sketches of Virginia, 2nd series, 1855. His hymn, "Blest Jesus, when Thy cross I view" (Good Friday), is dated Oct. 6, 1800, and was first printed in The Connecticut Erangelical Magazine, vol. ii. It was included in the Presb. Ps. and Hys. 1831, 1843, and 1901, and is still found in some modern collections.

Spenser, Edmund, p. 1072, ii. His poem, "Most glorious Lord of life, that on this day " (Sunday), is Sonnet Ixviii. in his Amoretti and Epithalamion, 1595 (not paged), and is in his Works, ed. R. Morris, 1871, p. 583. In The Engl. Hyl., 1906. IJ. MA

Spirit Divine, attend our prayer, p. 1074, ii. The form of this hymn most generally adopted in modern American collections is that rewritten by S. Longfellow, and included in Longfellow and Johnson's Hys. of the Spirit, 1864. It is No. 67 in The Pilgrim Hyl., 1904. [J. J.]

Spirit of Christ, Thy grace be given. This, in The Baptist Church Hyt., 1900, is a slightly altered form of "Spirit of Christ, thine earnest given," a cento from "Twas silence in Thy temple, Lord " (p. 1189, £), by J. Keble.

Spirit of Faith! be Thou my Guide.

Anne Bronte. [Longing for God.] This, in Worship Song, 1905, No. 294, is from the poem "The Three Guides," in Wothering Heights, 1850, p. 501, in 27 sts. (first published in Frazer's Magazine). It begins with st. xxx.

Sometimes it is given as "Spirit of tenth!" Sometimes it is given as "Spirit of truth!" (See p. 183, it.) [J. M.]

Splendor Paternae gloriae, p. 1090, i. Additional trs. are:

1. O splandour of God's glory bright, 0 Then that bringest light from light. A fine version in the Tattendor fight, 1899, No. 29, marked as "Tr. by R. B."

2. 0 splendson of Ged's glary bright, Who bringest forth the light from light. In Hys. A. & M., 1904, marked as by the Compilers.

The Church Hye. 1903 text, "O Jesu, Lord of heavenly grace," is the old text of the 1871 ed. of that collection (see p. 1080, ii. 9), and the hymu, "Come, Holy Sun of heavenly love," in the American Hys. for Church & Home, is composed of st. ii.-v. of J. Chandler's tr. [J. M.]

Sponsa Christi quae per orbem, p. 1080, il. The version "Bride of Christ, in warfare glorious," in the New Office H. Bk., 1903, No. 139, is mainly from W. Palmer. In the 1904 ed. of Hye. A. & M., st. ii. and iii. of "Bride of Christ, whose glorious warfare," have been to a great extent rewritten.

Spurgeon, C. H., p. 1081, i. He d. Jan. 8t, 1892.

Stabat ad lignum crucis anxiata, p. 184, i. This is given by Dreres, xi., p. 53, from the Speier Brez., printed at Venice in 1509. It is a hymn on the Compassion of the B. V. M. standing beside the cross of the Redeemer, and has no connection with the German hymn on the Seven Words of the Crucified Redeemer. [J. M.]

Stabat mater dolorose, p. 1031, ii. No fresh evidence has come to light to support the ascription of this Sequence to Pope Innocent III., and it has not yet been found in any Ms. before 1300. There was evidently a local tradition at Todi that it was written by Jacopone, Annibale Tenneroni in his Jacopone du Todi, Todi, 1887, p. 13, gives extracts from an early RE life of Jacopone (in the Communal Library at Todi), which distinctly states that he "composed that hymn which begins Stabat mater dolorosa," during his imprisonment. Tenneroni gives the text at pp. 38-36 from geveral MBS. of the 14th cent. at Florence (Priceard. 1049 and 2762; Laurent. Gadd. 90, Sup. 121), and others of the 15th cent. Ferdipand Gregorovius in his Geschichte der Stadt Rom im Mittelatter, vol. v., p. 613 (Stuttgart, 1865), says, "The Stabat mater has been ascribed without ground to Innocent III., the Pope of the great and cold intellect. In the cloister of the Capuchins at Monte Santo, near Todi, there is a Ms. of the poems of Jacopone, of the end of the 14th cent, in which the Stabat mater is included as his production. But the tradition seems to have been confined to Todi.

In a 14th cent, ms. at Marseilles (No. 110, f. 53, see Catalogue), it is given as the "Con-templation of the Blessed Pope Gregory," and so in a 15th cent. Ms. at Munich (Clm. 10125). In a Horae written in France c. 1440, and now at Trinity, Cambridge (258, f. 178), it begins "Salve mater dolorosa"; and in this ms. it is followed by another beginning "Salve mater speciosa" (printed in Kehrein, No. 276), which goes on "Jam in coelis gloriosa," and is quite different from the Sequence annotated at p. 1064, i. In Seraino Razzi's Laudi Spiritudi, Venice, 1563, f. 27b, it is headed "Hymn of an uncertain author." The present writer is still inclined to believe that in the department of Latin verse writing Jacopone was at most only an imitator; and that he was not the author of the "Stabat mater dolorosa" any more than of the "Verbum care," or the "Jesu dulcis memoria," or the "Crux de te volo conqueri." Additional tra. are :--

I. At the Orose her station keeping; st. iv., "She beheld," in Hya. A. & M., 1804, No. 183, marked as Caswall and Compilers; but only four lines survive as in Caswall, and two of these Caswall berrowed from Mant. Six lines are unaltered and three altered from Mant. Mant and Caswall are, however, not responsible

"O good Jesu, let me borrow Something of Thy Mother's sorrow."

2. At the Cross, her station keeping; st. iv., "For his people's," in The English Hyl., 1906, is mainly based on A. de Vers, with five lines eligibly altered from Mant and four lines slightly altered from Caswall.

2. Hear the Cross was Hery, weeping, p. 1064, i. 6. This is given to J. W. Alexander in error. It is by Dr. H. Mills, and appeared in his Horae Germanicae, 1846, p. 223.

p. 273. [J. M.]

Stand up before your God. At p. 1887, st. 5, this bymn is given under G. Rawsou, but with doubtfulness. It has since been found in H. Alford's Ps. & Hys., 1844.

Stanfield, Francis, s. of Clarkson Stanfield the artist, was b. in London Nov. 5, 1836, and educated at St. Edmund's Coll., near Ware. Since his ordination he has principally been engaged in conducting missions and retreats, but he was for some time stationed at Hertford and has been lately priest in charge at Old Hall Green, Herts. A collected ed. of his hymna is being issued by the Benedictine Fathers at Ramsgate. They include :-

- i. From his Catholic Hys., pt. i. 1858, ii. 1860 :--
- All hail, bright feast of jubilation. All Saints.
   All ye who love your fatherland. Prayer for England.

- 3. Drear is the nightfall. H. V. M.
  4. Hail, Virgin Queen of May's bright gladdening hours. May.
  5. Hear thy children, gentlest mother. H. V. M.
  6. O Facred Heart, all blissful light of Heaven. Sacred Heart.
  - 7, Sweet Jesus | Thun a haven art. Sucred Heart. 8. Sweet Sacrament divine. Holy Communion. 9. There is a land of peace and love. Heaven.

  - ii. In the Holy Family Hys., 1860 :-
- 11. In the Holy Family Hys., 1860:—
  10. Bright Queen of Heaven, Virgin most fair. B. V. M.
  11. Hall, feast of deep celestial joy. All Saints.
  12. Hear Thy children, gentle Jesus. Evening.
  Also in the People's Byt., 1867, and others. In the Supp. to the N. Corg., 1874, it begins "Hear Thy children, Heavenly Father."
  13. O Sacred Heart, our home lies deep in Thee. Sacred Heart.

Sacred Heart.

iii. In the St. Patrick's H. Bk., 1862:-

14. At hour of silent midnight. Christmas. 15. O Mother, welcome is the feast. Immaculate Conception. [J. M.]

Stephano primo martyri, p. 1092, iL This is printed in Dreces, xiv., p. 28, from the two 11th cent. copies (Paris, Lat. 1092, and Vatioan 7172) of the Hymnarium of St. Severinian at Naples, from a Berlin Ms. of the 11th cent., and from an 11th cent. Ms. (109, f. 31) in the Chapter Library at Verona. Also in Werner, No. 198, from three Rheinau Mess. (82, 83, 91) of the 11th cent., now at Zürich. [J. M.]

Stephens, James, was born at Southsea, March 18, 1847, and ordeined to the curacy of Christ Church, Plymouth, 1878. He became Chaplain of Falmouth Roadstead, in 1876, and in 1880 Missioner under the Rev. W. H. M. H. Aitken in connection with the Church Parochial Mission Society. He has published Children's Sermons as Living Water for Little Pilchers, 1882, and Light for Little Lanterns, 1885, &c. His Mission Hymns, originally published in 1888, has been enlarged twice, and now contains 118 hymns. Of these he is the author of about twenty, all of which are marked in the index of first lines. Concerning the hymn "Another page of life Is open unto me," which is attributed to him, Mr. Stephens says: " It was given to me by a lady unknown to me in America, who wrote it, I think, after one of my sermons, or gave it me because it contained the truths I had dwelt upon in my discourses." (June 18, 1895.) [J. J.]

Stephenson, T. B., p. 1002, B. Dr. Stephenson was President of the Wesleyan Conference in 1891, and became warden of the Wesley Desconess Institute in 1903. His hymn, "Lord, grant us like the watching five," is in The Meth. H. Book, 1904. [J. J.]

Sterling, J., p. 1688, ii. (Under "When up to nightly skies," &c.) Another of his hymns which was given in the American Hys. of the Spirit, 1864 and Martineau's Hys. of Praise and Prayer, 1873, No. 31, "O Source divine and Life of all" (Reverence and Love), has passed into a few modern American collections, including The Pilgrim Hyl., 1904. It is dated 1840. [J J.]

Still on the homeward journey. Jame Borthwick. [New Year.] One of her best hymns. It is in Dr. W. F. Stevenson's Hys. for Ch. and Home, 1878, No. 486, the Scotch Ch. [J. M.] Hymnary, 1898, and others.

Stille Nacht, heilige Nacht, p. 781, i. Another tr, is:-

Blent night! hallow'd night! Barth is hush'd. In the New Office H. Bk., 1908, No. 880.

Stock, Sarah G., p. 1094, t. The following additional hymns by Miss Stock have come into C. U., mainly through the Church Miss. H. Book, 1899; and Hys. of Consecration and Fatth, enlarged edition, 1902:-

Fatth, enlarged edition, 1902:—

1. A cry as of pain, Again and again, [Claims of the Heathen.] Written for the C.M.S. Gleaners' Union Anniversary, Oct. 31, 1860, and printed in the Gleaner, June 1891, p. 90.

3. He shall reign e'er all the earth. [The World for Christ.] Actual date unknown.

3. Hear ye not the tramp of respects [ For Gleaners' Union Meetings.] Written for the Gleaners' Union Anniversary, 1889.

4. Jeens calls. He it is Who died to save thee. [Hollow Secur.] Written for the Gleaners' Union Anniversary, 1882, and printed in the Gleaners' Union Anniversary, 1892, and printed in the Gleaners' Union Anni-versary, 1892, and printed in the Gleaners' Union Anniversary, 1892, an Cott of the Boulern, results of the Anniversary, 1892.

11. The love of Christ constraining, [Nursuali of Missionaries.] Written for the Valedictory Meeting of the Ch. of Eng. Zonana Society in 1892.

12. They are waiting conceptor. I foot. [The Call of the Heather.] Written for the Gleaners' Union Anniversary, 1983, and primted in the Gleaner, Dec. 1893, p. 192.

13. Thy servants, Lord, are dear to Thes. [Interoctation for Missioneries.] Date unknown.
14. Treasures we have gathered here. [For a Missionary Exhibition.] Written for the opening of the Birmingham Missionary Exhibition, Oct. 1995, and printed in the Glosner, Dec. 1896, p. 195.
15. We are children of the King. [Children's Mission
Hyous.] Written for the C.M.S. "Sowers' Fand," 1891,

The whole of these hymns were included in the Church Missionary H. Bk., 1899, and Nos. 1, 2, 4, 5, 7, and 10, in Hys. of Consecra-tion and Faith, 1902.

These hymns are of a special Missionary character, as their titles indicate, and in them Miss Stock has maintained her reputation as a hymn writer. Her death took place at Penmacumaur, Aug. 27, 1898. The above details are from Ms. notes supplied to us by her brother, Mr. Eugene Stock.

We must add that on p. 1694, Nos. 2 and 11 are given as two distinct hymns. This is an error. No. 2, "Behind and Before," is the True of No. 11, "The tender light of home behind." [J, J]

Stockmann, August Cornelius. Born May 14, 1751, at Schweikertshain, near Waldheim, in Saxony; d. Feb. 6, 1821, at Leipzig. He ed. the Leipzig Musenalmanach, 1779-1781, and contributed to the issue for 1780 his wellknown poem, written 1779, beginning :-

attempts have been made to give it a more distinctively Christian character. One of these is "Wie sie so sanft Brightman's Liturgies Eastern and Western, 1896; p. 300) said by the Deacon while the people are communicating. It was versified by Mr. C. W. Humphreys (from the prose tr. in Dr. J. M. Neale's Liturgies of S. Mark, S. James, S. Clement, S. Chrysostom and the Church of Malabar, 1859, p. 156; Canon Brightman informs me that the Syriac text is in the Rome ed., 1844, of the Uniat Missal of Malabar, which is the old Nestorian rite of the Christians of St. Thomas, as modified in South India in 1599), contributed to The Engl. Hyl., and partly rewritten, with his consent, by Mr. Dearmer. ſĴ. M.T

Stryker, M. W., pp. 1099, i.; 1625, il. 7; 1615, iv. In 1892, Dr. Stryker became President of Hamilton Coll and also received the LL.D. from Lafayette Coll. His College Hymnal, 1897, 1904, contains 28 of his hymns, the majority of which date 1890-1894. Of these "From doubt and all its sullen pain" (Faith), written in 1890, is found in other collections. Dr. Stryker d. in 1905. His Dies Irae was pub. 1892, and his Latermath (verse) [J. J.]

Stubbs, Charles William, D.D., was born at Liverpool, Sept. 3, 1845, educated at the Royal Institution School, Liverpool, and Sidney Sussex Coll. Camb.; B.A. in honours 1868, M.A. 1876, D.D. 1894. Ordeined in 1868, he has held some of the most important positions in the Church, including the Desnery of Ely, and is now (1907) Bishop of Truro. His published works are numerous, but do not come, except in the most remote degree, into the except in the most remote degree, into the realm of hymnology. In his Brythhoth's Prayer, and Other Poems, 1899, the hymn "We hail Thee, King of kings! Imperial Christ" appeared (p. 66). In Horder's Worship Song, 1905, it is slightly altered and abbreviated as "We hail Thee, King of kings, Plannel Christ" Eternel Christ."

Sturm, J. C. R., p. 1100, i. Leipzig, May 2, 1896. He died at Sublime Numen, ter potens, p. 1100, ii. In Chevalier's Reportorium, No. 19592, this is indexed as by Simon Gourdan, as in a Ms. collection of his hymns in the Bibl. Nat., Paris (Lat. 14839), and as printed in the Angers Brev. of 1717. In the Sens Brev. of 1726, and the Paris Brev. of 1736 (Acct., p. 156), it bears no signature. [J. M.]

Summae Deus clementiae, Mundique, p. 1101, 1 The version, "Most Merciful I by Whom is sway'd," in the New Office H. Bk., 1905, No. 176, is based on Chambers.

Summe Pater, O Creator, p. 1101, ii. F. W. Faber's tr. appeared in his The Rosary, and other Poems, 1845, p. 1, and again in his Jesus and Mary, 1852. In the latter it is dated "Rome, the Eve of St. Barnabas, 1843, Villa Strozzi."

Bummers, Helen, was b. in 1857. hymns by her are in the Christian Endeasour Hyl., 1896, and are repeated elsewhere :-

1. Early in the morning, Lord, we come to Thee. MOTRING.

2. Master of the vineyard, hear. Workers with Christ. 1835; previously in the S. S. Chronicle. 3. Onward, upward lies the way. The Way to Zion 4. That life is scarce worth living. Follow Christ.

[J. M.]

Summi largitor praemii, p. 1102, ii. Another tr. is "O Thou Who dost accord us," in The English Hyl., 1906, No. 86. It is marked as J. W. Hewett and others, and is the (r. at p. 110s, il., entirely rewritten in a different metre, not one line being the same as in 1859. In the 1904 ed. of Hys. A. & M., the old text, "O Thou Who dost to man accord," is repeated with alterations of the sixth line in each verse. [J, M,] Summi Regis potentia, pp. 1108, L, and 1591, i. This is printed in Dreves, xii., p. 83, from a Paris MS. (Lat. 1256, Breviary of the use of Tulle) of c, 1100; a Troyes Ms. of the 12th cent. (No. 807, Brevlary of the use of Langres), and others. It is also in a 12th cent. Ms. at Evreux (No. 70, from Lyre, near Evreux), and in a 10th cent. us. at Brussels (No. 1851). J. D. Chambers's tr., p. 1109, is in his Household Devotion, 1854, p. 312. [J. M.]

Sunset and evening star. Alfred Lord [Death and Burial.] In Lord Memoir of his father, vol. ii., Tennyson. Tennyson's p. 366, he gives this account of the writing of this hymn :-

this hymn: :—

"Crossing the Bat," was written in my father's eighty-first year, on a day in October [1836] when we came from Aldworth to Farringford. Before reaching Farringford he had the meaning of the bay in his mind, and after dinner he showed me this poem written out, if said, 'That is the crown of your life's work.' Re answered, 'It came in a moment,' He explained the 'Pilot' as 'That Divine and Unseen Who is always guiding us.' ... A few days before my father's death itse?] he said to me, 'Mind you put "Crossing the Bar" at the end of all editions of my poema.' ... My father considered Edmund Lushington's translation into Greek of 'Crossing the Bar' one of the finest translations he had ever read."

This fr into Greek is given in the Memoric.

This tr. into Greek is given in the Memoir. The hymn was first pub. in Lord Tennyson's Demeter and other Poems, 1889, p. 174.

[J. J.] Supernae matris gaudis, p. 1103, i. Another tr. is:

Another 57. 18:—

1. Joy and triumph everlasting, in the Fallendon Byl., 1839. No. 27, marked as "adapted by R.R." This is repeated in G. R. Woodward's Songs of Syon, 1904. No. 107, and in The English Byl., 1906.

2. The Church on earth, with answering love. This fr. by Dr. Neals is in his article on "Recieslastical Latin Poetry," in "History of Roman Literature," in the Encyc. Metropolitona, 1852.

Sweet evening hour! Sweet evening hour! H. F. Lyte. [Evening.] From his Miso. Poems, 1833, p. 48, into Worship Song, 1905, and others.

Sweet land of rest, for thee I sigh. (Heaven desired.) The earliest date to which we have traced this hymn is the American Songs for the Sanctuary, 1865, where it is "Anon." In Hatfield's Church Hymn Book, 1872, it is given as by "G.M.—1829," but in several later collections the name of "Elizabeth Mills" is freely used. Beyond these ascriptions we have no evidence in favour of either. Sometimes the hymn begins "O land of rest," as in Sankey's Sac. Songs & Solos, 1881. [J. J.]

Sweet Mother, turn those gentle eyes. [B.V.M.] An anonymous hymn in the Catholic Parochial H. Bk., 1873, Tozer's Catholic Hymne, 1898, and others.

Sweet Saviour, bless us ere we go, p. 1107, ii. Uniformity in the use of this hymn, so far as the text is concerned, seems impossible. Most of the leading collections differ from each other, both in the text and in the stanzas which are in use. All forms of the hymn should be collated with the original in Faber's Hymns, 1862, p. 251, if accuracy of detail is desired.

Symonds, John Addington, M.A., S. of J. A. Symonds, b. at Bristol, Oct. 5, 1840; educated at Harrow, and Balliol Coll., Oxford, p.A. (double first) 1862, and Fellow of Magdalen 1862. Wrote extensively, especially on the History of the Italian Renaissance, and also pub. various vols. of verse. Died at Rome, April 19, 1893. His Life, by Horatio Brown, was pub, in 1895. His hymn: "These things shall be! a loftier race" (A Regenerated World), in The Meth. H. Bk., 1904, is from his New and Old, a volume of verse by John Addington Symonds, 1880, p. 225. It begins with st. iv. of "Sad heart, what will the future bring?," a poem entitled "A Vista." [J. M.]

Synesius, p. 1106, ii. A good popular account is Alice Gardner's Syncatus of Cyrene, Philosopher and Bishop (S.P.C.K., 1886).

More recent works include Synesius the Hellene, by W. T. Craveford, B.D., London, 1901, which gives prose tra. of the hymns, and Charles Vellay's Etude sur les Hymnes de Synésius de [J, M,] Cyrène, Paris, 1904.

Syriac Hymnody, pp. 1109-1114. On p. 1113, ii., l. 11, read thus: "The Rev. J. B. Morris, in his Select Works of S. Ephraem the Sprian (Oxford, 1847), gives prose renderings of a large number of the hymns." Two hymns from the Syriac are in The English Hyl., 1906 (No. 194, 329). There are also several versions in R. M. Moorsom's Renderings of Church Hymne, 1901. [J, M,] T. C. W., in the American Hymnal: Amore Det, 1890, i.e. T. C. Williams.

Τὰ τῆς γῆς ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς. [Ascension.] This is the Oices after the sixth Ode of the Canon for Ascension Day, by St. Joseph the Hymnographer (see Arearns rechaspes, p. 67, ii.), and is found in the Pentecostarion, Venice, 1899, p. 153. It was tr. as "Things of the earth in the earth will we lay," by Dr. J. M. tum. [St. Joseph.] This hymn has sometimes

Neale, in his Hys. of the Eastern Church, 1862, p. 150. This is found in two forms : (1) " The things of the earth in the earth let us lay," in the American Luth. Order of Worship, 1899; (2) "Vanities earthly in earth will we lay," in the 1876 ed. of Hys. of the Eastern Church, and in the St. Margaret's Hymnal, 1875. [J. J.]

Take up thy cross, the Saviour said, p. 858, ii. The original text of this hymn is restored in the 1903 ed. of Church Hus.

Tandem luctus, tandem fluctus. Heinrich Lindenborn. [Advent.] In Lindenborn's Tochter Sion, Cologne, 1741, p. 37, in 7 sts. In Daniel, ii., p. 336, as "Tandem fluctus, tandem luctus," Tr. as:—

Storm and terror, grief and error. By J. M. Nesle, in his 48d. Hys., 1851, p. 146, repeated in G. R. Woodward's Sings of Syon, 1904, No. 4. [J. M.]

ے¢ άντίληψιν, Γαχύς μόνος ύπαρχων Χριστέ. This is a Troparion in the Order of Holy Unction, in The Euchologion, Venice, 1897, p. 266. It is ir. as "Thou, Lord, hast power to heal," by J. Brownlie, from his Hys. from the Greek Office Books, 1904, p. 19, into The English Hyl., 1906. [J, J]

Taylor, George Lansing, n.o., b. at Skaneateles, N.Y., Feb. 13, 1835, graduated at Columbia Coll., 1861, D.D. from Syracuse, 1876. Entered the Meth. Episcopal Ministry in 1862. His bymn, "Dare to do right! dare to be true" His hymn, "Dare to the right," was to be a disconsisted to the Courage, appeared anonymously in W. B. Bradbury's Golden Censer, 1864; and Bradbury's Clarion, 1867, as by "Rev. Geo. Lansing Taylor." In the S. School Hymnary, 1905.

Te Deum laudamus. The corrections of, and additions to, the article on this hymn have been inserted in the text at pp. 1119, i.-1130, ii., and 1547, i.-1543, ii. In both instances the whole history and notes as set forth in the revised edition as above should be read by the student of this great hymn. Several additional tre, have come to our notice since the list of those known to us in 1892 was given in this Dictionary; but as none have come into C. U., we cannot find space to record them here. The latest contribution to the history of this hymn is Te Deum ou Illatio, by Dom Cagin, O.S.B., Lon., 1907. [J. J.]

Te Deum Patrem colimus. text, as printed at p. 1134, read :-iii. 2, Irato; v. 1. Triune; v. 4, Orante. The date 1685 is probably the date of the hymn as well as of the tune. The Magdalen College tradition is that the hymn was composed by Dr. Thomas Smith (q.v.). The statements that a yearly charge of £10 on the Rectory of Slymbridge, Gloucs, is used to pay the choristers for the 1st of May service on the top of the tower, and that this service is in place of a requiem mass formerly sung on the tower for the soul of Henry the Seventh, seem baseless (see H. A. Wilson's Magdalen College, 1809; Musical Times, June, 1900, &c.). Another tr. is:-

Father and God, we worship Thee. In the Book of Anthems for the use of the Temple Church, Lendon, 1845, p. 274.

Te Joseph celebrent agmina coeli-

"Great Gabriel sped on wings of light." p. 540, il. 15.

The blind man in his darkness. Cest F. Alexander. [Blind Bartimans.] From her Narrative Hys., 1853, No. xiii., into several collections, including the Sunday S. Hymnary, 1905, and others.

The Church of God a Kingdom is, L. B. C. L. Muirhead. [The Church of Christ.] Contributed to the Yattendon Hyl., 1899, No. 61, with the note at p. 18: "By Lionel B. C. L. Muirhead, 1898; written for this book; after Van Eyck's picture of the "Worship of the Lamb." This picture, now in the Cathedral of St. Bavon at Ghent, was begun by Hubert van Eyck about 1420, and finished by his brother Jan in 1432 (the reproduction by the Arundel Society is one of the best of their issues). The hymn is repeated in The English Hyl., 1906, No. 488.

The Church triumphant in Thy love. This, in The English Hymnol, 1906, is a cento from C. Wesley's "Happy the souls to Jesus joined," sts. ii.-iv., p. 1868, i. 115.

The darkness now is over. [Morning.] Given with the initials "E. T." or anonymously in Mrs. C. Brock's Children's H. Book, 1881, No. 14, the Scottish Hymnal, 1884, the Scotch Church Hymnary, 1898, and others.

The day is done, the sacred day. This is a slightly altered form of "The day is done, the weary day," p. 1035, ii.

The day is ended; ere I sink to sleep. Harriet M. Kimball. [Economy.] From her Hymns, Boston, 1866, p. 62, into Harder's Worship Song, 1905.

The day, O Lord, is spent, p. 1147, it. Dr. Neale's original form of this hymn was given in his Hys. for Children, 1843, as "Saviour, abide with us." His revised text, "The day, O Lord, is spent," appeared in the 2nd ed. of the Hys. for Children, 1844. The statement that "Saviour, abide with us" is a cento by Canon W. Cooke is an error, [J. J.]

The days of old were days of might, p. 1147, ii. This hynn is given to Miss Leeson in error. It is by F. W. Faber, and appeared in his Chericell Water Lity and other Poems, London, 1840, p. 46, and entitled "The Signs of the Times." It passed into Miss Leeson's Bonya of Christian Chivalry, 1848, without schnowledgments a from F.W. Faber. Hence the error in the secription of anthorship. [J. M.]

The earth, C Lord, is one great [wide] field. This, in Hys. A. & M., 1904, and other collections begins with st. iii. of Dr. Neale's "O God, we raise our hearts to Thee," p. 739, it.

The first Noel the angel did say. [Christmas.] This is given in Davis Gilbert's Ancient Christmas Carols, 1923, No. ix.; in the Christmas Carols of W. Sandys, 1833, p. 74; Tozer's Catholic Hys., 1898, and others.

The fee behind, the deep before, p. 1148, ii. The melody in Dr. Neale's Carols for Easter-tide, 1854, No. xxii., is taken from the Pice Cantiones, 1582 (p. 211, ii.), where it is set to "Auctor humani generis"; the part used beginning at the words "Sie morte mortem destruis." Dr. Neale only takes a few phrases from the Latin, and his Carol is practically original.

[J. M.]

The gloomy night embraced the place. R. Crashaw. [Christmas.] This, in the Arandel Hys., 1902, is a cento from a carol in Crashaw's Steps to the Temple. In the ed. of 1646, p. 28, it is entitled "A Hymne of the Nativity, sung by the Shepheards," and begins "Came wee Shepheards who have seene"; in the ed. of 1648, p. 43, and in his Carmen Dea Nostro, 1652, p. 13, it begins "Come we shepheards whose blest Sight." [J. M.]

The gloomy night will soon be past, p. 1184, i. 6. This hymn appeared in the London Inquirer, Sep. 1840, p. 422.

The God of love, to earth He came. This, in the 1904 ed. of The Meth. H. Bk., No. 349, is composed of sts. iii. and iv. of the old Mes. H. Bk., No. 36 (see p. 503, i.), "Jesus, Thou all-redeeming Lord." 2

The grace of Jesus Christ the Son. C. Wesley. [For the Church.] From his Short Hymns, 1762, in a slightly altered form of "The merits of Jehovah's Son" into The Meth. Hymn-Bh., 1904. (P. Works, xiii., p. 60.)

The Homeland Oh, the Homeland [Heaven.] In the American College Hymnal, 1897, No. 369, this hymn is given as by "Hugh B. Haweis." In the Presh New Ps. and Hys., Richmond, Va., 1991, the signature is the same, with the date "1855." On the other hand, in the English Cong. Sunday S. H. Bk., 1891, and others, it is attributed to "William Lindsay Alexander." We have failed to trace it to either author.

The hope of heaven's eternal days. This begins with st. ii. of Dr. W. Bright's "And now the wants are told," &c., p. 66, 1. In this form it is in American use.

The King, O God, his heart to Thee upredeeth. [National Thanksquing.] A fine hymn in the Yattendon Hyl., 1839, No. 74, with the note at p. 21; "Jubilee Hymn, 1897, by R. B. Adapted from Ps. xxi. in Robert Tailour's 'Fifti Select Psalms,' set in five parts, 1615." The book of 1615 (Sacred Hymne, Consisting of Fifti, &c.; B. M. copy is K. 2. A. 14) has a version of Ps. xxi., but the Yattendon hymn does not borrow a single line from it, and does not even keep the metre. The text of 1899 is repeated in The English Hyl., 1905, No. 564. [J. M.]

The land our fathers left to us, pp. 521, ii., and 504, ii., together with its companion bymn, "The past is dark with sin and sharne," are given in the first instance as by T. W. Higginson; and in the second instance as by S. Johnson. On Putnam's authority, in his Singers and Songs of the Liberal Faith, 1875, these hymns are by Higginson, and not by Johnson.

The light pours down from Heaven. Joseph Gostick. [Christian Service.] This, in the Pilgrim Hymnel, 1904, and others, begins with st. iv. of a piece in Gostick's Tales, Escays and Poems, London, 1848, p. 108, entitled "Light for all." The version "With honest heart" (noted at p. 580, i. under Estry) is also by him, and is in his Spiril of German Poetry, 1843, p. 189. He d. 1887.

The Lord into His garden comes. [Christ in His Church.] Appeared anonymously in J. Leavitt's Christian Lyre, 1830, Pt. i., No. 22, and subsequently in several collections, including the American Baptist Hymnal, 1903.

The Lord is King, the earth submits, p. 1290, it. This should read "The Lord is King, and earth submits."

The Lord is risen indeed, Now is His work performed. This hynn, in the Hys. A. & M., Supplemental Hys., 1889, and the Revised ed., 1904, is an altered form of sts. iii.,-v., vii., viii., of T. Kelly's "The Lord is risen indeed," p. 1153, ii. [J. J.]

The Master comes! He calls for thee. B. M. Crawford, née Grimes. [The Missionary's Call.] In the C.M.S. Gleaner, Sept. 1896, p. 140, there is a notice of this hymn, and of the writer. The hymn is in the Ch. Missionary H. Bk., 1899, and is in great request at missionary meetings, &c. Miss Emily May Grimes weut to Pondoland in 1893, and married in 1904 Dr. T. W. W. Crawford, Missionary of the C.M.S. at Kiknyu, British East Africa.

The morning, the bright and the beautiful morning. H. Bonar. [Child's Morning Hymn.] Appeared in his Bible H. Bk., 1845, No. 118; his Hys. of Faith and Hope, 1857, p. 157; and Hys. by Horatius Bonar, 1904, p. 53. It is given in several modern collections.

The New Year, Lord, we welcome make. T. H. Gill. [New Year.] Appeared in the 2nd ed. of his The Golden Chain of Praise, 1894, p. 231 in 10 st. of 4 l. and dated 1888. No. 698 in The Bap. Church Hyl., 1900, is a cento from the original. [J. J.]

The peace which God bestows. [Peace with God.] This was given in the American Hys. of the Spirit, 1864, No. 131, with the signature in the Index "*Mrs. Hemans," the asterisk indicating that changes had been made in the text. In The Pilgrim Hyl., 1904, the same text is repeated and also attributed to Mrs. Hemans. We have failed to trace it in her collected Works. [J. J.]

The radiant morn hath passed away, p. 1156, i. Under date of Oct. 24, 1899, the late Preb. Thring requested the Hymnal Committee of the S.P.C.K. to substitute the following as the second stanza in this hymn, in the then forthcoming revision of Church Hys., for the stanza usually found in the hymnals, including his own:—

"Our life is but an autumn sun Its glorious noon how quickly past; Lead us, O'Christ, our life-work done, Safe home at last."

"This," added Preb. Thring, "is my last and final emendation of this verse." This request was acceded to by the Committee as seen in the 1903 ed. of Church Hys. No. 31. This text is also in The English Hys., 1906. The text of the 1904 ed. of Hys. A. & M. is that of Thring's H. Fk., 1882. [J. J.]

The rosy morn has rob'd the aky. An altered form of W. Cooke's tr. of "Aurora lucis dum novae," p. 94, f. 1, is given in a few American collections.

The sands of time are sinking, pp. 884, ii., 1558, i. The cento in The Baptiet Church Hyl., 1900, was arranged by Mrs. Cousin, from her peem of 19 sts. for that collection. Mrs. Cousin was b. 1824.

The snow lay on the ground. [Christmas.] This appears to be a West of England traditional carol, and is given as such in R. R. Chope's Carols, 1875, No. 44, where it begins "The snow lay deep upon the ground." In the Crown of Jeans, 1862, No. 146, it begins "The snow lay on the ground " and is marked, with regard to the tune, as "Christmas Carol, sung in Rome by the Pifferari from the Abruzzi Mountains." The text of 1862 is in the Arandel Hys., 1902, and many others. [J. M.]

The Voice says, Cry! What shall we cry? H. Twells. [Missions.] Appeared in Hys., Sonnets and Other Poems for the Bicentenary of the S.P.G., 1900, No. 13, in 7 st. of 4 l., and again in Hys. A. & M., 1904, but in a slightly altered form. [J. J.]

Theodulph of Orleans appears to have been a native of Italy. He was brought to France by Charles the Great, perhaps when Charles returned from Italy in 781. He became Bp. of Orleans about 785, and soon afterwards also Abbot of Fleury. After the death of Charles he continued for some time on friendly terms with the Emperor Louis, but, falling under suspicion of being concerned in the plot in favour of Bernard of Italy, was imprisoned in 818, at Angers, where he seems to have died in 821, apparently on Sep. 18. There is a full and interesting sketch of his life and works in the Dict. of Chr. Biog., iii., pp. 983-989. See also Potthast's Bibl. Hist. Medii Aevi. 1896, vol. ii., p. 1058. The best and most recent ed. of his Carmina is in vol. i., Berlin, 1881, of the Poetae Latina Aevi Carolini, which includes his famous "Gloria, laus et honor," p. 426, i.

There burns a star o'er Bethlehem town. E. Field. [Christmas.] The history of this hymn is set forth in the following letter from Dr. Stryker to the Rev. Dr. Benson of Philadelphia in answer to an enquiry respecting it:—

"The hymn was given me in 1889 in autograph by Eugens Field, whom in Chicago I knew well. He wrote it a little before Christonas. Frohably it appeared in the Chicago Neue, in the 'Sharpa and Flats' column. I knew that he expanded it into the verse you name. As it is in my book it is unmodified by a word from the cappy given to me. I seized it at once for a hymn. Clinton, N.Y., Oct. 1905."

This original text is No. 73, in 4 st. of 6 l., in Dr. Stryker's College Hymnal, N.Y., IS97. The expanded text is, "As I was going to Bethlem-town." [L. F. B.]

There in the narrow manger, cold and bleak. [Christmas.] This is in O. Shipley's Annus Sanctus, 1884, pt. ii., and Arundel Hya., 1902.

There is a joy of heavenly birth. [Repentance.] From W. Young's Catholic Choralist, 1842, No. 208, into the Arundel Hys., 1902, as "It is a joy of heavenly birth."

There is a precious day. John Holland: [Youth for Christ.] This appeared on a broadsheet of Hys. for the Anniversary Sermons of the Red Hill (Wesleyan) Sunday Behool, which were presched in Carver Street Chapel, Sheffield, March 6, 1825; and again on a second broadsheet for the Sheffield Park S. S. Sermons, July 6, 1826. In each instance the hymn is in 6 st. of 4 l. and signed J. H., i.e. John Holland. Hymns by Montgomery are also on the same sheet. (See Broadsheets, Julian Collection, Church Honse.)

There is a river pure and bright J. Montgomery. [Hope of Heaven.] From his Original Hymns, 1853, No. 229, in 6 st. of 4 l. In the Engby School Chapel Hymns, 1872 and 1906, it is abbreviated to st. i-iv.

There is a voice of singing birds. God's Voice.] This is given in Little Poems for Little People by M. S. O., N.D. (1847), p. 30, entitled "Voices"; repeated in the S. School Hymnary, 1905, &c. In the School Hys., 1891, and others, it begins with st. ii., "There is a method's voice of lays." The terms of the school Hys., 1891, and others, where of lays." "There is a mother's voice of love." The tr., "Who has counted the leaves that fall" (p. 80, ii.) is in 1847, p. 56.

There is a voice of sovereign grace. This is a cento from L. Watte's "How sad our state by nature is," p. 585, ii.

There is an eye that never sleeps, p. 1197, i.; Wallace, J. C. At this place this hymn is given to James Cowden Wallace in error. It is by John Aikman Wallace, p. 1594, ii., and appeared in the Scottish Christian Herold, Sep. 28, 1839, p. 616. W. F. Stevenson, in his note thereon in his Hys. for the Church and Home, 1872, says that the original was furnished to him in ms. by Mr. Wallace's family, that the lines were not divided into stanzas, and that the received version of the text is an amended form required by the metre, and made by an unknown hand. Stevenson gives also specimen lines from the MS. [J. J.]

There'll be no dark valley when Jesus comes. [Light at Eventide.] Concerning this hymn, in Sac. Songs and Solos, 1903, Mr. Sankey says, in his My Life and Sac. Songs, 1906 :-

"I arranged this hymn from the words which Mr. W. O. Cushing wrote for me, of which, however, I used only the first line, "There'll be no dark valley when Jesus comes.

Its proper ascription is "W. O. Cushing and I. D. Sankey." [J. J.]

They come, God's messengers of love, p. 1162, ii. In Church Hys., 1903, R. Campbell's original text of this byun is restored.

Thine for ever, God of love, p. 780, i. The original text of the five stanzas which constitute this hymn in Church Hys., 1903, was restored at the special request of Mrs. Maude. This restored text is also repeated in Hye. A.

marked as by "S. J., 1871." It is repeated in | dt M., 1904; and The English Hyl., 1906. An extended note of considerable interest is in Brownlie's Hys. & Hymn Writers of the Church Hymnary (London: H. Frowde, 1899), pp. 238-9. In the Strand Magazine of May 1895, there is a portrait of Mrs. Maude, and a facsimile of the original Ma.

> This is the day of Light, p. 1166, i. In the 1904 ed. of Hys. A. & M., an additional stanza, "This is the day of Bread," is given. Canon Ellerton's revised and authorized text is No. 37 in Church Hyp., 1903. It does not contain this stanza. [J. J.]

> This night, O Lord, we bless Thes. J. D. Burns. [Evening.] From his Eccning Hymn, 1857, p. 41, into a few collections.

> Thomas of Kempen, p. 1167, it. The hymns of Thomas a Kempis have been ed., with a short biographical notice, in Dreves, xlviii., Nos. 458-493. Nine of them have been separately annotated in this Dictionary.

> Four were given with his name, viz., "Adversamundi," at p. 23, ii.; "Jernsalem huminosa," at pp. 579, ii., and 793, i.; "Nec quisquam," at p. 798, i.; and "C qualis," at p. 845, ii.

The others are :--

"Apparult benignitaa," p. 76, 5.; "En dies est dominica," p. 340, ii.; "In domo Patris," p. 568, ii.; "Quisquis vales numerare," p. 947, ii.; "Veni, veni, Rez glorise," p. 1216, i.

These are found in a Carlsrahe ms. of the 15th cent. (No. 368; this ms. also has "Jernsalem luminosa" and "Nec quisquam"), but they are neither in the Opera of Thomas, nor in the Zwolle ms., c. 1480, of his "Cantica Spiritualia" (see p. 1188, i.). Dreves is probably right in ascribing them to Thomas, but he does not give his reasons for doing so. [J. M.]

Thompson, A. R., p. 1168, i. He d. Feb. 8, 1895.

Thomson, Mary Ann, wife of John Thomson, Librarian of the Free Library, Phila., was b. in London, England, Dec. 5, 1834. She has written several hymns and poems. To 1895, eight of these appeared in The Churchnum (New York); and thirty-four in The Living Church (Chicago). Of her hymns the following were included in The Hymnal, Revised and Enlarged . . . The P. E. Church, U.S.A., 1892 :-

The Poetical Works of O. W. Holmes, Boston; 1881, vol. ii., p. 101, dated 1869; and again in the Cambridge ed. of his Complete Poetical Works, 1895, p. 129. It is included in The Baptist Church Hyl., 1900, and others, [J. J.]

Thou, Lord, art gone on high. is a slightly altered form of Mrs. Toke's "Thou art gone up on high," p. 1169, ii.

Thou the cup of death didst drain. J. Anstice. [Christ, the Example and Friend.] Pub. in his Hymns, 1836, No. 29, in 6 st. of 8 l. Included in the Hymnal appended to An Order of Prayer for Use in the Royal College of St. Peter, Westminster, 1880, of which he was a King's Scholar,

Thou Whose almighty word, p. 715, i. 2. This hymn, beginning "Thou Whose eternal word," was quoted by the Rev. Thomas Mortimer, M.A., Lecturer of St. Olave's, Southwark, and afternoon Lecturer at St. Leonard's. Shoreditch, at the meeting of the London Missionary Soc. in Great Queen Street Chapel, London, on Thur., May 12, 1825, and was printed with a digest of the speech in the Eveny. May., June 1825, p. 262. It was probably copied from the Magazine into the Friendly Visitor of July, 1825. [J. J.]

Though Angel's zeal, though Prophet's fire, p. 1698, i. This hymn is an altered form of "Though Cowper's zeal, though Milton's fire," by William Peter, in his Sacred Songs, 1828, p. 107. He d. Feb. 6, 1853.

Though lowly here our lot may be. William Gaskell. [Work for God.] This is sometimes dated 1857, but Miss Gaskell (under date Sept. 21, 1906), while certain of her father's authorship, and thankfully recording that "many people have felt helped by it," is unable to say where or when it was first printed. It is in Miss E. Courtsuld's Ps., Hys. and Anthems, 1860, No. 422, and recently in the Cong. Ch. Hyl., 1887, Public School H. Bk., 1908, Worship Song, 1905, and others. [J. M.]

Three in One, and One in Three, p. 1171, ii. Additional altered forms of this hymn are:-

1. Dayspring of eternity ! Shedding morn o'er earth and sea. In T. W. Chiguell's Exster Coll., 1863. (p. 1195, ii.)

2. Light of life! eternally. In the 1864 ed. of the sume collection.

3. Love of love! as deep and free. In Hunter's Hyn. of Raith and Life, 1889 (ou p. 1171, il. 8, Lord in error);
and A. W. Oxford's Berwick Hyd., 1886.

[J. M.]

Threlfall, Jennette, p. 1171, ii. Another piece, included in the S. S. Hymnary, 1905, is "I'd choose to be a daisy" (Lambe of Jesus). In her Woodserrel, 1857, p. 97, entitled "The Child's Choice." Her "I think of Thee, O Saviour," is also from the same work.

Thring, G., p. 1172, i. He d. Sep. 13, 1903.

Through sorrow's path and danger's road. This, in the American Baptist Bureum Corda, 1898, No. 732, is a slightly altered form of H. K. White's "Through sorrow's night and danger's path," p. 1976, i. s.

Through the silence of the night. [Christmas Carol.] This Carol, in A. E.

Tozer's Catholic Hys., 1898, is ascribed to "H. Woodville,"

Thrupp, J. F., p. 1175, ii. He became Vicor of Barrington, Cambridge, in 1852; and d. at Surbiton.

Thus far the Hand that loves to guide. A. S. Aglen. [Commemoration.] Written for the Jubilee of Marlborough College, 1893, and included in Hys. for Use in the Chapel of Marlborough Coll., 1899.

Thus heaven is gathering one by one. E. H. Bickersteth. [Life Eternal.] Pub. in his Water from the Well Spring, 1852. p. 181, as the end of the Poem The Fear of Death Removed; also in his Two Brothers, cd. 1872, p. 218, entitled, "Death and Victory." It is sometimes given as "So heaven is gathering," &c. This form of the hymn is attri-buted at p. 544, ii., to F. D. Huntington in error.

Thwaites, Clara, née Hepworth, dr. of the Rev. Robert Hepworth, for some time P.C. of Treddington, Gloucestershire, was b. at Tewkesbury in 1829, and m. in 1869 to the Rev. H. G. Thwaites, now (1905) Vicar of Limber Magna, Lincolnshira. Her earliest poetical efforts were pub. in The Youth's Magazine. Since 1880, she has contributed extensively to the Sunday Magazine, The Girl's Own Paper, Home Words, The Fireside, and other publications. Many of her hymns were written for the Church Miss. Gleaner. In this periodical the following, except No. 2, appeared:-

1, 0 world of prids, Throw open wide. [Missions.] In the C.M.S. Gienner, May, 1887, p. 50, and entitled "The gates of His enemies."

2. The red cross of our banner. [Missions.] In the Church Miss, H. Bk., 1899.

3. The sunset burns serves the sky. [Missions.] In the C.M.S. Gisaner, Nov. 1899, p. 171. Written for the Gleaner Union Anniversary, Oct. 31, 1890.

These hymns are of more than ordinary merit, and are included in the Church Miss. H. Bk., 1899. Mrs. Thwaites's Songs for Labour and Leisure, a collection of her poems, was pub. in 1885. [J. J.]

Thy mercy, Lord, is in the heavens. [Ps. xxxxi.] In the American Presb. New Ps. and Hys., 1901, No. 98, this is given as "Francis Rouse, pub. 1646." It is an extract from the Scottish Psalter of 1650, and is here given in full as a typical specimen of that version, from the small octave ed. printed by Evan Tyler at Edinburgh, 1650:-

Thy justice is like mountains great; thy judgements deep as flows;

7 "Lord, then preservest man and beast, how precious is thy grace! Therefore, in shadow of thy wings, mens sons their trust shall place.

8 "They, with the fatnesse of thy house, shall be well satisfi'd: From rivers of thy pleasures, thou will drink to them provide.

9 " Because of life the fountain pure remains alone with thee And in that purest light of thine, we clearly light shall see."

The 18mo ed., printed by Tyler in 1650, reads, l. I., heavens, l. 4, floods; and l. 7, Therefore, on charless (similar small variations are found in eds, of the Scottish Psaiter till about 1750).

On tracing these lines to their sources we find that the version of Sir William Muro (pp. 777, ii.; 1899, ii.) has the following:-" Thy mercia (Lord) is in the beavens; thy tremb the cinuis dath reach. Hence under shadow of thy wings men's sons their trust do place." The 1638 ed. of Ross (p. 1696, ii.) has :--

"Therefore in shadow of thy wings mens sons their trust shall place They with the fatnes of thy bouse well satisff d shall bec....

" Because of life the fountains pure." The 1846 ed. of Rour (p. 1083, i.) gives riso:—
" How precious is thy grace...
" Remains alone with thee."

The 1648 ed. of Sachary Eoyd (p. 167, ii.) has:—
"We clearly light shall see."

of William Barton (pp. 116, il.; 1023, il., &c.)

This analysis shows that II. 1, 2, 8 are practically Mure; II. 7, 9, 10, 13 practically Rous, 1638; II. 6, 14 are Rous, 1646; and I. 16 is Boyd, 1648. The rest seems to be the work of the Committee who compiled the version of 1650 (see 1923, i.). [J, M.]

Thy presence, everliving God. This is a cente much altered from P. Doddridge's "Thy presence, everlasting God" (p. 306, ii. 56), in The Pilgrim Hyl., 1904.

Thy Temple is not made with hands. Cecil F. Alexander. [Consecration of a Church.] This hymn is in Mrs. Alexander's Posses, 1896, p. 49, as a "Consecration Hymn." Its date has not been determined.

Τί σοι προσενέγκωμεν, Χριστέ. St. Anatolius. [Christmas.] This hymn is Χριστέ. a Contakton early in the Canon for Christmas Day. The original Greek is in Dr. Littledale's Offices from the Service-Books of the Holy Bastern Church, 1863, p. 57, and his prose tr. at p. 175. Mr. Brownlie's tr., "What shall we bring to Thee?" in his Hys. of the Greek Church, 1900, p. 30, is an expanded paraphrase rather than a literal tr. [J. J.]

Tidman, Paul Frederick, was b. 1836, and lived in the East from 1852 to 1864, some time with Rajah Brooke in Sarawak. From 1865 to his death he was partner in an East India firm in Leadenhall St., London. In 1888 he was made C.M.G. in recognition of his services to the Straits Settlements. Jan 27, 1889, at Chiselhurst, Kent. Under the name of Mark Evans he pub. a number of religious books for children, charmingly written from an "undogmatic" standpoint. His hymn:

Father, degreet Father, Now the sun his come (Boraise), is in his Nory of our Father's Love, 1873, p. 160. It is repeated in the S. S. Symmary, 1903, and others, sometimes as "Father, Holy Father." [J. M.]

The enough, the hour is p. 1177, it. This hymn we have found in The Christian's Magazine, 1769, p. 186. It subsequently appeared in J. Merrick's Poems.

Beddome. [Faith.] From his Hymne, &c., 1617, No. 18.

"Tis my happiness below, p. 1178, i. From the Ms. volume described under Cowper, W., p. 1685, ii., this hymn, on p. 209, is given as "by Mr. W. C. of Olney, 1773." This shows, as stated at p. 1178, i., that it was a companion hymn to "God moves in a mysterious way."

and was written at or about the same time, and before his attempted suicide in October 1773. In the Ms. st. ii., 1. 7, reads ;-

"Trials lay me at His feet, Lay me low and keep me there."

When printed it was altered to:—
"Trials bring me to His feet, Lay me low and bring me there."

See Notes & Queries, Sept. 24, 1904. [J. J.]

To do Thy holy will. [Love's Recom-pense.] This hymn is ascribed in The Pilgrim Hyl., 1904, and others to G. Cooper, p. 1568, i.

To God I lift mine eyes. An altered form of Watts's "Upward I lift mine eyes," p. 1841, i. 412, in M. W. Stryker's College Hyl., 1897.

To my humble supplication. Joseph Bryan. [Ps. laxxvi.] This, in The Eng. Hyl., 1906, No. 90, is from a us, of c. 1626 in the Brit. Mus. (Harl. 6930, f. 67) where it begins "To myne." Both Mr. E. Farr (Select Poetry, pt. ii., 1815, 322; see also pp. 925, i., 923, ii., 927, ii. of this Dict.) and Mr. W. T. Brooke print it under the name of Francis Davison, but in the Ms. it is marked Finis. J. B. Probably they followed the transcript (Harl, 3357, f. 89), by Ralph Crane (see p. 923, H.), where it is marked "Fra Da." [J. M.]

To sacrifice, to share. [The Bread from Heaven.] An anonymous and undated hymu, entitled "The Hidden Manna," in The Pilgrim Hyl., 1904.

To the Cross, Thine altar, bind. From C. Wesley's "Lord, and is Thine anger gone?" p. 1261, il. 52,

To the ball of the feast came that sinful and fair. J. J. Callanan. [St. Mary Magdalene.] This is given in his Recluse of Inchideny and other Poems, London, 1830, p. 108. It is repeated in W. Young's Cath. Choralist, 1842, in I. D. Sankey's Songe and Solos, 1878, and others, generally reading "the sinful and fair." The author was b. at Cork in 1795, and d. at Lisbon in 1829. [J. M.]

To Thee Whose temple is all space. A cento from A. Pope's "Father of all, in every age," p. 900, il., given in a few American collections as Anon.

To-day Thy gate is open. This, in the Boston Hys. for Church and Home, 1895, is composed of sts. ii., iii. of O. Allen's "To-day Thy mercy calls me," p. 1181, t.

Toke, Emma, née Leslie, p. 1181, i. She d. in 1878, not in 1872.

Toms, Alfred Angustus, Ll.B., of Downing Coll., Camb., B.A. 1879, D. 1879, P. 1881, who, after holding several charges both as Curate and Incumbent, became Vicar of Emneth, Wisbech, in 1902, contributed the following bymns to C. W. A. Brooke's Additional Hys., 1903:—

1. All praise to Thee, O God, that Thou didet knit. Union with God in Christ.

2. Almighty God, Whose gracious band. God in Nature

 Lighten our darkness, gracious Lord. A
 O Great Redeemer, Lord of La alise. Recuing. After a Patality.

Τῶν ἰερῶν ἀθλοφόρων, γ. 1182, i. In the Church Hys., 1903, and Hys. A. & M., 1904, Dr. Nesle's st. iii. is restored in the tr. "Let our choir new anthems raise."

Trevelyan, William Bouverie, M.A., of Trinity Coll., Camb., R.A. 1876, M.A. 1879; D. 1877, P. 1878. From 1881-84 Vice-Principal of Ely Coll., and 1884 Vicar of St. Matthew's, Westminster. Contributed to C. W. A. Brooke's Additional Hys., 1903. "Father, see Thy children bending at Thy throne" (Holy Communion). This was repeated with the omission of the refrain in The English Hys.,

Trinitas, Unitas, Deitas, pp. 1185, fi.; 1593, ii. Dreres, xx., p. 219, gives this as "Trinitas, Deitas, Unitas," from a 13th cent. Ms. at Sens, where it is entitled "Versiculus"; and forms part of an Office for the Feast of the Ass (intended to commemorate the Flight into Egypt), as revised by Pierre de Corbeil. In a previous part of the Office is a "Conductus ad Tabulam," sung when the ass, after being conducted through the streets, had taken its stand beside the high altar; the well-known melody is in H. A. & M. (1889, named Redhead No. 45; 1904, more correctly entitled "Orientis Parti-bus"); the Presb. Ch. Hymnary, 1898, and others. In Dreves, xlvii., p. 348, it is given as "Hosanus, Trinitas, Unitas, Deitas," from various Italian, French and German sources some being earlier than Pierre do Corbeile.g., a Piacenza Troper of c. 1100.  $\{J, M_i\}$

Trope, p. 1186, ii. In recent years a good deal of attention has been paid to this form of liturgical composition. Léon Gautier devoted the first, and only, volume of his Histoire de la Possic Liturgique au Moyen Age, Paris, 1886. entirely to the history of the use, origin and fall of Tropes, and to the description of the Tropers in which they are found. A. Reiners printed the Tropes of the use of Prom and Echternach (10th and 11th cent.) in his Tropen-, Prosen- und Präfations-Gesänge, 1881, and indexed others from a variety of early uss. in his Unbekannte Tropen-Gesange, 1887. W. H. Frere prepared for the Henry Bradshaw Society a most careful and interesting ed. of the Winchester Troper (1894), from the two Winchester Tropers noted at p. 1043, E. (e and to), with additional matter from b. k. x and other sources, prefaced by an introduction which contains all an English reader needs to know. A few fragments of a Troper were ed. by U. Chevalier from a 13th cent. Ms. at Assisi (695) in his Bibliothèque Liturgique, vol. vii., 1900, pp. 358-367; and in vol. ix., 1901, the tropes of a Moissac ms. of the 11th cent., now in the Bibl. Nat., Paris (Nouv. Acq. 1871) were ed. by Camille Daux as part of his Tropaire-Provier de l'Abbaye Saint-Martin de Montauriol. The most complete collection of Tropes will be the Tropi Graduales: Tropen der Missale im Mittelalter, ed. by Clemens Blume and H. M. Bannister, of which vol. i. (xlvii. of the Analecta Hymnica) appeared in 1905, with 495 Tropes, classified as they are Tropes to the "Kyrie," to the "Gloria," to the "Regnum tuum solidum," to the "Sanctus," to the "Hosanna," to the "Agnus Dei," sud to the "L. Spirit of Truth and Might, "Tie Thou alone can

"Ite, missa est." They have been collected from 126 Tropers, of which Nos. 1-41 were written in France, 42-75 in Germany, 76-112 in Italy, 113-122 in England, and 123-126 in Spain. A second vol. (xlix. of the Analesta Hymmica), appeared in 1906, with 786 Tropes, classified as they are Tropes to the "Intrait," to the "Epistle," to the "Graduai," to the "Offertory," and to the "Communio." [J. M.]

Troutbeck, John, p.p., s. of George Troutbeck, of Dacre, Cumberland, b. Nov. 12, 1832, and educated at Rugby and Univ. Coll., Oxford, B.A. 1856, M.A. 1858, and D.D. by Abp. of Cant. 1883. Ordained in 1855. He held several appointments, the most important being Chaplain and Priest in Ordinary to the Queen, Minor Canon of Westminster, 1869, and Sec. to the N. Test. Revision Company, 1870-1881. He d. Oct. 11, 1899. He made a few tra. from the German, but is best known through his Manchester Pealler and Chant Book, 1867, and his Cath. Paragraph Pealter, 1894. He also compiled the Westminster Abbey H. Bk., 1883.

True Light, that lightest all in heaven and earth. G. Thring. [Heaten.] Written in 1888 to tune 195 in the Chorale Book for England (see p. 783, I.) and included in Church Hymns, 1903.

Christe, nostrum gaudium, Tu p. 1156, ii. Additional trs. are :-

1. O Christ, our Joy, gone up on high (with 1. 3 "To Thee all power"), in Hys. A. & M., 1904, No. 168, is narked as by D. T. Morgan, Only the two opening lines are by Mr. Morgan, and he is not responsible for—
"That when the clouds which hide Thee burn Beneath the Judge's bright return."

Sts. v., vi., are from Hys. A. & H., 1816, No. 122,

2. O Christ, our Joy, to Whom is given. A flue tr. by L. Housman, in The English Hys., 1906. [J. M.]

(with a sixth "Qui pressura mortis dura" for vespers), are given as parts of an "office of the Passion of the Lord," in vol. vi. of the Opera of St Bonaventura, Mainz, 1609, p. 417. [J. M.]

Tuttlett, I., p. 1188, ii. Ho was b. at Colyton, not Cloyton, Devonshire, in 1825. His bymns "As now Toy children lowly kneel (For the Young), and "Give light. O Lord, that we may learn" (The Light of Life) are in Hys. A. & M., 1904.

Twas God that made the ocean. [God the Author and Maker of all things.] This hymn appeared anonymously in the Church of England Sunday School H. Book, 1868, and has been repeated in several collections, including The Baptist Church Hymnal, 1900. It has been traced to G. B. Bubier's Hye, and Sacred Songe, 1855, No. 14. [J. J.]

Twells, H., p. 1189, i. Canon Twells was b. on March 13, 1823, at Ashted, Birmingham, and d. at Bournemouth, Jan. 19, 1900. His Memoir, by W. Clavell Ingram, n.o., was pub. in 1901. His Hys. and other Stray Verses, appeared in 1901. From it the following additional hymns have come into C. U.:—

teach. [Our Words.] On "The Responsibility of Speech," p. 28. In the Sunday S. Hymnary, 1905.

2. The say of Penthopostis fully some. [Whitmentide.] Usually the second starge is taken as the opening of this bymn. In this form it is given as "Awake, O Lord, as in the days of old," in Hyz. A. & H., 1904, the Sunday S. Hymnary, 1905, and other colls. [J. J.]

Unitarian Hymnody, American. See American Hymnody, & vil.

Unitarian Hymnody, English, pp. 1181, 1.—1187, 1. Since the issue of this Dictionary in 1892, the following details concerning Unitarian hymnody are of interest:—

1. Dr. Martineau's Hys. of Praise and Prayer, published at the beginning of 1874 (the Preface is dated Dec. 1, 1873) steadily made its way for nearly twenty years among the con-gregations of that "Nonconformist Broad Church" for which it was designed, taking the place of his own and other earlier books; but in 1890 another collection came into the field, published by the British and Foreign Unitarian Association, to provide for missionary and congregational use a cheaper book in smaller compass :-

The Essex Hall Hymnal, compiled under the direc-tion of the Executive Committee of the British and Firefan Uniterious Association. London: Essex Hali, Rusen St., Strand, 1890. This was a collection of $12 hymns, of which $46 were not in Hys. of Praise and Prayer. 34 of these were in Dr. Martineau's earlier book, but the rest were from other and largely from more recent sources, more than 100 being by American writers. The index of authors included 227 names, of which 85 did not occur in Hys. of Praise and Prayer,

This book was welcomed as a good modern collection for popular use, but it was capable of great improvement. This was effected twelve years later in a revised edition :-

The Buser Hall Hymnal Revised children.

The Buser Hall Hymnal Revised. London: Philip Green, 5, Essex St., Strand. 1902. Practically a new book, this collection has 534 bymns, of which only 364 were in the first edition. The result in the use of these books by Unitarians may be seen from the following comparative figures:—In 1890, of the churches in comparative figures:—In 1890, of the convenes in England on the roll of the Exist Hall Year Rock, 137 used Hys., for the Christian Church and Home and 62 Hys., of Praise and Prayer. In 1802 the use of the former had declined to 50, of the latter to 65, while 103 had adopted the Enex Hall Hymnol. In 1305 the use of Martineau's two books had further declined to 32 and 51 respectively, while 101 were using the first and 51 the revised Estex Hall Hymnal.

2. Of other recent books one of the most interesting is :-

Christian Hymns, Edited and Arranged by the Rev. tonford A.Brooks, M.A. London: Marmillan & Co., 1891. Stonford A. Broo A collection of 37th ymms, and not 200 of them common to it end the original edition of 1881. It has 39 hymns by the editor himself. In 1893 the book was re-issued, with some ravision of the text and an index of eathors

3. Another book of special interest was that edited by the Rev. J. Estlin Carpenter, M.A., for use at the chapel services in Manchester College, then just established at Oxford. The book was privately printed but not published.

Hymna for use in Manchester College, Oxford. Privately printed, 1884. It is a collection of 380 hymns, some of them specially appropriate for use in a college training men for the ministry of religion. Notes to many of the hymns are added at the end, and a biographical index of authors.

4. With these, the following books may be also named :-

Hymns for Church and Home. The Free Christian Church, Cropdon, 1894. (A special revised edition of the South Place hymn-book, of which the nucleus was W. J. Fox's Hymns and Anthems, 1841. Edited by the Rev. J. Page Hopps.)

The Berwick Hymnal : Compiled by the Rev. A. W. The Berwick Hyminat: Compiled by the Rev. A. W. Oxford, M.A., Vicar of St. Luke's, Berwick St., Soho. Third Edition, Revised by the Rev Charles Hargrose, M.A., Minister of Mill Hall Chapet, Leeds, 1985. (A. Minister of Mill Hall Chapet, Leeds, 1985. (A. Minister of North Chapet, Leeds, 1985. (A. Minister of North Chapet, Leeds, 1985. (A. Minister of North Chapet, Leeds, 1985. (A. Minister of Lees under the Unitarian name, but are in reality free, by their trust-deeds, from my dogmatic profession, either of belief or diabelief." A collection of 636 bymns, used by a few congregations.)

5. Of Children's Hymn-books there are three in current use among Unitarians:-

three in current use among Unitarians:—

Hymns for Heart and Voice. Second edition.

London: The Sunday School Association. Essen Hall,

Bisen St., Strand, W.C., 1897. (Edited by Charlotte
Farrington. First ed. as "Hymns for Children," 1895.

The Sunday School Hymn Book. Fourth Edition,

Revised, 1992. With Supplement and Musical Indea.

London: The Sunday School Association, Kiere Hall,

Essen St., Strand. (Edited by the Rev. Dendy Agaie,

B.A., as was the third edition, 1891. The first ed. was brought out more than forty years earlier than that.)

Hymns and Choral Songs. Published by the Man chester District Sunday School Association, 1804. (A c-liection which grew out of a series of annual Whitsun tide Hymn-papers, with words and music together.)

tide Hymn-papers, with words and music together.)

6. One other book for congregational use remains to be noted:-

The New Hymnal with Muric. The New Hymnal-Words Only. London: Rosello & Co., 1805. This book is offered "to the Broad Churches of Nouconformity," as a successor to Dr. Martinean's Hymna of Protice and Prayer, for the use of a new generation, ambodying much of the new material of recent years. It is petilished in two editions as above noted, one with tunes on much of the new material of recent years. It is polished in two editions as above noted, one with tunes on each page, with the hymna, the other with words only. It is announced as "compiled by a few friends for use in Churches of the Liberal Fatth," the Rev. Joseph Wood of Birmingham being chairman of the committee, and the Rev. Hanry Gow, of Hampetsad, severalay. It is a collection of 688 hymna, of which 359 are also in the Essex Ball Hymnaul Revised and 282 in Hymna of Praise and Prayer. The authors number 247. The book aims to be "as broad and inclusive in its one as the outlook of Liberal Christianity, and as the conditions of our Free Church life." A change of emphasis, reflected in its pages, is noted as being chelify in two directions, "due on the one hand to the emergence into cleaver light of the great mystic conception of the Divine Immanence, and, on the other hand, to a growing sense of the divinity of human duty." How far The New Stynnais will meet the present religious needs of the churches, or prove practically more serviceable than the hierised Essex Hall Hyl., time and use baye still to test.

7. Of recent and living Unitarian hymnwriters in England, not hitherto noted in this Dictionary, the following are the chief, with the best-known of their hymns added :-

Agute, Bendy, B.A., b. 1848. Unitarian Minister, since 1898 at Altrincham, editor of the 3rd and 4th editions of the Sanday School H. Book, 1881 and 1903, 1. Grest God, Whose presence still abides. Harvast. 2. Lord of the allent winter. The Changing Sancous. 8. O Thou, to Whom our voices rise. Liteny of Work of Windship and Wind

- and Worship.

Blatchford, Ambrose Blohols, p. 145, i. Since 1666 Minister of Lewin's Mead, Bristol. His Song of Praise for School and Church, a collection of 56 hymns, was pub. in 1897. Additional hymns by him are:— 1. On weary hearts descending. Close of Sikool

2. Silent and soft, the first faint gleam of day.

Chalmera, Andrew, b. 1840. Since 1880 Minister of Westgate Chapel, Wakefield. Editor of Modern Hymns, privately printed in 1991 for the use of his congregation.
A collection of 626 hymns, with much modern material, considerable adaptations, and 25 of his own hymns. 1. Great Lord of Life! what length of days. In His

2. O Thou, Who swayed the hearts of all. Influence of Jazus. 3. Spirit of Truth! our fathers reared. Victory of

4. What ask we for the children. Intercession for the Young.

Russell, Francis Albert Relio, third son of John, first Russell, Francis Albert Kello, Ibirg son or John, Irist Earl Russell, was b. July 19, 1849, and educated at Christ Charch, Oxford; n.a. 1873, N.a. 1878. He is a Fellow of the Royal Meteorological Society. His hymns appeared in his Break of Day, London, 1893, from which three peased into Horder's Bys. Sapplen., 1894, viz.:—

1. Christian! rise, and act thy creed. Christian

Come, Holy Spirit, kind to all. Whitsuntide.
 O God, Whose voice the angels hear. The Eternal. There are 1893, pp. 127, 128, 125.

- IX. Public Schools. These schools we give first in the order in which they appear at pp. 938-40, and we then add those in which we find hymn-books are now in use, in alphabetical sequence.
- 1. Rugby. The earliest collection noted at p. 837, i., as having been in use at Rugby, is dated 1837. We have found, however, that a small collection was issued as and ye a 1824. It is The Praiding, Antisma and Hymns used in the Chapel of Rugby School. Rugby. Printed by and for Rowell & Sons, 1824. So far as we can discover this was the first book used at Rugby, and, with the exception of Bp. Ken's Horning, Evening, and Midnight Hymns at Winchester, was the original of all the modern collections in all the Public and quasi-Public Schools in the country. Public Schools in the country.

Another, and possibly the second book, is Pealess and Hymns Selected for the Use of Rugby Chapel, Rugby. Printed and sold by Roscell & Bone, 1835. The collection now (1906) in use is Hys. for the Use of Rugby School. Edited by Dr. H. A. James, 1905. It contains 864 hymns.

- 2. Harrew. A fourth and enlarged ed. of the Harrow book was pub. in 1881; and that now in use 1895. The new features of the collection are very few, but taken as a whols it contains a large proportion of the best-known hymns to common use
- hymns in common use.

  3. Marlborough. The collection at present (1906) in use was published in 1899, during the Head Mastership of Dr. G. C. Bell. The general character of this cellition is set forth in the Preface: "In the present edition, besides the Anthems, some fifty Hymns and Sacred Poems have been removed, and their places filled with others which seemed better or more suitable. The Forms have been removed, and their places filled with others which seemed better or more suitable. The new Hymns introduced in 1878 have also been put into the body of the book; those written in 1893 for the Jubilee of the College have been added; some few amendments made in the text of certain Hymns; and the short historical notes revised."

  The Jubilee bymns referred to are "O Jesu, strong and pure and true," by Bp. W. W. How; "O Father, we adore Thee, and bending low before Thee," by Flean Farmar; and "Thus far the Hamil that loves to guide," by Archdeacon Aglen.

- 4. Chaltenham. The collection now (1908) in use at Cheltenham is Bys. for use in the Chapet of Cheltenham college, 1990. It was compiled by Dr. H. A. James. It contains $44 hymns by over 150 authors and translational contains $45 hymns by over 150 authors and translations. tors, and is very accurate in its texts and ascriptions of authorship, &c. It is a book of merit, but lacks the desirable addition of a few Latin bymns.
- 5. Repton. The collection of 1881, p. 898, L, is still (1906) in use, together with the 1889 ed. of Hys. A. & M.
- 6. Wellington. The edition of the Wellington College R. Rook now (1906) in use is that put, in 1902, The Preface states that "In this new edition the editors have made considerable additions to the book, following in all cases what they believe to have been its original plan"; and "the original text of hymns has, as a rule, been entored." The contents are: "Memor of Archibishop Banson," "Usus Wellingtonensis," "Hymns," "Melodies of Latin Hymns." "Notes on Hymns," "Authors of Hymns," and "Index of First Lines." The execution is admirable, and the collection is, on its own of great value in preparing this article. [J. J.]

- lines, of special merit. The Appendix has been increased to 116 hymne,
- 7. Olifton. The 4th ed., "Revised and Enlarged," of the Clifton collection, as Hymne with Accompanying Tunes for the Use of Clifton College, was pub. in 1894. It contains 150 hymne with tunes, and is of the same type and character as in previous editions.
- Sharborne and Uppingham. At Sherborne the same book is in use as described at p. 983, ii. viii. At Uppingham, at the present time (1906), The Public School Hymn Book, 1903, is in use, with the old collection of the school as an Appendix.
- 9. Rossall. The latest edition of the Hys. and Anthems for Use in the Chapel of Rossall School, and ed., 1901, was edited by the head master, the Rev. J. P. Way, who states in his Preface that "This new edition has been carefully revised. Some hymus have been omitted; others have been added." The total contents are 854 hymns, 65 anthems, "A School Prayer," by Dr. Arnold, and the bend Indices. The book, as a whole, has undergone no material change from previous eds.
- The following information has also been supplied to us concerning Schools not referred to in detail in the former article on Public School Hysia Books, pp. 986, ii., 940, i. In alphabetical order they include:—
- 10. Bedferd, Hys. for the Use of Bedford School. 1st ed. 1909; 2nd ed. 1904. A small coll. of 27 hymns.

  11. Charterhouse. Hys. A. & M., 1889 ed., in use; but a special collection for the school is in course of preparation.

  12. Dalwich. The 1889 ed. of Hys. A. & M.

  15. Leeds. The Public School H. Book, 1903.
  16. Malvern. Hys. A. & M., 1889.
  17. Manchester. Hymns, &c., for the Use of the Misschester Gramssor School, 1905. A small cell. of 2 hymns. 48 hymna
- 18. Mercers. Hys. A. & M., 1882.
  19. Merchant Taylors. The Public S. H. Book, 1803.
  20. Shrewsbury. Hys. A. & M., 1889, and The Public School H. Book, 1803.
- 21. Bt. Olave's. Hys. for Use in St. Clave's Grammar
- 21. Bt. Olarvis. Hys. for Use in St. Olarvis Grammar School, 1803.

  22. Bt. Panl's. No special book, but the Preces contains a limited number of Latin hymne.

  23. Westminster. To An Order of Prayer for Use in the Royal College of St. Peter, Westminster, Grawn chicky from the Book of Common Prayer and from the Ancient Statutes of the School, 1889, there is nided A flymmal drawn chicky from the works of former Members of the School. This Hymnal contains 111 hymna, of which 80 are by formar "Members of the School, including:—C. Wesley, 60; W. Cowper, 11; A. M. Toplady, 8; J. Anstice, 7; J. Austin, 6; G. Phillippore, 5; G. Herbert, 2; N. B. Noel, 1; W. W. Waterfield, 1; and Ep. Cotton, 1. This is the only book of the kind known to us.
- 24. Winebester. Hys. A. & M., with an Appendix. A new collection is in contemplation.
- In addition, a few small collections, both for Boys' and Girls' High Schools, are in use in various schools and colleges. A special collection was issued in 1903, as :
- was issued in 1903, as:

  25. The Public School Hymn Book. Edited by a committee of the Headmosters' Conference (London: Novello & Co.). It contains 349 hymns, including 6 in Lalin, with accompanying tunes, and is built up on the familiar lines of the complete edition of Hys. A. & N., Cherch Hys., and similar collections. It is a good and well edited hymnal, but without any marked or special reference to schoolboy life. From the details given above it will be seen that it has been introduced into several schools. In 1906 there was published A Companion to the Public School Hymn Book. By the Very Rev. William Hordinant Furneaux, B. D., Dean of Winchester (sometime Headmaster of Expton School). London: Novelle & Co. The information in this small book is condise and accurate.

The modern provision for the use of "Psalms and Hymns and Spiritual Songs" in the great centres of education in the United Kingdom is thus extensive although by no means complete. We may add that no collection has been intentionally omitted in this summary. The assistance of Head Masters and other authorities has been

'Υπερ της ἄνωθεν ειρήνης. These i are the opening words of the Great Collect, which is an important feature in the services of the Greek Church. The original Greek is in Dr. Littledale's Offices from the Service-Books of the Holy Eastern Church, 1863, pp. 3, 4, together with a prose tr. at pp. 123-4. The tr. in C. U. is "Lord, to our humble prayers attend," by J. Brownlie, in his Hys. of the Greek Church, 1900, p. 81. It was included as a General Metrical Litany in Church Hye., 1903, and in The English Hyl., 1906, as "suitable for Rogationtide." Also in other collections. [J. J.]

Upon the sixth day of the week, p. 1294, E. 29. From this hymn the cento. The grave itself a garden is si taken. It begins with st. vii.

Urbs beata Hierusalem, p. 1198, ii. The version "Christ, Thon art the sure founda-tion," in the Bk. of Worship (Evang, Luth. Gen. Synod), 1899, No. 293, is Dr. Neale's text altered. The text of Church Hys., 1903, is the old Hys. A. & M. text. The 1904 Hys. A. & M. is considerably altered by the Compilers, especially in Pt. i., st. ii. and iv., and Pt. ii., ut, i., and is brought no nearer to Dr. Neale's tr. in the Hymnal Noted. The English Hyl., 1906, has followed the Hyl. Noted text, with the exception of a few words in each part. [J. J.]

Ut jucundas cervus undas, p. 1200, ii. Another tr. of the "Omni die" text is "From day to day Sing loud thy lay," in the Arundel Hys., 1902, No. 191. It previously appeared in the Dominioan H. Book, 1881, p. 36. It is by Father John Wyse. Information which we have recently obtained enables us to give the following additional information concerning the trs. noted on p. 1809, i., ii. :-

"Rach day, my soul, Tell Mary's praise." This tris by H. W. Lloyd. "Paily, daily sing to Mary," is by Henry Bittleston. "Holy Queen, we bend before thee," appeared in the Birmingham Oratory Hymn Rk., 1856, No. 40, 43 "Holy Mary, we implore"; and in H. Formby's Catholic Hym., 1853, No. 39, where it began as in E. Caswall's Manyae of Mary, &c., 1858. [J. M.]

Ut queant laxis, p. 1202, S. Additional trs. are :-

i. Ut queant :--

Let thine example, holy John, remind us. By R. E. Roberts, in The English Hyl., 1906.

ii, Antra deserti :--

1. Thou in the desert, young in years, wert hiding. Based on T. I. Ball, in the New Office H. Bk., 1905.

2. E'en in thy childhood, 'mid the desert places. By R. E. Roberts, in The English Hyl., 1905.

[J. M.]

Van Alstyne, Frances J., p. 1203, ii. From the American collections of recent date we find that Mrs. Van Alstyne is still actively engaged in hymn-writing. In the Funk and Wagnalls Company Gioria Dec., 1963, there are about 30 of her hymns, most of which are new. They are all signed, and some are dated, but we have not space to quote the first lines and subjects, as this hymnal is not an official collection of any denomination. Another name. "Mrs. S. K. Bourne" is credited in the same hymnal with about 40 new hymns. If this signature is not another pen-name of Mrs. Van Alstyne's (and these pen-names and initials of hers are very numerous), we can only say that she has a very successful understudy in "Mrs, S. K. Bourne." [J. J.] [J. J.]

Vanner, James Egleburt, was b. in 1831, and is one of the Treasurers of the Wesleyau Children's Home. He wrote for the Methodist S. School H. Bh., 1879, "Morning comes with light all-cheering" (Morning), and "Praise the Lord, Who hath divided" (Evening). The former is also in The Meth. H. Bk., 1904. (The Meth. H. Bk., Illustrated, 1906.) [J. J.]

Vaughan, C. J., p. 1208, ii. He d. at Llandaff, Oct. 15, 1897.

Vaughan, Edmund, c.ss.s., was b. Nov. 26, 1827, at Courtfield, Ross, Hereford, and is now (1906) one of the clergy of Our Lady of the Annunciation, Bishop Eton, Wavertree, Lanes. He is the author of all (except No. 21, "Mary sings, the ravish'd heavens," which is by T. E. Bridgett) of the tre from S. Alfonso Maria de' Liguori, which were ed. by Bp. Coffin in 1863 (see pp. 249, i.; 1377, i.). He is also the author of the following original hymns:—

10 Statement of the following constant against 1. God of mercy and compassion. Rependence.
2. Happy we, who thus united. The Holy Foresty.
3. Hark! angelle songs resounding. St. Alfonso.
4. Holy Spirit! Found of wisdom. Whitestide.
6. Let those who seek the world to please. The Holy Family.

8. Yes, heaven is the prize. Heaven. Of these Nos. 1, 2, 3, 5, 6 appeared in Hye. for the Confraternity of the Holy Family, 1854, in Hys. for the Year 1867, and others; while No. 4 is in the 1885 C.S.R. Appr. to the Hys. for the Year, No. 336. [J, M.]

Vaughan, H., p. 1206, I. Nos. 6, 9, 11, are from the 2nd ed., 1655 of his Silen Sointillans, pt. ii., pp. 60, 40, 68. No. 10 is from "When through the North," &c., in the 1st ed. 1650, p. 13.

Veneremur crucis lignum, p. 1594, t This is also in the Upsala Missal of 1483. The tr. "Greet the Cross with veneration," is by T. I. Ball.

Veni Creator Spiritus, p. 1206. L. Other trs. are:-

1. Come, O Creator Spirit, come. In the Fattendon Hyl., 1829, No. 48, marked as "Tr. by R. R."; revised for The English Hyl., 1908, No. 164.

2. Come Haly Ghost, Creator Blest, p. 1816, ii. 16, The fr. in the 190s ed. of Hys. A. & B., is the old text with st. iv., Il., 3, 4, and vl. rewritten. Although still given as by "E. Caswall and Compilers," it has less of Caswall than before.

Veni, jam veni benignissime, p. 1211, i. Another tr. is:

Come, Holy Ghost, draw near us. By G. R. Woodward, in his Songs of Syon, 1904, No. 68. [J. M.]

Veni Redemptor gentium, p. 1211, ii. This hymn originally began with the stanza "Intende qui regis Israel," and it is found thus in the Vatican Reg. 11, f. 233, of the 8th cent., the Vat. 82, f. 226, of the 11th cent.; and in other early Italian MSS. at Milan and elsewhere. But the almost universal use outside of Italy was to omit this stanza. Other trs. of the "Veni Redemptor" text are:—

1. 0 come, Redeemer of the earth. In H. A. & M., 1804, No. 55, marked as by the Compilers. It is a complate and painfully literal version, e.g.,
"Like standard fuir, her virtues tell,
"I'le God within her deigns to dwell."

Come, Then Redeemer of the earth, And manifest, This, in The English Hyl., 1906, No. 14, is based on Nexle, but Nexle is, e.g., not answerable for—

"A glant in twofold substance one, Rejoicing now bis course to ron." [J. M.]

Veni Sancte Spiritus, Et emitte coelitus, p. 1212, ii. The question of the authorship of this sequence cannot yet be regarded as settled. Pope Innocent III. was able but not lovable, and hardly the person one would like to recognise as the author of this masterpiece. No further evidence has come to light for or against Stephen Langton. The evidence recently discovered all tends to show that the sequence was written after 1150. In the mss. before 1200 it is always an addition in a later hand; further examples of this are the Einsiedeln Ma. 113 of the 12th cent., where it is added in the margin in a hand of the 14th cent.; the Paris Lat. Nouv. Acq. 1871, of the 11th cent., where it added on f. 90 in a hand of the end of the 13th cent., on a blank space left for a large initial which was never painted in; the Nonv. Acq. 1177, of the 11th cent., where it is at f. 836 in a hand of the end of the 12th cent., &c. To the earlier wss. where it occurs in the regular order and in the original hand, may be added the Chichester Sequentiary of c. 1275 kept in the Bedleian (Univ. 148, f. 26b), and a Dominican Choirbook of 1254 collated by the Rev. H. M. Bannister in the Dominican house at Rome. In the Rheinau we. 55 (now at Zürich), written in the first half of the 13th cent. Mr. Bannister found it among the Whitsuntide sequences, but evidently regarded as new, the melody being added, in a later hand, both in neums and in letters. the Sarum Missal of c. 1250, now at Manchester (Crawford Lat. 24), it is added, quite out of place, on f. 256, in a hand of c. 1300. Another tr. in C. U. is "Come, Thou Holy Ghost, we pray," in Hys. for the Use of Rugby School, 1906. It is by H. J. Buckoll, in the Rugby School H. Book, 1850, No. 63. [J. M.]

Veni Superne Spiritus Pater benigne pauperum, p. 1849, B., under Adsis Superus Spiritus. This is printed in Neale's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1851, p. 155, from the Cahors [J. M.] Brev. of 1746.

Veni, veni, Emmanuel, pp. 74, i., and 1551, i. This is in the Psalteriolum Cant. Cath., 7th ed., Cologne, 1710, p. 269, and in the Hymnodia Sacra, 1753, p. 5; but is not in the Hymnodia Sacra, Mainz, 1671. Another tr.

O come, O come, Emmanuel ! Redeem Thy captive Israel. By T. A. Lacey, in The English Hyl., 1906.

The old Hye. A. & M. text is repeated in Church Hys., 1903; and in the 1904 ed. of Hys. A, & M., with, in this case, alterations in et. iii., ll., 1, 2, and v. l. I, none of which can be regarded as improvements. [J. M.]

Verbum bonum et suave.  $[B.\ V.\ M.]$ This sequence was very popular in later medieval times. It is found, e.g., in the Chichester Sequentiary, of c. 1275, kept in the Bodleian (Univ. 148, f. 82); in a ms. Missal of Anchin of the 12th cent., at Dousi (No. 124, now 90; facsimiles from this in E. de Coussemaker's Histoire de l'Harmonie, 1832, plates 24, 25), &c. Among Missals it is in a Sarum of c. 1250, 1390, and a Hereford of c. 1390, kept in the Bodleisn, and many others. Mone, No. 381, prints it from a 13th cent. Ms. at Stuttgart. See also Duniel, ii., p. 93, v., p. 254; Kehrein, No. 268, &c. Tr. as:—"Sing we' Ave, word endearing," by M. J. Blacker, in the Hymner, 1882, No. 168 (1904, No. 127). See also Daniel, i., No. 329, note; and H. W. 2. Out Balvation to obtain Christ our Pascover is slain, by C. S. Calverley, in the Hymnery, ed. 1871, No. 275.

3. To the Paschal Victim, Christians, Offer ye, by G. B. Woodward, based on earlier versions, in his Songs of Syon, 1904, No. 43, and the Hymner, 1904, No. 114.

4. Christians, to the Paschal Victim, based on the 1880 version (p. 1324, i., No. 7) in The English Hys., 1906, No. 130.

Concerning the use of this Sequence in the xiv. cent. the following details are interesting :-

In a Surum Processional of c. 1360 in the Bodelan (Rand. Mt. d. 4), there are (at 1. 1316.) elaborate rubrics directing the use of this sequence. Two persons personating the Apostles (St. John in a white tunic, St. Peter in a red tunic), present themselves at the entrance of the shole; the three Marye come from the Easter Sepulchre to meet them, the first Mary greeting them with "Victimae Paschall," and so through the different sections of the Sequence. [J. M.] [J. M.]

Victis sibi cognomina, p. 1824, i. This is in the Nevers Brev. of 1727, Hiemalis, p. 531; no name of author being given. The version beginning "Conquering kings their titles take, From the lands they captive make," in The English Hyl., 1906, No. 37, is based on Chaudler. [J. M.]

Vine, Alfred H., son of J. Vine, Wesleyan minister, was b. at Nottingham in 1845, educated at King Edward's School, Birmingham, and King's Coll., London, and entered the Wesleyan ministry in 1867. He has pub. The Doom of Saul, 1895: Songe of the Heart 1905, and Songe of Living Things, 1897. Of his hymns the following are in C. U.:—

1. O Breath of God, breathe on us now. (Whitsuntide.]

2. O Great Lord Christ, my Saviour. [The Divine Call.]
3. Saviour, Thy clear eyes behold. [Omnincience of

Of these Nos. 1 and 2 are from his The Doom of Saul, 1895; and No. 8 was written for the Wesleyan Young People's Hymnal, 1896. [J. J.]

Virginis Proles, Opifexque matris, p. 1225, i. Another &r. is :-

Son of a Virgin, Maker of Thy mother, by L. Housman, in The English Hyl., 1906.

Virgo vernans velut rosa, p. 1835, il. This is in a Sarum Missul in the University Library at Cambridge (Kk. ii. 6) as on addition at f. 1096 in a hand of the 15th cent. It is printed in Dreves, xl., No. 371, from this MS., from several 15th cent. Sarum Missals in the Bodleian and in the B.M., and from the printed eds. of 1488, 1494, 1497, 1498; but it is not cited as in any Ms. before 1400, or as in any non-Sarum sources, either English or Continental.

Dreves, viii., No. 226, prints a similar sequence on St. Margaret, with the same first line, from the Schlesning Missel of 1496.

[J. M.]

Voce jubilantes magna, p. 1594, This is in the Chichester Sequentiary of c. 1275, kept in the Bodleian (Univ. 148, f. 27bis). It is also in the Whitby Missal of c. 1390 in the Bodleian (15850, f. 191b), and is printed from this me. in Dreves, x., p. 35. The tr. "With loudest voice of joyfulness and praise,"p.1594, B., is by T. I. Ball. [J. M.]

Voice of Jesus, calling, calling. Kathleen Knoz. [Christ's Call.] Miss Knox informs us that this, her only hymn, was written Feb. 14, 1870, and contributed to Canon W. MacIlwaine's Lyra Hibernica Sacra, 1878, p. 840. It has passed into Victorian Hymns, 1887, p. 160, and the Sunday School Hymnary, 1905, No. 502.

Miss Knox was b. in London, but has spent most of her life at Belfast, where her father, Dr. C. G. Knox (brother of Dr. Robert Knox, Primate of all Ireland, 1885–1894), was for many years Vloar-General of the Diocese of Down and Country. [J. M.]

Vom Himmel hoch, p. 1287, i. The version beginning "Welcome to earth, Thou noble Guest," in the Gen. Synod's (Evang. Luth.), Bk. of Worship, 1899, No. 223, is Miss Winkworth's tr. of sts. viii., x., xiii., xv., slightly [J, M.] altered.

Vox clara ecce intonat, p. 1225, ii. In some recent collections there are:

1. Hark, an awful voice is sounding. This, in Church
Hyr., 1903, is Caswall's tr. with slight alterations in et. iii.
2. Hark, a thrilling voice is sounding. This old text of Hys. A. & M. is repeated in the 1904 edition.
3. Loud rings the warning voice around. This tr., by the Compilers of Hys. A. & H., is a second version in the edition of 1904.
4. Hark, a hardle voice is calling. In the English
Hys., 1906. This is E. Caswall's tr. with the alteration

Hyl., 1906. This is of the first line only.

The fr. "Hark, a joyful voice is thrilling," p. 1321, ii., by Card. Newman, appeared in his Roman Brev., 1888, p. 158; and then in his Verses, &c., 1853.

Vox clara terris nos gravi. [Advent.] This is in the Sens Brev. of 1726 (Hiemalis, p. 164), the Chilons-sur-Marne Brev. of 1736 (H., p. 171), and many later French breviaries. Also in Neale's Hy, Eccl., 1851, p. 60. It is better known in the recast by C. Coffin in his Hymni Baori, 1736, p. 93, where it is marked as "Hymnus reformatus." See In noctis umbra desides, p. 566, i. The text of Neale is tr. as :-

A thrilling voice rings clear and high. By H. I. D. Byder, written 1828, and first pub. in O. Shipley'a Annue Sanctus, 1884, pt. i., pp. viii., 10. Repeated In The Eirmingham Oratory H. Bk., 1996. [J. M.]

Vox clarescat, mens purgetur, p. 1229 This is in the Chichester Sequentiary of c. 1275, kept in the Bodleian (Univ. 148, f. 27b), where it begins "Bonet [i.e. Sonet] vox et mens purgetur." Printed text also in Dreves, viii., p. 12. [J. M.]

Wachet auf, ruft uns die Stimme, p. 805, if. Additional frs. are :—

1. Wake I awake! from highest steeple, by G. R. Woodward, in his Legends of the Saists, 1898, p. 59. Repeated in his English of Syon, 1808, No. 1, beginning "Up1 awake! from highest steeple."

2. Wake, O wake! with tidings thrilling, by F. C. Burklit, contributed to The English Hyl., 1996. [J. M.]

Waddy, Samuel Danks, son of the Rev. S. D. Waddy, p.p., semetime Governor of Wesley College, Sheffield, was b. in 1830, and died in 1902. He was a distinguished Barrister and Q.C. At the time of his death he was Judge of the Sheffleld County Court. His hymn "Jesus my shepherd my want shall supply," No. 395 in The Methodist H.-Book, 1904, is a paraphrase of Ps. axiii. of the Anthorised Version, and first appeared in that collection. See The Methodist Hymn-Book Mustrated, 1906, p. 258. [J. J.]

Wade, William, son of William Wade, was b. in London, July 1, 1868, and educated at King's Coll., London. Ordained in 1890, he was Curate of St. Peter's, Fulham, 1890-1, and St. James's, West Hampstead, 1891-4. In 1894 he became one of the secretaries of the Waifs and Strays Society, but retired in 1906. He pub in 1898 Banished, but not Expelled. To C. W. A. Brooke's Additional Hys., 1908, he contributed 18 hymns on various subjects. These are all signed in that collection, and through lack of space cannot be enumerated Walk in the light! So shalt thou know. B. Barton. [Walk in the light].

Appeared in his Devotional Verses, 1826, p.
242, 6 st. of 41., with the quoted text I.

John, i. 7. In various collections the opening line is altered to "Walk in the light and thou shalt know," and st. ii. is omitted. The form in The Baptist Church Hymnal, 1900, begins with st. iv., "Walk in the light! and thou shalt own." The order is st. iv., ii., iii., i., v. and vi. rewritten. We feel that very few editors will follow this arrangement and doubtful improvement of the author's text. [J. J.]

Walker, Annie Louisa, p. 817, il. Ses Ceghill, Anne L., nee Walker.

Walker, Mary J., née Deck, p. 1981, i. Mrs. Walker d. July 2, 1878.

Walmsley, Robert, was b. at Manchester March 18, 1831, went to Sale in 1870, where he was till 1904 in business as a jeweller, and d. at Sale Oct. 30, 1905. He was a Congregationalist, and was for 28 years connected with the work of the Manchester S. S. Union, many of his hymns being written for the annual Whit-week Festival. He pub. 44 of them, with a preface dated Dec. 1900, as Bacred Songs for Children of all Ages. They are simple, musical, full of a deep love of God, of the works of God in nature, and of little children, and deserve to be more extensively used. The best-known of the longer hymns sre :-

1. O praise our Ged to-day; We people haste to pay.

[Praise to God.] Dated 1889, and included in his Sucred Songs, &c., 1880, No. 25.

2. Praise the Lord, His works exait Him. [Praise to God.] Dated 1888. In his Sucred Songs, &c., 1990, No. 21.

No. 31. The sun declines, o'ar land and see. [Evening.]
 Dated 1993. In his Sacred Songs, dm., 1990, No. 38. It was given in the Scotch Church Hymndry, 1698.

For these biographical details and dates we are indebted to the author's daughter. [J. M.]

Walpole, Henry, was b. in 1558 at Docking, Norfolk. He studied at Peterhouse, Cambridge, but did not take his degree; then at Gray's Inn, finally in the English Colleges at Rheims and Rome. He entered the Society of Jesus in 1584 at Rome. He was sent to England in 1593, and landed Dec. 6, but was at once arrested, taken to York Castle, sent to the Tower of London, and finally to York, where, after being put through a form of trial, he was executed April 7/17, 1595 (De Backer, 1898, viii., 972; Dict. Nat. Biog., lix., 164, &c.).

In 1881 Walpole contributed some verses to Stephen Vallenger's True Report of the death of Edmund Campion, a.r., the best-known being "Why do I use my paper, ink and pen" (see the Monta, 1872, p. 118; Parker Soc. Sci. Poetry, 1845, p. 224). During his last imprisonment he wrote the well-known Prisoner's Song, berdenine "My thirsty soul desires her droubth" beginning "My thirsty soul desires her drought (p. 13, ii.), which is still song in B. C. churches. So further Dublin Review, Oct. 1908, p. 354. [J. M.]

Walter, Thomas U., author of "Desponding soul!  $O_i$  cease thy woe "(Power of Faith), which appeared in the American Baptist Harp, 1849, and later collections, was b. in Philadelphia, Penn., Sep. 4, 1804, and d. there Oct. 30, 1887. He was an architect by profession.

Walworth, Clarence Alphonsus, b. in 1820, graduated at Union College, 1838, admitted to the Bar 1841, studied for the ministry of Protest Episco Church, but subsequently was ordained as a priest of the Roman Catholic communion, and became Rector of St. Mary's, Albany, in 1864. He was one of the founders of the Order of the Paulists in the U.S.A. He pub. The Gentle Skeptic, N.Y., 1863, and Andiatoroote, or the Ere of Lady Day, &. N.Y., 1888. His paraphrase of the Te Deum, "Holy God, we praise Thy name," p. 1138, il. 7, is in the Catholic Padintet, Dublin, 1858, p. 170. In the Amer. Episcopal Hyl., 1892, it begins with st. ii., slightly altered, as "Hark, the loud celestial hymn." He died in 1900. [L, F, B.]

Warburton, George Augustus, b. in 1859, is the author of the dedication hymn of a place of worship, "O Thou Whose glory shone like fire," in Stryker's College Hyl., 1904.

Wardlaw, R., p. 1232, ii. Of his hymns, Nos. 1, 2 are in his Selection, 1803, and No. 6 was added in the Supplement of 1817. This Supp. also contains "O how good the hallowed union," and "Whence the sounds of plaintive wailing,'' p. 1232, ii.

Waring, Anna L., p. 1283, ii. Of her hymns we have found the following in Lovell Squire's Sel. of Scriptural Poctry, 3rd ed., 1848:

Father, I know that all my life, p. 867, ii.
 Sweet is the solace of Thy love, p. 1238, ii. 10.
 Though some good things of, &c., p. 1233, ii. 12.

The statement in J. Telford's The Methodist Hymn Book Rlustrated, 1906, p. 271, that Miss Waring contributed to her uncle's (S. M. Waring's) Sacred Melodies, 1826, cannot be correct, as she was then only six years old, [J. M.]

Warner, John Allan, s. of John Warner. r.E.C.s., was b. in North London, May 16, 1851, and educated at the Southwark Miss. Coll. Ordained D. 1878, P. 1879, he was Carate of St. Paul's Southampton, 1878-80, and later of other parishes until 1888, when he became Vicar of Hadlow Down, Sussex. He is the author of a considerable number of hymns. Sixty of these were pub. in 1900 as Sixty Supp. Hymns (Uchfield: J. Brooker & Sons). From this Supp., "Brothers, joining hand in hand" (For Men's Services and Clubs), in the 1904 ed. of Hys. A. & M. is taken. Several of Mr. ! Warner's hymns were written for special occasions, and printed as leaflets, in which form they had extensive circulation, especially " The Nation's Prayer" in time of war, "O Lord of Majesty and Might."

Warum betrübet du dich. a 1884, ii. Another tr. is :---

Why art than restless, 0 my soul, by G. R. Woodward, in his Songs of Syon, and ed., 1969, No. 214.

Waterston, R. C., p. 1235, E. Hed. in 1893.

Watson, G., p. 1935, ii. He d. July 17, 1898.

Watts, A. A., p. 1288, 1. We find from Alaric Watts: A Narratice of his Life. By his son Alaric Alfred Watts, 2 vols., 1884, that the date of his hirth was March 16, 1797, and of his death April 5, 1864.

Watts, L., p. 1936, i. At the time of the publication of this Dictionary in 1892, every copy of the 1707 edition of Watts's Hymns and Spiritual Songs was supposed to have perished, and all notes thereon were based upon references which were found in magazines and old collections of hymns and versions of the Psalms. Recently three copies have been recovered, and by a careful examination of one of these we have been able to give some of the results in the revision of pp. 1-1697, and the rest we now sabjoin.

i. Hymns in the 1709 ed. of Hys. and Spiritual Songe which previously appeared in the 1707 edition of the same book, but are not so noted in the 1st ed. of this Dictionary :-

ii. Versions of the Psalms in his Psalms of David, 1719, which previously appeared in his Hymne and Spiritual Songe, 1707:-

iji. Additional not noted in the revision :-

1). My soul, how lovely is the place; p. 1840, it.
332. This version of Ps. Law. first appeared in the 1787 ed. of Hys. & S. Songs, as "Ye saints, how lovely is the place."

2. Shine, mighty God, an Britain shine; p. 1055, il.
In the 1707 ed. of Hys. & S. Songs, Bk. 1., No. 35, and again in his Ps. of David, 1719.

8. Sing to the Lerd with [cheerful] joyful voice, p. 1059, ii. This version of Ps. c. is No. 43 in the Hys. & S. Songs, 1707, Bk. 1., from which it passed into the Ps. of David, 1719.

A careful collation of the earliest editions of Watts's Horae Lyricae shows that Nos. 1, 7, 9, 10, 11, 12, 14, 16, p. 1897, i., are in the 1706 ed., and that the rest were added in 1709. Of the remaining hymns, Nos. 91 appeared in his Sermone, vol. ii., 1723, and No. 196 in Sermone, vol. i., 1721. No. 199 was added after Watts's death. It must be noted also that the original title of what is usually known as Divine and Moral Songe was Divine Songe only. [J. J.]

Waugh, B., p. 1241, il. He has pub. a collection of 93 original Hys. for Children, 1892. Nos. 1, 3 of those noted here are in the S. S. Hymnary, 1905; No. 2 is in Worship Song, 1905.

Heavenly Father, I would serve Thee. [Childlike Service.] Written 1890; 1892, as above, p. 64.

Mr. Waugh's work at p. 1941, ii., as The Good Cradle, &c., should be The Good Cradle, &c. [J. M.]

We bless Thee for Thy peace, O God. [For Peace of Heart.] This popular hymn was given anonymously in the Amer. Christian Melodies, 1858, the Songe of the Church, 1862, Songe of the Sonetuary, 1865, and subsequently in many English collections, including Horder's Worehip Song, 1905.

We bless Thee, Lord, for all this common life, p. 1594, ii. This is in the Hye. & Antheme, South Place Chapel, London, 1873, No. 249, beginning "Thanks, ever thanks, for all this common life," and signed F. M. White. Nos. 203, 245, 292 in the same collection have the same signature, which is expanded in the index to "Frederick M. White." [J. M.]

We could not do without Thee. This. in several hymnals, is a slightly altered form of "I could not do without Thee," p. 497, t. 16.

We lift our eyes, our hands, to Thee.
J. Montgomery. [A Wet Harcest.] Written
Aug. 21, 1839, and pub. in his Original Hymns, 1853, No. 278.

We praise Thee, Lord, for hours of bliss. An altered form of J. P. Hopps's "We praise Thee oft for hours of bliss" (p. 633, i.) in The Baptist Church Hymnol, 1900. The original appeared in Baynes's English Lyrics, 1865, p. 57.

We praise Thy name, O Lord most high. [St. Andrew.] In the Hymnery, 1872, this hymn is given without author's name, but the convicient is claimed by the compilers. The the copyright is claimed by the compilers. fact, however, remains, that the hymn is in Hys. for Festivals and Saints' Days of the Church of England, Oxford, 1846, and was repeated in Harland's Church Pealter and Hyl. 1867. It is also in Thring's Coll., 1882, and the 1903 ed. of Church Hye. [J, M.]

Wells, Marcus M. Concerning this author and his hymn we have no information beyond the following facts:-

Beyond the renowing neers:

Holy Sgirit, faithful Guide. [Whitsuntide.] Appeared in The Sacred Late, by T. E. Ferkins, N.Y., undated [1864], p. 373, with music. Both words and music are attributed therein to M. M. Wella. The hymn has alize been repeated in several English and American collections, including I. D. Sankey's Sucred Songs and Solar, 1878. It is unted 1888. [J. J.]

Welsh Hymnody, pp. 1249-1254. Since the publication of this Dictionary in 1892, Welsh Hymnody has developed in various directions. It is with this development we have now to deal.

I. The Established Church.

In 1897 appeared a hymn-hook which had been long expected, and on which no small pains had been bestowed:—Amynicatur yr Episeys yng Nghymru (Hymnary of the Church in Wales). Such was its title, and there were those who hoped that its advent would put an end to the diversity of Weish Church Hymnals, and bring about the use of one book.

Issued under the editorship of the lafe Bishop Lloyd of Bangor, assisted by the lafe Chanceller Il Silvan Kyans.

Issued under the editorably of the late Bishop Lloyd of Bangor, assisted by the late Chancellor D. Silvan Evans, the Rev. W. L. Richards, and Roland, Rogers, sura.noc., the collection claims to be "not only National but truly Catholic." The old Weish hymns, to so great an extendition fruit of the Weish Brothodist Revival of the 18th century, and decidedly subjective in character, are made, with as few alterations as possible, to fit into the course of the Church's year. There are also translations of many hymns from English and other courses. Nevertheless, despite the pains taken, it is doubtful whether the Engineary will take the place which its compilers backers, it is doubtful whether the ing, as it does, over 700 hymns; very many of these are scarcely ever used. Perhaps least acceptable are the translations of well-known English hymns. The time reassuments or wett-known English hymns. The time for the use of such translations in the Church in Wales seems not to have come, if it ever will. Walsh hymnody must be Welsh. So there still continues much affection for the more truly Welsh collections of Canon D. Evans and Canon Ellis Roberts.

Weish Calvinistic Methodists.

In 1898, Hafr Hymnau y Mcthodisticaid Calfinaidi— the excellent hymn book of the above connexion— appeared in a new cition. Perhaps the most truly Weith of all the collections, it had long been good of its kind, and it may be that little further can be done in the way of improvement.

Welsh Congregational Union, F Caniedydd Cynulleid-faol. It claims to be, and doubtless is, a useful and representative collection of Welsh hymns.

IV. Welch Buntitte.

Several new editions of the Hymn-book, published in 1800, have since appeared. Llandyfr Moliant yr Ysgol Sul, a hymn-book especially for the use of Sunday Echools, was published in 1897.

V. Welsk Wesleyan Methodists.

In 1900 appeared a new hymn-book to take the place of one which had served since 1846. In the course of the 45 years many hymns contained in the old collection have fallen completely out of use. The Compilers of the new collection left out these, and introduced in their place many of the newer Welsh hymns.

During the past 15 years there has been an advance, slow but decided, in the direction of hymn-writing of a more objective character. The fire which animated the hymn-writers of the earlier part of the 19th century may, indeed, exist no longer. Nevertheless, that fire produced, almost exclusively, but one class of hymns. The older Welsh hymn-books are most subjective in character, and hymns of the Passion largely predominate.

Wales now begins to have more hymns for the Sacraments, and more for special occasions, A greater output of such may reasonably be expected, for the poets of Wales are many, and amongst them there now arise, from time to time, hymn-writers who bring forth verses characterised by an easier and brighter movement, and of a higher literary excellence than in the past. When the weary, seeking rest, p. 168, i. 79. The Bev. H. N. Bonar in his Hys. by Heratius Bonar ... By his Son, 1904, gives this account of the origin of this hymn:—

"My father was asked to provide words to the music, and was specially requested to furnish a fitting reftain to the two lovely lines of Mendelsechn's with which callecte's tane Interession ends. In searching for a Scripture thems containing some relicanted phrase almost of the nature of a refrain, he was struck with Solomon's prayer at the dedication of the Temple (2 Chronicles, vi.), in which every separate petition concludes with substantially the same words. This idea was taken for his starting-point, and Solomon's words: 'Hear Thou from heaven Thy dwelling-place, and forgive,' became the familiar couplet:

'Hear then, in love, O Lord, the cry,
In heaven, Thy dwelling-place on high.'
This foundation once provided, the rest of the hymn was built upon it. This hymn my father liked, as he often told ms, as well as any he had ever written; for, though he saw flaws in its poetry, the subject and working out and whole tone of it seamed to him far better than many other of his pieces which have attained greater popularity "—pp. zaii.—iii. [J. J.]

When thou hast spent the lingering day. G. Gascoigne. [Evening.] From The Posies of George Gascoigne, Esquire, Corrected, Perfected, and Augmented by the Authour, 1575. In section "Flowers," p. xxiiii., of 38 lines, and entitled "Gascoygne's Good Night."

Where shall we find the Lord? A. P. Stanloy. [The Divine Life.] Appeared in Macmillon's Magazine, March, 1880, in 7 st. of 8 l., and entitled "The Divine Life." It was included in an abbreviated form in the American Evang. Hymnol, 1880, and again in the Hymnofor Church and Home, Boston, U.S.A., 1895, where sts. i. iii., iv., vii. are given. The full text is in Dean Stanley's Letters and Verses, 1895, p. 438.

While filled with sadness and dismay. An altered form of sts. iv.-vii. of J. Newton's "My harp untun'd, and laid saide," p. 804, i. 25, into a few hymnals.

While health and youth and strength, p. 1274, i. This opening line should read, "While health and strength and youth."

While shepherds watched their flocks by night, p. 1878, i. In the 1904 ed. of Hys. A. & M., st. vi, l. 2 is altered from the original "And to the earth be peace," to "And on the earth be peace." In other respects the original text is retained.

In Longfellow & Johnson's Hys. of the Spirit, 1864, No. 553, it was given in 4 &t. of 4 l., as "Father, hear the prayer as offer," and as "Anon." The text was in great measure rewritten, probably by S. Longfellow. This 1964 text has come into somewhat extensive use in England and America, the latest to adopt it being The England and America, the latest to adopt it being The England England and America.

For these facts we are mainly indebted to the Rev. W. C. Gannett, Bochester, N.Y. [J. M.]

Wills, Whitefield Glanville, a of the late H. O. Wills, of Bristol, was b. at Bristol Oct. 28, 1841, and d. at Ealing Oct. 2, 1891. In 1881 he printed a small collection of original Hys. for Occasional Use. Three of his hymns are in School Hys., 1891 :-

1. Father, Thy children come to-night. (Eccning.)

1. Father, Thy children come to-night. [Exening.; Written about 1876; 1881 as above, p. 24.

2. In our wark and in our play, Jesus, ever with us stay. [Children of God.] Written in Sept. 1831 for School Hys., 1881, No. 335.

3. We bring to Thee, dear Haviour. [Trust in Jesus.] Written about 1880; 1881 as above, p. 9.

The School Hys., 1891, also contains a hymn by his wife, Lucy Helen nee Hebblethwaite, which begins "Always with Thee! Ever neat!" (Trust in God). [J. M.]

Wilson, Margaret Chalmers, née Hood, was b. at Dunbar, Oct. 19, 1825, and in 1869 married her cousin, the Rev. James Hood Wilson, D.D. (see p. 1932). She d. while on a visit to Gullane, Haddingtonshire, July 24, 1902. She contributed her hymns to the collections ed. by her husband, viz., his Service of Praise, 1865, and Songs of Zion, 1876. Two of these are :-

1. If washed in Jesus' blood. (Example of Jesus Christ.) In Songs of Zion, 1876, No. 246, as by "M. C. W." In Bell and Yox's Ch. of England Hyl.,

"M. C. W." In Bell and Fox's Ch. of England Hyl., 1894, it is dated 1870.

2. We know there's a bright and glorious home.
[Life Elemal.] In the Service of Praise, 1885, No. 240, as by "M. C. H." In the Junior Hyl., 1806, it is greatly altered, and begins: "I know there is a bright, a glorious land."

[J. M.]

Wilt Thou forgive that sin when I began, p. 1285, ii. This opening line should read, "Wilt Thou forgive that sin where I begun.

Wilton, Richard, M.A., b. Dec. 25, 1827, educated at St. Cath. Coll., Camb., of which he was a Scholar, B.A. 1851, M.A. 1861; D. 1851, P. 1852, Carate of Broseley, Incumbent of St. Thomas, York, Vicar of Kirkby Wharfe, and Rector of Londesborough from 1889 to his death, Aug. 10, 1903. In 1890 be became Prebendary of Givendale and Canon of York. His poetical works include Wood Notes and Church Bells, 1873; Lyrics, Sylvan and Sacred, 1878; "Benedicite," and other Pooms, 1890; and Lyra Pastoralis, 1902. Canon Wilton's contributions to hymnology were limited. He is known through :-

I. Come. Holy Dave, decemble on silent pinion. [Whitesnide.] Special music by Sir J. Stainer.

2. Let all the earth in fair array. Part of his arrangement of the Benedictic, p. 134. i.

3. Ye some of mon, your glory wake. [Proise.]

In his Lyrics, &c., 1878, there are two hymns well worthy of attention, "The breath from Thy dear mouth," p. 84, for a cento for Whitmentide, and "Meet for the Master's use. Private Use. [J. J.]

Winkler, E. T., p. 1887, i. From his Sacred Lute, &c., 1855, the hymn, "Now in this consecrated place," (On behalf of Church Officers), is included in the Amer. Sureum Corda, 1898, No. 708.

Winks, William Edward, son of J. F. Winks, Leicester, was born at Leicester, Jan. 28, 1842, and educated at Chilwell Coll., Nottingham. He entered the Baptist Ministry in 1865, and has been Pastor of Baptist Churches in Yorkshire and Cambridgeshire, and has now (1907) charge of Bethany Chapel, Cardiff. Most of his hymns were written for special services. In 1897 he collected several of these and pub. them as Christian Hymns and Songs for Church and Sunday School (2nd ed. 1907). From this collection the following have passed into The Baptist Church Hymnal, 1900.

1. Be still, my beart, be still, my mind. Waiting upon God. Written in 1889.
2. In the night our toll is fruitless. Working with Trustisiness. Dated Oct. 30, 1891.

Trustfulness. Dated Oct. 30, 1891.

8. Lord, Thy servants forth are going. Departure of Missionaries. Written in 1892.

Mr. Winks's prose works include Thoughts on Prayer, Prayer in the Four Gospels, and [J. J.]

Wir Christenleut hæben, p. 401, i. Another version is :--

Good Christian men, rejoice agen, by G. R. Woodward, in his Hys. & Carols, 1897, No. 21, and his Songs of Syon, 1904, No. 11. It is no free as to be practically original. [J. M.]

Wiseman, Card. Nicholas Patrick Stephen, s. of James Wiseman, merchant at Waterford and Seville, was born at Seville, Spain, Aug. 2, 1802, educated at Ushaw Coll., Durham, and at the English Coll. in Rome: ordained priest at Rome in 1825, and became in 1827 Rector of the English College. In 1840 he was consecrated at Rome as Bp. of Melipotamus in partibus, and returned to England as Vicas Apostolic of the Midlands, being summoned in 1850 by Pope Pius IX. to Rome, made a Cardinal and created Archbishop of Westminster. He d. in London, Feb. 15, 1865. His hymns include :-

1865. His hymns include:—
1. England: Oh, what means this sighing? [For the Conversion of England.] Contributed to the Hoty Family Hye., 1860. No. '1', repeated in the St. Patrick's H. Hé., 1862, Crown of Lease H. He., 1862, and others.
2. Full in the panning heart of Rome. [The Pope.] In the Crown of Jesus H. He., 1862, and others.
3. O beate mi Edmande. [St. Edmand of Conterbury.] Written as a solace during an illness at Rome in 1860, piluted as Hymnus in homores. Edmand (London, N.D. but before Oct. S. 1860, and first used on St. Edmand's day, Nov. 16, 1861, at the solemn enshrimment of a relic of St. Edmand (brought from Pontigny in 1853, by Card. Wiseman), in the Lady Chapel of St. Edmand's Coll., near Ware. It is in three decades, telling of his youth, manbood, and episcopate. It was sung by the Englist, pilgrim- at Pontigny in 1874, and telling of his youth, manbood and episcopate. It was sung by the Englist, pilgrim- at Pontigny in 1874, and telling of the youth, Bernard Ward's History of St. Edmand's College, 1893, p. 277, Ec.).

Woodward, George Ratcliffe, M.A. of G. & C. Coll., Cambridge; B.A. in honours 1872, M.A. 1875. Has held several curacies and two benefices, and is now (1907) Curate of St. Mark's, Marylebone Road, London. He has tr. a number of hymns from the German and Latin, which are included in his Songs of Syon, 1904. See Index of Authors and Tru. [J. J.]

Wordsworth, Bp. C. (Lincoln), p. 1294, i. Of his hymns, noted on p. 1294, L., ii., we find that No. 39 appeared in his Holy Year in 1864; and in many others.

and Nos. 34, 35, and 40 in 1862. The first edition in which the longer hymns were divided into parts was that of 1868. With regard to the date of Bp. Wordsworth's death. we find this reference thereto in his Biography: "He expired soon after midnight on Friday, March 20, or perhaps, it might be said, early on the Saturday morning." This gives the date of his death as March 21, 1885.

Wordsworth, Elizabeth, daughter of By. C. Wordsworth, of Lincoln, was b. at Harrow in 1840, and is now (1907) the Head of the Lady Margaret Hall, Oxford. The following of her hymne are in C. U.:—

1. God is our Stronghold and our Stay. [Fs. atoi.] This is a metrical rendering of the Book of Common Prayer version of the forty-sixth Pasim in the Meure of "Eln' feste Burg." It was written for and first published in Church Hye., 1903. Miss Wordsworth's tr., direct from the German of "Eln' feste Burg." is given direct from the German of "Ein' feste Burg," is given under that hymn.

2. Great Ruler of the Nations. [For Peace.] Written during the South African war, and included in Church Hys., 1903.

3. O Lord our Banner, Ged of Might. [In Time of War.] Miss Wordsworth wrote concerning this hymn: "To the best of my knowledge and belief, I wrote it in the winter of 1884-5, when the excitement about Ger ard Cordon was at its height... The lines 'Jahovah-Nissi' appeared in the Guardian of Jan. 21, 1865, signed 'Veritas,' This is our family motto, and as such was well known to my own family circle" (Church Times, Nov. 17, 1893). The hymn was frequently printed as a leafiet, and entitled "Jehovah-Nissi. A hymn for our Soldiers." It was included in Church Hys., 1893. [J. J.]

Work while it is to-day. J. Montgomery. [Daily Duty.] Given in his Original Hys., 1853, No. clvi., in 10 st. of 4 l., and entitled "Working the works of God."

Yet there is room, p. 1299, i. The Rev. H. N. Bonar in his Hys. by Horatius Bonar, Selected and Arranged by his son, H. N. Bonar, says, p. xxv. ;-"About that time [1877] hymns again begin to appear in the note-books [of Dr. Ronar], asveral being specially written for Mr. Sankey, the American evangelist. The story of one hymn which has become generally known may be of interest. Mr. Sankey wished to use as a solo Tennyson's sad and beautiful poem from "Guinevere": "Late, late, late, so late, and dark the night and chill." He composed a time for it, but copyright difficulties arose and bindered his including the words in his hymn book. So being left with a time without words, he asked my father to write a hymn to it, keeping, if possible, to the same Scriptural theme. This was done, and "Yet there is room," was the result (p. xxx.); "Rejoice and legied" (p. 955, i.); and "Watch, bretitren, warch," were also written about his a time." "About that time [1877] bymus again begin to appear

This hymn is said on p. 182, i. $2, to have been published in Dr. Bonar's Song of the New Creation, 1874. This is an error. It appeared in his Hys. of the Nativity, 1879. In a copy of Mr. Sankey's Soc. Songs, &c., of thirty-one hymns, received at the Brit. Museum, May 7, 1874, this hymn is the last. [J. J.]
