I agree with Mark Brewer 100% on this issue. There is no such thing as inferior or superior groups of people. We're all humans and basic cultural differences don't amount to inferiority necessarily. Also, 2 people getting married is something that I have no problem with. That's mostly none of my business. All humans come from a common ancestor. So, no human can claim total purity from one ethnic group or race completely because all of us are a combination of many family trees. For example, many Spaniards and Italians have Moorish blood, many whites have black ancestry in America, and many blacks have white ancestry. Also, very homogeneous populations like the Ashkenazi have increased risks of Tay-Sachs disease. Eric Jon Phelps is wrong on this issue period. Crime has nothing to do with genetics or color. Socio-economic factors play a role in crime as well. It has to do with the frailty of human nature, sin, and the imperfections of all men. Crime is not limited to one people. I don't see an epidemic of people of color involved in alcohol related deaths, underpopulation, etc. Also, radical help and radically decrease crime in many races, not just one. Funny how people claim that blacks never did anything, when history proves otherwise (i.e. like Cush, Timbuktu, ancient locations globally, leaders, scientists, etc.) That's the reality of blacks making great contributions in history. It's funny that Eric uses the Bible, but a Canaanite (from Ham) is in the gene pool of Jesus Christ in the Bible. Many Hebrew patriarchs married Egyptians and Hamites, yet God didn't condemn these relationship. God condemn such relations if they were pagans or worshipped false gods. The Bible is clear that all believers are one. One in that since doesn't mean identical, but one is equal value and equal worth. We're one in the sense of being from one human family. Also, racial distinctions account for only 0.012% of total genetic differences account to most scientists. Professor of Epidemiology Raj Bhopal classifies race as a social construct. The Bible says that God is no respecter of persons. Race explicitly isn't even in the Bible.

The Bible says that the House of the Lord is for all people. The books of Acts says that God created all men from one blood. One blood period. Why is Eric acting as a respecter of persons. Jesus said convert all men not just convert and communicate to white people or black people. All men have a chance of great intellect through hard work and education plus discipline irrespective of their race or color. Eric talks about languages, etc. but European culture was very limited before 1500 B.C. The strongest cultures originally was based in Africa and Asia not Europe. Europeans "borrowed" knowledge from Asia and Africa to develop the Greek, Roman, and Middle Age civilizations. Charles Darwin and other believe in the inferior and superior race hogwash. Also, the bashing of blacks as materialistic is the same garbage M. Blavatsky and New Age Nazis talked of. Frankly, melanin is a blessing and protects against sunlight damage. We judge men by their character not color ("Judge not according to the appearance, but judge righteous judgement." John 7:24). To judge a man by their appearance is a violation of God's commandments. To be a respecter of person is also a violation of God's commandments. To say that one race (over another) is naturally violent, criminal, and wicked is beyond racist and a lie. To say that a man is less than another man by virtue of his color is another lie as well. It's dehumanization and it's the same thing Nazis used to characterize Jewish people. That's one of the reasons why the Holocaust happened. I agree with Eric on the Jesuits, but not on this issue. There's more I can say, but here's some links:

It should be pointed out folks that TIMOTHY/TRUTHSEEKER24 is actually:

BLACK

So I doubt he would be impressed by Eric Phelps and his factual talk. I will say he's an exception to the usual black as he has good intelligence.

QUOTE

It should be remembered that Charles Darwin was a believer in the idea that whites were superior to others.

<http://ministries.tliquest.net/theology/ev...s%20Racism.html>

Charles Darwin was an intelligent person. His evolution information was a scam stemming back to his father and so forth. Darwin knows the truth whether he tells you is another thing. Darwin knows that blacks are inferior to whites when it comes to intelligence and so forth, just as Eric says. Most blacks in fact are LAZY as hell and I know from first hand experience. So why they were give bodies for physical endurance God only knows. But alas in a natural environment there's no need to be busy busy busy unlike in the SMOM Bird Cage. We have to face the facts whether we wish to hear them or not. Black is black, white is white and NO mixing should go on.

TruthSeeker24 - May 25, 2007 01:58 PM (GMT)

Eric is a smart man. I don't doubt that. Some of his views on race are true, yet I don't agree with all of them. I've shown legitimate disagreements with some of Eric's views on race. Charles Darwin also is an intelligent period. But not everyone who acquires strong intelligence doesn't mean they are right on every finite point. The fact of the matter is that via education, hardwork, and discipline, great accomplishment can be achieved by anyone irrespective of their race and color. Many blacks are lazy, but many whites, Asians, etc. That doesn't mean we can't have hope for improvement. Instead of bashing people, we need to encourage people to improve their own situation so they can be an example for their respective race or ethnic group. Also, I haven't seen any evidence that blacks are inferior intellectually to whites. I know blacks way smarter than me and Eric. I know whites who aren't as intelligent as me as well. Plus, tons of whites aren't even pure white but are a product of many ethnic groups. All mixing isn't evil. For example, you need to mix certain substances to get foods, etc.

Instigators like Jesse Jackson and Al Sharpton just make things worse.

I'm not pure white myself...I had a 3rd or 4th great-grandparent who was supposedly Cherokee. I tan so easily in the summer that I just about LOOK Cherokee! :lol:

The thing is, the races were meant to be separate to prevent a one-world government. It's one thing if there's mixing once in a great while, but when it's the latest fad, it's different.

And it's been my experience as well that most blacks are lazy. I'll give an example--when I was 16 I had my first job at a fast-food place. This was in the Detroit suburbs, and I was the only white person there--everyone else was black. I wasn't trained right, I wasn't sure what to do half the time, and I'd be the only person looking busy while everyone else laughed and goofed off. I mean, this was my first job, I was pretty well clueless, and no one cared to help.

Most of the people who worked there lived in Detroit...they came to the suburbs to work to avoid paying a city tax. My suburb bordered Detroit to the north.

When my dad asked the manager why I wasn't getting more hours (he'd been pushing for that), she flat-out told him that white girls don't work as well as black girls.

My dad, being the kind of man he was, raised all sorts of hell over that!

It's pretty hard not to stereotype black people when about 80-90% of them act like a stereotypical black. Ever turn the idiot box onto Black Entertainment Television (BET)? That speaks volumes.

BTW I like you, Timothy, even though I don't know you personally. I have no problem befriending black people, I just wouldn't marry one.

Daniel - May 25, 2007 02:27 PM (GMT)

To claim certain traits as that which is given dominance is a matter of discrimination and is acceptable for in all of nature we see this appearing. Place a red-head in the blazing sun for several hours and also place a darker skinned person in the exact same environment and we can see the differences clearly. Once more, all Souls can transcend what he inherits through nature but it is not easy to do so

However, to apply qualities such to the whole person as an entire Being as "superior" or "inferior" is incorrect and racist. Darwin was a wrong to compare the materialistic traits of man against one another and then to apply a quality of worth as such. Without Darwin having any deeper wisdom of the spiritual forces behind which are acting upon man and his role in wach Epoch, his application is flawed. Intellectual dominance in one era can be the opposite in another era. For instance, the Asian will Dominate the future era in intellect but that would not diminish the role or importance of the Whites or Blacks at this point.

Alexandra - May 25, 2007 02:35 PM (GMT)

Each race, I believe, has its strong and weak points. Trying to say they're all alike, it's just the skin color, is like the feminists claiming that gender is only a social construct, when the truth of the matter is men are generally better in math and science and parallel parking, and women are generally better with languages.

I'm sure there are plenty of intelligent black people. Timothy's one. I've known a few in my 34 years on this planet... a few come to mind right now, like someone who was in my 4th grade class.

Psilocybe mushrooms used largely by Native Americans and Blacks for the same purpose (religious visions and symbology).

These are great and useable without great danger, as they aren't toxic (except when consumed in vast masses). What one experiences has a lot to do with his mindset.

Just regard a few simple rules:

- Always take one less, than one more.
- Do it in a place where you feel comfortable (at home or better in nature).
- Just use them, when you have enough time, stress in all forms may boomerang.
- Drink enough water
- Use them together with other persons, except you are experienced enough to use them alone.
- Don't panic, nothing bad can happen, and uncomfortable effects will go away.

Some friends were telling me about seeing the "bird cages", years before i heard a word about it.

One day we went to a party, after consuming psilocybe: This day the effects weren't very strong, so we felt normal, except that we only could talk to each other :D . The more other people had drunk, the less we could understand them.

No other substance shows you, how you create your own reality and it has no effects on your body and the whole miracle is gone after 2-3 hours.

The only time that will happen is if a eugenic bio-weapon accidentally got out with no anti-dote available and destroyed the white race. This always could happen but believe me they will be very cautious of any agent if theres no anti-dote for it. You'll find the blacks and infidels getting it much before anyone else. Infact the Jew is a target high on the list even though we're given fronts to believe Israel has developed bio agents to destroy all Gentile races haha. Is there any SCIENTIFIC Data to support Erics Claims of Blacks having a smaller Cranial cavity, And I would add that since Whites were up with Education and Technology many years before Blacks is it fair to say that since Whites taught blacks or Shared knowledge with blacks that Whites have a better intellect. I doubt it. The Black like all other men of color was pulled into the Whites world of illusion and control, away from living in Nature and harmony with the Plants and wild things. I dont know if Seperatism is a good or bad belief, Ive never understood racism, all though Ive experieced it towards myself, I have changed the minds of a few blacks over time that Racism is a creation of government and either race that falls for this game is a fool. were equal and thats that.

CRAIG-OXLEY - May 25, 2007 02:55 PM (GMT)

I bet it would be hard to find evidence of this because they simply don't want these things getting out. The SMOM wish us to believe we're all the same except colour when infact were not. An example is recently how Hal "Temporal" Turner (HATEFUL Racist) exposed the Koreans and so forth with their common TAILS. This was something David Icke and others had spoke about many times in the past. I personally believe our creator(s) wether Anunnaki or whoever made us as the final product so to speak from experiments which resulted in the other races. That is of course within the Adamic race as there is talk of the more loyal third race or are we this or could it be the JEW???????????? Now I just know some people will attack this information because Hal Turner has spoke of it. Its irrevelant wether he's the modern day ALbert Pike Ku Klux Klan, a fact is a fact and you're hardly likely to hear it on British SIS's MSNBC or FOX. So don't let that get in the way and remember many other scholars speak of these tails. Its not a Hal Turner thing.

ADL FURIOUS OVER MY REMARKS ABOUT VIRGINIA TECH SHOOTER!

Repeats the inside information I received about the shooter and why girls shunned him on campus . . . but does not deny the facts I uttered!

For those of you who did not hear my April 18 show, I suggest you download the archive to hear it.

In the meantime, I'll give you a hint at why girls shunned the Shooter via the Google Image photos below.

Like very many Koreans, Chinese and Japanese, the V-Tech shooter had a tail!

This sign of evolutionary retardation proves the races are, in fact, very different and some races are far less evolved than others!

If you doubt my facts, just do a Google Image search using the search term "Human Tails." Look at how many photos they have of NON-WHITES who were born with functioning tails!

The reasons for you NOT hearing about this on "main stream media" is that they have to conceal this physical obscenity because it flies in the face of their multicultural delusion that "all races are equal."

The second reason the main stream media must conceal this is that V-Tech is all into "Diversity, and sensitivity and tolerance." If they reveal that the "sensitive, tolerant, diverse" students at V-Tech shunned the shooter in spite of all their rhetoric about "sensitivity and tolerance" they will be exposed as hypocrites!

They preach "sensitivity and tolerance" but what they really mean is EVERYONE ELSE must be sensitive and tolerant, while effete snobs get to berate and deride someone who is "different."

Ive heard that whites have had tails as well, wish I had one, we are all savages with a devil inside us, Im sure if I had not made diet corrections in the early 90s I would have been a violent SOB, As it is inside me to be violent and aggressive, I can take the most hateful inner city black man and change his diet and exercise and he will change. Every day for me is a day of reckoning with my inner savage who all my life Ive been frightened of, knowing what he could do if allowed. The diet change tempered the anger and gave me better reasoning, Ive had many whites steal from me, and say hateful things towards me, I stopped beating their asses a long time ago. A little sugar goes a lot farther than a lotta salt. Im convinced the Jesuit poisens in the food and water are causing Violent mood out breaks in whites as well as blacks. its all by design. One cannot claim that the differences in intellect or in physical attributes have anything to do with the Entire Worth of the being. Which definition of racism are you referring to Craig, The Oxford, the Macquarie or Wikipedia version? If you are to apply the idea of inherent superiority in certain physical and intellectual capacities of a particular race, than you must also define the meaning of superior and inferior in the correct context as it applies to the ENTIRE WORTH of the Being. You are taking my meaning out of context.

During the Lemurian Epoch it was the Brown-skins who dominated. During the Atlantian Epoch it was the Red-skins. Greko-Roman and also the Aryan Epoch it is the Whites. The Chinese-Era will begin in another 2000 years. Do you claim to KNOW that the Jesuits and SMOM will dominate the future forever?

Craig, you assume too much. Darwin's ideas are far removed from the truth and are in fact, the Jesuits ideas.

It's not about Hal Turner, it's about people spouting off with the evolution nonsense. Did you know that the ancient Egyptians believed that humans came from monkeys? That's where Darwin got the idea from.

As far as Bush's horned hand...that's not evolution, that's him giving the sign of the devil. I believe he did it. He's a satanist.

I'm just pointing out that according to evolutionists, you're supposed to gain body parts, not lose them.

And even if someone did have a tail, that's not proof of evolution--it's just that someone's genes got messed up somehow. I personally know of someone with two thumbs on one hand--actually seen it.

Hal turner is a devious temporal coadjutator and a racist all those "tail" picks are simply photoshopped and its more of a urban legend if the tails are on non white races only why are they only found on asians and not blacks?

Human tails

Human embryos have a tail that measures about one-sixth of the size of the embryo itself. As the embryo develops into a fetus, the tail is absorbed by the growing body. The developmental tail is thus a human vestigial structure (an atavism). Infrequently, a child is born with a "soft tail", which contains no vertebrae, but only blood vessels, muscles, and nerves, although there have been a very few documented cases of tails containing cartilage or up to five vertebrae. Modern procedures allow doctors to eliminate the tail at delivery. The longest human tail on record belonged to a twelve-year-old boy living in what was then French Indochina, which measured nine inches (229 mm).[1] A sound case is that of a man named Chandre Oram who was born in India and has been famous because of his 13-inch tail. Nonetheless, it is believed it is not a true tail but a case of spina bifida.

Humans have a tail bone (the coccyx) attached to the pelvis, in the same place which other mammals have tails. The tail bone is formed of fused vertebrae, usually four, at the bottom of the vertebral column. It doesn't protrude externally, but retains an anatomical purpose: providing an attachment for muscles like the gluteus maximus.

The only ones that had tails and also webbed-feet were the human-animals that were coming over into Egypt from the Atlantis Continent. Those creatures were of dim intellect and had not yet thrown off all the animals instincts. The Atlantians created these creatures through black magic and also advanced genetics. The flood wiped out most of these creatures over 10,000 years ago. Those human-animals had the appendages removed over thousands of years through Hermes and his use of the Healing Temples.

After this time, no human living in the post-Atlantian era had any tail. This applies to all the 5 races as well. Blacks are also considered of the Aryan race. When we define Aryan we speak of a cultural Epoch, and not just race.

Humans have clumsy shoulder blades and according to dimwits like Darwin, it must mean that we must have at one time needed them to fly! Instead of understanding that the shoulder blades are designed clumsy to help us think, as the bone marrow is forced up into the head, rather than for us to fly away, Darwin assumes this idea of "purposefulness", or that everything must fit into some idea of "usefulness".

In a closed system Darwin is correct but we are operating in an Open-system which means that not everything moves from having a specific pupose. Instead, Darwin should ask where the blades came from, as opposed to ONLY what purpose they serve.

Hitler took his ideas from Madame Blavatsky. Too bad he did not even understand them very well. Blavatsky referred to the Aryan root race as the human form that came after the Atlantian form. The Atlantian form looked very different, even having different lungs to breath the air which was very thick in those earlier times. Humans alive today could not have breathed back then.

And it's the lacking of spiritual understandings like these that make Darwin's ideas flawed and dangerous.

In regards to the black issue. The US purchased property in western Africa, we call it Liberia. The intention was to return them to Africa, because our cultures do not mix, sorry. That was known then as now true, Blacks can still get their 40 Acres and Mule, as promised to them during the civil war, in Liberia. The last president of Liberia (Legal one) I believe was a retired black US Army SGT Major. I have some very good black friends, race mixing is not biblical. I put the races in their places, I put the boundaries to the sea shores, let each kind to its own, otherwise it is confusion. "I cannot exactly remember where in the old testament that was written, when the Anglo nations held to this we were good and great. Part of the Rockefeller eugenics, is the race mixing, which is to destroy as many people as they can of all races. Babylon has done this, ie THE VATICAN

John Coleman said that LEGAL immigration and not illegal immigration is the biggest problem here and it deals with the right to live in another nation and how many people are allowed to immigrate etc.

The question is: Should people be allowed to immigrate based on race, religion etc?

But saying ZERO Immigration seems a little scary to me because then what next, religion?

Alexandra - May 25, 2007 08:29 PM (GMT)

Our sandbox, our rules--we have the right to determine who gets in here and how many.

BTW, blacks were not promised 40 acres and a mule. Even a black female writer said that wasn't true. And besides, isn't welfare good enough (for those who are leeching off the system)?

NEW YORK -- Interview: Edward Cardinal Egan

DAVID USHERY, host:

Two weeks ago, Edward Cardinal Egan celebrated midnight Mass at St. Patrick's Cathedral. Was it his last? As shepherd of the estimated two and a half million Catholics in the New York Archdiocese. The cardinal turned 75 in April and is required to submit his resignation to the pope, who can either accept or reject it. Does the cardinal want to stay? And will a scathing letter attributed to an anonymous priest have an impact? In a rare sit-down interview, we will ask Cardinal Egan about retirement, controversy, and a spiritual message for 2007. Next, on a special edition of NEWS FORUM.

Announcer: From News Channel 4 HD, this is NEWS FORUM.

USHERY: And welcome to this special edition of NEWS FORUM. I'm David Ushery. And we welcome his eminence, Edward Cardinal Egan.

Nice to see you, sir.

EDWARD Cardinal EGAN: Nice to see you, David. Thank you much.

USHERY: We're beginning the new year, of course, and when you return to the pulpit after your knee replacement surgery--which how are you doing, by the way? How is your recovery?

Cardinal EGAN: Doing wonderfully.

USHERY: Yeah.

Cardinal EGAN: I'm thinking of doing a little dancing for you during the show to show you how well I'm doing.

USHERY: Right.

Cardinal EGAN: But the knee is fine.

USHERY: Oh, good. When you returned, you talked to everyone about how we all face challenges and ups and downs. And I thought as we talked, beginning this new year, how you reflect on 2006, some of the highs and lows you felt for the archdiocese and for you.

Cardinal EGAN: Well, the highs are tremendous. We are now the largest private school system in America. Not only Catholic school systems, the largest private school system. And because of a wonderful support that we've had, especially with the cardinal scholarships, our inner-city enrollment is going up. And, David, come someday. Bring your camera and take a look at our schools. In the three boroughs, 23 of our 116 inner-city schools are high schools. Ninety-five percent of our youngsters graduate in four years, and, David, 98 percent go on to college. What a story that would be! I would see NBC doing a five-hour special on that. That would be marvelous, you know?

And then Catholic Charities is, I believe, something that needs to be talked about more here in New York. Years ago Mayor Giuliani said that he couldn't run the city without Catholic Charities. We feed, we clothe, we house, we take care of children, we take care of mothers. And this story really needs to be told, (coughs) excuse me, and agency after agency. And then in the communications area, Dave, I hope you know that we have now a 24-hour, seven-day-a-week Catholic channel on Sirius Satellite Radio. And I appear on it for an hour each week. It's run twice. And then I have my Mass on Friday and my Mass on Sunday at St. Patrick's when I'm there. But it's given me a chance to speak to our people, and I think it's been a wonderful two months now with the Sirius Satellite Radio. And I hope that you have a chance to look at it. It's channel 159, the Catholic channel.

USHERY: Yeah, we've heard about that. I want to talk to you more about that, but I want to go back to the schools for a second because we heard a lot about the archdiocese going through this process of realignment and figuring out which schools, perhaps, may have to close, and some feel it may have been a mandate for you when you were brought here because of the archdiocese perhaps running at a budget deficit for so many years. Where do things stand with that?

Cardinal EGAN: Very well--they stand very, very well. Financially, we're in good shape. And while it's a tremendous demand upon our resources to continue the schools, especially in the inner-city areas, I do not think there's a greater charity in this country. You know and I know what the situation is in our schools here in New York. We have 116 schools in the three boroughs of this city that we serve. Sixty-five percent at minimum the youngsters live under the poverty line, Dave. In many schools, it's 85 percent. Nonetheless, in four years they have diplomas and they go on, 98 percent, to college. Imagine if that were the story for all of New York! What a different city this would be. And so it's a great struggle, and I have to tell you, I'm out asking for support all the time. But we've had some wonderful support, and I have closed schools only too merge them, in order to strengthen two schools that are nearby. Now, can we continue that? Well, I hope we can. We're going to be 200 years old in the year 2008, in April. And from April of 2007 to April of 2008, we're going to be celebrating this. And during that time, I'm going to be asking for a lot of support, also, for the archdiocese. Because I don't think there's a treasure here in the city of New York more valuable than a system of schools that can send on 98 percent of its graduates to college.

USHERY: Your Eminence, when can we hear more details on realignment and do you do--can you say that you won't close any more schools after that?

Cardinal EGAN: First of all, realignment is a process. We will be announcing what we've decided up to now this month, in January. But everything that we're going to be opening or closing we pretty much announced. And don't forget that we're opening many, many things. We're looking to 11 new parishes, right? Now, they will either be parishes that will be cut off from other parishes or whatever. So as our people move north, we have to take care of them as well. In your opening, someone mentioned in the introduction that we are perhaps two and a half million Catholics. I think with the immigration that we've all seen, we're very much more than that. And our churches are packed. I cannot believe how attendance has grown these last several years. And so it can be seen when you put two schools together that that's a closing of a school. But we like to give the statistics about, when we do that, how the enrollment goes up in the one school that remains. Because you have better services from a standpoint of science and the arts and so forth. So we're growing in numbers. We might be reducing the number of school buildings, but we're growing in numbers.

USHERY: So we can expect sometime this month the kind of word on realignment, but for the most part, that's already been in the public realm, is what you're saying.

Cardinal EGAN: Exactly.

USHERY: Is what you're saying.

Cardinal EGAN: Exactly. And what we did is we spent three years on this. And what we wanted to be sure, Dave, that everyone had a chance to say what she or he wanted to say. So--and anytime there was a feeling that we were making a mistake, we sat down with the parish council or the clergy, whoever was interested in it, and talked the thing out.

USHERY: And did that force any changes? Or did you change your mind on anything?

Cardinal EGAN: Oh sure, oh sure. Oh, yes. In fact, in the press release that we'll be putting out, we'll say precisely that, which ones we changed as a result of the conversations.

USHERY: OK. OK. Again, in the reflection, lows for 2006?

Cardinal EGAN: The lows, I would say would be for me, I wish that our vocations were growing faster. We're doing well in comparison with others, but our need is tremendous and I'm very happy this is the first year class of theology, the finally four years, is big. I'm happy that the numbers going into pretheology is also growing, but I would just beg families and young men to think about handing their lives over to the Lord and the church and joining us in our seminary. We have a wonderful, wonderful seminary system. We need priests, and I would say the lowest of the low of the year was that I didn't have more to ordain. I think we had one of the largest classes in the country, but still, nowhere near what we need. Another low, I'm sure, is one that you want to mention, that was mentioned in the introduction. Somebody, maybe a layman, wrote an anonymous letter and put it on a blog in Philadelphia. And the news media in New York obsessed on it for a week. And they even bring it up again in Newsweek a month later and so forth. I regret that it was treated that way. I don't think that that kind of thing would've been treated that way for any other institution. Maybe I'm wrong. But even that's behind us. The priests were wonderful, as you know. They immediately came in, the Priests Council, which is an elected council and supported me completely. And I'm very, very happy that we can now put this behind us. An anonymous letter on a blog in Philadelphia and we obsess on it, it's not good.

USHERY: You responded in Catholic New York, and it was seen as an intense response. And you also felt that the priests who had gone through this process thought it might have been attributed to a priest who might have been accused of or charged with sexual abuse. They--they're somewhat shielded, the archdiocese can respond, and you said you were going to institute a new policy on that. Are you...

Cardinal EGAN: Anybody that feels that he's been unjustly treated, come forward, make your case before three vicars and three members of the Priests Council, and then we'll tell the story as we know it. And no one has come forward. There's been no injustice of any kind.

USHERY: All right, Cardinal. Well, we have to take a break. When we come back, we'll talk about other issues. There's also a little follow-up on this and the cardinal's relationship with the media, and also, retirement, that word that we keep hearing. Stay with us.

(Announcements)

USHERY: And we're back now with the Archbishop of New York, Edward Cardinal Egan.

Cardinal, I think you've addressed that letter, but I want to talk about broader issues in terms of relationships with the priests in the archdiocese. How would you characterize them?

Cardinal EGAN: I think they're very good. I'm delighted with the relationship with the priests, and I think that the way they reacted to the letter that everybody wants to talk about is a very good indication of how good they are. In any organization as big as the Archdiocese of New York, there're going to be people who are disappointed about appointments or disappointed about whatever, and so there's going to be a certain amount of unhappiness. I suspect that even in NBC, now maybe I'm wrong, there might be one or another member of the staff that isn't thoroughly delighted with everything that's happened. And I know that shouldn't happen in a wonderful organization like NBC.

Cardinal EGAN: But if it does happen in NBC, I think NBC could understand that it might happen somewhere else, too. But I think the relationships are very good.

USHERY: Do you think that perhaps, unfairly or fairly, you kind of confront the same thing that Pope Benedict did coming on the heels of John Paul II? That is to say, Cardinal Aponte, your predecessor, was kind of out there, visible, media, not always successful with the media, but out there. You have a different style, and that you're kind of paying the price for that or even punished for that in a way. Do you think that happens to some extent?

Cardinal EGAN: I haven't felt I've been punished for it, no. I have my view on how to deal with telling our story to the people. I try to be in the parishes and the schools and the charitable institutions. And I believe that I would deal directly with our people. Pick up Catholic New York. I think Catholic New York somewhere around 120,000 circulation. I have an article that's overlong in this current issue that's about a page and a half. I'm in there regularly. I'm now, not now, I've always been on Friday. Every Friday I preach at St. Patrick's Cathedral on television, and I think it appears on five different times during the day. I'm at St. Patrick's Cathedral two Sundays a month and that's televised all over. I believe that I get my story out and especially I get it out now because I have a one hour show on the Catholic channel of Sirius Satellite Radio.

Cardinal EGAN: It's played twice. Once live, I guess you say, and the other one, it's recorded. And it gives me a chance to touch various issues, and I do exactly that.

USHERY: Which some...

Cardinal EGAN: So I really feel that we've done it the right way.

USHERY: Which some say, though, that's preaching to the converted that the Archdiocese of New York. That pulpit is so mighty and traditionally it's seen to speak out on so many issues, whether it be immigration, whether it be gay marriage, whether it be some of these other issues. Almost, some--some archbishops say there's a voice in the wilderness to kind of set that tone for the dialog on many issues. And do you ever see there are missed opportunities there or no? Or do you...

Cardinal EGAN: No, I don't. I feel we've handled it the right way. I believe that I should deal with those whom I'm called to serve, which is the people of God of the Archdiocese of New York. And I'm delighted if others listen in. At Christmastime, I do two interviews such as this.

USHERY: Yes.

Cardinal EGAN: And I do it again at Easter time, but I'm not looking to involve myself in any political issues that are not moral issues, basically. For instance, I think that you can consider the abortion issue a political issue, but it's basically an issue of right and wrong. And I've certainly spoken on that very clearly. Immigration, too, I think I've spoken pretty clearly on that. And so I believe we've handled it correctly. And I know that, you know, the news media might want more of this, but we're doing well, and this is the way I think it ought to be done.

USHERY: So, with that being said, would you weigh into national politics in the choice of the national leader, the president, for example? We're going to have maybe some viable candidates here in New York that you know well, are familiar with--Hillary Clinton, Rudy Giuliani. How would you come down on that if you had to?

Cardinal EGAN: They're all friends of mine.

USHERY: Yeah.

Cardinal EGAN: And Governor Pataki's a friend of mine, Mayor Giuliani's a friend of mine, Senator Clinton is a friend of mine and whomever else you want to name. And I've been very, very careful, I hope you notice. Never have I got into partisan politics of any kind at all. You know, I told you that we're going to be 200 years old.

USHERY: Right. And you're going to be preaching about that later today at the cathedral, and on Sunday.

Cardinal EGAN: Exactly. But if you go back to the first bishop we had, Bishop Carroll...

USHERY: Mm-hmm.

Cardinal EGAN: ...was the only bishop we had back in the 1800s, the early 1800s. He made it very clear that once he got himself into a political situation and years later he said how he regretted doing that, that his job was to preach the gospel, to celebrate the liturgy and to do the works of charity and justice. And I believe that John Carroll got it right. And so, no, don't ever expect me to be involved in partisan politics. I think I'm a good friend of all three of these people, whom you've mentioned or whom I've mentioned. And I wish them all the best, and they've been very good to us. And I will vote, I assure you, right here in the New York, and that will be one vote. I won't ask you to vote the way I think you ought to vote.

USHERY: Cardinal, let's talk about retirement because for those who are, perhaps, not well versed in the church law, it's required that you submit a letter when you turn 75. And April 2nd, I believe, you will turn 75.

Cardinal EGAN: That's right.

USHERY: What are your thoughts on that? Traditionally in New York, the pope has not accepted that letter. Archbishops have gone on. What do you think will happen? What do you want to happen?

Cardinal EGAN: Well, first of all, I have no idea. And I am always asked this because every bishop's asked this when he gets to be 75, but I know...

USHERY: Did the pope solicit your input? Or no? Did he say...

Cardinal EGAN: No, no. You send in--it's a formal letter.

USHERY: Oh, OK.

Cardinal EGAN: You can almost say a form letter. And then he's free to do with it as he pleases. And I have no inside information. On Sunday we have this Mass in which we announce that we're going to have this bicentennial, and then I'm getting on a plane and flying to Rome for meetings and I'll be with the Holy Father. And one of the things I will not bring up is that I'll be 75 in April. Now, if he wants to bring it up, it's great. And whatever he decides, that's fine.

USHERY: Would you want to stay? I know you're starting this bicentennial celebration, or would you...

Cardinal EGAN: I think the best thing for me to say is I want to do whatever Benedict XVI wants me to do. Let me tell you something, Dave, I was ordained almost 50 years ago. I was ordained in Rome in December of 1957. And on that occasion, I made a commitment at the request of the rector of the seminary, who ordained me, Martin J. O'Connor, another O'Connor. I've had a lot of O'Connors in my life.

USHERY: Yes, sir, there are.

Cardinal EGAN: And he said before we went into the ordination, something he used to say over and over, and we used to all imitate him. I won't imitate him. He's gone to the Lord. But he used to say, 'Seek no appointment. Refuse no appointment. You're in the hands of God.' And I've never forgotten that. I have never sought anything. Now, I know that some of these books that write--some of these fellows that invent stories and so forth, I have never sought anything. And I have never turned anything down. I simply do what I'm told. And I'll tell you, it makes you very easy on somebody like me who is totally committed to service in the church. It would be different if I had a family that I was supporting, and I was looking to become the president of NBC and then the chairman of GE or something like that.

USHERY: Yeah, yeah. Yeah.

Cardinal EGAN: You know, but I'm not. I'm here at the disposition of the church.

USHERY: In many ways, though, it was felt that perhaps one of your challenges was to come in and make the archdiocese fiscally sound and you've said that financially you're in good shape. If that mission is accomplished, could it be another mission? Could you--you spent a lot of years in Rome. Could the pope want your services in Rome?

Cardinal EGAN: No.

USHERY: And would you embrace that?

Cardinal EGAN: There's so much emphasis put on the fact that we had financial problems and that we resolved them. That's a small part of what needed to be done and what is being done, eh? That's well taken care of. Within two years, we have a balanced budget. We've never had anything but a surplus ever since, and we're going to do fine. But, please don't say that as--that is something that you were sent to do. Sure, it's part of what I was sent to do. And I like to think that I was sent to do, first and foremost, leading people in prayer, preaching the gospel, and doing the works of charity. That's what I'd like to think I was sent to do. The other, if it was successful, I'm delighted and it's successful because of the tremendous generosity and goodness of the people of God and the archdiocese and the great staff that I have at the Catholic Center. You know, one nice thing about becoming a cardinal is--if they offer it to you, take it, Dave...

USHERY: Yeah.

Cardinal EGAN: ...you take the vows for all good works of other people, you know?

USHERY: Right. I won't come up for that, Your Eminence.

We'll be right back with some final thoughts and a spiritual message from Cardinal Egan. Stay with us.

(Announcements)

USHERY: Back now with Edward Cardinal Egan. Your Eminence, we'd like to get a spiritual message for 2007 and particularly in the fact that we are still a nation at war.

Cardinal EGAN: Well, as I mentioned to you, I think that is an issue that we really all have to focus on right now. This is a tragedy what's happened, and no war is going to solve any problems. And I believe that it's time that we start praying about this. I think it's time that we begin to say to the world that we're anxious to discuss how to put an end to the controversies that are growing all over this world, not just in the Middle East, but even in parts of southern Europe and Afghanistan. Go out to Korea and so forth. We have to be a nation which is known as a pursuer of peace. We just had the feast of the Prince of Peace at Christmas. And a large majority of the people of this nation are Christian, dedicated to the message of the Prince of Peace. And I believe that prayer does a lot more than many people think in this day and age right now. And I would love to see our people praying every day to put an end to all war and to make us a nation known throughout the world as a pursuer of peace.

USHERY: Does it concern you we're sending more troops, it appears?

Cardinal EGAN: It concerns me greatly. You know, you're very hesitant to speak about the war for fear it sounds as though you're not supporting the women and men over there that are in harm's way. I don't know if you know, Dave, but everyone that has been killed over there in the armed forces in the Archdiocese of New York, I've done the funeral. And you never hear that on television, do you? Isn't that strange.

USHERY: Yeah.

Cardinal EGAN: But I go to every one of those funerals no matter where it is. And I--if I--when I say I do the funeral, I preside and I do what we call the Final Commendation and speak.

Cardinal EGAN: And a lot of it has been in Spanish.

USHERY: Mm-hmm.

Cardinal EGAN: I think we have to keep in mind who's fighting this war. And I feel that my commitment to the men and women in the armed forces has no limit. I pray for them every day. In fact, if you listen on my Mass, I always start out with a prayer for peace in the introduction, and I mention the armed forces.

USHERY: And should people pray that we send in more troops? Or what do you think?

Cardinal EGAN: I'm not clever enough to know whether or not this is a proper military approach. My gut feeling is that this is not the way to go. Now, I'm one American citizen who knows nothing more than what he reads in the newspaper and hears on radio and sees on television. So what kind of a decision can I make? We elect people to make these decisions, but if you want to know my gut feeling--may I use that expression on NBC?

USHERY: Absolutely.

Cardinal EGAN: It would be to seek to put an end to every conflict in which we are involved.

USHERY: All right. Your Eminence, Edward Cardinal Egan, and we thank you for spending time with us, upholding a tradition.

And we thank you for joining us. Have a good day.

Here comes the draft. That arrogant mulatto, New York Congressman Charles Wrangel---the fake Christian who always plays the race card in favor of Blacks and against the Whites (as do most mulattoes)---is the introducer of this bill.

Are you all ready to send your sons and daughters to fight the Pope's Crusade?

Trilateralist Charles B. Rangel is a Roman Catholic Prince Hall Mason being a member of Joppa Lodge No. 55 in Harlem. Unlike sodomite and pedophile Cardinal Spellman; sodomite and pedophile Egan conveys the idea he is apolitical in terms of issues and that he is friends with all NY politicians.

Pimp of the cloth...fitting considering the Catholic church is represented by a whore....

recontanker55 - June 1, 2007 03:16 PM (GMT)

The catholic Church, is the whore , the beast system and the cause of all the ills of the world, so says the bible. But since the protestants forgot what thier protesting, the baptist forgot who put them in the mountains and in general our stupid ancestors did not keep these evil people in the forefront of our minds, so we would not fall into thier traps again, here we are. No this , by it's own addmition ,Rome never changes, and guess what? that's probably the only truth they have ever told.

I forgot the mans name , but it was a german historian who said" the only thing we learn from history, is we don't learn from history. Let God be true and all men liars, so says the scripture, he we go into the NWO, and it will be broken with out human hands.

wolvshater - June 1, 2007 04:34 PM (GMT)

The Jesuits all ready had control of the Nations Newspapers by 1860, thus the populace was in the dark even then, the little school houses and the teachers were even under the influence of this deception. Its know wonder the 1868 14th Amendment went off with out a hitch, even though it was done in the same fashion as Hitlers Enabling act of 1933. And unaware to the public at large, truth seekers have been pointing at the deceptions for two hundred years in America, but when the Jesuit owns the News and the Truth seeker is standing on a soap box well then it is the race between the Rabbit and the Turtle. guess who we are.

Bush Appoints Another Jesuit Catholic World Bank Chief

By Chris Maynard

I cannot tell you how surprised I am that Bush has appointed another Jesuit Catholic to replace the Jesuit Catholic Paul Wolfowitz at the World Bank. That's right, George Bush, just appointed a hard core Jesuit Catholic, Robert Zoellick, to relace the corrupt Paul Wolfowitz at the World Bank.[1] The only other time I've ever been this surprised was when Bush appointed the Catholic Ben Bernanke to replace the Catholic Alan Greenspan as head the Federal Reserve. Of course, - I'm just kidding, these appopintments don't surprise me at all - in fact I expect more. I'm not a mathematician, but based on the fact that Jesuit Catholics only constitute approximately 2.5% of the US population, I'd say that the odds that this is just a happy accident and/or a coincidence and not a sign that a very sinister agenda is at work are close to one in a million. In other words, it isn't a coincidence, the fact of the matter is a small group of Catholics do have complete control over our economy, and they must maintain their presence in all of the important economic positions in order to continue to advance their Jesuit agenda and prevent the American people from becoming too suspicious too soon.

What really surprises me is that Bush didn't appoint a Klansman, Freemason, or a Zionist, or a crypto-Nazi to the post, I mean seriously, aren't we suppose to believe that Bush is really a Nazi? How many bloggers attempt to make the connection, surely you've read this garbage somewhere. This absolutely insane supposition encouraged me to write an essay awhile back entitled "It's The Catholics Stupid,"[2] and I haven't changed my views since. Isn't Bush supposedly a racist, despite the fact that he's the only president in American history to appoint a black as National Security Advisor and Secretary of State [Twice]? Isn't he the only President in history to appoint a Hispanic Attorney General, not to mention an unbelievable number of Jesuit Catholics to incredibly sensitive positions within the framework of the American government, like Bernanke, Zoellick, Michael Chertoff, Dov Zakheim, etc I've said it before and I'll say it again, Bush is without a doubt the most Philo-Catholic President in the history of this country, his actions show better than anything else that he is more than willing to accommodate/placate these Catholics at the expense of the American people.

For those of you still in doubt that Bush has a statistically impossible to explain number of ethnic Catholics in sensitive positions within our government, see here.[3]

They [The Jesuits who run the US Government] put Zoellick on the fast track awhile back; in January of 2005, they promoted him to the position of Deputy Secretary of State despite the fact that he has no real experience in diplomacy and is well known around the world as an Vatican Firster, but that's all the really matters isn't it? Seriously, what are the prerequisites for a position of power in the United States today? As far as I can tell, all one need do is be pro-Vatican and be willing to lie, cheat, deceive, and cover up that fact when confronted.

David Duke PhD. [You know the evil man that supposedly seeks to deceive you and I] had this to say about Zoellick's unqualified appointment to State more than two years ago:

"It is no accident that Robert Zoellick was in line with the loudest chicken-hawks in promoting the Iraq War, and at the same time acted to increase our unemployment lines in America. Robert Zoellick has been instrumental in fostering outsourcing of American jobs to the Third World. He has been fostering more trade with Red China (and yes, it is still RED) Robert Zoellick's appointment is symbolic of the Jesuit hold over the government of the United States.[4]"

Does Dr. Duke sound ignorant, hateful and irrational now? Does he? Could it be that you and I have been deceived? Could it be that people like David Duke, those willing to openly criticize the Vatican and organized Catholicism, really aren't the vile `haters' we've been led to believe they are? I think so and if you're thinking properly you'll think so too.

The truth is we've all been misled and we're paying a heavy price today for our naivety and trust. We sat back and condemned our fellow man for racism and anti-Catholicism when they first spoke up about the growing power of organized Catholicism in this country and its usurpation of the American media and now we can clearly see the results. We labeled our friends and family `bigots' when they initially pointed out the tremendous number of Catholics furtively advancing the gay and feminist agendas, yet when it comes right down to it, they were right and we were wrong. The fact is, Catholics do dominate both the gay and feminist movements,[5] they always have and they always will, because it is the Catholics that can rely on positive media coverage, not the dissident voices of others. Wake up and do it quickly!

This Catholic monopoly of our media has gotten to the point today where it, the media, can take a fantastic story that never happened, like the Duke LaCrosse 'Rape' case and make it big news, they can sensationalize it for their own purposes; four rich white kids rape a black stripper! What a coup, what an incredible way to incite hatred against whites, but then the very same media can effectively suppress a true story, like what happened last January in Knoxville Tennessee, when five blacks, including a black female carjacked two white kids, kidnapped them, and then subjected both to anal and oral sodomy over an extended period of time, Channon Christian, the female was actually gang raped over two days, ending of course in the amputation of her breasts, the pouring of Drano down her throat [to eliminate the DNA evidence found in the perpetrators sperm] and finally her murder by suffocation.

It's a hate crime when the Catholic media[6] fabricates a story involving White perpetrators and Black victims, but it isn't a hate crime when Blacks torture and murder Whites. Why is that?

Wake up America, there isn't much more time.

Jeff "TEMPORAL COADJUTOR" Rense

(Note - To try to make the point for those who still don't quite get it. Rense.com would cover this story the same way with news and commentary no matter WHICH group had a strangle hold on much of the western world as do Zionists. This is how Mr. Maynard's commentary might read if the Jesuit Catholics wielded the massive control that Jewish Zionists do. It's all about absolute power and the loss of our freedoms...who holds that power is not the primary issue on the table. -ed)

Shows his true colours once again! Only because we expose him for what he really is, then he tries to cover his tracks somewhat by allowing this article yet constantly pushing the Zionist Jew control which is utter nonsense. When will Agent Rense have the balls to leave the establishment control and finally speak the truth. When will he understand how Israel and the whole Middle East region are controlled by the Sovereign Military Order of Malta through one of their most powerful Papal Knights, being King Juan Carlos of Spain "The Protector of the Holy Sites of Jerusalem". When will Rense speak of the Israeli Apostate Sabbatean Jews being subordinate to the SMOM and their creation, the Council on Foreign Relations? Question folks, is SMOM Papal Knight Juan Carlos a Jew? I think not my friends! Wake up people and see through these mass alternative media agents promoting many truths in order to deceive you further down the line. Remember who started all these phony freedom radio shows and Shortwave. You'll see its the Sovereign Military Order of Malta and the likes of their Papal Knights like the Grace family and the SMOM's CIA. My friends all the true leadership of the U.S are SMOM Papal Knights. We have George Herbert Walker Bush, Henry Kissinger, David Rockefeller all SMOM Papal Knights controlled by Cardinal Edward Michael Egan. The list goes on and on wether it be SMOM Papal Knight Rudy Guilliani and so forth. So if you can name any people higher than the likes of Bush SNR and David Rockefeller in the U.S other than their Roman masters then feel free?

The Aspen "SMOM" Institute

By Craig Oxley
1st June 2007

Matt who makes up the Hierachy levels of the SMOM? Black Nobility! The Sovereign Military Order of Malta have three commands within the Jesuit United States. St Patrick's Cathedral (CFR), The Aspen Institute (RIIA) and I need to located the other. You will notice Walter Paepcke from Chicago & his brother-in-law Paul Nitze creating the Aspen Institute back in 1950. Now can you now see a SMOM connection? I can! Look at Paul Nitze, what a shock once again a Banker this time with the Dillon, Read & Company. Nitze once was a director of the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs, financial division. Headed by SMOM Papal Knight Nelson Rockefeller. Who created this Office in the first place? Teddy Roosevelt who was the very person who was made U.S President thanks to SMOM Papal Knight William R. Grace. Remember Grace was one of the conspirators in the assassination of U.S President William McKinley thus making the vice-President, President. Do you think I'm connecting a few dots here?

SMOM Kissinger with Paul Nitze

Nitze also was part of the Board of Economic Warfare representing the SMOM Rockefellers. Walter was also a one time attendee in 1959 of the Bilderberg Group created by the mastermind Jesuit Joseph Retinger utilising his Prince Bernard. remember that Bilderberg is not the great all powerful secret society it is claimed to be. Bilderberg is controlled from 'The City' within london. Who controls this area? The Sovereign Military Order of Malta via their inner cores known as the Committee of 300, Order of the Garter and the more powerful Pilgrim Society. In other words the Red Brotherhood levels of power. You should also note that Nitze was married to John Teele Pratt's daughter Phyllis Pratt. John was a financier of the SMOM Rockefeller Standard Oil. Remember how we've exposed the SMOM as the true controller of Hollywood and all forms of Roman appeasement entertainment? Well Paul Nitze was a Chairman of 20th Century Fox until he helped sell it back in 1978. You should also note how highly regarded he was by many and especially SMOM Papal Knight George P. Shultz who called him "The finest public servant" he had ever known.

Walter Paepcke

Notice Walter Paepcke's Festival in Aspen for Masonic Philosopher Johann Wolfgang von Goethe's would be 200th Birthday. Goethe died in Weimar, Germany funny enough on the 22 March 1832. What could be significant about that? Well 22 of the third month meaning 22 3 therefore there may be a connection to the Bavarian Chapter 322 what most know as the Skull & Bones or Russell Trust?. Why does this get highly interesting? Well Walter attended Yale University and gained his Degree in History and Economics back in 1917. Remember where 'The Tomb' is located which is apart of the Chapter 322 (Russell Trust)? Yes Yale University exactly where Bush and others have attended and been apart of. Now heres another SMOM Connection coming forth via Paepcke's father Hermann Paepcke. You should be aware that Hermann controlled the most powerful company of its kind, known as the Chicago Mill and Lumber Company. Now whos been a Chairman of this Company? Allen M. Turner! What he is exactly? A Knight Commander of the SMOM. By the way check into Turner's connections to the Dutch.

Walter Isaacson

You should be aware of the Biography of SMOM Papal Knight Henry Kissinger. This biography was written by a director of The Aspen Institute known as Walter Isaacson. People should remember that Kissinger is a Sabbatean Apostate Racial Jew working as a loyal Labor Masonic Zionist Court Jew for the Jesuit Order. Henry Kissinger has been a conduit for the Vatican for a long time and recently was made an adviser to the Vatican although they tried to hush this up after it was originally announced. It was SMOM Papal Knight Nelson Rockefeller who bought Kissinger into the spotlight with National Security Issues. Henry Kissinger has always been closely associated with the Rockefeller family ever since. All of these SMOM Papal Knights are subordinate to Archbishop of NY, Cardinal Edward Egan and other higher level SMOM leaderships within London and Rome. You'll notice that Henry Kissinger paying tribute to the SMOM in the 1955 created Thesis called "The Meaning of History." This outlined how we're living now with all these Wars going on with more to come. It outlined the Society of Jesus's plan for their New World Order which their SMOM help them create via their pyramidal power structure.

'Wake Up America' Google Video

The above video talks of the power of The Aspen Institute in Colorado. Its known as 'Wake Up America' and its an amazing lecture by ex British Intelligence agent, Dr John Coleman. You will notice the third command center is most likely also in Colorado as this seems to be a center to the Intelligence agencies which the SMOM fully control. Also notice how much land the Guelph descendant, Queen Elizabeth II owns in this area. Also remember she's the head of the British division of the Protestant arm of the SMOM. You may also be interested to know that she owns over 50% of the U.S Oil Market.

Dear Craig,

Remember these CFR-ruled religious Catholics are racial Jews---Wolfowitz, Kissinger, Greenspan, Bernake, etc. In fact, Jacob Frank's Sabbatian Frankists were racial Jews who were baptized into the RCC in late 1700s. They have no king but Caesar---the Pope.

Your eviseration of Rense is fantastic and absolutely true.

"Jesuit Catholic", the term used by Chris Maynard, is that a real, precise term? Robert Zoellick is not infact a Jesuit as such, is he? Just for the record.
"Jesuit Catholic"..?

Goethe, I remember seeing somewhere he was initiated in Weishaupt's Illuminati also?

That Leo Zagami stresses Kissinger's supposed P2 membership/relationship. I guess it's a no-brainer, but still, anyone can confirm this?

Alexandra - September 26, 2006 12:59 AM (GMT)

The holiday of Saturnalia is now known as Christmas (Christ + Mass). Which is why I don't observe it.

CRAIG-OXLEY - September 30, 2006 02:01 PM (GMT)

Saturnalia was the feast at which the Romans commemorated the dedication of the temple of the god Saturn, which took place on 17 December. Over the years, it expanded to a whole week, up to 23 December. In the vagaring Roman calendar the Winter Solstice fell in this period; in imperial times that event was celebrated in honour of Sol Invictus and put on 25 December by emperor Aurelian in 274, so after the Saturnalia.

Saturnalia's relation to Christmas

There is a theory that Christians in the fourth century assigned December 25th (the Winter Solstice on the Julian calendar) as Christ's birthday (and thus Christmas) because pagans already observed this day as a holiday. This would sidestep the problem of eliminating an already popular holiday while Christianizing the population.

It is also possible to see it as early Christians replacing the Pagan celebration in an act of triumphalism. However, others claim that early Christians independently came up with the date of December 25th based on a Jewish tradition of the "integral age" of the Jewish prophets (the idea that the prophets of Israel died on the same dates as their birth or conception), and a miscalculation of the date of Jesus' death. It is even sometimes claimed that Aurelian moved the feast of Sol Invictus to December 25th to co-opt the Christian celebration.

The Romans also practiced many traditions similar to Christmas; specifically the "Christmas tree", though the Christmas tree itself is a later development in the celebration of Christmas (having its origins in Germany, possibly during the Reformation). The Romans often cut down evergreens and decorated them to pay homage to Saturn, the god of farming. This was to honor the fact that the evergreens remained alive during the harshness of winter. It was also traditional for Romans to exchange gifts during this holiday. These gifts were customarily made of silver, although nearly anything could be given as a gift for the occasion. Several epigrams by the poet Martial survive, seemingly crafted as riddling gift-tags for gifts of food. The medieval celebration of the Feast of Fools was another continuation of Saturnalia into the Christian era.

Origins

The Saturnalia was a large and important public festival in Rome. It involved the conventional sacrifices, a couch (lectisternium) set out in front of the temple of Saturn and the untying of the ropes that bound the statue of Saturn during the rest of the year. Besides the public rites there were a series of holidays and customs celebrated privately. The celebrations included a school holiday, the making and giving of small presents (saturnalia et sigillaricia) and a special market (sigillaria). Gambling was allowed for all, even slaves; although it was only officially condoned during this period, one should not assume that it was rare or much remarked upon during the rest of the year. It was a time to eat, drink, and be merry. The toga was not worn, but the pilleus (freedman's hat) was worn by everyone. Slaves were exempt from punishment, and treated their masters with disrespect. The slaves celebrated a banquet, before, with, or served by the masters. A Saturnalicus princeps was elected master of ceremonies for the proceedings. Saturnalia became one of the most popular Roman festivals which led to more tomfoolery, marked chiefly by having masters and slaves switch places, which led to widespread drinking and debauchery, so that among Christians the (lower case) word "saturnalia" came to mean "orgy".

The customary greeting for the occasion is a "Io, Saturnalia!" — io (pronounced "yo") being a Latin interjection related to "ho" (as in "Ho, praise to Saturn").

Saturnalia

<http://penelope.uchicago.edu/~grout/encycl...saturnalia.html>

By the beginning of December, writes Columella, the farmer should have finished his autumn planting. Now, at the time of the winter solstice (December 25 in the Julian calendar), Saturnus, the god of seed and sowing, was honored with a festival. The Saturnalia officially was celebrated on December 17 (a.d. XVI Kal. Ian.) and, in Cicero's time, lasted seven days, from December 17-23. Augustus limited the holiday to three days, so the civil courts would not have to be closed any longer than necessary, and Caligula extended it to five (Suetonius, XVII; Cassius Dio, LIX.6), which Claudius restored after it had been abolished (Dio, LX.25). Still, everyone seems to have continued to celebrate for a full week, extended, says Macrobius (I.10.24), by celebration of the Sigillaria, so named for the small earthenware figurines that were sold then.

Macrobius, in his Saturnalia, creates an imaginary symposium among pagan intellectuals that takes place then. There, he offers an explanation for the varying length of the holiday. Originally, it was celebrated on only one day, the fourteenth before the Kalends of January (December 19). With the Julian reform of the calendar, however, two days were added to December, and the Saturnalia was celebrated sixteen days before the Kalends (December 17), "with the result that, since the exact day was not commonly known--some observing the addition which Caesar had made to the calendar and others following the old usage--the festival came to be regarded as lasting for more days than one" (I.10.2). The original day now was given over to the Opalia, honoring Ops, who personified abundance and the fruits of the earth, and was the consort of Saturn. As the two deities represented the produce of the fields and orchards, so they also were thought to represent heaven and earth. It was for this reason, says Macrobius (I.10.20), that the two festivals were celebrated at the same time, the worshippers of Ops always sitting in prayer so that they touched the earth, mother of all.

In the Roman calendar, the Saturnalia was designated a holy day, or holiday, on which religious rites were performed. Saturn, himself, was identified with Kronos, and sacrificed to according to Greek ritual, with the head uncovered. The Temple of Saturn, the oldest temple recorded by the pontiffs, had been dedicated on the Saturnalia, and the woolen bonds which fettered the feet of the ivory cult statue within were loosened on that day to symbolize the liberation of the god.

It also was a festival day. After sacrifice at the temple, there was a public banquet, which Livy says was introduced in 217 BC (there also may have been a lectisternium, a banquet for the god in which its image is placed in attendance, as if a guest). Afterwards, according to Macrobius (I.10.18), the celebrants shouted "Io, Saturnalia!" at a riotous feast in the temple.

The Saturnalia was the most popular holiday of the Roman year. Catullus (XIV) describes it as "the best of days," and Seneca complains that the "whole mob has let itself go in pleasures" (Epistles, XVIII.3). Pliny the Younger writes that he retired to his room while the rest of the household celebrated (Epistles, II.17.24). It was an occasion for celebration, visits to friends, and the presentation of gifts, particularly wax candles (cerei), perhaps to signify the returning light after the solstice, and sigillaria. Martial wrote Xenia and Apophoreta for the Saturnalia. Both were published in December and intended to accompany the "guest gifts" which were given at that time of year. Aulus Gellius relates in his Attic Nights (XVIII.2) that he and his Roman compatriots would gather at the baths in Athens, where they were studying, and pose difficult questions to one another on the ancient poets, a crown of laurel being dedicated to Saturn if no-one could answer them.

During the holiday, restrictions were relaxed and the social order inverted. Gambling was allowed in public. Slaves were permitted to use dice and did not have to work. Instead of the toga, less formal dinner clothes (synthesis) were permitted, as was the pileus, a felt cap normally worn by the manumitted slave that symbolized the freedom of the season. Within the family, a Lord of Misrule was chosen. Slaves were treated as equals, allowed to wear their masters' clothing, and be waited on at meal time in remembrance of an earlier golden age thought to have been ushered in by the god. In the Saturnalia, Lucian relates that "During My week the serious is barred; no business allowed. Drinking, noise and games and dice, appointing of kings and feasting of slaves, singing naked, clapping of frenzied hands, an occasional ducking of corked faces in icy water—such are the functions over which I preside."

This equality was temporary, of course; and Petronius speaks of an impudent slave being asked at some other time of the year whether it was December yet. Dio writes of Aulus Plautius, who was to lead the conquest of Britain, cajoling his troops. But they hesitated, "indignant at the thought of carrying on a campaign outside the limits of the known world." Only when they were entreated by a former slave dispatched by Claudius did they relent, shouting "Io, Saturnalia" (LX.19.3).

(If a time of merriment, the season also was an occasion for murder. The Catiline conspirators intended to fire the city and kill the senate on the Saturnalia, when many would be preoccupied with the festivities. Caracalla plotted to murder his brother then, and Commodus was strangled in his bath on New Year's eve.)

At the end of the first century AD, Statius still could proclaim: "For how many years shall this festival abide! Never shall age destroy so holy a day! While the hills of Latium remain and father Tiber, while thy Rome stands and the Capitol thou hast restored to the world, it shall continue" (Silvae, I.6.98ff). And the Saturnalia did continue to be celebrated as Brumalia (from bruma, winter solstice) down to the Christian era, when, by the middle of the fourth century AD, its rituals had become absorbed in the celebration of Christmas.

Days of the week are named after planets and pagan gods!

- Sunday = Sun's day
- Monday = Moon's day: derived from the Anglo-Saxon monandaeg,
- Tuesday = named after the Norse god of war, Tiu, or Tiw
- Wednesday = named to honour Odin, or Woden, chief god in Norse mythology.
- Thursday = named after Thor, Norse god of thunder.
- Friday = Anglo-Saxon frīgedaeg; from Old High German Fria, a goddess
- Saturday = Saturn's day: named in honour of the Roman god Saturn.

QUOTE

What is the system behind the planetary day names?

As we saw in the previous section, the planets have given the week days their names following this order:

Moon, Mars, Mercury, Jupiter, Venus, Saturn, Sun

Why this particular order?

One theory goes as follows: If you order the "planets" according to either their presumed distance from Earth (assuming the Earth to be the centre of the universe) or their period of revolution around the Earth, you arrive at this order:

Moon, Mercury, Venus, Sun, Mars, Jupiter, Saturn

Now, assign (in reverse order) these planets to the hours of the day:

1=Saturn, 2=Jupiter, 3=Mars, 4=Sun, 5=Venus, 6=Mercury, 7=Moon, 8=Saturn, 9=Jupiter, etc., 23=Jupiter, 24=Mars

The next day will then continue where the old day left off:

1=Sun, 2=Venus, etc., 23=Venus, 24=Mercury

And the next day will go

1=Moon, 2=Saturn, etc.

If you look at the planet assigned to the first hour of each day, you will note that the planets come in this order:

Saturn, Sun, Moon, Mars, Mercury, Jupiter, Venus

This is exactly the order of the associated week days.

Saturn - Cosmic Keeper of Time

<http://www.geocities.com/osirian63/html/planets/saturn.html>

If Jupiter is the King of the Planets, then Saturn is the Queen of the Planets. Saturn, in ancient days, was known as Chronos, the keeper of Time. Chronos, was the son of Uranus and his wife, Rhea (the firmament). Chronos' wife was Gaia (the Earth). Saturn is the mother and giver of all forms, both mother and father, and possessing qualities of both sexes.

The rings around Saturn were easily seen by the ancients, and limit the planet within them, as time limits our existence here on Earth. Saturn is the last planet the ancients could see with their primitive telescopes, and so we have 7 days in the week, each day named after a corresponding planet. This is most evident from the French (or Spanish) names for the days of the week, as follows:

- Sunday - SUNday - pretty obvious, eh?
- Monday - MOONday - Lundi (Luna's Day)
- Tuesday - MARSday - Mardi (Mars' Day) (eg Mardi Gras)
- Wednesday - WODEN'sday - Mercredi (Mercury's Day)
- Thursday - THOR'sday - Jeudi - (Jupiter's Day)
- Friday - VENUSday - Vendredi - (Venus' Day)
- Saturday - SATURNday - Samedi - (Saturn's Day)

In fact, the word MONTH comes from the length of time the moon takes to complete one revolution around the Earth (a MOONTH) or 28 days. There are 13 lunar months and 12 solar months in each year of our Earth.

You can also go to The Birth of Islam, a fascinating essay in progress which discusses the theory that the Ancient Egyptians used just such a 10-day week, and it was subsequently reduced to 7 days for various reasons. The author declares Egypt held on to her "ancient celestial tradition of reality" until it was replaced with the "7 days of creation, the 7 spirits of God, and the 7 wandering bodies in the heavens" for which our days of the week are so aptly and obviously named. An excellent essay, thus far!

Have you all noticed how when people talk of 666 they always talk of SATAN or the BEAST? They do not reference Lucifer! Reason is that Lucifer is something entirely different and that it is the planet VENUS. Some believe Lucifer is the Sun but either way Lucifer is not SATURN and therefore not SATAN -2tuff

Saturn is the sixth planet from the Sun and the second largest:

orbit: 1,429,400,000 km (9.54 AU) from Sun diameter: 120,536 km (equatorial) mass: 5.68e26 kg

QUOTE

The great seal (mark) of Lucifer is the six-pointed star.

The six-pointed star symbolizes man's union with the divine:

"The Septenary Universe unfolds seamlessly from Infinity to the physical plane but it was divided into Seven Planes of Existence--or states of consciousness--by The Hierarchy who released this information through Mme. Blavatsky. The Three Higher Planes--Atma (Infinity), Buddhi (Light) and Manas (Higher Intelligence) constitute the Higher Self. The Higher Self is represented by the triangle pointing upwards. Interestingly enough, everyone and everything in the Universe has the same three principles in their seven-principled bodies and this constitutes the principle of Universal Brotherhood.

"The triangle pointing downwards is representative of the lower self, the three principles of sentient life--the 'breath of life' (which is a reflection of the Highest Principle), the Astral Body and the physical Body.

"When we come into existence, these two triangles are separated, the higher above the lower. In between is a single point of consciousness which represents the soul. The soul is the vehicle of our desires. If we desire the things of the lower principles, the fire of our soul is directed downward and, if our lower desires are strong enough, goes out.

"However, if we direct the fire upwards into our Higher Self, we receive the higher energies necessary to RAISE OUR LOWER SELF into harmony with our Higher Self. Thus the lower and Higher self become locked together in place in perfect Union by the principle of the soul. Thus we attain full consciousness awareness on ALL PLANES of the universe and he have, in effect, spiritualized our lower self, to the point where it has raised its energies into Union with the Higher.

"As the great metaphysician Mme. Helena Roerich said, 'Man becomes simply a god...and then God.'" - GaiaMind

"In Ritual Magick, the hexagon is called the Seal of Solomon, and represents Divine Union, being composed of a female, watery triangle, and a male, fiery triangle. The traditional elemental triangles of earth, air, water, and fire are derived from the seal. When the points of a hexagram are connected, a hexagon is formed. Kabbalistically, the hexagram represents the Sefirah Tifaret, perfection...

"In the Hindu religion, the hexagram is called the Shatkona, and is equivalent to the symbolism in ritual magick. The Shatkona is the combination of the Shiva kona (trikona, triangle), the symbol of the God Shiva, representing the element of fire, and the Shakti kona, representing the element of water. Together, they represent the union of male and female, and the heart chakra." - Hexagram (Shatkona, Seal of Solomon)

c. The six-pointed star is considered by occultists to be the Star of Bethlehem which will precede the Advent of the False Christ.

"Immediately after the tribulation of those days...shall appear the sign of the Son of man in heaven..." (Matt. 24:29-30)

"The Star is the symbol of the perfect life, the perfect balance, of the Christ-man. The six-pointed star is the Star of Bethlehem, which again means the Star of the Son of man..."

"The star with the six points represents the star of Light...of brotherhood, the Star of Christ. The love of Christ is represented by this Star. So, we have in that symbol a representation of the Ancient Wisdom, and the love of Christ, the wisdom and love combined, which is to be realized by humanity in this New Age - the age of Aquarius." - GaiaMind

QUOTE

"Now, the name SATURN in Chaldee is pronounced Satur; but, as every Chaldee scholar knows, consists only of four letters, thus - Stur [ed. Star?]. This name contains exactly the Apocalyptic number." (Hislop, p. 269)

"Sri Aurobindo, a Hindu guru well-known in the New Age affirms that SATURN IS REPRESENTED BY THE NUMBER 6... because the planet Saturn is 6th of the nine planets in distance from the sun." (Marrs: Mystery Mark, p. 68)

Note: Dagon's crown is the top of a 6-pointed star.

Rev. 13:1 - And I saw the BEAST RISE UP OUT OF THE SEA

Rev. 13:16 - ...a mark IN THEIR RIGHT HAND, OR IN THEIR FOREHEADS

In the mystery religions, both the forehead and hands were tattooed during rites of initiation. (Reason Dagon's hands and head were cut off.)

Concerning Mithraism: "INITIATION was performed by two dignitaries, who possessed the title of Father and Herald. After the ceremony (the initiate) would be considered the brother...of the other initiates and the son of the Father... In order to be recognized by the Father, he has to be TATOORED, in other words, BRANDED ON BOTH HANDS... On portraits of emperors, these TATTOO MARKS are clearly visible, but ON THE FOREHEAD, IN PLACE OF THE HANDS."(Vermaseren, p. 131)

The tattoo bonds the initiate with the entity symbolized by the tattoo and enables him to communicate with that demonic power.

"In some pictures of a tattooed man we are faced by a permanent prayer to and identification with the heavenly powers, at the same time as a basic means of communication with them. Such is the most generalized meaning of tattooing bestowed in consequence of a rite of initiation which allows this communication to take place. At the same time, this initiation is a rite of admission into a social group and the tattoo is the PERMANENT MARK OF THAT INITIATION, the badge of the tribe.

"All in all, tattooing belongs among symbols of identification and is interfused with all their magic and mystic potency. Identification always carries a double meaning: it tends to invest the individual concerned with the properties and strength of the CREATURE OR THING TO WHICH THAT PERSON IS ASSIMILATED and, at the same time, to immunize the latter against its potential power to cause harm. This is why tattoos depict dangerous creatures such as serpents or scorpions, or animals which are symbols of fertility, such as bulls or of power, such as lions, and so on. Identification also carries a SENSE OF SURRENDER OR EVEN OF CONSECRATION to whatever the tattoo symbolically depicts. It then becomes a BADGE OF FEALTY."- Chevalier's Dictionary of Symbols

So is the Black Nobility made up of the wealthy decedents of the Roman Empire? All those rich Romans had to take there money somewhere when the Empire collapsed.

I've actually traced the British royals' roots to Rome...if this information is accurate they're descended from the Caesars. In fact, it's basically the SAME TRIBE, different time and place.

BTW--Tuesday...interestingly enough 9/11 was on a Tuesday.

And in Spanish classes I've had, I've learned a bit about the culture. Supposedly in Hispanic culture Tuesday the 13th (el martes trece) is bad luck, like our Friday the 13th. What's up with that?

CRAIG-OXLEY - September 30, 2006 10:44 PM (GMT)

Take Prince Bernhard of Netherlands for Instance he was a whos who in the Black Nobility due to him descending from the last Emperor he could veto in the ELection of a new Pope for instance. It was Jesuit Joseph Rettinger who brought in Bernhard to help create the Bilderberg Group which they control through The City and its formerly known Round Tables group.

Remember folks that Queen Elizabeth II is a descendant of the GUELPHS a highly powerful Black Nobility family based in Venice, Italy.

THE POPES CAMAURO

The camauro is the white fur-trimmed red bonnet reserved to Popes in place of the biretta. No Pope since John XXIII (d. 1963) has used it.

The camauro, like the biretta, evolved from the academic cap of the Middle Ages. Unlike the biretta, however, it did not evolve much. The camauro in its present form was established by the twelfth century.

Ok I am new here and want to post some info about saturn.

The oldest depiction of our sun is about 20000 years old and they found them in caves in spain and france, it is the circle with point in the middle and EIGHT spokes:

link: <http://www.bearfabrique.org/Catastrophism/...rn/rockart.html>

Why eight spokes?

The babylonians called it shamash and is the circle with dot with the eight spokes again. By the way the eight spokes are like a double cross which it represent see fig:

Well to make a long story short; a long time ago the sun looked like this:

Some links: <http://www.maverickscience.com/saturn.htm>
<http://www.catastrophism.com/texts/sun-and-saturn/> http://www.aeonjournal.com/articles/road_t..._to_saturn.html
<http://www.bearfabrique.org/Catastrophism/...n/aliensky.html>

The white one is saturn without rings (they came later) the green one is venus and the red one is mars.(here we have the white ,green and red dragon)

It is the circle with dot in centre they called the dot the "EYE".

If you know the priciples of geometry than you know the principles of the square.The square is the generative principle, it is the root of two.

Banks generate, that is why a lot of logo's of banks are square's or tilted squire's. The generate principle is AIR which is the octaheder and that is root of two.

For instance chase bank is a square.

So the saturn is a black square. Mars is the red square (see moscow) and green is the colour of venus and that is the green square.Look it up in tripoli you have the green square aswell in beirut.(I will do a post on the green square soon)

Why is saturn a black square because it is the prince of darkness.

A long time ago something happened and that is that the earth tilted and that venus departed saturn and went our (earth) way and she just past us and with that threw a lot of water on our planet.

Venus induced the flood she induced the wall of water, that's why there is a weeping wall and she flooded the earth she was the initiator of the current sea which is currency. That is why the dollar is green and you deal it in WALL street.

The islamic world is all about venus that is why you always find green in their flags.

So saturn lost his companions, venus and mars and saturn died as god. In the time saturn was god there where no seasons it was always spring represented as number 322 (skull & bones). That is why saturn is called kronos and is father time or eternity because there was no time. When saturn died he lost his eight spokes (the spokes where interference light of venus and mars which was in front of him) Put number eight on its side and it is the endless sign.

When saturn died, then our sun came to our world, our sun brought the seasons so time started.

In this symbol you find the change between the black and the white sun:

In the centre saturn without the spokes!! Remember venus went our way. Without spokes it is called "noeight" which the word night comes from and incidentally that is where the word knight comes from. And a knight is a horse that horse is EL and that is why the chess piece moves that way. The black horse is saturn the white is our sun.

English: no eight = night.

French: non huit = nuit.

German: nein acht = nacht.

Italian: non otto = notte

Spanish: non oche = noche.

Russian ne vosem' = noch'

Polish nie osiem = noc

Sanskrit na as.t.a^u = nak

Avestan no^it~ as^ti = xs^ap

Greek ou okto^ = nux

Albanian s' tete" = nate"

Irish ni ocht = adaig

Welsh ni wyth = nos

Lith. ne as^tuoni` = nakti`s

Hittite natta 8 = nekuz

The most important is NOEIGHT which is NOACHT and that is NOACH.

Yet look again under you see a kind of crescent moon but that is the new SUN!!!!

Altogether that is called ARCHA NOA. The cross which contains the trinity (look good) is venus. Our lady which loses a lot of water. At night (noach) we eat our last supper and the above mentioned is what leonardo's painting is all about. Look how the lady disappears from the sun jesus.

A lot of oil company's have the sun in their logo, but it can be one or the other so Exxon is the double cross (spokes) of saturn.

Esso is SO which is:

So is O.
O = A in the Book of Thoth (The Tarot).
A = 111 with all its great meanings, ☉ = 6.
Now 666 = My name.
= the number of the stélé.
= the number of the Beast. (See Apocalypse.)
= the number of the ☉

And this one is really funny:

You see the rings in the Q and the eight is saturn because of his spokes.

And then the sail of the windsurfing sail, there are TWO remember wind is air and that is octaheder (root of two) this is the generating principle.

More on saturn but you have to know geometry that is what the letter G stands for:

Why is this saturn? Look at the compass it makes an angle of 60 degrees.

A triangle with all three corners of 60 degree is one with all the side same lenght. You can have one with point up and because as above as below you have one with point down the result is star david also called star of moloch and this is saturn:

An other name for this star is dark star or dying star.

If you make a 3-D star of this star david you get a doublestar tetrahedron or merkaba, surrounding this figure is a cube and that is the 90 degrees of the square in the famous mason sign.

The complementarity of the cube is the octahedron which is the symbol of air or the generative principle (root of two transformation) see fig:

Ok another symbol for saturn is this one:

The number 322 is known it represent SPRING Saturn as sun knew no seasons it was always a kind of spring time.

But there is more see fig:

In the point of the tablecloth you see the slanted black square(saturn)
And the clock stands still as of no time and the clocks says 8 o'clock this is saturn, remember the planet with eight spokes?

Now I continue with this one:

The black sun is saturn and the sun behind is luke skywalker our jolly jumper, around the twelve houses of the zodiac.

The present sun with zodiac is squared by the black square and that is called squaring of the circle.

Ok saturn(kronos) is no time and sun is time it induced the seasons.

The sun is orange that is why stanley kubrick made a film called: A Clockwork Orange.

dodeca - October 14, 2006 03:00 PM (GMT)

This one is about Kubrick's a space odessey 2001.

Saturn like they used to depict 20000 years ago:

Kubrick did it this way:

Ok the monolith is saturn and above is the sun rising this is ARCHA NOA:

When this scene happens you see this, it is a metafor for the dying sun (saturn) this old sungod El is making place for the new sungod:

The vatican knows this and this figure is now better to understand, watch carefully at the eight spoked star in the shield:

So we are talking about the one son of god dying (saturn) and the coming of the new son of god (our present sun)
This altogether here:

Once you know this, alot of more symbols are better to understand like this one:

dodeca - October 14, 2006 03:14 PM (GMT)

Once You know the code of the eight spoked star you will see it. Here on top of the mantle piece (left and right) behind the pope:

dodeca - October 14, 2006 03:22 PM (GMT)

So keep in mind the the square it is very important it is the root of two. The basic platonic solid of this principle is the octaheder.

If you look on top of an octaheder you see a square or slanted square, looking side ways you get the DIAMOND! That is why diamonds are forever!

And you under stand, Lucy in the sky with diamonds (LSD).

So the pope said some thing wrong about some islamic people who by the way are the same men in black. The pope apologies and a picture was taken:

Remember this is black magic!

dodeca - October 14, 2006 03:29 PM (GMT)

Why is 1776 a very important date for the USA?

We'll look at the numbers. The first two is:

$1+7=8$ we know that that is the eight spokes or the double cross:

So that is saturn (the old sun)

The next two numbers is 76 so:

$7+6=13$ and that is our sun. It is called the light, luz, lucy, lucas or luke and we know that our sun walks through the constellations in the sky that is why mr. lucas called our sun "luke skywalker". That is 12 constellations and the sun makes 13 altogether the zodiac.

So the sun is the spirit of 76 and we now know that oil comp. have the sun in their logo so this oil company is clear now it is the orange globe:

So the date 1776 represents is the old world (old sun saturn) going to the new world (our sun).

We know from sacred geometry that the square represents the root of two and is called the "generative principle".

Please remember that all heavenly bodies (planets and stars) are often depicted as square's or tilted square's this is because they generate all kinds of energies.

So the generating energy from the orange globe(sun) is the orange square:

dodeca - October 14, 2006 03:33 PM (GMT)

Some walk around saturn:

Others just put it on their forehead:

dodeca - October 14, 2006 03:35 PM (GMT)

I want to introduce another symbol and that is the circle in the triangle.
It stands for god or as other researches call it, creator.

An example: AOL, pronounced OWL and that is moloch, star david, merkaba and yes again Saturn:

We see this symbol on the throne of the queen of England:

By the way the queen has a crown on her head which contains the blackhat(saturn) on top of the crown the "knight of malta square":

Ok let's have a look at the throne of the queen of the netherlands. The throne is situated in the "ridderzaal" where "ridder"=knight=noeight=night=saturn and "zaal"=hall. Saturnhall you can call it. Look what is above the throne. It is a giant square= root of two:

Lovely chandeliers ain't it?

Let's have a closer look at the throne of the queen of the netherlands and pay close attention to the arrow. You will notice the black circle in the triangle and in the black circle there is a white pentagram with the point downward and that is venus:

The window of the hall of saturn will be familiar by now:

dodeca - October 14, 2006 03:41 PM (GMT)

Again that window of the knights hall. Look at the bottom:

You see the black eagle looking west and that is sun set aka SETH saturn this is the one old world pillar and the bird looks right to the east where the new sun rises and that is to other world pillar.

dodeca - October 14, 2006 04:04 PM (GMT)

Ok here you see the old world pillar saturn and the new world pillar our sun in between the root of two;the slanted square:

These two pillars represent the world trade centre which are down now.

So what comes in place? The square on a square! Or 1776 remember:

1+7=8 saturn

1776 is old sun to new sun. So they will build a freedom tower:

Rising from its square base -- which will be constructed of impermeable concrete and steel -- the redesigned Freedom Tower will taper into eight tall isosceles triangles, forming a perfect octagon at its center. An observation deck will be located 1,362 feet above ground and there will be a square glass parapet at 1,368 feet, the heights of the original Twin Towers. From these, an illuminated spire containing a television antenna will rise to a final height of 1,776 feet.

http://www.lowermanhattan.info/constructio...ower_26204.aspx

dodeca - October 14, 2006 04:06 PM (GMT)

Ok, so saturn before the flood is the white,green and red.

Together the god EL. It is the colours of italy,the most powerful country on this globe.

It is so powerful that even the country's shape is of an EL (L)!

So this one is pretty strong:

Still any doubt? This is SETH:

dodeca - October 14, 2006 04:08 PM (GMT)

An other saturn:

<http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Sleipnir>

dodeca - October 14, 2006 04:10 PM (GMT)

Again sun Saturn with Venus

The white one is the white dragon which represents saturn. The green is the green dragon and that is venus. And the red one is the red dragon and that is mars.

Then suddenly things started to change and Saturn moved away from the earth and venus came straight toward the earth and nearly hit our planet and by doing this venus induced the flood.

After this event we got a new sun and that is our sun.

So in a nut shell there are three main players which are important for us on this planet and those are Saturn - Venus - Sun.

These three are most important for three religions.

The sun for the christians and their sacred day is sunday.

The planet saturn (the old sun) for the jews so you have saturday.

The planet venus is associated with frija or frigg and from that you get fri and that day is friday. So the most sacred day for the islam is friday only on that day they may eat couscous.

In dutch that day is called "vrijdag" and "vrij" translated is "free" .

Why is venus called frija/free? Because before the flood she was copped to saturn(see first fig) and after the big change she got FREE!

So islam's most important planets are saturn and venus.

Now you understand why the roof of the kaaba is green. Venus together with saturn before the flood!

And now you understand why the islam people are NOT free on friday!

There is another symbol for venus and that is the dome mostly she is green but here she is gold: http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Dome_of_the_Rock

Look carefully the dome is situated on an octagon and that is saturn.

So you have dome and from that you get DOM. Remember the two suns?
Our world pillars? They went down in New York and get replaced by....

FREE- DOM tower: http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Freedom_Tower simpel hey it is just Venus before AND after the flood.
aint she a marvelous planet? Mother of the current sea aka currency our green money!

Ok so we know where the word square comes from and beside a red square there is a Green square. Where is it?

Well in tripoli (trinity of world pillars?). That is the place where mr. gadafi lives. So lybia has a big green (venus/green dragon) flag.

The green square:

Let have a closer look what is on the pillars:

And the other:

Who is that guy on the horse? Funny kind of whip isn't it?

It is Saint George and here you see the same guy on the wall which is situated at the green square:

The story of saint george is depicted numerous ways here a nice example:

And Venus our green dragon:

The whole story together:

So the new sun won over venus (lucifer) and that is what is happening every morning just before the sun comes up.

dodeca - October 14, 2006 04:11 PM (GMT)

The most important three for the big world religions are Saturn-Venus and Sun.

The pillars represent saturn and sun and the dome venus.

Sometime they call venus "heaven's gate".

So we build them churches like this:

Between the two pillars the round window, saturn(circle with dot) and sun (luke skywalker, 12 leaves/houses/zodiac)

Again two pillars plus same window but nicely taken photo, from dot of centre circle the heavens gate appears, just like the eye venus in front of saturn:

And build our mosk's in the same manner:

Put synagogue in google and search image, result: the same.

The word church comes from "kerk"(dutch) and that is from "kirk" an old scottish word.

Here an other example of two pillars and a dome:

So two pillars and dome(saturn/sun/venus) is a big enterprise and is controlled by captain.....?

dodeca - October 14, 2006 04:19 PM (GMT)

That's it for today but will be continued....

CRAIG-OXLEY - October 14, 2006 10:17 PM (GMT)

Thanks for coming as promised and sharing your Saturn knowledge with us all.

dodeca - October 15, 2006 01:52 PM (GMT)

So we start to see the main three players in the dramatic scene called enterprise ruled by captain kirk.

So we have Saturn-Venus-Sun. We know that saturn is the spoked god and the sun is the god with light rays.

We know that Saturn is Seth.Venus is Isis and the Sun is Horus.

The sun induced the time(seasons) so the word hor refers to time.Like in horoscope.Horoscope is the zodiac. Hours comes from horus.

In this symbol al this together:

Sonne in german means sons of. Swartse Sonne means litterly children of the black or children of the black sun (saturn).

The robe used by the saturn priest(men in black) is called a Geneva gown or a geneva robe: <http://www.answers.com/>

Why and what is geneva? Well to start with it is the GEN of EVE. But there is more, this is the shield of geneva and know you understand the logo of the shield:

And the sign of switzerland is VIRGO she is VENUS the mother of current sea or currency. That is why the world banking is situated there.

And therefore swiss is neutral as of the old venus in front of saturn named "DOME" and venus after the flood called frija and that is FREE. So freedom is there for the one who has the big time currency.

Alexandra - October 15, 2006 02:07 PM (GMT)

I thought it was Isis, Horus, and SEB...? shrugs

Speaking of Saturnalia...it disturbs me that professing Christians observe Xmas (Saturnalia) and think it's Christian... never mind that God forbids it in Jeremiah 10:2-5.

I get people telling me I'm mean because I don't tell my son the Santa Claus (or Satan Lucas) lie...I politely tell them to sod off--it's mean to lie to your kids! :P

Ibis - October 15, 2006 07:57 PM (GMT)

Dodeca or 2Tuff, what does the winged eye in this image represent?

CRAIG-OXLEY - October 15, 2006 08:05 PM (GMT)

Its simply the SUN nothing more nothing less. Disinformation artists like Sitchin will claim its a spaceship of some sorts but its simply how the ancients always symbolised the SUN.

QUOTE

King David did not have anything to do with the above hexagram, although his son Solomon did when he began worshipping Ashtoreth (star, also known as Astarte, Chiun, Kaiwan, Remphan, and Saturn). Solomon built altars to Star (Astarte, aka Ashtoreth). The god Saturn is associated with the Star but both Saturn and Astarte also been identified with a number of other names. Saturn is an important key to understanding the long heritage this conspiracy has back to antiquity. The city of Rome was originally known as Saturnia or City of Saturn. The Roman Catholic church retains much of the Saturn worship in its ritual. Saturn also relates to Lucifer. In various occult dictionaries Saturn is associated with evil. Saturn was important to the religion of Mithra, and also the Druids. This is where Freemasons get there rituals. http://www.theforbiddenknowledge.com/hardt...orge_w_bush.htm

Saturn as a Stationary Sun and Universal Monarch

A global tradition recalls an exemplary king ruling in the sky before kings ever ruled on earth.

This mythical figure appears as the first in the line of kings, the father of kings, the model of the good king. But this same figure is commonly remembered as the central luminary of the sky, often a central sun, unmoving sun, or superior sun ruling before the present sun.

And most curiously, with the rise of astronomy, this celestial "king" was identified as the planet Saturn.

The celestial king who was associated with the planet Saturn was also known as the Egyptian Atum-Ra, the Sumerian An, the Hebrew and Canaanite El, the Norse Frodhi, the Greek Kronos and the Latin Saturn. Yet nothing in the appearance of the planet today will account for the extraordinary attributes of these gods.

It appears on the surface that ancient peoples attributed great qualities of majesty and power to a tiny speck in the sky. It is no wonder that this puzzling phenomenon has been dismissed as an amusing artifact of the primitive mind.

We believe that this puzzle holds a mystery whose solution will change forever our understanding of human history and the evolution of the solar system.

The Mother Goddess

Of the five visible planets, ancient astronomers associate only one with the great mother. That planet is Venus.

The following goddess figures are also associated with the planet Venus: the Sumerian Inanna, the Babylonian Ishtar, the Canaanite Anath, the Egyptian Isis, Hathor, and Sekhmet, the Scandinavian Freya, the Greek Aphrodite, and the Latin Venus.

Why should the planet Venus be inextricably linked to the archetype of the goddess? There is no distinctly feminine attribute of Venus in our sky today.

The Warrior-Hero

Equally mysterious are the global memories of a celestial warrior or hero defeating powers of chaos in ancient times. Remarkably similar memories occur in both the Old World and the New.

In many later cultures the hero looks very much like a human being and his feats are accomplished on a regional landscape. But in the earliest versions of the story, the figure is entirely cosmic, and numerous traditions identify the warrior as a planet, the planet Mars.

Warrior figures associated with the planet Mars include the Egyptian Shu-Anhur, the Babylonian Nergal and Irra, the Greek Ares and the Latin Mars, the Australian Waiungari, and Pawnee Morning Star.

This is the Hercules archetype. Greek astronomers, for example, alternately designated the planet Mars as the warrior Ares or the warrior Hercules.

What is there about the little planet that might have prompted the idea of a great warrior wielding weapons of thunder, fire, and stone?

ROMANIZING BAAL: THE ART OF SATURN WORSHIP IN NORTH AFRICA

BY ANDREW WILSON

ADOBE PDF FORMAT

Introduction

This paper is concerned with stelai from North Africa dedicated to Baal / Saturn in fulfilment of a religious vow, and examines the development of their iconography as the region was incorporated into the Roman empire. The monuments in question range in date from the second century B. C. until the fourth century A.D., and are found throughout modern Tunisia and eastern Algeria – ancient Africa Proconsularis and Numidia, but not Tripolitania. Many of the Roman-period stelai have been collected and catalogued by Marcel Leglay in his book Saturn africain,¹ and this paper owes much to that work. However, the Berber/Punic stelai have been studied separately, obscuring some of the developments between them and those of the Roman period. Considerations of space prevent full illustration here of all the examples discussed, and the reader is referred to Leglay's study for pictures of many of the stelai.

A difficulty with the study of the stelai is the poor chronological data available; they are usually from old or poorly-controlled excavations. Dating the monuments is therefore difficult, and relies usually on a combination of onomastics, features of dress and hairstyle, and artistic 'style' – the latter an unreliable indicator in what is largely a naïve and schematic mode of representation. Nevertheless, some are dated by consular references, and others with more or less precision by their archaeological context.² These enable a seriation in which developments in artistic style, composition, cult objects and the formula of the inscription can be traced. In the following, a distinction should be kept in mind between artistic or stylistic changes, which might be signalled through a shift in representation or in visual language; and changes in religious practice evidenced by the appearance of new or different forms of ritual equipment, offerings, or the attitude in which the dedicant is represented.

Punic and Berber stelai dedicated to Baal

The basic elements of the Saturn stelai of the Roman period are already present on Punic/Berber stelai of the pre-Roman period. The pre-Roman stelai dedicated to Baal consist of a representation of the dedicant, usually with arms raised and either holding offerings interpreted as a lozenge-shaped cake and/or a pretzel-type cake, or accompanied by various religious symbols, notably a palm branch. The deity, Baal, is usually represented by a crescent moon at the top of the stele. Sometimes a rosette or sun symbol, also of celestial significance, may appear. Many stelai are anepigraphic, but where inscriptions do appear, they are simple dedications to Baal, giving the name of the dedicant and recording that he or she has paid their vow or made a sacrifice. The visual focus of the stelai is on the dedicant, and not the deity, a feature which is unusual by comparison with other cults.

The simple composition of Punic/Berber Baal stelai is well illustrated by a group from ancient Thabarbusis, modern Aïn Nechma, near Guelma in Numidia. Numerous funerary and ex voto stelai, including both neo-Punic dedications to Baal-Hammon and Roman dedications to Saturn, were discovered here in the 1940s and 1950s, and a temple has been identified on the hill overlooking the findspot of the stelai.³

The Punic/Berber stelai are uniform in composition; the dedicant is represented nude, schematically depicted with nipples, navel and genitals, and a round face with holes for the eyes and mouth (fig. 1). The arms are raised, and their extremities merge into the offerings (usually interpreted as cakes) which the figure is holding, without the hands being represented. In the example shown, the dedicant is flanked by a palm branch on one side, and an inscription in neo-Punic on the other. A lunar crescent, representing Baal, caps the stele. The carving is in very flat relief, almost two-dimensional, and the composition is entirely frontal.

Fig. 2 shows a Roman period stele from the same site; remarkably little, really, has changed. The dedicant is now clothed in a tunic and mantle, and inscribes in Latin; L. FLAVIVS DEXTER SATVRNO V(OTVM) S(OLVIT) L(IBENS) M(ERITO).

But the flat relief, frontality and crudely naïve representation of the figure, with a disproportionately large round face and schematic features, and the attitude with raised arms merging into the objects held, remains the same. A ram is represented as sacrifice; and once again a lunar crescent surmounts the composition. Although the dedicant here bears the tria nomina, he could well be of African descent; the name Flavius may place him in the later first century or early second century A.D.⁴

Other Roman stelai from Aïn Nechma are closely similar, to the extent that Leglay's no. 12 from this site could well have been carved by the sculptor of the previous stele.⁵ The composition is almost identical, even down to the curved double border framing the scene at the top; it differs only in that it represents a cock rather than a ram. The inscription, TILAVCA AN(imo) is an incomplete phrase, and the name Tilauca is non-Roman. This stele belongs to an early series carved in low relief with schematic features, in all of which the dedicants carry palms.⁶ A second series is slightly more developed, with deeper relief and greater detail in the treatment of the hair, clothes and face; palm branches are replaced by bunches of grapes, but the lozenge and crown-cakes persist.⁷ Roman influence on the Aïn Nechma stelai remains superficial, affecting perhaps clothes and language, but not the art or the basic religious conception behind these monuments.

Ksiba and Maktar

Progressive but still very limited Roman influence is visible in a similar series from Ksiba, in Africa Proconsularis.⁸ The earlier series (Leglay 1961 Pl. XVI.1-3) remains very close to the neo-Punic tradition, although with some architectural mouldings betraying Hellenistic or Roman influence. A second series (Leglay 1961 Pl. XVI.4-8) has marginally more elaborate treatment of the clothes, and the figures are a little less schematic, with more attempt to represent facial features. They are shown framed within an aedicula, and Roman-style altars are sometimes represented (Leglay 1961 Pl. XVI.7-8), indicating some Roman influence on the ritual equipment of the cult.

Roman influence is minimal even in the second century A.D. on the stele from Maktar in Tunisia.⁹ Here the orants are clothed in the manner of the Aïn Nechma or Ksiba stele, but schematically represented with massively thick necks and very crude treatment of drapery; they are placed in a simple architectural frame, but the inscriptions are still in neo-Punic, not Latin.

Stelai from coloniae and military sites

Rather different, however, are the stelai from several military sites or new colonial foundations, which betray a greater degree of Roman influence. From the vicus around the headquarters fort of the Third Legion at Lambaesis (Numidia) come numerous votive stelai of the second/third centuries A.D. The male dedicants are shown in togas, in one case holding a scroll (Fig 3),¹⁰ and often a bunch of grapes. The attitude of the figures is now different; instead of standing with raised arms, their stance is more formal and restrained, typical of Roman offering poses, sometimes with one hand making an offering on an altar. A ram is represented below, as sacrificial offering. Figures are now shown in greater, more rounded relief, and the treatment of faces, hairstyles and posture is markedly more realistic and developed than in the stelai from Aïn Nechma or Ksiba; and, within the limitations of this category of provincial art, the woman depicted in Leglay 1966 Pl. XXIV.7 even achieves a certain elegance. The influence of Roman art and customs on the stelai from Lambaesis is evident, as one might perhaps expect at a major military centre. But figures are still represented frontally, just as in the stelai from elsewhere, and indeed as in Roman funerary stelai from all over the empire. Indeed, at places like Lambaesis there may be some cross-over with funerary art, the same workshops perhaps being involved in the production of votive stelai to Saturn and of grave markers.¹¹

Fig. 2 Roman period Saturn stele from Thabarbusis (Ain Nechma), Algeria. (A. Wilson).

The same pattern is borne out at Timgad, the colony founded in A.D. 100 just 15 miles from Lambaesis.¹² With the exception of the simple composition of Leglay 1966a Pl. XXVII.2, which is doubtless early, and depicts only the lunar crescent symbol for Saturn and the sacrificial offerings, the second-century A.D. stelai from Timgad all show many of the indicators of Roman influence we have already identified. The focus is still on the dedicant, but the deity makes more of an appearance; Saturn is now depicted more usually as a head than as a crescent symbol. The dedicants are shown in Roman dress and in postures typical of Roman religious monuments, sometimes making offerings at altars, and framed within niches. The figures are much less twodimensional than those of the stelai in the neo-Punic tradition. The overall composition may also become more elaborate, as in Leglay 1966a Pl. XXVII.4, with three registers – Saturn, the Sun and the Moon in upper (celestial) register. The dedicant is shown in the central register, holding a bunch of grapes and a bird, flanked by genii carrying long palms. In the lowest register a ram is led to sacrifice.

At Djemila, a colony founded in the reign of Nerva, we have a series of stelai running into the fourth century A.D. Most of the known stelai from Djemila were found re-used face-down as paving slabs for streets, and in many cases faces have been deliberately hacked off, probably in the anti-pagan Christian fervour of the mid to late fourth century. The stelai show similar trends to those from other coloniae – figures in full relief, making offerings at altars, and, significantly, couples portrayed together, sometimes with children as well.¹³ The compositions recall in this respect the arrangement of family members on Roman funerary monuments, although the bearded head or bust of the deity generally presides over them. Other Roman cults may also make an appearance, as with the representation of the Dioscuri in the early fourth-century stelai.¹⁴

Fig. 3 Saturn stele from Lambaesis (Lambèse), Algeria, second or third century A.D., showing togate dedicant holding a scroll and a bunch of grapes. (Leglay 1966a, Pl. XXIV.5.).

Ghorfa

More elaborate stelai come from Ghorfa, between Dougga, El Kef and Maktar, in north-west Tunisia. These stelai, of the first and second centuries A.D., have a markedly more complex and crowded composition than those we have so far looked at, in several registers (Fig. 4). They represent the dedicant standing within a temple, rendered in some architectural detail, with the coffering of the porch rendered in flat perspective, below a pediment with sculpture. A pantheon of deities is shown in the upper part of the stele, arranged in a pyramidal composition. Other deities besides Saturn are also represented – Dionysos holding a thyrsos, and Venus. Figures are less two-dimensional, but the pose, holding an offering against the chest, is carried over from Punic tradition.

The arrangement of these stelai is clearly quite different from both the neo-Punic style and also from the stelai from the Roman colonies; the emphasis on architectural ornament, and the relatively high quality of the relief carving, may in some sense be a product of the highly urbanized region of the Tunisian Tell from which these stelai come.

Discussion

This has of course been a brief and highly selective overview of a fraction of a very large group of monuments. Nevertheless, some basic trends are apparent, that may reveal insights into the ways in which Roman culture affected the populations of North Africa under Roman rule. The onomastics of the dedicants suggest that the cult of Saturn appealed in particular to the middle and lower strata of society, and the relatively unsophisticated and repetitive nature of these monuments supports this view. Many of the dedicants carry African names, or Roman names commonly borne by North Africans – Felix, Fortunatus, Iulia Vernula – and very few have the tria nomina. The emphasis on frontality is noted by Leglay as a feature of Romanization, since it is characteristic of Italian funerary and ex voto stelai of the second and first centuries B.C. but he also points out that it is present in Punic/Berber art.¹⁵ His discussion of the Roman and African origins of frontality, though, fails to confront the idea that it may simply be a hallmark of simplistic artisan work, affordable by the lower strata of society who set up these stelai. Johns points out that features such as frontal representation, over-large heads, lentoid eyes, diagrammatic treatment of drapery – all of which are characteristics of many of the Saturn stelai – are typical of naïve art.¹⁶ That we are dealing in some cases with artisans of limited technical ability is confirmed by the confusion of limbs with the objects they hold, or the sideways portrayal of feet belonging to a frontal figure.¹⁷ The art of the Saturn stelai, then, is not elite art, nor of course the art of that sector of the population too poor to afford these monuments, but the art commissioned by a lower to middle segment of society

Fig. 4 Saturn stelai from Ghorfa (Tunisia) – first / second centuries A.D. (Bardo Museum, Tunis.).

In some regions, especially the sanctuary of Aïn Nemcha, Roman impact on the cult appears minimal; the figures are portrayed in the same postures as in the pre-Roman period, with the same naïve representation, and the same ritual equipment; all that has changed is that they are now clothed and speak Latin. Elsewhere, in the Roman colonies and in the more urbanized parts of Africa Proconsularis, the iconography of the stelai undergoes progressive change, reflecting changes both in artistic styles and in religious ritual. The figures become more rounded and are shown in greater relief; more detail is represented in clothing and physical features, and there are close similarities with Roman funerary art. Indeed, the most developed relief is found in stelai at the colonies of Djemila, Zana and Timgad; and at Djemila, Timgad and Lambaesis all the men wear togas.¹⁸ At the same time, elements of the cult are transformed: the posture of the dedicants changes from the neo-Punic stance with arms raised, to a more restrained togate pose, making an offering at an altar. Some of the ritual offerings change too – the palm branches disappear and bunches of grapes are shown with greater frequency. Other deities appear from time to time in supporting roles – Dionysos, Venus and the Dioscuri. During the second century, dedications become increasingly influenced by mainstream Roman practice – they are addressed to the divinity, with his titles, then they give the name of the dedicant and the reason for the vow, and then the ex voto formula v(otum) s(olvit) l(ibens) a(nimo).¹⁹

In contrast to the highly Romanized public architecture funded by urban elites in North Africa, the Baal/Saturn stelai suggest that the impact of Roman religion, culture and art on the middle and lower strata of society who made these offerings varied across North Africa. In some areas of Numidia it was apparently very limited and superficial, with the essential elements remaining unchanged since the Punic period and Roman influence appearing almost as a veneer of language and dress habits, but leaving artistic expression and cult practice (posture of the dedicant, ritual equipment) as it was. But at the same time, coloniae and military vici in Numidia, and centres in the highly urbanized regions of Africa Proconsularis, exhibit a much greater degree of cultural assimilation both of Roman artistic styles and of religious habits and cult practices into the iconography of the Saturn cult.

Saturn thru the Ages

LINK

Saturn has been viewed from several very different perspectives thruout human history—as of now, the reasons are not completely understood. This page examines notions about Saturn that were held during various eras and in most cases by people with belief systems different than our own.

Our solar system was created about five billion years ago from rotating gas that contracted to become the sun and its planets, moons, comets, asteroids and meteoroid streams. All of these bodies are now held together by sun's gravitational attraction as they travel around that central star in the same direction as Earth.

Saturn is the second largest planet and sixth outward from the sun, about 800 million miles from Earth. Its equatorial diameter is 9.4 times that of Earth. Saturn rotates rapidly, spinning on average once every 10 hours 32 minutes, but because of its outer gaseous composition the spin rate varies with latitude. That large planet takes 29.5 Earth years to complete one orbit.

Mercury is shown as a speck next to the sun on the far left, above. Positioned next are Venus, Earth, Mars, Jupiter, Saturn, Uranus, Neptune and finally Pluto as a white dot on the far right. Planet sizes are shown to scale but their distances from the sun are way out of proportion. Computer monitors are not nearly large enough to display meaningful views of solar system members if both planet sizes and a representation of their orbits around the sun are shown to scale.

Because hydrogen and helium (two of the lightest elements) make up much of Saturn's mass, its average density is only 0.7 times that of water. But it has a central core made of either rock or a mixture of rock and ice. That core alone is believed to be fifteen times Earth's mass and its total mass is about 95 times greater.

Winds blow at extremely high speeds on Saturn—often 1,100 miles per hour. Their primarily easterly direction indicates that the winds are not confined to the top cloud layer but must extend at least 1,200 miles downward into the atmosphere.

Saturn is known to have about 33 moons. Irregular shapes of the smallest indicate they may be remains of three or four larger moons which suffered disastrous collisions sometime in the past. One small moon, Phoebe, travels in a retrograde orbit. It is believed to be a captured asteroid. Two of the moons, Epimetheus and Janus, swap orbits about every 4 years.

Saturn's complex ring system consist of thousands of narrow concentric ringlets. They are only a little over half a mile thick and are made up of many separate rocks, chunks of ice and particles that range in size from dust to house-sized boulders.

Ages of Man

The Greek poet Hesoid in his Works and Days (written in the 8th century B.C.) reported five "ages." He claimed that four of them were experienced by mankind and that each age was a time period of uncertain duration that existed under a different god. According to Hesoid, the first god was Ouranos, the starry sky. Then Ouranos was replaced by Kronos (Saturn) who presided over a golden age until replaced by his son Zeus (Jupiter, also known to Romans as Jove). Hesoid wrote this about the ages of mankind:

"The golden age was first; But when good Saturn, banish'd from above, Silver Age Was driv'n to Hell, the world was under Jove.

"Succeeding times a silver age behold, Excelling brass, but more excell'd by gold. Then summer, autumn, winter did appear: And spring was but a season of the year. The sun his annual course obliquely made, Good days contracted, and enlarg'd the bad. Then air with sultry heats began to glow; The wings of winds were clogg'd with ice and snow; And shivering mortals, into houses driv'n, Sought shelter from th' inclemency of Heav'n. . .

"To this came next in course, the brazen age: Brazen Age A warlike offspring, prompt to bloody rage, Not impious yet... The Hard steel succeeded then: Iron Age And stubborn as the metal, were the men. Truth, modesty, and shame, the world forsook: Fraud, avarice, and force, their places took. Then sails were spread. . ."

Several hundred years later Herodotus addressed Hesoid's notion of planets being gods in human form by repeating what Egyptian priests told him about four different ages:

"So, in eleven thousand three hundred and forty years, said the priests, there had never been a god in man-shape; nor, moreover, neither beforetime nor thereafter, among the rest of those who became kings of Egypt, had any such thing happened.

During this time, they said, there were four times when the sun rose out of his wonted place---twice rising where now he sets, and twice setting where now he rises---and, say the priests, nothing became different among the Egyptians, for all these disturbances, neither products of the Earth nor products of the river, nor yet in respect of diseases or death." 1

If Egyptian priests who made the above statement to Herodotus were correct, the sun "twice rising where now he sets, and twice setting where now he rises" would probably have been the cause of new Ages of Man each time these changes occurred.

Golden Age

Saturnalia, which honored Saturn, was one of early Rome's most important festivals. The Roman poet Ovid said Saturn was king of a "Golden Age" in the time of Arcadians who lived on Earth before Jupiter was born, and are of a race that "predates the moon." 2 Ovid also wrote of that time:

"The earth gave forth all good things of her own accord, and mankind, content with foods created without labor, picked the fruit of the trees and the mountain strawberries and the cornel cherries and the mulberries clinging to the wild thickets and acorns that fell from the spreading oak of Jupiter.

"Spring was eternal, and the gentle breezes caressed the flowers, all springing forth without seed, with clear warm air. Soon, also, the unplowed earth was rich with grain, and fields always fertile, were white with the heavy beards of corn.

Then rivers of milk, then streams of nectar flowed forth . . ." 3

Ancient Egyptians frequently referred to a Golden Age by the name of Zep Tepi, 'The First Time' of Osiris (the constellation known to us as Orion). They believed Zep Tepi had long predated the Pyramid Age. 4 Egyptians also referred to it as the "Age of Ra." 5

Romans and Egyptians were not the only peoples who had a memory of a Golden Age. Greek tradition also recalls the prosperous epoch of the god Kronos (Saturn); they believed it was a time when the whole world enjoyed peace and plenty. Chinese referred to it as the Age of "Perfect Virtue;" 6 Hindus had a Golden Age called "Satya yuga" or perfect age; 7

Generally, the Golden Age was thought of as a timeless epoch before the arrival of discord and war, and before a "linkage" of heaven with Earth was broken. Most of those early cultures also connected the Golden Age with the rule of a Universal Monarch: the Akkadian Anu, the Sumerian An, the Hindu Yama, the Persian Yima, the Norse Frodhi, the Chinese Huang-ti and the Mexican Quetzalcoatl. All of these are claimed to be founding kings, often as the first in what those peoples believed was an unbroken line of rulers.

The Greek poet Hesiod in his Works and Days (written in the 8th century B.C.) gave a further account of mankind's lot in the Golden Age:

"...They lived like gods without any care in their hearts, free and apart from labor and misery. Nor was the terror of old age upon them, but always with youthful hands and feet they took their delight in festive pleasures apart from all evil; and they died as if going to sleep. Every good thing was theirs to enjoy: the grain-giving earth produced her fruits spontaneously, abundantly, freely; and they in complete satisfaction lived off their fields without any cares in blessed abundance..."

Hesiod's story is similar to the biblical tale of paradise, a time and place where no labor was required to obtain the blessings of an abundant life.

Much in Golden Age accounts is almost beyond belief. For instance, all Golden Age traditions maintain that it was a time of eternal spring. But that would have been possible only if Earth's axis was nearly perpendicular to its plane of rotation. Ovid implied this was the case when he wrote "Then summer, autumn, winter did appear: And spring was but a season of the year. The sun his annual course obliquely made..." 8 (Apparently Ovid's intent was to say that the sun's annual course was not "obliquely made" during the Golden Age.) If true, that would explain why there were no seasons.)

Just when the Golden Age ended is unknown. One clue comes from a recent discovery by researchers from the University of Georgia who studied fish bones left by ancient peoples in Peru. The researchers reported in Science Magazine that the bones showed very little ocean temperature variation during the fishes' lifetime. 9 This indicates that El Nino, the periodic warming of Pacific Ocean waters that affects worldwide weather, began less than 6,000 years ago. If that's true, then perhaps seasons also began after that time. By the way, the word 'seasons' derives from the word 'sowing' which in turn comes from a word for Saturn.

Mythology

Planets appeared in mythology all around the world when they first became identified as gods sometime after the Golden Age's close. Memories of the Golden Age do not include notions about any planet other than Saturn, but in mythology Saturn is father of the gods, the most important of whom are now known to be members of the solar system. This section describes beliefs held by early Romans and Greeks of the same period.

Mythology apparently was first consigned to text early in the first millennium B.C. - Herodotus, who lived from about 485 to 425 B.C., indicated this when he wrote:

"I believe that Homer and Hesiod were four hundred years before my time---and no more than that. It is they who created for the Greeks their theogony; 10 it is they who gave to the gods the special names for their descent from their ancestors and divided among them their honors, their arts, and their shapes." 11

For Romans, Saturn was the god of sowing and reaping. They thought he brought agriculture, prosperity and abundance. 12 Saturn's festival, the Saturnalia, was the worship of Saturn—and oddly the Sun—to which Saturn is equated in various guises and many countries. 13 Saturnalia was held in Rome every December beginning at the time of the winter solstice.

Ancient Romans identified the Greek God Zeus with Jupiter and the Greek Kronos with Saturn. Originally an ancient Roman god of agriculture, Saturn was much later identified with the Greek god CRONUS. They believed he fled to Italy after Zeus dethroned him from being ruler of the universe. They thought Saturn then settled on Rome's Capitoline Hill and taught the people agriculture and other arts of civilization. In his temple in Rome, the feet of Saturn were bound in chains all year long as a symbol of his defeat by Jove. The chains were removed during Saturnalia, the celebration of a hoped-for return of the Golden Age.

Saturn was identified with Chronos (or Chronus) who was both the Greek god of harvest and the personification of time. Its root is used in "chronology" and other modern words. Chronos is always capitalized, which in ancient Greek signifies a proper noun such as a person. But Saturn was also compared with the Greek Cronus, a much later figure, who was the father of Zeus and his siblings. They were Olympian Gods. Because Chronos and Cronus are words that sound alike, there is much confusion as to with which Saturn is identified.

When the name Chronos is used, it is in relation to his role as father of the HORAE who are regarded as time within the day rather than seasons or years. But an ancient Greek word for spring---kronos---is clearly derived from Kronos.

In Greek, the spelling of these two words is identical except for their first letter. Chronos begins with the letter chi and Cronus begins with the letter kappa. For this reason, Cronus is often referred to as "Kronos" in English.

Perhaps because of a similarity between the Greek names of Chronos and Cronus, Saturn is often represented as being Time itself. To make this even more confusing there's also a greek word "Cronus," meaning "crow". These three words are often connected. Whether this is because they sound similar or because they have similar roots isn't known.

Catastrophism

Catastrophism is a term used to describe the belief that our solar system has changed in significant ways during the time of man, and that some of these changes resulted in dramatic effects upon Earth and other planets. Several organizations are now exploring these notions.

The Kronia Group, 15 which does research in interdisciplinary investigations of planetary history and cosmic catastrophe, holds the view that Saturn was once seen as a huge stationary body in the sky.

The Society for Interdisciplinary Studies 16 (SIS) is a UK-based organization with worldwide membership. They have brought together people from a wide variety of backgrounds and interests including ancient history, archaeoastronomy, archaeology, astronomy, biblical studies, cosmology, evolution, geology, geomagnetism, mythology, palaeontology, physics and psychology as well as catastrophism. Many of those areas of interest are referred to in an informative and scholarly SIS web page, The Revision of Ancient History. 17

Cosmos & Chronos 18 is also an interdisciplinary research organization. They investigate mythology as it is related to ancient global catastrophes, the effects on chronology of various ancient cultures, possible orbital changes of planets and electrical effects in the solar system and universe. Chronos, as pointed out in the Mythology section of this page, is a name associated with Saturn.

Astral Religions and Planetary Gods 19 is a web page with links to many sites that elaborate on Saturn's role in Catastrophism.

In Quantavolution and Catastrophe 20 Alfred de Grazia proposes that changes in living beings occur largely as the result of catastrophic events and that these events originate in the skies from forces that are electrical in nature.

On Wal Thornhill's Holoscience 21 web site he claims that "The Electric Universe takes a simplifying leap by unifying the nuclear forces, magnetism and gravity as manifestations of a near instantaneous electrostatic force."

Astronomy & Cosmology in Collision with Reality 22 makes the claim that "There is a revolution taking place today in astronomy and cosmology that will rival the one set off by Galileo." It too supports the notion of an electric universe.

In the sci.lang Newsgroup a prominent catastrophist recently suggested that Saturn is responsible for the word for "night" in several languages. 23 Here's part of that posting:

In Hebrew, the word for "night" is "lail," which word seems to be composed of the words "la El," or "lo El," which translate as "no El." So also in Arabic, in which language the word for "night" is "leyla," composed of "le Eyl," that is "no El." In Maltese, "night" is "lejl," in which the "j" is pronounced "y," and which also translates as "le El," that is "no El." Given that El is one of the most ancient Near Eastern names for Saturn, the term in question can also be translated as "no Saturn."

But, in European languages, the word for "night" seems to translate as "no eight." This can be seen in the following languages:

English: no eight = night.

French: non huit = nuit.

German: nein acht = nacht.

Italian: non otto = notte

Spanish: non oche = noche.

Saturn was frequently depicted in rock art as an eight-pointed star. (See graphics below.) Perhaps ancient peoples thought of Saturn as representing eight.

Father Time

Saturn has been known as father time for at least the past three thousand years. According to Ovid:

An ancient story has it that when this land was called Saturn's, the oracle of Jupiter spoke like this: "For the Old Man with the Sickle, pick out and toss in two of your people's carcasses for the Tiber to take." 24

Ovid also wrote:

"And the ship? A ship brought the god with the sickle to the Tiber after he'd wandered all over the world. I will remember when this land welcomed Saturn after Jove banished him from the heavenly kingdom. For a long time the name 'Saturnian' stuck to the people, and Latium was named for the lately evicted god. Following generations duly minted pennies with a ship to commemorate the divine stranger's arrival." 25

A footnote to the above passage states: "In translating latente deo, I have taken liberties to preserve the etymology of 'Latium.' Literally, the phrase means from the god in hiding."

Shown above is an imaginative rendition of Saturn as a hooded, cloaked figure bearing a scythe in his guise as Father Time.

THE LUCIFER PROJECT

<http://rinf.com/news/nov05/lucifer-project.html>

Non est ad astra mollis e terries via.—There is no easy way from the earth to the stars. Seneca

This is a documentation and study of the feasibility of creating a sustainable fusion reaction from an initial fission reaction on Saturn caused by a significant quantity of Plutonium-238 being inserted deep into the atmosphere. A fusion-ignited Saturn-sun would be the key to creating a human-habitable area on Titan. This report is the result of my intensive research on this subject since late 2002. I could not be so confident in my assertions if it were not for the additional key research of Jacco van der Worp, a Netherlands physicist, and former NASA Consultant, Richard C. Hoagland. I am sure I will be accused of being an alarmist, but I believe the information presented here will convince any open mind that there is at least some suspicious activity regarding NASA's Galileo and Cassini missions.

There are a few people in the world, who with endless imagination and creativity in union with massive resources and high technology have been playing “God” and secretly experimenting with changing the makeup of our solar system. There are not too many plans conceived that could be greater than creating a new star in our own backyard. One could almost claim godship upon success. Although at first I considered hiding what I knew so that the plan would go forward with full success, in the end my conscience overcame this desire since I knew there could be dangerous Earth implications for such a plan. Also keeping something this large a secret would be like finding a massive buried treasure while deep-sea diving and then never returning or telling anyone about it. (I still find myself wavering back and forth between wanting to see this spectacular plan unfold and not wanting it to happen knowing the potential consequences). I first stumbled onto the reality of this project while reading a famous conspiracy book entitled “Behold A Pale Horse” by William Cooper, former U.S. Naval Security Briefing Team member. Most people who came across Cooper's short account (only a couple paragraphs) immediately discounted it, afterall, creating a star with a plutonium bomb sounds somewhat incredible at first, but this idea captured my imagination and completely fascinated me. I kept asking myself, “Why discount this?” With advanced knowledge and technology, I could see how some great minds would start to think about doing once impossible things. The more I checked into the facts, the more I became convinced that Cooper did not just make this up out of the blue. Too many coinciding events that he had predicted started manifesting themselves for it all to be just a tale. I could not keep quiet anymore about the plan despite my appreciation of the deep science, creativity, and innovation that made it possible. Also, despite the long odds of the event occurring, I felt compelled to warn the public because of the potential danger from the cast-off of matter that normally occurs in a star's ignition. I will also make a case that there is a great deal of ritualistic symbology associated with the timing of this event, symbology that has strong ties to Freemasonry (old and new). I ask the reader to consider this scenario first: If a handful of the world's greatest scientists were hired and paid top dollar by an organization with great wealth to solve a nearly impossible scientific problem and were allowed to work on it full time for years or even decades, do you think they would have a good shot at solving the problem, assuming they had the latest and greatest technology at their fingertips and were allowed to work in secrecy? My personal answer to this is “Yes, I believe they would have a very good chance!” One needs only to know the story of the “Manhattan Project” to see this.

The logic of the Lucifer Project other than the extreme thrill of creating something so amazing, if not of sinister intent, could be that in order for humans to one day break out of this shell of Earth we must create more favorable conditions for traveling within our own solar system. For instance, could humans one day live on Titan? Maybe, but how do we warm it up? We play the part of creator and conduct solar system terraforming on a grand scale by turning Saturn into a small star that supplies Titan with the heat and light it needs to awaken. Turning one of our gas giants, like Saturn, into a star is the essence of the "Lucifer Project."

"The goal of fusion is in effect, to produce and hold a small star. It is a daunting and tedious research which is considered to be the most advanced in the world." 2

Star: A self-luminous, gaseous, celestial body of great mass which produces energy by means of nuclear fusion reactions, whose shape is usually spheroidal, and whose size may be as small as Earth or as large as Earth's orbit.³

The Cassini spacecraft is currently orbiting Saturn, but is likely to be sent into Saturn July of 2008. This report was written with the assumption that NASA will end Cassini's mission the same way they ended Galileo's by plunging it into the planet. The polar orbits that are currently scheduled allow an impact with Saturn on July 7 and approximately every week thereafter. The Cassini project is to be concluded no sooner than July 1. The Cassini Spacecraft is powered by two different means, its thrust propellant, used for trajectory adjustments, and its main power supply for running instruments. The latter is ²³⁸Pu, or Plutonium-238. This ²³⁸Pu is what is known as a radioisotope, or radioactive isotope, which becomes physically hot from its own radioactive decay. This heat is converted into electricity by a thermoelectric converter. At time of takeoff the spacecraft contained more than 72 lbs. of Plutonium-238 dioxide fuel within (216) 1 inch diameter x 1-1/2 inch long cylindrical pellets. Each pellet has about 1/3 lb. of plutonium dioxide fuel, most of which is plutonium-238 and a small amount being oxygen by mass. In addition, there are some minor amounts of ²³⁸Pu for other heater areas. The pellets are divided into three even groups of 72, each group within one RTG (Radioisotope Thermo-electric Generator).⁴

NASA has crashed a plutonium-carrying RTG into a similar atmosphere before which may have resulted in an explosion the size of Earth's diameter near the equator of Jupiter as observed by many and imaged by Olivier Meeckers of Belgium on October 19, 2003. Space.com carried the story "Mystery Spot on Jupiter Baffles Astronomers."⁵ The craft, Galileo, entered into Jupiter near its equator very close to where the "mystery spot" later developed (Diagram A). It is possible that if the explosion were larger or deeper, Jupiter could have reached ignition. The fact remains that a very suspicious bruise appeared on Jupiter 28 days after Galileo made its plunge there. It is important to mention that it is rare for a comet or meteor to impact Jupiter at the equator so it is unlikely this was the cause.

Saturn, like Jupiter and our Sun, is mostly composed of hydrogen and helium, in various gas, liquid, and metallic forms. The inner core may be composed of a somewhat solid rocky material. The average density of Saturn is only .7 g/cm³ (water is 1.0), but the pressure in the atmosphere and below is very intense. Towards the core of Saturn it is estimated the pressure could be millions of times that of Earth at sea level. Saturn's atmosphere consists of about 97 percent hydrogen and 3 percent helium by volume and about 80/20 by mass.⁶ If Saturn had been 200 times more massive, it might have evolved into a star rather than a planet. Our solar system could have been a binary star system (more easily with Jupiter, of course). Besides hydrogen and helium, small amounts of methane, ammonia, and water vapor, and various hydrocarbons have been detected in Saturn's atmosphere. Saturn has similar relative abundance of hydrogen and helium to the Sun itself. However, its core temperature is too low a value to trigger nuclear fusion.

I propose the magic trigger has been sought after and found! The Trigger IMPORTANT: The Shoemaker-Levy 9 (SL-9) comet event created enormous explosions, but no fissionable material was present to cause a nuclear reaction so the explosion temperatures (at max-7000°C) were not high enough to cause a fusion reaction.

The plutonium fuel cylinders in the RTG's of Cassini (Diagram B) may act as Implosion Weapons and a fission "trigger" that may result directly in a fusion reaction that may be sustainable. In essence, a gas giant may be turned into a star in this way. A report in September, 2003 by physicist Jacco van der Worp of the Netherlands entitled "Could NASA Use Galileo to Create a Jovian Nagasaki", states the same concerning Galileo's plutonium at Jupiter: "Theoretically the avalanche reaction described for the Pu-238 pellets aboard Galileo can take place setting off an implosion-induced nuclear detonation."⁷ Implosion Weapon: A weapon in which a quantity of fissionable material, less than a critical mass at ordinary pressure, has its volume suddenly reduced by compression, so that it becomes supercritical, producing a nuclear explosion. ⁸

"Indeed, nuclear fission chain reactions may provide the ignition temperature to set off thermonuclear reactions in stars (analogous to ignition of thermonuclear bombs)."⁹

Diagram B—Cassini Fuel Cylinder (216 on board) -- Makeshift Implosion Bomb ?

While ²³⁸Pu is fissionable, it has been advertised as not fissile, or in other words this would mean it can produce a fission reaction that is difficult to sustain, but a 1962 test proved reactor grade plutonium (Pu-238 and Pu-240) to be fissile:

"The Department of Energy is providing additional information related to a 1962 underground nuclear test at the Nevada Test Site that used reactor-grade plutonium in the nuclear explosive.

Specifically: -A successful test was conducted in 1962, which used reactor-grade plutonium in the nuclear explosive in place of weapon-grade [Pu-239] plutonium. -The yield was less than 20 kilotons.

Background: This test was conducted to obtain nuclear design information concerning the feasibility of using reactor-grade plutonium as the nuclear explosive material. -The test confirmed that reactor-grade plutonium could be used to make a nuclear explosive. This fact was declassified in July 1977. ... In short it would be quite possible for a potential proliferator to make a nuclear explosive from reactor-grade plutonium using a simple design that would be assured of having a yield in the range of one to a few kilotons, and more using an advanced design."¹⁰

In addition to this, a study conducted in part by Richard L. Garwin, a former JASON Group member, noted that all plutonium isotopes, even Pu-238 up to 80% purity, must be considered bomb making material. Garwin was involved in this study as well as other JASON Group studies, some of which can be accessed on the web at the references provided at the end of this report. 27 28

The Nuclear Control Institute (NCI) stated that reactor-grade plutonium could be more desirable for a simple bomb because it eliminates the need to use a neutron initiator.¹¹ Also note the following in a report entitled "Plutonium-238, Use, Origin and Properties": "If Pu-238 sits in the reactor long enough, it will absorb a neutron and become Pu-239 fuel."¹² Of course, Pu-239 is very fissile, in fact, it is the key component of most nuclear bombs. Since Cassini was launched in 1997, we know that its Pu-238 will have been sitting in the RTG reactors for more than 10 years by July 2008, maybe longer if the fuel cells were created beforehand. In an analysis of whether the fuel cylinders contain fissionable as well as fissile elements, we have to conclude that it is very possible.

It has already been well demonstrated that a fission reaction can be sufficient to ignite a fusion reaction (i.e. the Hydrogen Bomb). A fission reaction generates high enough temperatures (high enough equals about 35 million degrees Kelvin) to reach the critical point required for a fusion reaction. This, however, does not necessarily mean a fusion reaction will occur. The right elements (various isotopes of hydrogen) must be present or created, so it is assumed. We do know Saturn is mostly composed of the same elements as the Sun, hydrogen and helium, but we are unsure if fusion and fission reactions would work exactly the same on Saturn as on Earth. However, conventional belief says Deuterium and Tritium (isotopes of Hydrogen) are necessary to accomplish fusion. Both are likely present deeper into Saturn. What is important to remember is the tremendous pressures inside Saturn are the key here when talking about implosion.

We do know that implosion is what will occur to the fuel cylinders at some point in the impact. If the final implosion collapse of a cylinder happens suddenly enough, it could simulate an explosive-initiated implosion, the method normally used in a plutonium nuclear bomb. As mentioned earlier there is prior imaged evidence of an explosion from Galileo's plutonium on Jupiter. An analysis by Richard C. Hoagland "Did NASA Accidentally 'Nuke' Jupiter?" states the same concerning a nuclear reaction on Jupiter: "It is this unique, dark 'carbon' signature – appearing as a dark black 'splotch' in the highest levels of the Jovian cloud belts which has given this entire, incredible scenario away"¹³

Cassini is carrying 1.5 times the amount of plutonium dioxide (72 lbs) that Galileo was carrying (48 lbs) and Saturn's mass is 30% of Jupiter's mass. 48 is to 3.333 as 72 is to 1 translates into around 5 times the effective plutonium when the planet's masses are figured in.

The plutonium pellets aboard are protected against unexpected pressures (not Saturn's atmospheric pressures though). The upper crust of Saturn's atmosphere is gaseous hydrogen and helium for about 500 miles in, followed by a more liquid substance of the two, and much further in (about half the radius), a more metallic version (so it is guessed). Cassini would go from 1/2 bar to 5 bars in just a few seconds upon entry into Saturn and then explode and burn up at which point its RTG's, containing the Pu cylinders, will continue on. Eventually the RTG casings will deteriorate but the plutonium pellets will continue on, each having their own little heat shield of iridium and graphite, and start dramatically slowing down as the higher density atmosphere is encountered. It may take several days for the pellets to reach the point at which they implode. All that is required for fission from implosion to occur is for the final collapse of one of the graphite/iridium shells around one plutonium capsule to happen suddenly enough to prevent a fizzle, (a fizzle is a reaction that turns it into a dud). Since there are 216 separate cylinders, there are many chances to achieve a proper implosion and if one proper implosion occurs, it will act as a catalyst for others by showering them with neutrons as all of the cylinders will likely stay within 10's of miles of each other. Each cylinder by itself will eventually reach the pressure point within Saturn to go critical if they are not spoiled somehow by then. The fuel cylinders would travel deep into Saturn, much more than the rest of the craft because they are designed to withstand extremely intense heat and pressure. They were designed this way in order to keep them intact in case of an accident upon launch and subsequent earth-atmosphere re-entry (also Cassini did a couple of Earth swing-bys for acceleration).

Some members of the various agencies involved with Galileo and Cassini surely have considered the potential of a plutonium ignition and there is also evidence to suggest that a reaction is what is secretly hoped for, at least by a few. It was stated by William Cooper, (former United States Naval Intelligence briefing member in the early 70's) that an elite group known as the "JASON Group", or certain members of, had been hired full time to work on turning Jupiter into a small star. The "JASON Group" is comprised of the greatest science minds in the world.¹⁴ The Richard L. Garwin reports mentioned earlier further prove that the JASON Group does indeed exist.

Saturn is much like Jupiter in composition and is actually a safer and more realistic target. Titan may be the big the big prize, being one of the few bodies in the solar system to potentially contain a significant amount of water and an atmosphere that could be very terraformable. Titan could be thawed out substantially with Saturn as its sun.

Cassini's orbit is scheduled to decay in July of 2008. Similar to Galileo's plunge into Jupiter on September 21 2003, Cassini will most likely be plunged into Saturn with the exception that Cassini will likely go into the polar region of Saturn.¹⁵

In an Saturn ignition Earth would receive a miniscule amount of solar heating from a Saturn star, but brightness could be 100's of times what Saturn is now. Around July/August 2008, the distance is about 10 AU or 1,500,000,000 km from Earth. More importantly though, Earth could receive a nasty shower of hot hydrogen a few weeks later, the real reason for concern.

In summary, most of the cylinders will survive the initial impact with Saturn's upper atmosphere, because they are designed to do that, they have been successfully tested at an impact pressure of 19,600 PSI and higher than that for non-impact pressure.¹⁶ Each cylinder has a heat shield that can withstand temperatures in excess of 6400° F. The notion that Pu-238 cannot be fissile is very much in error, at least when talking about Saturn/Jupiter conditions. I will use Jacco van der Worp's analysis and also remind the reader of the declassified 1962 test mentioned earlier. Pu-238 has a normalized reactivity of 1.1 and a spontaneous fission rate of 3440 neutrons per gram per second. This results in critical mass under normal conditions at 200 grams (this is why the cylinders are kept at 151 grams or 1/3 lb to avoid critical in Cassini). The cylinders will keep falling and may wander apart or stay together when the craft burns up - it doesn't matter much because each cylinder will eventually reach critical on its own when the pressure builds enough in the fall into Saturn. Even if the cylinders wander apart, each one that is still intact will be ignited by a shower of neutrons from any cylinder that ignites. Around ¼ of the plutonium may fission because the surrounding Saturn pressure will maximize the results. With 72 lbs (32.7 kg) of plutonium this is equivalent to a 600 kiloton explosion. In comparison, the Nagasaki explosion used 7 kilograms, 1.2kg of which went into fission and caused a 22 kiloton explosion. This Saturn explosion would create temperatures of around 100,000,000° K because of the high density at the point of detonation. Even the sun's interior is not that hot (only 30,000,000° K). This is way above the threshold for fusion to start. Saturn is similar in content to the sun and the same ingredients can produce the same result: ignition of the entire body of dense hydrogen.⁷

Regenerating, Recovering, and Creating Atmospheres

Our atmosphere is constantly regenerating to restore itself to the "normal" state. There have been traumatic periods, of course, when the atmosphere was under stress from the outside and from within, but the Earth has always recovered. Although a Saturn barrage could be deadly for a short time on Earth, a full recovery could take place in a matter of months.

"On Earth, geological boundaries are accompanied by mass extinctions at five epochs over the last billion years. Two of the most intense of these, the P/T boundary about 250 Mya, and the K/T boundary (and the extinction of dinosaurs) at 65 Mya, are the most likely to be associated with the damage to Earth's biosphere expected from a major planet explosion."⁹

"[On Earth] The ozone layer's condition fluctuates between poor and excellent and the size of the holes measured in the ozone layer also goes up and down. Theoretically, given the appropriate conditions, the ceasing of using fossil fuels as a major supply of energy and fuel and the banning of the use of motor vehicles which do not meet strict emissions standards, the ozone layer would "repair" itself. The hole in the ozone layer, given the right conditions [would] "heal up". It must be noted that natural events such as volcanic eruptions can also have a dramatic impact on the ozone layer. It is even thought that holes in the ozone layer existed long before mankind's industrial revolution."¹⁹

Titan, however, being at point blank range might require a few years to stabilize and its atmosphere and surface would dramatically change with Saturn as a sun. The dynamics could then exist for Titan's atmosphere to be transformed into a more "earthly" state by getting rid of the conditions that produce the thick smog. Titan could get a kick start going from primordial to recognizably earthlike within a few decades with proper seeding and terraforming supplied by Earth. As this report is being written, data is being interpreted from the Huygens probe on Titan and the first images returned of Titan's surface remind us of earthly coastlines with swampy deltas, although the muddy look may be due to liquid methane or pools of complex hydrocarbons.

"Visible light cannot escape from the veil of orange smog that covers Titan's surface. The moon's dry cold atmosphere causes a 300 km thick layer of smog to build up. The smog, just like on Earth, forms when sunlight interacts with hydrocarbon molecules."¹⁸

"Titan's atmosphere, a murky mix of nitrogen, methane and argon, resembles Earth's more than 3.8 billion years ago. Scientists think the moon may shed light on how life began. Finding living organisms, however, is a remote possibility. 'It is not out of the question, but it is certainly not the first place I would look,' said Candice Hansen, a scientist for the Cassini-Huygens mission. 'It's really very cold'. A lack of sunlight has put Titan into a deep-freeze, hindering chemical reactions needed for organic life." 17

"Thus, while many of Earth's familiar geophysical processes occur on Titan, the chemistry involved is quite different. Instead of liquid water, Titan has liquid methane. Instead of silicate rocks, Titan has frozen water ice. Instead of dirt, Titan has hydrocarbon particles settling out of the atmosphere, and instead of lava, Titanian volcanoes spew very cold ice." 26

If the temperature were raised significantly at Titan, it would begin to more closely resemble an early Earth. The liquid methane (CH₄) would turn to methane gas and precipitated carbon, the dirty ice (H₂O) would turn to carbon, water, water vapor, and oxygen, nitrogen and argon are present, and hydrogen would also be very available, of course. Earth's atmosphere is 78% Nitrogen, 21% Oxygen, and 1% Argon, Methane, Water Vapor, Carbon dioxide, Hydrogen and several other gases. The evaporated methane previously on the surface of Titan would be replaced by water from melted ice.

A Bit About Lucifer

Magister mundi sum! - I am master of the universe!

Why is creating a star from one of our gaseous giants commonly known as the "Lucifer Project"? The potential star's name was first dubbed "Lucifer" by A.C. Clarke in his novel "2010". Lucifer is less of an actual deity and more of a concept representative of several ideas here. Lucifer, literally "light-bearer", represents rebellion, claiming god-ship, bringing enlightenment, and mastering knowledge. Lucifer is a symbol of casting off the overlord and trusting the light from within, the concept of breaking out of the subservient shell of "God's dominion" and claiming the universe as one's own to conquer. 20 21 In general, the Luciferian message could be:

"I am tired of worshipping a fairy-tale 'God' and leaving the future to the whim of idiots and fanatics. I will take the reins of the world into my own hands and guide it as I wish, as I may, as other will allow me to. I will set myself as a god. With the advantage of superior knowledge and the latest technology at my fingertips, I will rule as I see just. You may claim godship also and join me, or try to create the world in your own image. All you need to do is realize that you are also worthy and then attain the knowledge I have gained. If you will not realize and accept that you are a godlike creator then I have no pity for you and I will continue to dominate you until you come into the light."

As related to a Saturn Ignition, the message could be: "Let's see if we can ignite something really big, like a planet! Let's see if any 'god' stops us! We will be recognized as gods within our own circles if we succeed!" "Luciferian "spirituality" doesn't rely on stripping man of his nature, but rather embraces his nature and his potential (godhood)." 21

"I [Lucifer] am the flame that burns in every heart of man, and in the core of every star. I am Life, and the giver of Life, yet therefore is the knowledge of me the knowledge of death..." -Aleister Crowley, The Book of the Law. 21

Ancient Egyptian and Freemasonry Connections – Why Rho LEO in Virgo?

This section is a bit esoteric and delves into the possible symbolic reasons for trying to ignite Saturn as well as the possible effects on Earth. There are several similarities between the two missions Galileo and Cassini: 1) both have similar plutonium payloads (Cassini, much more), 2) both scenarios have moon candidates that could be new earths (Europa, Titan), 3) both will have impacted into a gaseous giant with conditions that will allow a nuclear detonation, 4) both crafts will have impacted while crossing under Leo's front nearly above Rho LEO (Diagram C). This last one we will discuss more in detail now.

This location in the sky, very near Rho LEO is in the tropical zodiac location VIRGO, despite being in the actual constellation of LEO. This particular star, Rho LEO, lies just below the ecliptic, (the general path of the planets). I suggest there may be a ritual of some sort going on here. Right Ascension 10.5 seems to be significant, (LEO is centered on RA 11, the 11th hour of the zodiac). The Greek letter Rho ρ is used as a variable for density calculations, and also a word to denote power as in Sigma-Iota-Rho (Prudence-Ideals-Power, the motto of Rhodes scholars), and Rho is synonymous with "Romi" which means Rome in Greek. The constellation LEO is also known to be one of power and kingship. Both impacts have been timed to occur while the planets in question are directly above Rho LEO, very near 10.5 Right Ascension. I propose that the significance here is three-fold. First of all, Rho LEO is referred to as the "lion's right paw". The "Lion's Paw" in freemasonry has great importance as in the Hiram Abif allegory. In this story Solomon uses the Master Mason's "Grip of the Lion's Paw" to resurrect Hiram from the dead, which is symbolic of Hiram shedding his old life and waking up anew in his new understanding of the world, a baptism of sorts. This story is used in the initiation of Masonic members when they achieve the higher levels of Freemasonry. The story also echoes similar characteristics of the Osiris resurrection story of ancient Egypt. Many Freemasonry rituals are said to have origin in the ancient mystery religions of Egypt. Ancient hieroglyphs of Egypt feature a lion holding a symbol of some sort, possibly a planet, in his right hand over a prone body which is about to be resurrected "from a dead level to a living perpendicular."²² This is part of the origin of the Hiram story.

Secondly, the right paw of the lion is symbolic of the right paw of the Sphinx in Giza, where it is highly rumored that a vault, or network of vaults was discovered in the late 1990's, but its contents not yet disclosed. A famous prophet from the mid-1900's with a relatively high percentage of accuracy by the name of Edgar Cayce, said the "Hall of Records" would be discovered under the paw in the late 1990's, but would not be revealed to the world until "the time was right". The "Hall of Records" was to finally reveal to humanity their origins. I propose that the "right time" for this vault to be opened will be when NASA successfully ignites Jupiter, Saturn, or Neptune, while they are in the correct position of the sky, namely Rho Leo. This will clue the elitists to the fact that the time is soon for the final "baptism" of the Earth. At this point Earth will have less than a month to prepare for the likely ejecta from Saturn that would come after an ignition. Those who will figure it out in time and those "in the know" will have underground areas to go to for protection for at least 3 or 4 weeks during the shower, maybe more. The ejecta of Saturn may strip part of Earth's ozone layer for a period of time leaving it defenseless against the shower as well as other cosmic ray bombardments. After a substantial wait, the bunker people could return to the surface to find the damage or "new reality" of Earth. What is odd is that this is also symbolic of dying and being buried under the ground, and then resurrected anew. In the 3 or 4 week wait time that it will take for Saturn's cast-off to arrive at Earth, I propose that many amazing secrets will be revealed concerning our human origins, secrets brought up from the vaults of the Sphinx. Cayce also remarks that after the "Hall of Records" is revealed, Earth will suffer a major cataclysm. The puzzle fits together all too closely with Freemasons within NASA intentionally selecting a very specific location in the sky TWICE so far. I must conclude that the location is very symbolic and that symbol IS the LION'S PAW.

Thirdly, there are also Isis overtones here as the location in the sky is known at this time as tropical VIRGO, the great mother. Isis was the sister/wife of Osiris and mother of Horus. Isis (Aset) is synonymous with VIRGO. VIRGO has also been associated with various other ancient goddesses. Taking this one step further I see yet another analogy: The Great Mother (Isis), having her egg (Saturn), fertilized by the craft (Cassini), after a significant wait (days to weeks), bears a great child (Horus/Osiris resurrected from the dead in the form of an amazing new star).

The Plutonium-lad Iridium/Graphite Cylinder - like the Monolith, the Alchemists' Stone of Astronomical and Earthly Transformation

Another factor to consider is Hoagland's assertion that Galileo's plutonium started an explosion 10's of miles wide and as the gas bubble from the explosion neared the surface of Jupiter 700 miles later, it had expanded to 1000's of miles in diameter.¹³ Let's look at an expanding bubble in Saturn. The cylinders are better built now, the density of the atmosphere compared to Jupiter is much less, and the pressure in Saturn doesn't increase nearly as dramatically as in Jupiter. This will allow the cylinders higher speed and much deeper drops before imploding:

Assume 10's of lbs of Pu isotopes ignite initially into a gas bubble sphere that is 50 miles in diameter 25% of the way to the center of Saturn, or 8500 miles into the polar area. Even if fusion does not start, this intensely hot gas bubble races to the surface at 1000 mph expanding rapidly to 100 times its current diameter the first 1000 miles increasing its size to 5000 miles diameter. The bubble continues to expand now but the rate of expansion is reined in for the rest of the trip. By the time the bubble reaches the surface it has slowed down dramatically but the diameter has increased to around 20,000 miles. Imagine taking a big spoon the shape of half of a sphere and 20,000 miles in diameter and scooping it out of the top of Saturn. This is the shape and size that would be affected in the most extreme scenario. About 1-2% of the volume of Saturn could be rapidly shoved aside or blown out. (Diagram D)

Diagram D - A Spoonful of Saturn

An A.C. Clarke/S. Kubrick "2010"-style progression of Saturn collapsing in on itself. (Sci-fi?)

1. Displacement of volume. 2. Thrust follows to fill back in from all sides and from below. 3. General rush from all sides as a building avalanche of matter falling inwards to aid in replacement. 4. Further inward fall unstoppable, fusion heat builds. 5. Critical is reached and Saturn ignites.

What will this blowout cause? Even if fusion doesn't start by initial fission heat, will Saturn begin to collapse in on itself having 1-2% of its volume suddenly displaced? I see several parallels here to the "2001", "2010" novels/movies. Just before Jupiter ignites, a large cavity is seen increasing inside Jupiter (blowout cavity), it seems millions of black monoliths have converged in one area to cause this (iridium/carbon-cased plutonium cylinders?). The cavity increases to the point that Jupiter begins to collapse in on itself creating a situation where internal pressure and heat inside the planet increases 100 fold, at which point Jupiter ignites into a star via internal fusion.²³ Is this yet another possibility for ignition other than straightforward fission heat resulting in fusion?

In "2010" the monolith was a catalyst and symbol of transformation of humankind to the next level of existence, somewhat of alchemists' stone for the human spirit. In a way, the black cylinders of Cassini seem to parallel this somewhat.

When Jupiter ignited in the novel "2010", an unrealistically tame shell of ionized hydrogen buffeted the spaceship on its way out into space, but depending on how much Saturn decides to shed (a rough estimate would be 10% of its mass)²⁴, the ejecta may be much stronger than that for a much longer time.

Praemonitus pramunitus—Forewarned, forearmed

While amazing and grand, no doubt, I also find the Lucifer Project callous in regard for the people of Earth unless there is a more profound plan at work here that is beyond my knowledge. I have to conclude that the creators know the repercussions of a successful ignition of Saturn. This ignition can also be used as a religious tool, a "sign from the heavens", possibly to give cause to ordain a great leader on Earth. If people are unaware of the artificial nature of the ignition they may be fooled by the claims. I still believe this event to be unlikely to happen despite the depth of research that I have committed to it. Regardless, my intention was to raise awareness on the subject so that in the event of an ignition, we would not be caught blindsided and would know the truth of how the star came to be.

Conspiratorial theory and timeline of events (speculations and wild conjectures are italicized)

1945 (July)-- we ignite our first atom bomb

1950 -- a team is assembled to study how this new technology can be used to create a star. Some of the world's best scientists work on it secretly. This group is the "JASON Group" within the "JASON Society", a think tank of geniuses that work full time to solve many major science problems.

1968 – Arthur C. Clarke promotes the "Lucifer Project" in books and movies entitled 2001 and 2010, using Saturn initially, but is later told to use Jupiter. (Once something spectacular occurs in a movie, it takes on a non-real possibility) 1972 – William Cooper sees or hears of the "Lucifer Project" during his time with the U.S. Naval Intelligence Briefing Team. 1983 – An unnamed craft or "lost" craft is secretly sent on a course to nudge a comet currently on a near collision course with Jupiter to a direct collision course with Jupiter. 1989 – Galileo is launched with two secret missions: 1) Collect information about the interior of gas giants using data from an upcoming comet collision with Jupiter (SL-9). 2) Impact Jupiter to ignite it, or if that fails, to collect more information about the interior by igniting as far beneath the atmosphere as possible, thereby bringing the interior to the surface. 1990 – William Cooper exposes the reality of the "Lucifer Project" in his book "Behold, A Pale Horse". 1991 – Galileo's main antenna supposedly deploys incorrectly. In reality, the antenna is fine and is being used to send the prime data to a few elite "higher-ups".

1994 – Someone "in the know" helps Shoemaker spot the comet and the proper viewing is set up with Hubble and Galileo, etc. The high quality Galileo-SL-9 imagery and data is kept from the general public. 1994 – Data collected from the SL-9 collision is used to tweak the specifications of the Cassini RTG setup in order to improve the odds of a Saturn ignition.

1997 – Shoemaker is killed in a car crash in Australia. I am not aware of any evidence of foul play. 1997- Cassini is launched for Saturn with a tremendous load of Pu-238 dioxide (72 lbs!), many times the amount actually needed to run the craft's instruments. 2003 – NASA scientists decide to plunge Galileo into Jupiter after claiming there is no other logical option after initially implying that the craft would be sent to deep space, crashed into a moon, or left in orbit. 2003 (July) Geographer, J.C. Goliathan publishes a report stating that a nuclear reaction is slightly possible if Galileo goes into Jupiter. 25 2003 (early Sept) Physicist, Jacco van der Worp publishes a report warning of what could happen if Galileo plunges into Jupiter citing Goliathan's report and actually crunching the numbers to prove it. Jacco sites the low probability, but believes the risk is high enough to warrant a warning. 2003 (Sept. 21) Galileo dives into Jupiter at the equator. As was likely expected, nothing happens. Then 4 weeks later: 2003 (Oct. 19) Olivier Meeckers images a "mystery spot" the size of Earth with a streak trailing away near the equator of Jupiter. All other professional telescopes ignore the spot! 2003 (late Oct.) Richard C. Hoagland publishes a report detailing the entire amazing scenario showing that the "mystery spot" is most likely Galileo's plutonium that had drifted down 700 miles into Jupiter at 1 mph for most of the trip! 2004- Cassini arrives at Saturn to study the system. The start of attempt #2. 2005 (early) - Cassini-launched Huygens probe studies Titan in depth revealing its primordial earthlike attributes.

2008 (early July to late July) – Cassini plunges into a polar region of Saturn in order to increase acceleration of gravity before impact (Saturn is very oblate). This will give the pellets a head start and a much greater penetration depth than if the equator were used. Also the polar region is less likely to have a storm brewing. A few days later, or maybe weeks later, the plutonium pellets reach crush depth and implode 15-25% of the way to the center of Saturn and igniting it entirely into a star. NASA does not have to officially deny responsibility because the question is never asked of them "Did Cassini cause this?" just as they were never questioned about the mystery Jupiter spot at the point where Galileo went in. The trick has been all along how to get the pellets in deep enough for a significant disturbance to occur. Saturn allows this with much less density than Jupiter and less of a radius to start with especially going into Saturn at its pole where the radius is 10% less than Saturn at the equator. Jupiter may have been a hopeful first try and more of a test or precursor to Saturn. Even A.C. Clarke and Stanley Kubrick originally envisioned Saturn as the best candidate. Another thing to note is that a Saturn ignition is much safer for Earth than a Jupiter ignition as far as ejecta disturbing our atmosphere. The amount of ionized hydrogen that reaches us from Saturn will be a fraction of that from a Jupiter ignition, but still risky . I estimate the mass of ionized hydrogen intercepted by the Earth to average .015 kg/m²/day for every square meter of the Earth for about two weeks and traveling at high speeds. During the last couple days heavier elements will reach the Earth in smaller quantities. 2008 (late July) – The new star is named, possibly Lucifer, or a derivative of that. The “sign from the heavens” is used to ordain a great world leader, or a leader who had just taken power prior to the event.

2008 (Jul/Aug/Sept) – After a few weeks of 24/7 talk of the implications, causes, effects, etc. of the new star, Earth begins to get showered with the ejecta from Saturn. The shower lasts 2 to 3 weeks and includes some heavier elements towards the end. This directly or indirectly kills millions of people and animals on Earth - a great boost for population control. Those “in the know” hide out in underground cities and bunkers for several weeks to several months until Earth's ozone shell has recovered. 2009 – The new world reality sets in. After coping with the effects of the event, the survivors find that having a second sun is novel. Earth is completely changed, all infrastructures, political structures, and religions are thrust into chaos. The strongest surviving military force soon takes control of the Earth. 2010 – A call goes up to investigate and explore the new system of Saturn/Titan. 365/24/7 time and unlimited resources go into the new international venture. Terraforming plans start on a grand scale.

2033 - Humans set foot on an earthlike Titan.

Giovanni Domenico Cassini

<http://www-groups.dcs.st-and.ac.uk/~histor...es/Cassini.html>

Born: 8 June 1625 in Perinaldo, Republic of Genoa (now Italy)

Died: 14 Sept 1712 in Paris, France

The first thing we should clarify in this biography is Giovanni Cassini's name. He was given the name Giovanni Domenico by his parents, Jacopo Cassini and Julia Crovesi, after his birth in Italy. However he also used the name Gian Domenico Cassini, and after he moved to France, he changed his name to the French version of Jean-Dominique Cassini. To add just one more comment to the question of his name, he was the first of the famous Cassini family of astronomers and as such is often known as Cassini I.

We know little of his parents but certainly his father was a Tuscan. In fact Giovanni was brought up, not by his parents but by an uncle, a brother of his mother Julia Crovesi. After spending two years being educated at Vallebone, Cassini entered the Jesuit College at Genoa where he studied under Casselli. After this he studied at the abbey of San Fructuoso. Taton writes [1]:-

He showed great intellectual curiosity and was especially interested in poetry, mathematics and astronomy.

His first interest, however, was in astrology rather than astronomy. He read widely on this topic and soon was very knowledgeable, yet was convinced that there was no truth in astrological predictions. It was, rather strangely, his extensive knowledge of astrology that led to his first appointment. In 1644 the Marquis Cornelio Malvasia, who was a senator from Bologna with a great interest in astrology, invited Cassini to Bologna. He offered him a position in the Panzano Observatory which he was constructing at that time.

From 1648 Cassini observed at the Panzano Observatory with instruments which he had purchased with financial resources from the Marquis Malvasia. This was an important time for Cassini who learnt much from the outstanding Jesuit scientists Giovanni Battista Riccioli and Francesco Maria Grimaldi (who later discovered diffraction). In 1650, Cassini became professor of mathematics and astronomy at the University of Bologna, filling the chair which had been vacant since the death of Cavalieri at the end of November 1647. This appointment came about through the support of the Marquis Malvasia whose important position in Bologna gave him considerable influence in naming Cavalieri's successor.

Cassini observed a comet in 1652-3 and he published an account of his observations which he dedicated to the Duke of Modena. From the work we can see that at this time Cassini believed in an Earth centred solar system, with comets beyond Saturn but originating from the Earth. Observations would lead him to accept the model of the solar system proposed by Tycho Brahe and, in 1659, he presented an Earth centred system with the moon and sun orbiting the Earth and the other planets orbiting the sun. Later he came to accept a version of the Copernican model.

One of Cassini's predecessor's as professor of mathematics and astronomy at Bologna had been Egnatio Danti who had been appointed in 1576. Danti had built a gnomon at the Church of San Petronio in Bologna, one of the largest Christian churches ever built. A small hole allowed the rays of the sun to enter the church. They formed a small image on a scale on the floor which allowed the position of the sun to be accurately determined. The church of San Petronio had mostly been built between 1445 and 1525, but work continued on extending it and not long before Cassini arrived in Bologna further building work had made Danti's gnomon unusable [1]:-

In 1653, Cassini, wishing to employ such an instrument, sketched a plan for a new and larger [gnomon] but one which would be difficult to build. His calculations were precise; the construction succeeded perfectly; and its success made Cassini a brilliant reputation.

He made many important observations with his new gnomon which he published in Specimen observationum Bononiensium ... (1656), a work he dedicated to Queen Christina of Sweden who was in exile in Italy at this time.

His expertise, however, covered many areas other than astronomy. He was an expert in hydraulics and engineering and as such was consulted regarding the dispute of 1657 between Bologna and Ferrara on the course of the River Reno. The dispute was settled by Pope Alexander VII with advice from Cassini and for several years after this he was regularly consulted by the Papal Court as an expert on river management. He wrote treatises on this aspect of his work, in particular on the flooding of the river Po. He was also employed by the Pope in 1663 as superintendent of fortifications, then he travelled to Rome again in 1665 when he was named Superintendent of the waters of the ecclesiastical states.

The Pope asked Cassini to take Holy Orders for he wished to see him permanently working for him. However, Cassini preferred to keep his post as professor of mathematics and astronomy at Bologna where he taught when not undertaking Papal duties. He continued with his research in astronomy, proposing a model for atmospheric refraction which turned out to be incorrect, making an intensive study of the sun, publishing tables in 1662, and continuing to search for comets. In 1664 he observed a comet which led him to propose a new theory that comets travelled in circular orbits around the sun with the centre of the orbit in the direction of the star Sirius.

Beginning in 1664 Cassini was able to observe with new powerful telescopes made by the excellent lens maker Giuseppe Campani of Rome. With these instruments Cassini made a series of new discoveries. In July 1664 he measured the period of rotation of Jupiter on its axis, discovered the bands and spots on the planet, and saw that the planet was flattened at its poles. In 1666 he measured the period of rotation of Mars on its axis, getting a value within three minutes of the correct one, and observed surface features. He published detailed series of observations of the moons of Jupiter in 1668. Cassini discovered discrepancies in his data which at first he attributed to light having a finite speed:-

... light takes some time to come from the satellite to us; and it takes approximately ten or eleven minutes to traverse a distance equal to the semi-diameter of the Earth's orbit.

However, Cassini was too traditional in his views to accept his own idea, and he soon rejected it and looked for other explanation for the discrepancy. It is rather ironical that it was Cassini's data that was used by Römer in calculating the speed of light seven years later.

Cassini's brilliant discoveries gave him an international reputation and led to him being invited to Paris by Louis XIV in 1668. The construction of the Paris Observatory had just begun and Cassini was offered a generous salary, free accommodation, and a good travel allowance to oversee the project. The senate of Bologna and Pope Clement IX agreed to the trip which they believed would be a short one of at most two years. However Cassini was immediately involved in the work of the Académie des Sciences although at this stage he made little attempt to settle down and improve his French as he still fully intended a quick return to his duties in Italy. After he became head of the Paris Observatory in 1671, he soon changed his views on returning to Italy and became a French citizen two years later, changing his name to Jean-Dominique Cassini. In 1674 he married Geneviève de Laistre who was the daughter of the lieutenant general of the compté of Clermont. On their marriage Geneviève brought with her a dowry which included the Château de Thury in the Oise which became the Cassini summer residence for succeeding generations of the family. There were two sons from this marriage, the younger one Jacques Cassini being born in 1677 and eventually succeeding to his father's position as head of the Paris Observatory.

At the Paris Observatory Cassini continued to make revolutionary discoveries, as he had done in Italy, using a telescope he had brought with him. He was the first to observe four of Saturn's moons: Iapetus (1671), Rhea (1672), Tethys (1684), and Dione (1684). He discovered the gap in the ring system of Saturn now known as the Cassini division in 1675. Impressively he correctly proposed that the rings were composed of large numbers of tiny satellites each orbiting the planet. He drew a large Chart of the Moon, which he presented to the Académie des Sciences in 1679. This remained the best that was available prior to the invention of photography for astronomical purposes.

Cassini's tables of Jupiter's moons were used to determine longitudes by providing a universal time with which to compare the local time at various positions on the Earth. While French expeditions measured the longitudes of numerous places, Cassini remained in Paris coordinating their data and making his own measurements. In 1672 Jean Richer made measurements of Mars from Cayenne, French Guyana, while Jean Picard and Cassini made measurements in Paris. From their data the first accurate value of the solar parallax was found, giving the distance from the Earth to the sun. Another measurement made by Jean Richer, namely that a pendulum with a period of one second is shorter in Cayenne than Paris, led him to explain this by suggesting that the Earth was flattened at the poles. This supported theoretical proposals by Newton and Huygens, but Cassini did not accept Jean Richer's explanation. He sought another experiment to determine whether the Earth was a perfect sphere.

In order to determine the shape of the Earth, Cassini proposed measuring an arc of the meridian from the north of France to the south. The project was begun in 1683 with Cassini making measurements from Paris towards the south, while Philippe de La Hire began making measurements north from Paris. The project was cancelled for financial reasons in 1684 when Cassini had reached Bourges, which is almost exactly in the centre of France.

In 1695 Cassini travelled in Italy. He took his eighteen year old son Jacques Cassini with him and they made numerous geodesic observations, as well as returning to Bologna where they repaired the gnomon at the Church of San Petronio in Bologna which Cassini had designed nearly thirty years before. In 1700 the meridian project was revived and now, in addition to a number of other scientists, Cassini had his son Jacques to assist him. They made measurements of the meridian from Paris to Perpignan, which is 13 km west of the Mediterranean coast. He obtained results which wrongly suggested that the Earth was elongated at the poles. As someone who rejected Newton's theory of gravitation, this result was rather pleasing since Newton's theory led him to a theoretical proof that the Earth would be flattened at the poles. However, having observed the flattening of Jupiter at its poles, it is surprising that he should have been such a strong advocate of the elongation of the Earth.

In 1680 he studied the Cassinian curve which is the locus of a point the product of whose distances from two fixed foci is constant. He worked on this as part of a study of the relative motions of the Earth and the sun and proposed this as the curve for planetary orbits rather than the ellipse as proposed by Kepler. The lemniscate of Jacob Bernoulli is a member of the Cassinian curves but this was not realised for 100 years.

From around 1709 Jacques Cassini gradually took over his father's duties as head of the Paris Observatory. Cassini's health began to deteriorate, in particular his eyesight became poor so that by 1711 he was nearly completely blind. Fontenelle [4] says that Cassini's calm and gentle character, coming from a deeply religious belief, allowed him to bear nearly total blindness with good cheer.

Taton gives this assessment of Cassini in [1]:-

Judgements on Cassini's work vary greatly. While many historians, following Delambre, accuse him of having found his best ideas in the writings of his predecessors and of having oriented French astronomy in an authoritarian and retrograde direction, others insist on the importance of his work as observer and organiser of the research at the Observatory. Although Cassini's control did restrict the Observatory's studies and although he did fight against most of the new theories, his behaviour does not seem as uniformly tyrannical and baleful as Delambre described it. He was not a theoretician; he was, however, a gifted observer and his indisputable discoveries are sufficient to win him a high position among the astronomers of the pre-Newtonian generation.

Title: Eric Phelps Defending the Jews

CRAIG-OXLEY - May 29, 2007 11:35 PM (GMT)

Dear Brethren and Friends,

As the Pope's "Holy Roman" Fourteenth Amendment, Socialist-Communist, Corporate-Fascist, CFR-directed American Empire is about to become another Nazi-fascist monster in league with Rome's Masonic leaders of Islam, I have made a personal decision that may not sit well with many of you.

Remembering the great novel Ivanhoe authored by Presbyterian Calvinist Sir Walter Scott, I am reminded of the climax of that most delightful work with honorable Ivanhoe dueling with the wicked Knight Templar Brian DeBois Gilbert who was responsible for the arrest of the beautiful and chaste Rebecca the Jewess. Accused of witchcraft and about to be burned at the stake, it was the White Gentile Ivanhoe who came to her rescue "as a matter of honor," slew the Templar and secured the Jewess' release.

Well, the Jesuits are now the new Knights Templars about to accuse the Jews of North America of "witchcraft," a charge of which they are, as a body, not guilty. That charge may range from the JFK assassination (via Arlen Specter and Jack Ruby) or 911 (Larry Silverstein) or even the war in Iraq (CFR/Paul Wolfowitz). The Order "has many strings to its bow" which to "play," but rest assured the accusation will surely come and Rome's Masonic Jewish Labor Zionists ruling Rome's "Kingdom of Jerusalem" will play an active part.

This well-planned event will be intended to incite the American peoples to persecute the resident North American Jews, all six and a half million of them. There are over twelve millions of foreign Moslems who have been purposely settled in the major cities with the largest Jewish concentrations ready to be used as "the sword of the Pope's Church." What was done in Europe during the 20th century via the fascists of Roman Catholic Spain, Roman Catholic Bavarian Germany and Roman Catholic Italy will surely be attempted here in predominately Roman Catholic North America in the 21st century. The alternative radio pundits are nearly all, to the man, anti-Jew. The major CFR-controlled media is not yet openly anti-Jew, but its masters in the CFR are in dead earnest about fulfilling the Jesuit Oath with their brother Bonesmen, and thus bent upon a merciless and bloody Jewish roundup to culminate in a systematic elimination of whom the scripture calls "the holy seed."

When that day arrives the time for speaking and writing will be over for me. As a White Gentile Anglo-Saxon-Celtic Baptist Calvinist, I must now apply the principles of the Word of God in defense of the Lord's beloved Hebrew/Jewish/Israelitic people yet to inherit the promise given to Abraham---and David. The Bible is clear in Ephesians 2:11-13. I was once an "alien from the commonwealth of Israel," but through Messiah Jesus I have been "made night by the blood of Christ" to that commonwealth. Romans 11:30 is clear; I have obtained mercy from God through their national unbelief. Therefore I OWE THE JEW a defense, not because of their ungodly religion, BUT BECAUSE OF THEIR RACE. This debt will be paid by giving them physical protection, solicited or unsolicited, during their coming persecution. By protection I mean setting out to attack and kill without mercy their murderers. I mean total war against these Jesuit-ruled monsters, going to mortal combat only, taking no prisnors---as did the Dutch sailors known as the "Wild Beggars of the Sea"---in protecting the Lord's physical brethren who will one day look upon the One whom "they pierced." The glorious death the Lord shall bless me with in protecting his racial brethren will be rewarded at the judgment seat of Christ in accordance with Genesis 12:1-3. One thing is for sure: I will never stand before the Son of God---that promised Seed of David who loved me and personally died for my sins as though he committed every one of them---ashamed of not protecting his elect nation, the Jewish people.

When the Department of Homeland Security, ruled by Georgetown Jesuits such as SMOM/CFR member John C. Gannon, is rounding up the Jews for shipping to North American Auschwitz in Alaska, every one of those servants of Rome will be a legitimate target for execution "by any means necessary." That holds true for every and any other government agency or foreign national military force who dares to defile my land with the blood of innocent Jews. There is a time for WAR according to King Solomon. When that day arrives---and it most assuredly will, my heart will have been settled upon the fate that awaits me as a result of defending the Hebrew race of whom Almighty God warns in his Scripture of Truth:"

". . . for he that toucheth you toucheth the apple of his eye" (Zechariah 2:8).

Sincerely in Faith,

Brother Eric

The RCC/Jesuits hate the Jews with a purple passion.

I want to see Phelps's GENEALOGY and check if there isn't at least some distant ancestor that is Jewish, so I can see he doesn't have an axe to grind on that issue of always taking the Jews side. Then also having the nerve to say they're the Israelites of the bible.

The Papacy is one of the most ridden groups full of these same so-called jewish "converts". He talks about the jews dna being holy, well during the inquisition days many jews just decided to convert and become catholic priests. It is an oxymoron to say these jewish converts are anti-jewish when they're the same people themselves, probably just staging it all, and the conspiracy has a turn Phelps never took into consideration. Why hasn't he considered that aspect? Why doesn't he preach it? Maybe he is one also himself promoting it all as well? I will have to confirm by seeing his genealogy, but then again as JESUS said the prosolytes the jews get such as Phelps (supposedly) can be TWOFOLD the child of hell than a so-called Jew:

Mat 23:15 "Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye compass sea and land to make one proselyte, and when he is made, ye make him twofold more the child of hell than yourselves."

Truth Sets Free: You don't think the church replaced the Jews, do you?

The Jews were set aside temporarily. We're in the Church Age now. Hear of those 70 weeks in the book of Daniel? The Tribulation is Week 70, during which time the focus will be back on the Jews. It's also known as Jacob's Trouble.

Of course there are racial Jews around today. 144,000 of them will be sealed during the Tribulation (see the book of Revelation).

Truth Sets Free: You don't think the church replaced the Jews, do you?

The Jews were set aside temporarily. We're in the Church Age now. Hear of those 70 weeks in the book of Daniel? The Tribulation is Week 70, during which time the focus will be back on the Jews. It's also known as Jacob's Trouble.

Of course there are racial Jews around today. 144,000 of them will be sealed during the Tribulation (see the book of Revelation).

That's a different subject we've talked about before sorta off my point but I'll cover. Jews are the abomination of desolation, and 99% of their ancestors were NEVER ISRAELITES, they who say they are jews are liars (rev 2:9, and 3:9).

Israel is 12 tribes anyway, not one tribe Judah. The bible is always clear disciphring the difference between 12 tribes ISRAEL and THE 1 TRIBE JUDAH WHICH IS SEPARATE FROM THE OTHER NON-JUDAIC TRIBES OF ISRAEL. We should also use this biblical language, not mixing the house of Israel with the house of judah.

Even when God comes down to earth in the new age God will still be addressing Israel and Judah as two completely separate houses: Hebrews 8:8 says this clearly, as well as Jer. 33:7; Jer. 33:14.

True TWELVE TRIBED - NON-Judaic Israel would be known as only a blessing, not a curse like the 1 tribe Judah:

Genesis 18:18 "Seeing that Abraham shall become a great and mighty nation, and all the nations of the earth shall bless themselves by him?"

Genesis 22:18 "and by your descendants shall all the nations of the earth bless themselves*, because you have obeyed my voice."

(If you think Arabs fulfilled that, think again, since the bible says in both old and new testaments "in ISAAC shall thy seed be called" NOT IN ISHMAEL or the arabs.)

Who are the people that have foreigners come and HELP THEMSELVES, like the prophecy says; or who do they come to BLESS THEMSELVES from? Millions of Immigrants from the third world flood into all the European White-Israelite nations every year to BLESS THEMSELVES and help themselves to the abundance we Abraham's Seedline have made by the graces of God to ISRAELITES of the seedline of ISAAC, not of Ashkenazi Japhethite-jews who aren't even of the line of Shem, so can never call themselves semitic, and never claim to, their own talmud and all encyclopedias written by them admit this that they're Khazars, NOT descended from the Israel of the bible.

Jer. 31:35 Thus saith THE LORD, which giveth the sun for a light by day, and the ordinances of the moon and of the stars for a light by night, which divideth the sea when the waves thereof roar; THE LORD of hosts is his name: If those ordinances depart from before me, saith THE LORD, then the seed of Israel also shall cease from being a nation before me for ever."

Well your false definition of Israel ceased from being a Nation in 40AD, and disappeared until 1947 so there's no way they could be Israelites. Read "the marks of Israel" (hundreds of marks of who the Israelites are in the bible, and jews fulfill ZERO, Anglo Saxons 100%), this is to really biblically see who's who, not by the corporate media, but by biblical standards, not replacement, when they always were Israel. If you say the non-semitic Japhethite Khazar Ashkenazi Canaanites & Edomites "REPLACED" the true seed of Israel, the seed of Isaac, you're the one preachin replacement theology honey.

Don't confuse STATE of Israel with NATION of Israel. The nation of Israel is simply the descendants of Jacob (Israel). That's why the seven-year Tribulation is called JACOB'S Trouble.

It says in Revelation that 12,000 from twelve tribes will be sealed for a total of 144,000 (something the JW's totally screw up). That will be during the Tribulation...and they'll be kept in a place of safety. People who convert will be known as the tribulation saints... and a lot of them will be beheaded for not taking the mark of the Beast. So you'll have Tribulation saints and the sealed Jews.

The Jews are STILL God's chosen race either way...they've just been set aside for the duration of the Church Age, which is the time period from Pentecost to the Rapture.

I want PHELP'S GENEALOGY to see if he really has an axe to grind having jewish ancestry, as asked for in my previous post.

This is all so off topic Alexandra, now it's all about the Rapture doctrine? A big part of those who believe in Jesus as savior do not believe in the rapture doctrine.

Alexandra, Hey feel free to wait for the supposed "secret rapture" to mystically remove all Christians, so we all "disappear" instantly for 7 years supposedly. The bible only says we will meet Jesus Christ in the air; that doesn't mean we will say goodbye while He is on His way to earth for judgement.

You say "jews" are still the chosen race, well wait a minute, I thought you belived in KING JAMES VERSION? There are no scriptures IN KING JAMES VERSION that called jews the chosen race, only the other 11 non-judaic tribes of the separate house of Israel, NOT of the house of Judah, were called chosen. Even the birthright and promises were given to the two sons of Joseph for the tribes of Ephraim & Manasseh who are coincidentally also of the northern seprate house of Israel, not the southern kingdom of Judah. Tribes of Dan and Ruben are even more chosen than Judah, biblically speaking.

Isa 65:15 "And ye shall leave your name for a curse unto my chosen: for the Lord GOD shall slay thee, and call his servants by another name:"

This scripture you must take literal. They would no longer be called Jew/Judah or Israel, but everyone will call them collectively by a new and different name, the true seed would be that is (yet Jesus and the apostles had no problem calling the western nations the literal seed of Israel, it's just for the most part the world would call them by a new name. for 2,000 years the Western Chrstian nations have been called by one name CHRISTENDOM or Christians, that NEW NAME prophesied of the Israel people) . Only the false/counterfeit seed calls themselves Jews (Revelation 2:9 and 3:9). Jesus called those who claim to be of the house of JUDAH, not of the chosen seed many times, because they were already heavily an Edomite Canaanite people, this is the bible and history, only 40,000 ever returned to palestine out of 50 million who left in 600-500BC, they had a new babylonian anti-bible talmud, and the MAcabeeans forced the rest of the edomites and canaanites by law to CONVERT to this new form of false judaism or die, around 100BC. That is why Jesus called them all counterfeit, and not of the seed of Judah, and especially not of the separate non-judaic house of Israel either.

How is Eric defending the Jews from being pushed into the clutches of Zionism?

You cannot defend "Jews" from anti-semitism and at the same time, call them 'superior' and NOT expect to drive them straight into the clutches of evil Zionists!

There was no Holocaust needed for Hitler to have accomplished his goals in Middle-Europe, as the main attack was on the social 3-fold nature of spiritual Christianity! But of course, there was also anti-Jewish culture in Germany.

You raise a good point. How can King James bible believers think those from the houses of judah are chosen when there is no verse saying so? As for your questions, Eric Phelps' wife has some hebrew blood.

I thought Sammy Davis Jr. was Jewish. Is he the same race as Olmert?

What about that blue eyed Jewish announcer on TV?

Jews can't be a race because they have married outside their group and allow converts. Not as many converts as other religions, but over the centuries it adds up.

I certainly don't think those ones dropping bombs on the Palestinians and producing porn films in Hollywood are Gods people. You need to live by Gods commandments.

You know what God promises to you if you are Jewish but you don't keep all the commandment?

Read Deuteronomy 28. Never before have you heard, and never again will you hear a more profound cursing!

Exactly. The Hebrew Israelites and their Nazarene brothers were never called "JEWS" at the time of Moses. The people of Judea were not only the Israelites.

If I were petty, then I'd claim that I'm also a "Semite" and I am entitled to "ISRAEL" in that my ancestors were also connected to the English, or the people of the 10 Northern Tribes of ISRAEL! The Judean people of Moses are merely the 2 Southern Tribes.

But I will not dare claim the people of Jacob (ISRAEL) are CHOSEN!

Not to mention, what is ISRAEL?

Certainly, it's not a land!

So many issues that expose this as all nonsense but I guess we'll just have to hear more of it until the Zionist mindset returns to the grave where it belongs.

Edgar - May 30, 2007 11:47 PM (GMT)

Sammy Davis Jr was a convert to Judaism at some point. he was also a member of the church of Satan. Also, biblically the Jews have a lot of special promises. Especially in the last days. In Revelation it speaks of 144,000 racial Jews who are going to realize who their Messiah was and is. Tony Alamo brings out a lot of the prophecies in the Bible about the Jews in this writing:

When the Bible is read in the materialistic manner as it is often read today, it actually becomes sinister and a form of Evil, extending futher than mere BS could.

It only pushes people away from the true essence of Christ's message. I would not blame a black, or Indian or oriental person for wondering why he would want to follow Christ when he's being told by Pastors and experts that Christ promotes "race superiority".

Look what Paul says in Romans 11:1:

I say then, Hath God cast away his people? God forbid. For I also am an Israelite, of the seed of Abraham, of the tribe of Benjamin.

Look at verse 11:

I say then, Have they [the Jews] stumbled that they should fall? God forbid: but rather through their fall salvation is come unto the Gentiles, for to provoke them to jealousy.

Basically salvation is offered to the Gentiles to make the Jews jealous, since they have a history of rejecting God. The Tribulation will be God dealing with the Jews--and it won't be a pretty sight. It's the time of JACOB'S trouble, not the church's, so the church will have to be taken out of the way.

The Jewish person's task now is to assimilate back into the cradle of humanity. Whether they be of Jewish religion or of Semitic blood is besides the point today.

Christ said they were not the people of Moses even though he acknowledged that they were of the Seed of Abraham. So this racial mixture also included the Edomites and the Nazarenes, and even the people of Ishmael, before Islam.

Israel is something "spiritual" - not racial and not a land. The Jesuit-Zionist deception claim race superiority to rule over us. No-one could dare test their blood anyhow but they still use this to their own advantage.

Christ even goes further than the seed of Abraham when He spoke clearly of: "Neither Israelite, nor Gentile"

This means even black people, Indian people and Oriental peoples also.

All "ONE" Cradle of humanity.

Can Eric find Jesus quoting racial supremacy before or after the fulfillment of the Laws?
No!

Alexandra - May 31, 2007 01:58 AM (GMT)

Jesus wouldn't have anything to do with the Samaritan woman (they were half-Jew)...
He said that He came for the lost sheep of the house of Israel.

If the Jews had accepted Christ, there wouldn't have been a Church Age as we are in now. That goes back to what Paul said in Romans 11:11.

The Jews are God's chosen, that's all there is to it. I'm a Gentile and I have no problem with that...but I'm a Christian because Jesus Christ died for my sins. He paid the price in my stead. Pretty good deal, I say!

I could convert to Judaism tomorrow, right? (I believe in God/spirituality, but don't adhere to any religion)

Wasn't there tons of "Gentiles" who converted to Judaism in the 17th, 18th century in order to be able to work in the financial sector?

In Eastern Europe and Russia? Who now claim to be racial Jews?

I dunno, but I strongly disagree with Phelpsman on certain things, cuz he's VERY religious. And that's just fine of course.

But his stance on State of Israel, that the Arabs are rightfully removed cuz the area belongs to "God's chosen people", is ridiculous imho.

Also that he believes in geocentricity, that the sun revolves around Earth.

But I couldn't care less, I still love him for his brilliant research on the Order.

And if he's gonna go on some murder spree killing lots of Jesuit henchmen, fine!

Personally, I believe Jehova was a volcanogod to begin with :lol:

Daniel - May 31, 2007 02:17 AM (GMT)

Alex,

First, we don't "have" souls - we ARE souls: "And God breathed the breathe of life into his nostrils, and man became a living soul."

As human beings, with physical bodies, we also have "consciousness", which is _of_ the body - we wouldn't have this without the body it relates to.

Who we ARE is the one that can say, "I HAVE a body. I HAVE a mind or a consciousness. I HAVE a capacity of heart or of spiritual expression."

If we are to consider the Jews "chosen" over any other race, than do we not also assume that the "quality applied" to a black man's Soul cannot be loved by God as much as the "quality applied" to the Israelites' Soul.

The Essen Nazarenes accepted the Israelites as their closet brothers and sisters, yet the Israelites hated the Nazaranes because the Nazarenes followed a God of Love and not a cruel and vengefull God.

So who were more the more Chosen, the Vegetarian Nazarenes (who brought us Jesus) or the Israelites who demanded blood sacrifices to an evil God?

" And we shall call Him NAZARENE", Matt

On the Jews and Their Lies, 1543

Martin Luther (1483 - 1546) :rolleyes: :rolleyes:

<http://www.humanitas-international.org/sho...luther-jews.htm>

I had made up my mind to write no more either about the Jews or against them. But since I learned that those miserable and accursed people do not cease to lure to themselves even us, that is, the Christians, I have published this little book, so that I might be found among those who opposed such poisonous activities of the Jews and who warned the Christians to be on their guard against them. I would not have believed that a Christian could be duped by the Jews into taking their exile and wretchedness upon himself. However, the devil is the god of the world, and wherever God's word is absent he has an easy task, not only with the weak but also with the strong. May God help us. Amen.

Grace and peace in the Lord. Dear sir and good friend, I have received a treatise in which a Jew engages in dialog with a Christian. He dares to pervert the scriptural passages which we cite in testimony to our faith, concerning our Lord Christ and Mary his mother, and to interpret them quite differently. With this argument he thinks he can destroy the basis of our faith.

This is my reply to you and to him. It is not my purpose to quarrel with the Jews, nor to learn from them how they interpret or understand Scripture; I know all of that very well already. Much less do I propose to convert the Jews, for that is impossible. Those two excellent men, Lyra and Burgensis, together with others, truthfully described the Jews' vile interpretation for us two hundred and one hundred years ago respectively. Indeed they refuted it thoroughly. However, this was no help at all to the Jews, and they have grown steadily worse.

They have failed to learn any lesson from the terrible distress that has been theirs for over fourteen hundred years in exile. Nor can they obtain any end or definite terminus of this, as they suppose, by means of the vehement cries and laments to God. If these blows do not help, it is resonable to assume that our talking and explaining will help even less.

Therefore a Christian should be content and not argue with the Jews. But if you have to or want to talk with them, do not say any more than this: "Listen, Jew, are you aware that Jerusalem and your sovereignty, together with your temple and priesthood, have been destroyed for over 1,460 years?" For this year, which we Christians write as the year 1542 since the birth of Christ, is exactly 1,468 years, going on fifteen hundred years, since Vespasian and Titus destroyed Jerusalem and expelled the Jews from the city. Let the Jews bite on this nut and dispute this question as long as they wish.

For such ruthless wrath of God is sufficient evidence that they assuredly have erred and gone astray. Even a child can comprehend this. For one dare not regard God as so cruel that he would punish his own people so long, so terribly, so unmercifully, and in addition keep silent, comforting them neither with words nor with deeds, and fixing no time limit and no end to it. Who would have faith, hope, or love toward such a God? Therefore this work of wrath is proof that the Jews, surely rejected by God, are no longer his people, and neither is he any longer their God. This is in accord with Hosea 1:9, "Call his name Not my people, for you are not my people and I am not your God." Yes, unfortunately, this is their lot, truly a terrible one. They may interpret this as they will; we see the facts before our eyes, and these do not deceive us.

If there were but a spark of reason or understanding in them, they would surely say to themselves: "O Lord God, something has gone wrong with us. Our misery is too great, too long, too severe; God has forgotten us!" etc. To be sure, I am not a Jew, but I really do not like to contemplate God's awful wrath toward this people. It sends a shudder of fear through body and soul, for I ask, What will the eternal wrath of God in hell be like toward false Christians and all unbelievers? Well, let the Jews regard our Lord Jesus as they will. We behold the fulfillment of the words spoken by him in Luke 21:20: "But when you see Jerusalem surrounded by armies, then know that its desolation has come near ... for these are days of vengeance. For great distress shall be upon the earth and wrath upon this people.

In short, as has already been said, do not engage much in debate with Jews about the articles of our faith. From their youth they have been so nurtured with venom and rancor against our Lord that there is no hope until they reach the point where their misery finally makes them pliable and they are forced to confess that the Messiah has come, and that he is our Jesus. Until such a time it is much too early, yes, it is useless to argue with them about how God is triune, how he became man, and how Mary is the mother of God. No human reason nor any human heart will ever grant these things, much less the embittered, venomous, blind heart of the Jews. As has already been said, what God cannot reform with such cruel blows, we will be unable to change with words and works. Moses was unable to reform the Pharaoh by means of plagues, miracles, pleas, or threats; he had to let him drown in the sea.

Now, in order to strengthen our faith, we want to deal with a few crass follies of the Jews in their belief and their exegesis of the Scriptures, since they so maliciously revile our faith. If this should move any Jew to reform and repent, so much the better. We are now not talking with the Jews but about the Jews and their dealings, so that our Germans, too, might be informed.

There is one thing about which they boast and pride them selves beyond measure, and that is their descent from the foremost people on earth, from Abraham, Sarah, Isaac, Rebekah, Jacob, and from the twelve patriarchs, and thus from the holy people of Israel. St. Paul himself admits this when he says in Romans 9:5: Quorum patres, that is, "To them belong the patriarchs, and of their race is the Christ," etc. And Christ himself declares in John 4:22, "Salvation is from the Jews." Therefore they boast of being the noblest, yes, the only noble people on earth. In comparison with them and in their eyes we Gentiles (Goyim) are not human; in fact we hardly deserve to be considered poor worms by them. For we are not of that high and noble blood, lineage, birth, and descent. This is their argument, and indeed I think it is the greatest and strongest reason for their pride and boasting.

Therefore, God has to endure that in their synagogues, their prayers, songs, doctrines, and their whole life, they come and stand before him and plague him grievously (if I may speak of God in such a human fashion). Thus he must listen to their boasts and their praises to him for setting them apart from the Gentiles, for letting them be descended from the holy patriarchs, and for selecting them to be his holy and peculiar people, etc. And there is no limit and no end to this boasting about their descent and their physical birth from the fathers.

And to fill the measure of their raving, mad, and stupid folly, they boast and they thank God, in the first place, because they were created as human beings and not as animals; in the second place, because they are Israelites and not Goyim (Gentiles); in the third place because they were created as males and not as females. They did not learn such tomfoolery from Israel but from the Goyim. For history records that the Greek Plato daily accorded God such praise and thanksgiving—if such arrogance and blasphemy may be termed praise of God. This man, too, praised his gods for these three items: that he was a human being and not an animal; a male and not a female; a Greek and not a non-Greek or barbarian. This is a fool's boast, the gratitude of a barbarian who blasphemes God! Similarly, the Italians fancy themselves the only human beings; they imagine that all other people in the world are nonhumans, mere ducks or mice by comparison.

No one can take away from them their pride concerning their blood and their descent from Israel. In the Old Testament they lost many a battle in wars over this matter, though no Jew understands this. All the prophets censured them for it, for it betrays an arrogant, carnal presumption devoid of spirit and of faith. They were also slain and persecuted for this reason. St. John the Baptist took them to task severely because of it, saying, "Do not presume to say to yourselves, 'We have Abraham for our father'; for I tell you, God is able from these stones to raise up children to Abraham" [Matt. 3:9]. He did not call them Abraham's children but a "brood of vipers" [Matt. 3:7]. Oh, that was too insulting for the noble blood and race of Israel, and they declared, "He has a demon" [Matt. 11:18] Our Lord also calls them a "brood of vipers"; furthermore, in John' 3:39 he states: "If you were Abraham's children would do what Abraham did.... You are of your father the devil." It was intolerable to them to hear that they were not Abraham's but the devil's children, nor can they bear to hear this today. If they should surrender this boast and argument, their whole system which is built on it would topple and change.

"Why then do the Jews lie so shamefully before God in their prayer and preaching, as though circumcision were theirs alone, through which they were set apart from all other nations and thus they alone are God's holy people? They should really (if they were capable of it) be a bit ashamed before the Ishmaelites, the Edomites, and other nations when they consider that they were at all times a small nation, scarcely a handful of people in comparison with others who were also Abraham's seed and were also circumcised, and who indubitably transmitted such a command of their father Abraham to their descendants; and that the circumcision transmitted to the one son Isaac is rather insignificant when compared with the circumcision transmitted to Abraham's other sons. For Scripture records that Ishmael, Abraham's son, became a great nation, that he begot twelve princes, also that the six son of Keturah (Genesis 25:1), possessed much greater areas of land than Israel. And undoubtedly these observed the rite of circumcision handed down to them by their fathers.

Now since circumcision, as decreed by God in Genesis 17, is practiced by so many nations, beginning with Abraham (whose seed they all are the same as Isaac and Jacob), and since there is no difference in this regard between them and the children of Israel, what are the Jews really doing when they praise and thank God in their prayers for singling them out by circumcision from all other nations, for sanctifying them, and for making them his own people? This is what they are doing: they are blaspheming God and giving him the lie concerning his commandment and his words where he says (Genesis 17:12) that circumcision shall not be prescribed for Isaac and his descendants alone, but for all the seed of Abraham. The Jews have no favored position exalting them above Ishmael by reason of circumcision, or above Edom, Midian, Ephah, Epher, etc., all of whom are reckoned in Genesis as Abraham's seed. For they were all circumcised and made heirs of circumcision, the same as Israel.

Now, what does it benefit Ishmael that he is circumcised? What does it benefit Edom that he is circumcised — Edom who, moreover, is descended from Isaac, who was set apart, and not from Ishmael? What does it benefit Midian and his brothers, born of Keturah, that they are circumcised? They are, for all of that, not God's people; neither their descent from Abraham nor their circumcision, commanded by God, helps them. If circumcision does not help them in becoming God's people, how can it help the Jews. For it is one and the same circumcision, decreed by one and the same God, and there is one and the same father, flesh and blood or descent that is common to all. There is absolute equality; there is no difference, no distinction among them all so far as circumcision and birth are concerned.

Therefore it is not a clever and ingenious, but a clumsy, foolish, and stupid lie when the Jews boast of their circumcision before God, presuming that God should regard them graciously for that reason, though they should certainly know from Scripture that they are not the only race circumcised in compliance with God's decree, and that they cannot on that account be God's special people. Something more, different, and greater is necessary for that, since the Ishmaelites, the Edomites, the Midianites, and other descendants of Abraham may equally comfort themselves with this glory, even before God himself. For with regard to birth and circumcision these are, as already said, their equals.

Perhaps the Jews will declare that the Ishmaelites and Edomites, etc., do not observe the rite of circumcision as strictly as they do. In addition to cutting off the foreskin of a male child, the Jews force the skin back on the little penis and tear it open with sharp fingernails, as one reads in their books. Thus they cause extra ordinary pain to the child, without and against the command of God, so that the father, who should really be happy over the circumcision, stands there and weeps as his child's cries pierce his heart. We answer roundly that such an addendum is their own invention, yes, it was inspired by the accursed devil, and is in contradiction to God's command, since Moses says in Deuteronomy 4:2 and 12:32: "You shall not add to the word which I command you, nor take from it." With such a devilish supplement they ruin their circumcision, so that in the sight of God no other nation practices circumcision less than they, since with such wanton disobedience they append and practice this damnable supplement

Now let us see what Moses himself says about circumcision. In Deuteronomy 10:16 he says: "Circumcise therefore the foreskin of your heart, and be no longer stubborn," etc. Dear Moses, what do you mean? Does it not suffice that they are circumcised physically? They are set apart from all other nations by this holy circumcision and made a holy people of God. And you rebuke them for stubbornness against God? You belittle their holy circumcision? You revile the holy, circumcised people of God? You should venture to talk like that today in their synagogues! If there were not stones conveniently near, they would resort to mud and dirt to drive you from their midst, even if you were worth ten Moseses.

He also chides them in Leviticus 26:41, saying: 'If then their uncircumcised heart is humbled,' etc. Be careful, Moses! Do you know whom you are speaking to? You are talking to a noble, chosen, holy, circumcised people of God. And you dare to say that they have uncircumcised hearts? That is much worse than having a seven-times-uncircumcised flesh; for an uncircumcised heart can have no God. And to such the circumcision of the flesh is of no avail. Only a circumcised heart can produce a people of God, and it can do this even when physical circumcision is absent or is impossible, as it was for the children of Israel during their forty years in the wilderness.

Thus Jeremiah also takes them to task, saying in chapter 4:4: "Circumcise yourselves to the Lord, remove the foreskin of your hearts, O men of Judah and inhabitants of Jerusalem; lest my wrath go forth like fire, and burn with none to quench it. . . ." Jeremiah, you wretched heretic, you seducer and false prophet, how dare you tell that holy, circumcised people of God to circumcise themselves to the Lord? Do you mean to imply that they were hitherto circumcised physically to the devil, as if God did not esteem their holy, physical circumcision? And are you furthermore threatening them with God's wrath, as an eternal fire, if they do not circumcise their hearts? But they do not mention such circumcision of the heart in their prayer, nor do they praise or thank God for it with as much as a single letter. And you dare to invalidate their holy circumcision of the flesh, making it liable to God's wrath and the eternal fire? I advise you not to enter their synagogue; all devils might dismember and devour you there.

In Jeremiah 6:10 we read, further, "Their ears are uncircumcised, they cannot listen." Well, well, my dear Jeremiah, you are surely dealing roughly and inconsiderately with the noble, chosen, holy, circumcised people of God. Do you mean to say that such a holy nation has uncircumcised ears? And, what is far worse, that they are unable to hear? Is that not tantamount to saying that they are not God's people? For he who cannot hear or bear to hear God's word is not of God's people. And if they are not God's people, then they are the devil's people; and then neither circumcising nor skinning nor scraping will avail. For God's sake, Jeremiah, stop talking like that! How can you despise and condemn holy circumcision so horribly that you separate the chosen, circumcised, holy people from God and consign them to the devil as banished and damned? Do they not praise God for having set them apart through circumcision both from the devil and from all the other nations and for making them a holy and peculiar people? Yea, "He has spoken blasphemy! Crucify him, crucify him!"

In chapter 9:25 Jeremiah says further: "Behold, the days are coming, says the Lord, when I will punish all those who are circumcised but yet uncircumcised — Egypt, Judah, Edom, the sons of Ammon Moab, and all who dwell in the desert... for all these nations are uncircumcised, and all the house of Israel is uncircumcised in heart...."

In the face of this, what becomes of the arrogant boast of circumcision by reason of which the Jews claim to be a holy nation, set apart from other peoples? Here God's word lumps them together with the heathen and uncircumcised, and threatens the same visitation for both. Moreover, the best part of Israel, the noble, royal tribe of Judah, is mentioned here, and after that the entire house of Israel. Worst of all, he declares that the heathen are, to be sure, uncircumcised according to the flesh, but that Judah, Edom, and Israel, who are circumcised according to the flesh, are much viler than the heathen, since they have an uncircumcised heart; and this, as said before, is far worse than uncircumcised flesh.

These and similar passages prove irrefutably that the Jews' arrogance and boast of circumcision over against the uncircumcised Gentiles are null and void, and, unless accompanied by something else, deserves nothing but God's wrath. God says that they have an uncircumcised heart. But the Jews do not pay attention to such a foreskin of the heart; rather they think that God should behold their proud circumcision in the flesh and hear their arrogant boasts over against all Gentiles, who are unable to boast of such circumcision. These blind, miserable people do not see that God condemns their uncircumcised heart so clearly and explicitly in these verses, and thereby condemns their physical circumcision together with their boasting and their prayer. They go their way like fools, making the foreskins of their heart steadily thicker with such haughty boasts before God and their contempt for all other people. By virtue of such futile, arrogant circumcision in the flesh they presume to be God's only people, until the foreskin of their heart has become thicker than an iron mountain and they can no longer hear, see, or feel their own clear Scripture, which they read daily with blind eyes overgrown with a pelt thicker than the bark of an oak tree.

If God is to give ear to their prayers and praises and accept them, they must surely first purge their synagogues, mouths and hearts of such blasphemous, shameful, false, and deceitful boasting and arrogance. Otherwise they will only go from bad to worse and arouse God's anger ever more against themselves. For he who would pray before God dare not confront him with haughtiness and lying, he dare not praise only himself, condemn all others, claim to be God's only people, and execrate all the others, as they do. As David says in Psalm 5:4: "For thou are not a God who delights in wickedness; evil may not sojourn with thee. The boastful may not stand before thy eyes; thou hatest all evildoers. Thou destroyest those who speak lies; the Lord abhors bloodthirsty and deceitful men." But rather, as verse 7 tells us: "I through the abundance of thy steadfast love will enter thy house, I will worship toward thy holy temple in the fear of thee."

This psalm applies to all men, whether circumcised or not, but particularly and especially to the Jews, for whom it was especially given and composed — as was all the rest of Scripture also. And they are more masterfully portrayed in it than all other heathen. For they are the ones who constantly have pursued godless ways, idolatry, false doctrine, and who have had uncircumcised hearts, as Moses himself and all the prophets cry out and lament. But in all this they always claimed to be pleasing to God and they slew all the prophets on this account. They are the malicious, stiff-necked people that would not be converted from evil to good works by the preaching, reproof, and teaching of the prophets. The Scriptures bear witness to this everywhere. And still they claim to be God's servants and to stand before him. They are the boastful, arrogant rascals who to the present day can do no more than boast of their race and lineage, praise only themselves, and disdain and curse all the world in their synagogues, prayers, and doctrines. Despite this, they imagine that in God's eyes they rank as his dearest children.

They are real liars and bloodhounds who have not only continually perverted and falsified all of Scripture with their mendacious glosses from the beginning until the present day. Their heart's most ardent sighing and yearning and hoping is set on the day on which they can deal with us Gentiles as they did with the Gentiles in Persia at the time of Esther. Oh, how fond they are of the book of Esther, which is so beautifully attuned to their bloodthirsty, vengeful, murderous yearning and hope. The sun has never shone on a more bloodthirsty and vengeful people than they are who imagine that they are God's people who have been commissioned and commanded to murder and to slay the Gentiles. In fact, the most important thing that they expect of their Messiah is that he will murder and kill the entire world with their sword. They treated us Christians in this manner at the very beginning through out all the world. They would still like to do this if they had the power, and often enough have made the attempt, for which they have got their snouts boxed lustily. "

Eric should have at least read the book that Martin Luther wrote before assuming so much. I have taken a few verses from Luther's book and posted it above - for this is too long to post in entirety. But please use the link if you wish to read it all.

From this point onward, I quote from this massive EXPOSURE which thereby, I'm afraid Eric will have little place for recourse in refutation of the Founder Martin Luther himself.

Alex, if you do see my reasoning here, I highly recommend this be read when there is time.

Both are correct and one requires the other.

Geocentricity = is the idea that man is connected to the Planets in a spiritual manner. Old Saturn, Old Sun, Old Moon, Earth (we are here now), Jupiter(coming),etc. But also that each of the planets are within the earth and around it. The earth was the center and thus the sun revolves around it.

Heliocentricity = physical measurements which deny the spiritual and see only the 3-dimensional movements of bodies. Thus the earth revolves around the sun, as do also the planets.

The truth is somewhere in between: The sun itself is not only a huge ball of Hydrogen Gas and at one time, it was united with the earth. Man could not have been physical in that time.

It was EDEN, you see?

You raise a good point. How can King James bible believers think those from the houses of judah are chosen when there is no verse saying so? As for your questions, Eric Phelps' wife has some hebrew blood.

Ya at that, the "house of Judah" and separate "house of Israel" will be still two separate non-interchangeable houses even when the new heavens and earth are created, (as I cited already). There's a lot of jews that have formed "two-house" movements, many thousands of messianic jewish synagogues who also preach and teach the 10 tribed house of Israel is NOT anywhere in the house of Judah, and that they're seeking their long lost brethren, that the MESSIAH will reunite with them, etc. (that's for folks who take the bible literal). See Messianic Israel Alliance, Brit-Am, or "Your Arms to Israel", some of the bigger operations.

Thanks for the answer AntiSionist, I'd also like to see his genealogy, as I'm almost willing to bet his own has some NON-Hebrew so-called "Jewish" ancestry as well. (Ashkenazi Jews dont claim to come from Shem, so cannot be semitic or hebrew according to ALL their own history writings about it). I hate to get personal like that on people, but it's good to know just "WHO" they are, and so far he's at least a proselyte to Talmudism being intermarried.

Hi gneiss,

Yes, Luther was rather blunt wasn't he? Yet, the wisdom contained in this book is vast. Passages like these convince me that Martin Luther was speaking not out of bigotry but of a spiritual understanding that he saw, was lacking in the true sense of the original meaning. For example, consider why we circumcise today and see what Luther says about it here, for example:

In chapter 9:25 Jeremiah says further: "Behold, the days are coming, says the Lord, when I will punish all those who are circumcised but yet uncircumcised — Egypt, Judah, Edom, the sons of Ammon Moab, and all who dwell in the desert... for all these nations are uncircumcised, and all the house of Israel is uncircumcised in heart...."

I give Eric support and credit where due -he deserves much credit! And not that I wish to promote Martin Luther as Steiner has shown Martin Luther to be unable to concieve of the proper understanding of the Trinty and of the Spirit and even to comprehend the Mystery of Golgotha. Did you notice how Martin Luther also uses the same "damning of God" or that idea of "WRATH" and eternal hell? It is not unlike many Christians today and also not unlike Eric Phelps to do so.

Yet Luthernism is more closely related to Eric's own understanding and ideas. I doubt he could understand me quoting too much of Steiner....besides he'd think Steiner was contacting demons to be able to have clairvoyance to such feats. Not bashing Eric here but he has also made claims about Edgar Cayce before which reveal to me at least, that he ignores over 14,000 readings of profound wisdom and healing and truth that Cayce gave of himself for nothing and of God and Eric has decided upon the idea that since Cayce met with President Wilson for a reading once before, it must make Cayce evil somehow. This is the "connecting of the dots", or "throwing out the baby with the bathwater" if you will kind of research which I have issues with. When those who make the claims of Race Superiority spend little time equating themselves with esoteric matters and if Eric had done so, he'd know at least at a basic level that it goes by "root-races" and "cultural-epochs" and not race.

I challenge the tunnel vision of James Randi who says "they are all frauds" and I also challenge the tunnel vision of people who mistake Spirit for demons and only see the body and soul. Both are extremists.

Well I chose the middle and if Eric likes to thump scripture around to prove race superiority, we so shall get down to the bare bones of it with Martin Luther.

If Eric did mention that Luther's work was altered, I can see why because what Luther wrote is (at least from this perspective and in a general trend) profoundly true and does not fit into Eric's personal opinions.

Though I was under the belief they call the southern kingdom "judah" still God's chosen, the B.I.W.F. is only a small fraction of the two-house groups. Truth is truth, one may have different conclusions about it but we all arrive on the same basis that the house of Israel is NOT the house of Judah, not even after Christ returns!

As stated, see Orthodox Jewish group "BRIT-AM" in Jerusalem. Or the many hundreds of "two house" Messianic Jewish groups under MIA "Messianic Israel Alliance", or "Your Arms To Israel", their entire basis is that when Messiah comes he will unite the House of Israel (10 tribes) with the House of Judah. (2 1/4 tribes)

This is leaving out my personal beliefs on it because I subscribe to a different conclusion. (This just stating what they teach, as well as most bible encyclopedias say, just Pastors take the corporate media's version to be easy for the sheeple, since they're all "GOING UP" in the secret rapture, they think there's no need to do anything except WAIT to go up, and of course pay your tithes and perhaps pray every now and then. A good article about the phoney rapture doctrine is at <http://www.watchmanreport.com> "I pray NOT that you would take them OUT of the world, but that you would keep them from the evil."

- words of Jesus
John 17:15

If Jesus prayed against a "RAPTURE",
Why do we insist there will be one?)

I agree because in the end, the 12 Tribes are only including the people of Jacob's blood and that is not what Christ wanted for us. Not to mention that most so-called Jews today are not of this blood. But the idea that a "RAPTURE" must occur in order for this to happen is another huge fallacy, I agree.

But is not, from your research, the House of Judah connected somehow to Jacob's lineage making it part of the 12 Tribes of Israel? (I'm not referring to the so-called Jews of today but rather the original Israelites who were alive back then.)

Either way, if they were to unite all the 12 Tribes, are they to simply forget about all the other peoples who were not of Jacob's blood when this Great King Messiah (Satan) comes? Something seems off here, I agree with you. I just hope the Jews see the reality that everything is being now prepared for the KING to come and that KING is SATAN in human form.

My guess:

The Israelites (what's left of them) and also the majority of so-called Jews, were supposed to have already integrated back into the cradle of humanity and thus there would be no more Hebrews and no more Jewish race at all. But the Jesuits and Zionists helped to stop the natural integration with the Gentiles and thus - they stopped not only the "supposed 12 Tribes" from coming together but they also stopped all peoples from coming together, particularly in Middle Europe after WW2.

What you do think about this?

They may be what folks "feel", but that doesn't make it so. All your questions will be answered in a book called "Do All Races Share in Salvation" <http://www.amazon.com/Races-Share-Salvatio...t/dp/B000CRZXSU>

In reality God wants overcommers , not just those who go along with the world to please everyone. Jesus sure didn't please everyone. Remember when the canaanite woman came to Him for her daughter to be healed he called her a DOG, and NOT of His Children Israel, and not entitled to His Children's bread. Only when she acknowledged she was a dog then he gaver her what she wanted. (far cry from today's so-called equality demands) and in Matt 15:24 "I'm NOT sent but to the lost sheep of the house of Israel". Romans 9:4-5 "the ADOPTION pertains to Israel, ...and for their FLESH Christ came."

God only dealt with Israel in the old testament , just like He only deals with only them in the new testament (now under grace), since He is looking for "kings and priests" to rule in the next age. To be overcommers in this age, at least to overcome their own flesh (rebellious flesh nature) to obey & promote and rehearse God's word before He comes.

1Pe 2:9 "But ye are a chosen generation(genealogy/race), a royal priesthood, an holy nation, a peculiar people; that ye should shew forth the praises of him who hath called you out of darkness into his marvellous light:"

He never wanted everyone to get it, read the article "unto you it is given", He many times said He didn't want the masses to be converted, only His "small flock" to get it in this age. The rest can get it in the ressurection who didn't overcome in this age of grace, they'll just be forfeiting their thrones in this age. One of the first creations God made was "thrones" the bible says, thrones sometimes only He can see "for we are seated with Him in heavenly places, far above all power principality, dominion and might.", in our 3rd dimmension/ 3rd heaven spirit we already have the throne we can use, and for those of us who have our eyes opened we can see who is on their thrones as well, (tested by love, joy , peace etc. "By this you'll know they're my disciples, that ye love one another.")

I thought Sammy Davis Jr. was Jewish. Is he the same race as Olmert?

What about that blue eyed Jewish announcer on TV?

Jews can't be a race because they have married outside their group and allow converts. Not as many converts as other religions, but over the centuries it adds up.

I certainly don't think those ones dropping bombs on the Palestinians and producing porn films in Hollywood are Gods people. You need to live by Gods commandments.

You know what God promises to you if you are Jewish but you don't keep all the commandment?

Read Deuteronomy 28. Never before have you heard, and never again will you hear a more profound cursing!

Well that doesn't change the fact that all who are of the so-called ethnicity called "jew" still claim to be "jewish" even if they and their grandparents were all atheists.

Even many high level Papal figures keep records of their Ashkenazi - false jewish ancestry, whether they converted during the inquisition etc.

All that being said biblically speaking there are no outside "converts" who can "become" a descendant of Jacob by keeping commandments that were only given to descendants of Jacob. Only babylonian talmudism brought in race-mixing and Jesus condemned that book of anti-biblical traditions many times.

Actually 99% of the time the bible uses the word Gentile, it in fact means the CHOSEN ISRAEL RACE, the chosen line of Isaac through Jacob. You must do a study on the word in greek and hebrew, ethnos and goyim, and repeatedly only Israel and the chosen seed have that title. You have to use a strong's concordance to see the original which was inspired.

The New testament was written to outsiders, strangers to the commonwealth, which is when the 10 tribes were divorced from God for their idol worship, and Judah was the ones God hadn't divorced. So that is why gentiles meant the uncircumcized and strangers of the 10 tribes, more often than the word refers to Judah. Yet many times the word for gentile in greek was used specifically referring to the house of Judah as well, unmistakably the jews called themselves. You must use the bible's definition of a word.

That 1% of the cases where the word gentile means a non Israelite is shown by specifying which other tribe or nation. THE TRIBE, or THE PEOPLE always meant Israel, starting from GENESIS 12 where the word GOYIM meant THE SEED/THE CHOSEN RACE of ABRAHAM. "in Isaac shall thy seed be called" (not Ishmael or the Arabs).

Daniel, I really like the way you are putting these things, showing that, in order to understand all these things literally, one would have to believe that God or Nature plays favorites, out of all proportion to reason and intelligence.

So you say taking the Creator's word literally goes against all reason and intelligence. (I already know now your your next argument is it is impossible for the creator to preserve His word for His people).

It is against reason of what? Do you have God's purposes? Do you know what we've been made for and what we're here for? Jesus got the whole world so pissed off at him and they crucified Him. If your moral compass is that you must please everyone then you're far off because you'll end up doing some of the worst evils.

I know it is against all reason & intelligence of building a corporate false-church, Jesus repeatedly said He DID NOT want the masses, but only a select few to be rulers in the next age bible article "unto you it is given". This is why we must overcome our fleshly desires and obey the word of God, no matter what others think of it.

Bill Hughes was one of the very very few people who saw the events of September 11, 2001 unfold and identify the incident as a possible terrorist attack conived by the Jesuits to instill fear in the population so they would gladly give up their civil liberties. He thought "if it was planned by the Jesuits; then there will be an almost immediate announcement of impending loss of civil rights of ALL American Citizens"; which there was...

CRAIG-OXLEY - May 28, 2007 10:35 PM (GMT)

Bro. Eric,

My question is, what motive do the Jesuits have in allowing Keith Olbermann to so blatantly attack President Bush and the government on open TV, especially since the CFR controls MSNBC? Aren't the reporters and news anchors subject to the Order, and if they don't report as they are told, they'll be out of a job?

Bro. Carl

Dear Brother Carl,

A most excellent question.

We must remember that the Order has used Bush, Rumsfeld, and an host of other coadjutors to deliberately blunder this war. It could have been won years ago. Conversely, this "urban renewal" was never intended to be won, but rather to be continued for at least thirty years---according to CFR Newt Gingrich and CFR mulatto Condi Rice. To what end, they will never say.

The Order knew, via its CFR think tank, that the American peoples would be worn out from this war after at most five years, calling for a pullout so as not to repeat "Spelly's Thirty Years' War" in Vietnam. Since "Egan's War" against the Moslems must continue, the whole nation must be united around the banners of this American-led Crusade (waved by Fox News) against the "Moslem infidels" in the words of Rome.

So how can the American peoples be united around the banners of the Cardinal's Crusade? First, Bush's ratings must go through the floor---as they are now, less than 30%. Secondly, there must be a token effort to withdraw the troops---as has recently happened with the CFR-controlled Democratic Party. Remember, both parties are now behind the amnesty to be granted for the alien Latino Roman Catholic invaders, as well as the funding of "the war in Iraq" via credit extended to Congress by the Order's Federal Reserve Bank to be used by the Order's Pentagon-led, Military Industrial Complex.

Now, 70 percent of Americans are against the war; the lines of demarcation have been drawn. The next event on the Order's agenda is the controlled detonations of several mini-nukes (5-10 according to Endgame)---as mentioned in the movies "Wag the Dog," directed by Roman Catholic Jesuit coadjutor Robert DeNiro, and played out in The Sum of All Fears (detonation in Baltimore) and True Lies (detonation in the Florida Keys). With these detonations (possibly one also in Washington, D.C., with the capital in shambles the military command then moved to Denver) blamed on "the terrorists," all "true Americans" will unite to fight and die "defending freedom." The resultant Nazi fascism will be what the Order has wanted since WWI with the minting of the Mercury-head dime sporting a Roman fasces on the reverse. Bush and company (or McCain and/or Guiliani and company) will be vindicated in their demand to stay in the war, while the anti-war people---without the knowledge we have---will look like fools. Then the empire will be put on a total war footing (Goebbels' "Total War" Doctrine) to become a two-front war, to end in defeat due to high treason by the American Commander-in-Chief and his Joint Chiefs of Staff, and foreign invasion partitioning the Empire as was done to Germany.

If I was the Jesuit General, this is the course I would pursue.

On another note, I just finished watching "The Good Shepherd" for the third time. As you know it is about the CIA's Counterintelligence wing led by SMOM James Angleton with his right hand man, the Jesuit Fordham trained SMOM Italian Roman Catholic Raymond Rocca. Thus the Jesuits controlled the apex of CIA power via Angleton and Rocca. It was here at this pinnacle that the Order united the CIA with the British MI5/MI6, with the Soviet KGB, with the Israeli Mossad, with French Intelligence, with the Shah's SAVAK, INTERPOL, etc. This is the Black Pope's International Intelligence Community financed by the Black Pope's International Drug Trade with its trillions laundered through the Black Pope's International Banking Community run by the Knights of Malta. This is the picture described in VAIII.

As stated previously and in VAIII, the Cold War was a Hoax intended to continue to destroy true nationalists of every race and nationality on every continent. The CIA was used in the Western Hemisphere and the KGB was used in the Eastern Hemisphere; both worked together and were manned by ex-Nazis SS/SD. The duped American taxpayers financed both sides. Two other purposes of the bogus Cold War was to create the false enemy called "the Soviet threat" so as to justify the creation of Cardinal Spellman's Military Industrial Complex to be used by the Black Pope's "Holy Roman" Fourteenth Amendment, Socialist-Communist, Corporate-Fascist, American Empire. (Remember 33rd Degree Freemason, anti-Jew, Henry Ford built the infrastructure of both Hitler's Nazi Reich and Stalin's Communist Empire. And of course, both Hitler and Stalin worked together; Hitler's boss was Jesuit Coadjutor Martin Bormann and Stalin's boss was Jesuit Coadjutor Alexander Poskrebshev.)

Another purpose of the Cold War Hoax was to build the Soviet Union and break the USA. This is why Japan never waged war against the USSR though an enemy; this is why Stalin declared war on Japan four days before Japan's surrender entitling Russia to the spoils of war; this is why all Russian spies for the CIA were betrayed by CIA Angleton to KGB "defector" Golitsen, these anti-communist, nationalistic spies being then tortured and shot; and this is why Angleton tortured true Soviet "defectors" (poor men thought there really was a Cold War!), one of them being Yuri Nosenko. Nosenko was tortured by Angleton and Rocca, on and off, for three years. And this torture is portrayed in "The Good Shepherd." Here, in our Jesuit-theater video, this real Russian KGB defector looks into the eyes of Angleton's secret handler, Jesuit SMOM Rocca, and utters:

"Soviet power is a myth. A great joke. There are no spare parts! Nothing is working, nothing. It's nothing but painted rust. But you, you need to keep the Russian myth alive to maintain your military industrial complex. Your system depends on Russia being perceived as an awful threat. It's not a threat. It was never a threat. It will never be a threat [or so it seemed in 1963]. It is a rotten, bloated cow."

This line written by some Jesuit temporal coadjutor directing the film, is pregnant with truth. General Patton was stopped from marching on Moscow via assassination (a poison injection on orders from OSS chief, SMOM "Wild" Bill Donovan), and General Vlasov was betrayed by both Hitler and Eisenhower, and was later hung in the Order's inquisitional dungeon in Moscow---the Lubyanka. After the JFK assassination, guess who the Knights blamed---Jesuit-trained Castro and his allies, the Order's USSR financed by P2/SMOM David Rockefeller.

May all of us American veterans have a most sorrowful Memorial Day as we remember how were used to fight the Pope's WWII, the Pope's Korean War, the Pope's Vietnam War, the Pope's Gulf War, the war against Orthodox Serbia and now Rome's Crusade against Islam. May we remember our wounds, physical and mental, repent of our delusions of "fighting for our country," and never send one more son or daughter to fight the foreign wars for the Jesuit Order's Father General ruling the White House.

Sincerely in Faith,

Brother Eric

It should be noted that the Indianapolis Colts used to be called the Baltimore Colts. And it was of course The city of Baltimore that was Nuked in the fictional movie Sum of All Fears, a co-adapted screenplay taken from the novel written by Jesuit Coadjutor & CIA operative Jim Clancy. Jim Clancy is also responsible for writing a novel about a devastating attack in D.C. that eliminated most of Congress. Clancy does not write from an imaginative standpoint. He is ordered to write about such things for obvious reasons.

QUOTE

Once again, Tom Clancy manages to add new twists to the alternate U.S. history he initiated in The Hunt for Red October. In The Sum of All Fears, the centre of conflict is that perpetual hot spot, the Middle East, where a nuclear weapon falls into the hands of terrorists just as peace finally seems possible. Clancy realistically paints an almost unthinkable scenario--the bomb is planted on American soil in the midst of an escalation in tension with the Soviet Union; the terrorists hope to rekindle cold war animosity and prevent reconciliation between Israelis and Palestinians.

The Baltimore or Indianapolis Colts were in the Superbowl this past year. Their opponent was the Chicago Bears. The City of Chicago of course has been targeted by alleged Terrorists for the past several years.

IMDb profile

Red Dawn is a 1984 film by John Milius about an invasion of the United States by the Soviet Union, and the resulting guerrilla actions of a group of American high school students in the fictional town of Calumet, Colorado. The movie features Patrick Swayze, C. Thomas Howell, Lea Thompson, Charlie Sheen, Jennifer Grey, and Powers Boothe.

Produced in the last decade of the Cold War, Red Dawn has become something of a cult classic and has become a touchstone of 1980's pop culture. Red Dawn was the first movie to be released with a PG-13 rating (The Flamingo Kid was the first film to actually receive the rating, but was not released for 5 months after certification.)

[edit] Plot summary

The plot of the movie is based around a Soviet and Cuban/Latin American invasion of the United States in the late 1980s, igniting World War III. The story follows the lives of a group of young people who become guerrillas resisting the resulting occupation.

In the small Colorado town of Calumet, a normal fall morning is interrupted by a massive airdrop by Russian Paratroopers into the town. Following a Soviet attack on the local high school, a small group of teenagers flee to nearby mountains in order to escape the Soviets. After the youths arm themselves with hunting weapons they begin an insurgency against the Soviet-allied occupational forces. The group calls themselves the Wolverines after their school's team/mascot and proceed to attack the occupying forces using ambushes, sniper attacks, booby traps, and raids on the occupiers' supply depots and convoys.

Over time, the Wolverines are joined by a downed fighter pilot, Tanner, who instructs them in more formal military tactics. The Wolverines later liberate a "political prisoner camp" where the Soviets have rounded up citizens whom they thought might offer resistance to their occupation.

Eventually, they make a disastrous foray to the front lines of the war in a Rocky Mountain pass where American and Soviet tanks are engaging each other, resulting in the death of Tanner (the pilot) and Arturo, known as "Aardvark".

As the result of continuing guerrilla attacks the Soviet field commanders now view the Wolverines as a serious threat. Initially the occupiers had tried terror tactics, executing groups of civilians following every Wolverine attack, in order to intimidate the local population and the Wolverines into halting their attacks. However, this tactic backfired resulting in the civilians lending increasing support to the insurgents. Following a rise in popular support for the Wolverines, Strelnikov, a Soviet counterinsurgency specialist, arrives to declare that there will be no more reprisals against civilians. Instead the specialist sends commandos into the mountains in order to eliminate the Wolverines. This new strategy fails when the commandos are ambushed and killed by the Wolverines.

Following the ambush on the commandos the group finds a tracking device among the dead soldiers. Daryl, the son of the collaborating mayor of the town, admits that the Soviets had forced him to swallow a tracking device, explaining that he only did it as a result of coercion. Jed shoots the sole Russian survivor of the commando squad but is unable to bring himself to kill his friend. Robert shoots Daryl in cold blood, prompting the group to realize that there is no way to avoid the evils of war. The Wolverines break camp out of fear of additional raids by the Soviets.

Things become increasingly hard for the Wolverines; their morale has eroded as the war of attrition takes its toll on their numbers. The Soviet occupation forces are pushing them to the breaking point, although thanks to the Wolverines, the Soviet hopes for keeping the civilian population shocked into complacency and unable to fight back have all but collapsed.

The remaining Wolverines are then ambushed while eating food from crates dropped from a passing Soviet convoy they had intended to attack. Several heavily armed Mi-24 helicopter gunships appear and attack the Wolverines, and though Robert is able to disable one with an RPG, they suffer losses - Robert, choosing to die in a hail of gunfire, and Toni. Strelnikov arrives after the battle, thus implying that the food from the convoy was in fact used as bait to set up the attack.

The Wolverines numbers are down to only four; Jed and his brother Matt, and Danny and Erica. Jed and Matt realize that they can't outlast the Soviets and if they keep fighting they will all die. Matt tells Danny and Erica to head for "Free America," insisting that some of their number must survive. The two brothers, meanwhile, stage a diversionary attack on the Soviet headquarters in town so that Danny and Erica can escape. Jed and his brother are both shot and mortally wounded by Strelnikov, although Jed manages to shoot and kill him as well. Jed staggers away as he carries his brother in his arms. Bella, the Cuban colonel who has commanded the occupation forces from the date of the invasion, has the chance to shoot the two brothers, but decides to let them go. Bella had been composing a letter to his wife just minutes before the attack, telling her he was planning on handing in his resignation. Jed staggers away with his brother to a park bench to wait out his final moments. Meanwhile, Danny and Erica successfully escape into "Free American" territory.

The film's epilogue suggests that the United States won the war several years later; a plaque is displayed with "Partisan Rock" in the background, which pays tribute to the Wolverines killed in action, and reveals that the events in the film occurred during the "early days of World War III."

[edit] Backstory

Much of the progress and politics of the war is left to the viewers' speculation in the film's first half (putting the audience in the position of the characters, who also have no idea what is going on beyond their immediate surroundings), but specific facts are later provided by a downed U.S. Air Force pilot, Lieutenant Colonel Andrew Tanner.

Approximate map of the events described in the movie

Director/screenwriter John Milius reported that he had obtained the help and input of former Secretary of State and NATO commander General Alexander Haig to create the backstory/scenario, which required an invasion of the US by communist countries with minimal use of nuclear weapons on both sides.

The film's backstory involves several alternate history political precedents. The Green Party came to power in West Germany, forcing the removal of U.S. forces from that nation and all nuclear weapons from Europe. The resulting upheaval left NATO as a political nonentity, with only Britain remaining as a U.S. ally. At the same time, Soviet allies Cuba and Nicaragua each expanded their armies to 500,000 men, subsequently overrunning El Salvador and Honduras. A civil war in Mexico resulted in that country falling behind the Communist "Iron Curtain." In a parallel to Operation Barbarossa, the Soviet Union, like Nazi Germany, now had a broad base from which to invade its primary enemy, and thousands of troops from satellite nations to augment their own armies.

During this time, the Soviet Union was suffering its worst wheat harvest in 55 years and food riots were occurring throughout the Warsaw Pact. Apparently desperate for food to feed its people, the Soviet Union and its Latin American allies launched a full scale invasion of the United States. Although the movie was released in 1984, the story itself takes place in the near future, probably 1988 or 1989 since the Holodomor of 1932-1934 is most likely the previous "worst wheat harvest" that is referred to as being 55 years ago. The Soviets utilize a three-phase attack. First, they use tactical nuclear strikes to destroy key points of communication including several major U.S. cities (Omaha, Kansas City and Washington, D.C. are specifically cited). Tactical nuclear weapons are also used to destroy ICBM bases in Montana and the Dakotas. In addition, it is hinted that Cuban infiltrators aid in confusing U.S. forces by raiding Strategic Air Command bases throughout the Midwest and Texas. Coupled with these nuclear attacks, Soviet transport aircraft slipped through the U.S. radar disguised as commercial airlines. These planes contained crack Soviet VDV airborne troops and Spetsnaz troops. The second phase saw Mexican, Nicaraguan, and other Central American Communist armies (with small contingents of Soviet forces) pouring across the U.S.-Mexico border into the Great Plains of the United States. The Soviets themselves invaded Alaska from Siberia. They crossed into Canada occupying the Yukon, British Columbia and Western Alberta, most likely including Calgary, and cut the Alaskan Pipeline, but were decisively stopped at the U.S.-Canadian border by U.S. forces.

Elsewhere, Britain remained loyal to her American allies, but suffered heavily for it. China also declared war upon the Soviet Union; the reason for this is unexplained, though there is some long-standing animosity between the two powers resulting from the Sino-Soviet split. Colonel Tanner cryptically refers to there being some 400 million fewer "screaming Chinamen," these people were probably killed as a result of a massive Soviet nuclear strike. In the film, the effects of the nuclear weapons are not shown, as the location (southern Colorado) is far from any contaminated sites.

The Communist forces manage to occupy and control a large chunk of the central United States, extending as far west as the Rocky Mountains, and north to Cheyenne, Wyoming across Kansas to the Mississippi River in the east. Denver is also under siege.

Once the lines are stabilized, it quickly becomes a conventional war with both sides ceasing their use of nuclear weapons. Colonel Tanner explains that the Soviets are reluctant to use any more nuclear weapons, as they want to conquer the United States, not destroy it utterly, and the U.S. government is unwilling to use tactical nuclear weapons on or over their own soil against the invading armies. The Soviets work through American collaborators at the local level to help them maintain order.

[edit] Themes

Red Dawn also depicts collaboration, portraying the local mayor as an opportunist who gains or maintains power by collaborating with the occupational forces. Actor Lane Smith plays the role of the “Vichyite” mayor who tries to appease the occupational authorities. He watches as several of the residents of his town are executed as insurgents and later gives up his own son (who is later executed by the Wolverines as a result) to the KGB to win more favor.

The private ownership of weapons is also presented as part of the film’s anti-Communism. Early in the film, a bumper sticker seen on a truck states a classic gun owner’s creed; “They can have my gun when they pry it from my cold, dead fingers.” The shot moves down to a dead hand holding an empty Colt pistol as well as shots of the same pistol being pried from the dead person’s hand by a Soviet paratrooper, presumably from a police officer or armed civilian gunned down earlier during the invasion of Calumet, Colorado. As the protagonists flee the initial invasion of Calumet, they stop at a local sporting goods store owned by one of their fathers. He tells them to gather supplies and gives them several rifles and pistols along with boxes of ammunition. (The father and his wife are later executed because of the guns missing from the store’s inventory.) In a later scene, a Cuban officer orders one of his men to report to the local sporting goods store and obtain the paperwork of local citizens who own firearms. The Cuban officer specifically refers to Form 4473, which is the actual form used to record the sale of a firearm by a dealer to a private citizen in the United States. These scenes speak to the long-standing issues of government gun control.

Although most of the high school insurgents are killed, a voice-over appears at the end of the movie by Erica (Lea Thompson), (one of the two survivors) showing a World War III memorial. The American flag flying above it implies the United States had—eventually—won the war. It was not part of the original script, but was added to soften its otherwise grim and defeatist ending.

The script for Red Dawn was written by John Milius and Kevin Reynolds (director of Waterworld) from a story by Reynolds. The original screenplay, called Ten Soldiers, was more akin to Lord of the Flies, the classic novel (and later a film) about the aggressive nature of man, than to the action film it eventually became. Some of the changes made to Ten Soldiers included a shift in focus from the conflict within the group of teens to the conflict between the teens and their oppressors, and the acceleration of the ages of some of the characters from early teens to high school age and beyond. John Milius was inspired to a degree by the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan, basing the tactics of the “Wolverines” off those of the mujahedeen in fighting the occupying Russian army.[citation needed]

Red Dawn’s story and conception are similar to John Steinbeck’s The Moon Is Down, which is a story about a town occupied by a foreign army. The book, which was published during the height of World War II, was widely circulated in underground Europe and extremely popular as propaganda because the people of occupied Europe believed it spoke directly to them in a realistic way. Unlike Red Dawn, The Moon Is Down is purposely vague and does not name the location of the town or the nationality of the invaders, but it did not start out that way. In the book’s early form, the town was in America and the invaders were Nazis. Steinbeck met much resistance for this version of the story from his colleagues because it seemed to be defeatist, and so Steinbeck stripped all national references from the book.

The movie was filmed in and around the town of Las Vegas, New Mexico. Many of the buildings and structures which appeared in the film, including a historic Fred Harvey Company hotel adjacent to the train depot, the Las Vegas train yard, and a building near downtown which was repainted with the name of “Calumet, Colorado” where the movie was set, are still there today as they appeared in the film.

Before filming began, production crews designed and built special combat vehicles in Newhall, California. Among their “fleet” were 15 Soviet armored vehicles (including a ZSU-23-4 “Shilka” mobile anti-aircraft gun, several T-72 main battle tanks, and various BMP and BTR armored personnel carriers—all surprisingly authentic and detailed), several Yak-38 “Forger” vertical take-off and landing Soviet Naval aircraft (the Soviet Navy flag is clearly visible on the side of the air intake), and three Mi-24 “Hind-B” helicopter gunships (improvised from Aérospatiale Pumas). The movie’s Soviet T-72 tank was such a precise replica that “while it was being carted around Los Angeles, two CIA officers followed it to the studio and wanted to know where it had come from.”[1]

Five of the 36 parachutists who took part in the invasion scene early in the film were injured when high winds blew them as far as one mile off target. Parachutist Jim Fisher, wearing a Soviet paratrooper uniform, landed in a tree and found himself calling out to local rescuers: "Don't shoot, don't shoot! I am not a Russian soldier!"

In our time, no foreign army has ever occupied American soil. Until now.

The invading armies planned for everything—except for eight kids called "The Wolverines."

8:44 A.M. A full scale military invasion by foreign troops begins. Total surprise. Almost total success. A gang of high school kids become the last line of defense.

The original tagline for the movie was "No foreign army has ever occupied American soil." This had to be changed because it was factually inaccurate. The British Army captured Washington, D.C. during the War of 1812 and set fire to the White House and other buildings. In 1942, the Japanese seized the islands of Attu, Kiska, and Agattu in Alaska's Aleutian chain. At the time, Alaska was not a U.S. state, but it was a territory, so it was still U.S. "soil." The United States recaptured the islands the following year. Japan also conquered Guam, Wake Island, and the Commonwealth of the Philippines in the course of WWII, though they were later recaptured as well.[2]

Red Dawn DVD cover

The scene featuring a character urinating into the radiator of a truck appears to be inspired by a similar scene in the Soviet film Earth, though the original scene was not played for comic effect.

Red Dawn's story and conception are similar to John Steinbeck's The Moon Is Down, which is a story about a town occupied by a foreign army. The book, which was published during the height of World War II, was widely circulated in underground Europe and extremely popular as propaganda because the people of occupied Europe believed it spoke directly to them in a realistic way. Unlike Red Dawn, The Moon Is Down is purposely vague and does not name the location of the town or the nationality of the invaders, but it did not start out that way. In the book's early form, the town was in America and the invaders were Nazis. Steinbeck met much resistance for this version of the story from his colleagues because it seemed to be defeatist, and so Steinbeck stripped all national references from the book. Calumet was an actual mining town in Colorado, about 50 miles north of the New Mexican border at the junction of routes 610 & 69 (possibly in Chaffee County). Today, the real Calumet is a ghost town.

"John has a long mustache," which is heard briefly in the movie, was the code-signal used by the French Resistance in World War II to mobilize their forces once the Allies had landed on the Normandy beaches. It is featured in the movie The Longest Day.

The name of the film and its band of young guerrillas appears to have been used by the United States Army for the December 13, 2003, Operation Red Dawn in which the former Iraqi dictator Saddam Hussein was captured.

The original trailer shows a tank rolling up to a McDonald's restaurant where enemy soldiers are eating. This scene does not appear in the final cut. It was apparently removed due to a mass murder at a San Ysidro, California, McDonald's just weeks prior to the film's 1984 opening (see McDonald's Massacre). The trailer also contains an activation of the Emergency Broadcast System. The trailer only has the beginning of the attack script ("This is the Emergency Broadcast System, this is NOT a test") that would have been used in such a situation, but it is not heard in the movie.

William Smith's character, Colonel Strelnikov ("the Shooter"), is named after Tom Courtenay's character from the film Doctor Zhivago (1965). In real life Smith is a fluent Russian speaker and taught it at UCLA for several years.

[edit] Cultural references

In the song "Rambozo the Clown" by punk band Dead Kennedys, the lyrics reference Red Dawn:

War is sexy

War is fun

Iron Eagle

Red Dawn

Be a wolverine, you'll rule the hills

Just get some guns and cheerios

In the game Grand Theft Auto: Vice City, based in 1986, radio sermons by Pastor Richards make reference to Red Dawn, such as "They call this a Cold War, but it's hotter than hell. Mark my words! Any day now, you're sitting in school, passing notes and talking about the prom when suddenly you look out the window and there are Russian paratroopers dropping in to take over. What can you do? Run into the woods with your friends? Call yourselves 'The Wolverines'? Put twigs in your hair and try and beat back the Ruskies?" Also, radio ads for gun store AmmuNation offer free screenings of the film Red Dawn, referred to as a documentary.

The 2003 episode of South Park "Grey Dawn" parodies Red Dawn. A 2006 episode of Family Guy, "Hell Comes to Quahog", references a musical production of Red Dawn in passing as well.

In the PC game Command & Conquer: Red Alert 2, the first mission of the Soviet campaign involves a paratroop assault on Washington, D.C. and is called "Operation: Red Dawn."

The PC game "World in Conflict" Has a Russian Invasion in Seattle set in the year 1989 where the Warsaw Pact was on the brink of collapse Underground rapper Immortal Technique uses the movie title in his song One(remix), which goes, "the red dawn, communist threat, buried and gone/so they invented a war the government can carry on".

In a 2006 episode of " American Dad ", " With Friends Like Steve's ", Stan's dad plays Red Dawn with his son Steve and later Barry.

CRAIG-OXLEY - May 25, 2007 03:58 PM (GMT)

Remember folks how Eric Jon Phelps said that a Bush had been trained here in England at STONYHURST college. -2tuff

QUOTE

The Jesuits: Stoneyhurst College is known as a “Catholic” institution with a primarily Jesuit influence; the college boasts of its association with the Society of Jesus. The Society of Jesus, or the “Jesuits,” proclaims its “service” to the Vatican and to mankind by “assisting the downtrodden through education.” [44]

Further investigation reveals that the Pope is covertly controlled by the Superior General of the Society of Jesus, Peter Hans Kolvenbach—the Black Pope. The General Curia (administrative offices where Jesuit business is conducted) is located in “Rome,” more specifically, within the Vatican.

Following the dictates of Ignatius Loyola’s “25 Sessions” and the leadership of the Superior General, the ultimate goal of this secret organization is to “destroy and rebuild the Temple of Solomon, reestablishing the seat of the Pope in Israel.”

Historically, the Jesuit mission has been to eliminate Protestant Christianity throughout the world, with the United States being the last frontier to be conquered. Contrary to the self-proclaimed mission to educate and assist the underprivileged in society, the Jesuits actually worship Lucifer (not Satan) and practice the most sadistic forms of human sacrifice, homosexuality, pedophilia, black magic, and murder.

The Society employs a variety of ruthless tactics to accomplish its long-term goal (of a New World Order which pays homage to their Black Pope). One is carrying out political assassinations of world leaders who refuse to comply with its demands. These assassinations in the U.S. have included presidents (Abraham Lincoln, JFK), cabinet members, congressmen, senators, diplomats, journalists, scientists and religious and business leaders.

For purposes of obfuscation and maintaining a spirit of compliance, the Society of Jesus employs (and finances) the services of the NSA, DHS, FEMA, OSS, ONI, FBI, CIA, DIA, DEA, the Pentagon, the Department of Defense, NASA, the Federal Reserve, the Internal Revenue Service, the Congress, and other Federal agencies as deemed necessary.

Foreign military and intelligence agencies under their control include the German SS, Deutsche Verteidigungs Dienst (underground Abwehr/DVD), the British MI6 and MI5, the Israeli Mossad, NATO, Interpol, the KGB, the Chilean DINA, and even the United Nations, to name a few.

Assassinations are carried out by the aforementioned intelligence agencies and their Mafia partners in the drug and gambling trades, often with collateral assistance from the Knights of Malta, the Freemasons, the Knights of Columbus, and Propaganda Due (P2). Such was the case in the assassination of President John F. Kennedy and some former Popes.

Political leaders, whether duly elected or corruptly appointed, are replaced by dictatorships favorable to the Society. Those governments with concordats are allowed to subsist without threat of war, though that policy often changes when revolutionary movements begin to receive international recognition. Often, the simple refusal to allow the Society to reap the profits of the illegal drug trade is enough to spark a civil war or a clandestine paramilitary incursion.

The Society considers declaring one's individual sovereignty, freedom of speech, freedom of religion, and civil rights to be anathema to its doctrine while seeking to crush Protestant Christianity, the basis for the creation of the United States. The dismantling of the U.S. government is the key to their ultimate success in the creation of a New World Order.

GHW was obviously recruited to assist the Jesuits with their long-range plans and, as a result, he (and those with whom he did business) profited immensely from his cooperation in the Jesuits' plans.

Remote control of the Jesuit apparatus is maintained through the establishment of banks, churches, foundations, and institutes of "higher education" in foreign countries. Fordham University, a Jesuit institution, controls the Vatican's top official in the U.S., John Cardinal O'Connor, Archbishop of New York (at St. Patrick's Cathedral).

Title: 9/11 Conspirator Joseph A. O'Hare SJ
Description: CFR Member speaks at "Baptist" Baylor

AVBibleBeliever - May 26, 2007 12:03 AM (GMT)

CFR 9/11 conspirator Joseph A. O'Hare SJ gave a speech at a symposium held at Apostate Baptist Baylor University whose president was Jesuit-trained at Boston College.

<<http://www.baylor.tv/video.php?id=000454>>

Fast forward to the last question toward the end of the video for an example of slick Jesuit casuistry in response to the only direct question asked. Jesuit O'Hare never answers the young man's question and he denies his Order is Counter-Reformation. Jesuit O'Hare also mentions 9/11 and asks the question when is the war going to end. What a rat he is! He was in on it being a presider of the CFR ordering his lackies and abject slaves in the CFR including but not confined to SMOM George J. Tenet, Donald Rumsfeld, Condoleeza Rice, Dick Cheney who is a Master Mason (3rd Degree York Rite/Blue Lodge) according to the Harry S. Truman Lodge in NYC http://web.archive.org/web/20040218000533/...ghest_mason.htm SMOM Frank Carlucci (Carlyle Group) and Richard Myers of NORAD etc. to comply with this Jesuit attack on its and I will be connecting the dots in my upcoming book AMERICAN REICH and the chain of command beginning with the Luciferian Black Pope down to Rudy Guiliani and everyone in between.

Hows your book going? How will it be released? Will it be ebook or Paper back? It will get much promotion from me. Your work is of the most importance.

AVBibleBeliever - May 26, 2007 03:47 AM (GMT)

Dear Craig-Oxley,

I will be taking the info I've contributed to the board (for some reason I can't go to my prior posts due to an error or something) and my email posts and put them all together in a comprehensible order. I need to find written books and other source materials to back up my thesis. Most of the info I've researched and contributed has strictly been from the Internet. I have written the Introduction and only now having graduated from college do I have more time to write the rest. I continued to send posts this year but did not make time to work on the book. I'm collecting photos and saving info that I've found helpful. I am currently reading "The Pink Swastika" which I will use as a source about how the Third Reich was founded on homosexuality. I read that the "Hitler Youth" were full of pederast sodomites and we know Joseph Ratzinger was one of them. According to Leo Zagami, Ratzinger has a male lover in his 20s so no surprise there. I'm comparing the Nazi Germany of the mid-20th century to the Jesuit-controlled Fourteenth Amendment American Empire and it's Vatican War machine. I have plenty of evidence and info but I have to piece it all together. It will be a massive undertaking but it is crucial and time is of the essence. There is very little of it before the U.S. is an openly full-fledged dictatorship with a concordat with the Unholy See if the situation is left unaltered.

This expose is dedicated to my fellow countrymen and it is intended to make them aware of the Jesuit conspiracy against them. I will be addressing Jesuit control of the military-industrial complex, the Order's assault on health, the bodily constitutions of Americans which have been targeted especially since the Order illegally amended the U.S. Constitution and thereby creating a new country and new citizenship which they have made their huge reduction and rule through their provincials who view the U.S. as ten provinces and not free, sovereign States which is why secession is only solution at this point.

Brother Nicholas

AVBibleBeliever - May 26, 2007 03:53 AM (GMT)

I would definitely go with an E-Book format.

Bro. Nicholas

Alexandra - May 26, 2007 03:55 AM (GMT)

Nicholas--I heard that a concordat was being negotiated, but that was like 25 years ago. Any word on that?

CRAIG-OXLEY - May 26, 2007 03:57 AM (GMT)

Would be a nice addition to having Vatican Assassins III. I think if people study these works along with Dr John Coleman's work they will be laughing.

AVBibleBeliever - May 26, 2007 01:25 PM (GMT)

Dear Sister Alexandra,

You are referring to the year 1984 when that honorary 32nd Degree Freemason and Knight of Malta Ronald Wilson Reagan (first, middle, and last names 6 letters each evidence of what I call the trail of the beast you can see this is the work of the Antichrist dynasty-the Papacy) reestablished diplomatic ties to Rome (betraying Abraham Lincoln who was assassinated by the Order and as a result U.S. ties to the Unholy were severed in 1865 after the U.S. government found out that John Surratt (who was advised by Jesuit Bernadine Wiget) was hiding out in Rome recognized Vatican City as a sovereign state and therefore the Papal Caesar as a sovereign or king.

<http://www.reformation.org/reagan-and-pope.html>

This recognition was the prerequisite for a concordat with the Unholy See. Since then Fourteenth Amendment America has been ripe for a concordat which would give the Jesuits' Vatican say in both civil and ecclesiastical matters in the U.S. so basically they would openly control temporal and religious matters.

The CFR Fascist Republican Party I believe has proven its loyalty to "Ignatian spirituality" which is Luciferianism but since the Order controls both parties they put in a Jesuit president as a CFR Communist Democrat- I am convinced CFR member William Jefferson Clinton Blythe III is a Jesuit. Clinton's brother Jesuit citizen of Hell Robert F. Drinan (who started the abortion agitation spearheaded by the Masonic/ SMOM Religious Right and the Knights of Columbus which serves the Order since it fosters ecumenism. I am against the murder of the unborn and the Charismatic ecumenical movement) defended his perjury (during his staged impeachment trial) to a grand jury and showed his utter contempt for the laws of this land because they believe they are above them. I will describe this in detail in a future post and in my book. Nazi Germany made one in 1933 with the Vatican in the persons of Eugenio Pacelli (who would become Hitler's Pope Pius XII, Papal Chancellor SMOM Franz Von Papen and Jesuit Ludwig Kaas (he was a Jesuit according to the second edition of VA) Hitler had his own faith-based initiatives program just as Fourteenth Amendment America. In fact, Eleanor Roosevelt as well as JFK rejected Cardinal Spellman's push for school vouchers but Skull and Bonesman George W. Bush (who has a life-size likeness of himself in the Masonic museum in Los Angeles as shown in the film "Megiddo I: The March to Armageddon" which briefly exposes the Jesuit Order and in the second installment about the New Age rightfully exposing Jesuit Pierre Teilhard Chardin as the father of the New Age Movement and popularized the evolution lie through the Piltdown and Peking man hoaxes he was directly involved in creating. I have a photo that illustrates my point. gnition was the prerequisite for a concordat with the Unholy See.

How Roman Towns Were Built on Star-Aligned Grids

2007 05 15

By Rossella Lorenzi | dsc.discovery.com

Ancient Romans built their towns using astronomically aligned grids, an Italian study has concluded.

Published recently on the physics Web site, www.arXiv.org, maintained at Cornell University in Ithaca, New York, the research examined the orientation of virtually all Roman towns in Italy.

"It emerged that these towns were not laid out at random. On the contrary, they were planned following strong symbolic aspects, all linked to astronomy," Giulio Magli, of the mathematics department at Milan's Polytechnic University, told Discovery News.

Part of a wider study published in Magli's book "Secrets of the Ancient Megalithic Towns," the research examined the orientation of some 38 towns in Italy.

Magli explained that ancient Roman writers, including Ovid and Plutarch, documented how the foundation of a new town took into account the flight of birds and astronomical references.

"However, the link between Roman towns and sky symbolism has never been fully investigated," Magli said.

The Romans founded many towns, or colonies, especially during Rome's Republican period and the first Imperial period, roughly from the 5th century B.C. to the 1st century A.D.

Their layout, inspired by the so-called castrum (a military camp), was always the same. The city consisted of a rectangle bounded by walls, with streets organized in a grid to form various residential quarters (insulae).

Two main roads, called cardus and decumanus, criss-crossed the whole city. Their intersection was the center of the social and religious life, while four main gates were placed at their ends.

"I did not take into consideration all the Roman towns, but only those in which at least the two main roads are still clearly discernible," Magli said.

For instance, the study did not examine the orientation of Pompeii. This city's two main roads are not obvious since the Romans later modified the city's layout.

Among towns with two clear main roads, Magli looked at the orientation of grids' axes in relation to the movement of the rising sun at the eastern horizon over the course of the year. He extracted this orientation from available archaeological maps or by using a precision magnetic compass on site.

"It emerged that the majority of Roman towns in Italy are aligned to sunrise, in relation to important sacred festivals or to the cardinal points," Magli said.

Basically, there are only three towns oriented toward the north: Pesaro, Rimini and Senigallia. These three towns also lie relatively close to the west coast of central Italy.

Only two towns in northern Italy — Verona and Vicenza — lie near the summer solstice sunrise line. Geographically close, they were founded in the same period.

All the other studied towns are oriented either within 10 degrees southeast of sunrise, or near the winter solstice sunrise.

"Given these results, we can say that Roman towns in Italy are not randomly oriented. This will help us understand what kind of astronomical knowledge the Romans had," Magli said.

"It is interesting research," Manuela Incerti, of Ferrara University's architecture department, said about the study. "It certainly opens the way to more extensive studies."

'Roman' civilization = 30% Greek civilization + 70% Etruscan civilization.

Great part of the cities were just existing wellbefore the arrive of the Romans. The same for the roads.... Romans were only parasytes well supplied with technologies and knoweledge which were not Roman.... The goal of the Roman empire was to crush the Europeans and to build a "new European" man, anonymous and spiritually submitted. The same of nazis or Commies with their "new men" of the future.

All this is Etruscans 100%. Etruscans built Rome in the same way.

Romans = parasytes.

Yes, here they assimilated the celtic kingdom of Noricum. Most of austria was already "civilized" in stone age, through trade (mainly salt).

But the Romans never made it across the Danube (Limes), the battle you see in the beggining of the movie "gladiator" is near Carnuntum (where Marc Aurel spent lots of time).

That´s why Roman Catholicism contains so much pagan elements, the people would never have accepted the new religion without.

The church did not like the whorship of mary in the beginning, but it had to accept it and it´s its strongest "spiritual" part until today. I see it as successor of older cults, which worshipped mother-godesses and can be found throughout the ancient world.

What makes me wonder is that Carnuntum had an amphitheather for 18.000 people and dissapeared completely, looks like vienna took it´s place.

Who was introducing the arch? Was it an etruscan or roman invention? Romans where the first to build round arches, at least around here.

That´s what they do everywhere they come since then :(.

The Coliseum-style-of-life was central in the Roman Empire. The Arena play, was a satanic ritual disguised with a sort of spectacle. With it they intended to destroy the souls of the people . They built where they could a Coliseum in a little shape. A programmed satanic pedagogy of the population, one of the real goals of the Roman Empire built by Illuminati.

In the city of Rome the 90% of population was poor and ignorant: the sons, after they were born, often were thrown in the public dustbin or sold to organizations to make slaves or soldiers out of them. 5 millions free people and 3 millions slaves were the population of the Italian peninsula. This was the paradise for Illuminati, and now that they get the technology they want, they can restore the 'old good times'.

(Israeli/Arabs conflict is one of the applications of the Arena plays strategy, where you have a 'big strong gladiator' - Israel - and many 'poor and weak slaves' - the Palestinians and other Arabs; the psicological technique is aimed to arise the anger of the spectators on the spalts against the 'strong one', and in the same time the sympathy for the 'weak' one. You must always create a NOT equilibrated situation, don't you need a difference of potential to gain electricity? So it works in social, ideological, psicological and spiritual fields. Look at the chronicle of what is happening in these days in Israel/Palestina and you'll see always a big covert sub-liminal World Coliseum, whose Emperor live always in Rome).

Is OT, but i write in any case:

Palestinans and Israelis are like the two poles of a big electricity generator.

The conflict is the generation of the energy, in this case is the 'hate' energy which the servants of Vatican in the media will carry around the world with their communication nets.

(I think that not all of you will agree with what I say, but I am sure that you will agree with the general spirit which lays under it)

WHY YOU HEAR ALWAYS ONLY ABOUT "ROMANS" AND "CELTS" AS THE MOST IMPORTANT CIVILIZATIONS OR POPULATIONS OF ANCIENT EUROPE?

The reasons of a Vatican Propaganda.

Maybe something told by the researchers above is true. But basically they continue to lie as the Babilonian camorra in Vatican teaches to do all the Academies in the world! The truth is: the Roman destroyed the civilization of North Italy. Amen. Did they ever tell you that well before the Romans and the Celts (other kind of civilization destroyers, even if not so bastard like the Romans and more friendly with the population with whom they got in touch) from the Timavo's sources (near Monfalcone, 20 km West from Trieste – North Adriatic Sea) and through a dense net of internal and very modern channels of the East Padana plane, and through the rivers (especially the Po River) and support-river-harbours, you were able to go from Adriatic Sea to Tirenian Sea just only with boats and ships? Did they ever tell you that in the fifth century b.C., when Rome was only an Etruscan city, built by Etruscan engineers with the help of the local workers coming from a local population of ignorant shepherds called "Latins", on the coast of Adriatic Sea, between the today's cities of Adria (from 'adro' = gulf, coast) and Ravenna (from 'ravna' = plane) there was the biggest city of the Mediterranean Sea? Called "Spina", with more than 500.000 inhabitants? Did they tell you that well before the arrive of the Romans and the irruption of the Celts, the amber, from Baltic Sea to the Babilonians and Aegyptians, was transported through a well organized net of roads which implicated also stations and guard posts, till the Timavo's sources 20 km from where I am writing? Stations and guard posts whose name remained till the very days of the present, just look at the little town of the Slovenian "Postojna" whose name comes from "postaja" = station, and is a name present in the pre-Roman and pre-Celtic Latinized Veneto of today, where you can find many geographical places named "Postoi", "Postoioma", ecc.?

These intellectuals and historians are only double-tongue mercenaries of the pagan adorers whose rich encampment finds itself in S. Peter, City of Vatican, Rome. The Romans were the real barbarians, the differences with the other "barbarians" was that their barbarian attitude (coming from the low level culture of the Latin shepherds of the Lazio mountains who were incapable to reclaim swamps and this is the reason for which they lived on the hills,... Only the Etruscans cleared the swamps and allowed the shepherds to go in the tales) was well organized in a scientific form. Stop. The science and organization came from the Etruscans and was applied on low populations who lived on the mountains: this is the source of the 'power' of Roma. Today the intellectual mercenaries take the scientific organization of that barbarian Roman attitude and present to you as "Roman's Civilizations"!!!

Of the mythical league of the 12 Etruscans cities of the Padana Plane, today we have only legends. But is true that Etruscans built a 12 cities League in the Campania region, near the Greek Napoli of those times (Napoli, from Neaples = na-polje, "on the fields"; or Puglia Italian region, from "polje", fields, planes). But all the Padana Plane is rich of Etruscans and Veneti treasuries, they probably started to built a 12 city league in Padania like they did in Etruria, but they stopped due to the problems with the Greeks in the Tyrrhenian Sea, or just they only heavily influenced the Veneti reigns of the North Padana Plane. Remember, you find Etruscans goods also in Sweden... Are not the Romans the first ones coming from Appenninic peninsula that travelled to the North Europe.... And then Verona, Vicenza, Padova (from 'potovje' = a crossing of roads; the same name of the today Slovenia Ptuj, another ancient crossing of roads, another "Padova" of pre-roman and pre-celtic times) etc.: they were Venetic cities, and the Venetis were strict relatives of the Etruscans, they spoke the same language, whose expression and structure you could find today for example in the dialects of Veneto, but especially in the Slovenian dialects like the one of the Resia Valley, in Friuli Venezia Giulia (a Valley near the "Amber Roads"....). My Slovenian relatives and myself are using sometimes expression that you can find on Venetis and Etruscans inscription or you find in the name or rivers and mountains.... All the story teached today to you is only a big F-A-K-E and 80% F-A-L-S-E!!!

Piacenza, Modena, Mantova, Ravenna, etc.: the asphalt and the cement of these cities of South Padana Plane (a propos: "padana" in the today Slovenian dialects is a gerundive, and means "a sort of a plane near hills and mountains", like it is in the Padana Plane of today), will for ever hide their Etruscans treasuries, and this is not for a casuality. Ask yourself why the 90% percent of the Etruscan tombs and treasuries were robbed and destroyed? I tell you who are the responsible of that destruction, a crime which I compare to an ethnic cleansing: but are the same pagan adorers who live in the Vatican!!! The motto is: "Destroy the real civilization of the Apeninic Peninsula and present the old Destroyer of that like the messengers of civilization!" These pagan adorers are the true heirs of the Roman Empire and are the Jesuits and the Vatican Camorra. Ask yourself why today you hear only about "Romans" and "Celts"? Because they were destroyers and not builders of civilizations. The Celts were better than the Romans, more friendly, but maybe due to the fact that they were not so organized like SS as the firs were. The Celts had not the scripture or an alphabet! No one knows exactly their language! But today you find in internet an enormous quantity of "Celts-Dictionaries"! Really speaking, before the Romans, ONLY the Etruscans and the Veneti had an alphabet and used the scripture!!!

All this is reflected in the politic today, where you have an official world represented by the image of the "Romans". If you prefer the fake-opposition, they give you the permission to accept the "Celts" image, others are severely forbidden. Have you ever heard about an "Etruscans folk meeting"? I hope it really never happen, the day it would happen it will mean they'll have transformed also the Etruscans in a circus, like the Celts....Is better that they and the Venetis remain for ever buried in the silence of the Padana plane... Are you a leftist? Ok, no problem, I'll give you the Celts in a Irish social version, so the modern 'social ideology' could be applied, among a beer and a concert of Irish music. Are you right wing oriented? Ok, no problem, I'll give you the Celts in the version of the Catholic Ireland, Catholic-Christian defenders of the Occidental Civilization against the leftists (above mentioned). Tell me please why the Alleanza Nazionale party of Italy, the heirs of the Fascists and so the biggest supporters of the concept of the today Italy as the heir of the Romans, are not only Ancient-Romans-lovers, obviously, but stay in the same political parliamentary right-wing formation where you can find the La Lega autonomist party who is a party that claim to represent the heirs of the "true Celtic population of Padania" oppressed by the ancient and daily Rome who are supported by the fascists allies???. Foolishness! Idiocies! There never was a "Celtic population" of Padania, in the same way there never was a sort of "Roman Civilization" of North Italy, but they need to continually cover and hide the Veneti and especially the Etruscans, the first serious civiliziers of Europe in the last 2500 years. In fact the Etruscans were the real builder of Leagues, as call itself the La Lega = The League party, but this Nazilslamic deviated, Vatican and Black Nobility controlled party of North Italy, is just doing the dirty work the Jesuits assigned to him: to continue to falsify and pervert the history, cancelling the very first civilization of Europe, and cancelling so the evidences, the proofs and the "Spuren" of the ancient Illuminati conquest of the world!!!!

In this case David Icke is right. Ok, he is a temporal coadiutor as regards Jesuits etc., but for other things he found the right historical thread. He doesn't know well the history of first Padanian and Etrurian civilizations, he doesn't know the real history of the Venetis, Etruscans and the so called "Western Slaves", who were and are just the same Venetis named with other names and were the very civilizations of Italy and MittelEuropa well before Romans and Celts and Germans, but he is right when he quote the British researcher Waddel where he stated that 3000 b.C. there was a big Sumerian Empire or similar, from Indo valley to Ireland. All the Veneti, Etruscans, and then Celts, German etc. were only steps in the programmed manipulation of the ancient population. Every civilization served like a "rocket stage" for the next "rocket stage" in the progressive conquer of the world by the Atlantidean today in Rome. Probably the Etruscans, who were a mixture of an Asian population with the Venetis of Toscana region who were found by the first when they approached the peninsula, had the duty to prepare the construction of the Roman Evil Empire. In fact, when it started they were brutally annihilated. Do you remember Alien, I mean the movies? The 4th Alien, if I am not wrong, the son eat the mother....

If you look the history with the lenses of the "programmed history", all come clear in the eyes. This is not science fiction and I am not talking foolishness. The Vaticans and the Black Nobility elite just were the secret Satanists priests who covertly ruled the ancient civilizations, and kept, like evil parasites, the knowledge and the infamous rites of the past civilizations, when they destroyed them after they created them for their goals. Just ask the High Pagan Priest in Rome (the 'pope') what will happens when he will die. When a pope die (doesn't matter if due to a cup of Borgia or not) the decano (=doyen) of Saint Peter in Vatican beats for three times the temples of the corpse with a silver hammer preserved in the Vatican Treasury. And who did the same at the times of the Etruscans? It was Charun, the brother of Tuchulcha, an infernal and horrible figure of the Etruscan pantheon of gods. When your hour was arrived, he caught you with himself for the Other World with a good blow of his hammer.....

Wow, you are right, but what i actually meant is that i wonder that Carnuntum, wich already existed at recognizeable size when it "joined" the Imperium, had such a large population. It's quite difficult to fill a stadium of 18.000 in austria today.

QUOTE

The Coliseum-style-of-life was central in the Roman Empire. The Arena play, was a satanic ritual disguised with a sort of spectacle.

the psicological technique is aimed to arise the anger of the spectators on the spalts against the 'strong one', and in the same time the sympathy for the 'weak' one. You must always create a NOT equilibrated situation, don't you need a difference of potential to gain electricity?

Can be observed in professional sports everyday, unfortunately, i hate unequal games. Would be interesting how these energies are used, if (it's hard to imagine, i still try to exclude metaphysics as i haven't seen no real prove yet). Nevertheless it would also present today's mass events under a different light.

Other people told me about this strange fact: theaters capable to accept a numer of people greater than the population around it.... I have not an idea about.

Don't forget that the plays in the Arenas were bloodin plays. The world of today is the sin of those. During a theater play, when the hero should have die, they killed for real a slave.... Do you imagine the spectators, with the stage full of blood of the "hero" just slaughtered by a lion, applauding????!!?!?!?!?!?!?

The difference with that world, when they were tuning and experimenting the techniques, is that today we are not aware that we are in the middle of a scene.

Violence as entertainment? Not really hard to imagine, I just needed to turn on the TV if i had one.

One explanation of the big arenas could be, that the games were´nt hold every day (at least in the beginning), so they would´ve been a main event attracting lots of travelling folk or troops to entertain, accompanied by traders and sort.

WHY YOU HEAR ALWAYS ONLY ABOUT "ROMANS" AND "CELTS" AS THE MOST IMPORTANT CIVILIZATIONS OR POPULATIONS OF ANCIENT EUROPE?

The celts came from the east, thats true. The first "civilized lifestyle", you can find with trading roads (electrum from the north, salt from the alps). Every Town that has it´s name beginning with "Hal-" has something to do with salt.

Best known: Hallstatt

If you happen to be nearby one day, it's worth a visit, very nice place, but be cautious prices aren't.

QUOTE

However this secluded and inhospitable landscape nevertheless counts as one of the first places of human settlement due to the rich sources of natural salt, which have been mined for thousands of years, originally in the shape of hearts (see Hallstatt hearts). Some of Hallstatt's oldest archaeological finds, such as a shoe-last celt, date back to around 5000 BC.

No notable events took place during Roman rule.... :lol:

I once heard they did find far-eastern art there, just to imagine how far the trade reached. Maybe the romans built a lot of roads, but the far reaching connections were there already.

Another period that lies in complete darkness is the "megalithic", there is a lot to discover north of the danube, near the czech-austrian border. Most of the monuments are well hidden and forgotten in the woods, but i already saw something like a round pyramid (wich may be younger) and an age old observatorium (they just found out recently, it must be one, according to artificial holes in stones, corresponding with stars at a certain time -> it can be found near Eggenburg).

Maybe some of you could tell something about this:

Nobody knows what it could be, or how old it is.

QUOTE

Wiki says:

The Waldviertel Pyramid is a pyramid in Waldviertel, Austria. It is hidden deep in the forest between Zwettl and Gross-Gerungs. It is the only known structure of its kind in Central Europe. It is of unknown age, and consists of four stacked circular layers. The diameter at the base is 14 metres and the height is 7 metres. It has only been under official monument protection since 2001.

The original purpose of the pyramid is unknown. An interpretation as a Germanic place of worship or ancient tomb is unlikely because there was no prehistoric or early settlement of this area. An interpretation as medieval or more recent signalling station seems debatable.

The elaborate construction seems to indicate a relatively modern design which could have been in an aristocratic situation - possibly part of a baroque garden or park.

Because the remains of walls have been found nearby, it is possible that the pyramid was once part of a larger complex

It's unlikely to be a signalling station, as it's surrounded by hills, there simply would be a lot of better spots nearby.

Or the Vinca culture, about 5.000 b.C., near Serbia and Danube, with its alphabet, I say: alphabet, not hyeroglyph or wedge shaped alphabet. Prof. Pesic who discovered it says that the Venetic/Etruscans alphabet is coming from here.

But I have to say more on the big Arenas.

ANFITEATRO ROMANO costruito tra il 41 ed il 56 d.C.
Dimensioni: ellisse schiacciata 132m*105m*32m d'altezza
Capienza: 25.000 persone!

-----Translation:-----

Roman Amphitheater built between the 41 and the 56 after Jesus.
Dimensions: elliptical, 132m*105m and 32m high.
Capacity: 25.000 people!!!!

Some capacities were aimed to collect a big amount of people, maybe not in the present but in a future time, when the enlargement of the empire would have increased the commerce and the population. As Carnutum, Pola was a strategic point, in fact the Istria is an important peninsula where you could control the North Adriatic Sea. Romans always had problem with the riotous people of Istria, the Istri. The were defeated about one century and half before, but the inner of Istria always remained refractory to the latinization (I admire them). All that continues today. Till the end of the first WW, the Venetian and Italian population remained confined to the coast, and the rural inner Istria was always a Croatian and Slovenian county. Only in the biggest towns the Italians or modern Venetians were the majority. At the end of the WWI, even the ultra nationalist and irredentist Cesare Battisti, who was a natural enemy of Austria and of the not Italian ethnics, stated that the Istria was divide in equal parts between Italians and Slovenians/Croatians. The propaganda of today says that nearly the entire Istria was entirely an Italian ethnic and linguistic county. In fact today the Italian (=the Vatican) state have the dirty politic consisting in giving the Italian citizenry to every Slovene of Croatian asking it...A dirty politic of underground colonization of Istria, the prosecution of the aggressive politic of ancient Romans through the Italian state, the puppet of the Vatican....It's funny to hear how many Italian anti-Jewish blame Israel for giving in a easy way passports and citizenry to Jews who are Italian citizens, meanwhile the Italian state is doing in Istria a covert politic of Italianization in the exactly same way.... But all this you have to calculate considering the penetration to the East of the Latin world, and the extirpation of the not-Latin population: this is surely a long term plan aimed to destroy the not Catholic descendants of the Byzantines in Russia....The fury of the Nazis and Fascists against the “subhumans Slave population of East” surely has to do with the destruction NOT only of the remaining rests of the heretic Byzantin empire (as I call the Russian orthodox), but also with the obsessive and psychopathic mania of destruction of every thing could recall the origin of the Illuminati, because the population of the East, beginning with the Slovenian, conserve in their ethnical, historic, linguistic, genetic characteristics a very ancient heir which could help to see how Illuminati built Europe not only in the last centuries, but in the last – do you let me to say it? - 10.000 years. The crusade against the heretics of the East contained another kind of crusade, the crusade for the destruction of the proof of the Illuminati colonizations of Europe starting with Accadian, Sumerian, etc, and the effect was and is the ethnical cleansing of the populations of the East considered “subhumans” by not only the Nazis, also today in the ‘official’ democratic cultural world you can't hear nothing else than a revisited and politically correct version of all that Nazi lies on the ‘Slaves’.

(I didn't mention the communists regime and ideology, it worked in a more subtle way, but remember the total despise of Karl Marx regarding the slaves.... Were they just preparing the punishment for the Russian byzantines? When Marx said that Germany, due to the material rapport between the classes, was the first nation to build socialism, and contemporarily said that the slave populations were in a primitive level of development and were just in a feudal pre-capitalistic material state of society, was all that crap a diversion in order to hide the real target of the 'communist revolution', i.e. the Russian and their anti-Guelph and Heretic Czars????)

So how fits all this with Carnutum and his 18.000 spectators? It fits,... it fits.

The 25.000 people Pola's Arena, the 18.000 or how many they were of the Carnutum's Arena was not only the application of a psychological technique you can see today in the sports fights. In those time REAL blood poured on the 'rena' (=sand), and the similarity of what happens today in sports is only the surface. This surface hide a satanic ritual sacrifice, the pouring of the blood. Meanwhile the people were screaming, laughing, etc. Can you imagine a better system to destroy the just little humanity and dignity laying in the earths of the people of those times? I not. So Rome was a monstrous machine to butcher all the remaining of moral, ethic and spirituality of the men and women of that ages. The result was a puppet-man, a product of the Roman society whose 'respect' for Rome was only idiot discipline without brain nor sentiment, a world where people don't ask themselves what they are doing not because the sense of duty but because they had no more sentiments, no more dignity which could have pushed to think about the evil nature of the surrounding world. All that was inherited by the Catholic Church.

And then the Catholic Roman Empire, which find his nest in the place where the blood was poured in the satanic ritual in the biggest quantity: ROMA! With his bloody Coliseum. What other place could be better????!?!?

And how was founded the Catholic Church????!?!? The same David Icke seems not to realize, when he tells you that Costantine, before de departure for the Niecean council in the 375, he killed or ordered to kill his wife and the son....What want the satanic gods from they adorers? That you give in a sacrifice what is most precious for you in order to achieve your goal. And the goal was the founding of the Catholic Church, another disguise for the Osiride's Sect! And the sacrificial victims were the wife and the son! The Catholic Church was founded thanks to a satanic sacrifice! (doesn't matter how the historians had disguised it).

So the big Arenas have a reason to exists, and not because they hosted Aliens during the spectacles....

I read about the megalithic building in the center of Europe. The author are scientifically dissident from the institution (but also covertly controlled by the church which uses them to drop a little piece of the truth for its goals). The Veneti, who are associated to the culture of the incineration, were born in the middle of Europe after the 1.500 and then around the 1.000 they arrived in the Italian peninsula till England and France. Somewhere they disappeared absorbed by local population, somewhere they survived and the Slovene today are a linguistic relict of them. The Slaves "coming from Carpati" is only rubbish. Then arrived the Celts, infact they arrived in Italy around the 400 b.C., well after the Venetic and Etruscan culture. Maybe the Celts were a population coming from East, Maybe they arrived in Europe before the formation of the Veneti, but were different of the common Celts, and were the one who caused the formation of this culture. Then this population could have evolved meanwhile the Veneti were spreading around Europe. After the Veneti arrived in Italy and formed the Veneti of Padana plane and the Etruscans (mixed with oriental population), the pre-Celts culture, finally evolved in the Celts, entered in the Padana Plane and a century before (V b.C.) in Center Europe, stopping the Amber road.....

Many things remain to understand, and the Celts and their origins are yet an obscure field of the European hystory.

But there was another culture in the Apeninic peninsula, not Roman, not Etruscans, not Veneti or other, which built cities following the constellation in the sky...But this the next time, I am writing too much!

And now Just a consideration from the first post:

".....Two main roads, called cardus and decumanus, criss-crossed the whole city. Their intersection was the center of the social and religious life, while four main gates were placed at their ends..."

All this is 100% Etruscan, the Roman only copyed that, with little fantasy!!!!!!

"...For instance, the study did not examine the orientation of Pompeii. This city's two main roads are not obvious since the Romans later modified the city's layout...."

Also Pompei was built by the Etruscans, the first layers are full of Etruscans material!!!! The Romans, the Great Parasytes of the Ancient Times, just arrived later!!!!

The motto of Rome? "Suck and Destroy"!

I'm not sure, but i think i can remember some stones with runes nearby, but what i remember for sure is, that not far away is the castle of Rosenau (48° 36' 4" N, 15° 3' 49" O). In there is a masonic lodge, wich is a museum today and it has a nice wallpainting in its main staircase, showing atlantis AND this strange tower.

So what are they are trying to tell? They knew it for sure, maybe they built it, at least they are masons ;) .

Two other artifacts:

A Situla (dated 500 B.C) was found at a village near my hometown and proofs that even wine was there before the romans.

And this:

was found circa 30 kms away near the danube: The Venus or Woman of Willendorf.

It may be one of the oldest pieces of art ever found, and it's amazing what love of detail and craftsmanship it shows.

it was estimated to have been carved between 24,000 - 22,000 BCE.

Some people are trying to tell the world did not have existed at this time :D .

The oldest has been found on the Golan Heights as wiki tells.

Examples of Venus figurines include:

Venus of Berekhat Ram (stone, about 233,000 to 800,000 years old)
Venus of Tan-Tan (stone, about 300,000 to 500,000 years old)
Venus of Lespugue (ivory, about 27,000 years old)
Venus of Dolní Vistonicice (ceramic, about 27,000 to 31,000 years old)
Venus of Willendorf (limestone, about 24,000 to 26,000 years old)
Venus of Brassempouy (ivory, about 22,000 years old)
Venus of Laussel (limestone relief, about 20,000 years old)

Maybe the order of appearance may leave a track to follow.

9/11 Truth Seekers Only Touching Tip of the Iceberg When it Comes to Nabbing Real Culprits

The truth to who caused 9/11 leads right to the doorstep of the Vatican and Jesuit Order. According to an inside source, members of the New York Rotary Club, The Knights of Malta, Opus Dei and Sons of Italy need to be investigated.

By Greg Szymanski, JD

<http://www.arcticbeacon.com/articles/24-May-2007.html>

New information has surfaced linking the real culprits behind 9/11 to underground connections to the Vatican, including the Monte Carlo P2 Masonic Lodge, the head of the New York Rotary Club, the U.S. organization called The Sons of Italy, Opus Dei and The Knights of Malta, a group working for Rome with tentacles extending to the U.S., Italian and Russian mobs.

"Your analysis regarding George Hugo Balestrieri (9/11 connections) was quite interesting. However, you only scratched the surface," said a source close to the Vatican in Rome, commenting about Balestrieri's inside knowledge of 9/11, which will lead to former Mayor Giuliani, Cardinal Egan and other high-level U.S. officials, including Bush and Cheney who are only Vatican puppets.

"You are at the tip of an iceberg that is 10 miles below the surface!"

Recently, high-level Monte Carlo P2 Lodge insider, Leo Zagami, said he had discussions prior to 9/11 with Ezio Giunchiglia of the Masonic Monte Carlo P2 Board of Directors and Balsetrieri, head of the New York Rotary Club, indicating both New World minions had prior knowledge of the WTC disaster.

Zagami said these discussions also revealed the Vatican hierarchy, including Cardinal Egan, and high-level Jesuit Order officials as well as high level U.S. government officials like Giuliani and Bush (minions for the Vatican) also had prior knowledge and were instrumental in pulling off 9/11, killing more than 3,000 innocents.

"This was their first step in the strategy of tension they wanted to create in order to implement the Vatican plan of one world government and religion," said Zagami, who defected from his Illuminati bosses about 8 months ago, deciding to tell the world the inside truth about how the New World Order really operated behind the scenes.

Zagami's revelations have connected the Vatican and Jesuit Order to a tight-knit web of deceit and manipulation, involving Masonic lodges, the Knights of Malta (including the Russian faction), Opus Dei and government officials at the highest levels in most every country in the world.

"They control both sides of the war in the Middle East, control government heads of the major players and control all the intelligence agencies of the world like the Mossad and CIA, all working for the same New World Order purpose of complete fascism," added Zagami, who worked as a high-level Illuminati propagandist in the music and entertainment industry before defecting.

"I know how they work and I know they won't settle for less than total world domination, including complete control of America. They want to control the entire media at all levels, including the alternative media and by doing this they can do their evil work under the cover of darkness. We must expose them for what they are: evil Satanists working for the evil Black Pope, the Jesuit Gen., Fr Peter Hans Kolvenbach, who pulls all the strings behind the scenes."

Regarding Balestrieri, another high level source in Rome close to the Vatican, said if this man who now holds American citizenship and given favors by U.S. high level officials is ever investigated properly, the real culprits of 9/11 can finally be nabbed.

"Balestrieri is a low level Ninja who gets his orders from a couple of layers high above him. The day of 911 he was conveniently not at his office but at a Rotary meeting at the UN," said the source who wished to remain anonymous for his safety, adding this is only the beginning of getting to the real culprits behind 9/11 and other staged terrorist activities orchestrated around the world.

"It should be known that Balestrieri is currently being investigated by a couple of European (UK, France, Germany, Switzerland, Austria etc.) services and the Russians. Due to his old connections to Russia it is suspected that he is instrumental in helping to facilitate the Russian 'informal' sector in the Republic of San Marino. San Marino is a totally independent country, and a landlocked territory right near Rimini/Italy - Adriatic Sea. San Marino is not an EU member but is allowed to use the EURO. The Russian mobsters try to anchor into San Marino with gambling operations. This is a nightmare for the Italian government since they could not touch them there. The middle of the Adriatic Sea are international waters. The mobsters are meeting out there with their interlocutors from the mainland and it is very easy for them to slip in and out.

"Since the Ugolini Foundation is registered in San Marino and its president Boccardelli has diplomatic status, Balestrieri is believed to try to use this structure as a Trojan donkey for his hidden agenda to facilitate the Russians so they can establish casino there to launder their money and to run drugs via the Kosovo/Albania through San Marino into the EU. It is a fact that Boccardelli is absolutely clueless with respect to B really is and what is agenda is.

"Balestrieri seems also to use the humanitarian container 'relieve' shipments to wherever, to ship whatever else is shipped in those containers to those countries. After all, he has been doing this in the past. His Turkish activities with Kaan Soyak are also being investigated. Kaan Soyak is also an U.S. 'asset'(9/11 should be investigated here) being told what to do by is higher-ups.

"Also Balestrieri was at one time involved in business that related to Barsani in the Kurdish part of Iraq but it is believed that he was squeezed out there due to his utter incompetence."

In a past Arctic Beacon article, the following gives further information to investigators serious about unraveling the 9/11 plot and who was behind it.

"If you research Balestrieri and those around him, you will get to the truth about who caused 9/11 and it will lead right to the top people in the Vatican as well as Cardinal Egan and former New York Mayor Giuliani," said Zagami on a recent American radio appearance on Greg Szymanski's radio show, The Investigative Journal.

"These are the same people that caused the Bologna train station bombing and who used Italy as a test country for terrorism in the 1980's.

Although Gelli is in his 80's now, he still is very powerful and well-connected to the Vatican and those other people like Kissinger and Michael Ledeen in America who are nothing more than Vatican puppets.

"Regarding Baestrieri, he has worked for them for a long time and used to control arms deals in the the Italian port of Livorno involving America, the Vatican and the Middle East. He now has been given American citizenship and is head of the New York Rotary Club. He also owns a company which takes care of airport security in U.S. airports."

Besides Zagami's firsthand knowledge, not much else is known about Gelli or Balestrieri other than Gelli was implicated in the infamous Vatican Bank scandal in the 1980's as well as being a close associate of former President Reagan and his cabinet, having been seen and photographed standing right behind Reagan at his inauguration.

"The both knew about 9/11 and their connections will lead to the real perpetrators, but they will never talk -- never!" added Zagami, who claimed that Balestrieri has placed him on his "blacklist" for talking.

However, a confidential source has sent more information to the Arctic Beacon about Balestrieri, saying the leads if thoroughly investigated, will fill in many of the missing pieces about 9/11 and other important matters concerning the Vatican-led New World Order.

Here is the recent information send by the confidential source. Note that B and GHB stand for Balestrieri:

"Here are some leads you might want to investigate further to put the puzzle pieces together. The information that is being share with you are all facts.

"G.H.B. is a 'switched' off CIA/FBI asset. He was involved in so called anti drug operations for the US government. It was also through those channels that he obtained his US citizenship.

"G.H.B's son was killed in an accident last Christmas in Italy. He had been an anti drug police officer who changed sides, became and addict, was hospitalized and jailed and then had the 'accident'.

"G.H.B. has been, or still is, on a special Italian/Senate advisory job with special privileges, fronting for and probably spying his masters in the US.

"It appear safe to assume that B is still involved in unauthorized technology transfer deals through his Italian/US connections. His alleged specialty is 'signals' / electronic eavesdropping equipment and other 'sniffer' electronics. He is 'using' www.rdn.it - Silvio Rononi to 'warehouse' for him.

"Late last year he anchored himself into a situation in Rome/Italy. The Giacomo Maria Ugolini Foundation, set up by the legendary, Republic of San Marino ambassador Ugolini, who died in early 2006, that has its offices at www.villavecchia.it , a hotel / guest house near Frascati/Rome. The foundation's president is the ambassador's deputy Dr. Angelo Boccardelli, an artist and scholar, rather than a businessman. Villa Vecchia is practically bankrupt.

"B. positioned himself as the international adviser to Dr. Boccardelli. Boccardelli has done extensive research on a sculpture alleged to have been carved by Michelangelo. This sculpture is owned by Boccardelli/the Ugolini Foundation.

"B has taken Boccardelli to New York to promote and capitalize on the Michelangelo research results that Boccardelli hold. At the end of the Boccardelli interview, video clip you'll see B position himself with a comment that pretty much confirms all that has been stated here <http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=0ojNVJY4OVc>

"In spite of the fact that Boccardelli was ambassador Ugolini's right hand for decades, he is not a businessman and has pretty much no international experience, except for having been in Egypt, Jordan and Syria with the ambassador. Those were the countries Ugolini had been accredited for.

"Boccardelli still holds diplomatic status with the Republic of San Marion. B is trying to gain diplomatic status using and instrumentalist Boccardelli so he can engage in activities under the protective umbrella that come with a person's diplomatic status. <http://www.esteri.sm/default.asp?id=2195>

"A person that could probably give you very deep Italian insights is the Marchese Roberto Caldirola in Rome. A somewhat unique and colorful individual with a vast network in Rome. Caldirola can give you more in depth information due to his intimate knowledge of the Italian scene.

"Through B's prominent involvement with the Rotary Club at the UN in NY City - Free Mason Light - he is instrumentalizing that avenue as well to keep a front of legitimacy. Within Rotary NY he is collaborating with a Turk - Kaan Soyak -, a wheeler dealer who is being used by certain groups within the Turkish power elite to facilitate 'certain' transactions between the US and Turkey. There is a connection with a NATO contract one of Soyak's companies hold in Turkey. B and Soyak organized a multi state conference in Turkey two years back where all the regional players got together, using Rotary and their Free Mason components to make that all happen. There were more than 400 people at that event.

"B, being in his early/mid sixties , being a failure and left over from the cold war era, being personally bankrupt, he grabs any straw he can get to use others for his very own and short term gain. In how far he is being still 'used' by his former handlers is not known. Caldirola might be in a position to tell you more.

"There is also a very interesting connection to an Italian lawyer Fabrizio De Silvestri in Turino. De Silveri's father and brother run a prominent private banking operation out of Monaco. They are most certainly all P2 members.

"This is also a very well camouflaged connection to Opus Die and B.

"Please note that most of the people are not aware who B really is and who he fronts for at any given time. This is especially true for Bocardelli /Ugolini Foundation."

Title: Israel, Vatican resume tax dispute talks

Description: Something Unspoken Happening

Space Doubt - May 24, 2007 01:29 AM (GMT)

Could it be that when Israel accepts the Vatican's tax exempt status they also accept the Roman Law that goes along with it? And other centuries old agreements?

<http://www.metimes.com/storyview.php?Story...23-121518-6634r>

VATICAN CITY -- Diplomats from Israel and the Vatican have resumed talks in Rome over disputed church properties and taxes in Israel after a five-year silence.

After crafting a treaty in 1993, the two countries established formal diplomatic ties a year later, but long-standing disagreements remained over the Roman Catholic Church's tax-exempt status in Israel, a Los Angeles Times correspondent reported from Rome.

While Israel wants the church to pay taxes on churches, shrines, monasteries, and cemeteries, the Vatican claims that their tax-exempt status was defined centuries before Israel became a country in 1948.

Talks are further complicated because of disagreement over whether Israeli law or the Vatican treaty should prevail, the report said.

In a joint statement issued after the first meeting Monday, the sides said that there was an atmosphere of "great cordiality, mutual understanding, and goodwill," although Vatican negotiator Father David-Maria Jaeger, an Israeli-born Franciscan friar, said, "there is a lot, lot more work to be done."

Frank and Martin Keating Jesuit Coadjutors

Frank Keating is the Governor of Oklahoma. He received his A.B. from Georgetown University and his J.D. from the University of Oklahoma. Keating began his career of government service as a Special Agent of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, after which he served as an assistant district attorney in Tulsa. In 1972 he was elected to the Oklahoma House of Representatives, and in 1974 he won a seat in the Oklahoma State Senate, where he served for seven years ultimately as minority leader. In 1981 he was appointed by President Reagan as U.S. Attorney for the Northern District of Oklahoma, and was later elected chairman of all of the U.S. Attorneys. >From 1985 to 1991 Keating served the Reagan and Bush administrations as Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, Associate Attorney General, and General Counsel and Acting Deputy Secretary at the Department of Housing and Urban Development; in these capacities he oversaw the operations of virtually every federal law enforcement agency. He was elected Governor of Oklahoma in 1994, just five months before the bombing of the Murrah Federal Building in Oklahoma City. As governor during the crisis, he was instrumental in organizing rescue and recovery operations and in facilitating aid to the bombing victims and their families. He was reelected in 1998.

CRAIG-OXLEY - May 24, 2007 11:07 PM (GMT)

regarding martin keating's book:

it is strange book indeed, one that included a Murrah Building-like event in OK city, a bomb planted on railroad tracks to explode beneath the amtrak running from nyc to dc (think london's 7/7 subway blast), and a shutdown of a commercial airliner climbing from takeoff by a shoulder-strapped SAMMIE. this latter event occurred in 2005 and was reported by CBS radio, then the story disappeared. a commercial airliner, i believe an AA flight, taking off from LAX en route to O'Hare, reported a missile being fired at and missing it on takeoff. when the airliner deplaned in chicago, the pilots were told it was a bottle rocket. yeah, a bottle rocket at 15-20,000 feet. we heard the report out of CBS affiliate 540 AM out of Orlando, then it disappeared for good.

also about keating's book "the final jihad": it's antagonist was a character name McVay (McVeigh). the book was released in 95 and does include references to the Murrah Building event, but the references are paranthetical to the story and seem injected into the novel as if they were put there to defuse any "precognition" of the event. this would not be a difficult pre-publication thing to do.

but what i find to be even stranger is that this manuscript was copyrighted by the Library of Congress in 1991 and cataloged as a manuscript not as a book, and as of 2005 there had been no copyright on the book still. the manuscript was also just over 700 pages.

the point being: why did the manuscript sit unpublished for four years? did martin as well as frank know the shape of things to come and was martin a bit premature about writing about the fictitious events that would become reality?

does this mean, then, that these cretins knew of the events that would transpire well in advance of the real events? what do they know now about what is to come? and since i think we can, in consensus, agree that books, movies, and TV serve as predictive programming and conditioning, what have these outlets already told us about what is to come?

what i find most unsettling is "the sum of all fears," a movie that lays out a plan to detonate a mini-nuke at a stadium, in this case, in baltimore. and the irony of that location is not lost on those who are party to this e-mail group.

Bush also set to meet with his evil master, Pope Benedict XVI, on June 9. And according to the head of the Monte Carlo P2 Lodge as told to high-level defector, Leo Zagami, the Pope has a 24-year-old gay lover!

By Greg Szymanski, JD

<http://www.arcticbeacon.com/articles/23-May-2007.html>

According to researchers not afraid to tell the truth, the Vatican and the Jesuit Order appear to have their "dirty hands" into most every aspect of American culture including banking, the press, Hollywood, politics, education and religion.

For example, according to Eric Jon Phelps, author of the Vatican Assassins, Americans are being hoodwinked and brainwashed by the big shots in power who owe their allegiance to the Pope not the American people.

"When the truth is suppressed, people make bad decisions, based upon only what they know, not upon the truth they ought to know," said Phelps, a staunch Calvinist who believes Bible-believing Christians are being targeted by Rome and Washington. "You won't see any of the truth about the Vatican in the mainstream media or on shows like Alex Jones, Jeff Rense or John Statdmiller's as behind the scenes RBN and GCN are nothing but Jesuit controlled stations like all the big networks in the mainstream."

Phelps warns people that if Vatican tyranny isn't confronted and exposed, the Pope's modern-day inquisition will soon wipe-out and persecute Americans by the millions.

To further illustrate America's obedience to the Papacy, President Bush will hold his first meeting with Pope Benedict XVI June 9 at the Vatican, the White House has announced.

U.S. Ambassador to the Holy See Francis Rooney said Bush and the Pontiff would discuss the "shared commitment of the United States and the Holy See to promoting human dignity around the world."

The President and his wife, Laura Bush, will stop in Vatican City after attending a Group of Eight (G8) summit on 6-8 June in Heiligendamm, Germany, as critics said Bush will feel right at home with his other Nazi friends.

Regarding Bush's meeting with the Pope, Leo Zagami, former high-level Illuminati defector from the Monte Carlo P2 Lodge, said:

"What will Bush really say to the Pope is a different story, we can only imagine the pious Bush in front of his evil Master, Pope Ratzinger. The U.S. President is a degenerate individual and a slave of the satanic system promoted by the Vatican and some of most prominent Zionist families, as Bush is being used as a good actor for their evil play."

Zagami, a former high-level propaganda artist for the Illuminati and the Vatican, also said Hollywood and its big players are also deeply connected to the New World takeover, including people like media mogul Rupert Murdoch, producer and director, Ron Howard, and actor, Tom Hanks as well as Da Vinci code writer, Dan Brown.

"We find also very interesting at present the meeting to be held in Rome in secret this month between Dan Brown and the Vatican clergy , a meeting organized by the illustrious Freemason and Grand Master of the Illuminati Giuliano Di Bernardo," said Zagami, adding that Brown has been a long time Vatican shill and propaganda artist

"This meeting will include the presence of the powerful Cardinal from Bavaria Friedrich Wetter, Bishop of Monaco and the Billionaire Illuminati Rupert Murdoch plus actor Tom Hanks and Scientology film director Ron Howard.

"So what a mix for this Illuminati dinner in Piazza di Spagna 35 in Rome just a month before the arrival of the U.S. President George W. Bush one of their most prominent Illuminati puppets of the New World Order. The Illuminati in Rome are officially discussing the release of the film Angels and Demons. I think that's a very appropriate move and it's going to be b a very special dinner between "Mind Controllers" of the highest levels."

Zagami has also told Americans that he has first hand knowledge that the 9/11 truth movement has been infiltrated by a highly-organized pysops campaign in order to suppress the truth.

He further adds that he has spoke prior to 9/11 with the head of the Monte Carlo P2 lodge and head of the New York Rotary Club, Georgio Hugo Balestrieri, who both knew about 9/11 before it took place.

"The investigation of these individuals will lead to the true masterminds of 9/11, including Cardinal Egan and former Mayor Giuliani," said Zagami this week on Greg Szymanski's radio show, The Investigative Journal, now on www.libertyradiolive.com. "The supposed 9/11 truth leaders like Alex Jones won't touch this stuff and further won't even have me on his show. What does this tell you? It tells me he is hiding the Vatican's role in the the New World Order and is probably working for them and their propaganda machine."

Talking again about the Bush meeting with the Pope, Zagami added:

"But let's go back to George and his Papal visit to submit once again to the mighty man in white sitting in St. Peter's throne, a visit clear like the light of the day that will finally get a few people thinking that this is the real thing, this is the USA submission to Vatican Luciferian Powers!"

In the meantime, Zagami said Italy like America is being rocked by satanic, drug-induced sexual abuse cases in in the schools.

"Children say they were forced in satanic sexual abuse and forced to drink blood in rituals," said Zagami. "For this reason six persons were arrested in Rome accused of sexually abusing 15 children from the age of three to the age of six at the nursery school, Olga Rovere of Rignano Flaminio, in the vicinity of Rome.

"Satanism is expanding and on the rise and we have to stay aware of this problem especially in these times. Today, Satan has free hands. This does not mean that he has more power than in the past, but the door is wide open to him. Primarily, today we live in a period of little faith. It is purely mathematical: when faith declines, superstition grows. When we abandon God, we give ourselves to practices that open the door to Satan.

"There is no doubt that today's media piloted by the Illuminati have done much in favor of Satan, first by the immorality of certain shows, the abundance of movies showing violence, horror or sex. Well it seems we have to fight Satan now more than ever and I don't think that sitting down doing nothing is the right solution.

"We need to be active against all the evil promoted by Satan and his followers around the world we need to start a dialogue with those people who like us want a better world. Let's pray and hope God will give us the strength."

Daniel - May 24, 2007 01:22 AM (GMT)

Dan Brown attempts to paint a picture that Jesus has a bloodline and that Royal Blood can claim to be of same stature as Jesus Christ by being somehow blood related. The Royals despise Christ and so they once again are using this to get more power.

Some Christians may worry over such a bloodline issue or whether Jesus had any children or even a wife but it is a joke from the very fact that Jesus had no need for sexual intercourse; for he could create life without it needing to come into this world through any lust at all. Jesus had no wife, or children by blood but in Spirit, we are all connected together. But this is the very point which the Jesuits wish to suppress at all costs.

They suppress anything of the spirit and replace that Spirit with an imposter Jesuits will typically put forth an exaggeration of the 'KING JESUS' principle. The purpose of which is to demounce the 'Christhood' and reinforce the human aspect of eternal life. Thus the Jesuits sin against the Holy Spirit! Mel Gibson's movie also accomplished much in this very wrong aspect. Gibson's Jesus is but an image and a phantom of the truth, or an illusion stemming from a lazy understanding of Christ and lazy reading of the Gospels.

Dan Brown's job is to plant the seeds of deceit within all Christians. He does nothing of truth-seeking and serves Satan's plan today. They all know very well that the second coming must be averted in Spirit and so they plant a SATAN or the new King in Christ's place.

Jesus had no children, married no women and was the end of the blood line of david as to Kings. He was to sit on the throne of David forever and he is. This is just the same crap our forefathers went thru with the same demonic bastards. The pope, international bankers, and the assbag royalty. Gee the bible says exactly that, amazing. Remember our founding fathers were mostly English, German and Dutch. They were products of the reformation, no they were not all masonic, thats more history changing, which the books that prove this, are getting hard to find.

As far as this bloodlines thing...Judah had twin sons with Tamar. One of them was the ancestor of David, and of Jesus. According to a file someone sent me, today's royals are descended from the OTHER twin. If that's true, that would make me of the tribe of Judah, since I'm descended from Edward III among others. :P

I don't buy into anyone being descended from Jesus for one single minute. That's just setting the stage for the Beast.

recontanker55 - May 24, 2007 04:45 PM (GMT)

I am in the library and am not very good with a computer, scripture says Jesus was the 1st and the last of the Kings in the line of judah, not that Mary didn't have other children, but He was the first and the last, he chose the line of judah to represent him until his 1st advent, and was the last after His reserection. He is the last in the line of Kings and is King of Kings. My Great grandfather was supposed to be of Scottish royalty, disowned because he married an irish patotoe farmer, so goes the family lure. God bless him, I would want no part of that royal trash. No King but King Jesus, that Americas heritage. Semper fi!

Alexandra - May 24, 2007 05:12 PM (GMT)

Amen! :lol:

I'm 2nd cousin many times removed to King James...I'm also descended from the Stuarts.

I'm content with being an American housewife living in a two-bedroom apartment. Given what shenanigans today's royalty is up to....

Wonder if they would also choose the name Illuminati for the movie in Germany.

I've read both 'Da Vinci Code' and 'Angels and Demons'. Dan Brown is an over-hyped, rotten writer. It's kids' stuff for grown-ups to feel all clever that they've read a book. Populist trash.

grandw - May 24, 2007 07:11 PM (GMT)

I've read both too, but these are rather flat, short readings that leave real secrets completely untouched. Both are a classical "Schnitzeljagd" as we would call it in German.

"Angels and Demons" is the better of the two books, as it shows a little bit of (planned) architecture of Rome, a little bit like Washington D.C.

Quite entertaining fiction, but it never reaches the quality of others, like Terry Pratchett.

wolveshater - May 24, 2007 10:26 PM (GMT)

I was just thinking this morning what ever Hollywood comes up with will be Kindergarden junk, I will never put one red cent in Hanks pocket either, not ever. Hanks doesn't pay his bills until you sue him in court. He will be the ultimate Slave master in the Brave new Future. He built a 10 million dollar mansion here and it took two years for workers to be paid by him and his bitch. Hanks and his crack whore tried to skip out on 1.4 million at completion of his trophy house. Tom's a stuck up Dirt bag peice of crap.

Description: give us a clue why!

CRAIG-OXLEY - June 5, 2006 11:54 AM (GMT)

Music, sound, frequency can do many things to the body wether good or bad. The Jesuit elite like to push negativity and depression upon the public herd. The Jesuits utilise music like Heavy Metal etc and engineer a young generation around these negative things they wish to use as a weapon against the herd. I strongly suggest you take a look at this article below and you'll see just one example of the power of classical music and especially MOZART. The Jesuits absolutely adore Mozarts work now remember that these people were all Freemasons and aware of frequency work. Everything on this planet isn't chemicals and compounds its pure FREQUENCIES plan and simple within a Holographic matrix. I also strongly suggest people take a look at Dr Leonard Horowitz's CD's with the Solfeggio tones etc upon them which have some good results. -2tuff smashstuff - June 5, 2006 12:29 PM (GMT)

Yeah, totally agree, we are vibrations, and horrible music messes with that, and if you're sensitive, you will feel it. It's like the 'Kiaai' shout in karate, which messes with your opponent's vibrations and intimidates them, or studies showing the structure of water completely messing up when a person yells horrible things at it for ages, yet will show beautiful crystal patterns when told that it is loved.

If I'm in a pub or something and the music is terrible, it puts me in such a bad mood, especially when its what I consider MK-Ultra mindwash music like Christina Aguilera/Dido/Britney Spears/Justin Timberlake/Pussycat dolls etc. It makes me want to puke, as I'm very sensitive to music and vibrations, some people just aren't sensitive in that way at all I've found.

I believe part of the reason behind the proliferation of protools/digital recordings is the lack of warmth that results in the recording, which gives out negative vibrations and flatness.

When music is recorded on analogue tape, there is a certain magic and extra frequencies I believe that go onto the tape along with the music, and it surrounds it and gives it that warmth that the human ear loves, the same as people who are adamant that vinyl sounds much better than CD because of the organic sound of vinyl.

CRAIG-OXLEY - June 5, 2006 12:32 PM (GMT)

Exactly, digital is useless and infact the quality of music has dropped even further since the creation of the CD. Any decent music buff of professional standard and enthusiast will tell you that digital isn't a patch on analogue.

Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart at the age of eleven when he composed an opera for the Jesuit college in Salzburg

Mozart

Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart is described by Norman Lloyd in The Golden Encyclopedia of Music as "the most complete genius of all composers." In Italy he was decorated by the pope and given musical instruction by the "grand old man" of music in Rome at the time of Padre Giambattista Martini. His own father, Leopold Mozart, was also a famous teacher and composer and wrote the most important music book of the eighteenth century - on violin playing. As a Capellae Magister, he arranged to have his son Wolfgang Amadeus compose an opera in Latin for production in the Jesuit College in Salzburg. Fülöp-Miller tells this story in the context of how widely accepted was the contribution to music originating in the Jesuit schools.

The composers were, for the most part, directors of the cathedral choirs in the various cities and the music teachers of the Jesuit schools. Other musicians were at times called upon, and among these latter was no less than Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart. In the year 1767, at the age of eleven, Mozart was commissioned to compose an opera in Latin as an interlude for the tragedy, Clementia Croesi, which was to be produced at the Jesuit college in Salzburg. The title of this small musical composition was Apollo et Hyacinthus; and, on the play-bills, the author was described as follows: Auctor operis musici nobilis dominus Wolfgangus Mozart, undecennis, filius nobilis ac strenui domini Leopoldi Mozart, Capellae Magistri. [The author of this musical work is the noble Lord Wolfgang Mozart, aged eleven, son of the noble and vigorous Chapel director, Lord Leopold Mozart.] After this performance, Mozart gave the audience a recital which lasted far into the night. (Fülöp-Miller, 1930, p. 415)

QUOTE

The Jesuits and The Mozarts

Catherine Sprague

Recently while reading some of the letters of Wolfgang and Leopold during their travels through Italy, I came across some references to the Jesuits. I decided to do a little research and this led to an article about them during the time of Mozart's life. Here is what I learned.

On the morning of All Saint's Day in November, 1755, very close to the day of Wolfgang Mozart's birth, a major earthquake struck in Portugal with such great force that 30,000 of Lisbon's population were killed, most of them helplessly crammed in churches for the morning's religious services. The city's spiritual leaders, among them prominent leaders of the Society of Jesus (better known as the Jesuits) explained the tragedy as a just punishment from God for Portugal's unremitting sins. Leopold Mozart, shortly before the birth, commented in a letter to his Violinschule publisher Lotter in the Bavarian town of Augsburg "God be praised! as yet there has been no earthquake here (in Salzburg)". Tremors had been felt in Munich and nearby Augsburg. And Maria Anna, Wolfgang's mother, was a very nervous seven months pregnant and had already lost five children to other calamities of one sort or another.

Tiny Salzburg was not directly affected from the earthquake. However, a series of events was to eventually unfold that would change the world in which Wolfgang lived. The Jesuit explanation for the massive earthquake might have ordinarily been accepted as traditional church dogma, but as things turned out the face of Europe had been changing in its thinking. The Enlightenment was flourishing in various regions throughout Europe and the Jesuit response was now considered unacceptable. Voltaire and others hurled cynical criticisms towards the clergy concerning their response. Since members of the Society of Jesus answered to the Pope and not to monarchs, they were also viewed as far too powerful in this age of the absolutist monarchies. No longer considered as a necessary force to counteract the Reformation, the Jesuits and their world-wide missionaries were now quite literally standing on the edge of a precipice. In the year that the earthquake struck, Portugal's ruling elite believed that the Jesuits were conspicuously flouting royal authority and responsible for a myriad of societal problems --peasant revolts in South America, riots against monopolies in Europe, scandalous commercial activities and worse, attempted assassination of their own monarch. The time had come for the Suppression of the Jesuits.

Soon, anti-Jesuit propaganda flowed from the pens of their enemies to force hundreds of arrests, investigations, and expulsions. In all, some 1100 Jesuits were banished just in 1761 from Portugal alone, but many more thousands would follow suit in boats seeking refuge in the Papal States. Anti-Jesuit sentiment quickly spread into Spain, France and Italy. Jesuit properties were confiscated in many parts of Europe and members were expelled from their universities and no longer allowed to operate as an order. In 1764, the Order of the Jesuits was finally dissolved in France, and in 1767 they were expelled in Spain as well. The Kingdom of Naples and duchy of Parma (satellite states of the Spanish Bourbons) followed suit. In 1768 pressure mounted on the Pope to comply with the wishes of the Bourbon monarchs---suppress the Jesuits worldwide or else. Pope Clement XIII would not comply and even threatened excommunication to those he especially felt deserved it. Jesuits from all over the world were landing on the island of Corsica because Rome neither had the money nor space for any more of the Society's members.

The first we hear of the Mozarts' awareness of problems for the Jesuits is in 1770, when Wolfgang is traveling with his father in Italy. By this time a number of events had severely curtailed the power of the Jesuits and they were on the verge of total suppression, even in Catholic Italy where the Pope was still trying to find ways to pacify his opponents. He used his stick when he thought this would work by threatening excommunication to the fiercest proponents of their suppression, one of whom the Mozarts would shortly meet.

Leopold Mozart himself was closely affiliated with the Jesuit community having been educated in their own institutions in Augsburg. Southern Germany and much of the Hapsburg Empire was filled with Jesuit monasteries, universities and the scholars who pursued intellectual interests with impressive results. This was not confined to merely religious issues, but instead encompassed science, philosophy and history and the classics. Jesuits were known throughout Europe and parts of the world not only for their missionary work, but more particularly for their scholarly work and as the "schoolmasters of Europe." Though generalizations need to be avoided, Jesuit schools sought to include the educational advances of humanism combined with a duty to become a pious Christian.

Throughout his life, Leopold remained indebted to the Jesuit 'way of thinking' and training that he received at their hands. (A better understanding of Leopold can probably be gained by understanding his Jesuit training.) He retained in particular the Jesuit need to "teach, preach, and indulge in exegetics" and practiced the true Jesuit approach to thinking--- an intellectual, analytical approach ---but a conservative one based on intense, devout faith at the same time, never questioning the foundations of his own faith.

Perhaps Wolfgang's first innocuous encounter with the political turmoil of the Jesuits came in 1764. He was only eight years old while touring in France, where the Jesuits were just on the verge of complete suppression. In a glittering salon within the palace of Versailles, after performing for the members of the French royalty, young Wolfgang attempted to kiss Madame de Pompadour, the mistress of King Louis XV (and of others.) We are not required to recall what occurred; for it is so well known--- she rebuffed him --- to which he exclaimed that even the Queen herself had allowed him to kiss her.

But Madame de Pompadour was not amused. She was still smarting from the refusal of her own Jesuit priest to forgive her for her adulterous liaisons, and she was counted among those who cared not for the Jesuits. At this very moment in France, there was intense turmoil in the religious community and within six months of Wolfgang's famous statement to Madame Pompadour, the anti- Jesuit forces had gathered enough strength to succeed in their ultimate objective. Perhaps if Wolfgang had met her after the dissolution of the Jesuits, her mood would have been more agreeable and she would have allowed Wolfgang's kiss!

When Wolfgang left Paris to cross the channel to visit London and then made his return visit to Paris, all of France no longer recognized the Jesuits. Although not formally banished from their country, many chose to leave on their own accord having had their properties confiscated. Others left because they might suffer the consequences of languishing in prisons for indeterminate periods of time.

Quite by accident and somewhat later, Wolfgang and his father visited several cities in the provinces of Italy where the matter of the Jesuits was nearly ready to explode. In the middle of December 1769, Leopold and his son innocently set off to Italy, and for the next 15 months they traveled extensively into areas where Jesuits had already been suppressed or where actual threats of war took place. The Mozarts visited Parma in 1770, less than two years after soldiers had been sent by the Bourbon monarchs to ensure Jesuits no longer had a secure foothold. Just after Parma, they visited Bologna and Leopold writes to his wife "Of expelled Jesuits alone there are more than a thousand." Later, after visiting Rome, Leopold continues with his thoughts, "Both here and in Rome we have been hearing lately of a great movement, the object of which is to suppress the religion of the Jesuits. The House of Bourbon absolutely refuses to be pacified and both Spain and France are still most insistently urging the Pope to dissolve the order. Furthermore a most violent book has appeared in Naples, the author of which is a certain Marchese Spiriti.... in a very satirical vein, doubtless at the instigation of the Spanish, Portuguese and Neapolitan courts." He says in his next letter that "people are very much afraid that the Jesuit order will be dissolved" and again later on that, "It is a great misfortune that now-a-days in Catholic countries, even in Italy, the most disgraceful pamphlets are being published against the authority of the Pope and the immunity of the clergy."

Leopold was quite right to be worried. The Bourbon monarchs were intensifying their pressure on the next Pope, Clement XIV. But ironically, shortly before Wolfgang and Leopold had their private meeting with the Pope, they had just been handsomely treated by one of the Pope's most bitter enemies; Bernardo Tanucci, the legendary Prime Minister to King Ferdinand IV of Naples. Tanucci was known throughout all of Europe for his success in diminishing the power of the Vatican by banishing the Jesuits in 1767 and introducing a more secular style of government. When the Pope had threatened him with excommunication, Tanucci responded with an occupation of his army near the outskirts of Rome.

Tanucci, however, treated the Mozarts especially well. On May 21, June 13th 18th and 19th in 1770, fourteen year old Wolfgang and his Jesuit educated father were taken on a tour by Tanucci's personal steward, Don Carlino. This tour included Vesuvius, Pompeii, Herculaneum and the famous Elysian Fields. Leopold commented that "This distinction amazed everyone, as this Prime Minister is really a king and has enormous influence." Leopold was correct here too, for the wife of King Ferdinand of Naples, Maria Carolina, a daughter of Austria's Maria Theresa, was struggling to diminish Tanucci's powerful grip. Her husband, King Ferdinand IV, had little power and what is more, seemed not to care. Wolfgang commented upon King Ferdinand IV in a letter to his mother and sister, "The King has had a rough Neapolitan upbringing and in the opera he always stands on a stool so as to look a little taller than the Queen. She is beautiful and gracious; on the Molo (that is a drive) she bowed to me in a most friendly manner at least six times."

Ultimately, the Pope finally and reluctantly signed a suppression document on August 16, 1773. He was under intense pressure from the Bourbon Monarchs and had no choice in the matter. Jonathan Wright, the author of the book, God's Soldiers put the situation this way: "For the sake of Christian peace, the Society of Jesus was destroyed." Wolfgang and Leopold were once again in Italy for the mounting of Lucio Silla when the Suppression Order was handed down in 1773.

Maria Theresa, eager to please her Bourbon pact partners, did nothing much to oppose the order. And from this point onwards, until 1814 when the Order was finally lifted, Jesuits over most of Europe had a rough time in a fast-paced, changing world. However, many were able to continue on in fields of education under the auspices of other organizations. In all, 728 educational establishments were disbanded and a quarter of a million students were forced to make other arrangements. No worse than this were the roughly six hundred libraries in Europe which changed ownership holding more than a half a million books, most of which were sold off as scrap paper.

In the end, the Suppression Order had the effect of freeing up assets in Austria which were seized and used to support various education efforts launched by Maria Theresa and Joseph II during the next twenty years. Ironically, Gottfried von Swieten, a friend/patron of Mozart and organizer of the Sunday midday concerts of baroque music, was himself educated at the Jesuit "Theresianum". He would serve under Joseph II as the president of the Education and Censure Commission, and though Jesuit educated, he would have a considerable influence on all state sponsored education.

Tiny Salzburg was also impacted; one of its Jesuits was Abbe Bullinger, who had studied at the Jesuit Seminary in Munich. After the dissolution of the Jesuit Society, he then became the tutor to Count Arco and his family. He was also a friend of the Mozart family and the person to whom Mozart wrote his famous letter from Paris asking for help in giving news to his father of his mother's death. In nearby Munich, this same Jesuit College was dissolved and turned over to the Maximilian Joseph III who was the Elector. The adjoining church of St. Michael's was turned into the Wittlesbach court church. The same basic pattern was likewise repeated elsewhere throughout the Empire until the era of the Napoleonic Wars when everything changed once again.

Since I understand some of underlying principals, some of this story makes sense.

Its a similar effect be it audio or video in comparing analog and digital. Life is flowing and continuous, it does not occur in discrete, chopped up samples. Same thing with measuring the passage of life, it's continuous, it does not occur in precise, quartz/digital 1 second pulses. Can a reasonable facsimile be created in playing back a series of chopped up samples? Undoubtedly so, no matter how one may define "reasonable facsimile", but as already said, when it comes to high fidelity, analog comes off as being a lot closer to the real thing.....something about an old analog commercial "is it live or is it memorex?" comes to mind.

Recordings of life would seem to follow. Whether it be capturing a snippet of sound or a snippet of sight, it would seem to reason that an analog record of such constitutes a tiny but nonetheless genuine impression of the actual life-energy of the subject matter. Analog photography in general and Kirlian Photography in specific seem to be profound examples. Just throwing an analogy that just occurred to me this moment (pardon the pun) B) , think of Creator as analog and Creator's cast-down malcontent impersonator as digital..... and in the back of my mind I'm also wondering about the prohibition of graven images be they analog or digital :blink:

As to the testing methodology in the linked article, it certainly provides some food for thought but it also generated many more questions for me than it answered. A few ways came to mind that may possibly allow the premise of such a test, and it's subsequent results, to be more legit and more meaningful. Why would a test that is trying to gauge/prove the effects of a particular sound expose one group to ten minutes of silence and the other to a ten minutes of said particular sound (Mozart)? I've often heard it said, especially of people who've lost one of their senses, that other senses become more sensitive as a result. Ergo, someone - like a person without sound for ten minutes (effectively deaf for 10 minutes), would experience a sharpening of their other senses, such as sight and touch. Around these parts, wild game hunting is still popular. I've often read expert gamesmen suggest that to have the best chance of identifying the presence of game in settings that do not lend well to visual location (woods, trees, briars and other visual obstructions), closing both eyes will allow the sense of hearing to become heightened. So, this came across as an irregularity while reading the article. For this reason, it does not make sense the silent testees did not score as well in seeing / recognizing the white shape on white background. Secondly, the article as provided does not provide ample detail to naturally reach the conclusion suggested. It may be a valid conclusion, but it's not one I reached from having read the article's limited explanation of the testing. If I really wanted to conclusively show the positive effects of Mozart, I would have exposed the second control group to all kinds of various ten-minute-samples of sound. For instance, how about one group listening to 10 minutes of Iron Maiden while the other group listens to Mozart? Had I been conducting such a test, I would have included numerous and various combinations with the two test groups. I possibly would have included Rieu, or Bach or other one of many other classical greats as the sample to compare results against Mozart. Again, not dis'ing the conclusion, just scratching my head as to how it was arrived at.

Lastly, maybe I'm exhibiting a touch of MC-Conspiracy-On-The-Brain, but upon reading the passage describing the use of headphones during the test immediately caused me to realize that the test results could have been contrived IE> through the use of Binaural Beats. Not saying they were contrived, but if the testers had such an agenda, the technology has certainly been available for many years to facilitate an agenda.

Good luck with your future career.

Just as an aside when one is 'dowsing' & using a photo as the witness(to perhaps find the cause of an illness) one cannot use a digital photo as it does not contain the etheric double(the bodies energy field which is close to the skin). All disease appears in the etheric field before possibly manifesting in the actual body.

That was what I was told at a recent healing course I attended.

Mozart music is not depressive at all, it's good.

Sorry if I misunderstood but my English is not good. I interpreted your statement "The Jesuit elite like to push negativity and depression upon the public herd" as if Mozart music was depressant.

Born - June 22, 2006 06:40 PM (GMT)

Mozart's I believe it was godfather was MESMER. Hmmm.... father of MESMERISM. Could Mozart have been a victim of ritual abuse and trauma-based mind control used to enhance his musical talents? I'd like your take on that stuff.

CRAIG-OXLEY - June 23, 2006 12:28 AM (GMT)

Well they like to push negativity upon the masses and their low down Jesuits and Roman Catholics but the elite will always do the opposite and they hold this sort of knowledge which aids them to themselves. Take for instance how they don't look you in the eye just like African tribes people as both understand the energy transference by eye balling one another. Both look over a shoulder or at the chest instead. Jesuits most likely stole this knowledge from the Africans at one time in their devious travels.

Born your thoughts are very possible!

This goes back to when you were not allowed to gaze upon royalty, as the elite knew that just looking into a person's eyes, or just plain looking at them can be a form of violence.

Funnily enough, while I was dozing off last night, I was half dreaming that someone was telling me that violence and looking meant the same thing. Weird!

Have you ever tried to go for a day without looking at someone's eyes? It's hard, but you may just feel better at the end of the day!

Music therapy 'can aid healing'

Wednesday, 19 July 2006, 23:17 GMT 00:17 UK

By Pallab Ghosh

BBC News science correspondent

<http://news.bbc.co.uk/1/hi/health/5194884.stm>

Listening to music makes us feel better - but many doctors are now beginning to believe that it does much more.

There is emerging evidence that it can bring about physical changes to the body that can improve our health.

The Chelsea and Westminster Hospital in London has regular performances - and has seen impressive results.

A scientific study by the hospital has found that patients who listen to live music need less drugs and recover more quickly than those who do not.

According to Dr Rosalia Staricoff, who carried out the study, there is growing scientific evidence that music aids physical changes which can help heal the body.

She said: "The physiological benefits have been measured. Music reduces blood pressure, the heart rate, and hormones related to stress."

Building evidence

Professor Paul Robertson regularly plays violin for patients in various hospitals.

He is a scientist as well as an accomplished musician.

He is now carrying out clinical trials to see how exactly music affects the brain and the body.

He said: "We are approaching the point where a doctor would legitimately be negligent not to actually recommend music as a therapeutic intervention.

"What we currently doing is building up the body of evidence so that we can say with clinical confidence that this is truly a beneficial intervention."

The worlds largest medical charity, The Wellcome Trust, is now bringing together academics and artists to explore the possibility of putting music therapy on a more scientific footing.

The man behind it is Dr Ken Arnold, head of public programmes for the trust.

He said "Our interest is in bringing together people as disparate as a musician, a psychologist, and a social thinker to share their ideas on music health and well being share their interest and ideas in music health and well being."

Alexandra - July 20, 2006 01:11 AM (GMT)

I love music myself...I used to play the flute in the school band and I taught myself how to read music at age 4. No, I was nowhere near Mozart's level! Basically I knew what a half note was, and what note was A, etc.

My son loves it too. Get him in the car, and the first thing he does is point at the radio--he wants it on!

My mother used to play the piano all the time, and my maternal grandmother used to sing opera.

I know music makes me feel better lots of times.

CRAIG-OXLEY - July 20, 2006 01:32 AM (GMT)

Go study Janet Swerdlow and see what she tells you about music & sound for healing and creating effects on the body. You should listen to Classical and even better would be to be in a live performance of Classical. It would be interesting to study the health and spiritual side of performers in this field.

I love connecting the dots.

When you know that the congregation of the Sacre Coeur de Jesus follows something you'd better look into it as those sneaky Jesuits know it all.

OutOfTheBox - July 20, 2006 03:52 PM (GMT)

A forum about classical art would be nice... offcourse only if you have enough information about that.

Bach, Mozart, Shakespear, Schubert, Schumann, Brahms, Haydn, Beethoven Chopin, Schiller, Marlowe, Verdi, Aeschylus etc...

Would like to know something... Does Digital music have any benefits? Anyone knows about toning, frequency, vibration, colors etc...? What about format? Red Book audio, WAV, MP3, FLAC, Ogg Vorbis etc... THX

CRAIG-OXLEY - July 20, 2006 11:14 PM (GMT)

No digital music has no benefits and you must get the records. So now you can see another reason the Jesuits are moving us to the digital era. The main reason is because they can indoctrinate us more with more data than ever. Now remember you can do more mind control with plasma tvs and all this high def digital crap. They dont do anything for you and your pleasure unless theres something they can use for their agenda against you.

WAV format is bad enough let alone the pathetic compression software

OutOfTheBox - July 21, 2006 03:14 AM (GMT)

so what do you guys use? vinyls, microcassettes, cassettes or gramophone records!

smashstuff - July 21, 2006 07:34 AM (GMT)

I have hundreds of cds, but I've become a vinyl junkie in recent years, just because there is so much more warmth in these, it's a much more organic sound.

Obviously the mastering of cds nowadays is light-years ahead of what it was 20 years ago, but I find that the masterers always use too much compression when mastering, so that it sounds good on the radio and grabs your attention (like the way adverts on TV are always at the maximum volume all the time they are on), the payoff being a lack of dynamic range.

If you're listening to music stored digitally, the best there is at the moment would be either dvd-audio or s.a.c.d., but sadly both of these are as good as dead.

The more compression you use(not dynamic compression, but squashing the actual size of the file), such as with mp3s, the more you lose the magic frequencies around the music, and in the world today, a lot of kids are just downloading mp3s of artists who record on protocols, so they have no idea of quality, and have never known the joy of pure vinyl taken from a quality analogue tape recording.

Alexandra - July 21, 2006 01:31 PM (GMT)

My husband likes records...we still have some around, and a record player. His aunt gave me an 8-track player.

I like cassettes. My minivan has a tape deck, which sadly is acting up right now.

Music Makes Your Brain Happy

By Randy Dotinga| Also by this reporter

02:00 AM Aug, 23, 2006

http://www.wired.com/news/technology/medte...l?tw=wn_index_2

As a rock producer, Daniel Levitin worked with Stevie Wonder, the Grateful Dead and Chris Isaak. But the music business began to change, and a disillusioned Levitin turned to academia, where a career in neuroscience beckoned.

Sixteen years after he made the switch, Levitin is an associate professor at McGill University in Montreal and one of the world's leading experts in cognitive music perception.

In his new book, This Is Your Brain on Music: The Science of a Human Obsession, Levitin explores research into how our brains process the works of artists as varied as Beethoven, the Beatles and Britney Spears, and why they make us feel so good. Wired News picks his brain about how it all works.

Wired News: Are there any myths about music that neuroscientists have exposed?

Daniel Levitin: I think we've debunked the myth of talent. It doesn't appear that there's anything like a music gene or center in the brain that Stevie Wonder has that nobody else has.

There's no evidence that (talented people) have a different brain structure or different wiring than the rest of us initially, although we do know that becoming an expert in anything -- like chess or race-car driving or journalism -- does change the brain and creates circuitry that's more efficient at doing what you're an expert at.

What there might be is a genetic or neural predisposition toward things like patience and eye-hand coordination. (On the other hand), you can be born with a physiology that gives you a pleasant-sounding voice, but that doesn't guarantee you'll have a career as a singer.

WN: What does music tell us about the brain?

Levitin: Through studies of music and the brain, we've learned to map out specific areas involved in emotion, timing and perception -- and production of sequences. They've told us how the brain deals with patterns and how it completes them when there's misinformation.

What we're learning about the part in the frontal lobe called BA47 is the most exciting. Music suggests that it's a region that helps us predict what comes next in a sequence.

WN: What have we learned about music perception from people with brain disorders or injuries?

Levitin: We've learned that musical ability is actually not one ability but a set of abilities, a dozen or more. Through brain damage, you can lose one component and not necessarily lose the others. You can lose rhythm and retain pitch, for example, that kind of thing. We see equivalents in the visual domain: People lose color perception or shape perception.

I think of the brain as a computational device: It has a bunch of little components that perform calculations on some small aspect of the problem, and another part of the brain has to stitch it all together, like a tapestry or a quilt.

WN: You write that you're more interested in the mind than the brain. What's the difference?

Levitin: The brain is a bunch of neurons, chemicals, water and blood.... The mind is the thoughts that arise from the brain. Anatomists and neuroanatomists are particularly interested in understanding how the brain is formed and how cells communicate. They're really looking at the architecture and geography of the brain....

What we're trying to do is figure out (which) parts of the brain do what and how they communicate with each other. But not simply on a level of description that discusses only neuron and cells, but one that also talks about real ideas, thoughts and memories.

WN: From an evolutionary perspective, why have humans developed music?

Levitin: There are a number of different theories. One theory is that music is an evolutionary accident, piggybacking on language: We exploited language to create music just for our own pleasure. A competing view, one that Darwin held, is that music was selected by evolution because it signals certain kinds of intellectual, physical and sexual fitness to a potential mate.

WN: How does that play out in rock 'n' roll, for example?

Levitin: (Research has shown that) if women could choose who they'd like to be impregnated by, they'd choose a rock star. There's something about the rock star's genes that is signaling creativity, flexibility of thinking, flexibility of mind and body, an ability to express and process emotions -- not to mention that (musical talent) signals that if you can waste your time on something that has no immediate impact on food-gathering and shelter, you've got your food-gathering and shelter taken care of.

WN: Do any animals show an appreciation for music?

Levitin: There's no evidence they do -- that birdsong is used in the same way we (use it, for instance, or) that animals use it for recreation. And some of the fundamental things we take for granted about music don't exist in the animal kingdom.

WN: What are we learning about the link between music and emotion in the brain?

Levitin: Music activates the same parts of the brain and causes the same neurochemical cocktail as a lot of other pleasurable activities like orgasms or eating chocolate -- or if you're a gambler winning a bet or using drugs if you're a drug user. Serotonin and dopamine are both involved.

WN: Could music be an antidepressant?

Levitin: It is already -- most people in Western society use music to regulate moods, whether it's playing something peppy in the morning or something soothing at the end of a hard day, or something that will motivate them to exercise. Joni Mitchell told me that someone once said before there was Prozac, there was her.

WN: What is an earworm, and what doctor do I see if I get one?

Levitin: It's the name the Germans give to these songs that get stuck in your head that you can't get rid of. If they're really bothersome, you can do what Neil Young told me: Become a professional songwriter. He writes songs to get them out of his head.

Failing that, the second thing you can do is go to a doctor and have them prescribe an antidepressant or anti-anxiety drug like Prozac or Ativan. Or the most common option, find an equally annoying song that's not bothering you right now, and it will replace the earworm with another one.

Four months late in responding to this quote -- but just stumbled upon The Unhived Mind a few days ago. This energy transference is fascinating, and not quite so simple as some imagine. I do not pretend to know the physics/biology behind it, or even what is really going on, but the phenomenon is quite real.

One does not have to look you directly in the eyes for it to occur. As implied by the sentence "Both look over a shoulder or at the chest instead.", it occurs to some degree just from someone looking at your face.

From some it is much stronger than from others. This is to be expected of course. More surprising is the fact that the effect is reversed from some people: there are those from whom you receive unpleasant energy when they are looking away from you, and only when they look at you do you feel comfortable. This is the exception, but it does occur.

Reason being that you may be resonating at 10 for instance but their only 3 and cannot go higher so therefore the energy difference creates this tension, fear etc. You can go lower but they cannot go higher.

The phenomenon occurs with everyone, not just those who regard others with emotion of some sort (animosity etc.). Some observations (for the usual situation, in which the effect occurs when someone else looks at you):

- (1) the effect is stronger when attention is on your eyes than nearby (such as your nose or forehead);
- (2) over your shoulder yields a weaker effect than on your face;
- (3) at your chest is considerably weaker than over your shoulder;
- (4) if someone looks into your eyes, and then closes his eyelids without any other change in his attention, the effect is weakened considerably.

I think your from the old CB forum right?

I presume you refer to Stuart Jackson's forum. If so, you are correct: I learned about CB's back in the spring of 2003.

CRAIG-OXLEY - October 25, 2006 08:15 PM (GMT)

Yes of course it happens with all but I was just pointing out why some people feel like they do when around certain folks who resonant higher.

Yes Stuart's site, I remember you and if I remember you were very much into coils?

laozu - October 25, 2006 08:40 PM (GMT)

Sorry 2TUFF: I did not read carefully enough.

Quite the opposite about coils. It is my experience that it is quite difficult to intermarry coils with crystals so that they work together correctly. There are those (sufficiently energy sensitive) that can, but these are a small minority, and I suspect more harm than good is done with them.

You may be thinking of my observations concerning Cesco's "little secret coil", which is an exception.

AVBibleBeliever - October 25, 2006 09:21 PM (GMT)

Well, JS Bach did include the initials A.M.D.G. in his signatures as did Freemason and Rosicrucian war criminal Pope JP II-the Jesuits were without a doubt JP II's penholders ruling the Vatican from Borgo Santo Spirito where the real ringleader of the Babylonian mystery religion of Roman Catholicism/Illuminati/Freemasonry Dutch Luciferian Peter-Hans Kolvenbach whose master is Satan "the god of this world" controls the governments of the world and all false religion. It is possible that the idea Bach wrote it might have been a fabrication of the Jesuits. I haven't seen any citation from a book that would confirm this.

The Use of Tonal Frequencies to Enhance, Heal, & Rejuvenate

[Editor's Note: This is an important article to read and study carefully. I suggest that you print it out so you can review it at your leisure and allow the full implications of this information to sink in. One of the 'secrets' of the universe, is the creative application of sound frequencies. John Worley Keely discovered this creative use of musical frequencies in the late nineteenth century and accomplished amazing feats that defied conventional physics and confounded the academicians of his day.

A film was made in the Himalayas in the 1930's showing a group of Tibetan monks, who with the use of ordinary Tibetan musical instruments, would gather into a pie-shape configuration and direct their playing towards a huge boulder that was located on the ground roughly one hundred fifty feet away and at the base of sheer rising mountain wall. About three minutes after the 'concert' began, the boulder began to vibrate and lift off the ground. A moment later, it shot up about 150 feet into the air and landed on a ledge above it, where other monks were using the boulders to seal the entrance of meditation enclaves that they had cut into the sides of the mountain.

Today, many people are enjoying a brisk business over the internet selling supplemental products or liquids that are 'encoded' with "special energies". Those "energies" are usually very specific sound, light, or color frequencies, or sometimes a combination of same. You can do your own "encoding" of food, water, or even gasoline, and reap the benefits without shelling out $40, $50, or $60 bucks for a 16 oz bottle of Wonder Elixir. You can also do many other things in a creative vein using the appropriate sounds or combination of sound frequencies. But first, you need to acquire a basic understanding of the principles involved in the creative application of sound energies and this article will serve as a good primer in that regard. In addition to Philip Ledoux's info, I'll be adding some additional explanations from the book, Healing Codes for the Biological Apocalypse referenced below, to further expand your education on this subject.

If you don't already own a frequency generator, you can get a free software download from NCH called the NCH Tone Generator. I'll be uploading another article soon which will explain the different types of frequency generators available and how to use them.

As synchronicity would have it, I was talking with a very helpful woman yesterday who I'll identify as "DRE". She put me onto a healing Shinto chant from Japan that was producing remarkable results for her. Using specific vocal sounds, uttered in a specific order, is another way to access the creative power inherent in sound. You can find her e-mail to me about the Shinto chant at the bottom of this article.

You should notice that as the Dark Side attempts to draw in their net and consolidate their New Order agenda, the Light Side counters with more and more "new stuff" to help you meet the challenge. This is one of the biggest reasons you should avoid wasting your time with people who peddle Doom & Gloom scenarios or attitudes of defeatism. The Law of Attraction is always at work, as the recent video "The Secret" makes clear. You attract to yourself, the same energy which you put out. Think negative, you get negative. Think positive, you get positive-and bounty.

Solfeggio, when used by musicians, means the ability to sight read music and sing the notes accurately (pitch wise) without the use of a musical instrument. For the purpose of this article, Solfeggio refers more to the notes of the diatonic music scale, known by everyone as "Do, Re, Mi,. etc. ..Ken]

December 1, 2006

Ken,

I have been a musician most of my life, and math has been one of my favorite subjects since primary school days. As a 26 year old man, the Navy taught me that there is more to electricity and electronics than the "on-off" switch. When I read Dr. Len Horowitz & Dr. Joseph Puleo's "Healing Codes for the Biological Apocalypse" which introduced the Solfeggio Frequencies, I was hooked.

Just recently, I encountered the extended Solfeggio Frequencies (I'm not certain whether it was a joint Horowitz & Puleo effort, or individual effort) and the suggested health possibilities are astounding. Gradually, other possibilities developed in my mind (and maybe others have done the same). I try not to plagiarize others, yet I seem to get inspirational ideas beyond the work of others whom I've encounter. Do realize that all the presentations I make here are the work of Horowitz & Puleo and others. All that I am currently attempting to do is to extend the application of the Solfeggio Frequencies.

TPTB give me a difficult time via the internet; thusly these pages will be sent to you as #1 of 6, #2 of 6, etc. I seem to have less failed deliveries this way. The Solfeggio "wheels" of necessity cannot be sent as a text file. They were developed in MS Word. Sometimes Word-documents deliver without a problem, other times they are garbled. Kindly give me some feed-back as to success or failure of delivery. Do realize that the "wheels" are not of my generation, I merely re-invented the wheel in MS Word so that my archival system is consistent.

Part 1 is this cover letter; part 2 is the background as I understand and collected information about; part 3 is the dowsing verification of ideas I had about the Frequencies (in the dowse, the format is: my original text with dowse-answers in braces and hopefully those dowse-answers are in a contrasting color); parts 4 and 5 are the redrawing of the Solfeggio wheel in MS Word; and part 6 is nothing more than the math work of developing the primary harmonics developed. Parts 4 through 6 are as an attachment because it is the only means I have of forwarding the drawings.

I shared preliminary ideas with friends, who in turn suggested that I forward the materials to specific individuals. It has taken a bit of time to put it all together logically. Tim, the dowser does not reflect my opinion about the difficulty of beating TPTB at their game of control. I personally have had close encounters with the enforcers of TPTB and am still "gun shy." My logical mind says that if we are able to apply the Solfeggio Frequencies as my original dowse lead me to, those individuals could be prime targets and live miserable lives should they take the results into high profile. The reason I try to get wide publication for even preliminary information is the relative safety of many minds and individuals working on similar (if not identical) solutions; TPTB have no clues as to whom picked up on the ideas presented when published, thusly nothing to work with as counter-actions until the end results surface.

Respectfully,
Philip N. Ledoux

In Healing Codes for the Biological apocalypse Dr. Leonard G. Horowitz and Dr. Joseph S. Puleo published the Secret Solfeggio Frequencies. Basically it is the "Doe, Rae, Mi, Fa, So, La, Ti, Doe" diatonic scale which we all learn in the first few grades of school.

Over time, the pitch of this diatonic scale has changed and somehow Horowitz and Puleo found the original pitch frequencies.

In the Solfeggio, "Ti" is missing and what we call "Doe" was known as "Ut". Here are the original pitch frequencies of these six notes:

1. Ut = 396Hz which reduces to 9 [reducing numbers: $3+9 = 12 = 1 + 2 = 3$; $3+ 6 = 9$]
2. Re = 417Hz which reduces to 3
3. Mi = 528Hz which reduces to 6
4. Fa = 639Hz which reduces to 9
5. Sol = 741Hz which reduces to 3
6. La = 852Hz which reduces to 6

They also state that Mi is for "Miracles" or 528Hz - is the exact frequency used by genetic engineers throughout the world to repair DNA.

Another interesting tidbit that the authors included as a musical scale with words, from the work of John Keely; where Keely related the hues (not pigment colors) of light related to musical notes. On the "G-Clef" with "C" being the first line below the staff and continuing up the scale and up the staff:

C = Red = Tonic
D = Orange = Super Tonic
E = Yellow = Mediant
F = Green = Sub Dominant
G = Blue = Dominant
A = Indigo = Super Dominant, Sub Mediant
B = Violet = Leading Tone, Sub Tonic
C = Red = Octave

Also included with this chart was another from the Dinshah Health Society:

Red = 397.3Hz Closest Note: G = 392Hz
Orange = 430.8 Closest Note: A = 440
Yellow = 464.4 Closest Note: A# = 466
Lemon = 497.9 Closest Note: B = 494
Green = 431.5 Closest Note: C = 523
Turquoise = 565.0 Closest Note: C# = 554
Blue = 598.6 Closest Note: D = 587
Indigo = 632.1 Closest Note: D# = 622
Violet = 665.7 Closest Note: E = 659
Purple = 565.0 (reverse polarity) Closest Note: A# and E = 562 (both reverse polarity)
Magenta = 531.5 (reverse polarity) Closest Note: G and E = 525 (both reverse polarity)
Scarlet = 497.9 (reverse polarity) Closest Note: G# and D = 501 (both reverse polarity)

From www.lightwithin.com this additional information is gleaned:

The Six Solfeggio Frequencies include:

UT - 396 Hz - Liberating Guilt and Fear

RE - 417 Hz - Undoing Situations and Facilitating Change

MI - 528 Hz - Transformation and Miracles (DNA Repair)

FA - 639 Hz - Connecting/Relationships

SOL - 741 Hz - Awakening Intuition

LA - 852 Hz - Returning to Spiritual Order

The basic Solfeggio frequencies totaled six (6). Horowitz continued his search through the years and extended it to 9 frequencies. 'Most everyone is familiar with the Star of David which uses two triangles (inverted to each other) inscribed within a circle. If one uses the same approach for three triangles overlapping (no inversions) and space them approximately 40 degrees apart around a circle, some amazing relationships appear. Orient the circle with one triangle apex at North or zero degrees. Label that 396. At the next clockwise point label 417, the next 528, the next 639, the next 741 and the last 852. You now have the basic six Solfeggio frequencies.

The numbers we have so far added to our circle of numbers have a pattern to them: Any number connected by a line, for example 396 and 639, if you take the smaller number and move the last digit to the first position, you have created the line-linked number. [move the 6 of 396 to the front and you have 639] Likewise 417 by moving the 7 creates 741, both numbers are line linked. And 528 by moving the 8 creates 852 both numbers line linked.

As created so far, we have 3 missing numbers, but they can easily be created by applying this moving of digits positions. Take the triangle that has 396 and 639. If we take the 9 and move it to the first position we have 963, which is one of the extended Solfeggio frequencies! Thusly we can now continue the circle one more position by adding 963. Applying this same logic to the 417 and 741 triangle to fill in the missing number we move the 1 to the first position to develop 174 which is another extended Solfeggio number. Continuing clockwise add 174 to the number sequence. And the 528 and 852 triangle if we move the 2 to the first position we have 285, the final missing extended Solfeggio number. So elegantly simple.

Take a piece of paper and lightly grid it off for a large "tic-tac-toe" game. Across the top place the smallest number in the upper left corner; continue horizontally with the line-linked (triangle) numbers 417, 741. In the middle line, left position place the second in clockwise numbering (285), continue horizontally with its line-linked numbers 528, 852. The last horizontal line starts 396 and continues 639, 963. Now for some surprises. Compute the difference between all the vertical row numbers; they are all 111. Compute the differences between the horizontal row numbers; left row and center row all = 243 and center row to right row differences are all 324. And here we go again with the move the last digit to the first position move the 3 of 243 to the front and we have 324.

dif: 111 dif: 111 dif: 111
285 <- dif: 243 -> 528 <- dif: 324 -> 852
dif: 111 dif: 111 dif: 111
396 <- dif: 111 -> 639 <- dif: 324 -> 963

The end result of all this or summation is the simple fact that you need to remember only two numbers: 174 and 111, and remember the principle of 3 overlapping triangles so that their points are about 40 degrees apart creating nine points around a circle and moving the last digit to the first position.

Once the diagram is set, and 174 is placed in any starting position, move the last digit to the first position creating 417 which is the next number (clockwise) in the triangle, then move 7 to the first position creating 741 which is the last number in the triangle. This connects 174, 417 and 741. The next step is to add 111 to 174 which gives 285; this becomes the next clockwise number from 174. Now move the last digit to the first position creating 528 of this triangle and so on to complete the total 9 frequencies and their relative positions. Logical, sequential and amazingly simple!

One does not need to be a number genius, nor a math PhD to recognize that there must be something special to this numbering sequence of the extended Solfeggio numbers. Horowitz places 528 in the center of the circle with the words "LOVE" and "THANKS." I am not thoroughly conversant with the application of these numbers. Horowitz and Puleo state that these numbers are the key to creation and destruction. On other sites, it is implied that one should apply the real frequencies to the corresponding points on the circle we constructed, I assume a metallic plate. With the equipment that most people have available, only one frequency at a time can be generated. Thusly, 9 different frequencies at their appropriate points for equal amounts of time. I personally wonder what would happen if one would apply 9 frequency generators to their respective points all operating simultaneously.

Philip N. Ledoux

Tim,

I hope you have the time to put into a big request from me. I am sending you a basic introduction for anyone who hasn't read Horowitz and Puleo and their Solfeggio research. As it continues, some amazing relationships become visible (at least to me). I'm doing a bit of guess work, because I have not kept up to date on their research and latest books; I'm only up to their 1999 publications. In a site I landed onto about their work, it implies that these Solfeggio frequencies heal, energize water, etc. etc. Horowitz is operating a healing spa in Hawaii apparently which uses the frequencies on the water he uses.

When I recognized the inter-relationships of numbers (which the intro points out), my brain engaged. Because I was guessing, I did some dowsing and my guessing was confirmed; and per usual, on and on the dowsing went. Actually, only about 10 minutes, but I stopped because I realized what the incoming answers were leading to! So, please can you dowse in your own manner, working around some of my outline and questions.

Apparently you take a metallic disk and apply the written numbers frequency to that point (The wheel is supposed to arrive as an attachment to a message). That would be simple enough if one had the generators and the frequency checkers – I would assume that it has to be accurate as "close enough" is not going to cut it for this work. And apparently nobody has tried to use 9 frequency generators simultaneously.

I would imagine that there are some simple chips and by using precision parts along with adjustable variables (that lock) could be fabricated for the job and not be overpriced (minus the labor cost). What I got for an answer was that very little power was needed via 9 generators simultaneously (AG?) [Anti Gravity]

Is this the key mechanism to make AG work? [yes].

Can disks be impressed with only one or a few frequencies to generate “good fortune,” happiness, counter depression, add energy, etc.? In other words can a disk be designed via the frequencies for a specific desired end result? [yes]

And what might the combinations be? [A very precise word to help identify the intended purpose of the frequency for the maker/user.]

Would a specific end result disk require the center to be a different freq. than the wheel? [yes]

Can this “disk” be incorporated into an orgonite creation? [yes]

Does it have to be preprogrammed, or be programmed while curing? [programmed while curing is the only method that will work properly]

Are we onto something that can bypass the gas pump? [yes]

Can such a disk be “programmed” to increase mileage 10x, 100x??? [yes]

Is it placed on the carburetor or fuel injection pump, or where? [it should be in the fuel line near the point of usage, needs to contact the fuel to enhance the fuel and the mechanical aspects of the engine, in a synergistic manner]

What method of attachment is used? [a very small programmed disk could be inlaid into the fuel line,] Can these special purpose disks be used like magnet therapy? [yes]

I visualized a 6 foot to 10 foot disk with 9 generators using a central wet battery and a seat; was I day-dreaming or is it plausible with sweat and frustration? [I check that this is usable for the purpose you have in mind]

Or is all this merely an “overly active imagination” which many think I am working with.? [I check this is not wasteful thinking]

I don't want to distribute info prematurely, but neither do I want to give TPTB very much time to organize. [Distribute as soon as you feel confident about it.]

In the book I have and the sites I've visited they emphasize that the (basic and extended?) Solfeggio frequencies have been used down through history to create and destroy, and the Almighty used them for creation. Can the correct combination of frequencies be used like Keely did with his disintegrator? [yes, there is protection now in the heart of mankind to prevent the destructive use of this tech. by a few bad men, and so it safe to make public]

[Very good work, Philip. Keep it up!..Tim]

Subject: That Magical Healing SingingChant

Greetings Ken,

Here are the words to the ancient magical-like HEALING chant-song-prayer my friend shared with me several days ago. Given to her by Shinto priest Hideo Izumoto in a recent gathering. It is powerful! You SING the words slowly, deliberately. First time I sang it, I felt a very labored strained feeling in my chest, like a very heavy weight, a pulling, like lifting a thousand pounds. It was soooo HARD to just get through it. In two days that labored, almost painful feeling was gone. Checking with my friend, I found she had the same experience, except she also felt pains in her back, knee and other places. We did a 3-way conference and called priest Hideo about it. He congratulated us and confirmed what we figured out: that the pain was a sign that the singing was healing us, clearing away imbalances within.

On the 3rd day, while I was in a park doing my daily SunGazing at sunrise, a tiny (humming?) bird chimed in with me. Perching itself on a nearby branch close to me, singing out its leetle heart. By my 4th day of singing the chant (I do it throughout the day; it is so pleasurable), I noticed to my amazement I no longer needed to wear my glasses when driving. Plus my nearsighted vision has become perfect. The same thing occured with my friend! She no longer needs to wear her glasses. Before we even knew about this chant, we both had prayed daily for "Clarity," amongst other things.

Since I started chant-singing 6 days ago, I now wake up feeling completely rested and alert. The chant-singing apparently diminishes / removes anxiety. I am confident that as I continue, my imbalances on all levels will be smoothed away. The words seem to HELP EVERYTHING. You can direct the energy to any part of your body, or any situation. I read on one of the sites that the words were brought to humanity as a gift, brought by angels.

Call her up and she can play it for you while you record it on your machine, etc. He has I think at least two dvds. You may call him too; his cell number is published:

Here are the words (The dashes --- indicate take a breath. The last syllable, ³Kay² is drawn way out):

Hi Fumi --- Yo I Mu Na Ya --- Kotomo Chi Lo Lane
Shi Ki Lu --- Yu I Tsu Wanu --- So O Ta Ha Kumeka
U O E --- Nisali Hete --- Nomasu A Se E Holeke

Pronunciation (spelled the way it sounds in Japanese):

Hee FuMee -- Yo Eee MuUu Na Ya -- KoToMo Chee Lo LahNay
Shee Kee Lu -- Yu Eee TsuU WaNu -- So O Ta Ha KuMayka
U O Ay --NeeSahLeEee HayTay --NoMaSu Ah Say Ay Holay-KAYYY..

Meaning of the Chant PrayerSong

(Hi Fumi --- Yo I Mu Na Ya --- Kotomo Chi Lo Lane):

We are gods and creators. We create everything in the Universe for us and it belongs only to us and forever.

(Shi Ki Lu --- Yu I Tsu Wanu --- So O Ta Ha Kumeka):

We practice Freedom, Truth, Love, Beauty and Happiness, Advancement and actually becoming God Beings.

(U O E --- Nisali Hete --- Nomasu A Se E Holeke):

We live together forever, for our happiness and advancement. Thank you God, for every one, every thing, and for me.

Subject: Solfeggio Frequencies

Hey Phil and Ken,

I'm reading and thoroughly enjoying the post on Solfeggio Frequencies.

You guys might want to check out my Len Horowitz thread on The Women Warriors.

I have uploaded the Holy Harmony CD as an mp3 file which has all those frequencies in the music, while they monks are chanting out the Creator's name.

Len also has his 3e symbol, along with that which he describes as The Perfect Circle of Sound.

<http://thewomenwarriors.net/phpbb2/viewtopic.php?t=453>

I have his newest book there in PDF format in the thread for download too. Scroll on further down, and you'll see the 3e symbol and MP3 download of Holy Harmony. After playing that Holy Harmony several times, I can still hear it in my head even when it's not physically playing.

I had a special HHG made for Len, by one of the orgone vendors, using his technology.

I had a 3-sided tetrahedron pyramid made with orgone charged water on the CB, Holy Harmony playing while it was curing, and then the 3e symbol put on the sides.

I'll be making all of my orgone this way now, except when charging on the CB, I'll have a 3e symbol on the container as well as being charged with orgone.

Also, check out the pics on my post where Len Horowitz had Dr. Emoto take pictures of the 3e and Holy Harmony charged water, you'll see how powerful it really is. Now take that charged water and put in orgone. WOW!!

Before I gave Len his HHG, I still had it in the car, when my husband and I got pulled over by a cop. A headlight had shorted out. By all indications, my husband could have gotten in serious trouble because he still had an out-of-state license. The cop assumed we were new to the area, when in fact we had been here over three years now. We had current plates and by running them, the cop would have known that we have been here longer. But.... he didn't catch that at all. Totally overlooked it. The power of the orgone blinded him. My husband also didn't have a current copy of insurance to show him either.

The cop just gave him a warning which didn't have a fine on it, but to take it in with proof of insurance and no money was ever spent on fines. We did have current insurance, but my husband didn't put it in the car yet.

The POWERFUL orgone coming Len's special HHG was putting out purple auras. That cop was really extra nice to us. We both were shocked. He was very talkative and friendly, which is rare these days. My husband could have gone to jail, honestly.

This is just one of my experiences with powerful orgone.

Anyhow, check out the post on The Women Warriors, okay? Download the Holy Harmony and enjoy!

I saw the "The Use of Tonal Frequencies to Enhance, Heal, & Rejuvenate" article.. and right away thought of brainwaves (which goes even a step further than tonal frequencies)... take a look at <http://bwgen.com> as well as <http://centerpointe.com/>

Through brainwave entertainment of theta and delta waves, you can go into a deeper meditative state than an experienced meditator.. Threshold of the Mind (<http://www.amazon.com/Thresholds-Mind-Bill-Harris/dp/0972178007>) written by the creator of the Holosync (Centerpointe) Program is a really good look into various studies of brainwave entertainment as well as meditation in general. (sorry for the very "point form" like email.. just @ work and trying to say as much as possible in as little time as possible.. if you have any questions.. email me..)

Tight security for Mozart opera

<http://news.bbc.co.uk/1/hi/entertainment/6189571.stm>

The German Opera's controversial production of Mozart's Idomeneo has gone ahead in Berlin.

It had been feared that the revival could prompt violent demonstrations by Muslim groups.

One scene shows severed heads of the Prophet Muhammad, Jesus Christ, Buddha and the Greek god Poseidon. Islamic tradition bans images of Muhammad.

Audience members underwent stringent police security checks. The event passed off peacefully.

Nearly 2,000 ticket-holders filed through metal detectors, delaying the start of the show by an hour.

Several Muslim leaders refused to attend, but the head of Germany's Turkish community, Kenan Kolat, criticised their decision.

"I think it is important to set up a sign for freedom of art and that's why I'm here tonight," he told reporters outside the opera house.

Controversial twist

The opera was pulled from the schedule in September - a decision that triggered criticism from several German leaders, including Chancellor Angela Merkel, who warned against self-censorship by fear.

And while some Muslim leaders praised the move, Mr Kolat branded it as a step back to "the Middle Ages".

The production, by director Hans Neuenfels, received its premiere three years ago, and it was his idea to include the controversial twist with the religious icons.

It gained little attention at the time, but the subsequent riots over Danish cartoons depicting the Prophet Muhammad meant that Monday's performance generated controversy.

And Mr Neuenfels himself was critical of the revival of his production, insisting his staging was not altered.

The scene in question, where the king of Crete presents the severed heads, was a protest against "any form of organised religion, or its founders", he added.

Just came across this information- as a musician interested in these things, I'll give it a good read.

HanneZ II Society - January 4, 2007 04:07 PM (GMT)

I remember when watching an episode of "Red Dwarf" , the show is set in the future , a character had a cd flying around called something like "The Best Rock Music Of The 20/21 Millenium" with a sticker attached warning that listening to the music could cause organ-damage !

No truth too it ...just some nonsense or is it an attempt of "their" black humour telling us the truth wich the masses mostlikely never will believe Neat topic. I've done a bit of reflecting on music/sound/frequencies in the past and I wanted to share some posts I made to my music appreciation class a few semesters back, which I think maybe didn't go over to swell with them 'normal' folks. My professor even accused me of 'plagiarizing' and threatened to kick me out! I guess she just couldn't accept that some people aren't complete zombies like her and her students. Some of the posts were in responses to questions or other posts so may seem out of context. Anyways hope you enjoy :)

I've gone as far as saying all artists are only cheap imitations of the ultimate artist: God. And all mans' 'art' are only imitations of the inherent designs and mechanisms of nature, both physical and mental. Nothing can reach outside the bounds of the original creation (our universe and us), there are only various ways to approach creation and to alter it for whatever purpose. Surrealism is adapted from the naturally-occurring dream state and the abstract is man's attempt to depict randomness, which actually does not exist as is mathematically proven by Chaos Theory. Chaos cannot exist because the only possible medium of its existence lies in the inherent order of our finite physical universe; we view extreme complexity as chaos out of convenience. This model, I would venture, originates in the theological considerations of good and evil, rebellion from perfection, which in itself is self-defeating because the rebel cannot not exist without order. So in truth there is no opposite of order, only the absence of it, just as darkness is the absence of light.

With this in mind, the functions of sound cannot be randomness, but may only seem expressionless due to natural complexity which we cannot register as mathematical algorithms, at least consciously.

I too appreciate the wonderfully organic sighs of nature, or even the harsh crashes of super-heated air impacting the atmosphere—thunder, sending vibrations through my body. It's this primal rhythm of nature which our own biological rhythms are inherently tied to. Timing is everything, and time is just another dimension of space. Quantum physics demonstrates that matter is energy in a state of slow vibration or frequency—again a space-time function, a rhythm. Our entire existence would not be possible without this intrinsic rhythm, the Word. The gift of sovereignty is ours to either acknowledge our debt to the perfect order from which we came or to deny it all and rebel from the Word made flesh-- to be in absence of our Creator's love.

Title: Eric Phelps now worships VENUSIAN money!

CRAIG-OXLEY - May 23, 2007 12:04 AM (GMT)

Dear Friends and Brethren,

Upon returning from a refreshing visit with my son, Ben, several changes will now be implemented.

The first is that I cannot answer and forward emails any longer as I have done in the past. I will daily send out about three emails as I check my inbox every morning for updates from members on the list and others. For those who have pressing questions, my fee will be 50.00FRNs (alias "dollars) per one half an hour in responding by email or phone. I strongly suggest that you purchase VAIII as this will give you the ability to figure out the answers to your own questions--- which was the intended purpose of the book in the first place.

Secondly, my ministry will consist only of radio interviews, the maintenance of my website, www.vaticanassassins.org and speaking arrangements when asked by a group to lecture in its area. The rest will be strictly business handled through LOWVEHM, Inc.

The business aspect of LOWVEHM, Inc., includes my wife's business of selling high-grade, Israeli-cut diamonds to individual customers. Danita is a gemologist by profession and utilizes a contact in Tel Aviv whom I met while in country several years ago. The minimum size diamond to purchase is one carat.

LOWVEHM will be expanded into the seven areas of high technology that will dominate the 21st century. They are Light, Oxygen, Water, Vibration, Electricity, Hydrogen and Magnetism. These sciences, with resultant products, will completely restructure such fields as medicine and electrical power.

For example, if the sun and the moon revolve around the earth and the earth is at rest, then there is a law of physics that keeps the sun and the moon in motion. This then means that a mass, once put in motion and in the right magnetic position to another electro-magnetic mass at rest, will stay in motion while taking a load. Yes, there is such a thing as perpetual motion; we see it every day 365 times a year. Therefore, my next project will be the building of such a motor that will power our homes. These motors are already perfected and in existence, now utilized by the Jesuits controlling their deep underground military bases. It is time for this technology to be brought above ground for us to enjoy.

I will also be an ACN rep offering the finest telecommunication services now available. If you want to help me in further exposing the Order, you may wish to purchase a product or service---or become a rep yourself. This will give me the financial liberty to republish old, anti-Jesuit works on CD further giving understanding to all of us as to the plotting and power of the Company.

I also intend to learn foreign currency trading through a course offered by one of the best. In this way I can devote a small period of time to earning money and a larger period of time to research and republishing while providing for my family.

My new newsletter, The Jesuit Watch, will be forthcoming. It will be bi-monthly (published every 2 months), its first edition to be released in August. The cost is 40.00FRNs annually. To subscribe, a copy of VAIII must be purchased because I do not wish to address the questions answered in VAIII over and over again. My purpose is to add to your knowledge with this newsletter while VAIII serves as a workbook.

In conclusion, between answering questions for a fee, my wife selling diamonds once in a while, the newsletter, ACN, currency trading and developing the electromagnetic motor, hopefully the Lord will bless financially enabling the furtherance of our understanding of the movements and mentality of "the Engineer Corps of Hell," the Society of Jesus.

Sincerely in Faith,

Brother Eric

CRAIG-OXLEY - May 23, 2007 12:12 AM (GMT)

Dear Eric,

Whilst I understand to live within this SMOM Bird Cage you need money, this is not everything and infact you need far less money than you think. From my eyes it seems that your popularity has soared which I believe is somewhat due to my help via most popular sites as well as your own excellent work on the Radio and that excellent book.

It seems that now your turning to the evils of the Venusian money system set up by the very enemy you've fought for so long. I see another David Icke come forth with all these Newsletter subscriptions and so forth but I bet originally he spoke to the crowds for free. Like I say I understand it to a point but its a big u-turn and I know it wont go down well amongst people coming forth in the Jesuit arena. Many are weary as it is and they look for all this money money talk as a sign of hmmm is this guy legit or not so to speak.

I personally will never go this route as I believe information shouldn't cost unless its most necessary. I will always hand out whatever knowledge I gain in health and so forth as long as I can for zero benefits other than self healing through doing good or trying.

Just my thoughts.

Take Care

The first post sounds like a piss-take. If this guy is for real he's just lost some respect and credibility.

snoopsnuffleopagus - May 23, 2007 12:43 AM (GMT)

Hey 2Tuff!

Colour me crazy, but my New York 'Street Smarts' smells a rodent, especially the 'Diamond Merchant' biz. High End 'F' 'FF' diamonds go for over 15 thousand a carat, ACN 'pyramid' racket.

Are you convinced this is an authentic missive?

Eric, trading bigtime with da whoor?!

'Say it ain't so!

Daniel - May 23, 2007 12:50 AM (GMT)

Charging for email responses is a bad idea. I think he should instread be minimizing his email responses to allow him more time for whatever business he has. Newsletters are not a bad idea but I don't see why we should be supporting telecommunications, or buying diamonds. If anything, Eric should encourage us to buy Gold and Silver related assets instead.

I understood that Eric does not pay income tax, so I doubt that he worships VENUSIAN money and Eric may already invest in Gold and Silver. However, I REALLY hope he is careful to not allow his wife or any other business sector to influence him in avoiding certain issues. For example, could it be that the reason he seems to assume that the Bible claims the Jews are CHOSEN be due to his wife's ideas?

I'm not saying it is his wife or anything other than his own ideas, but I think you all see my point!

Using The Power That Makes Sun And Moon Revolve Around The Earth Eric Phelps To Build Free Energy Machine For The Masses Using Secret Jesuit Technology Kept Hidden For Centuries?

I found my missing sock when I fell on the ground laughing. It was right there under the edge of the desk.

CRAIG-OXLEY - May 23, 2007 01:10 AM (GMT)

If you want more money then your worshipping money in my eyes. I hate the damn stuff its taken our natural environment right from us and created Stress, Depression which usually ends up either as Disease, Death or both. You look at any proper tribes people and tell me how many are saddened, depressed and stressed? It simply does NOT happen, they are truely free as much as this World will allow them. They have some simple rules but they all revolve around nature. Their methods work perfectly and they have a good life. I suggest people watch a U.K Channel 5 program called "Return of the Tribe" to understand the SMOM Bird Cage we're within and how pathetic it is.

You speak about Diamonds well who controls the Diamond market? The De Beers family! Who do you think these people tie up with? Guess! Not hard is it? You speak of Gold and Silver well listen to the great Alan Watt about what he thinks of all this Gold & Silver pushing, especially on these compromised Christian Networks. All three above are fully controlled and fiddled by the Sovereign Military Order of Malta and its Venusian minions. We must remember that the De Beers family constantly claim Diamond rarity but alas have massive stocks stored in secret thus they inflate the prices artificially. You should also note how the Diamond system is used by the Intelligence agencies in order to clean their drug money before laundering through the Committee of 500 (Fortune 500 companies), i.e Stock Markets. They do this to keep the Economies going whilst also funding their Black-Ops that help to shit on us daily.

Everyone knows my stance on Religion and its Dogma teachings which we've annihilated recently and made people more aware of via the likes of great works such as Jan Irvin's most excellent "The Pharmacratic Inquisition." Its time folks for truth, its not of the devil, its not evil. Its TRUTH! Guess what folks? Here its FREE!

My friend do not scoff at the thought of FREE energy theres many inventors out there who've got some great pieces of kit. The problem lies with getting it to the public without being destroyed or killed which happens in most cases. I doubt Eric getting very far if he does come up with something. If Eric isn't compromised and he goes this route along with what he's already done then he needs more than prayers to God! We have Tom Bearden going on all day about his MEG and I do not doubt he has it and it works but it will never come forth until the SOVEREIGN MILITARY ORDER OF MALTA allow it to come forth. Their simply giving us a prelude, a snippet, a taste for when that time arrives whilst keeping the energy of opposition firing as they love the use of energy wether from your vessel or simply fossil. Without Energy the Universes no long carry on.

Money is not the problem. Currency of some kind is required for civilized life of any sort.

The problem is the nature of the FRN. It represents debt. There used to be a time where our money represented value. From the founding of America until 1963 there was no net inflation. An ounce of silver was worth one dollar and an ounce of gold was worth 50.

When the money was no longer fixed to a value it could only lose value with the bankers holding the power to issue credit. Credit is turned to cash by magic of law and paper. Now your dollar represents debt in reverse. When you give someone a dollar debt goes in reverse.

Look closely at your dollar. Its for paying DEBTS. Because it was issued in the form of credit. One half is the debt, the other half is the money. It did not come to be because value was created. It came to be because the law says that the banks can make money out of thin air. More dollars means each existing one is worth less. They rob money right out of your pocket without ever putting their hands there.

Daniel - May 23, 2007 01:26 AM (GMT)

Gold cannot replace an apple but who really cares if you cannot farm an apple yourself? So what does Alan Watt intend to use for exchange, tally sticks? A Gold backed dollar saw little trouble until the FED started to remove all the gold backing.

Money is not evil, it's the intent of how it is used that matters. Gold and silver are hedges against inflation and for 5000 years, Gold has been trusted. It is needed for industry, for luxury and for so many other reasons.

Alan Watt is not a banker like Bob Chapman, so when he uses words like "they control the price of gold and silver" he assumes that the Jesuit bankers can JUST SET THE PRICE; they CANNOT and they WILL lose control eventually. Even the makers of the film called "Moneymasters" made some slight error by claiming that silver was a safer investment than gold.

The Christian websites promoting Gold and Silver are side issue altogether. Go to India, China, Russia and the Middle-East and see for yourself that it is not merely a Christian promotion.

Everyone should be in Gold and silver in a Bull market. We are in the biggest Bull market in history and the Jesuit bankers are doing us all a huge favour by suppressing the price of gold and silver.

I'm getting it at steal prices right now but soon a massive run for precious metals will ensue. Don't miss out Craig!

If you hold on to paper, you're getting screwed.

CRAIG-OXLEY - May 23, 2007 01:33 AM (GMT)

Sorry Space Doubt but any form of the Venusian system simply makes classes of people or levels when infact we were all made equal and this is nature. Once again thats an example of what I was saying about going against nature.

Some of the real teachings embedded within religion which have worth are things like do good to others and so forth. Now under a Venusian system how can this be? If theres a leg of a cow to eat for instance and 15 people to feed, who will get the most? The ELders always do. When the Venusian system isn't present then people get their fair share as their all equal and all equally need that food just the same unless ones pregnant etc. Money, Currency creates power, greed, conflict and division PERIOD! When you speak of currency it makes me sickened as thats true Venusian speak. I instantly picture the River BANKS either side controlling the flow of that currency

I have no idea what Alan Watt's would trade in but knowing how intelligent this man is and knowing what I know I will enlighten you further in your thinking. If the system crumbles do you honestly think Gold and Silver are really of worth amongst our classes of people (due to Venusian greed)? Of course not. Your either going to get ripped off or it will not be taken from you. If I were a shop keeper and you wanted a loaf of bread and had a piece of gold I wouldn't know its purity from Adam! So you could be ripping me off same as I could rip you off if I did know. The only thing of worth for us in a bad situation is Toilet Paper, Cigarettes, Pens, Matches, Lighters, Tobacco and so forth. Simply look at whats traded in Jails other than drugs for your answers.

What Gold? You mean the Gold that the Vatican has been stealing since its taken a grip once again of this Planet? You or your country has no real Gold of any stock as some may claim. Most of the so-called Gold owned simply isn't as once again we see the SMOM frauding you with these damn certificates.

Daniel you need to wake up and smell the coffee on quite a few issues. You keep your Gold I'll stock up with items of true worth. You cannot wipe your backside with Gold and if no one will take it then you cannot trade it for toilet paper. Whats does this mean? Its truely WORTHLESS in REALITY! Also note that whilst everyone wastes time listening to preachers of Gold and then having false sense of security after purchasing, this will get you in a bad situation. Playing into the hands of the Jesuits and their minions. Learn your Farmer then truely understand his tricks and you will no longer be his easily slain flock.

Space Doubt - May 23, 2007 01:42 AM (GMT)

Well, the current system is even worse. But what should we do? Barter for everything? With or without money there will be greed.

He who controls the coin, the courts and the press controls the world.

But without the coin Earth would return to the dark ages. We need currency that represents value and is not created by fiat. And its control needs to be closely monitored.

Daniel - May 23, 2007 01:46 AM (GMT)

Craig, what do you suggest we all use in place of currency?

If we go back to trade (NA.Indian style) that is perfectly ok, but how do you split a home in half and trade it in for an automobile that is worth only 1/5 of the housing price?

At some point, you're going to have to be keeping track of billions of IOU's.

So long as Eric Phelps does not allow his business prospect to interfere with proper research and create conflict of interest, I have no problem with him doing an honest business. How many of us here work day jobs?

My biggest beef is charging for emails. Eric may even re-consider, who knows at this point?

Craig, India owns way more Gold than the Vatican. The Jesuits can steal from us but if you own Gold today, they lose their power over you. That is why they do not want you to have Gold and Silver. That is why you bury gold with your GUNS! You buy coins and not only explorations stocks. And when the Depression hits, sell your stocks and only hold onto gold bullion.

When people starve during a Depression, the food all rots because the farmers cannot sell it (having no means of exchange) and the people cannot buy the food because they too, have lost the means of exchange.

During a Depression, the food is still there. All that is changed is that the bankers call in all the money supply and dollars become worthless. The food is still there for you Craig, but no farmer will accept your paper. He will accept gold.

Gold is the actual payment

Paper is a promise to pay. Paper is an IOU for Gold.

CRAIG-OXLEY - May 23, 2007 02:16 AM (GMT)

You speak of day jobs as if its a requirement by us to our creator. Day jobs are SLAVERY forced upon us by our Venusian Black "Venetian" Nobility SMOM banking masters. We were all created equal and therefore how can it be so that the once Prince Bernard is anything more special than me or you? Wake up, I smell bad Venusian stench all over the damn place. Day jobs remove people from their parenting acts, they tire people, they remove so many hours from a precious life on the Earth and so forth including poison people, you name it. By the way they love to push the SLAVE foods also upon us such as grains, bread and so forth. Your a damn SLAVE.

With proper education and the good portions of religious teaching we could easily have a fair, non-greed society if people were bought up properly. Its only un-educated societies which still have someone dark age mentality. I think a few on here should go and live with some Amazon tribes peoples for a while and see how living is meant to be. Right now we have these damn Jesuits and their Black Nobility brothers trying to destroy the NATURAL lifestyles of the World and put in place a bastardised Venusian system making the people slaves. What do they use to hoodwink the dumb populace in change and the dumb populances back at home accepting our invadership Wars? DEMOCRACY! What is Democracy? BUNKUM its simple I'll give you the impression you have a say but in reality its only an eighth of a say and its almost worthless. But alas I'll wrap it up in a bunch of bunkum flannel and con the hell out of you all and push my Democracy. By the way the very Central Banks we help with all this Venusian System following like sheople simple fund all the Wars as their simply WAR BANKS.

I just see Eric quickly jumping onto the Venusian Ship (that was a good connection ship and Venus which are both female) now he's starting to get proper exposure. You look at how many people stemming from my work in this arena jumped straight in and bought his Vatican Assassins III. Did Craig Oxley have any offer of a copy from Eric Phelps? NO! Did Nicholas Rivera who helped somewhat on the book? NO! Is this FAIR? NO! But alas I have a copy of this great book. Guess what Eric Phelps? I had a copy given me for FREE by a good friend who appreciated my work in helping people for free and my precious life time. Like I say folks do good for others and they shall do good back.

Who controls India? Haha wake up Daniel please! The Sovereign Military Order of Malta and its Black "Venetian" Nobility control this damn planet only answering to the Superior General and his Society of Jesus and the illusion of the Pope control.

So why do the Farmers need to still charge for their food? I can understand food rotting if theres no oil to transport the food in this day and age but the rest don't cut the mustard. Why do we need all these slave systems or class systems? Why do we need a money like system? Why cant the farmers simply help the people out and feed the people for nothing whilst they also feast on their foods. No this won't happen because people are greedy and spiteful because the Venusian system has made them this way, as well as ignorant. The same as why Sainsburys supermarket will throw away masses of food rather than give it to the street and poor people in serious need of food. Its a bastardised system and you're all stuck well and truely in it and actually worshipping it. Know why? Because of the likes of Christian "TEMPORAL COADJUTOR" networks like GCN and all that flannel crap.

Why you keep going on about Paper Money as if I accept this nonsense? I've already spoke of true trading items such as Toilet Paper etc. Wake up gold lackie!

-Craig Oxley

Daniel - May 23, 2007 03:06 AM (GMT)

Craig,

Firsly, I'm not a slave or a lacky because I post here. But just because I do post here I do not have to consider Maxwell and Tsarion's opinion as a total replacement for my God, although I do admire their work greatly. I find truth and joy in finding God inside me, so that makes me free in spirit at least. Are you still having your name spelled "CRAIG-OXLEY" or Craig-Oxley of the Oxley family, for example? So then obviously, I know enough about this and I see your point however, you're jumping all over the place here.

Storing food and water and learning how to plant is very important but not everyone can be farmers! Day jobs are a part of life and if we are to labour to grow food also, then a part time day job can be one's love too. If you love to farm, than that too can be a labor of love. I'm not saying it has to be a 9-5 day job, or with corporations running the show and assigning breaks. Yet, working is a good thing provided it is not done the way it is nowadays.

But if you think Gold is a bad idea, then why not just show us all your dedication and throw away all your dollars right now? Why are you ranting off like this Craig, if you really think the answer lies in sharing then I agree but who decides what share is fair, if it isn't the evil Jesuits deciding for you? Some people would rather not share and no-one has any right to FORCE anyone to share! If you take away the home from the nasty rich man to build a road for the community, and the community hates the old fart anyhow, if you take away his FREEDOM to be GREEDY in his old mansion, then you take it away from all of us!

Have you ever tried farming, cause I have and it's back-breaking work and not everyone is cut-out for doing it. Much harder than sitting here and typing all day. Of course, we can learn all these skills but the question is, can you plant enough healthy food in a Northern climate without becoming an Eskimo?

So how do those city and condo living people find grass, let alone a place to seed and manure a crop of field? It will not work well that way, and it never has. People can have farmers in their community who farm for them and others who build desks and others who make clothing. But sharing is about trade and trading is about barter and barter has issues without a denominated currency.

As for Eric Phelps:

Well, you can download Eric's stuff for free off emule. Don't worry about Eric charging us anything because Dr. Coleman, in upholding his copyright, never stopped me from getting hold of his books. I wonder if you have a copy of VAIII yet? Did you pay anything for it.....? You don't need to answer because we already know this.

Now I heard they do not pay income tax in India, of course I may be mistaken. And India can be controlled by whoever, but India has a religious tradition where the females buy gold - lots of Gold! India may very well be the richest nation in the world, although many are also very poor, so many Indian middle-class people own Gold to protect themselves. India has gone through what we are about to Craig! And now you know why Gold is so wrapped up in the India culture, it's what helped them survive and that is very important to keep in mind here.

Craig it almost seems that you want spiritual COMMUNISM. This is actually possible to have but only when there is proper "spirituality".

COMMUNISM or sharing is not based on the principles of a true REPUBLIC and I do not support the idea that people can just wonder off into a field and eat what they like. I fidn that too many would be doing this and all my work would be gone!

For every step we take in this idea of sharing - and moving away from greed, man must have first already taken 3 steps ahead in spiritual development.

The Illegal Mexicans can leave America and until they prove they are moving ahead in spirituality, why should I share my crops with them, or my house, or my car, or my job? How many shoild I share with, 50 million, 100 million?

Now who decides all this, if not a free market based upon a backed denominated currency? What is the shame in that?

JagDRS - May 23, 2007 04:36 AM (GMT)

At first glance this does look/seem like a real downer coming from Eric.

But on second glance, just thinking out loud here, he just finished VAIII. I can imagine he toiled and labored long and hard many many days and nights to get that work out. Does anyone suspect or suggest this $$ news from him indicates his VA work is not as legit as we previously thought? Is anyone suggesting worse than this? I suppose anything's possible but I'm gonna have to think on that one a bit longer while waiting for my copy of VAIII to arrive.

I know this. I would not know jack about the jesuit order if it were not originally for 2Tuff and the Unhived. I also know that much (but certainly not all) of the Unhived's archive of jesuit info came by way, one way or another, of Eric's work.

The aspect of this that really seems to not fit at all with the character of Eric is his wife selling diamonds. I don't know his wife, haven't the foggiest idea what she looks like or what her personality is, but just knowing Eric as well as I do from his interviews, audios, videos, and VA work, I can sort of imagine that his wife would be someone a bit like him. Diamond sales just does not seem to fit the mold of a true, God-fearing bible-believing Christian. It's actually this aspect that really blows my mind about all of this. Still, gonna have to think on all of this a while.

Regardless of what Eric has decided to do with his livelihood for the near future, it just seems to be that with the effort he put into VAIII, he at least deserves some benefit of the doubt and some time to recover and come down from the grind of a recently completed 1500-page opus.

As to the move to get into alterna energy, that actually sounds interesting on a couple fronts. For starters, many of us have been sittin here kinda thinking he's a bit lucky to still be alive after exposing what he's been exposing the jesuits. Far as this goes, getting into alterna "free" energy really just adds another potential reason for him to suddenly end up a dead guy. Then again, why is he not already dead? He seems convinced it's due to his faith. If there is truth in that, I imagine the same faith can see him safely through free energy work..... but the diamonds, still puzzled on that one.

Minuteman Matt - May 23, 2007 04:41 AM (GMT)

I think we should trash the dollor and used copper,silver and gold coins gold would be worth the most then silver then copper.

wolveshater - May 23, 2007 05:03 AM (GMT)

Every body is human, Even Phelps, a bunch of Paupers can not win this war we are in, any kind of business thats retail and honest with integrity is better than backbreaking labor. The time spent on e-mails, and the newsletter are time spent, and its expensive, Phelps was punished for Vaticans because had the book gone thru a pro publisher and made the book store shelves world wide like no account books do he pockets 40 million instead of a lousy 2 million. I agree the Venusian money stinks of filth and I hate it. I have done well so I share, Ive bought cars for folks and food, I give away books, I get kids off drugs and help them understand Nature, Im a business man, I can not do those things without the Money. just paper and ink alone per month costs me 1200.00 . I dont see greed by phelps, I see a man who understands Money is a wrench to open locks. Greed enrages me. I also understand suppressed science, there are many ways to use renewable energy to make our homes go off grid, Ive built hydro-electric power plants for people on creeks with land, My father is one. My friend built a nuclear battery in the 80s and ran his home with it, when he tried to sell them as kits he was threatened with death, then the power company gave him 2 million for it, later he was building another type of free power plant for homes, this time they killed him. I have heard of this equipment Eric Mentions, actually seen it. Ive been around the World, I was on some bases. Im not at liberty to say more than that, I dont care to get a visit, lets see what the future holds for us.

A barter economy. Not a bad idea. But that can only work if people can produce many products by themselves and trade it. The middle man known as tradesmen and industry needs to be cut out. Who were the real barterers? The farmers who tilled the land purely with their own hands and whatever tools they could fashion to do it. That's freedom from tyranny. Why do you think there is so much urbanization and attacking of the farming man going on?

In a way you can't blame him. People do ask him about things that he's already covered in VAllI.

As far as selling diamonds--I don't see an issue with that, unless I'm missing something here. There was this one couple mentioned in the Bible that made tents for a living.

You have to earn "money" somehow. What else are we to do--steal it?

snoopsnuffleopagus - May 23, 2007 12:44 PM (GMT)

First and foremost, I agree we must earn money in this world at this time, it is up to our sense of discernment how we do that. I read 'Eric's' post yesterday and found it suspect. Reading it again this morning and checking out the Lowvehm website I like it even less.

'Eric' did use the qualifier 'IF' when writing of the motions of the heavenly bodies. 'IF' frogs had wings they wouldn't bump their asses into the ground. 'Eric' also says he believes in 'Perpetual Motion'. For many people this is a non-starter.

I see 'Eric' is Vice-President of the Diamond and Gem aspect of this 'company'. Craig, I was a Diamond courier in NYC, 47th Street being the Nexus of this activity, as you know it is a sewer, a highly gilded sewer and 'Eric' must be associating with some 'interesting' people! And 'mult-level' marketing?

There are lots of ways to make money, but this Lowvehm outfit needs further investigation. Due Diligence is called for.

Could VAIII be another Tragedy&Hope, an insiders view, knowing the average reader cannot realistically oppose their agenda?

'Lay down with dogs, you wake up with fleas'

CRAIG-OXLEY - May 23, 2007 01:11 PM (GMT)

Dear Craig and Friends,

I am not angry; I am in need of a viable business that I have not had for over five years. I have lived on the support of other people during that time which enabled me to research the many topics and persons included in VAIII. We are talking about 16 hours a day nearly every day during that 5-year period.

Now, I need to pursue a business that allows me to provide for my family as well as continue the research into the Jesuit Order. Maybe I should not have said "high-end" diamonds. I should have said "high-quality" diamonds. As you know, Israeli cut diamonds are the best. I apologize for the confusion.

Concerning ACN, check out the website www.acninc.com. The 13-year old company has been recently endorsed by Donald Trump. I realize that he may well in fact be a Knight of Malta as he is a foremost billionaire of the Order's North American commercial emporium, New York City. But as a businessman to endorse a company after a two-year study is a good mark for any company. I am not part of ACN but rather an independent rep separated by contract. If you say that I am in error for working with a company endorsed by a Knight of Malta then every new car salesman is equally in error for selling Chrysler, Ford or GM products as the Knights control all those companies.

As far as currency trading, this is not "working for the whore" any more than any other business involved in commercial paper. If it is wrong to do this than it is equally wrong for any honest man to be involved in any financial institution as they all are working only in commercial paper. Thus, you cannot be a teller in a bank, a loan officer, a seller of stocks, even a buyer and seller of basic goods in any paper currency during daily transactions. The principle is the same.

Now for you men who consider me to be in error, what am I going to tell those people who I now owe about 100,000 FRNs for the financing of the research for the writing of VAll? Maybe if you front me the money I will reconsider. Until such time I will continue to seek to make an honest living as all of you do while devoting remaining time to the continued exposure of the Jesuit Order---as all you do also.

I trust this clarification is helpful.

Sincerely in Faith,

Brother Eric

Eric you have always been very forthcoming. You did not have to tell us what you are doing in your personal life, as that's your right to not share this. John Coleman could care less and would not tell us what he does, although we still do greatly respect his work.

I'm very pleased that you felt the need to explain this to us, as it reveals to me that you truly appreciate all the work of this movement in helping to expose the evil ones. Your telling us compliments the fact that you are an honest man and wish there to be no confusion.

God Bless and I hope you and your family are doing well.

right back at ya. The Venusian money also does a lot of good, hopefully that really pisses off A few Jesuits. Some of you sound like you wish Phelps was dead then he would be a great martyr. Best book in my collection bar none is VATICAN ASSASSINS II- III. I hope we can get back to the enemy at hand soon instead of each other.

Atilan - May 23, 2007 08:07 PM (GMT)

Good point, Wolveshater! I think as long as we are forced to live within this society upon this planet (and to my knowledge there is no other ;-)) we are forced to make money for survival.

So, as Eric has put it in his reply - he's trying to survive with his family and to pay back the amount he owns to a third party from his being "an unproductive member of society" while writing his VAIII - and therefore he needs money.

Now, everybody has his or her own ways to make money, it surely also depends on your professional background, where you live, etc. and from where you are starting in terms of money. If you are in debt as seems to be the case with Eric I clearly understand that he tries whatever seems fit to gain some earnings.

And please people think about this as well: We all are just human beings and we are "forced to live" within this almost broken society along its current rules (we certainly agree on who is to blame, but nonetheless it is a broken society). If someone would offer me an alternative I would immediately join, but thus far my search has been to no avail.

All seem to wait for the day "X" (whatever happens by then) and try to creep along their narrow ways and sights, just tumbling forward into NOTHING. If life has no goals anymore the reason for being alive is getting dim.

Just some thoughts...

Bro. Eric,

I fully understand your predicament. What you need to do is urge all on your list to seek God's face in prayer for the supplying of that 100,000 FRNs (whatever that is). They all love you and your great service to the Lord and don't want to see you caught up in commercial snares that will hinder your great ministry to all those who have gleaned from your vast amount of knowledge and research.

As Prov. 23: 4 says, ". . . cease from your own wisdom." Lean not unto your own understanding. Is there anything too hard for the Lord? Let Him part the waters of the Red Sea. Let Him put the coin in the fish's mouth. Let Him turn the mountain into a plain. Let Him bring water out of the rock.

I know this is easy for me and others to say, not being in your shoes, but God is on the throne, and his promises are sure. "Prove me now. . .," he says.

I trust that your wife has enough spiritual reserve to grasp this.

After the monumental task of completing VAIII, the devil is countering with a left hook. Just have your guard up.

Bro. Carl

Dear Brother Carl,

Your replies are always of great value to me.

But in this instance, we must agree to disagree. I cannot and will not ask for one more dime from anyone. Those to whom I owe money are personal friends; I have never and will never accept any gift financial from a stranger, saved or lost.

I do ask for all those on the list to pray for my business success. Just changing your long distance service with me will help. If ACN works for me as for others, within six months I should receive enough "income" to enable me to work on attacking the Jesuits without the pressure of supporting my loved ones. I could include private speaking engagements as part of my ministry to local churches without asking for or expecting any financial gift.

Concerning your questions, I will always respond to you without charge. But these others who drain me while at the end of the day I have earned nothing, these I must charge. The fact of the matter is that they will ask me no more questions; they merely want something for free breeding non-appreciation for the work provided.

When I finished VAIII, this ACN business came to the forefront within two weeks. I joined for one reason---to take the profits away from the Order's huge phone providers (like Verizon) who finance the sodomite agenda and the gun-grabbers, and put some of those monies into my pocket thereby enabled to finance an information war against the Jesuit Order. I intend to extend this war into technology---putting the electromagnetic motor into the hands of the common man.

Really brother, VAIII answers most questions concerning the Order's past, present and future. To continue to connect the dots with a newsletter will be a blessing to men such as yourself who have not the time for this meticulous research. So why should I not profit from it somewhat?

Further, I do have some fear about relying on the financial good graces of saved men. They are so fickle today, brother. A Baptist pastor friend of mine, David Hollowood, was a pastor some years ago. He was a KJV only man, a TR man, an non-501©(3) man and truly practiced biblical separation. He was and is today a faithful father taking care of his adult son with MS. Do you know what his church did to him for his faithfulness? Those heretics drove him from his pastorate without any charge of heresy or immorality (the only biblical reasons for dismissing a pastor), forced him out of his home provided by the church, packed up his belongings and put them into a 40-foot tractor trailer until David could find another dwelling. Fortunately, he moved here to Pennsylvania where I was privileged to meet his acquaintance along with his invalid son who is on this email list. (In fact he just called me and asked for the 700.00 Federal Reserve Notes (FRNs) I have owed him for over four years.)

I remember one night while at David's dinner table we spoke of the coming Chinese invasion. He then uttered to me words I have never forgotten. "Maybe it has pleased God not to deliver us because of the compromise of the local churches." I still remember the look on his face and the saddened response of his wife.

In conclusion, God's people in the American Empire have no idea of the Pope's war which rages against them. They live in the land of fantasy. They think living in "The Matrix" (the womb of the Virgin Mary) is the place of safety and success while completely oblivious of the intense truth that:

"We know that we are of God, and the whole world lieth in wickedness (the lap of the wicked one--TR)."

I John 5:19.

My dear wife will do anything I choose to do. She is the epitome of submission which makes me quite cautious in all decisions affecting her and the boys. Thus, for their protection and mine, I must be untouchable and beholden to no man for any financial contributions. I feel like a Levite in the days of Israel's apostasy, ploughing the fields for food when I have the right to be fed and clothed by the tribes.

I will promise to keep my guard up.

Sincerely in Faith,

Brother Eric

CRAIG-OXLEY - May 23, 2007 09:46 PM (GMT)

Dear Eric and all, Some of the responses to Eric's entry into a legitimate business (you might not like ACN network marketing or diamond selling, but people do make a living doing these things) to support himself highlight what I have seen for years: the man of God is supposed to live off air and prayer (his own and theirs), but he should not actually need to promote himself, his business, or make his needs known, ever. If he does, he is deemed unspiritual, backslidden, or compromised. Everything Eric has related in the e-mail is true: he devoted himself for the last three years to the compilation of VA III to the exclusion of any sort of work, or even normalcy of life. The same can be said for the first and second editions. I know as we have been in each other's presence physically for almost five years, and I personally and often without Eric's asking provided dozens of citations from volumes I purchased that sometimes were quite salty in price for their age and condition. Eric has done something that no other Protestant in this generation has had the spirituality, stamina, unction or perseverance to accomplish. He has produced a historical narrative studded with the words and writings of the best Christian men of many generations, proving by objective observation that Revelation 17 and 18 are absolute truth and can refer only to Popery promoted by Jesuits. By God's grace and providence I was able to participate in this work, and prayed for Eric about the work to its completion. To castigate him for attempting to fulfill a Bible mandated duty is a very rude way for anyone to reward his labor.

KJV 1 Timothy 5:8 But if any provide not for his own, and specially for those of his own house, he hath denied the faith, and is worse than an infidel.

This is yet more evidence to me personally of the coming destruction of this country: successive generations of Protestants who would rather switch than fight--AND

PROFESSING CHRISTIANS WHO WHEN PUSH COMES TO SHOVE MUZZLE THE OX THAT TREADETH OUT THE CORN. Paul labored with his hands night and day so that he would be chargeable to no man! What sort of person finds fault with any Christian man who does the same? Why do some of you feel Eric's owes you an hour or two (or more) of his time a couple times a month to answer questions (often off the wall questions) which are addressed in Vatican Assassins III? He has been at your service for free for a long time, but as the wisdom God has directed him to cease, understand that God works all things after the counsel of his own will, and it is no longer God's will for him to spend hour upon hour answering e-mails. That is why you seldom see post from me-I do not have that kind of time and learned while street preaching years ago that sort of thing is fruitless. Eric lays out the facts and they are available to you. Your response and actions in light of the knowledge gained are your own. Eric is not anyone's babysitter or mentor-he is a breathing, eating, sleeping man just like yourselves, and has a life to live here nuturing his family. Work of necesssity is part of that, and part of obedience to God and the Bible. If some do not understand this-OH WELL- Back to the Bible or off to Rome! Pastor N C Turner

For the scripture saith, Thou shalt not muzzle the ox that treadeth out the corn. And, The labourer is worthy of his reward.

The beasts that were employed in treading out the corn (for that way they took instead of threshing it) were allowed to feed while they did the work, so that the more work they did the more food they had; therefore let the elders that labour in the word and doctrine be well provided for; for the labourer is worthy of his reward ...and there is all the reason in the world that he should have it.

The IHS Symbol

By Geoff
Tuesday, May 22, 2007
Original Link

I have seen people linking the Jesuit symbol(IHS) to Egypt without any real proof. Some have even gone as far as labeling it as Isis, Horus, Seb.

Without any conclusive evidence to back up ones clames of the sort one can begin to see the problem at hand.

The answer to the symbol IHS can be found in Obeliscus Pamphilius by Athanasius Kircher \(p. 213\)

Diagram of Kircher's Egyptian trinity

The answer to the puzzling question of what IHS truly stands for is:

INTELLECTUS
SIRIS

The triangle used in Kirchers Egyptian Trinity is " The Omega, which has caused so many evil days and restless nights." According to "A Christian Rosenkreutz Anthology" compiled and edited by Paul M. Allen (p. 225)

The exact triangle as pictured above is an old mystical symbol representing the elementary geometrical laws used in all mystic symbols. It is based on the centralized point or dot of the circle "In the beginning is the dot, or point."

P. ATHANASIVS KIRCHERVS FVLIDENSIS
è Societ: Iesu Anno ætatis LIII.

Honoris et observantiae ergo sculpsit et D.D. C. Bloemaert Romæ 2 Maij A. 1655.

Athanasius Kircher was a 17th century German Jesuit Scholar who made an early study of Egyptian Hieroglyphs. Kircher was born on May 2, 1601. He attended the Jesuit College in Fulda from 1614 to 1618, when he joined the order himself as a seminarian.

Today there is even a Society dedicated to the works of Athanasius Kircher.

In Kircher's Diagram one might notice that IHS appears at the top of the pyramid as well as the word "Intellectus" (the illuminated?).

The "Hemepht" is the winged sphere also known as the "anima mundi" or soul of the world.

The Celestial Triad is shown as a globe (The Father) from which issue a serpent (the Mind) and wings (The Power)

The third word is Siris. Or is it Osiris with the letter O above representing the eye of the pyramid?

Osiris, the Egyptian God of life, death, and fertility is one of the oldest Gods for whom records have survived and first appears in the pyramid texts around 2400 BC, when his cult is already well established. The Kings of Egypt were associated with Osiris in death such that as Osiris rose from the dead so would they, in union with him, inherit eternal life through a process of imitative magic. Osiris is the oldest son of the Earth god, Geb, and the sky goddess, Nut as well as being brother and husband of Isis, with Horus being considered his posthumously begotten son.

Since Osiris was considered dead, as God of the dead, Osiris' soul, or rather his Ba, was occasionally worshipped in its own right, almost as if it were a distinct god, especially so in the Deltacity of Mendes. This aspect of Osiris was referred to as Banebdjed (also spelt Banebded or Banebdjedet, which is technically feminine) which literally means The ba of the lord of the djed, which roughly means The soul of the lord of the pillar of stability. The djed, a type of pillar, was usually understood as the backbone of Osiris, and, at the same time, as the Nile, the backbone of Egypt. The Nile, supplying water, and Osiris (strongly connected to the vegetation) who died only to be resurrected represented continuity and therefore stability. As Banebdjed, Osiris was given Epithets such as Lord of the Sky and Life of the (Sun God) Ra, since Ra, when he had become identified with Atum, was considered Osiris' ancestor, from whom his regal authority was inherited

In occult writings, Banebdjed is often called the goat of Mendes, and identified with Baphomet; the fact that Banebdjed was a ram (sheep), not a goat, is apparently overlooked.

IHS has also been depicted as Bull worship in Alchemical diagrams.

O, sole love of God in Trinity,
Have mercy on me in eternity.

The cross from the Jesuit symbol is capped by a round Sun and Moon. In the rear is a Pyramid. According to Egyptian references the Crescent of the moon is the Crescent of a world or "World of the Gods." Mythologically Osiris is the Husband and brother of Isis. Isis is also the mother of Horus. She was worshipped as the archetypal wife and mother.

Isis is often crowned with bull horns and a sun disc. The horns suggest 'of Taurus' status and the orb suggests of a Sun-like star or heavenly disc of Taurus.

The Ancient Egyptian Trinity

There are three manifestations in Osiris, Isis, and Horus that are a form of a trinity. In terms of Ka and Ba dwelling in the flesh, we have a trinity. In creating a trinity figure using Isis, Horus, and Seb as many believe the IHS letters represent we run into a problem. Although in the Ennead, Seb is the husband of Nut and the father to the four lesser gods of the system (Osiris, Set, Isis, and Nephthys).

It comes full circle

"Plutarch asserts that the Greeks recognized in Osiris the same person whom they revered under the names of Dionysis and Bacchus."

-Manly P. Hall: The Secret Teachings of All Ages (p.124)-

"Bacchus is Exoterically and superficially the god of wine and the vintage, and of licentiousness and joy; but the esoteric meaning of this personification is more abstruse and philosophical. He is the Osiris of Egypt, and his life and significance belong to the same group as the other solar deities, all "sin-bearing," killed and resurrected; e.g., as Dionysos or Atys of Phrygia (Adonis, or the Syrian Tammuz), as Ausonius, Baldur (q.v.), &c., &c. All these were put to death, mourned for, and restored to life. The rejoicings for Atys took place at the Hilaria on the "pagan" Easter, March 15. Ausonius, a form of Bacchus, was slain "at the vernal equinox, March 21st, and rose in three days". Tammuz, the double of Adonis and Atys, was mourned by the women at the "grove" of his name "over Bethlehem, where the infant Jesus cried", says St. Jerome. Bacchus is murdered and his mother collects the fragments of his lacerated body as Isis does those of Osiris, and so on."
-H.P. Blavatsky: The Theosophical Glossary(p.47)-

"The monogram IHS now interpreted to mean lesus Hominum Salvator (Jesus Savior of Men), is another direct link between the Christian and Bacchic rites. IHS is derived from the Greek $\text{I}\Sigma\text{S}$, which, as its numerical value (608) signifies, is emblematic of the sun and constituted the sacred and concealed name of Bacchus. (See The Celtic Druids by Godfrey Higgins.) The question arises, Was early Roman Christianity confused with the worship of Bacchus because of the numerous parallelisms in the two faiths? If the affirmative can be proved, many hitherto incomprehensible enigmas of the New Testament will be solved."

-Manly P. Hall: The Secret Teachings of All Ages (p.582)-

"I.H.S. This triad of initials stands for the in hoc signo of the alleged vision of Constantine, of which, save Eusebius, its author, no one ever knew. I.H.S. is interpreted Jesus Hominum Salvator, and In hoc signo. It is, however, well known that the Greek IHS was one of the most ancient names of Bacchus. As Jesus was never identical with Jehovah, but with his own "Father" (as all of us are), and had come rather to destroy the worship of Jehovah than to enforce it, as the Rosicrucians well maintained, the scheme of Eusebius is very transparent. In hoc signo Victor ens, or the Labarum T (the tau and the resh) is a very old signum, placed on the foreheads of those who were just initiated. Kenealy translates it as meaning "he who is initiated into the Naronic Secret, or the 600, shall be Victor" but it is simply "through this sign hast thou conquered"; i.e., through the light of Initiation—Lux. (See "Neophyte and "Naros".)

-H.P. Blavatsky: The Theosophical Glossary(p.152)-

So in the end the answer to the IHS puzzle is that Bacchus of whom the letters IHS represent is Osiris.

I agree with Geoff.

My take:

"The mysteries of all other nations of antiquity were quite similar to those of Egypt, and were no doubt derived from them."
- Robert Hewitt Brown ("Stellar Theology and Masonic Astronomy" p.12)

SUN-MYSTERY RELIGIONS:

Osiris (dead&resurrected)

- = Ormuzd of Persian mysteries (dead&resurrected)
- = Sita of Indian mysteries (dead&resurrected)
- = Adonis(<--Aton/Adonai) (dead&resurrected)
- = Cubiria/Kabiri of Samothrace (dead&resurrected)
- = Bacchus IHS/Dionysos (dead&resurrected)
- = Jesus IHS (dead&resurrected)
- = Hiram Abiff of Freemasonry (not Bible version) (dead&resurrected)

The three "nails" of the true cross on IHS logo, I believe is the TRUE ORIGINAL trinity.
The newborn sun, mature sun and dying sun. 3 gods, same god:

- Birth = morning, East (also 1st degree masonry)
- Life = noon "high twelve", South (also 2nd degree masonry)
- Death = evening, West (also 3rd degree masonry)

Osiris = Bacchus IHS = Jesus IHS = THE SUN

"The Dionysiac [Bacchus] Mysteries and those of Kabiri prevailed in Asia Minor, and spread through all the cities of Syria. Hiram, King of Tyre, was undoubtedly the high-priest of these Mysteries at Tyre, and the institution continued to exist in Judea as late as the time of Christ, as a secret society known as the Essenes. Well it seems as my work is becoming more popular the Intelligence crowd may be trying to clamp down somehow here. Before many people simply didn't want to hear this type of information as they wished to stay stagnant in bunkum mystery and disinformation drawing them in like fish to a baited hook. Now it seems more people are waking up. We have David Icke helping somewhat by also finally mentioning the Jesuits even though it wasn't a lot it makes a big difference if he says anything as he has loyal followers in the masses. I've noticed more people listening to my information. Then of course I carry some of the infighting information on here between lower down in the Intelligence Agencies so its no wonder I may be a target right now. I know I had much grief after I started to go on that Galloway show and I simply couldn't get back on when they knew I wanted to talk about the Roman Catholics, I should have fooled them.

Don't worry folks my work will carry on no matter what until I'm scrubbed from this wonderful planet Earth which unfortunately is wrapped in a most terrible system (latin = SEWER) by the SOVEREIGN MILITARY ORDER OF MALTA. Such a shame and even poor animals have no freedom and more so soon. I see poor swans tagged on both legs pecking at the plastic and metal. ITS DISGUSTING HOW WE LIVE. WE ARE SOVEREIGN SPIRITUAL BEINGS!!!!!!!

I too have noticed an accumulation of oddities the past several months, many of them annoyances (like the problems accessing the Private Message section). I've also seen something recently (in the Orgone forum) where a the time/date stamp of a person's post changed at least twice over the period of several days BUT the poster themselves (as best I could tell) had not been editing the post. One day it indicated the post was posted at 11 somethign PM on 5/6.... a few days later it indicated the post happened at something AM on 5/7.... then a few days later it went back to PM on 5/6....?

As of yet I have not noticed any posts that have gone missing. Part of the problem here is, the way this particular forum software works, it is very difficult & tedious to follow and keep track of any one thread in particular.... especially when it gets to that time of the day each day when Craig mass loads a bunch of new thread, it soon becomes very difficult to keep track of all the threads I'm interested in :)

Anyway, llate ast night I too noticed problems getting on this site. I was on and reading some stuff one minute, then the next minute.... I wasn't really blocked, per se', but it looked like the response time through the web to this site became verrrrrrry slow. For a few hours, I was regularly getting "server not found", at other moments it would take several minutes just to back up or go forward in the forums from one screen to another. Speedwise, things seem back to normal since first thing this morning (Sunday).

Craig, just from a data point of view, I do hope you have some sort of backups... even if it's just you burning some CDs of important files/directories every now and then. It would be one thing to lose all of the chit-chat dialogue between us posters, but another thing all together to lose the main content (web links, stories, articles, audios, videos, those email exchanges you most, and the like)

JagDRS,

By any chance are you having trouble sending private messages?

I had to delete all my messages just to be able to send one message. Then I have to delete that one message just to be able to send another one.

It continuously shows that my space is full even though all my folders are empty

Its totally deleted and I have not done this? I was still allowing it to be filled whilst placing the audios also in the audio forum????????????????? So who the hell has deleted it????????????? So please let me know if more goes missing?!?!?!?!?!?!?!? Some anti Alex Jones threads were pointed out the other day but may have been merged as I have done this on that cretin.

JagDRS - May 21, 2007 03:47 PM (GMT)

No, I have not noticed that drastic of a problem with the PM facility. But, this is a facility that I have never used heavily to begin with.

The bug I noticed was somewhat by happenchance one day a few months ago. I use mail notification for PMs. One day I got an email of such. I clicked the included link pointing to the Unhived to retrieve this PM. When the browser connected to the corresponding place in the Unhived software, I then kept getting an error page when trying to plug in my password. After dinking around with this a while, I finally discovered that the only route I have into the Personal Settings facility is to first fake out the software into thinking that I want to send a PM to a logged in user. If you look down at the bottom of the Unhived home page, there will be a listing, by username, for each user presently on Unhived. Below this list is an option to click "by user name", then, to the right of each username is a graphic for PM. Click this and the software then allows you into the area where you can then go and do other things, like check to see if you have any new incoming PMs. At the end of this process, though, what I discovered was that the PM menu did not indicate I had any new PMs from the person which the email indicated I had a new PM from..... :blink: Since then, I have successfully received some other PMs from other people, so the facility still works at least sometimes.

Jesuits agree to sex case payout

Nine people who say they were molested by Father Mark Falvey between 1959 and 1975 will divide $16 million from the order.

By John Spano, Times Staff Writer
May 18, 2007

The Jesuit order has agreed to a tentative payout of $16 million to settle claims that one of its priests sexually abused nine Los Angeles children over 16 years ending in 1975.

Mark Falvey was accused of molesting four girls and five boys between 1959 and 1975 at Blessed Sacrament Roman Catholic Church in Hollywood. Falvey died 31 years ago and was never charged with a crime.

"One of his victims, an 8-year-old girl, tried to commit suicide," said the lawyer for the victims, Raymond P. Boucher.

"This guy brought a lifetime of misery to a group of young children. They'll never get over it," Boucher said.

The agreement in principle was confirmed by the Rev. Alfred Naucke of the California Province of the Society of Jesus. All of the parties still must sign the pact to make it official. Each victim will receive between $1.4 million and $1.6 million.

"I look forward to meeting the victims to apologize to them on behalf of the Society of Jesus," the Rev. John P. McGarry, who heads the order in California and the West Coast, said in a phone interview.

"We wish these brave victims well and hope that others who were hurt by clergy — Jesuits or others — will come forward so they can heal," said Barbara Blaine, an official with SNAP, a support group for victims of sexual abuse by Catholic priests.

"We also hope that anyone with suspicions or knowledge of Falvey's crimes will call the police. Even though he is deceased, prosecution of church officials who may have covered up his crimes may still be possible," Blaine said.

The Archdiocese of Los Angeles, which has been sued by more the 500 people claiming they were victims of clergy sexual abuse, did not contribute to the settlement.

Falvey served in Asia and was assigned in 1959 as assistant pastor at Blessed Sacrament in Hollywood, where he apparently served until 1975, when he died.

The legal issues in the Falvey case, like in other clergy abuse lawsuits, turned on what the Jesuit order knew about the priest's sexual proclivities, and what its hierarchy did to protect churchgoers in Hollywood.

The evidence against the order was strong, Boucher said.

One victim was ready to testify that while he was being molested by Falvey in Hollywood, another priest blundered into the room.

"Why don't you close the door," Boucher said the priest scolded Falvey.

Boucher, who is the lead lawyer for all of the Los Angeles victims, called Falvey "one of the most evil priests that has ever walked the halls of a church."

"I agree with Mr. Boucher that Father Falvey was not handled correctly by the Jesuit order," McGarry said.

"He should have been removed from ministry" after the first victim.

Title: Dr David Ray "Coadjutor" Griffin

CRAIG-OXLEY - May 17, 2007 10:31 PM (GMT)

EJP:

FYI, Dr. David Ray Griffin is from Claremont Theological, a freemasonic-funded college related to the jesuit College Claremont; i.e. DRGriffin's work is funded by secret societies...

As someone who worked on the 96th floor of the WTC and, as someone who was told to attend a meeting there that morning by someone in a partnership with CFR members... I've had to do my homework to make it this far.

If you doubt my references, here's a video link which explains in parallel:

<http://video.google.com/videoplay?docid=53...=Jordan+Maxwell> (about 9-11 minutes into the presentation, which was in 1993, JMaxwell explains the funding and symbolism of the Claremont agenda... they're (Francis) Bacon(ians).

Those of the Bacon philosophy (extended from Aristotle's death in 322 B.C. and Demosthenes in 322 AD) are the perpetrators of 9-11. Dr. David Ray Griffin is one of them, to his own admission he "wasn't interested" in 9-11, until he was "asked" to write about it... it's part of his job, he's a professional "researcher".

Best,

Richard

Daniel - May 17, 2007 10:53 PM (GMT)

(Craig, this is most important)

Correct on everything except I disagree on one part.

Aristotle was the founder of today's modern science, although in it's present form, it's but a mere shadow of the true form of Aristotleism. We can call it today quasi-Aristotleism

Here are the streams:

Aristotle--->(Cathars)--> Goethe---> Rudolf Steiner

Aristotle---> Al Rachid-->(Templars)---> Sir Francis Bacon

Craig, I do not expect you to accept what I am about to tell you but:

Rudolf Steiner IS the same soul as Aristotle and also Goethe!

Now you see why I consider Rudolf Steiner to be one of the HIGHEST and most advanced souls ever to walk the earth, after the other Greats and Founders.

Few people today understand this. Imagine Craig, that Steiner (back then as Aristotle) CREATED science and thus came back to CREATE IT AGAIN but in a NEW FORM and CORRECT for Modern times. All these Baconian FOOLS who mock Christians and mock Steiner, yet fail to understand that Steiner was himself, once living as the man we call Aristotle!!!

I was not really supposed to reveal this but I think people need to know the truth. Incarnations are a reality, regardles of what is missing in the King James Bible today. Now this may get some heads-rolling but the earliest Christians believed in reincarnation until the Cathars were exterminated by the Roman Church, and with their deaths, went the last of the Christian form of reincarnation. It is not like the Hindu's teachings - we do not come back as animals!

Daniel have you seen the comparison's between Abe Lincoln and John Kennedy at Phelps web page, What say you about that strange Phenom, Almost like they are the same guy.

Interesting.

From what I've learned the whole incarnation process is very complex and combines with Grace and Karma. The similarity in looks is not usually an indicator of the same soul incarnating, although it can be so at times. May be they look similar due to some hidden blood relations, although I doubt it? Awakened souls can start to slowly remember their past lives over time. I doubt that JFK recalled any past life of his - but one day we ALL shall remember our past lives.

Many people find this notion offensive - of not remembering a past life but it actually through God's Mercy that we forget and have a chance to move forward without feeling too much guilt. However, the Karma is still there and follows the Soul through all his lives. This is what Christ meant about plowing and not looking back - we must go forward and not remember our past lives -until we are ready to handle the extra STRESS. Many who awaken these memories artificially (mediums, hypnosis, etc) can go insane.

So although a murderer in one life may not be a killer in the next, these people could be having the tendencies to do so (deep down) and as such, they must try to change.

But the Christian idea of various incarnations is that most souls alive today will again come back to this world in about 800 years time. So most people alive today were alive on the earth about 700-800 years in the past; with this pattern going back millions of years, some longer and some shorter. But there is no law that states anything 100% but certain trends tend to hold same.

Usually, conditions on the physical plane must be changed completely for the same soul to come back into flesh and blood again as another personality. This is why mummies are dangerous, because the human remains left behind take on destructive properties. The Soul wishes to come back when NO TRACE of the past life is left on earth, but sometimes people do come back and their old bodies are mummified in Egypt etc. Either way, these bodies are dangerous without the Soul inside working through the nervous system to dissipate the destructive qualities.

The Vatican's obsession with bones and relics has much to do with the deeper knowledge of the occult. They know that if they can turn us all into atheists, they can use this to entrap the Soul with the body, after we die! Thus, cremation is a good idea.

Other trends as taught in the old Christian teachings are:

For example in this life time the people we meet in childhoods who come as adults and children were people we knew while in adulthood, in our past life. And the people we will meet later on in this life as adults or children were often those people who we met as children in our past life.

Certain advanced Souls will take a sacrifice and choose to come back earlier, for instance the time in between Goethe and Steiner was very short when compared to most. These advanced souls were (for example) way ahead of many of us.

The Soul in Rudolf Steiner was the same Soul in Aristotle and the rest of the people alive at that time were dim in their level of understanding and advancement. These Great men today try to do what Christ asked and they pick up their own cross and follow him through self-sacrifice and Mercy.

On the flip side of the scale, very evil people tend to come back rather quickly also but they are only able to advance painfully slow. The exception being those black adepts who have made certain pacts with demonic entities that allow them to come back and continuously incarnate into rich, powerful families! But even these people will eventually have to seek self-attainment and will build up very grave Karma. Thus, the reason for God's Mercy to intervene to help lessen the pain, or even remove the Karma by having another take it upon their shoulders, or through much prayer and introspection.

For instance, Steiner taught that the Soul in Ignatius Loyola returned again shortly after as the man named: "Emanuel Swedenborg". Ironically, Loyola took a fall as the first Jesuit General but after he died, the Mars genius was working through Loyola in the astral plane, this Loyola-Mars power strengthened the Jesuits. But once the Soul returned to Earth, it opposed the Jesuit order. This is why Steiner taught to not ONLY look at history as a LINEAR line moving backward through Bloodline, since many Souls are incarnating and not connected to blood at all. So much for the Dan Brown nonsense on Blood, eh? So things tend to find some balancing, and Loyola made up for much of his Karma through his new life as:

http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Emanuel_Swedenborg

This is similar to what Christ did for us. He said, "Pick up your cross and follow me", knowing the journey would be ardent and difficult.

Thanks for that video. It should make a good intro study for anyone wanting or needing an intro to understanding the satanic history/ symbology/ influence of our the collective body of secret societies of church & state ruling our secular world.

FWIW, it was between minute # 36 & 37 that Maxwell first mentions Claremont college. This was while quickly giving numerous examples of the pervasive presence of occult symbols, such as the widespread presence of the symbol of facism found wherever such states (such as the U.S.G. - congressional chamber), and such churches (such as the masonic school of Theology in Claremont) are in power.

Griffin has always been a suspicious character given that he was allowed to appear on Television to speak with Tucker "In the Closet & Extortion Friendly" Carlson to discuss the idea that thermite was used in the Demolition of the Towers on 911. This begs the question of Why would he be allowed to do this by the CFR controlled media? The answer may be found in the very real likelihood that Energy Based Weapons were used in association several other forms of undisclosed technology to bring the towers down...Griffins Job is to cover this up...

His links to BYU University conjure up obvious connections to Mormon/Masonic organizations that surely are in the loop when it comes to 911 fallout....Whether he is aware of his role or not...he is aiding and abeting the Jesuit Order...who are more than happy to have the public believe the towers were brought down by way of conventional demolition, which several engineers have come forward saying cannot possibly be the case...in regards to how those towers fell...

Thanks for your extensive reply. I had never heard of the King of Spain mentioned as one of the leaders of the NWO. We will call them the NWO (unless you can explain that NWO is an inappropriate name for the Jesuit-lead conspriacy).

Juan Carlos of Spain is one of the most powerful Papal Knights within the Sovereign Military of Malta. Heres a picture of him in his Order of the Garter regalia:

Now remember the Order of the Garter is an inner core of the SMOM controlled by another inner core called the Pilgrim Society. Both are controlled by Queen Elizabeth II whos a descendant of the Black Nobility "GUELPH" family. She controls the British arm of the SMOM, she's fully controlled by her Grandmaster and Prince (78th) Andrew willoughby Ninian Bertie who infact is her cousin. He's controlled by the Superior General Jesuit Peter Hans Kolvenbach based with his assistants in the House of Gesu within Rome.

Nothing happens in the Middle East without Juan ordering it. Juan controls all Jews in the Middle East as does the SMOM creation known as the Council on Foreign Relations. This is why you get the impression Israel rules U.S foreign policy when infact its the other way round. Both are controlled by the CFR via SMOM HQ St Patrick's Cathedral nearby SMOM David Rockefeller and JESUIT Fordham University which watches over both in the shadows. The Jesuits and the Elite really see it as whats termed the NEW ATLANTIS but yes its also known as New World Order as yet another SMOM Papal knight Bush SNR spoke of back in 1991 and since. Notice all these big SMOM members? Haha.

QUOTE

OK, I have heard much about the NWO, their control over the world, and how they have controlled much of history. I know WW1 and WW2 were manipulated by NWO. I had heard it suggested before that Jesuits were powerful within the NWO. Now it seems to me that you are suggesting that the Jesuit influence on the NWO goes farther than that. In fact you are suggesting the Jesuits are the most powerful in the NWO pecking order, is that correct.

I have heard of people like Rockefellars and Rothschilds being MAJOR players in the NWO. In fact I had suspected that Rothschilds were perhaps the most powerful within the NWO.

As explained David Rockefeller is a SMOM Papal Knight fully controlled by Archbishop of NY/SMOM Americas leadership/Prince of the Roman Catholic Church, Cardinal Edward Michael Egan. The most powerful figure in the Americas region of the globe. Once again never forget he's controlled by the Jesuits and he's watch fully by these from their Fordham University nearby his St Patrick's Cathedral. Egan rules along with his Maltese Knights of the Round Table who are also based within St Patrick's. Theres only one place more powerful in the U.S and thats GEORGETOWN UNIVERSITY based in Washington. Remember this university is JESUIT based.

The Rothschilds were bought into the Jesuit fold thanks to sheep-dipped (meaning still within) Jesuit Adam Weishaupt and his Illuminati. The Rothschilds aren't quite as powerful as people make out as theres a few families of Black Nobility Venetian roots far more powerful and wealthy. Rothschild is a loyal Labor Masonic Zionist Court Jew. The Rothschilds are simply given the positions of high power they have within banking by Rome. If you look them up in the Judiac encyclopedia you'll see their simply "Keepers of the Vatican Treasury."

They were used by the Jesuit to take over not only the Reformation but the Catholic Church itself which the Jesuit detested and saw as a perversion of the their so-called true Mystery Religion. This is why there will also be no Catholicism when the new world religion is released on us all thanks to the SMOM controlled SYNTHETIC SOCIETY created by Balfour. The movie 'the count of monte cristo is really a coded movie of the Jesuit Order.' It shows you how the Jesuits tricked the banking of England and then used their Rothschilds to buy it for pennies thus grabbing hold of the financial system of England and thus its future destruction via DEBT! Eric Phelps can tell you all this far more in detail with all the names, dates and times haha.

You would think this of Rothschild simply because the Jesuit Coadjutors out there or agents to yourself simply wish you to think this. Rothschild isn't going to complain that he's being made out the boss he will love it. The Jesuits always hide behind the shadows whilst letting others be fronts for the blame if the public woke up someday. This is why the Jews are blamed for everything and their in spots which the public can easily identify with. Think about how you would go about hiding yourself if you were the jesuits.

QUOTE

Are Rothschilds the banksters for the Vatican? I have heard it said on many occasions that the Rothschilds are more powerful on dictating world events. A common reply to a suggestion that Jesuits control Rothschilds is that the Rothschilds are the bankers for the Jesuits, the Rothschilds have their money, so the Rothschilds are more powerful. It has been suggested that the Jesuits report to the Rothschilds, not vice-versa.

Utter nonsense my friend the Rothschilds are simply Court Jews for the Papacy and always will be unless they play up, then the Papacy will simply annilate them by any means necessary. If you look at whats going on in this world properly you can see the Roman Catholic control quite clearly. The Rothschilds have been under the Black Pope's thumb since the 18th Century. Be careful of the many diversionists out there playing with your mind. The Jesuit ALWAYS control both sides and they control what you would believe is someone trying to help you such as devious Temporal Alex Jones. They utilise 75% but throw in disinformation. Alex Jones fears to tackle the topics of the SMOM and JESUIT and for good reason for him, the sneak.

When you put money in the bank does the bank own that money or can you remove it and place it in another bank or under your matress? There you go! Yes if theres a crash you can loose your money but the Jesuit will never loose his money. Remember the whole banking system is fully controlled by the SOVEREIGN MILITARY ORDER OF MALTA and has been for eons. Switzerland is their Banking HQ closely followed by 'The City', NYNY and Dubai. Rothschild is subordinate to the JESUITS and the SMOM commanders period. You need to understand how the Jews were granted the positions of power within the SMOM Banking. Look to 1066 and the agreement with them being ruled by the Norman Anglo-Saxon monarchs. These jews have their uses to the Jesuit, the Jesuit isn't stupid, he will utilise what he can to make his power cemented and stronger. The 4th vow Jesuits are the most organised of any order known and the most powerful.

What do you hear daily? ROTHSCHILD, ROTHSCHILD. What didn't you hear about much at all until recently? THE JESUITS and THE SUPERIOR GENERAL. For that matter the SMOM still are kept pretty much quiet in the infowars.

QUOTE

Here is a reply I got on a forum some time ago

"Since the Talmud predates, goes back beyond the Catholic church I would suggest that the Jesuits are nothing more than Talmudists in Catholic robes. The Jesuits report to the Talmudist, Rothschild's.

The CFR is manned by 80% Jews."

First of all the Council on Foreign Relations was created by the Sovereign Military Order of Malta back in 1921 after their creation of the Royal Institute of International Affairs in 1919. Both of these control the 1868 corporation known as the United States. Both are arms of the SMOM via their inner cores within 'The City' known as Pilgrim Society, Order of the Garter and Committee of 300. The CFR created the United Nations. Now notice how the SMOM have PERMANENT OBSERVER STATUS within the United Nations haha.

Look to the likes of New York Jesuit Joseph O Hare whos a CFR! Remember how I told you the tricks to fool people with FRONTS!!! It is correct theres many Labor Masonic Zionists within the CFR but remember also they are MASONIC which itself means subordinate to the Superior General who controls all of Freemasonry again thanks to Adam Weishaupt.

If you look at 'The George Town Law Journal, Vol 71: pages 1179-1200' you will see who clearly owns the Jews as its stated the Norman and Anglo-Saxon Kings own the Jews. It states that Jews are controlled by Gt Britain. It also states the Talmud is now law of the land as of 1066 and its enforced by the Popes and Kings. This is what you would call the Uniform Commerical Code.

QUOTE

I would also like to ask your opinion about the British monarchy. The queen is head of the Protestant Church of England. What is her relations with the jesuits and the pope?

I've explained this above. Once you understand her subordination to ROME it all becomes clear. You can see from all this TREASON she's committed in the U.K by signing all the treaties in place for the EU apart from the last and yet to come soon by around May 2009. Notice how she even adjusted the law with SMOM Papal Knight (what a shock) Tony Blair. They made it so they could not be done for treason. Perfect huh? Remember on also my friend how the Roman Catholic Church is about to bring back into the fold the Protestant Church of England as spoke of within The Times newspaper recently. Theres already been meetings on this as they spoke of in their article which is upon my site.

I only hope people will see through all this disinformation out there and finally see whats happening and its TRUE roots being the VATICAN. The Vatican has more money than you could ever imagine. Check out some of the pictures in articles on my site of the Queen and her SERVILITY to Rome as highlighted when she's with the Popes. Remember what was said on the Alberto Rivera video made by Jim Arabbito. It is said that the Queen has no power compared to Rome. Remember that almost all involved with that video including Jesuit Rivera and Jim Arabbito were all assassinated. That should tell you all just by those acts.

QUOTE

I will certainly visit your website and hope to research it further.

Thanks again for your reply,

Regards

ps, another question that came to mind. Why would the Jesuits want a zionist controlled Israel, why did they want Israel declared a jewish state? Were the Jesuits behind the establishing of Israel??? Were the Jesuits behind the holocaust? I have read that Hitler admired the Jesuits? Why did Britain, France, USA declare war on Hitler??? Were the Jesuits manipulating both sides in WW2, I had thought it was the banks manipulating WW2. Did the Jesuits double-cross Hitler. How much control do the Jesuits actually have, were they capable of controlling both sides in WW2??? Do you know of nay evidence of it?

My friend my site has much information which can answer many questions. Theres the Vatican Assassins III book which should answer almost ALL questions and I've answered some of your questions above already. The Jesuits control everything on the planet utilising their pyramidal system of control through their SMOM next in line. All Intelligence agencies, Banking, Media are all controlled by the SMOM period. Go look up all the main players in Intelligence and you'll see their SMOM connections. You should look to the end goals of the Jesuit to understand Israel and Jerusalem. You should also look to why Subordinate Jesuit trained Israeli SHIMON PERES started the hand over going of Jerusalem back in 1993 to his masters the Vatican. Look at their end goals and you will see the importance. Israel will be no more shortly as exposed by Barry Chamish and others. The Vatican will destroy Israel as you know it when they have got what they desired in the meantime, exactly why Israel was set up in the first place. This will also occur with the 14th Amendment "New Holy Roman" United States once they've utilised it to bully its NWO in. Remember the Financial power will eventually be where? Jerusalem and Mesopotamia (Iraq).

I have not the time to go into it all now but alas you can find this info out by digging. Its up to yourself and how much time you spend. I guarantee you will see the truth when you dig properly and consume this data and much time on it. If you don't get it then your either thick headed or simply well indoctrinated by the Order's henchmen who by the way do a great job.

Another thread with lots of useful information, perfectly chained together by Craig.

I think this thread deserves a bump, too. Well done, Craig, its easily readable and understandable, even at first glance it may unbelievable :lol: , we can remain assured that it contains nothing but the truth, take it, how bitter it may be to swallow anyway!

Does the queen control Egan too?

Hell NO! Remember The Queen is the head of the British arm of the Sovereign Military of Malta and its Inner cores within 'The City.' Edward Egan is the equivalent within the Americas but remember he has something much more powerful up his sleeve than the Queen could ever have. Edward Egan is a PRINCE of the Roman Catholic Church, a member of the College of Cardinals. So this makes him far more powerful than the Queen my friend. Remember what was said about the British Monarchy on the Jim Arabbito video compared to the extreme power of Rome.

One of the days I will have to sit down and write properly and deeply adding links and so forth. I don't do this hardly at all as I'm very busy in other ways. I quickly wrote that up as I was running late last night. Really though all people need to do is read Vatican Assassins and listen to Eric Phelps.

David Icke Mixes Jesuit Satanism With The Folly of UFO Reptilians

Is he trying to discredit honest truth tellers by mixing in the serious Jesuit message with Reptilian folly? Someone please ask him if he is working for the Jesuits or if he has surrounded himself with the wrong people feeding him silly Reptilian information?

By Greg Szymanski

<http://www.arcticbeacon.com/articles/5-Apr-2007.html>

The next copy of the David Icke newsletter goes out on Saturday and the Arctic Beacon has received an advance copy of his opening message.

Icke seems to be on the "crush the Jesuit" bandwagon for the last month just like the Arctic Beacon has been on for years.

In fact, the editor of the Arctic Beacon has researched Vatican and Jesuit evil ever since working in Rome from 1979-1985. However, he has never mixed the important Vatican and Jesuit issue with things like Reptilians and other UFO hoaxes like Icke.

Further, it is this Arctic Beacon editor's opinion that Icke either works for the Jesuits, trying to mix seriousness with UFO folly, or he has surrounded himself with the "wrong people" feeding him wrong crazy Reptilian information in order to incite fear while now diluting the serious Satanic influence of the Jesuits.

"Please someone ask Icke to come on my radio show to clear up these issues and if he doesn't respond, we then know what he is all about," said Greg Szymanski, editor of the Arctic Beacon and host of the highly popular radio show, The Investigative Journal.

Here are the opening lines of Mr. Reptilian's upcoming newsletter and ask if he is two-faced just like the Jesuits:

'The front men and women of the Jesuit network are always two-faced, because they have to be. One face, the public one, smiles bonhomie and presents an image that will attract votes and support. The other is the scowling face of the genetic manipulator and deceiver, for whom there are no limits in pursuit of power.

Bill and Hillary Clinton are notable examples, and Bill was educated at the Jesuit—controlled Georgetown University. Whether someone is a Roman Catholic or not is irrelevant. The Jesuits control the Church of Rome, which is the present-day Church of Babylon, and its influence stretches far beyond Roman Catholicism.

Giuliani has blatantly revealed his obligatory two faces with regard to 9/11. The public one is as the brave and caring hero, covered in dust, who acted with wisdom as the horror unfolded. The other is the face of a callous self-server who will walk over anyone to get what he wants.'

David Icke is a punk and wannibe Jordan Maxwell.

Even now he still pushes this reptilian crap! What an idiot - you know I bet he is working for them because the Vatican are the BIGGEST promoters of the alien and reptilian crap. After all the research on who are the real controllers Icke is unshakable with his reptile nonsense and that make me real mad because whenever people laugh at truthsayers, they always gotta mention "I suppose you're with icke and his reptiles".

Greg Szymanski said it very well, I think. You judge a man by his fruit and if ICke ain't on the payroll then he is working for free! Icke may have doen more damage to the truth movement than Stew Webb has.

I think David is genuine, but won't give credit where credit is due to Jordan Maxwell and other people. He has a big ego. It's not up to Greg Szymanski to slur his name, without even talking to him, or asking him to appear on the show. At least Icke mentions the Vatican, Knights of Malta and the Jesuits, and is well aware of the Jesus myth, things Alex Jones won't go near.

CRAIG-OXLEY - April 6, 2007 03:39 AM (GMT)

My friend he would be a British SS asset not a SIS if any.

...and once again, no proof...just accusations.

Quoting the article... "Please someone ask Icke to come on my radio show to clear up these issues and if he doesn't respond, we then know what he is all about," said Greg Szymanski, editor of the Arctic Beacon and host of the highly popular radio show, The Investigative Journal.

...Is this how he gets people on his show? Saying that if Icke doesn't agree to go on his show, he's "one of them". Yeah, it's a SHOW alright. That's just pathetic and low. He couldn't wrap his closed mind around the reptilian theory whether it's true or not.

I was going through old topics and found one where Alan Watt indicated Icke may be a mason. The radio show was supposed to have this at thirty minutes according to the poster who put up the hyperlink to the mp3, but the lady cut to music and never cut back into the show at the thirty minute mark. Wish I could find that topic again so I could give the whole thing a listen as I never had a chance last night to finish it.

This is a typical method to destroy the credibility in something. But the error is about the Aliens.

Remember that if we can use the "crap disinformation" as a index of credibility of the argument, maybe the Alien hypotesis should be the most founded and credible theory in the world.

IN every corner of the world you have groups, individuals, sects, etc. which transformed the discussion and research in the UFO/Alien field in a 'circus-like' arena, filled by satanists, Intelligent services, Masonry, new agers, and of course, Jesuits & Company.

All this is backed NOT to make you believe in somethin it doesn't exists.

All this is backed to make you BELIEVE that Aliens & Ufo are only 'intelligence-crap' or similar.

All this is direct in order to DISCREDIT every person who seriously try to investigate these phenomena. Just reflect for a moment.

Doesn't you apply, when you quote in a negative way the arguments about "Aliens & Reptiles", the same mentality applied by Icke?

Ok, Icke discredits the exposition about Jesuits binding it with a "discredited" argument like Aliens & Reptiles. But tell me why I must not consider that all this "fauna and flora" of groups and researchers "new age" like (Astar Sheran fans for example) are backed to DISCREDIT every serious discussion about about UFO and Aliens, and not simply to make you believe in something 'it doesn't exists'.

And if you look all this with the lense, you'll find that this is the same method used by Vatican and Jesuits, when they accused someone to be in contact with the 'devil', just because he was going beyond the border of the admitted knowledges of that age. Today if you go beyond the border indentified with a clear signal "Alien Doesn't Exists" you encounter no more the Inquisitory Court, but the Moral Inquisitory Court of this society, mentally deviated by the crap of the sects, new age, intelligence, masonry etc.

Avles.

He's also a putz who divorced the mother of his child and went for a younger trophy wife. Or did she divorce him? Oh well who cares. As for your comment about Stew Webb, I would say that even though some of the things he says is suspicious, he HAS done a lot to out the Bushes and Clintons. His interview with Anton Levy's son Jessy was excellent and his work on the Klmball-Cherokee castle and the council of 13, etc is great stuff. Remember there is in-fighting in the in crowd. It's Bush-Clinton versus Gore. We know Gore ain't perfect, just the lesser of two evils. Remember that. Take all the true information you can get, whatever the source, and leave it at that.

CRAIG-OXLEY - April 6, 2007 03:57 PM (GMT)

All this reptilian nonsense is just that, nonsense and a method to help the Iron Mountain report once again. If they get x-amount of the awakening so-called more intelligent population believing in such crap then when the time comes these too will fall for the new one-world religion of Sion created by the SYNTHETIC SOCIETY created by Balfour. Wake up people out there to the crap your being spoon fed. Whilst you worry and argue over aliens, the U.S Military continue to fly over us daily in crafts of future technology being veiled by such bunkum. Whilst you go on about alien crap all day long your being tagged with national ID's and Vaccinated etc. Get to the real issues.

Now David Icke goes on about your Aura's and negative entities attaching to your chakra's via the back. Now what does Icke do all day from the looks of it? He drinks BEER! What does Alcohol do? It lowers your Aura thus making you susceptible to what Icke was claiming. Now whos the intelligent person? Icke is for beginners and only in freemasonry and the general control system. Icke has copied the work off many true researchers like Maxwell, Tsarion & Michael Talbot almost claiming it for himself and word for word. Icke never went anywhere near the Jesuits until I pushed it out there especially via the old Icke forum. When he realised people were questioning him for it, it took him a while but he's now coming out with Jesuit information also. I must add his information is simply once again a copy of what we've been saying for a long time now and Eric even longer. His information is actually quite basic also on the Jesuits. So either he was purposely keeping Jesuit information from the public or better still he simply isn't the great researcher he claims and it took him far too long to see the JESUITS! Now I wonder why that could be? Because he's been too diverted with Reptilian BUNKUM.

For him to also allow the footage of him on that damn B-Movie or should I say C-Movie documentary of Brandon Corey well that said it all. Absolute bunkum.

CRAIG-OXLEY - April 6, 2007 04:13 PM (GMT)

Here is an interesting interview with Allan Watt who claims that David Icke is a Mason.. It is at the 30 min mark..

Discussed David Icke, a Freemason, and how he manages to do research, write and publish many books and still give numerous lectures and do tours around the world in many countries.

You cannot put someone out there to sway people away from truth without giving that person a lot of the truth.

Uncovering symbologies of the Tree (Birch, Oak and Ash) in high masonry and the houses that they're put into according to their degrees and functions and the clues that they leave.

For those who do not know, Craig's last post comes from here.

http://z13.invisionfree.com/THE_UNHIVED_MI...?showtopic=7798

I revived it a few days ago after I was plowing through the old topics a day or two ago. It's in the section THE ORDER OF THE ILLUMINATI. I also clarify that the Jacke Patru in the interview didn't cut out from the music and so for the first half hour is nothing but music. But at the fifty minute mark she gets back into it again with Alan Watt for the listeners who got stuck with so much music at the start. I have also provided a transcript that begins around that fifty minute mark.

Someone should get this off to Greg Szymanski. Maybe Greg will pick it up himself though. One of the many links he has down at the bottom of his arctic beacon page leads to this website's topic about Mel Gibson's connection to Opus Dei. Well, at least he used to have that link. He doesn't anymore.

Szymansky think alien don't exist, but it's just an opinion of his. All dire technologies are terrestrial (nanotechnologies, modified viruses, HAARP, chemtrails, spaceweapons, exotic weapons etc)? May be, but Repitilans are not a fake, i think. Do you talk about Jesuit connection? People laugh and tell you are crazy. Do you talk about UFO and aliens? People laugh an tell you are crazy. It' s the same. Which is the difference.? People love lies, in any way. No, i won't tell anything about Szymanski, i won't tell anything about Icke. They know if they are sincere. Alan Watt is just about the most honest, humble and decent person one could ever meet. How do you feel when hearing his voice?

I used to give Icke the benefit of the doubt that his reptile stuff was his a making of own (honest) ideas. But by his not wanting to admit that he misinturprets the scritpures and also assumes that the astral vision is something that is material - something that looks reptilian that is really not seen with the eye, he hurts the trith movement. Yes, I used to defend his views and overlook this, until I came to understand how Icke treated those who cared and provided for him.

That is until I saw how his EGO got bigger than his ability to want to expose the lies. This guy just speaks "Nephilim" and happens to forget about Atlantis, Edgar Cayce, Steiner, and how can he makes up his own garbage in the light that many have nbever said squat about reptiles.

Is he a clarvoyent..no! So what's up with him?

I think David Icke may have a point but I would have taken Greg up on his offer still. David Icke thinks that knowing something of materialistic research will matter in a time when human beings were not even hardened into matter during the time of Lumeria? Scientists cannot measure these things without clairvoyant vision because even if we were to stand in the time in Lemuria with today's eyes, we could not have seen the so-called human beings! If David's Reptiles live in the Etheric, or astral, or whatever plane, they would have been more evidence.

David is missing the bigger picture and the history of man is a fight against powers like ROME, not Reptiles. Eric must have hundreds of textbooks on this factalone. Everyone from the Gnostics to the Hindu's will agree that it was not Reptiles that were waging wars; if anything they are inner-terrestrial spirits - not extra-terrestrial beings.

We have an entire heirachy of beings from Sepharim to Principalities to the other forces likes Salamanders, Gnomes and things that David never discusses in too much detail. it all comes back to the Reptiles to him. All he does is edit everything to fit into his own notion of reality and this is foolish, IMO.

It's David's Ego that is truly in question here because he might just find himself proven wrong, after all. I think there is a method to Greg's madness here in that he may be trying to see who is ready and willing to go further and who is still holding onto their falsehoods. Actually, I think Greg has almost adapted a DBS approach, thinking that everyone is a Jesuit or Zionist...lol! But for some reason, I kind of like his aggressive nature because it's like he truly believes in this Jesuit truth to risk his own reputation.

But Greg doesn't claim any esoteric wisdom. You cannot take pieces of Maxwell's research and then compile it into your own religion and call it something esoteric when Jordan is a materialist himself and never claimed to be an esoteric. So David is alot like Sitchen because he lends himself over to an almost spiritual authority.

The Annukai and Nephlim have already been explained by many mystics like Blavatsky and Rudolf Steiner, and many other mystics. All of them agree that there are no reptiles and all of them can see the same truth with advanced vision. Edgar Cayce also spoke of people living on other worlds but these vistor's are so advanced they are like GODS and are most loving. David Icke's Reptiles are not loving (like archangels) and so David Icke is in certain ways, a fool because his books are very much like that book called Esoteric Buddhism which claimed that everything is all spiritual molecules - it had nothing to do with true Buddhism. Steiner exposed this book as one of the most dangerous forms of materialism hidden within spiritual axions. Satan and Lucifer were using this new form of spiritual-materialism to drag people into the 8'th sphere.

It was extra-terrestrials that helped push skylab into the ocean after it lost control and this was mentioned by the mystic Daskalos while he was there communicating wioth them. he said they can materialize bodies but they are so advanced that they almost act like Karma spirits of the planet earth itself. How does all this fit into Icke's Reptile theories?

David just doesn't get it and although Greg is being aggressive, I'd still like to see ICKE swallow his own Pride and make peace with Greg. I know I would do this and I would be flattered that he challenged me because it means that some closure may come.

It does not mean that Icke must give into any threats to go on a show but it would certainly show good faith on Icke's part if he made an effort.

But if he still accepted extra-terrestrial life, I would not doubt it one bit. I accept it also but I think that David Icke may get his message across better and reach more people if he associated these reptilian-like experiences with more Angelic or Demonic in-nature beings, instead of Reptiles.

May be in David's case, it's more a matter of terminology that sometimes rubs people the wrong way.

Best,

My friend he would be a British SS asset not a SIS if any.

What does SS stand for? Secret Service? I mean SIS is Secret Intelligence Service or MI-6.

QUOTE (grandw @ Apr 6 2007, 02:27 PM)

Maybe that's why one should only trust his own eyes :blink: . Haven't seen any humanoid reptile yet.

Believing ONLY to what we are seeing is an anti-scientific attitude at all.

If we take the history of science excluding the progress in it due to influence of ancient inside circle ("Illuminati" - Jesuits/Freemasonry = Babylonian gang), we are OBLIGED to state that.....

...SCIENCE HAS ALWAYS PROGRESSED ASSUMING HYPOTHESIS, ASSUMPTIONS, THEOREM WHICH WERE AND ARE A-L-W-A-Y-S OPPOSED TO THE MATERIAL AND SENSIBLE EVIDENCE.

Just for one example take the "Copernican Revolution" : in fact I DON'T believe that the Earth is revolving around the sun... Every morning, every evening my eyes, my brain, my sensible apparatus is telling me: "The sun revolves around the Earth, NOT the opposite!".

Ok, I am joking, but I think that only the joke, the theater, the drama the ART could explain the Reality where we live in, a reality which is an interior world, and it is not sufficient to use the informatic metaphors like Icke to explain reality.... I am NOT and never will be a Computer (The only 'redemption' of humanity is the ART, not science, not philosophy not religion... Wagner docet).

Stop.

Return to the 'scientific' aspect, another argument is: "among the possible theories, assumptions, hypothesis, we are formulating to explain some data of the sensible reality, to explain contradictions about the data collected, which is the most true?"

I said: "the most", i.e. I assumed the global problem as a probability problem,....

This is how SCIENCE WORKS.... I am sure that if I put everyone of you in a university room - physics department, where a professor is explaining at the blackboard the 'Schroedinger equations' which describes the function of the wave etc. etc. of the orbits of the electrons around the nucleo, no one of you, even if you don't understand just a word of the professor, will have a microscopic doubt that the "electrons exists"

Because "electrons exists" is just a question NOT ONLY of science, but ALSO a question of social shared values.....

But if I explain to you all the methods (Gallileian) and the scientific protocols used by prof. Malanga (italian researcher about abductions), trying to show you that if what he discovered in this way (the reality of the abductions) has the SAME rigorous foundation and legitimacy of existence of any other scientific object discovered and studied by the SAME protocols and methods, I am sure that no one of you will believe yet in the reality of the phenomena of 'Alien Abductions'.

Because "Alien Abdc. exists" is just a question NOT ONLY of science, but ALSO a question of social shared values.....

The question is that we are too much trustful about our eyes and our brain,.... and this is the point at which prof. Malanga started to change all the previous approaches to the UFO and Alien phenomena (if I will have time I hope to explain something,).

Jesuits-controlled organizations were well skilled in order to confuse not only the majority of population, but also the scientific social layer.

So now, they gained an important goal, stopping the progress of the science through a hard hit in his core, with the popular assumption by which we must "believe only to our eyes". Now, with this assumption, which values in single parts of the scientific approach but NOT in his global aspect, the science find itself without his legs, which permitted her to advance and to assume f. example that "is not true that the sun revolves around Earth"...

Today science is putted on a wheel chair, because his legs are destroyed by the axe consisting of "believe only in what you see --- what you don't see doesn't exist".

Today science is totally in their hands, if they want it progress in the direction and for the distance they want, they'll push it. If they want it goes back, they'll pull it back. No one obviously will imagine that the pull or the push is made by dark hands.

Fazit.

So, as is wrong and diverting to say that if "something that we don't see could exists --- this means that exists for certain" because the mere probability > 0 of existence are assumed as a proof ($>0 = 100\%$, an error of course), is equally wrong the opposite, i.e. to say that "something we don't see ---- it means it doesn't exists".

And these are the two blade of the axe, which hit and destroy the legs of science.

(It has to be said more, but a serious scientific debate requires more knoweledge and space and tima)

Avles.

The fact that Cooper later denied the reality of alien life later in life does not wipe out the fact that to his dying day he believed firmly in his own first-hand UFO experience which he saw in 1966 onboard the sub in the Pacific.

Could this have been a government craft? How does he know they were not?

Disclosure Project headed by Dr. Steven Greer has even made claims that many of these flying craft have been shot down by Telsa Coils. Leo Zagami is but one person who said the Disclosure Project were a very dangerous group of Jesuits. But they are very convincing still although I suspected them as soon as I saw that mop-headed Jesuit claim that the Vatican would not allow the Jesuits access to their libraries. This sounds like more polmics to me.

According to my friend, who makes contact with me from time to time and is an advanced follower of the Anthroposophy teachings, these flying crafts can materialize at will and are so advanced that no Telsa coil could ever shoot them down. These are not to be confused with the GREYs that Crowley STARTED the culture of FEAR upon. The real extra-terrestrials are in some ways, more advanced then certain angels and they are working in the highest accordance of divine principles. These are often referred to as Guardians and these were there also found helping out during the Skylab incident. They help to balance out the Eaerth's Karma among other things.

The evil Grey's are inner-terrestrial beings not extra-terrestrial based on my research but are inner-terrestrial beings. More like demons?

These things need to be carefully seperated. or they are likely to be scoffed at.

Craig, I agree that I should not be bashing C&D. After now, I have already said what I had to say about it.

What does Tom Heneghan and Mike Ruppert have in common? They are both arrogant and are both into this Promis software, drugs and both attack people like Gunderson, Karl Swartz and others. My acceptance of advanced life elsewhere is not going to hurt the truth movement but believing that French Intellegence (who are controlled by the Knights of Malta) are somehow always preventing phony nuke attacks, will cause damage to the truth.

First they brainwash people into accepting this crudd on French Intellegence and then they mis-direct people. Have you not been looking into this? I go by my gut at first but after a little research I can tell you that it is very obvious to me.

My response was more tailored toward Lisa. You know how I feel about Lucifer Trust and all this nonsense. I mentioned the fact that Cooper wrote that Rosswell was nonsense. I do not hold anything against those people who seem to imagine that 2000 years ago, an entire culture, change of religious worship and consciousness just sprung out up out of NOWHERE and Chirst is nothing but KY-oil, do I? If it were all just KY, then why the need to create a myth called Jesus Christ, unless those earlier mysteries were already fulfilled by the one they were awaiting? An experience of incredible magnitude took place and to assume that nothing took place and that even all those pissed off Rabbis just ranted on about it for so long, is truly beyond all logic. To assume that those enlightened ones who authored Matt, LUC, Marc and John were all speaking of what was already said, overlooks an experience they wrote about. It is an investigatation of "some type of experience" that is very real, Dear Craig. History putts along but something did happen to alter the very course of the world itself. This cannot be denied.

Beleive me, I cannot write much that I would like to as it may offend those good people here who tell truth on Jesuits but who are mislead into thinking that Jesus Christ never existed. Thinking this way, is actually serving the Jesuits more than you know.

CRAIG-OXLEY - February 16, 2007 01:19 PM (GMT)

Dear Brethren and Friends,

VAIII is now completed with its index. The e-book will be sent to the company making the CDs tomorrow, Friday, February 16.

I will be on a long needed vacation in Florida until March 10th when I will return to the office. So please hold your emails until that time.

May the Lord bless you brethren as you continue to serve Him according to his Word, the AV1611 for English-speaking peoples. May all of you be blessed in doing right wherever you may be in the providence of God.

Sincerely in Faith,

Brother Eric

Alexandra - February 16, 2007 04:29 PM (GMT)

Cool! I've got to see about getting a copy. I wonder how much for a copy?

CRAIG-OXLEY - February 16, 2007 04:36 PM (GMT)

I need a FREE one as I have no money haha

Alexandra - February 16, 2007 05:53 PM (GMT)

I just filled up my gas tank so you KNOW I don't have any money! :P

And I did grocery shopping too.

wolvshater - February 17, 2007 01:15 AM (GMT)

Well I hope the disk is not blank when people receive it, due to some monkey biz at the post offices, I have had some blanks arrive, Like the dvd beyond treason, and one nation under siege, and shocked, and also the replacement dvds came today and there BLANK. and the place that sold me shocked is also selling Eric's disk of assassins 3. I'm wondering about sabotage ?????

CRAIG-OXLEY - February 17, 2007 01:19 AM (GMT)

Doesn't surprise me!

wolvshater - February 17, 2007 01:26 AM (GMT)

So Craig is there a way to erase DVDs in the mail with magnets perhaps, they were doing this to VHS some years back. I'm wondering if these need to be shipped incognito some how, different sender or something. I hope you guys mention this to Phelps as I am smelling a RAT.

CRAIG-OXLEY - February 17, 2007 02:47 AM (GMT)

I don't know how to attack Cd's, DVDs etc but yes Video tape was very easy to damage. There may be a way like with everything but I have no answers.

JagDRS - February 17, 2007 03:20 AM (GMT)

Hmmm, interesting question. At first blush I would say no, CDs and DVDs cannot be zapped or accidentally erased the way magnetic media can. But then, when I think about newer trends in re-writable CD/DVD disks, I'm thinking this may be easier to accomplish even though it's still not magnetic media. The basic of recording on a disk - be it CD or DVD, is "burning", so there is a physical imprint being put onto the disk, almost like the old days of vinyl as a crude analogy. I can imagine that with all the xray and HSA zapping/scanning that gets done with mail and other cargo these days, plus with all the newer fancy chemical substrates that are used to give CDs and DVDs their recordable capacity, it may not be all that difficult to produce a beam of some sort that can quickly zap an already burned CD/DVD. I would think/hope that with all the time & effort Eric has put in on the production end of VAIII, there has got to be a way to offset this kind of mischief, but then again, once it gets to the shipper, it's out of his hands.

Here is something I wonder about. As I understand it, Eric is in Pennsylvania. I wonder how he intends to sell VAIII (what channels?). How did he sell VAII? Was there an option to buy directly from him, or did he go through third parties? I'm in Pennsylvania, and I'd even take the time & effort to drive to him to pick up an unmolested copy of the new disk....or perhaps multiple copies, and then private mail them to others as need be.

Mark Brewer - February 17, 2007 04:34 AM (GMT)

I bought my copy of the second edition from Texe Marrs in September of 2003. Since Texe and Eric are not getting along I guess that I will not be able to do that again.

AntiSionist - February 17, 2007 08:34 AM (GMT)

Speaking of the second edition, scroll down.

http://z13.invisionfree.com/THE_UNHIVED_MI...showtopic=20747

Alexandra - February 17, 2007 04:27 PM (GMT)

I wouldn't mind driving there myself...probably be a good 6 or 8 hour drive from where I am.

I love going on road trips. :P

CRAIG-OXLEY - February 17, 2007 11:44 PM (GMT)

It would be great to meet Eric in person!

Alexandra - February 18, 2007 01:34 AM (GMT)

Once when I was 19 I did a 12-hour non-stop drive from Detroit to Wisconsin Dells. So 6-8 hours is a drive around the block. Especially since a 4-hour drive to Detroit to see my family is nothing. :P

I agree, it would be nice to meet Eric...he's only the next state over!

wolveshater - March 4, 2007 05:46 PM (GMT)

Well has anyone recieved Vatican assassins III yet, mine were supposed to be here by now, I checked and they have not shipped yet. I am at page 350 in the 2nd book, and it is very good.

The search of your forum provider does not work, which is a pity, as I like to search for your information on this forum. (try search for Sheen) I do not think the Sheen thread you're referring to is among the results. Just some references, like the Alex Jones thread. Please provide the link, I cannot manually search through tens of thousands of posts.

Back on the topic. Its nice to know that VA3 has started shipping. I would like hear about the actual CD-books arriving at readers' homes. And I hope that Cutting Edge can handle international orders in a manner where the books do not disappear, as they have in England previously. I'm also looking forward to see a review of the new edition here.

I just recieved the 3rd Edition today its in my hands, cutting edge sent it priority mail from Florida to Idaho over night.

wolveshater - March 28, 2007 06:50 PM (GMT)

Wow Im impressed with this E-book, 1836 pages, I have noticed new information in the first 75 pages along with existing info when comparing to the 2nd book. one disk is 1836 pages, the extra disk has the 13 books like before, Ive only glanced at the 2nd disk. The inside cover is signed by Eric and dated. Some pics are color. this is sweet.

TruthSeeker24 - March 29, 2007 01:24 PM (GMT)

By your responses, I will order it from Cutting Edge. Cutting Edge is known for getting the mail through. I'm from VA, so it should be here by April. I will make a long commentary on it with all the details when I get it.

Well Blade Im sure they were sold out, I paid for mine 2 months ago, So get the transaction done and wait it will show. I think its going slow because I believe Eric is inspecting the E-books before shipping to the cutting edge, maybe watching for blanks. it looks like the edge only got 150 to start with, as inside the cover it says 19 of 150 . then Eric signed it also. so this would be my guess.

Edgar - April 1, 2007 03:52 AM (GMT)

yeah, i'm sorry for not explaining that I paid for mine about a month ago also.

Bladestorm - April 1, 2007 04:08 AM (GMT)

Haha, this gets even better. It came today but I wasnt home to sign for it. Now I have to wait till monday. Guess I payed 2nd day shipping for nothing. Thats alright though, i've waited this long, I can wait a couple more days.

How exactly is the book layed out? Is it just one big PDF file? When I get it I want to see if a place like Staples or Office Max can print a real book from it?

wolveshater - April 1, 2007 04:22 AM (GMT)

Well it is like opening a book the introduction and chapter 1 thru 1836 pages. I want to build a book also, will start next week. I dont know what PDF is. only had this puter 10 months, I must get some tutoring soon. I want to stick my photo up here so you all can see what this kook looks like, but I dont know how.

can you post what Chavez said about the Pope. I have read alot about Chavez and like this guy, he seems to be very good for Venezuela. Even if he is supposedly "oppo-same", if he is good for the people of Venezuela then it is good.

Just because he is religous doesn't necessarily mean he is oppo-same anyhow, can you be sure he knows what the Vatican and the Jesuits are really all about. There are millions of people who show respect to the pope, are Roman Catholic, and have no idea that the Jesuits are behind the NWO.

CRAIG-OXLEY - May 20, 2007 11:13 PM (GMT)

Wake up Dolphin and learn whats happening in this charade of a movie we act within without getting top dollar and stars on the walkways for. These Chavez's etc are the main cast and we are the extras who they force into change through their antics and nonsense. Just watch what happens when Cuba and co are used for the battle with the U.S towards the end. You need more research on the subject and its available to you if you look and work hard. It gets so frustrating people not seeing deeper into the rabbits hole and just looking at the illusion on the top. Just study Fidel Castro to understand how much they can create illusions. One hand we're told the CIA want to assassinate many times but they never succeed. I wonder why? It was the damn CIA controlled by the SMOM who put him there. Then we also find he's a damn Jesuit himself just like that dirty murderous Gerry Adams who traitor Ian Paisley likes to now associate with. Its all BUNKUM, WAKE UP PEOPLE. You only respect the Pope, wear black, kiss his ring etc if your SUBORDINATE! All these leaders are totally subordinate otherwise the Company of Jesus simply eliminate them wether by cup, dagger or bullet they will go. Wether Prime Minister, President or Monarch. You accept Papal Temporal Power or your a gonna. All these leaders could be wiped out over night but they manage to survive for another day. Give me a break, just like Bin Laden (probably dead now). They could locate this CIA/MEK Prat easily but they choose not to. Its like the illusion of terrorists bringing in Nukes IT DOESN'T HAPPEN! The U.S is so heavily guarded by Satellites controlled by the likes of the most powerful intelligence agency on U.S Soil, The National Reconnaissance Office. They know every inch of land and where radiation is present. This World is so far in the future with surveillance it would scare the hell out of us to know the truth. So don't believe the hypes and illusions. See they as all one which they are. Russia has been controlled since 1890 in truth by the Jesuits same as the U. S since 1868. Russia controls China and China controls North Korea. The Middle East is controlled just the same, its all through high level freemasonry going all the way to the highest inner cores of the pie of the SOVEREIGN MILITARY ORDER OF MALTA. King Juan Carlos totally dominates the Middle East for the SMOM of which he's a part of at the highest levels answering only to the 78th Grandmaster and Prince Andrew Willoughby Ninian Bertie himself who only answers to the Pope and Superior General/Assistants. In reality these days Bertie takes his orders from Kolvenbach but alas we still are led to believe the SMOM serve the Vatican and we're not meant to know about the JESUIT (SS) policing and controlling it since 1814 and in their faces since 1870 with the introduction of the Doctrines of Infallibility.

Daniel - May 20, 2007 11:13 PM (GMT)

G. Edward Griffin has also noted some concern over how Alex Jones seems to at times consider Chavez an ally and forgets that Chavez is a known Leninist. Something I just cannot place my finger upon is whether or not:

Chavez is actually working for the Pope in opposing Bush,

Chavez opposes Bush on his own grounds,

Chavez is in fact pals with Bush and it is all a rouse.

If we go back and look at the hell the Jesuits placed upon the Latin nations, we now can see the emergence of a dictator like Chavez who although a socialist, is doing some things that are much better for his people then what came earlier.

So if Chavez is actually serving the Pope, then it seems he is moving away from what the Jesuits started in Latin America. However, Chavez is still Catholic and may hold his own opinions, similar to how JFK held his.

This can get awfully confusing and I hope we will soon find out more. I'll reserve my opinion until later on for this one. :(

Chavez demands Pope apologize for Indian comments

Sat May 19, 2007 12:07AM EDT

<http://www.reuters.com/article/worldNews/i...819661120070519>

CARACAS (Reuters) - Venezuelan President Hugo Chavez demanded Pope Benedict apologize to Indians in Latin America for saying this month in Brazil that the Roman Catholic Church purified them.

Chavez, who regularly clashes with the Catholic Church in Venezuela but had not directly criticized the Pope before, accused the Pontiff on Friday of ignoring the "holocaust" that followed Christopher Columbus's 1492 landing in the Americas.

"With all due respect your Holiness, apologize because there was a real genocide here and, if we were to deny it, we would be denying our very selves," Chavez said at an event on freedom of expression.

In a speech to Latin American and Caribbean bishops at the end of a visit to Venezuela's neighbor Brazil, the Pope said the Church had not imposed itself on the indigenous peoples of the Americas.

Indian leaders in the region were outraged by the comments.

Millions of tribal Indians are believed to have died as a result of European colonization backed by the Church, through slaughter, disease or enslavement.

Chavez, who has expanded the rights of indigenous peoples from the Amazon rainforest to the Caribbean, said he felt he was Indian because Venezuelans are a mix of the European race and indigenous peoples.

Chavez spoke only days after Venezuelan media interpreted other comments from the Pope as singling out Chavez as a danger to Latin America when he warned of autocrats in the region.

Chavez, who regularly criticizes world figures such as U.S. President George W. Bush, describes himself as Christian, grew up expecting to become a priest and says his socialist policies have roots in the teachings of Jesus Christ.

dolphin - May 21, 2007 12:28 AM (GMT)

Whether Chavez is "oppo-same" or not, like I said already, if he is GOOD for the people of Venezuela then it is good for Venezuelans, an improvement from the past and an improvement from other world leaders.

His words to the Pope to apologize were good. Despite what you may imagine I would be very suspicious of ALL politicians, Chavez included, but if he is doing good then I am pleased to hear that. Venezuela certainly seems to be in better shape now, and Chavez wants to remove Venezuela from the international bankers control.

But he does want to get rid of the FED and the IRS.

You might remember him from the Pentagon Papers. He was the one who read 4000+ pages of the documents into the congressional record, and single handedly ended the Vietnam War draft with a filibuster.

Title: RBN removes GREG SZYMANSKI, heat getting to hot?

CRAIG-OXLEY - April 24, 2007 12:46 AM (GMT)

Dear Brethren and Friends,

Well, it has finally happened. John Stadmiller has thrown Greg Szymanski off RBN. Greg stated on his show today while interviewing me that if he is taken off RBN in the future, then you know, i.e., that RBN will not continue to tolerate the exposure of Vatican/Jesuit designs against the US. Mr. Stadmiller inturrupted the show and cut off Greg but I was still on the line. Stadmiller then said, "Greg, you had better answer me you SOB."

Then Mr. Stadmiller called me and apologized for ending the show with the reason that Greg was stealing his advertisers. I responded that he could have allowed the show to finish but as it stands he lent credibility to what Greg had warned about. He then apologized again after a few other words and we hung up.

About five minutes later Walter Williams called and told me that Stadmiller had thrown Greg off RBN. Walt and called John and told him that the reason that he ended Greg's tenure at RBN was because John was getting heat from the top. Walt, an old acquaintance of John from years gone by, confronted John and then John hung up on him.

So, as far as I am concerned, RBN and GCN are squarely in the lap of the Jesuits through their many invisible strings to their bow of occult control. May the Lord give Greg another venue for getting his/our message out---that the Vatican is behind the WTC demolition, the "War on Terror," the CFR, the Masonic Jewish Labor Zionists---the Frankists---and the quest for a New World Order to be centered in Jerusalem.

Keep up the good work Greg and the Lord will open another door to accomplish his will and work.

Sincerely in Faith,

Brother Eric

Greg thrown off the air by Vatican-led NWO agents in control of alternative media!!!

Greg's Monday show and any future Investigative Journal broadcasts on RBN were cut-off the air by owner John Stadtmiller in a blatant and callous violation of First Amendment rights of free speech. Further, owner and NWO agent Stadtmiller has slandered Greg, which redress of grievance and monetary damages will be addressed in the courts as truth is a complete defense for any slanderous statements made in public, the public consisting of one or more third parties.

Szymanski said: "I will pray for John. He simply wants to cut-off the many credible guests I have brought to the airwaves who connect the Vatican and Jesuit Order to the NWO. I believe this plan has been in the works for months, as my archives have been conveniently taken down by RBN, as well. Further, John's actions prove to me that he is working in collusion with the very enemy I talk about -- the Vatican and Jesuit Order, as the control of the alternative media becomes even more obvious now.

In my estimation, John's role is to create confusion and distrust. I believe he works in concert with Alex Jones even though the pair always are at each other's throats. This is a ploy, a way to confuse and a way to keep the Jesuit message off the air. John will appear to allow the Vatican message while Jones won't allow it. But I believe they work for the same evil boss and, in the end, the real truth presented by scores of my guests was eventually silenced.

Greg added: "I am in the process of starting a new and more vibrant Investigative Journal, beginning May 2. My show will not hold back the clear facts about the enemy's tactics as well as exposing the true culprits. I urge you to boycott RBN and any other network who withholds facts about the Vatican and Jesuit Order's involvement in the NWO. The real sad part of this whole affair is that many of my guests will be deprived a forum for the time being, as Stadtmiller and his other hosts will continue to blame the Jews. I will find another outlet away from Stadtmiller's intimidation and Jones' arrogance and fear-mongering. I will find a place where all voices are heard with like-minded people not afraid to confront these individuals, who are fronting for the real enemy. My only hope is that you will not allow these traitors to lead you, the listener, down the wrong rabbit hole. Simply put, if the evil history of the Jesuit Order and the Vatican are not addressed, history will repeat itself. It is my opinion that both Stadtmiller and Jones are part of the problem not the solution because they conveniently hide and control facts, facts indicting the true enemy -- The Vatican and Jesuit Order.

QUOTE

To understand the third Reich we have to go back to what the jesuits were saying in their bi-monthly periodical, Le Saville Catolica (I bet that's not right. I can't spell it and I've never heard of it. Apologies) - which by the way Michael Collins Piper quotes all the time. And LSC, from 1880 to 1930, they continued with the jewish question agitation. They advocated the jews be removed from Europe. And when Lance Von Liventhals (sp?) came around in the late teens and twenties - er, he was a Roman Catholic priest who left the order, met Hitler as a boy, became a Lutherman minister and freemason and he wrote a work on the jesuits' Bull of Suppression. But he advocated a burnt offering of all European jews. This really was the jesuit doctrine being worked out in LSC. So when the SS came along, they were merely implenting the policies spoken of by the jesuits in their periodical. When the enabling act was passed, as John Cornwall writes in HITLER'S POPE, it enabled Hitler to engage in his first treaty and the first treaty was the Concordat with the Pope and that concordat silenced all Roman Cathlic bishops, archbishops and priests from saying anything against Hitler.

So he paints Piper as a coajutor. Sounds like another strike against Szymanski. I can totally bet Greg was privately fed the line by Stadmiller, "How dare you let Phelps smear your fellow RBN host Michael Piper. We don't tolerate disloyalty. You're outta here." Because you know, it's not like John would give Greg the real reason - and we all know why Greg had to go.

AntiSionist - April 24, 2007 09:14 AM (GMT)

Szymanski goes on a rant about his early work. He talks about working for a small paper in Idaho and a guy who owned a drug store threatened to pull Greg's ads when he would get into the real spiritual controllers of the NWO. Greg told him he didn't care and things worked out. But then he says he got out of the small time local scene he used to be in and then when he get a little more listeners and thought that hey he could really help spread truth and freedom of speech...

QUOTE

I find the same thing in the alternative media. Many of the outlets that used to treat me like I was the best thing since sliced bread, as soon as I started about the real spiritual controllers, and as soon as I started bringing on key people, and in my articles and on websites, as soon as I was showing the connections, every place dropped me like a hot potato. All these so called broadcasters who spread freedom did it. The only place left is this station and this show. And I fear that if you don't hear me on the networks in the future, you'll know it's the same reason. I want my listeners to know that no matter what happens, this message will not end. And you do not have freedom of speech in this country. But how can I back down, from a journalistic point of view, when there is so much evidence that there is a conspiracy to commit crimes and take away your rights by all parties in the media, alternative and mainstream? It needs to be discussed. In San Fransisco right now, there is a case indicting the Vatican for what we're talking about. Why can't we have freedom of speech? Eric, what's your point of view? How can they control so many people?

Eric:

Well when you control the money you control the culture. As I show in my book, the jesuits founded control the Federal Reserve Bank. The top men that have ruled that bank, especially the gold hoard in New York City have been Knights of Malta men like William J. McDonough, CFR Member, Knight of Malta and Irish Catholic and many others I document. The jesuits have been involved with the Federal reserve board. They rule all the credit in this country. With that, you can give money to men you want like Donald Trump who gets three billion dollars in grants a year, or you can withhold money from people that begin to expose you and cut you off. And they can cut them off so they have no voice to talk. Such as men like Father Bruce Ritter...they drove him to an early death because he was investigating the pedophile ring. When you control the money, you control wall street, the issuing of the currency, you control the department of treasury. And with that, you can say who gets the public forum and who doesn't.

Greg:

Which is contrary to what freedom of speech means.

Eric:

Right. Burke McCarty in her 1924 book THE SUPPRESSED TRUTH ABOUT THE ASSASSINATION OF ABRAHAM LINCOLN, said the press in 1924 was controlled. Nobody was going to get the message out about the Vatican and the Jesuits. That is one reason why they successfully assassinated Lincoln, Garfield, McKinley and Harding and got away with it.

Greg:

And that moves on to Kennedy. And that's how you got started in this whole thing. Being depressed about Kennedy's murder.

Eric:

Exactly. It was distressing moreso that it was unsolved. That led me to many years of reconsidering and finding bits and pieces here and there. But the greatest article that opened my eyes was written by a Roman Catholic named Martin Lee, an authority on the Knights of Malta and the rising fascism in Europe. He wrote an article WHO ARE THE KNIGHTS OF MALTA published by the National Catholic Reporter on October 14 1983. When he listed all these top knights of malta it was....

At this point, 44:48, Eric is cut off and music plays for the rest of the mp3. That stinks. Craig, if you're reading this, you correspond with Eric regularly. Could you ask him if it is possible for him to get back on that trian of thought he was on when he got cut off. I would like to hear where he was going with that.

You Fools!

If Stadtmiller is a temporal, why then hire Szymanski and let him talk sooo long about it?

This is a complete setup and Greg knew it from the beginning. This whole Tour of Hope thing with Zagami was planned a long time ago and Greg knew the agenda all along.

Look how they play it. On the first show with Zagami the line was cutt off for a while and Zagami said afterwards that Elite did it. This was to invoke more credibility in this Zagami guy because they knew that it would not be easy to make the public believe in him. Now Greg was threw out during the show, COME ON YOU FOOLS, don't you see it.

Greg is a temporal also, as well as all the GCN and RBN Hosts.

Maybe coincedince, but if you listen to Szymanski and Deagle, the way they speak is so similar as if they had the same training.

What you say about Zagami is worth considering.

Here's what i think. That Greg is not any coadjutor at all but in his zeal of exposing the truth of the Vatican lead NWO he has maybe been deceived himself and allowed people to use him. After he had Tony Alamo on several times I cant help to think Greg's legit. Why? because Tony is considered very extremely controversial and yet gave him lots of airtime.

Also, greg having all the others on. Bill Hughes, Eric Phelps, nobodies like Thomas Richards at spirituallsmart.com, the other website hosts like Prophetic angel.com and Tackling Tough Topics to me gives Greg great credibility.

I think it's like Greg says that the whole thing with John Stadmiller and Alex Jones was a fraud and they are in it together. A lot of people were very skeptical of that including myself big time.

No, I believe Greg's for real. I just don't think he's a genius either. But sincere.

I've been thinking this all over and I lean toward this also. It seems Greg may have stepped on too many toes and for me to accept that Greg and Leo are somehow working for the Vatican, seems to ignore the reality that they may be, other than Eric and a few others, the ONLY folks who are truly exposing the Jesuits.

It's just fits that Greg is legitimate and I think Leo is also. And Leo became a Sufi Muslim to get as far the hell away from the Vatican that he felt he could religiously speaking and socially and of course also falling in love with a nice Muslim lady.

If we look into history and we all here fully accept the Jesuits as the PRIME suspects, then this may be first series of many exposures to come about and we need to not turn our backs on these people now.

Your warning is well received Aurora but I think Greg is for real and most likely so is Leo. Leo, being of Royal blood, already has enough money to not really care about getting paid anything more to lie. But if anything interesting arises, we shall soon see.

Daniel

P.S I recall how Daryl Bradford Smith got knocked off of GCN. Even to this day, I think Daryl is spell-bound by Ben Freedman. But Daryl told us the truth about Alex Jones! Daryl was not allowed to speak much on Zionists either. This tells me that there is still enough connections between the Sabbatean and Labour Zionists to the Jesuits that GCN did not want exposed. I am trying to win Daryl over to our side because I think that he and Huschmitt could serve the truth....that is if they will listen to my emails.

Don't forget, Greg worked in Rome for a while.

I work with an Italian who is also Catholic and grew up in Rome. He hates the Black Pope more than I do. But Greg has also told us in detail what he did there. Greg rants alot about his past and I think this is a good thing cause I felt that ALex Jones was very seedy and never really told us if he was Catholic, or does he pay income tax etc.

Greg is very open about these things and that gives me more reason to like him over many. Actually, I think DBS still claims that Greg is a Zionist. :blink:

Don't forget, so did many others. Including Alberto Rivera. Greg has a testimony regarding working at the Vatican too. He realized then that the Vatican was evil. Some may say the fact that he worked at the Vatican can make him suspicious but don't forget it could be the opposite to where he knows more and in that knowledge gives him more of a drive to expose them.

As far as Zagami is concerned, me personally don't believe he is legit. I'm not sure but very cautious when it comes to him.

Well said Aurora!

Besides a lot of speculation of Islam (Arabic) being a creation of the Vatican (Latin), I see no reason to not trust Leo, if assuming that one does trust Greg. I would say that if either Greg or Leo is a phoney then chances are they both are. Greg or Leo, if one was legit and not the other, then the other would sniff it out anyhow.

One thing that kind of bothers me is that being in this business of exposing Jesuits. it's rare. Here Syzmanski has all these wonderful guests and worked and works very hard putting his articles together and does a wonderful job and then you have people coming along slamming Greg. I'm not going to start slinging names at people but I would advise that people hold their tongues a little when it comes to Greg. He got bounced from GCN and now RBN. The wise thing to do with people who doubt Syzmanski's sincerity should maybe take a 'wait and see' attitude. Because thus far he hasn't done anything but good for the movement.

Right now I would send greg a message of support because I know it's discouraging to do what he does and then have people also come along and say he's a temporal coadjutor. I'm not saying he's God or anything but I would be a little more quick to hear and slow to speak. I for one am very thankful for his work. He's had on Nury Rivera, Bishop Buffard, Tony Alamo. These are people that the Vatican wouldnt give air time even if they were trying to decieve.

AntiSionist - April 25, 2007 11:02 AM (GMT)

So John wanted it for months according to Szymanski? I take it Aurora that you would want to ask how many months? Was it even before Greg talked to Zagami for the first time? If it was, would that convince you that maybe Greg is on the level? Or are you still a little iffy given that thread here about Zagami being a hoax and that supposed phone line jam that happened when Muslim Zagami was on Greg's show, whenever that was?

CRAIG-OXLEY - May 9, 2007 02:48 AM (GMT)

Email from listener

Hi Greg,

I just heard your interview on Cloak & Dagger and I want you to know that I really appreciate your setting the record straight with regard to the whole RBN/GCN drama. Thank you very much -- it was VERY enlightening!

I've listened to Alex Jones for years and while I feel that he is a genuinely good person and believes what he is doing is for the best, I have also felt that he's being played. Until now, it's never made sense why he is never bothered/shut down by the "powers that be". In addition, of late it's always the same refrain, which has now become quite a bore. I like the phrase I heard this guy interviewed on Red Ice <http://redicecreations.com/> use with regard to AJ fighting the NWO: "It's like he's kicking a dog that's already dead."

I've also had a subscription at GCN for a few years (which is where I first heard you) but lately, I've not been using it because I'm just so disgusted with the same old crap, particularly the incessant mountain of annoying ads! After hearing your experience with GCN, I'm canceling my subscription and letting them know that until they start telling the whole truth with regard to the Vatican, then they can keep their propaganda.

As far as Stadtmiller goes, I've never been able to sit through anything that he puts out; his manner has always felt arrogantly condescending AND you can tell that he is all about the money. I'm so glad I never gave RBN a dime.

I have always said that as far as REAL journalism goes, I think you are absolutely the best of the best! So I wanted to put my money where my mouth is and help support you through PayPal on a monthly basis. Though the amount is modest, I hope that in some way it will help you "keep on keeping on". Your message is vital and I really look forward to the new show!

If I might, I also have a question for you. I heard you mention that you have a background in training horses. (I'm really sorry to hear about your dental problems with regard to that!) I was kicked once as a child and I still to this day, feel apprehension whenever I move around behind a horse or lift their hoof to clean, etc. My background is dressage and I was just wondering what kind of training you have done?

Also, have you ever checked out Red Ice Creations? Henrick does some great interviews on there and he's based out of Sweden, which might be an excellent venue for your message. I would be delighted to recommend you as a guest. If you're familiar with RIC, I would appreciate your thoughts.

Thanks again, Greg - you're a prince!

Adaria

Greg says:

You are right on the money, Adaria. These guys need to be exposed. Now, let's talk about what is important - horses - as Statdmiller and Jones are just little chumps with big mouths. As far as horses, I've been around them all my life and have worked with both race horses and jumpers. I've broken for the saddle many young horses and my only advice about your fear, is that every time I fell off, I just jumped right back on.

Title: Putin Reunites The Russian Orthodox Church

Description: In the Cathedral of Christ the Savior

Space Doubt - May 19, 2007 12:46 AM (GMT)

The document, signed by Patriarch Alexy II and Metropolitan Laurus, the ROCOR head, is widely seen as a milestone on the way toward overcoming a decades-long rift with the foreign-based branch. The reunification of the ROC and the ROCOR will strengthen the position of the Orthodox Church in the world.

Christ the Savior, where the Act of Canonical Communion was signed during the ceremony of the reunification of the Moscow Patriarchy and the ROCOR.

Metropolitan Laurus expressed sincere gratitude to the Patriarch of Moscow and All Russia for the invitation to come to Moscow and for "brotherly hospitality." He also said he was hopeful that both churches would consolidate unity in service of God and the Russian nation.

Alexy II, Patriarch of Moscow and All Russia, described the ceremony as a significant event for the entire Russian nation. "Joy has descended on our hearts now that the long-awaited historical event has taken place," Alexy II said. "The Russian church has been reunited."

Russian President Vladimir Putin said: "The restoration of a unified church is an important provision for uniting the entire 'Russian world,' which has always been based on Orthodox faith."

There is a long story behind that sword. This from last year,

<http://www.mosnews.com/news/2006/08/02/magicword.shtml>

Created: 02.08.2006 18:16 MSK (GMT +3), Updated: 18:22 MSK

The head of the Russian Orthodox Church, Patriarch Alexy II, has blessed a copy of the sword which belonged to mythical Russian hero St. Ilya Muromets and passed it as a present to President Putin, the RIA-Novosti news agency reported on Wednesday.

The ceremony took place in the Savior Transfiguration Monastery in the town of Murom. The exact copy of the sword which was found on the coffin of St. Ilya Muromets was blessed by a holy relic which was delivered from a monastery in Kiev where the remains of the saint are kept.

Patriarch Alexy II passed the blessed sword to the head of Russian Audit Chamber Alexei Stepashin who will pass it further to the head of state, President Putin, who is also the commander-in-chief of the Russian Armed Forces.

“We ask you to pass the sword from the relic of Ilya Muromets to the President of the Russian Federation Vladimir Vladimirovich Putin so that the sword helps him to rule our motherland righteously, promoting Russia’s spiritual revival,” the Russian church leader said.

Ilya Muromets or Elijah of Murom is a Russian mythical hero, the greatest of the ancient warriors who fought pagans in the times of Prince Vladimir The Beautiful Sun, the baptist of Russia. A curious fact about Ilya is that he suffered from some childhood disease and could not walk until he was cured by travelling wizards at the age of 33.

Italian priest joins Masons

Rome, Feb. 19, 2007 (CWNews.com) - An Italian Paulist priest has become a member of the Masons, joining the group in a ceremony attended by about 40 people at the Masonic headquarters at Piazza del Gesu in Rome.

Father Rosario Francesco Esposito dismissed the Church ban on membership in the Masonic lodge, saying that it is "a thing of the past."

The move by the 85-year-old Father Esposito is particularly interesting because he, along with Father Giovanni Caprile, SJ, was once commissioned by the Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith to study the Church's teaching on masonry. In 1983 the prefect of the Congregation, then-Cardinal Joseph Ratzinger, made a public announcement that the teaching of the Church had not changed, and the ban on Masonic membership remained in place.

'In God's Name' by David Yallop, about the murder of John Paul I, is a a great read, and shows that the Vatican is riddled with masonry, something the pope was aware of. Albino Luciani had to be killed, this guy was not about to take orders from either Jesuits or anyone else, an actual good guy in my estimation.

If you hear his daily show that's continually looped here...He gets a caller that talks about the Vatican and then AJ goes off into talking about how he gets bullied into supporting different things...

<http://infowars.com/listen.html>

Just for your interest...

My personal opinion is that you can pay for the odd shillery article but your can't pay for his kind of activism.

CRAIG-OXLEY - January 27, 2007 03:58 PM (GMT)

All we ask if that he acknowledges that the Jesuit Order/Vatican has a far greater role than hes ever realised. He won't do this because of his buddies from the OPUS DEI. I personally don't care if he wishes just to do what hes doing which has its uses and is quite good. I just want him to acknowledge whats really going down from the top and that theres people way more powerful than the Rothschilds as exposed many times and example was Dr John Coleman ex British SIS. Once he does this then he can move back to his usual spot and I suspect people will leave him alone. People are very suspicious of him due to who he associates with also some of the suppression I've noticed on his sites at times. Now David Icke has spoke out about the Jesuits, Alex will have to admit something. So either he will or his masters if he has them (Temporal Coadjutor if so) will not let him. So does Alex Jones have an agenda where by hes here to highlight the dissidents and rattle the people more in order for some devious Jesuit plot of the coming future where they want a revolution? Are we all amongst a game thinking we're moving forward etc when really the Long Robes once again have us and we're simply doing exactly what they wish. Remember 9.9x out of 10 the Long Robes NEVER get affected. Remember folks we're in one big manipulation matrix and manipulate it well they do. I get very suspicious of so-called alternative media people when I suddenly start seeing them all over mainstream TV shows and in blockbuster films as with Jones.

Well he pretty much tries to show it from his side if you listen...He says he agrees with a lot of it but some of these people have lied about him openly and so he's lost respect for them trying to blackmail him into interviewing them by threatening spreading disinfo about him, some of which I know is complete crap; so it might be interesting to hear.

What I find annoying about this conspiracy stuff is that if I simply say I don't believe so and so is a shill when there is no real proof then I am labelled that I worship the person...I don't worship anyone, I just focus as you might have noticed on the practical side of the conspiracy such a health and mind...The activation I do is spreading dvd's but I don't usually get involved with debates and things but when it comes to AJ, I just don't see how he's a shill and I can see how he became as big as he is.

He obviously is controlled because he only deals with stuff he can prove and he quite wisely stays clear of revisionism and the connotations that brings. Here he say's he agrees with the evil Vatican conspiracy.

All we ask if that he acknowledges that the Jesuit Order/Vatican has a far greater role than hes ever realised.

If he doesn't realise it then he can hardly acknowledge it, can he? Alex Jones is doing a great job exposing political corruption. Just because he doesn't cover Jesuit corruption doesn't mean he shouldn't be encouraged to do what he is doing. Any 1 journalist can hardly cover all stories of corruption.

Jones appears to concentrate on the visible political leaders of the day, and that is just fine, he has done alot to spread awareness about 9/11. If you feel the conspiracy goes alot further than just the US admin then it still doesn't mean that A Jones should be criticized, he is doing what he is doing, and his approach does grab alot more attention than the approach of most others. People like Alex Jones and David Icke are doing an excellent job and both are increasing publics awareness of political corruption and will act as a stepping stone to learning about who the leaders of the NWO are. Before anyone will ask questions about who leads the NWO first he has to learn there IS a NWO, and Jones and Icke are helping in this. Many people would never find work from people like Phelps if they hadn't found Alex Jones work first.

Anyone doing a genuinely great job exposing exposing political corruption, would, as a by product (side benefit) of inhabiting this particular neighborhood, also be in a position, over time, to accumulate a fair amount of knowledge about ON WHO'S BEHALF and HOW/WHY? the corrupt politicians came to be corrupted. Someone allegedly exposing as much as Jone's claims must also know quite a bit of info about the controllers behind the corrupted government puppets. Yet, Jones is content to forever play deaf & dumb, apparently knowing / exposing zero in this respect.... simply becaue "'uhh, well, cause I don't realize it, duh"; cute, but not a legitimate position. It may be a healthy dose of selective ignorance, and perhaps a bit of voluntary cognitive dissonnce, but it sure aint fine.

A major harm in Jones' schtick is that he is serving to incite, gather, enflame and direct the populous' dissent and anger in the wrong direction - towards their corrupted government puppets, rather than towards the guiding hands, the corruptors, the marrionettes pulling the strings on their corrupted government. NWO 101 has always held that the nations of the world ultimately must disown loyalty to their traditional nationalities while also turning on their government because of their corruption. This of course sets the stage for the invisible corruptors, up to this point content to have remained behind the scenes through the recent ages, to finally come out from behind their corrupted, evicted puppets, and finally, formally assume control. Jones seems to be all about assisting this key requirement of NWO 101, and the end of this, he merely says "I'm not aware of it".

Title: Bill O'Reilly PROOVES his Jesuit Coadjutor Status

Description: Supports massive Illegal Alien AMNESTY

Marshal W Earp - May 18, 2007 02:08 AM (GMT)

Today on the "Talking Points" part of his program FAUX News personality Bill O'Reilly PROVED his Jesuit Temporal Coadjutor status by supporting the "Z-Visa" Illegal Alien Amnesty plan using the so tired it's BORING "lesser of evils" excuse.

My own studies of the Jesuits and Romanism in general have led me to the theory that the real purpose behind Illegal Immigration is NOT "racial" as both the Mexicans and White and Black Americans are being led to believe by their various racial pressure groups but is to enforce a 400 year old Papal bull that granted the Americas to Spain and Portugal that was issued by one of the most corrupt popes ever, Alexander VI (Rodrego Borgia). Because of the current anti colonial attitude being promoted by the NWO ROMANIST Mexico is basically being used as a proxy for ROMANIST Spain in the current enforcement of this Bull on North America.

Amnesties and continued Illegal Immigration is very important to the Jesuits and other NWO activist Romanists because they assure that the constant influx of illegal immigrants will be ROMANIST while while their second and third generation offspring might well adopt to America's Protestant and Secularist ways and be useless to the Pope and the Jesuits in the enforcement of the Bull of Borgia as a part of the New World Order project.

Daniel - May 18, 2007 02:30 AM (GMT)

Agreed.

I recall listening to blabbermouth Alex Jones around February and he had on the show this fellow who also has his own alternate talk-radio. This gentleman was speaking about the attack on both Black and White people in the Southern US by these illegals.

But then a caller in to the show asked Alex's guest, "what religion are most of these illegals?" and he responded very tired-like "CATHOLIC", almost to imply what else could explain their fanaticism.

You could hear a pin drop by blabbermouth Alex who normally likes to throw in a little added excitement. In this case he remained perfectly silent.

ROMANIZING AMERICA THROUGH ILLEGAL IMMIGRATION

<http://www.pccmonroe.org/Ecumenism/romanizingamerica.htm>

Rights are endowed by the Creator and they are easily removed by him too.
The cry of our sins has reached unto heaven.

When the name of Allah was praised at the va tech convocation and the name of Christ was forbidden ... and nobody even cared.. what can we expect but that the Lord will send a flood of a people with an strange speech and a hard language upon us?

A people of a fierce countenance, fierce in their looks, furious in their temper, cruel and bloodthirsty in their practices, confirmed and hardened in their sins, whose consciences are seared as with a red hot iron; a character given of the Papists- gill

Still.. it is evidence of a great hardness of heart to think more upon our sufferings than we do upon our sins. Lord knows I am guilty too.

Our ways and our doings procure the trouble to ourselves, and we are beaten with a rod of our own making. It is the yoke of our transgressions, though it be bound with his hand

Title: SMOM Willis Carto

CRAIG-OXLEY - May 17, 2007 10:34 PM (GMT)

It is a conclusion based on several overwhelming facts. First, Carto is a Roman Catholic fascist parroting the same line that as did Father Stampfle's Mein Kampf and the Nazi SS/SD. His Liberty Lobby that produced The Spotlight was based in Washington, D.C., during which time he received several visits from SMOM J. Peter Grace and SMOM Edward Bennet Williams. Carto was the personal friend of Grace and Williams, thus we know him by the company he has kept, as both Grace and Williams are now deceased.

Secondly, Carto was a part of the CIA conspiracy, called a "limited hangout," which sacrificed CIA agent E. Howard Hunt as a "renegade CIA" agent who participated in the JFK assassination. Carto's anti-Jew Spotlight accused Hunt of being in Dallas the day of the assassination (which he was) for which reason Hunt sued Liberty Lobby in 1985. The defense attorney for LL was none other than that great Jewish Jesuit Temporal Coadjutor Mark Lane---the man who moved JFK's killing shots from the driver and/or the storm sewer up to "the grassy knoll." Carto's Mark Lane won the civil case as reported in Lane's Plausible Denial. Hunt lost but was never indicted by a Grand Jury which indictment would have been quite easy via the transcripts of the Civil Case. Thus, by blaming Hunt, the CIA was off the hook; the limited hangout was a success thanks to Carto and Lane. Hunt, on his deathbed, never revealed any CIA agents involved in Dallas that day. He only fingered LBJ and a few Cubans never saying a word to his son about Frank Sturgis---who made a 22-page written confession to Cardinal Cooke as to his part in the JFK assassination.

Thus, Carto worked with the Knights of Malta within and without the CIA in participating in the limited hangout of Hunt. And since the real list of SMOM is secret, I have the right to call him a Knight. His deeds and personal friends with which he kept company confirm the conclusion. Carto, to this day, continues on the fascist trail via his RBN in blaming the Jews for what the Jesuit Order can only do. I suspect that Carto had much to do with the recent removal of Greg Szymanski from RBN.

Thus Willis Carto is a Knight of Malta as is Robert Maheu and Rudolf Guiliani though none of these traitors openly admit to their membership. Such a confession would be fatal to Rome's conspiracy against us.

Jewish Holocaust denial/revisionism is a Jesuit ploy to hide the truth of one of the foremost purposes of Pius XII's Nazi Third Reich. He brought Hitler to power in 1933 and through the Roman Catholic Center Party's backing of The Enabling Act, Hitler then entered into a Concordat with the Pope. Any priest who resisted Hitler was thrown in Dachau Concentration Camp outside of Munich. Hitler spoke in the Reichstag of "the annihilation of the Jewish race in Europe" and was aided by American Masonic industrialists Thomas J. Watson, Sr., the head of IBM which leased the Hollerith census machines to the Nazis in preparation of the roundups of Europe's Jews, and Masonic Henry Ford, the backer of both the Nazis and Stalin's Bolsheviks. Thus, the elimination of the Eurasian Jews was a Jesuit conspiracy involving Hitler, Stalin, FDR, Churchill, Mussolini, Hirohito and Franco. But we must never forget the Lutheran Holocaust via Hitler and Stalin as well as US and British Bombers, the Orthodox Holocaust via Hitler and Stalin working together (for which reason Stalin told his agent in the German Army who sent a final warning of the planned invasion of the USSR on June 22 of 1941 (the very same day Napoleon invaded Russia) to go "F----- your mother." And we must not forget the European Protestant holocaust via Churchill, Hitler, Stalin and FDR. Protestant Czechs were the first to be sent to Auschwitz via Priest Tiso. Then, there is the Buddhist Japanese holocaust via FDR, Churchill and Hirohito as Japanese physicists aided the Jesuits in building the atomic bombs on the ground at Hiroshima and Nagasaki killing over 100,000 Japanese. This was payback for expelling the Order for nearly 250 years and Masonic Hirohito played a key role in the mass-murder of his people. It was for this obedience that SMOM Jesuit Edmund A. Walsh instructed Masonic MacArthur not to prosecute the Emperor at the Japanese War Crimes trials in 1948.

I trust this is overall picture is helpful.

Sincerely in Faith,

Brother Eric

Title: William of Orange Funded by the Pope

Mark Brewer - February 18, 2007 10:20 PM (GMT)

William of Orange 'funded by the Pope'

Author: John Follain

Publication: The Sunday Times

Date: September 23, 2001

Documents discovered in Vatican archives suggest that William of Orange, the Protestant hero who ascended the English throne in 1689, was in the pay of the Pope.

William, known as "King Billy", has been revered by generations of Ulstermen for his part in driving James II from power and ending Roman Catholic rule in England. Three centuries later, his role is still celebrated in the name of Northern Ireland's loyalist Orange Order.

In a new book, two Italian historians claim Innocent XI, who became pope in 1676, gave substantial amounts of money to William in the hope of securing himself a secret and powerful ally within the Protestant camp. The pontiff was apparently keen to see the end of James II, whom he regarded as being too close to Louis XIV of France, whose relations with the Vatican had long been poor.

The book, Imprimatur, says the Vatican sent an estimated 150,000 scudi to William in the 1660s via intermediaries close to the wealthy family of Benedetto Odescalchi, as Innocent was known before he became pope. The amount was equal to the Vatican's annual budget deficit and equivalent to more than £3.5m today.

The transfers are detailed in volumes kept for centuries in the cellar of a palace belonging to the Odescalchi family. They have recently been made available to scholars.

"It's very likely the Pope went on supporting William because Rome disapproved of James's aggressively Catholic policies, and saw him as too close to Louis XIV of France, who clashed with Rome," said Francesco Sorti, co-author of the book. "The Vatican managed to keep the secret for so long by destroying many of the documents. It was simply impossible for the Roman Catholic church to admit that a pope had played an important role in the Glorious Revolution."

The documents on which the book draws also show that William offered to repay the loan in 1689 by handing over to Rome his personal fiefdom of Orange in southern France. The Vatican rejected the offer, apparently because Innocent had died a few months earlier and it did not want his financial links with William to become public knowledge.

Historians have long debated whether the Pope was involved in helping William's accession to the English throne. Cecil Kilpatrick, archivist for the Orange Order, acknowledged, however, that there had already been some embarrassing indications of ties between the two.

"In the 1930s, a portrait of William against a backdrop of onlookers was installed at Stormont, the Northern Ireland parliament," Kilpatrick said. "They found that in the background there were various faces looking in, and one of them was Pope Innocent. They had to get rid of it."

Irish historians said this weekend they were not surprised by the revelations. "The politics of Europe was in a state of flux, the Pope wanted his way, and if he had to support a Protestant, William, to get his way, why not?" said the Rev Brian Kennaway, a Belfast-based historian.

Eamon Duffy, author of Saints and Sinners: A History of the Popes, agreed that the idea was a possibility. "It is widely accepted, because of James's indebtedness to France, that the Pope was actually relieved when James fell," he said.

Others were more sceptical, however. "I can't see why the Vatican should fund William as early as the 1660s, given that his political opponents in the Dutch republic were more tolerant of Catholics than his supporters," said John Miller, a professor of history at Queen Mary College, University of London.

Members of the Protestant community said the disclosures were unlikely to dent the reputation of William, whose forces' victory over James's army in the 1690 Battle of the Boyne is still celebrated by Northern Ireland's Protestants every July 12. "I don't think we're going to see any banners of King Billy being defaced as a result of this," said Ian Paisley Jr, a Democratic Unionist party member of the Northern Ireland assembly.

"I think quite a lot of people would say, well, he wiped the Pope's eye, we'll let him off - he got money out of him. It's good to take money off a person and then kick their arse, isn't it?"

Yes, the Jacobites are Catholic. Look at the titles Wittelsbach holds.

Jacobites are the dark horse in the British monarchy race. If the Windsors fail the Jacobites are in the wings waiting to be restored.

I was just searching google for "unhived mind" and "orange order" and this was the only one I could find on the subject.

It would make no sense whatsoever for the Pope to dethrone a Catholic for this William, I think the 3rd or 4th William of Orange. The Major William of Dutch memory is from the 1500's fighting the Papists and Catholic Kings who were making laws to exterminate the protestants.

Although this document doesn't say the Pope ordered William of Orange to kick out the Catholic King, even if it did I still doubt that would change any of the love Brits and Irishmen have for him. The "Glorious Revolution" as they call it was no small feat, notice there was no bloodshed during the "Glorious Revolution" and it is worthy of remembrance.

Although the Central Bank that was created by this William, he is not the one who is truly famous for Orangism in the minds of Europeans and those who had already sailed to America and South Africa before that. The thousands who fought behind the Dutch and Orange Flag in South Africa against the British, the thousands who fought against the Papal Tyrants with the True William of Orange, not this one. William the Silent (April 24, 1533 – July 10, 1584) is the one who represents true Orangism, which goes back even further and is much greater back to the Celtic Battles and great victories against Roman invasion. Yet we know where Orangism was founded in Provence France that the Romans came back with greater numbers as depicted in these great Roman Arches

It is interesting Orange is the color of the tribe of Levi. The biggest protestant organization in Ireland is the Orange Order and the main creed of the Orange Order of Ireland is that you must believe that you are of the Tribe of Levi. This is biblical as the scriptures and history says Jeremiah transplanted the Kingdom of Israel to Ireland and built universities there, setup the whole druidic religion with many ancient scriptures preserved there, as well as Druidic tradition which spoke of their coming High Priest Yesu (Jesus). Not to mention brought David's throne & fulfilled the prophecy with that as well, transplanting the Kingdom about 500 years before Christ when Jerusalem was destroyed. (Great sermon on this is found here with Crouch's sermons <http://> christsassembly.com/crouch.htm) This is why Ireland and Britain so easily and quickly converted and became the first nation in the world to be a Christian nation officially in the 2nd Century, but had major adaptations within their religious government to Christianity in the First Century (unlike Rome). I believe that Orangism goes back much further than one would realize at first look. If you look deeper you'll see the Apostles Phillip and Paul had Gaul of France (not Galatia of Asia Minor, but the French Galatia) as a major headquarters as the scriptures say they had taken many trips to Spain and Britain. They would have had to at least cross over Gaul of France every time they made these trips. Also they crossed the Celtic Gaul Colony in Asia Minor as well, which was a Celtic Colony back as far as 300AD very well confirmed in the mainstream, but I have even older records. The Roman Road system as well as river trade routes made it very easy to travel to and from Palestine from the British Channel in the days of Christ. In less than a week you can go from London to Palestine by horse buggy and taking a small raft or swim across the English channel which had 3 major roman roads leading to it. (we have many articles online here covering this)

Jesus Himself could have easily been on the battlefields fighting in the battles of Teutoburg Germany and Orange France which occurred during His days on earth. If you're familiar with 1st Century British wars against Rome totally embarrassing Rome then you'd also know Jesus Himself could have fought on those battlefields as well. We know according to much English History and traditions that He spent the missing 18 years of his life in Britain, probably with the Orange Order Universities. Later Glastonbury as well as about 13,000 acres of land was given by the first century King of Britain to Jesus' uncle as is recorded in many ancient records as well as too many relics and monuments to count uncovered proving, and the ancient churches there still stand which King Henry VIII desecrated. With the wars then fought by the Apostles and the King of Britain to keep Britian free from Rome traditions such as when the cross of St. George was carried forward from, which were also ancient Druidic icons that go many centuries before Christ foretelling the coming Saviour and High Priest Yesu.

It changed a lot. It is interesting so many times England had a Foreign King come and lay down the law like that. It was virtually a repeat of how the Danes brought the bill of rights to England in the 9th Century with Knut, or "Canute The Great". It was identical to the "Glorious Revolution" with no bloodshed. William the Conquer also brought Dane Law which brought the jury system of 12 to England as well. All fulfilling the prophecies of the tribe of Dan (the Danish) as a lawgiver between true Judah's feet. It is interesting also the Danes have the oldest constitution, oldest flag and the oldest still existing monarchy in the world.

With the wars then fought by the Apostles and the King of Britain to keep Britain free from Rome traditions such as when the cross of St. George was carried forward from, which were also ancient Druidic icons that go many centuries before Christ foretelling the coming Saviour and High Priest Yesu.

As from Christsassembly.com:

In Caswell's (1890) "History of England" it states, "Druidical rites and ceremonies were almost identical with Mosaic ritual." Also "the Chief (Arch) Druid and the Israelite High Priest were similarly arrayed--even to the Breast Plate of Judgment with the twelve stones representing the Tribes of Israel and the Holy Name [YAHWEH] on the headgear."

Charles Hubert (AD 1825), in his "Religions of Britain", writes, "so near is the resemblance between the Druidical religion in Britain and the Patriarchal religion of the Hebrews that we would hesitate NOT to pronounce their origin the SAME"

STONEHENGE AND DRUIDISM by CAPT, some Excerpts on Yesu

"The Druids revered the oak tree as a symbol of Almighty God, as did the Hebrew Patriarchs. It was underneath the oaks of Mamre that Abraham "dewlt" a long time; where he erected an altar to God, and where he received the three angels. It was underneath an oak that Jacob hid the idols of his children (Gen 35:4) because oaks were held to be sacred and inviolate.

Because mistletoe grew upon the oak, it became sacred to the Druids and was held symbolic of the coming Deliverer or "Branch." Mistletoe was known as the "All Heal," a title which bears a strange resemblance to the words of Malachi's prophecy concerning the "Sun" who should "rise with healing in His wings." (note Yahshua means God who saves, heals or delivers). This "Branch" was not only foretold by the prophets of ancient Israel (in many places) but was sung also by the poets of classic antiquity. Virgil mentions "the golden branch," and Homer speaks of the "golden rod" or "branch." A parallel can be seen in the writings of three of the Old Testament Prophets – referring to the coming Messiah as "the Branch."

It is of interest to note that the Druids revered a form of the cross. It was their custom to search diligently for a large, handsome oak tree, having two large armlike branches. When viewed in conjunction with the trunk the tree they formed a cross. This "cross" was then consecrated by cutting characters for the word "Hesus," spelled "Yesu," upon the right branch. Upon the middle trunk they cut the word, "Taranus," upon the left branch, "Belenus," and over them all the word "Than," meaning God.

"Hesus" or Yesu was the supreme God whom they worshipped as the great "All-Heal" and they believed in Him as the "Saviour" of the world. In both Druidic religion and the Hebrew religion of patriarchal times we can see a parallel preparation for the coming of Christ....."

The unity of the Godhead was the very soul and centre of Druidism, and this unity was a Trinity.

Procoius of Caesarea, A.D. 530, states :

"Jesus, Taran, Bel - One only God. All Druids acknowledge one Lord God alone."(Origen on "Ezekile." (Richardson's "Godwin de Presulibis."))

The indisputable fact is that the Druids proclaimed to the universe, 'The Lord our God is One!' WHEN CHRISTIANITY PREACHED JESUS AS GOD, DRUIDISM HAD THE MOST FAMILIAR NAME OF ITS OWN DEITY PRESENTED TO IT!!

In the ancient British tongue Jesus had never assumed its Greek, Latin or Hebrew form, but remains the pure Druidic Yesu. It is singular that the ancient Briton never changed the name of the God he and his forefathers worshipped, nor has he ever worshipped but one God.(Dr.Henry, "History of Great Britain," I, 2.)

In the Cornish folk-lore whole sentences were treasured up (without being understood), and when written down were found to be pure Hebrew, Three of these rendered into English are:

"Lift up your heads, O ye gates, and be ye lift up ye everlasting doors, and the King of Glory shall come in"; "Who is this King of Glory?"; "The Lord Yesu, He is the King of Glory."(Rolleston, Mazzaroth, 113.)

Also see book "Celt Druid and Culdee".

Amazing!!!

The pope backed William as a quick fix for his conflict with Louis XIV. After that, he turned against him and later Anne and supported the Jacobites. That is why there is a monument to the Stuart dynasty at the Vatican with angels crying over the deposed Stuarts.

The whole concept of King William of Orange fighting the Stewarts...how many know that in this great battle which Protestantism will become the state religion and King William of Orange of the house of Hanover from Holland, coming to fight the evil Catholic Stewart dynasty. They do defeat James Stewart, James II that is...but how many teachers will tell you that the man in the world with the most Stewart blood was William himself? He had more Stewart blood in him than James. In fact his wife, Mary II was the daughter of James Stewart, the man they were fighting. And of course the Stewart's are connected to the Vatican. They're fighting for them. But the Vatican and William of Orange of Hanover have the same bank accounts in the same bank in the Bank of Belgium. Both of them, they have their finances in the same bank. The same bank funded both sides in the famous so called glorious revolution in England. Why is it that on paper to this day, people in Northern Ireland will march on July 12, and there are people marching as they do in Holland? Because they believe Protestants dominated the Stewarts. And yet they're both groups of the same family and the battles they were engaging in were purely ritualistic.

William of Orange III was indeed the son-in-law of James II. In fact William allowed James II to escape to France. But the Battle of the Boyne in 1690 was no ritual and William won a victory that was most providential. He was attacked by both Jesuit coadjutors James II and King Louis XIV. These kings had Jesuit confessors; William had no confessor at all as he was a Bible believer. His damnable wife Mary was still close to the Order, but King Billy did his duty.

Although a royal of the Stewart dynasty, William was the savior of the Reformation in England. We need nobles on our side! This is a glorious fact of English history that cannot be denied.

Sincerely in Faith,

Brother Eric

"It's very likely the Pope went on supporting William because Rome disapproved of James's aggressively Catholic policies"

This shows that this story is either a lie or a Jesuitical twist of the truth. The Papacy and its handlers would never have a problem with a Catholic Monarch's "aggressive Catholic policies".

Interestin reading about this subject can be found in the book, The Great Controversy, by a lady named Ellen White, some say it's pleasured, but their seems to be a lot of facts, we know the masons are the satanic out reach to the protestants as they were founded by the jesuits to infiltrate and controll thwe protestants, whom have obviously forget, what they are protesting. Since about the 20's in America, the masonics have infiltrated and basically taken over all the denominatins, none of them can be trusted. But history and truth can be found stiiil in some of their writtings.

Thanks for the link with a critical view towards the Orange order. Part of it I find baloney such as saying the orange order didn't start until some freemasons in the late 1700's made it so. The loyalists in general were already all around the world, united under the Orange Fringe of the House of Orange in many many countries.

I do know in general that most levels of freemasons have no knowledge of anything wrong with their social club of Christians or Jews. Most promote good things within their professed faith. It is only the 33 degree where you must take an oath against your faith in Jesus Christ, and that you are swear your soul to hell basically. None are aware of that level. Some of the best conspiracy theororists in non-denominational Christianity think that most freemasons are just good Christians and are overall working in a very good group at its local level.

At least it is good from the link provided that you can carefully analyze possible things that could be wrong. Yet in some areas there are way off.

Also just because many denominations are against any type of freemasonry doesn't make all types of it completely wrong. Most done know anything wrong with it. It's more of a social club for fun & good things from what I've studied. 99.9% of freemasons are all so far removed from the MOST SECRET AND UNKNOWN 33 degree it is incomparable.

AntiSionist - May 16, 2007 11:14 AM (GMT)

I take your point about the starting date. It's like saying the freemasons began in Scotland in the fourteenth and fifteenth century. That's just not true. What about the precursor group the Knights Templar for example? You are right. Things do often go farther back than some would like us to believe.

I would wonder about your claim that the most secret degree is the thirty third. I've heard people claim there are hundreds of degrees of masonry. I've heard some say that the phrase 'life begins at forty' is based on masonic degrees that go beyond 33. Some think the Oroboros symbolizes 360 degrees. Some of these low degree people have to get onto the internet and check this stuff out sometimes.

true-lilly - May 16, 2007 11:47 AM (GMT)

PROTESTANT, ORANGE, SECULAR, "SPIRITUAL", it really doesn't matter what "They" claim, or even believe, if they don't correct the "Out of Egypt", Trinity, Cross and all the other obvious LIES taught as SCRIPTURAL/FACTUAL truth, they are serving the desire of Rome, by serving The Beast.

I would have to add not only all those are independent of any control of their local Masonic groups, so are all the many non-masonic OrangeMen & Women of today's Orange Order. Here's just one radio station filled with many radio shows by loyalist Orange Order speakers in Ireland alone: <http://www.caltonradio.com/server1/BroadcastSheet.htm>. There are so many other stations and teachers of the Orange order besides this list. Primarily all that are independent basically. Each may know more about history than others. I personally like Pastor Alan Campbell who is an independent but preaches pro orange on a lot of matters, being an Irish Protestant in Northern Ireland himself. More about Alan Campbell here, and hear some of his radio sermons here, his main homepage is here.

Truth_Sets_Free - May 17, 2007 06:00 PM (GMT)

What happened when David cried to God that all the prophets were killed and he was left alone and that his entire nation sought to kill him too? He said something similar as Elijah had gone through, and received the same answer as was given to David:

1Ki 19:18 "Yet I have left me seven thousand in Israel, all the knees which have not bowed unto Baal, and every mouth which hath not kissed him."

Paul spoke of this in his times, and it also applies to our times:

Rom 11:4-5 "But what saith the answer of God unto him? I have reserved to myself seven thousand men, who have not bowed the knee to the image of Baal.

Even so then at this present time also there is a remnant according to the election of grace."

We're not as alone as you think. There are many who have known this all for a long time and working for reform wisely, or keeping quiet like the first William of Orange.

The first William of Orange was called "William the Silent." He got so close to the King of France he was able to hear the King's plans to exterminate all the protestants, and was able to launch an effective resistance.

Title: Drugs, Bush, Jesuit Agenda -Eric Phelps

CRAIG-OXLEY - May 16, 2007 11:19 PM (GMT)

Bro. Eric,

Could you direct me to some reliable information on the drug industry in Colombia and how the unrest there is tied in with the Jesuits and the NWO plan? Just how does the Bush clan fit in?

There is much written on the cocaine/drug industry in Columbia. If Rome did not approve of that trade, then Rome would not have a Concordat with that country. The Concordat was written with Jesuit oversight as "the Jesuits are the penholders of the pope."

The Bush connection to this international drug trade is well documented in Webster Tarpley's George Bush: The Unauthorized Autobiography. Col. James "Bo" Gritz's Called to Serve further proves Bush's oversight of the drug trade out of the Golden Triangle.

Do you think George Bush will exit the White House in January of 2009? For if they do away with the US constitution, the two-term presidential limit will be disbanded.

Yes. It appears that since the Archbishop of New York featured apostate Episcopalian and CFR member John McCain at the 2006 Al Smith Dinner in New York, McCain will be the next president. Roman Catholic Guiliani is too dirty, especially with his involvement in 911 and the Nafta Highway. "Hellary" is unelectable along with "Obama Bin Laden." This confines the election to the ponies of the fascist/pro-papal crusade Republican party backed by fascist Fox News Irish Roman Catholic Jesuit coadjutors Hannity and O'Reilly. Mormon Romney is out; Gingrich is a possible VP candidate, but the running will be between Guiliani and McCain. Hence, when McCain is "elected," the war will continue under this former Navy officer/POW---as per the dictates of the Cardinal in the Powerhouse---St. Patrick's Cathedral.

Will the North American Union be set up in similar fashion as the EU?

Yes, but the NAU will not endure; the EU will endure. The NAU is similar to Hitler's absorption of Austria. He built the Autobon for the primary purpose of troop movement; thus, this is the same purpose of the Nafta Highway. At the end of the Crusade, North America will be partitioned, Europe will be further cemented together over the deceptively induced fear of "Soviet Russia" and "Red China." "What they did to North America cannot be allowed to happen here in Europe" may well be Rome's fascist line of propaganda. Notice the new president of France is indeed a fascist.

It seems to me that what would start all this rolling would be a major crisis of some sort.

Yes. If you are viewing "24" or "Jericho" on the one-eyed monster, they are unfolding their entire scenario. The Chinese are now in the picture as invaders of the US working with high-level US government traitors.

Do not forget Francis K Fong and Ming Shing Shoo who are the leadership of this dirty Secret Red Chinese Police on U.S Soil.

Thanks, Bro. Eric. Sorry to use you as an encyclopedia.

That's OK. I know you will use the info for the glory of God, not "for the greater glory of God."

I just wished they had a proper Microphone setup. I've noticed something always spoils a lecture one way or another.

JagDRS - May 4, 2007 04:46 PM (GMT)

Yes, thanks for the reference to these seminars. Anyone know when they were done (what date?). Just guesstimating based on Eric's looks, he definitely looks older wearing those wire rimmed glasses compared to, say, how he looked in the A/V of the ConCon 2002 seminar (the one where Jordan Maxwell was Eric's sidekick as the overhead slides changer). Was this seminar done in 2007?

As to the "facts" of "wages are income" being ruled by so-called judges. There is a slippery slope involved anytime discussion of taxes occurs that more often than ends up as a Abbot&Costello-like "who's on first.....third base....weeEEEEOOOOooo" kind of conversation.....possibly entertaining, but does not get one very far when on a genuine fact-finding mission.

The supremes have not made very many rulings in tax cases in the recent years. Instead, such rulings are generally made by "magistrate" judges, IE> henchmen specifically appointed and assigned the duty by someone within the DoJ. Also note, in America we have courts known as D.C.U.S, and we have other so-called courts known as U.S.D.C. The former is where common law can be pursued and the Constitution can be brought to bear. The latter is where admiralty administrative tribunals occur and where the use of Constitutional principles is forbidden. Guess which of the two is where most tax cases are generally funneled? Those things formally called "tax court" are railroaded into U.S.D.C.s, a place where most sane people generally do not want to go.

If one wishes to call what these decide "facts", so be it. The tax code is a massive body of murk....why else does one suspect it's called "code" in the first place? Wages may have been defined and or ruled by somebody supposedly important, somewhere, as constituting "income", which is all well and good. One is generally better off not even entertaining such discussions due to all the boobytraps such code is laced with. As far as this goes, the word "income" itself is not defined anywhere within the code, nor has Congress ever weighed in on the matter. From this we have it that wages are income are not defined, which makes it all the more easy for the collection racket to endeavor to collect anything that comes in, because of course, we all know that anything that comes in must therefore be income which we know is wages which we know is "taxable"..... isn't that lovely? For anyone who'd like a chance to at least better understand the systematic frauds involved with income taxation, start with learning about the W-4 scheme. For most average people, the W-4 is the primary nexus of them, their labor and fruits thereof, into the murk of the system known as taxation. The same "fact-finders" have revealed in the past that signing of W-4s is, of course, entirely voluntary. Why else would the codesmiths name it "voluntary withholding statement"? Try not volunteering the next time you receive a job offer and the scheme begins to unravel. While you're at it, try not voluntarily giving an SS# at the time a job is offered and the scheme unravels a bit more. At it's inception, applying to SS was also promoted as being "voluntary". While it's not impossible, the practical reality is the average person of today will not know how to get very far minus an SS # and minus the voluntary act to sign a W-4 in order to get a job.

This video was a good video Phelps had alot of energy and had alot of pride. I am amazed had alot of the bad things the vatican was responisble for. I learned alot of things from that video.

After watching this video and the video on the Inquesition I Have been so full of anger I have been wanting to burn down those Jesuit institutions like what they did in Ireland. If I was not handicap I probably would. Those bible thumpers piss me off.

Minuteman Matt - May 11, 2007 12:43 PM (GMT)

Anyone have the link for the 3rd part yet?

Dang these videos made me angry If i was president I would evict the Jesuits then destroy georgetown/fordham then send the military to loot the vatican and take out all its secrets then burn it to the ground.

If I was president of America I would

-Expell the Jesuits out of the America

-Abolish the 14th amendment

-Abolish the FED

-Dissolve the CIA

-Clean out the FBI and expose division 5 rats.

-Burn down all the Jesuit esblashments such as fordham/georgetown

-Sever ties with the UN and saudis

-make a special police unit to go after assassins who threaten the congressman and other high level members.

-Destroy the Jesuit landmarks in DC

Wages are income if you except this phoney Fiat insurance script for wages, part of the trick is the creator of the federal reserve notes is the soul owner of them, no matter where they go or what they do, we own nothing, not even our own lives, this is one very good reason the rule of law is ignored and they do what they will with us, Our rule of law has been suspended, our real funds have been stolen, We are playing their game of monopoly yet demanding they recognize our rules. Kennedy attempted what Matt suggests, we all saw his head removed. We need to get rid of every thing Matt lists AND the 13th 15th 16th 17th Fake Amendments as well. I have known of this Tax stuff since the 70s, I keep waiting for Americans to have enough of this nonsense, There has been plenty of Martyrs since that time, Gordon Kahl is one example, this WWII veteran dispatched 2 or 3 US Marshalls while they attempted to assassinate him, they bit off more than they could chew that day. Eventually the US marshalls caught up to Gordon and executed him, and also executed a Sheriff that witnessed them do the murder of Gordon, because Sheriff Mathews was angered by the cold blooded killing of Gordon and so was silenced at the very same location. this occurred in 1987 in Smithville Arkansas. There are many cases of Martyrdom, It is my belief that this is foolish suicide. But if there was a standing Army of a couple hundred thousand then I would gladly join and fight for freedom. That is why I studied the Constitution all these years and try and wake people up, its encredible that know one cares, I cant even get friends to stop eating and drinking the poisen from the store, let alone study this history of the Republic. I dont know what the answer is any more. I dont think they will even give me the honor of a gun fight here at the ranch when they decide its my time, they will probably shoot the house at 3:30 A.M. from 5 miles out with a rocket from a satilite, and the nighbors will think my shack burned down.

Well I know the SIS is the most powerfull however no way we cant get rid of them they are sneaky little #$$$s and they will keep comeing in our borders causing trouble. As for the NSA i forgot about them after seeing the movie "enemy of the state" im not suprised on how powerfull the NSA is however I could clean out the rats in the NSA and use it as a tool to get the SIS rats.

Thanks again for this!

Personally I found part III to be as good if not better than parts 1 & 2 as far as the scope and quantity of historical factoids revealed. Two in particular were of significant interest to me. 1) the timing of "Louisiana Purchase", which Eric claims was in large part brokered, and somewhat hurriedly so, by Jefferson, such that it came not long after the Jesuit expulsion from France in early 1770s.... I guess this then covertly set up a strategic Jesuit outpost ... or safe-haven, safe from expulsion, where they could then continue to foment grand-scale evil unfettered.... ?; 2) the eventual, staged WMD "grand surprise" that ultimately awaits America so as to fabricate belated "proof" of gwb having been "right" or spot-on, about WMD, all along. This 3-part lecture has motivated me to finally purchase VAIII.

How do I save these 3 segements of Eric Phelps seminar to my PC cause I don't trust google holding them they will probably delete them in the future and this knowledge would be lost.

JagDRS - May 14, 2007 07:47 AM (GMT)

Here is just one site, it's one I use often. Just plug in the URL location of the video, it generally works no matter what the source (Youtube, google, and others) click the "download" button, give it a few seconds to find the file, then follow the instructions. Sometimes it has a problem finding the file the first time and might give some kind of error message.....usually, if you wait a minute or so and try again it works fine.

HINT: Most of these videos tend to originate in some long, hard to remember, whacked-out filename convention, like videoplay?docid=3300620210554455746&hl=en

I find it helpful that it is much more helpful to rename the file at the time right before you begin the download, for example:

VatAss_Lecture07_3of3.FLV

HINT2: you want the end of the file name (like the .FLV) to be a file type for which you already have a player for. If you have or prefer an FLV player, use it, or, save the file as a . AVI if you have or prefer an AVI player (like Winamp)

http://javimoya.com/blog/youtube_en.php

Here is another site that I've just recently seen people suggesting, for the same basic purpose.

When will part 4 come out? Eric's films are like drugs after watching the first one I cannot get enough of them I need more of his videos.

JagDRS - May 14, 2007 04:09 PM (GMT)

Thanks. Yes, I found that audio and listened to it late last night. It actually helped restore a little confidence in me for C&D.... at least as it concerns Lenny... a little.

It also put into fairly straight forward perspective for me what this whack orlando mary slithering out of a left field is about..... Lenny host's a show during which two journalists repeatedly and audibly mention & associate & indict the word Vatican in connection with a long history of covert ruthless crimes..... and then suddenly along comes a mary to publicly promote outrage. Not much mystery there.

Aside from Eric, firstly, and now Greg, who else is there that anyone here knows of who has recently (.....in the last 10 years or so) had the balls (or estrogen) to regularly attempt to draw the public's attention to the smoke of satan that's been ruling the house of the Jesuit Order for centuries? This is not a trick question. I personally do not know but would like to if there are others like Eric or Greg out there to know about. Okay, I'll put Sherman on this short list. Although I'll be bleeped if I can find the particular expose', I'm pretty sure that it was Sherman who documented sometime in the last 10 years the coment of JP having been a door to door Zyklon-B salesman for I.G. Farben prior to his eventual promotion into the upper ranks of the Vatican.

To download these parts you simply click the link I provided for downloadable formats. When the screen comes up you have options at the bottom of the screen such as MP4, AVI or FLV. You should right click and save as on the AVI format which utilise DIVX codecs.

Watch the seminar videos and you will understand more basicly the black pope Peter Hans Kolvanbach of the military Jesuit Order controls the new world order (world government). The white pope Ratzinger is mostly just a puppet in a hijacked vatican establishment he has no power whatsoever however when the nwo's agenda is completed the black pope will transfer power to the white pope and the white pope will rule the world from a new power house.

The Jesuit Order is the most powerfull nwo group in the world only a few groups can match its power and those groups are its allys the Black Nobility (which is like a rich mans version of the Illuminati) The black nobility make up 50% talamudic jews and 50% knights of malta the black nobility is very powerfull they are the Jesuits most trusted allys the BN's base powerhouse is in Northern Italy, and the state of Colorado particuly in the Aspen institute they are all loyal to the JO. The black nobility also control the intelligence networks in a massive underground facility in Colorado such as FBI division 5 under control by defense industrial security command, they also control British SIS the most powerfull intl agency, along with the CIA,FSB etc etc

The 2nd most powerfull group which is about the same level as the Jesuits,and Black Nobility is the Soverign Military of Malta, it is a group of modern day knights this group use to be to be a crusader group for the pope they merged with the templer knights along time ago. The military of malta control all the worlds banking for the vatican outside of switzlerand they oppoint there talamudic sionist jews as the front man the Military of Malta also control all of the mainstream television,news media who they appoint the intel agencies to control,banking. The knight of maltas base is on the Island of Malta and the round table in new york.

Another powerfull group is the order of garter and the pilgrim society I do not know much about them but they are involved with british royalty. The most powerfull man in America is Cardinal Egan who is from New York he is one of the Jesuit diplomats he takes orders from the black pope and hands them out to the illuminati puppets such as rockfeller,rothschild etc etc. The Bavarian Illuminati are a lower level group in the nwo occult they are still very powerfull and wealthy but they do not out rank the mighty Jesuits they are more of a poor mans version of the Black Nobility.

The Jesuits have a number of military fortresses in America some of the more well known ones are Washington DC, Fordham University, Georgetown University, and the University of San Francisco. (who my sister is going to and probably being indoctrinated) SMOM also control Hollywood using their Talmudic Masonic Jews and their Italian mafioso.

this is just a small amount of info I learned from Craig and others you might want to read more about this giant octopus menace called Romanism

It's cheaper to publish it would cost a lot of money to put it on paper or hardback and distribute it all over the world. Not to mention all the red tape it would be hard to find a group to do that with all the censorship.

Im not sure if they are or not I don't own them but from my knowledge they where not as many pages as part III so it was probably easier because I know when you print things or copy things they charge money per page.

Craig, appropos of nothing, I emailed your KMOM photo of QE2, along with a quotation from the 1689 Bill of Rights, which forbids relationships to the Papacy, to HRM at her internet web-site. I'm sure the Webmaster will hide it, asap.

I also send her copies of Buck Houses' accounting statements, which reflect income from the Wanta deal, which are obviously cooked.

I'm sure Cousin Betty is thrilled to receive these. See? I can call her "Cousin Betty," and it's real news to them.

I would advise you to get the PDF while you can, one disk has the 1836 page book on it, the other Disk has the 13 reference books on it, then have a print shop creat the book or books for you. I did this and the 1836 Vatican assassins cost me 122.00, the reference books cost me 300.00. they even made a hard cover for the front and back with the Logo of Erics book on the front. Hope you all had a good weekend. We did.

I was talking to a friend in Israel today. She is taking a course to become a tour guide. These courses are known to be very intensive. Anyway, she said that her instructor told the class that his father (supposedly a well known archeologist) heard something interesting directly from someone in the Vatican. Apparently, there are remnants of the Second Temple hidden in the Jesuit Monestary located in the Armenian Quarter of Jerusalem.

Maybe you already knew this but I never heard anything about it.

See you and have a blessed week.

Pope: Globalization Should Not Ignore Spiritual Side

By Sabina Castelfranco

Rome

06 January 2007

Castelfranco report - Download 190k audio clip

Listen to Castelfranco report audio clip

Thousands of families were in Saint Peter's Square Saturday to receive the pope's blessing on the feast day of the Epiphany. At a morning mass the pope said that religious leaders must stress the spiritual aspect of the globalization debate. Sabina Castelfranco reports from Rome.

POPE: "The celebration of the Epiphany of the Lord invites us to contemplate Jesus as the divine Savior, the light that guides us on our journey to eternity."

Thousands of families packed Saint Peter's Square to hear the pope's words. In Christian tradition, the Epiphany marks the day three wise men guided by a star pay homage to the Baby Jesus.

Earlier, the pope celebrated mass in Saint Peter's Basilica. In his homily, Benedict said the past decades have seen a "challenge to global civilization, where the center can no longer be Europe and not even that which we call the West or the North of the world."

He added that there is a need to elaborate a new world political and economic order, but, above all, a spiritual and cultural one, a renewed humanism.

Pope Benedict said that now, at the start of the Third Millennium, the world is in the middle of a phase of human history described as globalization. He said that while politicians, scientists and researchers play important roles in the modern world, it is also necessary that the leaders of the great non-Christian and Christian religions are at their side.

Pope Benedict will celebrate another mass on Sunday in the Sistine Chapel in the Vatican. During that ceremony, as is tradition, he will baptize a number of children.

They're gagging for it man.

BTW, i heard on an interview with Missler (whom I'm convinced is a deep cover op, but still a good source for info) that there was going to be announced shortly that some tablets with the original Hebrew alphabet from Mt. Sinai were discovered and believed to have been from Moses. Anyone heard about this or was it just hype? It was on George "worker in the light" Noory, after all, so take that into consideration.

myoung - June 5, 2007 11:03 PM (GMT)

Hey guys get a clue.

Eric and now you guys are misquoting my site on Solomon's Temple.

You have inserted words,

You have misquoted scriptures.

And you attribute your words to me.

It is God who controls the events on earth, not Satan.

Satan is the stealer not God.

Satan is the knave not God.

Satan nor his man on earth have any control over the Temple until a specific day.

God allows the Temple to be built. Who cares if the Pope & Co. think they will do it. I believe nothing of the lies they spread and dangle about and you appear to swallow whole.

The Abomination and the Beast (Resurrected Man of Perdition) are two different items.

It is God who will allow his Temple to be built.

It is the God of Heaven who rules from this Temple.

Satan will have no control over it until the abominations of desolations.

If you study the scriptures you will find the Antichrist's.....

His name?

His date of death?

Holiday resurrection?

Who kills him?

Where he is killed?

Why he is killed?

What else happens?

The name of the conspirators working with him?

How many?

Sorry but you are mistaken.

This is God's Temple, the Pope & Co. will attempt to steal it but

Da 11:45

And he (Resurrected Man of Perdition) shall plant the tabernacles of his palace between the seas in the glorious holy mountain; yet he shall come to his end, and none shall help him.

Phil Jayhan - June 6, 2007 09:22 AM (GMT)

Regarding the building of the Temple, I have my own reservations, which have grown smaller and smaller with a more thorough understanding of scripture.

I lean toward the idea which is rather unorthodox, that unless we build the Temple of God, that the end will never come. Why? Because the Anti-Christ needs to be able to set himself up in Gods Temple, which I think Ezekiel makes clear will be Solomons Temple and not a Tent. Thus in my own mind, personally think we need to rebuild Gods Temple, if we wish the end to come.

Like I said this is unorthodox belief, but then with near total apostasy in Christs church on earth, I have no issue with having some unorthodox views.

How can the man of sin set himself up in the Temple unless we build it?

And where will the Lord stay and reside when he comes back after the Tribulation? The Ramada Inn? No. He will need to have his Temple, and it will need to be finished.

Thus if we, as Gods children, want the end of this horrible system to come to an end, we must rebuild Gods Temple, so those events which have been prophesied can occur. Thus I am all for rebuilding Gods Temple, so we can end this nightmare system of hell on earth.

Thats my two cents anyways...

cheers-
phil :)

The bible believers believe in FAITH, yet they can not prove the bible to be fact, its FAITH, Then Non-Bible believers call it a myth or fairy tales, yet they can not prove this either. So why run away based on that. just laugh and enjoy the KNOWLEDGE. Someday we find out what is true and what is false, its an individual thing. :D

WHO SUNK THE TITANIC?

by Doug Yurchey

The above title does not read: What sunk the Titanic? It says: Who? The information below appeared inside my Outlook Express e-mailbox. The following is stunning and inspired me to write. When we think of great mysteries, controversies, conspiracies or historical questions...many come to mind:

- * Who really murdered JFK?
- * Who was really behind 9-11?
- * Did a greater conspiracy surround the Oklahoma Bombing?
- * Was Marilyn Monroe killed?
- * Did aliens crash at Roswell?

Another historical mystery or puzzle is: What was the real story behind the sinking of the Titanic? The book 'The Secret Terrorists' printed by Truth Triumphant Ministries and reprinted by Tree of Life Resources places blame squarely on the Roman Catholic Order known as the Jesuits. 'The greatest tragedies in the last 200 years can be traced to the Jesuits.'

Founded in 1540, the Society of Jesus grew rapidly within the Catholic Church. They were confessors to the ruling families of Europe. They defend the Pope and Catholicism around the world in nearly every country. In 1773, Clement XIV suppressed the Jesuits. In 1814, Pope Pius VII responded to pressure and restored the Society. There are Jesuit colleges and ministries today. They are a very influential organization. Jesuits are dedicated to furthering Catholicism and the power of the Pope. Yet...there is a secret, negative side to this organization called 'the Society of Jesus.' For hundreds of years they carried out religious killings. They were the men in dark cloaks who carried daggers. (Were they the religious CIA for their time?)

In 1910, seven men met on Jekyll Island just off the coast of Georgia to plan the Federal Reserve Bank. Nelson Aldrich and Frank Valderclip represented the Rockefeller financial empire. Henry Davidson, Charles Norton and Benjamin Strong represented J.P. Morgan. Paul Warberg represented the Rothschilds Banking dynasty of Europe. The Rothschilds were the banking agents for the Jesuits and hold 'the key to the wealth of the Roman Catholic Church.'

The Morgan gang, the Rothschilds gang and the Rockefeller gang were fierce competitors yet entered joint ventures. They established the national banking cartel called the Federal Reserve System....according to G. Edward Griffin in 'The Creature From Jekyll Island (American Opinion Publishing P. 209). A review of this book stated: 'It tells a story of how bankers have lured politicians with easy money and end up in control of most of the world.'

[This writer travelled to Jekyll Island in 1970 with his college tennis team. I had such a beautiful moment there one night: I was alone and drawn to a lighthouse. There stood deer in the darkness drinking from a pond. In the moonlight, it was a sight I'd never forget. Little did I realize that this wonderful, winter-resort for the rich had an evil history. Jekyll Island was properly named].

The Rothschilds, Morgans and Rockefellers are controlled by the Jesuit Order. The most powerful of families 'do whatever is necessary to destroy constitutional liberty in America and bring the Pope to world domination.' Construction of the Titanic began in 1909; at a shipyard in Belfast, Ireland. Belfast was Protestant and hated by the Jesuits. Morgan took control of the White Star Lines. The Jesuits ordered J.P. Morgan to build the Titanic. From the very beginning of the luxury liner, the Titanic was destined for doom.

There were a number of powerful men who were NOT in favor of the Federal Reserve System. Benjamin Guggenheim, Isa Strauss and John Jacob Astor opposed the formation of a F.R.S. These men were arguably the richest men in the world and stood in the way of the Jesuits' plan. 'These three men were coaxed and encouraged to board the floating palace.' Not only were these enemies of the Jesuits against a Federal Reserve Bank, but they would have used their wealth and influence to oppose World War I.

This was the 'maiden' voyage of the greatest ship ever built. The 'unsinkable' campaign assured passengers of comfortable safety. Many Irish, French and Italian Catholics were on board. Protestants from Belfast were also encouraged to immigrate to the United States on the Titanic. These were 'expendable' people; for the most part. But, the real reason for the ship's destruction was a game between the super rich whereby Guggenheim-Strauss-Astor could be eliminated. 'They had to be destroyed by a means so preposterous that no one would suspect they were murdered, and no one would suspect the Jesuits.'

The Captain of the Titanic was Edward Smith. He was a Jesuit and worked for J.P. Morgan. Anyone could be a Jesuit and their identity not be known. >From National Geographic 'The Secrets of the Titanic,' (1986):

When the ship departed southern England, on board was Francis Browne. He was the most powerful Jesuit in all of Ireland and the 'Jesuit Master of Edward Smith.' 'Here is Jesuit treachery at its finest. The provincial Father Francis Browne boards the Titanic, photographs the victims, most assuredly briefs the Captain concerning his oath as a Jesuit, and the following morning bids him farewell...' Eric J. Phelps, Vatican Assassins Halcon Unified Services. P. 247.

Captain Smith believed this high-ranking 'Jesuit General' was God. Browne instructed him on what to do in the North Atlantic waters. 'Edward Smith was given orders to sink the Titanic and that's exactly what he did.' According to Jesuit secret philosophy: The innocent can be massacred for the greater good; the ends justifies the means.

Captain Smith had been traveling the North Atlantic for 26 years. He was the 'world's most experienced master' in these cold waters. The Captain knew all along that his ship was built for the enemies of the Jesuits. Its purpose was always to be a 'deathship' and sink on its first voyage. Captain Smith also knew exactly where the icebergs were. Under secret orders, he propelled the Titanic full speed at 22 knots on a moonless night and through a huge ice field 80 square miles in area! He had been 'given orders from his God in the Vatican, and nothing would turn him from his course.'

Captain Smith's actions in his last hours were not those of a strong leader. He seemed as if he was wrestling with his conscience. Should he be the brave sea captain or obey his master and sink the ship?

There were purposely not enough lifeboats. Many of the lifeboats only had a few passengers of women and children during the emergency. White distress flares were jettisoned. Passing ships thought those aboard the Titanic were having a party. The distress flares should have been red. These examples were not because of an arrogant crew who believed the Titanic was unsinkable. These shortcomings were planned.

Those richest of men, who opposed the Federal Reserve System, were killed along with the middle and lower classes. John Jacob Astor's wife was rescued. Molly Brown was also saved. The sinking of the Titanic was possibly the greatest disaster of the 20th Century outside of the World Wars. According to 'The Secret Terrorists,' the cause of this tragedy was the Jesuit Order of the Roman Catholic Church.

'The unsinkable ship, the floating palace was created to be a tomb for the wealthy, who opposed the Federal Reserve System. On April 14th (the same date in history as the assassination of Abraham Lincoln) of 1912, the Titanic struck an iceberg and all opposition to the Federal Reserve was eliminated. In December of 1913, the Federal Reserve System came into being in the United States. Eight months later, the Jesuits had sufficient funding through the Federal Reserve Bank to begin World War I.' Notice the F.R.S. was established soon after the disaster of the Titanic.

The rich have always created unnecessary wars where the poor have to fight and die. The pages of 'The Secret Terrorists' do not specifically name the Templars, Freemasons or Illuminati. But these Secret Societies are related and do control: The banks; the money system; the oil companies; corporations; governments; the politicians; the military; the police; the law and judicial system; the churches; the schools; the media, etc., etc...

The rich and powerful have always ruled the world. The elite make the news; they create the great, international events. William Randolph Hearst invented the news and printed his propaganda in his paper.

It was the rich that purposely crashed the Stock Market in 1929 and caused the suffering of the Great Depression. The super rich had a highly-profitable, financial day during the Crash. It was the lesser-rich, want-to-be investors who lost everything.

IT IS NOT INCONCEIVABLE THAT WE HAVE HEARD SO MUCH ABOUT THE FAMOUS VOYAGE OF THE TITANIC BECAUSE IT WAS ONE OF THE MOST PERFECT CRIMES EVER COMMITTED!

As much as I'd like to, this reason for sinking the Titanic seems too 'far out' for me to suggest to anyone...

CRAIG-OXLEY - September 22, 2005 12:32 PM (GMT)

This is why you only discuss this informaton with people wanting to relieve themselves of the Matrix and its programming. You have no chance of pulling a pure sheep away with almost any of the knowledge. Trust me I've tried many times and even some people I've given plenty of knowledge and shown Alex "Temporal" Jones videos etc and even Icke videos still dont believe. The thing they really cannot release from is the programming of Terrorists. They simply cannot believe the state will use its own to further the agenda which it does!

You know the real story now and remember it in case you can use the information in the future!

Temporal?

I thought Alex Jones was doing a fine job...

CRAIG-OXLEY - September 23, 2005 01:07 PM (GMT)

Alex Jones is a Temporal Coadjutor like most of the popular conspiracy people. His job is to give the awakening sheep some information which can be backed up but never go any further. This is why his Illuminati information is lacking and he just will not go into its power structure and definately won't dare go higher. Basically he works for the Jesuits as you must remember that Jesuits use both sides in order to get what they want. They need disinformation and stagnated information out there in order to keep their veil down. This is why he got into Bohemian Grove and with a NWO agenda promoting TV station from England called Channel 4. He took no real harmful footage, infact most of it was almost of no use. The Cremation of Care is just one ritual and more sinister ones happen throughout the nights in the woods throughout the 3 weeks. He claimed he was stopped 7 times by security but miraculously he never got any on tape. He also double crossed a christian family and put their life at risk in order to make money from the video he took. Keep watching his information because hes good at showing martial law, agenda, attacks, id etc but who he blaims isn't exactly wrong but he will not go into the Jesuits etc.

Also he adores the Gibson family and Hutton Gibson plays double fiddle as hes actually an OPUS DEI then goes around mouthing off about NWO when infact thats his groups agenda working for the Jesuits. Mel Gibson is most likely Opus Dei too playing double fiddle but its unconfirmed. Remember though Mel worked with Jesuits on the Passion film, one in particular William J Fulco and that film was based round the Jesuit Douay bible!

So be aware of Jones!

F-Minus - September 24, 2005 06:52 PM (GMT)

Hi (2tuff especially, but others as well), I didn't seem to find a general thread about the Jesuit Order (the threads seem more specific). I've just started reading Vatican assassins and I think it's really impressive. It's the first time I read a conspiracy book in which things are laid out in such detail... I like that. I've been reading stuff here and there about the Jesuits and been on www.vaticanassassins.org a lot and listening to audio about the Jesuits and all and during this I read/heard that the Jesuits want the world divided in 83 regions (with 83 provincials; one at the head of each of the 83 regions, etc.). Now I already learned that they want to divide the US into 10 regions. I even ran into a chart of that (I believe 2tuff posted it...); I also learned that they want Ireland as one of the 83 regions; and Korea as well, although I could be mistaking about that...

Now, my question is; does anyone have a link or can help me get to know the other of the 83 regions? Is there a map available of the world, divided in these 83 regions? Thx.

By the way, you were talking about Mel Gibson... he also stars in a film called Conspiracy Theory :ph43r:

Re: Alex Jones,

Interesting note: Alex Jones has really been brought mainstream through Charlie Sheen who is the son of Jesuit coadjutor Martin Sheen who took his name from the Late Bishop Fulton Sheen. Look up "Martin Sheen" in wikipedia for his real Latino/Spanish name is Ramón Gerardo Antonio Estévez (born August 3, 1940). Go to <http://www.spirituallysmart.com> and click the link at the top for pictures of this. Is Charlie Sheen following in pops footsteps?

Alex Jones, within his very brief mainstream appearance on CNN's showbiz tonite publically lauds Jesuit Coadjutor Martin Sheen!! Imagine that!!

Also the 9/11 truth movement are starting to become very militant as far as demanding any of their followers to reject other facts regarding other group's involvement in the manipulation of the U.S. government.

He mentions the burning of the reichstad by the Nazis to blame it on communists ALL THE TIME but never ever mentions the Historical signing of the very important concordat between Nazi Germany and the Vatican. Nor will any of them mention the Vatican ratlines and Operation Paperclip where the Jesuit nazis were brought into the CIA.

CRAIG-OXLEY - May 15, 2007 12:17 AM (GMT)

Dear Brother Eric and Brethren in Christ Jesus,

The National Geographic special "The Secrets of the Titanic" is on YouTube. Here the links to the five parts (about 10 min each) of the documentary. Watch it while it's still available.

<http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=PahDfRzVOqg> Part 1

<http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=6ocgJRQV7Vw> Part 2

<http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=ms1ADyMCRZQ...related&search=> Part 3

<http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=bPTCd1loQqg...related&search=> Part 4

<http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=VBeljlaOVSc...related&search=> Part 5

At 6:16 of Part 1 Coadjutor Sheen describes authentic pictures of Titanic before she sailed for the last time. These photos were taken by Irish Jesuit Fr. Francis M. Browne (referred to as "a vacationing priest") by Coadjutor Sheen never admitting Browne was a Jesuit nor does he explain why Jesuit Browne disembarked from Titanic after briefing Temporal Coadjutor Captain Edward John Smith that he had bring Titanic down deliberately and ignore any warnings of icebergs.

Disclaimer-the following info (I'm paraphrasing) was on Wikipedia which I am not completely sure of in terms of veracity. I will see if more credible and reliable sources confirm this.

From http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Francis_Browne

Browne's Jesuit provincial forewarned him by ordering him to "GET OFF THAT SHIP-PROVINCIAL" after he requested permission from his superior Father Provincial to travel to New York with an American millionaire couple who offered to pay Jesuit Browne's way to New York and back in exchange for his company during the voyage.

This website is the Father Browne Photographic Collection. Not surprisingly it does not detail what Jesuit Browne's provincial actually told him but it does say he was ordered to disembark from the doomed Titanic. <http://www.fatherbrowne.com/index.htm>

Robert D. Ballard is reported to be the first to discover the wreckage of the Titanic. It is disputed whether Ballard truly found the remnants of Titanic because a Royal Navy vessel in 1977 according to <http://www.paullee.com/titanic/titanicfound.html> found it first.

Ballard and coadjutor Sheen worked together in this documentary. Ballard directed it and Sheen narrated. As a matter of fact, Ballard will be my graduating class' guest Commencement speaker on May 21. I believe it is possible Ballard is a coadjutor himself because he refuses to address the possibility that a rival team of discoverers got to Titanic first. He might be aiding the Jesuit cover-up. Perhaps because Ballard receives the praise of the Pope's CFR press, notoriety, fame, and recognition for his discovery he keeps his mouth shut not telling the truth (for fear of death) about why Titanic was sunk and was always meant to be destroyed from its inception just like the Twin Towers of the World Trade Center.

CRAIG-OXLEY - May 23, 2007 09:49 PM (GMT)

A novel that predicted the Titanic's destiny, and another ship that almost followed Morgan Robertson, in 1898, wrote "Futility". It described the maiden voyage of a transatlantic luxury liner named the Titan. Although it was touted as being unsinkable, it strikes an iceberg and sinks with much loss of life. In 1912 the Titanic, a transatlantic luxury liner widely touted as unsinkable strikes an iceberg and sinks with great loss of life on her maiden voyage. In the Book, the Month of the Wreck was April, same as in the real event. There were 3,000 passengers on the book; in reality, 2,207. In the Book, there were 24 Lifeboats; in reality, 20.

Months after the Titanic sank, a tramp steamer was traveling through the foggy Atlantic with only a young boy on watch. It came into his head that it had been thereabouts that the Titanic had sunk, and he was suddenly terrified by the thought of the name of his ship - the Titanian. Panic-stricken, he sounded the warning. The ship stopped, just in time: a huge iceberg loomed out of the fog directly in their path. The Titanian was saved.

Title: The Black Popes scenario for World War 3 & destruc

CRAIG-OXLEY - September 10, 2005 11:48 PM (GMT)

If I was the Black Pope wanting to destroy both the Moslem world (surrounding "my Jerusalem") and the "heretic and liberal" Western Civilization sending out its accursed "missionaries," I would do the following:

- 1. First I would cause a war to be decared by the West (US and Britain) against "terrorism" which has no end in sight. Thus I would cause 911 with my CIA and then blame my Masonic Islamic Terrorist Network built by my CIA and financed by my Rockefeller financed and developed oil bonanza---Saudi Arabia. Mission accomplished.
- 2. I would restore the flow of my heroin trade by removing the Taliban which I created with my CIA. I would then move into Iraq to remove my Masonic Inquisitor Saddam Hussein, allowing the US to capture one of his doubles. According to an Iraqi officer, Hussein loaded two tractor trailers of dollars and euros on to an American C-141, then drove his limo onto the plane after which it took off and disappeared into the skyline. Mission accomplished.
- 3. I would then begin the systematic destruction of as many Moslems and mosques as possible using roving CIA teams inciting hatred on both sides. I would cause outrages against the Moslems of the south, using American GIs raping Iraqi women, photographing the crime and then posting it on the internet further citing Moslem fury against the West. I would also spread disease via immunizations and radioactive toxins among the American GIs further weakening the American military in preparation for my Sino-Soviet-Moslem invasion of the West. Mission accomplished.
- 4. In preparation for my Sino-Soviet-Moslem invasion I would use my scalar weapons involving weather modification, causing hurricanes in the American South, devastating select cities thereby weakening the West's will to resist. And with deliberate non-intervention and other injustices perpetrated by federal, state and local agencies, I would further sow the seeds for my race war between Whites and Blacks, while occupying the people with non-news (Jackson, Simpson, Bryant---Black on White crimes---and any other case (Scott Peterson, Stephanie Hollowood) that could be used to occupy the attention of the viewers). More hurricanes are in the making and the South will be further "softened" for my invasion from which Cuba, now occupied by the Chinese and hosted by Jesuit Fidel Castro, will be the staging base---with the full cooperation of the CIA and American Military Intelligence. Mission being accomplished.

5. Knowing that the American people will be beginning to denounce the war and even concluding that 911 was an inside job (never believing that my Director of Central Intelligence, Knight of Malta and CFR member George J. Tenet oversaw the crime), I would remove Tenet blaming him for the "incompetence" demonstrated in preventing the "attack." This will save face for my most obedient Skull and Bones servant, George W. Bush, whose father and grandfather served the Order most wonderfully. This will also save my Jesuit Georgetown-educated Tenet from future prosecution as I of course control the Attorney General, the Justice Department and the FBI. Mission accomplished.

6. In order to justify a war in Israel for the destruction of the Jerusalem mosques, I would used my Masonic Jewish anti-Torah Zionists to incite more hatred between Israel's Arabs and Jews, while depriving the Jews of their land given to them by God as recorded in Genesis and by British Mandate at the end of WWI. This will be my "Roadmap to War" policy shoved down the throats by the CFR-controlled devotee to the Archbishop of New York City, President George W. Bush. Now war in Israel is a certainty. In order to blame the US for the destruction of the Jerusalem mosques I would build a huge American Army base in Israel from which the Americans could operate during the coming war in Israel, American troops moving in from Iraq. Meanwhile at the moment I would increase US troops in Iraq through a coming catastrophic event and thus a mandatory draft. Mission About to be Accomplished.

7. In order to increase US troops in Iraq, which troops will then invade Iran, Syria, Jordan and Saudi Arabia (as was told to me by an aged former Marine and suspected Jesuit Temporal Coadjutor), I would use my CIA controlling Military Intelligence to detonate five to ten dirty atomic bombs as the book Endrun (or Endgame written by two American Generals) so describes. This will strike at the very heart of the proud, profligate and fat Americans so as to incite the people to adopt a total war footing which my CFR trustees will fully implement. I would blame Iran for the detonations justifying the invasion of that nation; or, I can blame North Korea thereby beginning my war in the East in killing millions of Chinese as China will be aiding North Korea. In preparation for an American defeat, I have moved all American aircraft carriers out of the Pacific and into the Persian gulf. I have dispatched "boomers," or American nuclear subs, into the Pacific but only a few of us know that there is no such thing as Airborne Nuclear War. Yes, the subs are disarmed of any potential nuclear threat. When this becomes known, he who as the largest and most disciplined army will have the upperhand. This of course will be my Chinese Communists commanded by Chinese Jesuits. Mission about to be accomplished.

8. With America fighting a two-front war which she cannot win, I will be in full control of the top military commanders in the field and in the intelligence services of BOTH SIDES through high-level Freemasonry and the Knights of Malta. This will insure America's defeat; any General that will not obey my commands in the name of patriotism will be eliminated as was American General George Patton and Russian General Andri Vlasov during my beloved WWII. Ah, our Order accomplished so much then "for the greater glory of God!"

9. After using China to sweep the Pacific Rim of all "heretics and liberals" as I did during WWII with the Japanese Army, I will then attack Australia and New Zealand as those idiots have abandoned private gun ownership in the name of the goodness of man and the honesty of government! Those nations of White apostate Protestants are sitting ducks in the middle of the South Pacific with no relief possible from either British or US fleets. The shedding of the blood of the heretic, I love it!

10. With my beloved Chinese navy coupled with my Japanese Navy I will then sweep the Pacific, attack Hawaii and eliminate all but a few of the native Oriental Hawaiians. They hate Americans and will help my invading Chinese and Soviet navy. At the same time I will be bringing in hundreds of thousands of Chinese and Soviet troops through the underground tunnel linking Russia and Alaska running all the way to Washington State. By the time my mongol forces reach the Coast of California with LA in flames, my attackers will be arriving in the North killing as many heretic Canadian Protestants in British Columbia and Alberta. We will not touch Roman Catholic Quebec as she will be under the protection of the invading Roman Catholic European forces along with Roman Catholic New England.

The Jesuit Superior General's scenario will unfold along these lines. The next event will be a terrorist event involving preplaced dirty bombs here in the US. Biologicals may also be used as the CIA has spent years in developing these toxins. The movie The Satan Bug produced over thirty years ago is somewhat of a forewarning to the event. A two-front war will ensue; our armies will destroy the mosques of Mecca, Medina and Jerusalem with the secret aid of the Black Pope's Islamic Terrorist Network; our troops will be betrayed and massacred as were three German armies by Hitler in the East; then will come the end with our invasion, partition and occupation for at least fifty to one hundred years if the Lord Jesus tarries.

By Eric Jon Phelps!

CRAIG-OXLEY - October 10, 2005 01:24 AM (GMT)

Dear Friends and Brethren,

After watching CFR Lou Dobbs and his continual, yet honest, reporting of the millions of illegal border crossings left unpunished by the Black Pope's CFR-controlled Bush government; after watching CFR Aaron Brown's special on the coming nuclear detonations here in the US (at the hand of CIA-controlled "Al Qaeda") using North Korean (US in house) nukes; after watching a Congressman's hour-long presentation of the future use of EMF pulse weapons on the computer-dependant US military and economy; I will continue to maintain that this scenario has been planned in Rome to lead to a two-front war which America cannot win. War in Iran will lead to war with Russia; war in North Korea will lead to war with China; and the US being blamed for bringing down the Mecca and Medina mosques (when certain Islamic CIA-Bin Laden contract agents in fact will do these deeds) will lead to a war with the entire Moslem world.

Thus, we shall have our Sino-Soviet-Moslem invasion as mentioned in VA over four years ago. Fascism always starts the wars (Japan, Italy and Germany) and Communism (US, Britain and the USSR) always ends them as the victor---by the design of the Jesuit Order. Today the US and Britain are now the fascists; China, Russia and Wahabbi Islam are now the communists. And under communism no royal dynasty has been permitted to exist except the newly-created German Windsor Dynasty (1917) and the Saud dynasty. The Saud dynasty will be the next to go as it will also be blamed for the destruction of Mecca and Medina via its connection to the US military. Its wells will be seized by the Sino-Soviets cutting off our oil, while our domestic wells have been shut down over the last fifty years. (The invasion into Alaska will deprive the US of Prudhoe Bay and its Alaskan pipeline, cutting off 25% of our prime source of oil.) Remember, CIA-controlled Wahabbi Bin Laden openly denounces the Saudi King and his sucessors as "infidels."

Therefore, I will continue to encourage all US Jews to leave the country while there is still time. Israel at this moment is safer than the US for "the sons of Jacob"---who will never be "consumed." (Malachi 3:6)

Sincerely in faith,

Brother Eric

very nice, these step by step predictions..

what i was wondering myself, how does this theory fit in with michael tsarion's research and theory in regards to endgoals?

keep up the great work guys!

Chris - February 6, 2006 12:45 AM (GMT)

I agree AdDM, I like to get informed peoples view on upcoming events.

I have a few questions...

In step six you say that there will be a war in Israel.

What pretext do you think there would be (if any) to invade Israel?

Who do you think will invade?

What will the Americans do?

Do you think Mossad would destroy the mosques?

Approximately how many weeks/months after step six will the dirty bombs be detonated in America?

Will England also be hit?

If not, is there any chance that they will go along also with the total war philosophy?

You said Airborne Nuclear war is a myth...I have wondered this before; is that because they wouldn't want to strike nukes against countries that they already control?

In step ten you said the Hawaiians hate the Americans? I did not know this...Could you tell me why?

Do you have any other information about the underground tunnel you talked about linking Russia to Alaska?

Does birdflu or any pandemic fit anywhere into the picture?

Will the European forces come in to save the day in America?

Will the first AntiChrist be revealed just before the miracle retreat of the Chinese and Russians? If you think there will be a retreat of course.

Will a threat of an Alien invasion help the world come together after this war?

Finally, what do you recommend for people living in England? I have found a few places to hide...Plus the disastrous timing of climate change should not be underestimated.

Thanks for your info...I really like to get other peoples ideas about things. If any of my questions are asked without understanding of your philosophy, don't hesitate to say.

"If Lord Jesus tarries?"

Have you guys kept track of your savior? What messianic bullshit. The future is unwritten, but the game pieces are set up as you describe on the Global chessboard--averting some of the events may be impossible, but I disagree with your fatalism in tacitly rejecting the possibility of a insurgency to counter this masterplan.

:P :P :P Something with weather control!! Storm is coming HERE TO BC ,ALBERTA CANADA first! They wont touch Victoria but the coast is toast. I'm not sure about Washington area. :blink: :blink: :blink:

clatte - March 21, 2006 09:38 PM (GMT)

:o CNN Presents did a show the other night about oil control and they featured our Alberta oilsands! Made it seem like the Americans needed it real bad!! Well obviously not United States the country but the controllers do. Chances are the already HAVE the oilsands in their control but their changing all our appearances here FAST!

CRAIG-OXLEY - April 5, 2006 02:26 AM (GMT)

Thanks for this and I will send it around. The Sino-Soviet-Moslem Invasion is most assuredly in the works. It also seems that the Order used the US to build the huge Japanese Navy that will also be involved in that West Coast Invasion. With a huge fleet, a huge Chinese fifth column in the country and with the control of many ports, the invasion will surely be a success---aided by treason in Washington.

I have recently learned that the USS Arizona was sunk by sabotage---the Office of Naval Intelligence detonating the magazine of the Arizona within 13 minutes of the Japanese attack. And a naval officer on a hospital ship just happened to be filming the Arizona when it exploded. Again, no bomb pierced the armored deck, and no bomb went down the smokestack. The destruction of Battleship Row was a certainty.

Sincerely in Faith,

Brother Eric

The Vatican Wins The Oslo War

By Barry Chamish

8-4-6

My heart breaks as Israel loses the war. But her crooked leaders are doing wonders for the New World Order. Now the Vatican gets in its dibs and a new trade bloc is in formation.

While the rockets fly, the US and Kuwait sign a free trade agreement. So so Dubai, Bahrain and Jordan. And did anyone notice that America no longer patrols Afghanistan? NATO has taken the reins.

Not ten years ago, PM Shimon Peres was tired of the Grapes Of Wrath mini-war and put an end to it with an attack on Kana which killed 100 and brought international troops to Lebanon. The week before, the leaders of the NWO met in Rome under the kind but stern guidance of Condeleeza Rice. They decided to put in Lebanon International Troops...someday. A second Kana bombing, no matter who was responsible, gave Peres another chance to bring back his buddies, the French. Yes, it was decided that French troops would form the majority of the contingent.

And are they balanced:

<http://www.israelnationalnews.com/news.php3?id=108844>

* At the news conference held in Beirut, French Foreign Minister Phillippe Douste-Blazy praised Iran as a "stabilizing force in the Middle East." Douste-Blazy told reporters that Iran "is an outstanding country with great people and an honorable civilization. It has a crucial role in the region."

* This whole awful war was designed to get those Vatican soldiers into Israel and given another few weeks of rocket attacks, barring a nuke on Teheran, Israelis will lift their arms and beg for any troops, anywhere, just to get a night's peace. Even in Jerusalem.

A few nights ago, I was almost back in Israel. A brilliant researcher, who, yes indeed, demands recognition, Kati Cohen, called me and let me have a 90 blast of her research. She began easy; "You were right about Daniel Abraham and this dreadful man Joel running Yeshiva U. They brought in half the Vatican to YU to supposedly discuss anti-semitism with their rabbis. That wasn't the discussion. They wanted "their" land and that meant Jerusalem."

It was 102 degrees in America, the fields were dessicated by the minute and I was back in corrupt Israel. I was home. Abraham almost cost Olmert his "honesty," he writes with a broad smirk, by passing him a couple of spare million dollars, by buying his home for 2.5 times its value in the midst of the election campaign. And that, lesser crime, tied Shimon Peres up with Olmert more than politically. Abraham is a valued member of the milestone to money laundering, the Shimon Peres Peace Center.

And Peres, the Vatican's chief spy along with Yossi Beilin, is now number two in Israel, an apt number if there was one. And all those crooks and murderers who caused the war, Peres, Barak, Beilin, are they strung from the highest oak tree in the land? Of course, not! They go to cabinet meetings and decide how to kill the most Israelis in one day.

Kati goes on, and I'm now taking notes. It's just like being in Modiin.

"Peres promised the pope East Jerusalem in May of 1992 and the Vatican wants to cash in now. But Sharon wasn't playing ball. In July of last year he actually banned diplomacy with the Vatican. So the Vatican tried working around him. In September they invited both Israeli chief rabbis to Rome to threaten the Jews if the holy sites of Jerusalem weren't handed over to them. In November, they hatched the Mount Zion plot, trading a Spanish church for the Last Supper room. President Katsav flew to the Vatican but Sharon still said no.

"Finally they knew Sharon had to go. Enter the apostolic nuncio Pietro Sambi. He plotted with Peres to finish Sharon and possibly supplied the poison Sharon drank in his final meeting with Peres on Dec. 18. On thing is certain, 18 hours before, after 8 1/2 years in Jerusalem, Sambi flew out for a new assignment in Washington.

"Once Olmert and Peres won the election, Peres flew to the Vatican taking with him a letter from Olmert to the pope. No one will say what was in the letter, but you can be sure he promised the pope "his land" and the war drastic enough to give it to him."

Zionists maneuver to seize Temple Mount

Friday, August 04, 2006

<http://wakeupfromyourslumber.blogspot.com/...ize-temple.html>

On the brink of the zionist celebration of Tisha b'Av the zionists are aggressively posturing towards seizing the Temple Mount, on which lies the Al-Aqsa mosque, the third most holy site to Muslims.

Regarding a report of the 'israeli' high court issuing a decree allowing the RADICAL zionist group permission to ascend the Temple Mount this action stands to thrust the Muslim world into an even greater state of outrage.

QUOTE

Police brace for clashes in Jerusalem over shrine visit

Wed Aug 2, 2:53 PM ET

JERUSALEM (AFP) - Israeli Police were bracing for clashes in Jerusalem between Palestinians and Jewish extremists who want to enter Islam's third holiest shrine, the Al-Aqsa mosque compound. On Tuesday, Israel's high court had authorised a request by far-right Jewish activists to enter the compound, which is also revered by Jews as the Temple Mount.

You cannot tell me that this is a 'matter-of-fact' happenstance event. This is a purposeful planned agitation meant to evoke a retaliatory response from the ENTIRE Muslim world as well as the Palestinians.

You might ask yourself, What is Tisha b' Av and what does it have to do with anything?

Tisha b'Av is the day that is celebrated or perhaps mourned as the day in which both the First and Second Temple were destroyed. First by Babylon, then later by Rome it fell on the EXACT same day centuries apart. BOTH times interestingly enough, for their DISOBEDIENCE. Talk about proving history repeats itself.

You can familiarize yourself with the event here.

With such a volatile subject why do you suppose that the media delayed reporting this event?

QUOTE

"We have been blessed with the ability to make this happen. We have been entrusted with the responsibility to see to it that it happens. The days of mourning the destruction of the second Temple have ended. The days of mourning our own lethargy regarding the Third Temple will soon be over. The time has arrived to effect the tikkun - the repair - and to establish the 9th of Av as a day of rejoicing forever. The choice is ours - if only we close ranks, and unite to make it happen."

"Blessed" IS NOT the word that should be used to describe this action. With the help of injecting 'dispensationalism' and the 'rapture' THEORY into the doctrine of 'christianity' it has helped to deflect a CURSE placed upon the disobedient radical element based on the possession of a state and an army as the means by which to OBTAIN salvation. Based on the CURSES the CREATOR places on the disobedient and rebellious in Dueteronomy 27:15-26 the ONLY way to see this as a 'blessing' is to IGNORE THE TRUTH.

QUOTE

Let's have a look at what the Torah says:

15. Whoever has a carved or metal statue [or perhaps maybe a bomb or DU tipped missile would qualify, HEY it might even look something like the one below], anything disgusting to the LORD that was made by a craftsman, and sets it up in secret will be CURSED.

17. Whoever MOVES HIS NEIGHBOR'S BOUNDARIES WILL BE CURSED.

18. Whoever deprives foreigners, orphans, or widows of justice will be CURSED.

There's more - but you get the point. Not much of a 'blessing' when you aren't following the rules. Number 17 & 18 pretty much speaks for themselves.

The ONLY way for zionist 'israel' to achieve this perversion is to annihilate the Muslim population in the Middle East and any subsequent 'opposition' that might arise. Strangely enough that would seem to be the policy that they have in mind not only in the Middle East but in Europe and America as well. By demonizing Islam and its followers an aura of fear and mistrust has been cultivated which will eventually lead to an outcry to 'purge the world' of this 'threat' that they have created.

As long as people continue to listen to the hyped up reports of 'radical Islamists' their 'final solution' remains on schedule. Please tell me the last time the media reported a Muslim lobbyist corrupting American politicians or a Muslim 'public relations organization' (read spy agency) obtaining classified documents on American soil and being set free. Maybe an instance of Muslim influences writing foreign policy beneficial to them.

They have their sights set on rebuilding the Third Temple which the zionist 'christian' element believes will usher in the return of 'christ' to take away the 'faithful', but upon further examination it would seem that they would be hard pressed to 'remove the log from their own eye' or 'fit that camel through the eye of a needle' (especially when it is accompanied by an Abrahms tank and an Apache helicopter).

Someone better tell Hagee, Falwell, and Robertson there's a hole in their boat and she's taking on water.... FAST.

Title: Secret Instructions of the JESUITS

Description:  Now all 17 chapters ***

CRAIG-OXLEY - October 9, 2005 03:03 PM (GMT)

Secret Instructions of the Jesuits

The Secret Instructions were first discovered during the 30 Years' War when the Duke of Brunswick plundered the Jesuit's college at Paderborn in Westphalia and made a present of their library to the Capuchins of the same town. Soon after reprints and translations appeared all over Europe.

The text of the Secret Instructions of the Society of Jesus reproduced here was found beneath the pallet on an adobe bed in a cottage in the Andes Mountains of Peru about a century ago. Students of the Incas recall that prior to the expedition of the National Geographic Magazine under Hiram Gingham, in 1911, archeologists from European countries probed the ruins of this people, one of the greatest civilizations in history.

In 1870 a French archeologist slipped unobtrusively into the office of the Secretary of the Scottish Rite of Freemasonry in San Francisco, California. He had been sent into the remote recesses of the Andes, where Pizarro and his army had conquered the Incas more than three centuries before. He had rented a room in a tiny village. This he used as a base of his operations. To this spot he returned periodically to rest from the dangerously high altitudes and to write his reports for shipment back to France. While he was away, the family frequently rented the same room to overnight guests. One of these happened to be a Jesuit official. On his departure he forgot a little book which he had hidden under the mattress. The French archeologist accidentally found it. It was the Secret Instructions of the Society of Jesus—the top classified manual of procedure for the trusted leaders of the Jesuit Order. It was in Latin and bore the seal, signature and attestation of the General and Secretary of the Order in Rome.

For the next few days the Frenchman labored furiously translating the work in stenographic notes into French. He then replaced the book and left. The Jesuit returned in a few days inquiring nervously about his little black packet. He also wanted to know if anyone had occupied the room since his departure. On learning of the archeologist he began a search so relentless that the Frenchman had to leave Peru. He finally reached San Francisco and entrusted his precious but dangerous burden to Edwin A. Sherman, the Secretary of the Scottish Rite of Freemasonry in California. Mr. Sherman included the Secret Instructions in his book The Engineer Corps of Hell published in 1882. For several years Edwin Sherman was the Masonic Historian of California. He was highly esteemed for his great accuracy and dependability.

CHAPTER I

THE MANNER OF PROCEDURE WITH WHICH THE SOCIETY MUST BE CONDUCTED WHEN CONSIDERING THE COMMENCING OF SOME FOUNDATION.

- 1. To capture the will of the inhabitants of a country, it is very important to manifest the intent of the Society, in the manner prescribed in the regulations in which it is said, that the Society must labor with such ardor and force for the salvation of their neighbor as for themselves. For the better inducement of this idea, the most opportunely that we practice the most humble offices, visiting the poor, the afflicted, and the imprisoned. It is very convenient to confess with much promptness, and to hear the confessions, showing indifference, without teasing the penitents; for this, the most notable inhabitants will admire our fathers and esteem them; for the great charity they have for all, and the novelty of the subject.
- 2. To have in mind that it is necessary to ask with religious modesty, the means for exercising the duties of the Society, and that it is needful to procure and acquire benevolence, principally of the secular ecclesiastics, and of persons of authority, that may be conceived necessary.
- 3. When called to go to the most distant places, where alms are to be received, they are to be accepted, no matter how small they may be, after having marked out the necessities of ourselves. Notwithstanding, it will be very convenient at the moment to give those alms to the poor, for the edification of those who do not have an exact understanding of the Society; and, *but we must in advance be more liberal with ourselves.
- 4. All must labor as if we were inspired by the same spirit; and each one must study to acquire the same styles, with the object of uniformity among so great a number of persons, edifying the whole; those who do the contrary must be expelled as pernicious.
- 5. In a beginning it is not convenient to purchase property; but in case they can be found, some good sites may be bought, saying that they are to belong to other persons, using the names of some faithful friends, who will guard the secret. The better to make our poverty apparent, the property nearest our college must belong to colleges the most distant, that we can prevent the princes and magistrates from ever knowing that the income of the Society has a fixed point.
- 6. We must not ourselves go out to reside to form colleges, except to the rich cities; for in this we must imitate Christ, who remained in Jerusalem; and as he alone, passed by the less considerable populations.

7. We must obtain and acquire of the widows all the money that we can, presenting ourselves at repeated times to their sight our extreme necessity.
 8. The Superior over each province is the one to whom we must account with certainty, the income of the same; but the amount to the treasurer at Rome, it is, and must always be, an impenetrable mystery.
 9. It is for us to preach and say in all parts and in all conversations, that we have come to teach the young and aid the people; and this without interest in any single species and without exception of persons, and that we are not so onerous to the people as other religious orders.

THE MANNER WITH WHICH THE FATHERS OF THE ORDER MUST CONDUCT THEMSELVES TO ACQUIRE AND PRESERVE THE FAMILIARITY OF PRINCES, MAGNATES AND POWERFUL AND RICH PERSONS.

1. It is necessary to do all that is possible to gain completely the attentions and affections of princes and persons of the most consideration; for that, who, being on the outside, but in advance, all of them will be constituted our defenders.
2. As we have learned by experience that princes and potentates are generally inclined to the favor of the ecclesiastics, when these disseminate their odious actions, and when they give an interpretation that they favor, as is to be noted among the married, contract with their relations or allies; or in other similar things; assembling much with them, to animate those who may be found in this case, saying to them that we confide in the assurance of the exemptions, that by intervention of us fathers, which the Pope will concede, if he is made to see the causes, and will present other examples of similar things, exhibiting at the same time the sentiments that we favor, under the pretext of the common good and THE GREATER GLORY OF GOD that is the object of the Society.
3. If at this same assembly the prince treats of doing something, that will not be agreeable to all the great men, for which we are to stir up and investigate, meanwhile, counseling others to conform with the prince, without ever descending to treat of particulars, for fear there may not be a successful issue of the matter, for which the Society will be imputed blame; and for this, if this action shall be disapproved, there will be advertences presented to the contrary that may be absolutely prohibited and put in jeopardy, the authority of some of the fathers, of whom it can be said with certainty, that they have not had notice of the Secret Instructions; for that, it can be affirmed with an oath, that the calumny to the Society, is not true in respect to that which is imputed to it.

4. To gain the good will of Princes, it will be very convenient to insinuate with skill; and for third persons, that we fathers, are a means to discharge honorable and favorable duties in the courts of other kings and princes, and more than any one else in that of the Pope. By this means we can recommend ourselves and the Society; for the same, no one must be charged with this commission but the most zealous persons and well versed in our institute.

5. Aiming especially to bring over the will of the favorites of princes and of their servants, by means of presents and pious offices, that they may give faithful notice to us fathers of the character and inclinations of the princes and great men. Of this manner the Society can gain with facility as much to one as to others.

6. The experience we have had, has made us acquainted with the many advantages that have been taken by the Society of its intervention in the marriages of the House of Austria, and of those which have been effected in other kingdoms, France, Poland, and in various duchies. Forasmuch assembling, proposing with prudence, selecting choice persons who may be friends and families of the relatives, and of the friends of the Society.

7. It will be easy to gain the princesses, making use of their valets; by that, coming to feed and nourish with relations of friendship, by being located at the entrance in all parts, and thus become acquainted with the most intimate secrets of the familiars.

8. In regard to the direction of the consciences of great men, we confessors must follow the writers who concede the greater liberty of conscience. The contrary of this is to appear too religious; for that they will decide to leave others and submit entirely to our direction and counsels.

9. It is necessary to make reference to all the merits of the Society; to the princes and prelates, and to as many as can lend much aid to the Society, after having shown the transcendancy of its great privileges.

10. Also, it will be useful to demonstrate, with prudence and skill, such ample power which the Society has, to absolve, even in the reserved cases, compared with that of other pastors and priests; also, that of dispensing with the fasts, and of the rights which they must ask and pay, in the impediments of marriage, by which means many persons will recur to us, whom it will be our duty to make agreeable.

11. It is not the less useful to invite them to our sermons, assemblies, harangues, declamations, etc., composing odes in their honor, dedicating literary works or conclusions; and if we can for the future, give dinners and greetings of divers modes.

12. It will be very convenient to take to our care the reconciliation of the great, in the quarrels and enmities that divide them; then by this method we can enter, little by little, into the acquaintance of their most intimate friends and secrets; and we can serve ourselves to that party which will be most in favor of that which we present.

13. If there should be some one at the service of a monarch or prince, and he were an enemy of our Society, it is necessary to procure well for ourselves better than for others, making him a friend, employing promises, favors, and advances, which shall be in proportion to the same monarch or prince.

14. No one shall recommend to a prince any one, nor make advances to any who have gone out from us, being outside of our Society, and in particular to those who voluntarily verified, for yet when they dissimulate they will always maintain an inextinguishable hatred to the Society.

In fine, each one must procure and search for methods to increase the affection and favor of princes, of the powerful, and of the magistrates of each population, that whenever occasion is offered to support, we can do much with efficacy and good faith, in benefiting ourselves, though contrary to their relations, allies and friends.

CHAPTER III

HOW THE SOCIETY MUST BE CONDUCTED WITH THE GREAT AUTHORITIES IN THE STATE, AND IN CASE THEY ARE NOT RICH WE MUST LEND OURSELVES TO OTHERS.

1. The care consigned to us, that we must do all that is possible, for to conquer the great; but it is also necessary to gain their favor to combat our enemies.
2. It is very conducive to value their authority, prudence and counsels, and induce them to despise wealth, at the same time that we procure gain and employ those that can redeem the Society; tacitly valuing their names, for acquisition of temporal goods if they inspire sufficient confidence
3. It is also necessary to employ the ascendant of the powerful, to temper the malevolence of the persons of a lower sphere and of the rabble against our Society.

4. It is necessary to utilize, whenever we can, the bishops, prelates and other superior ecclesiastics, according to the diversity of reason, and the inclination we manifest.

5. In some points it will be sufficient to obtain of the prelates and curates, that which it is possible to do, that their subjects respect the society; and that obstructing the exercise of its functions among those who have the greatest power, as in Germany, Poland, etc. It will be necessary to exhibit the most distinguished attentions for that, mediating its authority and that of the princes, monasteries, parishes, priorates, patronates, the foundations of the churches and the pious places, can come to our power. Because we can with more facility where the Catholics will be found mixed with heretics. It is necessary to make such prelates see the utility and merit that we have in all this, and that never will they have so much valuation from the priests, friars, and for the future from the faithful. If making these changes, it is necessary to publicly praise their zeal, although written, and to perpetuate the memory of their actions.

6. For this it is necessary to labor, to the end, that the prelates will place in the hands of us fathers, as confessors and counsellors; and if they aspire to more elevated positions in the Court of Rome, we must unite in their favor and aid their pretensions with all our forces, and by means of our influence.

7. We must be watchful that when the bishops are instituting principal colleges and parochial churches, that the faculties are taken from the Society, and placed in both vicarious establishments, with the charge of cures, and that the Superior of the Society to be, that all the government of these churches shall pertain to us, and that the parishioners shall be our subjects, of the method that all can be placed in them.

8. Where there are those of the academies who have been driven out from us, and are contrary; where the Catholics or the heretics obstruct our installation, we will compound with the prelates, and make ourselves the owners of the first cathedrals; for thus shall we make them to know the necessities of the Society.

9. Over all, we must be very certain to procure the protection and affection of the prelates of the Church, for the cases of beatification or canonization of ourselves; in whose subjects convened further, to obtain letters from the powerful and of the princes, that the decisions may be promptly attained in the Catholic Court.

10. If it shall be accounted that the prelates or magnates should send commissioned representatives, we must put forth all ardor, that no other priests, who are in dispute with us, shall be sent; for the reason, that they shall not communicate their animadversion, discrediting us in the cities and provinces we inhabit; and that if they pass by other provinces and cities, where there are colleges, they will be received with affection and kindness, and be so splendidly treated as a religious modesty will permit.

CHAPTER IV

OF THAT WHICH WE MUST CHARGE THE PREACHERS AND CONFESSORS OF THE GREAT OF THE EARTH.

1. Those of us who may be directed to the princes and illustrious men, of the manner in which we must appear before them, with inclination unitedly to the greater glory of God, obtaining—with its austerity of conscience, that the same princes are persuaded of it; for this direction we must not travel in a principle to the exterior or political government, but gradually and imperceptibly.
2. Forasmuch there will be opportunity and conducive notices at repeated times, that the distribution of honors and dignities in the Republic is an act of justice; and that in a great manner it will be offending God, if the princes do not examine themselves and cease carrying their passions, protesting to the same with frequency and severity, that we do not desire to mix in the administration of the State; but when it shall become necessary to so express ourselves thus, to have your weight to fill the mission that is recommended. Directly that the sovereigns are well convinced of this, it will be very convenient to give an idea of the virtues that may be found to adorn those that are selected for the dignities and principal public changes; procuring then and recommending the true friends of the Society; notwithstanding, we must not make it openly for ourselves, but by means of our friends who have intimacy with the prince that it is not for us to talk him into the disposition of making them.
3. For this watchfulness our friends must instruct the confessors and preachers of the Society near the persons capable of discharging any duty, that over all, they must be generous to the Society; they must also keep their names, that they may insinuate with skill, and upon opportune occasions to princes, well for themselves or by means of others.
4. The preachers and confessors will always present themselves so that they must comport with the princes, lovable and affectionate, without ever shocking them in sermons, nor in particular conversations, presenting that which rejects all fear, and exhorting them in particular to faith, hope and justice.

5. Never receive gifts made to any one in particular, but that for the contrary; but picture the distress in which the Society or college may be found, as all are alike; having to be satisfied with assigning each one a room in the house, modestly furnished; and noticing that your garb is not over nice; and assist with promptness to the aid and counsel of the most miserable persons of the palace; but that you do not say it of them, but only those who have agreed to serve the powerful.

6. Whenever the death occurs of any one employed in the palace, we must take care of speaking with anticipation, that they fail in the nomination of a successor, in their affection for the Society; but giving no appearance to cause suspicion that it was the intent of usurping the government of the prince; for which, it must not be from us that it is said; take a part direct; but assembling of faithful or influential friends who may be found in a position of rousing the hate of one and another until they become inflamed.

CHAPIER V

OF THE MODE OF CONDUCTING THE SOCIETY WITH RESPECT TO OTHER ECCLESIASTICS WHO HAVE THE SAME DUTIES AS OURSELVES IN THE CHURCH.

1. It is necessary to help with valor these persons, and manifest in their due time to the princes and lords that are always ours, and being constituted in power, that our Society contains essentially the perfection of all the other orders, with the exception of singing and manifesting an exterior of austerity in the mode of life and in dress; and that if in some points they excel the communities of the Society, this shines with greater splendor in the Church of God.

2. We must inquire into and note the defects of the other fathers [/i](non-Jesuit priests), and when we find them, we must divulge them among our faithful friends, as [i]condoling over them; we must show that such fathers do not discharge with certainty, that we do ourselves the functions, that some and others recommend.

3. It is necessary that the fathers of our Society oppose with all their power the other fathers who intend to found houses of education to instruct the youths among the populations where ours are found teaching with acceptance and approval; and it will be very convenient to indicate our projects to princes and magistrates, that such people will excite disturbances and commotions if they are not prohibited from teaching; and that in the last result, the damage will fall upon the educated, by being instructed by a bad method, without any necessity; posting them that the Society is sufficient to teach the youth. In case the fathers bear letters of the Pontificate, or recommendations from the Cardinals, we must work in opposition to them, making the princes and great men to point out to the Pope the merits of the Society and its intelligence for the pacific instruction of the youths, to which end, we must have and obtain certifications of the authorities upon our good conduct and sufficiency.

4. Having notwithstanding to form duties, our fathers in displaying singular proofs of our virtue and erudition, making them to exercise the alumni (graduates) in their studies in methods of functions, scholars of diversion, capable of drawing applause, making for supposition, these representations in the presence of the great magistrates and concurrence of other classes.

CHAPTER VI

OF THE MODE OF ATTRACTING RICH WIDOWS.

1. We must elect effective fathers already advanced in years, of lively complexion and conversation, agreeable to visit these ladies, and whence they can promptly note in them appreciation or affection for our Society; making offerings of good works and the merits of the same; that, if they accept them, and succeed in having them frequent our temples, we must assign to them a confessor, who will be able of guiding them in the ways that are proper, in the state of widowhood, making the enumeration and praises of satisfaction that should accompany such a state; making them believe and yet with certainty that they who serve as such, is a merit for eternal life, being efficacious to relieve them from the pains of purgatory.

2. The same confessor will propose to them to make and adorn a little chapel or oratory in their own house, to confirm their religious exercises, because by this method we can shorten the communication, more easily hindering those who visit others; although if they have a particular chaplain, and will content to go to him to celebrate the mass, making opportune advertencies to her who confesses, to the effect and treating her as being left to be overpowered by said Chaplain.

3. We must endeavor skillfully but gently to cause them to change respectively to the Order and to the method of the House, and to conform as the circumstances of the person will permit, to whom they are directed, their propensities, their piety, and yet to the place and situation of the edifice.

4. We must not omit to have removed, little by little, the servants of the house that are not of the same mind with ourselves, proposing that they be replaced by those persons who are dependent on us, or who desire to be of the Society; for by this method we can be placed in the channel of communication of whatever passes in the family.

5. The constant watch of the confessor will have to be, that the widow shall be disposed to depend on him totally, representing that her advances in grace are necessarily bound to this submission.

6. We are to induce her to the frequency of the sacraments, and especially that of penitency, making her to give account of her deeper thoughts and intentions; inviting her to listen to her confessor, when he is to preach particular promising orations; recommending equally the recitation each day of the litanies and the examination of conscience.

7. It will be very necessary in the case of a general confession, to enter extensively into all of her inclinations; for that it will be to determine her, although she may be found in the hands of others.

8. Insist upon the advantages of widowhood, and the inconvenience of marriage; in particular that of a repeated one, and the dangers to which she will be exposed, relatively to her particular businesses into which we are desirous of penetrating.

9. We must cause her to talk of men whom she dislikes, and to see if she takes notice of anyone who is agreeable, and represent to her that he is a man of bad life; procuring by these means disgust of one and another, and repugnant to unite with anyone.

10. When the confessor has become convinced that she has decided to follow the life of widowhood, he must then proceed to counsel her to dedicate herself to a spiritual life, but not to a monastic one, whose lack of accommodations will show how they live; in a word, we must proceed to speak of the spiritual life of Pauline and of Eustace, &c. The confessor will conduct her at last, that having devoted the widow to chastity, to not less than for two or three years, she will then be made to renounce a second nuptial forever.

In this case she will be found to have discarded all sorts of relations with men, and even the diversions between her relatives and acquaintances, we must protest that she must unite more closely to God. With regard to the ecclesiastics who visit her, or to whom she goes out to visit, when we cannot keep her separate and apart from all others, we must labor that those with whom she treats shall be recommended by ourselves or by those who are devoted to us.

11. In this state, we must inspire her to give alms, under the direction, as she will suppose, or her spiritual father; then it is of great importance that they shall be employed with utility; more, being careful that there shall be discretion in counsel, causing her to see that inconsiderate alms are the frequent causes of many sins, or serve to foment at last, that they are not the fruit, nor the merit which produced them.

CHAPTER VII

SYSTEM WHICH MUST BE EMPLOYED WITH WIDOWS AND METHODS OF DISPOSING OF THEIR PROPERTY.

1. It will be necessary to inspire her to continue to persevere in her devotion and the exercise of good works and of disposition, in not permitting a week to pass, to give away some part of her overplus, in honor of Jesus Christ, of the Holy Virgin and of the Saint she has chosen for her patron; giving this to the poor of the Society or for the ornamenting of its churches, until she has absolutely disposed of the first fruits of her property as in other times did the Egyptians.
2. When the widows, the more generally to practice their alms, must be given to know with perseverance, their liberality in favor of the Society; and they are to be assured that they are participants in all the merits of the same, and of the particular indulgences of the Provincial; and if they are persons of much consideration, of the General of the Order.
3. The widows who having made vows of chastity, it will be necessary for them to renew them twice per annum, conforming to the custom that we have established; but permitting them notwithstanding, that day some honest freedom from restraint by our fathers.
4. They must be frequently visited, treating them agreeably; referring them to spiritual and diverting histories, conformable to the character and inclination of each one.
5. But that they may not abate, we must not use too much rigor with them in the confessional; that it may not be, that they by having empowered others of their benevolence, that we do not lose confidence of recovering their adhesion, having to proceed in all cases with great skill and caution, being aware of the inconstancy natural to woman.
6. It is necessary to have them do away with the habit of frequenting other churches, in particular those of convents; for which it is necessary to often remind them, that in our Order there are possessed many indulgences that are to be obtained only partially by all the other religious corporations.

7. To those who may be found in the case of the garb of mourning, they will be counselled to dress a little more agreeable, that they may at the same time, unite the aspect of mourning with that of adornment, to draw them away from the idea of being found directed by a man who has become a stranger to the world. Also with such, that they may not be very much endangered, or particularly exposed to volubility, we can concede to them, as if they maintained their consequence and liberality, for and with the Society, that which drives sensuality away from them, being with moderation and without scandal.

8. We must manage that in the houses of the widows there shall be honorable young ladies, of rich and noble families; that little by little they become accustomed to our direction and mode of life; and that they are given a director elected and established by the confessor of the family, to be permanently and always subject to all the reprehensions and habits of the Society; and if any do not wish to submit to all they must be sent to the houses of their fathers, or to those from which they were brought, accusing them directly of extravagance and of glaring and stained character.

9. The care of the health of the widows, and to proportion some amusement, it is not the least important that we should care for their salvation; and so, if they complain of some indisposition, we must prohibit the fast, the hair cloth girdle, and the discipline, without permitting them to go to church; further continue the direction, cautiously and secretly with such, that they may be examined in their houses; if they are given admission into the garden, and edifice of the college, with secrecy; and if they consent to converse and secretly entertain with those that they prefer.

10. To the end that we may obtain, that the widows employ their utmost obsequiousness to the Society, it is the duty to represent to them the perfection of the life of the holy, who have renounced the world, estranged themselves from their relations, and despising their fortunes, consecrating themselves to the service of the Supreme Being with entire resignation and content. It will be necessary to produce the same effect, that those who turn away to the Constitutions of the Society, and their relative examination to the abandonment of all things. We must cite examples of the widows who have reached holiness in a very short time; giving hopes of their being canonized, if their perseverance does not decay; and promising for their cases our influence with the Holy Father.

11. We must impress in their souls the persuasion that, if they desire to enjoy complete tranquillity of conscience it will be necessary for them to follow without repugnance, without murmuring, nor tiring, the direction of the confessor, so in the spiritual, as in the eternal, that she may be found destined to the same God, by their guidance.

12. Also we must direct with opportunity, that the Lord does not desire that they should give alms, nor yet to fathers of an exemplary life, known and approved, without consulting beforehand with their confessor, and regulating the dictation of the same.

13. The confessors must take the greatest care, that the widows and their daughters of the confessional, do not go to see other fathers (i.e. non-Jesuit priests) under any pretext, nor with them. For this, we must praise our Society as the Order most illustrious of them all; of greater utility in the Church, and of greater authority with the Pope and with the princes; perfection in itself; then dismiss the dream of them, and menace them, that we can, and that we are no correspondents to them, we can say, that we do not consent to froth and do as among other monks who count in their convents many ignorant, stupid loungers who are indolent in regard to the other life, and intriguers in that to disorder, &c.

14. The confessors must propose and persuade the widows to assign ordinary pensions and other annual quotas to the colleges and houses of profession for their sustenance with especially to the professed house at Rome; and not forgetting to remind them of the restoration of the ornaments of the temples and replenishing of the wax, the wine, and other necessaries for the celebration of the mass.

15. If they do not make relinquishment of their property to the Society, it will be made manifest to them, on apparent occasion in particular, when they are found to be sick, or in danger of death; that there are many colleges to be founded; and that they may be excited with sweetness and disinterestedness, to make some disbursements as merit for God, and in that they can found his eternal glory.

16. In the same manner, we must proceed with regard to princes and other well doers, making them to see that such foundations will be made to perpetuate their memory in this world, and gain eternal happiness, and if some malevolent persons adduce the example of Jesus Christ, saying, that then he had no place to recline his head, the Society bearing his name should be poor in imitation of himself, we must make it known and imprint it in the imagination of those, and of all the world, that the Church has varied, and that in this day we have become a State; and we must show authority and grand measures against its enemies that are very powerful, or like that little stone prognosticated by the prophet, that, divided, came to be a great mountain. Inculcate constantly to the widows who dedicate their alms and ornaments to the temples, that the greater perfection is in disposing of the affection and earthly things, ceding their possession to Jesus Christ and his companions.

17. Being very little, that which we must promise to the widows, who dedicate and educate their children for the world, we must apply some remedy to it.

CHAPTER VIII

METHODS BY WHICH THE CHILDREN OF RICH WIDOWS MAY BE CAUSED TO EMBRACE THE RELIGIOUS STATE, OR OF DEVOTION.

- 1. To secure our object, we must create the custom, that the mothers treat them severely, and show to them, that we are in love with them. Coming to induce the mothers to do away with their tastes, from the most tender age, and regarding, restraining, &c., &c., the children especially; prohibiting decorations and adornments when they enter upon competent age; that they are inspired in the vocation for the cloister, promising them an endowment of consideration, if they embrace a similar state; representing to them the insipidity that is brought with matrimony, and the disgust that has been experienced in it; signifying to them the weight they would sit under, for not having maintained in the celibate. Lastly, coming to direct in the conclusions arrived at by the daughters of the widows, so fastidious of living with their mothers, that their feet will be directed to enter into a convent.
- 2. We must make ourselves intimate with the sons of the widows, and if for them an object or the Society, and cause them to penetrate the intent of our colleges, making them to see things that can call their attention by whatever mode, such as gardens, vineyards, country houses, and the farm houses where the masters go to recreate; talk to them of the voyages the Jesuits have made to different countries, of their treating with princes, and of much that can capture Me young; cause them to note the cleanliness of the refectory, the commodiousness of the lodges, the agreeable conversation we have among ourselves, the suavity of our rule, and that we have all for the object of the greater glory of God; show to them the preeminence of our Order over all the others, taking care that the conversations we have shall be diverting to pass to that of piety.
- 3. At proposing to then the religious state, have care of doing so, as if by revelation; and in general, insinuating directly with sagacity, the advantage and sweetness of our institute above all others; and in conversation cause them to understand the great sin that will be committed against the vocation of the Most High; in fine, induce them to make some spiritual exercises that they may be enlightened to the choice of this state.

4. We must do all that is possible that the masters and professors of the youth indicated shall be of the Society, to the end, of being always vigilant over these, and counsel them; but if they cannot be reduced, we must cause them to be deprived of some things, causing that their mothers shall manifest their censure and authority of the house, that they may be tired of that sort of life; and if, finally, we cannot obtain their will to enter the Society, we must labor; because we can remand them to other colleges of ours that are at a distance, that they may study, procuring impediment, that their mothers show endearment and affection, at the same time, continuing for our part, in drawing them to us by suavity of methods.

CHAPTER IX

UPON THE AUGMENTING OF REVENUE IN THE COLLEGES.

1. We must do all that is possible, because we do not know if bound with the last vow of him, who is the claimant of an inheritance, meanwhile we do not know if it is confirmed, to not be had in the Society a younger brother, or of some other reason of much entity. Before all, that which we must procure, are the augmentations of the Society with rules to the ends agreed upon by the superiors, which must be conformable: for that the Church returns to its primitive splendor for the greater glory of God; of fate that all the clergy shall be found animated by a united spirit. To this end, we must publish by all methods, that the Society is composed in part of professors so poor, that are wanting of the most indispensable, to not be for the beneficence of the faithful; and that another part is of fathers also poor, although living upon the product of some household property; but not to be grievous to the public, in the midst of their studies, their ministry, as are other ordinary mendicants. The spiritual directors of princes, great men, accommodating widows, and of whom we have abundant hope, that they will be disposed at last to make gifts to the Society in exchange for spiritual and eternal things, that will be proportioned, the lands and temporalities which they possess; for the same, carrying always the idea, that we are not to lose the occasion of receiving always as much as may be offered. If promises and the fulfillment of them is retarded, they are to be remembered with precaution, dissimulating as much as we can the coveting of riches. When some confessor of personages or other people, will not be apt, or wants subtilty, that in these subjects is indispensable, he will be retired with opportunity, although others may be placed anticipatedly; and if it be entirely necessary to the penitents, it will be made necessary to take out the destitute to distant colleges, representing that the Society has need for them there; because it being known that some young widows, having unexpectedly failed, the Society not having the legacy of very

- precious movables, having been careless by not accepting in due time. But to receive these things, we could not attend at the time, and only at the good will of the penitent.
2. To attract the prelates, canonicals and other rich ecclesiastics, it is necessary to employ certain arts, and in place procuring them to practice in our houses spiritual exercises, and gradually and energetically of the affection that we profess to divine things; so that they will be affectioned towards the Society and that they will soon offer pledges of their adhesion.
 3. The confessors must not forget to ask with the greatest caution and on adequate occasions of those who confess, what are their names, families, relatives, friends, and properties, informing their successors who follow them, the state, intention in which they will be found, and the resolution which they have taken; that which they have not yet determined obtaining, having to form a plan for the future to the Society. When it is founded, whence directly there are hopes of utility; for it will not be convenient to ask all at once; they will be counseled to make their confession each week, to disembarass the conscience much before, or to the title of penitence. They will be caused to inform the confessor with repetition, of that which at one time they have not given sufficient light; and if they have been successful by this means, she will come, being a woman, to make confession with frequency, and visit our church; and being a man, he will be invited to our houses and we are to make him familiar with ourselves.
 4. That which is said in regard to widows, must have equal application to the merchants and neighbors of all classes, as being rich and married, but without children, of that plan by which the Society can arrive to be their heirs, if we put in play the measures that we may indicate; but over all, it will be well to have present, as said, near the rich devotees that treat with us, and of whom the vulgar can murmur, when more, if they are of a class not very elevated.
 5. Procuring for the rectors of the colleges entrance for all the ways of the houses, parks, groves, forests, lawns, arable lands, vineyards, olive orchards, hunting grounds, and whatever species of inheritances which they meet with in the end of their rectory; if their owners pertain to the nobility, to the clergy, or are negotiators, particulars, or religious communities, inquiring the revenues of each one, their loads and what they pay for them. All these dates or notices they are to seek for with great skill and to a fixed point, energetically yet from the confessional, then of the relations of friendship, or of the accidental conversations; and the confessor meets with a penitent of possibilities, he will be placed in knowledge of the rector, obtaining by all methods the one conserved.
 6. The essential point to build upon, is the following: that we must so manage, that in the ends we gain the will and affections of our penitents, and other persons with whom we treat, accommodating ourselves to their inclinations if they are conducive. The Provincials will take care to direct some of us to points, in which reside the nobility and the powerful; and if the Provincials do not act with opportunity, the rectors must notice with anticipation, the crops (the field of operations) that are there, which we go to examine.

7. When we receive the sons of strong houses in the Society, they must show whether they will be easy to acquire the contracts and titles of possession; and if so they were to enter of themselves, of which they may be caused to cede some of their property to the college, or the usufruct (profit) or for rent, or in other form, or if they can come for a time into the Society, the gain of which may be very much of an object, to give a special understanding to the great and powerful, the narrowness in which we live, and the debts that are pressing us.8. When the widows, or our married devoted women, do not have more than daughters, we must persuade them to the same life of devotion, or to that of the cloister; but that except the endowment that they may give, they can enter their property in the Society gently; but when they have husbands, those that would object to the Society, they will be catechized; and others who desire to enter as religiouses in other Orders, with the promise of some reduced amount. When there may be an only son, he must be attracted at all cost, inculcating the vocation as made by Jesus Christ; causing him to be entirely disembarassed from the fear of its fathers, and persuading him to make a sacrifice very acceptable to the Almighty, that he must withdraw to His authority, abandon the paternal house and enter in the Society; the which, if he so succeeds, after having given part to the General, he will be sent to a distant novitiate; but if they have daughters, they will primarily dispose the daughters for a religious life; and they will be caused to enter into some monastery, and afterwards be received as daughters in the Society, with the succession of its properties.

9. The Superiors will place in the channel of the circumstances, the confessors of these widows and married people, that they on all future occasions may act for the benefit of the Society; and when by means of one, they cannot take our part he will be replaced with another; and if it is made necessary, he will be sent to great distances, of a manner that he cannot follow understandingly with these families.

10. If we succeed in convincing the widows and devoted persons, who aspire with fervor to a perfect life, and that the better means to obtain it is by ceding ad their properties to the Society, supporting by their revenues, that they will be religiously administered until their death, conforming to the degree of necessity in which they may be found, and the just reason that may be employed for their persuasion is, that by this mode, they can be exclusively dedicated to God; without attentions and molestations, which would perplex them, and that it is the only road to reach the highest degree of perfection.

11. The Superiors craving the confidence of the rich, who are attached to the Society, delivering receipts of its proper hand writing whose payment afterwards will differ; not forgetting to often visit those who loan, to exhort them above all in their infinities of consideration, as to whom will devolve the papers of the debt; because it is not so to be found mention of the Society in their testament; and by this course we must acquire properties, without giving cause for us to be hated by the heirs.

12. We must also in a grand manner ask for a loan, with payment of annual interest, and employ the same capital in other speculation to produce greater revenues to the Society; for at such a time, succeeding to move them with compassion to that which they will lend to us, we will not lose the interest in the testament of donation, when they see that they found colleges and churches.

13. The Society can report the utilities of commerce, and value the name of the merchant of credit, whose friendship we may possess.

14. Among the peoples where our fathers reside, we must have physicians faithful to the Society, whom we can especially recommend to the sick, and to paint under an aspect very superior to that of other religious orders, and secure direction that we shall be called to assist the powerful, particularly in the hour of death.

15. That the confessors shall visit with assiduity the sick, particularly those who are in danger, and to honestly eliminate the other fathers, which the superiors will procure, when the confessor sees that he is obliged to remove the other from the suffering, to replace and maintain the sick in his good intentions. Meanwhile we must inculcate as much as we can with prudence, the fear of hell, &c., &c., or when, the lesser ones of purgatory; demonstrating that as water will put out fire, so will the same alms blot out the sin; and that we cannot employ the alms better, than in the maintaining and subsiding of the persons, who, by their vocation, have made profession of caring for the salvation of their neighbor; that in this manner the sick can be made to participate in their merits, and find satisfaction for their own sins; placing before them that charity covereth a multitude of sins; and that also, we can describe that charity, is as a nuptial vestment, without which, no one can be admitted to the heavenly table. In fine it will be necessary to move them to the citations of the scriptures, and of the holy fathers, that according to the capacity of the sick, we can judge what is most efficacious to move them.

16. We must teach the women, that they must complain of the vices of their husbands, and the disturbances which they occasion, that they can rob them in secret of some amounts of money, to offer to God, in expiation of the sins of their husbands, and to obtain their pardon.

CHAPTER X

OF THE PARTICULAR RIGOR OF DISCIPLINE IN THE SOCIETY.

1. If there shall be anyone dismissed under any protest, as an enemy of the Society, whatever may be his condition, or age; all those who have been moved to become the devotees of our churches; or of visiting ourselves; or who having been made to take the alms on the way to other churches; or who having been found to give to other fathers; or who having dissuaded any rich man, and well intentioned towards our Society, or giving anything; or in the time in which he can dispose of his properties, having shown great affection for his relations with this Society; because it is a great proof of a mortified disposition; and we conclude that the professions are entirely mortified; or also, that he having scattered all the alms of the penitents, or of the friends of the Society, in favor of his poor relations. Furthermore, that he may not complain afterwards of the cause of his expulsion, it will be necessary to thrust him from us directly; but we can prohibit him from hearing confessions, which will mortify him, and vex him by imposing upon him most vile offices, obliging him each day to do things that are the most repugnant; he will be removed from the highest studies and honorable employments; he will be reprimanded in the chapters by public censures; he will be excluded from the recreations and prohibited from all conversation with strangers; he will be deprived of his vestments and the uses of other things when they are not indispensable, until he begins to murmur and becomes impatient; then he can be expelled as a shameful person, to give a bad example to others; and if it is necessary to give account to his relatives, or to the prelates of the Church, of the reason for which he has been thrust out, it will be sufficient to say that he does not possess the spirit of the Society.

2. Furthermore, having also expelled all those who may have scrupled to acquire properties for the Society, we must direct, that they are too much addicted to their own judgment. If we desire to give reason of their conduct to the Provincials, it is necessary not to give them a hearing; but call for the rule, that they are obligated to a blind obedience.

3. It will be necessary to note, whence the beginning and whence their youth, those who have great affection for the Society; and those which we recognize their affection until the furthest orders, or until their relatives, or until the poor shall be necessarily disposed, little by little, as carefully said, to go out; then they are useless.

CHEAPER XI

HOW WE MUST CONDUCT OURSELVES UNITEDLY AGAINST THOSE WHO HAVE BEEN EXPELLED FROM THE SOCIETY.

1. As those whom we have expelled, when knowing little or something of the secrets, the most times are noxious to the Society for the same, it shall be necessary to obviate their efforts by the following method, before thrusting them out; it will be necessary to obligate them to promise, by writing, and under oath, that they will never by writing or speaking, do anything which may be prejudicial to the Society; and it will be good that the Superiors guard a point of their evil inclinations, of their defects and of their vices; that they are the same, having to manifest in the discharge of their duties, following the custom of the Society, for that, if it should be necessary, this point can serve near the great, and the prelates to hinder their advancement.
2. Constant notice must be given to all the colleges of their having been expelled; and we must exaggerate the general motives of their expulsion; as the little mortification of their spirit; their disobedience; their little love for spiritual exercises; their self love, &c., &c. Afterwards, we must admonish them, that they must not have any correspondence with them; and they must speak of them as strangers; that the language of all shall be uniform, and that it may be told everywhere, that the Society never expels any one without very grave causes, and that as the sea casts up dead bodies, &c., &c. We must insinuate with caution, similar reasons to these, causing them to be abhorred by the people, that for their expulsion it may appear plausible.
3. In the domestic exhortations, it will be necessary to persuade people that they have been turned out as unquiet persons; that they continue to beg each moment to enter anew into the Society; and it will be good to exaggerate the misfortunes of those who have perished miserably, after having separated from the Society.
4. It will also be opportune to send forth the accusations, that they have gone out from the Society, which we can formulate by means of grave persons, who will everywhere repeat that the Society never expels any one but for grave causes; and that they never part with their healthy members; the which they can confirm by their zeal, and show in general for the salvation of the souls of them that do not pertain to them; and how much greater will it not be for the salvation of their own.
5. Afterwards, the Society must prepare and attract by all classes of benefits, the magnates, or prelates, with whom those who have been expelled begin to enjoy some authority and credit. It will be necessary to show that the common good of an Order so celebrated as useful in the Church, must be of more consideration, than that if a particular one who has been cast out. If all this affliction preserves some affection for those expelled, it will be good to indicate the reasons which have caused their expulsion; and yet exaggerate the causes the more that they were not very true; with such they can draw their conclusions as to the probable consequences.

6. Of all modes, it will be necessary that they particularly have abandoned the Society by their own free will; not being promoted to a single employment or dignity in the Church; that they would not submit themselves and much that pertains to the Society; and that all the world should withdraw from them that desire to depend on them.

7. Procuring soon, that they are removed from the exercise of the functions celebrated in the Church, such as the sermons, confessions, publication of books, &c., &c., so that they do not win the love and applause of the people. For this, we must come to inquire diligently upon their life and their habits; upon their occupations, &c., &c., penetrate into their intentions, for the which, we must have particular correspondence with some of the family in whose house they live, of those who have been expelled. In surprising something reprehensible in them or worthy of censure, which is to be divulged by people of medium quality; giving in following the steps conducive to reach the hearing of the great, and the prelates, who favor them, that they may be caused to fear that the infamy will relapse upon themselves. If they do nothing that merits reprehension, and conduct themselves well, we must curtail them by subtle propositions and captious phrases, their virtues and meritorious actions, causing that the idea that has been formed of them, and the faith that is had in them, may little by little be made to disappear; this is of great interest for the Society, that those whom we repel, and more principally those who by their own will abandon us, shall be sunk in obscurity and oblivion.

8. We must divulge without ceasing the disgraces and sinister accidents that they bring upon them, notwithstanding the faithful, who entreat for them in their prayers, that they may not believe that we work from impulses of passion. In our houses we must exaggerate by every method these calamities, that they may serve to hinder others.

CHAPTER XII

WHO MAY COME THAT THEY MAY BE SUSTAINED AND PRESERVED IN THE SOCIETY.

- 1. The first place in the Society pertains to the good operators; that is to say, those who cannot procure less for the temporal than for the spiritual good of the Society; such as the confessors of princes, of the powerful, of the widows, of the rich pious women, the preachers and the professors who know all these secrets.
- 2. Those who have already failed in strength or advanced in years; conforming to the use they have made of their talents in and for the temporal good of the Society; of the manner which has attended them in days that are passed; and further, are yet convenient instruments to give part to the Superiors of the ordinary defects which are to be noted in ourselves, for they are always in the house.
- 3. We must never expel but in case of extreme necessity, for fear of the Society acquiring a bad reputation.
- 4. Furthermore, it will be necessary to favor those who excel by their talent, their nobleness and their fortune; particularly if they have powerful friends attached to the Society; and if they themselves have for it a sincere appreciation, as we have already said before. They must be sent to Rome, or to the universities of greater reputation to study there; or in case of having studied in some province, it will be very convenient that the professors attend to them with special care and affection. Meanwhile, not having conveyed their property to the Society, we must not refuse them anything; for after confirming the cession, they will be disappointed as the others, notwithstanding guarding some consideration for the past.
- 5. Having also especial consideration on the part of the Superiors, for those that have brought to the Society, a young notable, placed so that they are given to know the affection made to it; but if they have not professed, it is necessary to take care of not having too much indulgence with them, for fear that they may return at another time, to carry away those whom they have brought to the Society.

CHAPTER XIII

OF THE YOUTH WHO MAY BE ELECTED TO BE ADMITTED INTO THE SOCIETY, AND OF THE MODE OF RETAINING THEM.

- 1. It is necessary that much prudence shall be exercised, respecting the election of the Youth; having to be sprightly, noble, well liked, or at the least excellent in some of these qualities.

2. To attract them with greater facility to our institute, it is necessary in the meanwhile, to study that the rectors and professors of colleges shall exhibit an especial affection; and outside the time of the classes, to make them comprehend how great is God, and that some one should consecrate to his service all that he possesses; and particularly if he is in the Society of his Son.

3. Whenever the opportunity may arrive, conducive in the college and in the garden, and yet at times to the country houses, that in the company of ourselves, during the recreations, that we may familiarize with them, little by little, being careful, notwithstanding, that the familiarity does not engender disgust.

4. We cannot consent that we shall punish them, nor oblige them to assemble at their tasks among those who are the most educated.

5. We must congratulate them with gifts and privileges conforming to their age and encouraging above all others with moral discourses.

6. We must inculcate them, that it is for one divine disposition, that they are favorites among so many who frequent the same college.

7. On other occasions, especially in the exhortations, we must aim to terrify them with menaces of the eternal condemnation, if they refuse the divine vocation.

8. Meanwhile frequently expressing the anxiety to enter the Society, we must always defer their admission, that they may remain constant; but if for these, they are undecided, then we must encourage them incessantly by other methods.

9. If we admonish effectively, that none of their friends, nor yet the fathers, nor the mothers discover their vocation before being admitted; because then, if then, they come to the temptation of withdrawing; so many as the Society desires to give full liberty of doing that which may be the most convenient; and in case of succeeding to conquer the temptation, we must never lose occasions to make them recover spirit; remembering that which we have said, always that this will succeed during the time of the novitiate, or after having made their simple vows.

10. With respect to the sons of the great, nobles, and senators, as it is supremely difficult to attract them, meanwhile living with their fathers, who are having them educated to the end, that they may succeed in their destinies, we must persuade, vigorously, of the better influences of friends that are persons of the same Society; that they are ordered to other provinces, or to distant universities in which there are our teachers; careful to remit to the respective professors the necessary instructions, appropriate to their quality and condition, that they may gain their friendship for the Society with greater facility and certainty.

11. When having arrived at a more advanced age, they will be induced to practice some spiritual exercises, that they may have so good an exit in Germany and Poland.

12. We must console them in their sadness and afflictions, according to the quality and dispositions of each one, making use of private reprimands and exhortations appropriate to the bad use of riches; inculcating upon them that they should depreciate the felicity of a vocation, menacing them with the pains of hell for the things they do.

CHAPTER XIV

UPON RESERVED CASES AND MOTIVES THAT NECESSITATE EXPULSION FROM SOCIETY.

1. To most of the cases expressed in the Constitutions, and of which only the Superior or the ordinary confessor, with permission of this, can absolve them, where there is sodomy, unseats crime, fornication, adultery, of the unchaste touch of a man, or of a woman; also if under the pretext of zeal, or whatever motive, they have done some grave thing against the Society; against its honors and its gains; these will be just causes for reason of the expulsion of the guilty.

2. If anyone confesses in the confessional of having committed some similar act, he will not be promised absolution, until he has promised to reveal to the Superior, outside of the confessional, the same or by his confessor. The Superior will operate the better for it, in the general interests of the Society; further, if there is founded hope of the careful hiding of the crime, it will be necessary to impose upon the guilty a convenient punishment; if otherwise he can be expelled much before. With all the care that is possible, the confessor will give the penitent to understand that he runs the danger of being expelled.

3. If any one of our confessors, having heard a strange person say, that he had committed a shameful thing with one of the Society, he will not absolve such a person, without his having said, outside of his confession, the name of the one with whom he has sinned; and if he so says, he will be made to swear that he will not divulge the same, without the consent of the Society.

4. If two of ourselves have sinned carnally, he who first avows it will be retained in the Society; and the other will be expelled; but he who remains permanent, will be after such mortification and bad treatment, of sorrow, and by his impatience, and if we have occasion for his expulsion, it will be necessary for the future of it that it be done directly.

5. The Society being a noble corporation and preeminent in the Church, it can dismiss those that will not be apt for the execution of our object, although giving satisfaction in the beginning; and the opportunity does not delay in presenting itself; if it procures continuous maltreatment; and if he is obliged to do contrary to his inclination; if they are gathered under the orders of gloomy Superiors; if he is separated from his studies and from the honorable functions, &c., &c., until he gets to murmuring.

6. In no manner must we retain in the Society, those that openly reveal against their Superiors, or that will complain publicly, or reservedly, of their companions, or particularly if they make them to strangers; nor to those who are among ourselves, or among persons who are on the outside, censure the conduct of the Society in regard to the acquisition or administration of temporal properties, or whatever acts of the same; for example, of crushing or oppressing many of those whom we do not wish well, or that they the same having been expelled, &c., &c. Nor yet those, that in conversation, who tolerate, or defend the Venetians, the French and others, that have driven the Society away from the territories, or that have occasioned great prejudices.

7. Before the expulsion of any we must vex and harass them in the extreme; depriving them of the functions that they have been accustomed to discharge, dedicating them to others. Although they may do well, it will be necessary to censure them, and with this pretext, apply them to another thing. Imposing by a trifling fault that they have committed the most severe penalties, that they blush in public, until they have lost all patience; and at last will be expelled as pernicious to all, for which a future opportunity will present itself when they will think less.

8. When some one of the Society has a certain hope of obtaining a bishopric, or whatever other ecclesiastical dignity, to most of the ordinary vows of the Society he will be obliged to take another; and that is, that he will always preserve good sentiments towards the Society; that he will always speak favorably of it; that he will not have a confessor that will not be to its bosom; that he will do nothing of entity without having heard the justice of the same. Because in consequence of not having observed this, the Cardinal Tolet the Society had obtained of the Holy See, that no swinish descendants of Jews or Mahometans were admitted, that he did not desire to take such vows; and that for celebrity that is out, he was expelled as a firm enemy of the Society.

CHAPTER XV

HOW THE SOCIETY MUST BE CONDUCTED WITH THE MONKS AND NUNS.

1. The confessors and preachers must guard well against offending the nuns and occasioning temptations contrary to their vocation; but on the contrary, having conciliated the love of the Lady Superiors, that we obtain to hear, when less, their extraordinary confessions, and that it is predicted that we may hope soon to receive some gratitude from them; because the abbesses, principally the rich and noble, can be of much utility to the Society, by themselves, and by their relatives and friends; of the manner with which we treat with them and influence of the principal monasteries, the Society will little by little arrive to obtain the knowledge of an the corporation and increase its friendship.

2. It will be necessary, notwithstanding, to prohibit our nuns from frequenting the monasteries of women, for fear that their mode of life may be more agreeable, and that the Society will see itself frustrated in the hopes of possessing all their properties. We must induce them to take the vow of chastity and obedience, at the hands of their confessors; and to show them that this mode of life will conform with the uses of the Primitive Church, placed as a light to shine in the house, and that it cannot be hidden under a measure, without the edification of their neighbor, and without fruit for the souls; furthermore, that in imitation of the widows of the Gospel, doing well by giving themselves to Jesus Christ and to his Society. If they were to know how evil it can possibly be, of the life of the cloisters; but these instructions must be given under the seal of inviolable secrecy that they do not come to the ears of the monks.

CHAPTER XVI

HOW WE MUST MAKE PROFESSION OF DESPISING RICHES.*

1. With the end of preventing the seculars from directing attention to our itching for riches, it will be useful to repel at times alms of little amount, by which we can allow them to do services for our Society; though we must accept the smallest amounts from people attached to us, for fear that we may be accused of avarice, if we only receive those that are most numerous.

2. We must refuse sepulture to persons of the lowest class in our churches, though they may have been very attached to our Society; for we do not believe that we must seek riches by the number of interments, and we must hold firmly the gains that we have made with the dead.

3. In regard to the widows and other persons who have left their properties to the Society, we must labor with resolution and greater vigor than with the others; things being equal, and not to be made apparent, that we favor some more than others, in consideration of their temporal properties. The same must be observed with those that pertain to the Society, after that they have made cession of their property; and if it be necessary to expel them from the Society, it must be done with discretion, to the end that they leave to the Society a part for the less of that which they have given, or that which they have bequeathed at the time of their death.

* "How we must pretend to despise wealth."

CHAPTER XVII

METHODS TO EXALT THE COMPANY

1. Treating principally all, though in things of little consequence, we must have the same opinion, or at least exterior dignity; for by this manner we may augment and strengthen the Society more and more; to overthrow the barrier we have overcome in the business of the world.

2. Thus strengthening all, it will shine by its wisdom and good example, that we shall excel all the other fathers, and particularly the pastors, &c., &c., until the people desire us to all. Publicly divulging that the pastors do not need to possess so much knowledge; with such they can discharge well their duties, stating that they can assist them with the counsels of the Society; that for this motive they can dedicate themselves to all classes of studies.

3. We must inculcate this doctrine with kings and princes, THAT THE CATHOLIC FAITH CANNOT SUBSIST IN THE PRESENT STATE, WITHOUT POLITICS; but that in this, it is necessary to proceed with much certainty. Of this mode, we must share the affection of the great, and BE ADMITTED TO THE MOST SECRET COUNSELS.

4. We must entertain their good will, by writing from all parts interesting facts and notices.

5. It will be no little advantage that will result, by secretly and prudently fomenting dissensions between the great, ruining or augmenting their power. But if we perceive some appearance of reconciliation between them, then we of the Society will treat and act as pacificators; that it shall not be that any others shall anticipate to obtain it.

6. As much to the magnates as to the people, we must persuade them by all possible means, that the Society has not been, but by especial Divine Providence, conforming to the prophecies of the Abbot Joachim, for to return and raise up the Church, humbled by the heretics.

7. Having acquired the favor of the great and of the bishops, it will be an entire necessity, of empowering the curates and prebendaries to more exactly reform the clergy, that in other times lived under certain rule with the bishops, and tending to perfection; also it will be necessary to inspire the abbeys and prelaties; the which it will not be difficult to obtain; calling attention to the indolence and stupidity of the monks as if they were cattle; because it will be very advantageous for the Church, if all the bishoprics were occupied by members of the Society; and yet, as if it was the same apostolic chair, particularly if the Pope should return as temporal prince of all the properties; for as much as it is very necessary to extend little by little, with much secrecy and skill, the temporalities of the Society; and not having any doubt that the world will enter the golden age,¹ to enjoy a perfect universal peace, for following the divine benediction that will descend upon the Church.

8. But if we do not hope that we can obtain this, supposing that it is necessary that scandals shall come in the world, WE MUST BE CAREFUL TO CHANGE OUR POLITICS, CONFORMING TO THE TIMES, AND EXCITE THE PRINCES, FRIENDS OF OURS TO mutually make terrible wars THAT EVERYWHERE THE MEDIATION OF THE SOCIETY WILL BE IMPLORED; that we may be employed in the public reconciliation, for it will be the cause of the common good and we shall be recompensed by the PRINCIPAL ECCLESIASTICAL DIGNITIES; and the BETTER BENEFICIARIES.

9. In fine, that the Society afterwards can yet count upon the favor and authority of the princes, procuring THAT THOSE WHO DO NOT LOVE US SHALL FEAR US.

Editor's Note

1. The ultimate goal of the Jesuits is to bring in a golden age or millennium with the entire world under the Pope. They are behind all those Utopian schemes, whether it is Hitler's Third Reich or the Communists' workers paradise. The Bible says that the golden age began with the First Coming of Christ and will end with His Second Coming. This is the ONLY age that men and women can become children of God by faith alone in Jesus Christ! When Christ returns it will be the end of time and the end of this present universe. . . .Thank God this Jesuit golden age will be very short lived.

The Two Babylons

or The Papal Worship Proved to be the Worship of Nimrod and His Wife
By the Late Rev. Alexander Hislop

First published as a pamphlet in 1853--greatly expanded in 1858

I've always been wondering how historically accurate this book is.

Alexandra - August 10, 2006 11:19 PM (GMT)

I'd say pretty accurate--I have a copy that I got from Chick Publications.

It basically runs down what the Catholic church believes and all their stupid little rituals, and Hislop gives their origin. It was written in the mid-19th century and some people may find the reading a bit difficult (thanks to mass dumbing-down), but I had no problem once I slowed down and didn't try to speed-read through it.

Terminus_Est - August 11, 2006 12:13 AM (GMT)

Well I can't deny that most if not all pagan religions likely share a common origin, and that yes Catholicism's borrowed alot from them. I've read parts of The Two Babylons and I've also read parts of the forgotten Book of Jasher, which contains a more detailed story of the life of Nimrod than what is told in Genesis. From what I've read so far, there are things from the Two Babylons that seem to contradict what is said about Nimrod in Jasher. BTW, the Book of Jasher seems pretty consistent with the Bible. Have you read Jasher, Alex?

tlthe5th - August 11, 2006 12:17 AM (GMT)

I've read it. Can you tell what exactly contradicts so i can look it over? Thanks in advance....

Alexandra - August 11, 2006 01:03 AM (GMT)

I've seen a reference to the book of Jasher in the book of Joshua. I'd been wondering about that.

I just found it online. I have to say It edified me greatly.

Alexandra - August 11, 2006 02:28 AM (GMT)

Jasher is not a Biblical book, is it? I know the Bible has 66 books (not 72 or more as the Roman church claims).

I'm going to read it...looks interesting.

Terminus_Est - August 11, 2006 05:51 AM (GMT)

Here's Chapter 27 of Jasher that tells about how Nimrod met his end.

QUOTE

1 And Esau at that time, after the death of Abraham, frequently went in the field to hunt.

2 And Nimrod king of Babel, the same was Amraphel, also frequently went with his mighty men to hunt in the field, and to walk about with his men in the cool of the day.

3 And Nimrod was observing Esau all the days, for a jealousy was formed in the heart of Nimrod against Esau all the days.

4 And on a certain day Esau went in the field to hunt, and he found Nimrod walking in the wilderness with his two men.

5 And all his mighty men and his people were with him in the wilderness, but they removed at a distance from him, and they went from him in different directions to hunt, and Esau concealed himself for Nimrod, and he lurked for him in the wilderness.

6 And Nimrod and his men that were with him did not know him, and Nimrod and his men frequently walked about in the field at the cool of the day, and to know where his men were hunting in the field.

7 And Nimrod and two of his men that were with him came to the place where they were, when Esau started suddenly from his lurking place, and drew his sword, and hastened and ran to Nimrod and cut off his head.

8 And Esau fought a desperate fight with the two men that were with Nimrod, and when they called out to him, Esau turned to them and smote them to death with his sword.

9 And all the mighty men of Nimrod, who had left him to go to the wilderness, heard the cry at a distance, and they knew the voices of those two men, and they ran to know the cause of it, when they found their king and the two men that were with him lying dead in the wilderness.

10 And when Esau saw the mighty men of Nimrod coming at a distance, he fled, and thereby escaped; and Esau took the valuable garments of Nimrod, which Nimrod's father had bequeathed to Nimrod, and with which Nimrod prevailed over the whole land, and he ran and concealed them in his house.

11 And Esau took those garments and ran into the city on account of Nimrod's men, and he came unto his father's house wearied and exhausted from fight, and he was ready to die through grief when he approached his brother Jacob and sat before him.

12 And he said unto his brother Jacob, Behold I shall die this day, and wherefore then do I want the birthright? And Jacob acted wisely with Esau in this matter, and Esau sold his birthright to Jacob, for it was so brought about by the Lord.

13 And Esau's portion in the cave of the field of Machpelah, which Abraham had bought from the children of Heth for the possession of a burial ground, Esau also sold to Jacob, and Jacob bought all this from his brother Esau for value given.

14 And Jacob wrote the whole of this in a book, and he testified the same with witnesses, and he sealed it, and the book remained in the hands of Jacob.

15 And when Nimrod the son of Cush died, his men lifted him up and brought him in consternation, and buried him in his city, and all the days that Nimrod lived were two hundred and fifteen years and he died.

16 And the days that Nimrod reigned upon the people of the land were one hundred and eighty-five years; and Nimrod died by the sword of Esau in shame and contempt, and the seed of Abraham caused his death as he had seen in his dream.

17 And at the death of Nimrod his kingdom became divided into many divisions, and all those parts that Nimrod reigned over were restored to the respective kings of the land, who recovered them after the death of Nimrod, and all the people of the house of Nimrod were for a long time enslaved to all the other kings of the land.

Contrary to this, didn't Hislop say that he was killed by Shem and had his body cut into pieces to be sent throughout the world?

watchman - April 29, 2007 09:44 AM (GMT)

I'll admit, this was a very interesting and well written book. Though I didn't find it any more "definitive" than 'Secret Teachings of All Ages" by Hall. I'm not an expert by any means, but even a passing understanding of the information reveals that there are many omissions and diversions in both works...

And yet again, he was a Protestant minister...

The Jesuits (society of Jesus) have totally taken over just about every facet of America. From all religions to all secret societies, all government agencies, intelligence agencies in America and all over the world. Here an ex-jesuit priest Alberto Rivera (murdered by the Vatican in 1997 by poisoning) tells of why and how the Jesuits are doing this. We can see the evidence of this by the attacks on our civil liberties and the U.S. Constitution. It's time to wake up.

Share this video and and post it anywhere you can.

Alexandra - September 22, 2006 02:05 AM (GMT)

I constantly have a problem with watching video on the Internet. It sounds like someone's hitting PAUSE on me every couple of seconds...doesn't matter what I'm watching.

I'm basically using a cobbled-together system...an old notebook computer.

Anyone help me out here...like, how can I fix it? It's just plain annoying!

(Hoping to get a new system after the first of the year...provided this world hasn't gone straight to hell yet.)

tlthe5th - September 22, 2006 02:22 AM (GMT)

I will eventually be putting all these online in just plain audio format. I haven't found a good place to do that yet but I will because I have a bunch of very rare audios on the Jesuits. Finding time to do everything I want to do is the only problem. I will get on this as soon as possible and post when they're uploaded somewhere for listening.

tlthe5th - September 23, 2006 05:54 AM (GMT)

ok, i broke into two audio parts. these are the url's. you should be able to just click on them and they'll start playing.

I think you can easily save these to disk to play on any player or burn to a cd also by right clicking the link and selecting, 'save link as' or 'save file as' and then choose where you want to save it to. I'm working on two more now. also I'm working on putting the 13 books that come with vatican assassins online as well.

How big is the video file? My second-hand laptop doesn't have a CD-writer and I don't know if I have enough hard drive space. Maybe I could watch it on my husband's computer...he has a bit of an interest in this kind of thing, and in fact I'm the one who tells him what's going on, since he works.

I should check out those mp3 files....

tlthe5th - September 23, 2006 04:53 PM (GMT)

what happened when you clicked on the links? just try left clicking them then.

tlthe5th - September 23, 2006 05:12 PM (GMT)

please let me know if there's any problem with listening to these files. If there is I will use another service. thank you, thomas Important new interview! Greg Szymanski interviews a former Bishop, Gerard Bouffard, who claims the Jesuit Order controls the Vatican who together comprise the real spiritual controllers of the NWO/Illuminati. Bishop Bouffard verified the validity of the late Dr. Alberto Rivera, Ex 4th Vow Jesuit Priest.

Part 1. <http://www.arcticbeacon.com/0922061.mp3>

Part 2. <http://www.arcticbeacon.com/0922062.mp3>

tlthe5th - September 28, 2006 04:49 AM (GMT)

this is important too. this is regarding Tony Alamo ministries which Eric Phelps told me in an email that the Jesuits have done a lot of damage to him for his telling the truth about jesuits. Tony had a wonderful ministry here in the U.S. and has totally been maligned by the papacy and now a lot of people say he's a cult which is not true at all.

in this interview, ex FBI John Peeler says that Tony Alamo was targeted by Clinton.

<http://www.arcticbeacon.com/0922062.mp3>

Tony Alamo was close friends with Alberto Rivera, Avro Manhattan, is still friends with Jack Chick and many others. Eric Links to Tony's site as well.

Tony's work exposing the Vatican:

http://www.alamoministries.com/content/eng...christ_lit_.htm

i will no longer post on here due to 2TUFF's anti christian talk

Alexandra - January 10, 2007 02:57 PM (GMT)

You know what, I did a Google search on Tony Alamo. There are allegations of rape, polygamy, tax fraud, and the like.

I do have to admit--one thing that's really bugged me--I have several Alamo newsletters and in a lot of them he's pictured with one celebrity or another, such as Sonny Bono and Willie Nelson. Typically celebrities want nothing to do with Christianity. The Bible warns about associating with the world...getting buddy-buddy with those in the world. Let's just say that if he's buddy-buddy with them, I hope he's teaching them about Christ.

Could be a psy-ops job--associate Rivera with a "known cult leader" to discredit him (I firmly believe that Alberto Rivera was who he said he was). Or it could be Tony Alamo himself who's being "discredited." Because one thing I keep noticing on these sites was the mention of "anti-Catholic" and "conspiracy theories."

The Worldwide Church of God cult was anti-Catholicism at one point. Thing is once you're recognized or labeled as a cult, people don't want to listen even if you're telling the truth.

So whether Tony Alamo is a fraud or not, that doesn't change the fact that Alberto was not a fraud.

chinquy - January 10, 2007 04:50 PM (GMT)

where did you get that from the Vatican's factnet.org website?

Dear (name withheld),

Thank you for contacting me.

I respect Brother Alamo as he was greatly damaged by the Pope's IRS and imprisoned by the Jesuits running the Justice Department. So glad you could be of help to him.

Sincerely in Faith,

Brother Eric

Alexandra - January 10, 2007 06:45 PM (GMT)

Hey, it doesn't hurt to ask, right? I know that there are two sides to every story. And I do know that Jesuits love going on slander campaigns. I just want to know if Tony Alamo is a wolf in sheep's clothing, or if he's another victim of Jesuit slander. I also have a few misgivings about him myself, which I've voiced here, but it doesn't mean that I'm ready to believe the rape allegations just because someone said so, ya know. Those are some serious allegations here...also keeping in mind the Duke University fiasco.

I know that the IRS has been persecuting Eric as well. Can't find anything on anyone, stick 'em with tax evasion charges.

I do trust Eric, and if he says Tony Alamo is on the up-and-up, I'm inclined to believe it. Because I know of a similar situation, where Janet Reno pulled these allegations against David Koresh out of thin air. While I don't hold with Koresh's teachings (I was once a Worldwide Church of God member, which held similar beliefs), this whole Waco thing was totally uncalled-for.

I was suspicious of those sites when just about all many of them mention is "anti-Catholic" and "conspiracy theorist." Like that automatically makes it a cult or something. Heh. Roman Catholic Church is the world's BIGGEST cult!

I understand you being suspicious of anyone, especially in Christian ministry in these days. I do not know very much about Tony Alamo myself but I know enough to say that if he was backing up Dr.Rivera, he certainly is on our side.

One needs to remember that there is no limit what so ever to the evil of the Jesuit Order. It's inconceivable to the ordinary human being but these demon driven people are with absolute devotion to their General and will do ANYTHING for the benefit of their entirely satanic church.

I have read false allegations against many including Rev. Charles Chiniquy(who was by all means a GREAT man) that made my heart break in anger! And these were made by people who mostlikely never read any of his books. And it's not only the Jesuits themselves but any devout Roman Catholic.

These fanatics go to confession, their priests know everything about them and they will do ANYTHING their priests tell them to, including writing lies about whoever for the benefit of the antichrist they call the pope.

God bless you!

I absolutely agree. These people are completely brainwashed. It is the Luciferians at the top that are the true enemies. You do not hate the brainwashed soldiers sent to Irak per example, it is the scumbag that sent them there that needs to be on death row. We must always keep that in mind.

Most of my family on my mother's side are Catholics(all of them except my mother). I would never want to kill them or hate them. They ar brutally brainwashed and destroyed. Drunk with the wine of her(the whore's) fornications.

Amen. I was just thinking of this yesterday actually, how it is very possible to be unknowingly evil.

Alberto Rivera is a good example. When he was infiltrating Protestant Churches to completely destroy them, he was in complete obedience to the General's orders, He was so brainwashed that he truely thought in his heart and mind that he was doing all of this for the glory of Christ. This is how these people work, massive brainwash. The same goes to Freemasonry.

By the way, I strongly recommend Bill Schnoebelen's books on the Masonry matter. He was a 90 degree mason and a Satanic High priest/vampire. Search his name on google video, GREAT seminars.

Even the average joe catholics would follow their leaders orders to kill all non believers if so ordered to, they amassed against this country once in history and would do it again, when that attempt failed they shot a man in the back of the head for revenge. Boothe was a average joe brain washed catholic, look where being nice to them has got us today. they can't even have a fair stand up fight, their COWARDS. we shall see how you think when they force their one world church on you, that is the catholic objective. and if you don't want it, its the poisoned cup, or the leaden bullet for ya. at least they stopped burning innocent non believers of their church at the stake. Buchanan suggests Bush impeachment

John Byrne

Monday August 29, 2005

http://rawstory.com/news/2005/Buchanan_sug...h_imp_0829.html

Pat Buchanan, a leading conservative pundit and former presidential adviser, quietly suggested House Republicans mull impeaching President Bush -- though not for the liberals' cause celebre, Iraq -- but rather for what he sees as Bush's 'criminal' failure to stem the tide of illegal immigrants, RAW STORY has discovered.

"We are being invaded," the reactionary Republican declared in his column Monday, "and the president of the United States is not doing his duty to protect the states against that invasion."

"Some courageous Republican, to get the attention of this White House, should drop into the hopper a bill of impeachment," he added, "charging Bush with a conscious refusal to uphold his oath and defend the states of the Union against 'invasion.'"

Strikingly, he credits Democrats for 'awakening' to the issue.

"Not only have [Democratic governors] Richardson and Napolitano awakened — they are on the front lines — so, too, has Hillary Clinton, who has spoken out against illegal immigration with a forthrightness that makes Bush sound like a talking head for La Raza."

He asserts former presidents would have taken a much harder stand against immigrants. Bush has seen to be 'weak' on immigration from some elements of the Republican party, perhaps in part due to his being governor of Texas and a conscious decision not to alienate Hispanic voters, who are increasingly targeted by Republicans.

"A president like Teddy Roosevelt would have led the Army to the border years ago," he adds in his column. "And if Fox did not cooperate, T.R. would have gone on to Mexico City. Nor would Ike, who deported all illegal aliens in 1953, have stood still for this being done to the country he had defended in war."

"What are these Bush Republicans afraid of?" he continues. "Dirty looks from the help at the country club?"

"Bush is chief executive of the United States. It is his duty to enforce the laws," he adds. "Can anyone fairly say he is enforcing the immigration laws? Those laws are clear. People who break in are to be sent back. Yet, more than 10 million have broken in with impunity."

Buchanan blames an 'alliance' with Mexican president Vincente Fox and corporations.

"The ally-ally-in-free immigration policy of George Bush and Vicente Fox, beloved of corporate America, has created a hell on our southern border," he pens.

And he relates the 'immigration crisis' to Iraq.

"Where is Bush? All wrapped up in the issue of whether women in Najaf will have the same rights in divorce and custody cases as women in Nebraska. His legislative agenda for the fall includes a blanket amnesty for illegals, so they can be exploited by businesses who want to hold wages down as they dump the social costs for their employees — health care, schools, courts, cops, prisons — onto taxpayers."

Remember Bush and his family have many devious dealings which favour the Jesuit Order's veil. They can sacrifice Bush and keep the sheople confused even more with Bush dodgy dealings and all the theatre show as usual. Another scapegoat for the wars and troubles of today instead of the Jesuit Order. You see the reason they put Bush in power (illusion) was because he and his family are warmongering business junkies.

Now everyone expects wars when a Bush is around and dodgy dealing. So when people want someone to blame who do they go to? Yes the Puppet Bush or Blair instead of the paymasters THE JESUITS -2tuff

Stones 'Slate Bush' In Album Song

BBC News

8-10-5

A track on the Rolling Stones' upcoming album A Bigger Bang reportedly attacks interventionist supporters of President George Bush known as neo-conservatives.

"You call yourself a Christian, I call you a hypocrite," Sir Mick Jagger sings in Sweet Neo Con, one of 16 tracks featured on the September release.

"It is direct," Jagger is quoted as saying in US magazine Newsweek.

Jagger reportedly added that bandmate Keith Richards, who lives in the US, was "a bit worried" about a backlash.

The song was not featured on a 12-track advance CD sent out by the veteran British rockers to music critics.

Contentious

Vice-President Dick Cheney, Defence Secretary Donald Rumsfeld and Secretary of State Condoleezza Rice are considered by some to be leading neo-conservatives.

However, the term is a contentious one in the US.

The BBC's Mark Mardell has described neo-cons as "full-blooded 21st Century nationalists" who "insist America's mission is to bring democracy to the world".

The Rolling Stones are currently rehearsing in Toronto for their 40-date world tour, which begins in Boston on 21 August.

Schwarzenegger to rock with Rolling Stones

The Associated Press

August 12, 2005

Concert tickets for major acts are costly, but $100,000 to see the Rolling Stones?

That's the price to join Gov. Arnold Schwarzenegger in a luxury box at the Stones' Aug. 21 show at Boston's Fenway Park. The event will cap a multistate fundraising swing that begins next week for Schwarzenegger's Nov. 8 special election.

Schwarzenegger will host a private reception for 40 guests who give $10,000 each to his campaign account. Guests contributing $100,000 apiece will be invited to watch the concert with Schwarzenegger in a luxury box.

The concert event was arranged after mortgage lender Ameriquest, the lead sponsor of the Stones' 2005 tour, offered Schwarzenegger more than three dozen center stage and luxury box seats. A company spokesman refused comment to the San Francisco Chronicle.

Fran Curtis, the Stones' publicist, said the band had no role in the governor's fundraiser.

The Stones' new album, "A Bigger Bang," is scheduled for release Sept. 6.

Former Powell Aide Attacks 'Cowboy' Bush

By Jamie Wilson in Washington
The Guardian - UK
10-21-5

Colin Powell's former chief of staff at the state department has launched a scathing attack on the Bush administration, claiming that the vice-president and secretary of defence created a "Cheney-Rumsfeld cabal" that hijacked US foreign policy.

In an address to the New American Foundation reported in the Washington Post, Larry Wilkerson accused George Bush of "cowboyism", and said the current secretary of state, Condoleeza Rice, was "extremely weak". The former defence undersecretary, Douglas Feith, was dispatched with the words: "Seldom in my life have I met a dumber man."

Mr Wilkerson is a military veteran of 31 years' standing and former director of the Marine Corps War College. It is not the first time he has been critical of administration policies, but he has never been quite so outspoken before. The former colonel was often described by colleagues as the man who would say what Mr Powell was thinking but was too discreet to say.

"What I saw was a cabal between the vice president of the United States, Richard Cheney, and the secretary of defence, Donald Rumsfeld," he said. Between them they ran roughshod over the bureaucracy, stalling nuclear diplomacy with North Korea and Iran.

Mr Bush, he claimed, allowed it to happen because he was "not versed in international relations and not much interested". He said officials "condoned" prisoner abuse and left the army "truly in bad shape". He added: "If there is a nuclear terrorist attack or a major pandemic ... you are going to see the ineptitude of this government in a way that'll take you back to the declaration of independence."

Mr Wilkerson said Mr Powell, whom he described as "the world's most loyal soldier", was not pleased about his decision to go public, but said he took a different view of loyalty - not to the administration, but to the country.

Brent Scowcroft "Breaks Ranks" with George W. Bush in Major New Yorker Article

<http://www.thewashingtonnote.com/archives/001024.html>

Jeffrey Goldberg has written a critique in The New Yorker of the Bush White House that equals Ron Suskind's devastating critique of Bush before the last election titled "Without a Doubt."

In "Breaking Ranks: What Turned Brent Scowcroft Against the Bush Administration?", Jeffrey Goldberg coaxes Brent Scowcroft to delineate his differences with the foreign policy proclivities of George W. Bush, Condoleeza Rice, Paul Wolfowitz, Richard Cheney, and others.

And in the piece, George H.W. Bush is interviewed about Scowcroft -- and while Bush 41's comments are more elliptical, he stands clearly by Scowcroft's side in clear criticism of the decisions his son made.

This critique by Scowcroft hardens the foundation of critique that others have recently put in place -- particularly from Col. Lawrence Wilkerson, former State Department Chief of Staff under Colin Powell who spoke at the New America Foundation last Wednesday. Wilkerson's remarks have swept like wildfire through the media and are the subject of a Richard Holbrooke article today in the New York Times and also a core column of discussion on this morning's "Meet the Press."

Jeffrey Goldberg's article is a devastating, serious critique of George W. Bush's foreign policy and national security team.

I have read the entire article -- which I recommend that TWN readers access as quickly as possible. I don't believe that The New Yorker provides links to articles, but buy this magazine. . .it's way, way, way worth it.

I am going to provide some longish excerpts to give insight into some of the most intriguing and useful commentary.

From "Breaking Ranks: What Turned Brent Scowcroft Against the Bush Administration?", Jeffrey Goldberg, The New Yorker, 31 October 2005

Scowcroft on Iraq and Neocon Idealism

A principal reason that the Bush Administration gave no thought to unseating Saddam was that Brent Scowcroft gave no thought to it. An American occupation of Iraq would be politically and militarily untenable, Scowcroft told Bush. And though the President had employed the rhetoric of moral necessity to make the case for war, Scowcroft said, he would not let his feelings about good and evil dictate the advice he gave the President.

It would have been no problem for America's military to reach Baghdad, he said. The problems would have arisen when the Army entered the Iraqi capital. "At the minimum, we'd be an occupier in a hostile land," he said. "Our forces would be sniped at by guerrillas, and, once we were there, how would we get out? What would be the rationale for leaving? I don't like the term 'exit strategy' -- but what do you do with Iraq once you own it?"

Scowcroft stopped for a moment. We were sitting in the offices of the Scowcroft Group, a consulting firm he heads, in downtown Washington. He appeared to be weighing the consequences of speaking his mind. His speech is generally calibrated not to give offense, especially to the senior Bush and the Bush family. He is eighty and, by most accounts, has been content to cede visibility to the larger personalities with whom he has worked.

James Baker told me that he and Scowcroft got along well in part because Scowcroft let Baker speak for the Administration. I learned from people who know Scowcroft that he finds it painful to be seen as critical of his best friend's son, but in the course of several interviews prudence several times gave way to impatience. "This is exactly where we are now," he said of Iraq, with no apparent satisfaction. "We own it. And we can't let go. We're getting sniped at. Now, will we win? I think there's a fair chance we'll win. But look at the cost."

The first Gulf War was a success, Scowcroft said, because the President knew better than to set unachievable goals. "I'm not a pacifist," he said. "I believe in the use of force. But there has to be a good reason for using force. And you have to know when to stop using force." Scowcroft does not believe that the promotion of American-style democracy abroad is a sufficiently good reason to use force.

"I thought we ought to make it our duty to help make the world friendlier for the growth of liberal regimes," he said. "You encourage democracy over time, with assistance, and aid, the traditional way. Not how the neocons do it."

The neoconservatives -- the Republicans who argued most fervently for the second Gulf war -- believe in the export of democracy, by violence if that is required, Scowcroft said. "How do the neocons bring democracy to Iraq? You invade, you threaten and pressure, you evangelize." And now, Scowcroft said, America is suffering from the consequences of that brand of revolutionary utopianism. "This was said to be part of the war on terror, but Iraq feeds terrorism," he said.

Scowcroft on Iraq & Israel

In August of 2002, seven months before George W. Bush launched the invasion of Iraq, Scowcroft upset the White House with an opinion piece in the Wall Street Journal. The headline read, "DON'T ATTACK SADDAM." Scowcroft would have preferred something more nuanced, he told me, but the words accurately reflected his message.

In the article, he argued that an invasion of Iraq would deflect American attention from the war on terrorism, and that it would do nothing to solve the conflict between Palestinians and Israelis, which he has long believed is the primary source of unhappiness in the Middle East. Unlike the current Bush Administration, which is unambiguously pro-Israel, Scowcroft, James Baker, and others associated with the elder George Bush believe that Israel's settlement policies arouse Arab anger, and that American foreign policy should reflect the fact that there are far more Arabs than Israelis in the world.

"The obsession of the region . . . is the Israeli-Palestinian conflict," Scowcroft wrote in the Journal. "If we were seen to be turning our back on that bitter conflict -- which the region, rightly or wrongly, perceives to be clearly within our power to resolve -- in order to go after Iraq, there would be an explosion of outrage against us." Scowcroft went on to say that the United States was capable of defeating Saddam's military. "But it would not be a cakewalk. On the contrary, it undoubtedly would be very expensive -- with serious consequences for the U.S. and global economy -- and could as well be bloody. In fact, Saddam would be likely to conclude he had nothing left to lose, leading him to unleash whatever weapons of mass destruction he possesses."

Scowcroft's Frustration Communicating with Bush 43

Like nearly everyone else in Washington, Scowcroft believed that Saddam maintained stockpiles of chemical and biological weapons, but he wrote that a strong inspections program would have kept him at bay. "There may have come a time when we would have needed to take Saddam out," he told me. "But he wasn't really a threat. His Army was weak, and the country hadn't recovered from sanctions." Scowcroft's colleagues told me that he would have preferred to deliver his analysis privately to the White House. But Scowcroft, the apotheosis of a Washington insider, was by then definitively on the outside, and there was no one in the White House who would listen to him. On the face of it, this is remarkable: Scowcroft's best friend's son is the President; his friend Dick Cheney is the Vice-President; Condoleezza Rice, who was the national-security adviser, and is now the Secretary of State, was once a Scowcroft protege; and the current national-security adviser, Stephen Hadley, is another protege and a former principal at the Scowcroft Group.

Scowcroft on Cheney: "The Real Anomaly"

"The real anomaly in the Administration is Cheney," Scowcroft said. "I consider Cheney a good friend -- I've known him for thirty years. But Dick Cheney I don't know anymore." He went on, "I don't think Dick Cheney is a neocon, but allied to the core of neocons is that bunch who thought we made a mistake in the first Gulf War, that we should have finished the job. There was another bunch who were traumatized by 9/11, and who thought, 'The world's going to hell and we've got to show we're not going to take this, and we've got to respond, and Afghanistan is O.K., but it's not sufficient.'" Scowcroft supported the invasion of Afghanistan as a "direct response" to terrorism.

On George W. Bush Not Hearing Dissent or Considering Alternative Views -- With A Nudge from Bush 41

A common criticism of the Administration of George W. Bush is that it ignores ideas that conflict with its aims. "We always made sure the President was hearing all the possibilities," John Sununu, who served as chief of staff to George H. W. Bush, said. "That's one of the differences between the first Bush Administration and this Bush Administration."

I asked Colin Powell if he thought, in retrospect, that the Administration should have paid attention to Scowcroft's arguments about Iraq. Powell, who is widely believed to have been far less influential in policymaking than either Cheney or the Secretary of Defense, Donald Rumsfeld, said, pointedly, "I always listen to him. He's a very analytic and thoughtful individual, he's powerful in argument, and I've never worked with a better friend and colleague."

When, in an e-mail, I asked George H.W. Bush about Scowcroft's most useful qualities as a national-security adviser, he replied that Scowcroft "was very good about making sure that we did not simply consider the 'best case,' but instead considered what it would mean if things went our way, and also if they did not."

Bush 41 Unable to Mend Fences Between Bush 43 and Scowcroft

According to friends of the elder Bush, the estrangement of his son and his best friend has been an abiding source of unhappiness, not only for Bush but for Barbara Bush as well. George Bush, the forty-first President, has tried several times to arrange meetings between his son, "Forty-three," and his former national-security adviser to no avail, according to people with knowledge of these intertwined relationships. "There have been occasions when Forty-one has engineered meetings in which Forty-three and Scowcroft are in the same place at the same time, but they were social settings that weren't conducive to talking about substantive issues," a Scowcroft confidant said. Few Areas of Foreign Policy Agreement Between Scowcroft and George W. Bush

When I asked Scowcroft if the son was different from the father, he said, "I don't want to go there," but his dissatisfaction with the son's agenda could not have been clearer. When I asked him to name issues on which he agrees with the younger Bush, he said, "Afghanistan." He paused for twelve seconds. Finally, he said, "I think we're doing well on Europe," and left it at that.

Scowcroft's Deteriorating Relationship with Condoleezza Rice

The disintegrating relationship between Scowcroft and Condoleezza Rice has not escaped the notice of their colleagues from the first Bush Administration. She was a political-science professor at Stanford when, in 1989, Scowcroft hired her to serve as a Soviet expert on the National Security Council.

Scowcroft found her bright -- "brighter than I was" -- and personable, and he brought her all the way inside, to the Bush family circle. When Scowcroft published his Wall Street Journal article, Rice telephoned him, according to several people with knowledge of the call. "She said, 'How could you do this to us?'" a Scowcroft friend recalled. "What bothered Brent more than Condi yelling at him was the fact that here she is, the national-security adviser, and she's not interested in hearing what a former national-security adviser had to say."

Scowcroft on Rice's Foreign Policy Deficits & Israel Policy

Scowcroft told me that he still has a high regard for Rice. He did note, however, that her "expertise is in the former Soviet Union and Europe. Less on the Middle East." Rice, through a spokesman, said, "Sure, we've had some differences, and that's understandable. But he's a good friend and is going to stay a good friend." Yet the two do not see each other much anymore. According to friends of Scowcroft, Rice has asked him to call her to set up a dinner, but he has not, apparently, pursued the invitation. The last time the two had dinner, nearly two years ago, it ended unhappily, Scowcroft acknowledged.

"We were having dinner just when Sharon said he was going to pull out of Gaza," at the end of 2003. "She said, 'At least there's some good news,' and I said, 'That's terrible news.' She said, 'What do you mean?' And I said that for Sharon this is not the first move, this is the last move. He's getting out of Gaza because he can't sustain eight thousand settlers with half his Army protecting them. Then, when he's out, he will have an Israel that he can control and a Palestinian state atomized enough that it can't be a problem." Scowcroft added, "We had a terrible fight on that."

They also argued about Iraq. "She says we're going to democratize Iraq, and I said, 'Condi, you're not going to democratize Iraq,' and she said, 'You know, you're just stuck in the old days,' and she comes back to this thing that we've tolerated an autocratic Middle East for fifty years and so on and so forth," he said. Then a barely perceptible note of satisfaction entered his voice, and he said, "But we've had fifty years of peace."

Scowcroft's Realism on the Middle East

Scowcroft is unmoved by the stirrings of democracy movements in the Middle East. He does not believe, for instance, that the signs of a democratic awakening in Lebanon are related to the Iraq war. He sees the recent evacuation of the Syrian Army from Lebanon not as a victory for self-government but as a foreshadowing of civil war. "I think it's something we have to worry about -- the sectarian emotions that were there when the Syrians went in aren't gone."

Scowcroft and those who share his views believe that the reality of life in Iraq at the moment is undermining the neoconservative agenda. Richard Haass, the president of the Council on Foreign Relations, who served as Colin Powell's chief policy planner during the first Bush Administration (and who was Scowcroft's Middle East expert on the National Security Council during the first Gulf War) said that the days of armed idealism are over. "We've seen the ideological high-water mark," he said. "I mean wars of choice, and unilateralism, and by that I mean an emphasis, almost to the point of exclusion of everything else, on regime change as opposed to diplomacy aimed at policy change."

Scowcroft on Wolfowitz

One day, I mentioned to Scowcroft an interview I had had with Paul Wolfowitz, when he was Donald Rumsfeld's deputy. Wolfowitz was the leading neoconservative thinker in the senior ranks of the current Bush Administration. (He is now the president of the World Bank.) I asked him what he would think if previously autocratic Arab countries held free elections and then proceeded to vote Islamists into power. Wolfowitz answered, "Look, fifty per cent of the Arab world are women. Most of those women do not want to live in a theocratic state. The other fifty per cent are men. I know a lot of them. I don't think they want to live in a theocratic state."

Scowcroft said of Wolfowitz, "He's got a utopia out there. We're going to transform the Middle East, and then there won't be war anymore. He can make them democratic. He is a tough-minded idealist, but where he is truly an idealist is that he brushes away questions, says, 'It won't happen,' whereas I would say, 'It's likely to happen and therefore you can't take the chance.' Paul's idealism sweeps away doubts."

Wolfowitz, for his part, said to me, "It's absurdly unrealistic, demonstrably unrealistic, to ignore how strong the desire for freedom is." Scowcroft said that he is equally concerned about Wolfowitz's unwillingness to contemplate bad outcomes and Kagan's willingness to embrace them on principle. "What the realist fears is the consequences of idealism," he said. "The reason I part with the neocons is that I don't think in any reasonable time frame the objective of democratizing the Middle East can be successful. If you can do it, fine, but I don't think you can, and in the process of trying to do it you can make the Middle East a lot worse."

He added, "I'm a realist in the sense that I'm a cynic about human nature."

An Odd Exchange with Sharansky: Insight into Bush 43's Views of his Father

In September, Sharansky was in Washington at the invitation of Condoleeza Rice; he gave the closing speech at a State Department conference on democratization. "Can you believe it?" he said to me just before the session. "Rice gave the opening speech and I give the closing?" Of his complicated relations with the Bush family, he said, "A few days after my book comes out, I get a call from the White House. 'The President wants to see you.' So I go to the White House and I see my book on his desk. It is open to page 210. He is really reading it. And we talk about democracy.

This President is very great on democracy. At the end of the conversation, I say, 'Say hello to your mother and father.' And he said, 'My father?' He looked very surprised I would say this." Sharansky went on, "So I say to the President, 'I like your father. He is very good to my wife when I am in prison.' And President Bush says, 'But what about Chicken Kiev?'"

Sharansky smiled as he recounted this story. "The President looked around the room and said, 'Who is responsible for that Chicken Kiev speech? Find out who wrote it. Who is responsible?' Everyone laughed." Sharansky paused, and looked at me intently. He had a broad grin. "I know who wrote Chicken Kiev speech," he said. "It was Scowcroft!"

Scowcroft may have had a hand in the speech, but when I asked George H.W. Bush about it he answered as if it had been his own idea. "I got hammered on the Kiev speech by the right wing and some in the press, but in retrospect I think the Baltic countries understood that we were being cautious vis-a-vis the Soviet Union," Bush said. "And their freedoms were established without a shot being fired."

Jeffrey Goldberg does a masterful job of telling the Scowcroft story -- and of getting into what makes him tick.

I happen to know that Scowcroft did not know that the article was coming out this week and would have preferred his views to air some time after a week of potential indictments by Patrick Fitzgerald of White House heavyweights.

Nonetheless, the article is out. Scowcroft has significant disdain for the negative consequences of Bush's decisions on the nation's well-being. Lawrence Wilkerson filled in many of the other pieces not covered here in his revelations about a "cabal" in the White House that cast away essential guidance from the 1947 National Security Act.

in this interview Alex Jones states that George Bush is the ordering the attacks on America (at about 33 minutes through the interview). I mean, if you want to call yourself a 'truth seeker' and think you have above average intelligence one should immediately know that george W Bush is a dim wit and couldn't orchestrate any attacks on anybody. He's just playing the part or role of papal puppet.

See Bush meet with his true master here:

I too have suspected that George W. Bush was about to be sacrificed. Remember that movie that premiered in Toronto called THE ASSASSINATION OF A PRESIDENT?

Anyone notice the day Bush dies in the movie? 10-19. What do we get? 911. How many days did the inside job that was the Madrid train bombing happen after 9-11? 911 days to be exact. On the four year (I believe) anniversary of 9-11, what was the set of a new york (i believe) lottery? Yep. 911 again. Here is some other numerology relating to 9-11.

Description: ABRHAM LINCOLN

CRAIG-OXLEY - February 11, 2006 11:01 PM (GMT)

To the memory of our Martyred President, Abraham Lincoln; to all who love the Flag of our country; to all lovers of Liberty and haters of Despotism; to all who are loyal to the Constitution and Government of the United States of America; and who value the rights and the protection which these secure to us; liberty of conscience, freedom of thought and investigation, freedom of speech and the press, within the limitations of the law; the complete separation of Church and State, as distinct and separate organizations; each being independent of the other in its own proper sphere of action, yet not so as to separate religion from the State; civil government being an ordinance of God, and to be administered under His authority, in accordance with the great moral requirements of the Decalogue; to the friends of popular education at the expense of the State; and to all who hope to subserve the highest interests of mankind, and to attain to the true ideals of human existence on earth through the maintenance of these Protestant ideas and institutions, this book is respectfully and fraternally dedicated by its author.

T.M. HARRIS, Harrisville, WV

ROME'S RESPONSIBILITY FOR THE ASSASSINATION OF ABRAHAM LINCOLN

The Anti-Catholic agitation that is now so rife in the United States, marks a crisis in our history. Hundreds of intelligent, patriotic, conscientious men are earnestly, laboriously, and courageously devoting themselves to this agitation.

Newspapers have sprung up all over the country to give warning of danger, and to arouse the spirit of American patriotism.

Societies are being organized all over the land to protect and defend American institutions against the aggressions and encroachments of a Foreign political power that has gotten a lodgment in this land of Liberty, and that is evidently bent on the destruction of our free institutions, and substituting for them the Papal despotism; a despotism that lords it over the minds, the consciences, and the actions of its subjects; and thus renders them incapable of loyalty to any other government.

What does it all mean? It is evident that a crisis is even now upon us; a crisis in which the world-old contest between freedom and despotism is to be definitely and finally settled. This is an old fight. The cause of liberty seemed to have achieved the victory when our forefathers achieved their independence through a successful revolution and founded our government on the principles for the first time formally announced in our Declaration of Independence; securing to our people the natural rights of man; freedom of the mind and conscience, freedom of worship, and freedom of speech and of action, and protection in the exercise of these rights.

Here, in the wilds of a newly discovered world, was established a well considered, well understood, and truly democratic government; a government "of the people, by the people, and for the people." The tree of liberty was here planted in a fertile soil, and a congenial clime, and has become a well-rooted, vigorous and fruitful tree, of goodly stature. Its branches overshadow the land, and its fruit is pleasant to the taste. The question now is, shall it be plucked up by the roots, and burned in the fire?

To this question more than twelve million of American freemen, for themselves, their wives, and their children, and in behalf of humanity, return, in the most emphatic manner the answer: "Never!" and stand ready, if need be, to seal that answer with their blood. The fruit of the tree of liberty is so sweet to the taste, so refreshing and so invigorating that we are ready to say with Patrick Henry, "Give me liberty, or give me death."

It is because of a conviction that our government is threatened by a wily and formidable foe; that the cause of human liberty is in danger that we are in the midst of this anti-Catholic agitation. Is all this imaginary, or is there a real danger hanging over us like a cloud? Is the Roman Catholic Church the friend, or the foe of liberty? Is it a branch of the Church of Christ, in common with the various Protestant denominations, laboring in common with them, for the establishment of Christ's Kingdom on earth? If we answer this question in the light of history, in the light of present experience, in the light of the monstrous claims of the Pope, and in the light of the spirit by which it is everywhere and always animated, and in the light of its present efforts in our country, and in all lands, we must say that it does not, in any degree, bear the marks of a church of Christ. It is, in fact, only a compact, well-organized, and powerful political machine, wielded in the interest of the greatest despotism that has ever cursed the earth. "If any man have not the spirit of Christ he is none of His;" and if this organization has not the spirit of Christ, it is not a church of Christ. That it is not animated by the Christ spirit is clearly manifest. It has never manifested the spirit of Christ in all of its past history, and so is not a Christian church at all; and as it has always been grasping after temporal power, and civil domination, and is now, as it always has been, laboring for civil supremacy all over the world, we are surely warranted in calling it a huge and dangerous political machine, that has stolen the livery of heaven to enable it the more effectually to serve the Devil; and the more easily to deceive and enslave mankind. But are our institutions in danger from this foe? Have we any cause for alarm? Is it necessary that we should sound the trumpet throughout the length and breadth of our land, and muster the hosts of freedom for the conflict? Yes, my fellow countrymen; there is cause for alarm, there is real danger in the immediate situation. "Forewarned, forearmed;" and we have not begun a moment too soon, to organize for the protection of American institutions. Every citizen, and every sojourner in this country, who is loyal to the Roman Catholic Church, is an enemy to our government, of necessity, for he yields his highest allegiance to the Pope of Rome, a foreign potentate, who has time and again anathematized every fundamental principle of our government. He has denounced liberty of conscience, freedom of speech and of press, freedom of worship and of teaching, as pestilent and damnable heresies; destructive to order, and to the peace and welfare of society. The highest dignitaries of this so called church have declared their purpose to make this a Roman Catholic country; but to do this it must be brought to the acceptance of the Pope of Rome as Christ's vicegerent, or representative on earth, invested with all temporal and spiritual authority; above all kings, emperors, and civil rulers: the supreme judge and law-giver, whose decisions are infallible and final. This would make him lord of the conscience and master of the actions of all men throughout his dominion, which is nothing less than the earth. These are his monstrous claims; and his priests, of all grades, including the wily Jesuits, are laboring night and day to make them good in this land of ours. Has not the beast of prophecy indeed followed the woman into the wilderness to destroy her child, whose name is Liberty? It is but a few years since Archbishop Ireland, who poses as a Republican, and as a friend of our government; and who so busied himself in our late Presidential election, and who, since the election, has had the ear of the President, and busies himself in trying to control his most important appointments in the interests of his church, declared that this country was to be brought under the Pope within the next twenty years. But let things go on for twenty years more as they have been going for the last fifty years, and this will not appear to have been an unwarranted prophecy. It is evident that Rome is in politics, and is ceaselessly on the alert, in the United States, to so control the political action of our people that whatever party may succeed to power she may be in the saddle, to augment her wealth and power. And the people are asleep, and must be awakened and made to realize the danger, or our ship of state will be scuttled and sunk. Is there no danger when the Roman Hierarchy quarters its wily agents in the capital of our nation to exert their influence in shaping our laws, and in controlling Presidential appointments to the highest and most important offices? Is there not danger when all our politicians who aspire to national fame feel that in order to succeed they must truckle to Rome, and be submissive? Is there not danger when the capital of our nation has been captured by the wily Jesuit, and Washington is literally "in the lap of Rome?" Go into any and all of the departments of our government and find seven elevenths of the government employees in several of them, abject slaves of the Pope, and tell me is there no danger? Go into all our cities and larger towns and find our municipal governments in the hands of the faithful servants of this foreign despot, the Pope, and who are corruptly administering their affairs to enrich the church at the expense of the people, and tell me, is there no danger? Contemplate this alien and dangerous power in complete control of three-fourths of our newspapers and periodicals, and tell me, is there no danger? Look at this alien organization levying tribute continually on Protestant business men all over the land, and growing rich on tribute thus levied, and secured through fear of the boycott and then tell me, if you can, that there is no danger?

Look at the Protestant pulpit, for the most part muzzled and dumb through fear of the boycott against their members who are engaged in business, and on whom they largely depend for their salaries, and then tell me if you can, that there is no danger.

It is clear that Rome is rapidly getting control of all the sources of power in the United States, both in civil and military affairs; that she is doing so in pursuance of a well-considered and wisely laid plan, and for the very purpose of subverting our government. Let us go back a little and review the means suggested and considered for bringing the United States under the control of the Papacy. Father Chiniquy, in his book, "FIFTY YEARS IN THE CHURCH OF ROME," gives an extended and minute account of the plans that were discussed by bishops and priests for the attainment of political control of the United States, and for the overthrow of our government. About fifty years ago a council of bishops and priests was assembled at Buffalo, N.Y., for the purpose of determining this question.

The Bishop of Chicago thought to accomplish the desired end by colonizing emigrants from Canada, France, and Belgium in such numbers in the valley of the Mississippi, as would give to the Roman Catholic Church political control of the States of Illinois, Indiana, Missouri and Iowa. It was thought that with the fasthold the church had gained in the Southern States, as also in Michigan and Wisconsin, that it would thus be able to hold a cordon of States extending from Florida along the Gulf of Mexico, and up the Mississippi, to our Northern limits, and thus, in time, give it complete political control of the United States. Father Chiniquy had been engaged in this scheme by the Bishop of Chicago and had entered upon the work as an emigration agent, with enthusiasm, and was meeting with encouraging success. This plan of operations was being advocated earnestly by DePrey Magee, the editor, at that time, of the FREEMAN'S JOURNAL. Promising as it appeared to its advocates, it was repudiated by a large majority of the members of the Buffalo Conference. They argued that by this plan their forces would be scattered, and the power of the church dissipated, and that the true policy of the church for getting political control of the country, was to concentrate its forces in the cities and larger towns, and fill these up, as rapidly as possible, with their foreign emigrants. It was argued that in this way the Roman Catholic vote could be so wielded, under the direction of the bishops and priests, as to be made a balance of power vote between the two political parties, and so, necessary to the success of either; and being so, it could make its own terms with the political party leaders, and thus get the control of the municipal offices in a very short time; and that it would, in a few years, become a majority vote, when it would have complete control in municipal governments; and ultimately in State politics. This plan had been carefully thought out and matured by the Jesuits, and its wisdom was made so apparent by their arguments in this conference that the plan of the Bishop of Chicago and his adherents received a very emphatic condemnation by the Buffalo Conference, and the wise plan of the Jesuits was adopted, and at once entered upon, as the true policy of the church for getting political control of our government.

The wisdom of this plan is seen in its results. A half-century has elapsed since its adoption. The work of bringing Roman Catholic emigrants into our country and colonizing them in our cities, has been sedulously pursued from that day to this; and the results predicted by the most sanguine of its advocates have been realized. Quietly, stealthily, steadfastly, has this plan been pursued, under the direction of the most astute political managers that the world has ever seen, until the realization of its purpose seems to be almost within their grasp. And what was its avowed purpose? Political control of our country was its immediate purpose; but this control was to be used for the overthrow of our government. The Roman Catholic priesthood, in former years, was wont to protest, loudly, that it took no part in politics, but confined itself to the spiritual interests of mankind; but in all this history of its doings it is made manifest that the purpose of these gratuitous protestations was to lull us to sleep, to keep hidden from our eyes its evil intent upon our civil and religious liberties. Having secured the foothold that it has, its attitude is now changed, and it seems desirous to be known as a powerful factor in our political affairs: and to exhibit itself as holding a club over political aspirants; hence it boasts openly made of late, that it has made and unmade Presidents. It still works in secret, and in the dark, but emboldened by its success, it is beginning, upon occasions, to show its hand in the open light of day. But the eyes of the people are beginning to be opened to the danger: as witness this present anti-Catholic agitation. There are still greater signs of approaching danger than any that have been above noticed.

What is the rational significance of the fact, that the young men of this so-called church, are being organized into military companies, and regularly drilled in the manual of arms and in tactics?

What does it mean that a systematic process of procuring arms and ammunitions is being put into operation?

What does it mean that the basements of churches, cathedrals, and school buildings are being converted into arsenals, in which to store away arms and munitions of war? Does it not indicate a purpose, if need be, in the struggle for supremacy, to resort to revolution and bloodshed?

Is it a mere happen so, that the rank and file in the army of the United States is made up, very largely, of the subjects of this foreign potentate, the Pope of Rome, men, who from their childhood have been taught implicit obedience to his authority as the price of the salvation of their souls, and who, in a conflict of authority between the Pope and the government of the United States, would, without hesitation, yield allegiance to the Pope?

It is not a fact worthy of some thought that a very undue proportion of the field and line officers in our arms are members of this church, and that the same state of things is found in our navy? Is it not a fact that demands our attention that a largely undue proportion of the cadets in our military schools are members by birth, baptism, and confirmation, of the Roman Catholic Church?

Do not these very significant and important facts clearly indicate that there is an unseen power holding watch and guard over, and controlling these things? It was this same unseen power that recently secured the promotion of Colonel Copinger to a Brigadier Generalship, over the heads of about twenty brave officers of American birth, who stood above him on the roster for promotion, and whose military records were as good as his.

Who was this Colonel Copinger? An Irish adventurer, who commenced his military career in the army of the Pope, where he spent a year in fighting against the freedom of Italy from the grasp of the Papacy. He then came to the United States in the early part of our civil war, and very soon after his arrival at New York, was able to command sufficient influence to get him a commission in the line of a New York regiment. He served on the side of the Union with such distinction as to win promotions in the volunteer service; and to secure a place on the roster of the regular army, at its reorganization, at the close of the war, where, at the time of this last promotion he held a colonel's commission. His military record was good; but his personal record was despicable. He was able, however, to secure such influences in his favor as to cause President Cleveland to promote him over about twenty colonels whose military records were as good as his, and whose personal records were unblemished, and whose only fault was that they were Americans and Protestants. His confirmation was opposed actively in the Senate; but the Jesuits triumphed and he was confirmed.

There is a great effort now being made by the Hierarchy to secure a concession from the War Department to build a Roman Catholic Church on the Military reservation at West Point. The purpose of this reservation was the establishment of a National Military School for the education of officers of the army of the United States. It is entirely under the ownership and control of the government; and so knows nothing of sects in religion; but, being a Christian government, it provides a chapel and a chaplain for the use and service of this great National Military School. But this does not satisfy the ambitious designs of Rome. She seeks to be so far recognized by the government as to be permitted to build a chapel for the exclusive use of the Roman Catholics; and in the contention which has sprung up over this question, it has been stated by the representatives of the Hierarchy, as an argument in favor of the concession which it seeks, that two-thirds of the enlisted men on duty at West Point. and five of the officers there in command, and the family of a sixth, are members of the Roman Catholic Church. The only use I now intend to make of this reference is simply to ask the question. "How does it come about that Rome has gotten such a hold in our army? It is a purely accidental thing that five of the officers and two-thirds of the enlisted men on duty at this Military School of the United States Government, are Roman Catholics?"

And why does this so-called church, alone, so anxiously seek this concession? Does it not from all this plainly appear that Rome is laboring to Romanize our army? For what purpose, let us ask ourselves, does she need this military control that she is so anxiously and cunningly seeking and obtaining? Could we safely commit our institutions to the keeping of a hostile army? Or a soldiery under the control of a despotism that is obviously laying its wires to destroy our civil institutions? In view of Rome's disloyalty, in our late civil war, can we trust her? Is this a Roman Catholic country?

In view of the facts above recited, is there not good grounds for the conclusion that the wily Jesuits are secretly watching and ceaselessly working to get hold of all the sources of political power in the United States; as also of that which we must ultimately rely for defense of our institutions, our army and navy? Is it not time that the American people should have their attention called to these things, and to their significance?

It is the mission of the Christian church to publish the Gospel of Life and Salvation, through the "blood of the everlasting covenant," to a lost and ruined world; to seek, and to save, the lost; to usher in the era of love, and peace, and joy, throughout the world. Its mission is to be accomplished through the power of the truth, applied to the minds and consciences of men by the Holy Spirit. It has no use for carnal weapons in the prosecution of its work. Its only legitimate weapon is the Word of God, which is "the Sword of the Spirit." An organization that is always and everywhere grasping after wealth and power, using and preparing to use, carnal weapons, not even hesitating at war and bloodshed, whose aim and effort is to enslave the minds, consciences, bodies and souls of men, fostering the most monstrous and wicked superstitions, that it may fill its coffers with gold; that withholds from its members the Word of God, and that puts the decisions and decrees of Popes and church councils in the place of the Scriptures of Divine Truth, as the rule of life, surely cannot be recognized as a Christian church. No! It is simply a political machine for the enslavement of mankind. It is a monstrous despotism, relying on ignorance, and its natural offspring superstition for its support. It is not a religion that we are called upon to fight but a corrupt and most dangerous political organization, whose purpose is nothing short of the destruction of our government. Whatever it may be as a religion does not concern our present contention.

Every true American citizen believes in securing to every man freedom of the mind and conscience in the matter of religion: and will ever stand ready to protect him in his right to worship God according to the dictates of his conscience. We do not inquire into the truth or falsity of his religion. We accord to him the right to determine this for himself; and be answerable only to his God. It is not its religion that we call into question when we arraign the Roman Catholic Church. We only fight it in its political aspirations; and because it is the desperate and deadly foe to civil liberty. It is, moreover, an active and aggressive foe; a foe that can never be conciliated, never trusted; for when it professes friendship for our institutions its only purposed is to throw us off of our guard that it may the more surely undermine and destroy them. We know that should it ever gain political control in our land it would deprive us of the rights that we now accord it. It is an organized despotism, and the sworn and implacable foe of liberty. It hates the symbol of the policy, power, and authority of our government, the flag of our country; and places over it the Papal rag. It gives to the highest officer of our government, the president of the United States, the second place at its festal board, reserving the place of honor to the ablegate of the Pope. This insult it has recently perpetrated upon us in the open light of day; and in the most conspicuous and offensive manner--an insult that causes the blood of every American patriot to tingle with resentment.

It is but too evident that no matter what may be its professions, it is, at heart, disloyal to our government; and only loyal to the pope of Rome. This alien power is the implacable foe of popular education, and is constantly laboring for the destruction of our system of free schools. Her real motive for this opposition lies in the fact that the mental training which her children would get in our free schools, would unfit them for being loyal, obedient and servile children of the church. Here they would be trained to think, to reason and to investigate; to take nothing on trust, but to form their opinions upon all subjects from convictions resulting from a free and rational investigation. The whole atmosphere of the free school, and all of its associations, would beget in them a love of liberty. This system of education is the exact counterpart of the system of the parochial schools, and is destructive to that blind faith and servile obedience, that vie to the Roman Catholic Church its power. Our free school system tends to make its beneficiaries good, intelligent, loyal, American citizens; whilst the parochial schools only aim to make their pupils to be loyal subjects of the Papacy. Under the protection of our flag, they are raising up a force to be used for the destruction of our government.

CRAIG-OXLEY - February 11, 2006 11:02 PM (GMT)

In this contention over the question of education, Rome is continually making efforts to unite the church and the State, by securing the aid of the State in supporting her schools; as also of what she calls her charitable institutions. By thus attacking the fundamental principles of our government at every point, she makes manifest her disloyalty, and her purpose to undermine and overthrow our institutions. Our civil and religious institutions had their origin in the protest of Luther and his coadjutors against the despotism and corruption of the Roman Catholic Church, that brought about the Reformation of the 16th century. Against this Reformation she has never ceased to fight, and never will, until her power shall have been overthrown.

She has always been the sworn enemy of our Protestant institutions; and is today, as she ever has been, bent on their destruction. She has never lost an opportunity to give them a stab in the dark. In our dissensions over the questions of slavery, she thought she saw a chance to destroy our government and taking the side of slavery, used her whole influence in the South, to stimulate and encourage secession and rebellion, and in the North to discredit and weaken the cause of the Union. It was G. T. Beauregard, a rabid Roman Catholic, who first fired on the flag of our country at Fort Sumter; and let loose the dogs of war. It was the Pope of Rome, and he alone, of all the European potentates that gave his recognition and his blessing to the Confederate government: and by the very terms of his kind letter to its president, made it manifest that he expected, through his kind offices, to secure its recognition of his claims; and win it for the church.

It was the Pope of Rome, and his faithful lieutenant, Louis Napoleon, who, taking advantage of our civil war, undertook to establish a Roman Catholic empire in Mexico, and for this purpose sent Maximilian, a Roman Catholic prince, under the protection of a French army, to usurp dominion, and take possession of the country. All of this was done in the hope that the Union cause would be lost; and that through the strife that she had fomented, two Roman Catholic empires would be established on the American continent, viz. that of Mexico under Maximilian and that of the Confederacy under Jefferson Davis; thus making it possible to make a conquest of the entire continent. This letter of the Pope to Jefferson Davis, couched in such courteous and loving terms, and showing so clearly that his sympathy was with the Southern cause, was well understood by his loyal and faithful subjects all over the North. Roman Catholic officers began to resign and the rank and file began to desert, from the time of the publication of that letter in 1863 to the close of the war.

In reply to the boast so freely made by Roman Catholic editors and orators that the Irish fought the battles of the civil war and saved the nation, the following document, received from the Pension department at Washington, is here given:

Whole number of troop	2,128,200
Natives of the United States	1,627,267
Germans	189,817
Irishmen	144,221
British (other than Irish)	90,040
Other foreigners and missions	87,855

The "Desertions" were as follows:

Natives of the United States 5 percent
Germans 10 percent
Irish Catholics 72 percent
British (Other than Irish) 7 percent
Other foreigners 7 percent

In other words: of the 144,000 Irishmen that enlisted. 104,000 deserted. And it is reliably stated that most of these desertions occurred after the recognition of the Confederacy by the Pope. It is also a fact that of the five percent of native Americans rated as deserters, 45 percent of the 5 percent were Catholics. --TOLEDO AMERICAN, as quoted on page 115 of "Why Am I An A.P.A."

This is a sufficient proof of the charge heretofore made that a good Roman Catholic can only be loyal to the Pope and so can never be loyal to our government, and to our Protestant institutions.

It is true that there were some able and brave Roman Catholic officers in the Union army, who were truly loyal to the cause; as also many in the ranks who were nominally members of the Roman Catholic Church: but these were they who had been educated in our free schools, and had thus become so imbued with the American Spirit, that they were no longer good Catholics. All honor to these!

Not only by desertions and resignations was Roman Catholic disloyalty made apparent, but more conspicuously by the draft riots that followed, the rioters being made up, almost entirely, of Irish Roman Catholics. Arch-bishop Hughes posed as a Union man; and was so far trusted by President Lincoln, that he solicited his good offices at Rome, to prevent the Pope from giving recognition to the Confederate government; he being well aware of the consequences that would follow such recognition. The Archbishop proved a traitor to his trust; and the Pope's letter to Jefferson Davis followed closely on the heels of his visit to Rome, and resignations and desertions commenced. Then followed the terrible riots in New York City, when a draft became necessary to fill up our depleted ranks. For three fearful days and nights the city was terrorized by the violence of an Irish Catholic mob, right under the shadow of the Archbishop's palace. The Archbishop kept secluded in his palace, and as mute as a mouse, until notified by Mr. Lincoln that he would be held personally responsible for its continuance. He then came forth; and by a few kind words to the rioters, whom he addressed as his friends, the mob immediately dispersed, and order was restored. It only took a few words from him to accomplish what could not have been accomplished without much bloodshed, and perhaps the destruction of the city, by a military arm of our government; but mark those words were not spoken until it became necessary to the personal safety of the Archbishop. The traitor was here revealed. And now we come to the last desperate conspiracy to overthrow our government, and make the rebellion a success by a resort to the favorite policy of the Jesuits, that of assassination.

It is my purpose now to review the facts connected with the assassination of President Lincoln, and the attempted assassination of Mr. Seward, and the purpose to assassinate Vice-president Johnson, Secretary Stanton and General Grant. The object of this scheme of wholesale assassinations of the civil and military heads of the government, was to throw the country into a state of chaos, and thus retrieve the fast failing fortunes of the Confederacy. These facts, as developed on the trial of the conspirators before a military commission, and on the trial of John H. Surratt two years later, before a civil court, together with evidence secured by Father Chiniquy, and given to the world in his book, "Fifty Years In The Church Of Rome," show conclusively the hand of Rome in this stab at our nations life. I will now proceed to pass these facts in review, in their proper order, and to show their

(For a full account of which see my book entitled, "Assassination of Lincoln, A History of the Great Conspiracy and Trial of the Conspirators by a Military Commission and a Review of the Trial of John H. Surratt.")

I do not propose to affirm or deny the charge that is now being commonly and openly made by patriotic papers and lecturers that Rome was responsible for the assassination of our martyred President, but simply to present the facts, and leave my readers to draw their conclusion from a consideration of the facts in the case. My own personal convictions will no doubt be made obvious before I get through. The very fact that the charge is being made by a high class of men, men noted for intelligence, patriotism and uprightness of character, justifies us in making a careful scrutiny of the evidence on which it rests; that we may fairly judge whether or not it has been justly made. It is a charge of too much gravity and of too serious an import to be made lightly, or on insufficient grounds.

Now for the facts. And we will take, as our starting point, the fact well established, that the headquarters of the conspiracy in Washington City, was the house of a Roman Catholic family, of which Mrs. Mary E. Surratt was the head; and all of its inmates, including a number of boarders, were devoted members of the Roman Catholic Church. This house was the meeting place, the council chamber, of Booth and his co-conspirators, including Mrs. Mary E. Surratt, and her son, John H. Surratt, who, next to Booth, were the most active members of the conspiracy in preparation for the execution of the plot.

Booth, the ringleader, was born and reared a Protestant. He was only a nominal Protestant, however.

He was man of the world; a drunkard and a libertine, and utterly indifferent to matters of religion.

That under the influence of his associations in the conspiracy plot, he had become a pervert to Catholicism, was shown, however by the fact that, on examination of his person after his death, it was found that he was wearing a Catholic medal under his vest, and over his heart.

The wily Jesuit, sympathizing with him in his political views, and in hope of destroying our government, and establishing the Confederacy, which had already received the Pope's recognition, and expressions of good will and sympathy conferred upon it, had been able to pervert him to Catholicism, and to deceive him into the belief that his medal would conduce to his personal safety, and to the success of his enterprise. He had, no doubt, been baptized into the Catholic Church. This medal at once marked and identified him as a pervert to Catholicism.

Now we have Mary E. Surratt, John H. Surratt, J. Wilkes Booth, Dr. Samuel Mudd, and Michael O'Laughlin, five of the leading active spirits in the execution of the plot to assassinate, belonging to the Roman Catholic Church.

My impression is that Herold and Spangler were also members or adherents to that church. Be this as it may, they, together with Atzertot and Payne, were the mere tools, and hired agents of Booth and Surratt, and so stood ready to serve their purpose; and so it boots not to inquire into their faith or want of faith.

Our inquiry then, thus far, has established the fact that five of the conspirators were members of the Roman Catholic Church and that these five were its leaders, to whom the execution of the plot had been confided. We have also seen that their meeting place, or council chamber, in Washington, whilst engaged in perfection their arrangements for the assassinations that had been determined upon, was the dwelling place and under the control of Mrs. Mary E. Surratt and John H. Surratt, her son; both of whom were zealous slaves of the Pope, and clearly proven, by the evidence given before the Commission and by that given two years later, on the trial of John H. Surratt in a civil court, to have been leading and active members of the conspiracy. Mrs. Surratt was a diligent and faithful attendance upon church services; and from the evidence given by three or four priests in her behalf before the Commission, she had established, in their estimation, a high character for devotion and Christian piety.

It was a noteworthy fact, however, that, of all these priestly witnesses, but one admitted that he had been on specially intimate terms with her during the five months in which the plans and preparations for the assassinations were being made. Most of them had been acquainted with her for many years, and seemed to be well acquainted with her church reputation, but they had only seen her casually during these latter months. One of these, Father Wiget, was Mrs. Surratt's pastor during all this time, and testified that he knew her well; but did not know whether she was loyal or disloyal. This would seem to be very doubtful testimony, as Father Wiget was noted for his disloyalty, and could hardly have been supposed to have spent many hours with her, at different times, without ever having heard her express her views in relation to the one all absorbing topic of the time. that was uppermost in the minds of all, and formed the chief topic of conversation.

He could only say that he did not remember having heard her utter a loyal sentiment since the beginning of the rebellion; nor could he remember having heard any one speak of her as notoriously disloyal, until since her arrest. He said he had become acquainted with her through having had the care of two of her sons as his pupils, one of these was serving in the rebel army; and the other, John H. Surratt, had been a rebel emissary and spy for three years, passing back and forth between Washington and Richmond, and from Richmond to Canada and back, as a bearer of dispatches, and yet, this Jesuitical priest, endeavored so to shape his testimony as to leave the impression that the topics of conversation between himself and Mrs. Surratt, whilst all this as going on, and much more, was confined to such topics as the state of her health, the weather, etc.. He was very positive as to her good Christian character, which he had been summoned to prove, but had very little recollection of anything else.

Father Boyle, resident at St. Peter's Church, Washington City, had made the acquaintance of Mrs. Surratt eight or nine years previously, but had only met her three or four times since. He had always heard her well spoken of; never had heard anything to her disadvantage; had never heard her utter any disloyal sentiments.

Father Stonestreet, pastor of St. Aloysius Church, Washington City, had made her acquaintance twenty years before; had only occasionally seen her since; had scarcely seen her at all during the last year or two; had always looked upon her a proper Christian matron. At the time of his acquaintance with her, (which he was locating twenty years back) there was no question of her loyalty. Replying to a question by the Judge Advocate: -"He did not remember having seen her, thought he might have done so transiently, since the commencement of the rebellion; and knew nothing of her character for loyalty, only what he had seen in the papers."

Father Lanihan, a Catholic priest living near Beantown, in Maryland, testified that he had been acquainted with Mrs. Surratt for about thirteen years; intimately for about nine years; that he had been very familiar with her, staying at her house. He regarded her as a good Christian woman, highly honorable; he had frequently talked with her about current events, and public affairs since the rebellion, but could not remember ever having heard her express any disloyal sentiments; neither had he heard her reputation for loyalty spoken of.

Finally, Father Young, of St. Dominick's Church, on Sixth Street, Washington City, was called in her behalf; he had been acquainted with Mrs. Surratt about eight or ten years, but not intimately; he had occasionally seen her, and visited her; passed her house about once a month, and generally called there, staying sometimes an hour. He, like the others, was a good witness for her as to her character, but could say nothing as to her loyalty, or disloyalty; he had never heard her speak as to current events one way or another. How can we credit the testimony of this witness? Is it credible that he could have spent an hour in conversation with a rebel woman of such positive character and convictions, once a month, during the heat of the conflict, and yet never have heard any expressions from her on the subject that filled the minds and hearts of all, and formed the chief topic of conversation, in all classes of society'? Such silence between a rebel woman and a rebel priest, who were on intimate and confidential terms, is too incredible to be believed.

We cannot help thinking that all of these holy or unholy Fathers testified under the well understood mental reservations of the Jesuits. Father Wiget was, as we have said, her pastor, and so, we take it, was her confessor. We cannot think it at all probable that she would have engaged in a conspiracy fraught with so much danger to her, and such grave consequences hereafter, without having confided to him her terrible secret; nor without his approval. It certainly is rather strange that she should have broken her relations with him after her conviction, and taken Father Walter for her confessor and spiritual guide in her preparation for death.

There must have been some grave reason for this change; and it was made for her, by these Jesuit priests, for some important reason. It is not at all likely that at such a time, and under such solemn circumstances, she would have made this change from her pastor to another priest with whom she had not had any previous acquaintance, of her own volition. Had she been innocent, her trusted pastor would have been the one to whom she naturally would have looked for consolation. But Wiget had no doubt told her that she would incur no guilt in aiding the conspiracy, and so to Walter she could declare her innocence, having the faith of a Catholic in Wiget's power to grant her dispensation. Father Walter could say "that whilst his priestly vows would not allow him to reveal the secrets of the confessional, he could say, that from what there came to his knowledge, he knew her to be an innocent woman." There was to be a great effort made to get a commutation, or reversal of her sentence; and the strong plea of the Father was to be based on this assertion of her innocence. Failing in this, Father Walter, for thirty years, persisted in his efforts to fix upon the government the stigma of having murdered an innocent woman.

In its uniting with Father Walter in his effort to fix upon our government the stigma of a great crime, to its eternal disgrace, the Roman Catholic Hierarchy assumed, with him, the responsibility of perverting the well established truths of history, and of thus manifesting their hatred of our government, and their chagrin and bitter disappointment at the failure of their efforts for its overthrow.

So deep, and bitter, was their disappointment at the signal success of the government in the vindication of its authority, and its right to exist, that for a quarter of a century it never ceased its efforts to fix upon it the stigma of this alleged crime, and it was only estopped from this effort by the publication of my "History of the Great Conspiracy" to overthrow our government by a series of assassinations, when, fearing that its further agitation might tend to give publicity to my book, and that thus the facts of this conspiracy would become more widely known, and the truth of history vindicated, that the agitation of this charge, and contention against the government was dropped as it had become a hot potato. We must not forget, that in all this, they acted under a full knowledge of all the facts in the case. These had been fully displayed to the world through the evidence produced by the government on the trial of the assassins in 1865, and two years later, still more fully, on the trial of John H. Surratt in a civil court. These things were not done in a corner, but openly before the world. Their sympathy with the conspirators and assassins, and their enmity toward the government, was thus openly proclaimed before the world; and the attitude of the Hierarchy toward the assassination of the nation's head, was clearly manifest. It was Abraham Lincoln, it is true, that was slain, but it was the life of the nation that the blow was aimed at. The scheme to aid the rebellion by the assassination of the President, the Vice-President, the Secretary of State, the Secretary of War, and the General in command of our armies, was concocted by the emissaries of the rebel government, who kept their headquarters in Montreal, Canada. These emissaries held a semi-official relation to the Confederate government. The whole run of the evidence makes it clear that the Roman Hierarchy kept itself in close relations with these emissaries; and it is highly probable, from a consideration of all of the facts, with the head of the government in whose service they were employed also. It kept itself in these close relations for a purpose, and was most likely the original source of the inspiration of the assassination plot.

These rebel emissaries were Jacob Thompson, of Mississippi; Clement C. Clay, of Alabama; and Beverly Tucker of Virginia. These had associated with them as helpers. George N. Sanders, Dr. Blackburn, and others; men who preferred to fight in the field of political strategy, rather than on the field of battle.

These agents of the rebel government entered into a contract with J. Wilkes Booth and John H. Surratt to carry out their scheme, and also aided them in the selection of their subordinates. Whether these emissaries were Protestants or Catholics, I am not informed. My impression, however, is that they were nominally Protestants. They were all, however, wicked men, evidently accepting the maxim that "all is fair in war," and having no conscientious scruples as to the means that they employed to give aid to their cause. That the Jesuit had their ear, and aided them with his suggestions, is made probable by the fact, that in his efforts to enlist, as a helper to Booth and Surratt, a young man who was sent before the commission as a witness, on the trial, Thompson used the Jesuitical argument, that to kill a tyrant was no murder; and so, assuming that President Lincoln was a tyrant, it would be a glorious and praiseworthy act to take him off.

That the assassination plot was known to the Bishop of Montreal (Bourget) and a number of his priests, before its accomplishment, and received their sanction, was made plain by their subsequent conduct. As soon as the news of the assassination of the President was flashed over the wires, Fathers Boucher and LaPierre kept themselves on the lookout, and ready to aid any of the conspirators who might make good their escape to Canada. John H. Surratt and a companion, whose identity was never discovered, returned to Montreal, on the early afternoon of the 18th of April, the fourth day after the assassination. The unknown conspirator then sank out of sight. Surratt was spirited away from the hotel within fifteen minutes after he had registered on his return. He had registered on the same book, on his return from Richmond to Canada, on the 6th of April, had gone back to Washington and played his part in the conspiracy on the night of the 14th of April, and now, on the afternoon of the 18th had gotten back to Montreal, and was so carefully watched for, that almost at the instant of his arrival, he was spirited away, and kept hidden carefully, in the house of Porterfield, one of Thompson's assistants, who, for his greater security, had relinquished his American citizenship, and had taken the oath of allegiance to the British crown. Porterfeld told him that the detectives were on the alert, and lost no time in hiding him away.

Porterfield, deeply exercised for the safety of his charge, as also for his own, only kept him until he could communicate with Father Boucher, a Roman Catholic priest, who lived in an out of the way country parish, forty-five miles from Montreal. Father Boucher immediately sent his servant man to bring Surratt to his place for further hiding. DuTilly, Father Boucher's man, arrived before the house of Porterfield late in the evening of the 21st of April, and, taking Surratt into his carriage, drove him away under the cover of darkness, and placed him in the keeping of his master, Father Boucher. Here he remained for two months, under the most careful watch and guard of his keeper. Whilst here, he was visited frequently by some of his friends in whose employ he had incurred his guilt; and by another Father, LaPierre. This LaPierre was canon to Bishop Bourget; ate at his table, and was to him the same as a hand and arm.

A circumstance having occurred that made it necessary for Father Boucher to unload his charge, he sent him back to Montreal, as secretly as he had taken him away from there, and placed him in the care of Father LaPierre.

This Father provided Surratt with an upstairs chamber in his own father's house, right under the shadow of the Bishop's palace. Here he kept him for three months, never permitting him to leave his room in the daytime, and never at night but in company with himself, and in disguise. Thus was Surratt kept hidden away for five months, in the care and at the charge, of the Roman Catholic Church; two of its priests keeping watch, and ward over him, with a full knowledge of his crime, thus making themselves accomplices after the fact, as they also, no doubt were, before its accomplishment. But how about Bishop Bourget? He stands behind the scenes, it is true, but was he not equally guilty? The organization of the Hierarchy is a complete military despotism, of which the Pope is the ostensible head: but of which, the Black Pope, is the real head. The Black Pope is the head of the order of the Jesuits. and is called a General. He not only has the absolute command of his own order, but directs and controls the general policy of the church. He is the power behind the throne, and is the real potential head of the Hierarchy. The whole machine is under the strictest rules of military discipline. The whole thought and will of this machine, to plan, propose and execute, is found in its head. There is no independence of thought, or of action, in its subordinate parts. Implicit and unquestioning obedience to the orders of superiors in authority, is the sworn duty of the priesthood of every grade; just as it is the duty of officers in the army; and as much the duty of the laity to their priests, as it is of the rank and file in an army to their immediate commanders.

There is a complete chain of responsibility, extending from the head all the way down to the membership. Thus the whole vast organization can be wielded, as a unit, to accomplish the plans and purposes of its head. The priest is virtually an intellectual slave to his bishop, the bishop to his archbishop, and these again to the cardinals, and all, finally, to the Popes, white and black. This being the case, it is clear that no priest would have dared to take on himself such grave responsibilities as did Fathers Boucher and LaPierre, involving so much danger to themselves, as also to the character of their church, without the knowledge and assent of their bishop. It would have been held to be an act of insubordination, fraught with the most serious consequences to themselves. But the canon occupies a peculiar relation to his bishop, and is supposed to have no other duty, but to carry out the orders which he receives from his superior. In this view of the case, which represents truly the relations between Bishop Bourget and his Canon, LaPierre, can we rationally come to any other conclusion than that Bourget was in a moral point of view, also a member of the conspiracy; neither would Bishop Bourget have dared to give his consent to this crime on his own independent responsibility. He knew he was acting in harmony with the desire and purpose of the Hierarchy, for the destruction of our government.

The Jesuit plans with the utmost art and cunning, unhampered by any moral restraints, and always with the utmost secrecy; and carries out his plans in the dark. We think, however, that this case, we have succeeded in tracing him through all the devious wanderings of his dark and slimy path, and, in fixing upon him the responsibility for the assassination of President Lincoln.

But we are not done yet. In the early part of September, 1865, these unholy Fathers thought it safe to unload their charge onto their brethren in England; and so made arrangements for sending Surratt across the Atlantic, under an assumed name, and in disguise.

For this purpose they arranged for his passage on a British steamer, the Peruvian, which was to sail from Quebec on the 16th of September, 1865.

A physician with whom Boucher was well acquainted, by the name of McMillen, had just gotten the position of surgeon to this vessel, and they arranged with him to take under his especial charge, a man by the name of McCarthy, who, for certain reasons, wished to cross the Atlantic under an assumed name, and in the most secret manner. The day before the Peruvian was to sail from Quebec, these two unholy Fathers conveyed Surratt, in a covered carriage, to the steamer that was to carry passengers for the Peruvian from Montreal to Quebec. They had disguised Surratt by coloring his hair, painting his face, and putting spectacles over his eyes. Father LaPierre went also in the disguise of a citizen's dress. Arriving on board the steamer, Surratt was immediately stored away in a stateroom, from which he did not emerge during the voyage, LaPierre remaining in his room with him. Reaching Quebec, these two unholy Fathers placed their charge in the care of Dr. McMillen; and then took their final leave of him.

CRAIG-OXLEY - February 11, 2006 11:02 PM (GMT)

They had consigned him to the care of their friends in Liverpool, by the hands of Dr. McMillen, and through whose aid Surratt succeeded in placing himself under the care of the Roman Catholic Church in a foreign land. Rome is everywhere, and always the same, and he can feel safe as long as he is in the custody of the church. Here he waited for the Peruvian to make another voyage to Quebec and return. He sent by the surgeon, to his rebel employers in Canada, a request to send him some money; but only to receive the answer that they had no money for him. The expense of sending him across the continent, to Italy, thus fell on the church. His rebel friends had now forsaken him; but the church stood by him. He was sent to Italy and was mustered into the army of the Pope. Here he remained safely hidden away for a year or more; but was finally discovered by a government detective who had been sent in search of him, and who went voluntarily, hoping to get the offered reward, and who had enlisted in the same company to which Surratt belonged. This detective informed our government of his discovery; and through the agents of our government the Pope was informed that his soldier, who had enlisted under the name of Watson, was none other than the notorious John H. Surratt, who was a member of the conspiracy that accomplished the assassination of President Lincoln.

With a shrewd show of virtuous innocence, the Pope hastened to clear his skirts, and those of his underlings, by ordering his arrest, and rendition to our government, without waiting for its requisition. He was arrested by the Pope's authority, but was allowed to escape by his guards; and thus given another chance for life and liberty. The story was, that he made his escape by a bold leap over a precipice, at the risk of his life. "Tell this to the marines; the old sailors will not believe it." He was finally captured at Alexandria, Egypt, and was brought home in chains, where he was held to answer for his crime. Let us here pause a moment to consider the relations of the Hierarchy to this crime.

The testimony given on the trial of John H. Surratt, clearly convicts two of its priests, Boucher and LaPierre, of being accomplices in the conspiracy; and by implication, as clearly convicts the Bishop of Montreal, Bishop Bourget. This testimony was spread before the world, and so must have been known to the Roman Catholic Hierarchy, yet it never called any of these priests to accountability, or held them responsible for this crime; the crime of the ages! No one of them was ever held to have forfeited his standing or good character in the church, on account of his connection with this conspiracy; and so, the Hierarchy stands before the world today, as having given its approval to their conduct in this matter.

We now come to the trial of John H. Surratt before a civil court. It is not our purpose to go into a general review of the trial; but only to show the interest taken in it by the Roman Catholic priesthood; the animus of the defense toward the government; and the means resorted to, to make sure of his acquittal. The hand of the Jesuit is everywhere traceable throughout the history of this trial; and by that hand, one of the most important trials that the history of American jurisprudence records, was well nigh turned into a farce by the skill and cunning of the defense. The cunning of the Jesuit was exercised in the preparations made in advance, to make sure of acquittal of the accused. The law of Congress, specifying particularly how juries to try cases in the criminal court, in the District of Columbia, should be secured, and was entirely ignored, in some of its most important and essential particulars. Counsel for the defense had been selected with special care. There were three of these: Mr. Merrick and the two Bradleys, Sr. and Jr. Of these, only one, Mr. Merrick, was a member of the Roman Catholic Church. The Bradleys were Episcopalians; but in their political sympathies, hostile to the government; and in full sympathy with its enemies, and with the assassins.

When the jury that had been drawn for this trial was challenged by the prosecution, and good reasons shown for its rejection, the counsel for the defense made a most vigorous, earnest and persistent effort to prevent its being set aside by the court. It is evident that they must have had a special reason for being so urgent for its retention, as the failure of the officers, whose duty it was to secure this jury, to observe the requirements of the law, was made so apparent that it could not be controverted. It leaked out, however, that sixteen out of the twenty-four drawn were Roman Catholics. and so, the reason for their determined effort for its retention was made obvious. It was set aside, and a venire was summoned, from which to obtain a jury. A jury was finally obtained, through a two-day effort and as the prosecution desired to remove, as far as possible, all religious and political considerations and influences from the trial, a considerable number of Roman Catholics were accepted on this jury. The trial then proceeded.

The defense proceeded at once to put the government and not the prisoner at the bar, on trial, They arraigned it for the murder of an innocent woman, Mrs. Surratt; and for having secured her conviction through an illegal tribunal, organized to convict, and not to try. By every means in their power they aroused a partisan spirit of political and religious bigotry; and so, surrounded the court with the air and spirit of a political convention, and removed, as far as possible, from the trial, the air and spirit of a judicial procedure. The result was a hung jury. The author was informed by a very intelligent man, who took a prominent part in this trial, that, meeting one of the jurors, who appeared to be a very frank and intelligent man, on the day after the trial, he asked him if he felt free to tell how the jury stood. He replied that they were very nearly equally divided for conviction and acquittal. He then asked him if they did not think that he was proven guilty. "Oh, yes," he replied, "we thought he was proven guilty, but we thought his conviction would be a triumph for the Radicals, and we thought that the hanging of his mother was about enough."

A most noteworthy fact in connection with this trial, as bearing upon the subject of our investigation, was the deep interest manifested by the Roman Catholic priesthood of Washington in this trial; and their sympathy with the accused. There was scarcely a day, during the trial, but what one or more of them was found in the courtroom. They also made it manifest that they were there in behalf of the prisoner at the bar; and that they were ready to aid in his defense was very apparent.

Whenever the prosecution brought a witness on the stand whose testimony was particularly damaging to the accused, a witness was always found to rebut his testimony; and was always a member of the Roman Catholic Church. It was also a very significant fact, that no one of all these witnesses was able to pass the ordeal of Judge Pierrepont's cross-examination unscathed. It looked as though the task of these priests was to aid the prisoner's counsel, by finding the witnesses that they needed; and stuffing them with the needed testimony. It was thus made manifest, during the trial, on more than one occasion, that witnesses had been hunted up and furnished with a cooked up testimony to meet the requirements of the case. It is worthy of note that whenever the prosecution thought it important to rebut any testimony a witness was always promptly found for them: and was always a Catholic. The manner of these witnesses in testifying and the fact that they could never stand the test of Judge Pierrepont's searching cross-examination, justly gave rise to the suspicion that they had been suborned and were delivering a cooked up testimony. And these facts gave rise to the suspicion that it was the special business of someone to find and stuff the witnesses for the occasion.

John H. Surratt had been a student at St. Mary's College for a year or two, at the breaking out of the war. He had commenced a collegiate course, having the priesthood in view. His sympathies were so strongly with the South that he left the college, gave up his priestly aspirations, and engaged actively in the secret service of the Confederate government.

As a student, he was very popular at the college and seemed to have won the favor of the president and faculty. The summer vacation at the college occurred during the progress of the trial, and the president took occasion to spend a day in the courtroom, and sat, all day, at the side of the prisoner in the dock. His presence there was no doubt intended to have its effect on the Roman Catholic members of the jury. It was as much as to say. "You see which side I am on." Many of the students of that college took occasion to visit their former fellow student during the trial; and always manifested their sympathy for him by the warmest friendly greetings; taking their places at his side.

How different was their treatment of his, and their fellow student, L.J. Wiechmann, who has also had the priesthood in view, but finding himself unable to continue at college, turned aside, temporarily, to replenish his pecuniary resources. He first found employment as a teacher in one of the Roman Catholic schools in the city of Washington; but finding a more lucrative position in one of the government offices, in the military department, he resigned his position as teacher, and became a clerk under General Hoffman, who was Commissary General of prisoners.

Mrs. Surratt rented her property at Surrattsville, and took a house in Washington, and as a means of support, took in boarders. Through his acquaintance with her son, John H. Surratt, at St. Mary's College, Wiechmann became an inmate of her house; and boarded and lodged there for some months before, and up to the time of assassination. In this way he saw many things that occurred in that house in connection with the conspiracy, but without understanding their import; and as he was a very agreeable and obliging young man, bright and intelligent, he seems to have been a favorite with Mrs. Surratt. He frequently escorted her to church, as she was a very devout Catholic; and was used by her on two occasions, just before the assassination, to drive her down to her former home at Surrattsville. The last time was on the afternoon before the assassination. As soon as the assassination was made known, the military police of the city and General Baker's whole secret service force, were set at work to discover the perpetrators of the crime.

It was soon ascertained that it was John Wilkes Booth who had shot the President; and the detectives soon discovered that Surratt was an accomplice of Booth; and that Booth had been a frequent caller, of late, at the house of Mrs. Surratt; and so, within six hours after the assassination, Mrs. Surratt's house was visited by the detectives, and all of its inmates were kept under their surveillance. Wiechman went, voluntarily to the Provost Marshall's office, along with another of the inmates of Mrs. Surratt's house, by the name of Hollohan, and submitted to a honestly and conscientiously, in answer to the questions put to him, narrated all that he knew in connection with Booth's visits to Mrs. Surratt's house. This examination developed the fact that Booth's business there was always with John H. Surratt, and in his absence, with his mother; and that it was always strictly private and confidential in its character.

Wiechmann was thus discovered to be an important witness in the case, and was so held by the government.

After the arrest of Mrs. Surratt and Payne, Wiechmann recognized Payne as a man who had made two visits to Mrs. Surratt's, once under an assumed name and other suspicious circumstances; and remaining there three days on the occasion of his last visit. He left for Baltimore, but returned a few days later, clandestinely, to the city, and occupied quarters that had been provided for him by Surratt, where he was kept hidden away; but had been visited, on one occasion, by Mrs. Surratt, to the knowledge of Wiechmann. All of these things he faithfully related to the examining officer. On the trial of Mrs. Surratt he showed himself to be conscientious witness to the truth. He was placed in a very delicate and trying position, in being called upon to testify in a case where those with whom he had been intimately associated, and trusted as friends, were on trial for the highest crime that they could have committed; and that involved their lives. His bearing before the court made it manifest that he felt very deeply the delicacy and gravity of his position; but that he could not shrink from a frank disclosure of the facts that had come within his knowledge, in connection with the case.

The facts disclosed by this witness, taken by themselves, though calculated to give rise to strong suspicions of Mrs. Surratt's connection with the crime, were not sufficient to have convicted her. It was only when the testimony of Lloyd and of Colonel Smith was made to supplement that of Wiechmann, that her guilt was clearly shown. Because Wiechmann had been thus brought into the case as a witness, and had given an honest and truthful testimony, he was most cruelly followed up with the persecutions of the Roman Catholic priesthood; and was treated, by both priest and layman, as an excommunicated person, only worthy of scorn and contempt; and on no account to be associated with. He was given to know that he would never be allowed to enter the priesthood: and it was only through the good offices of the government that he was allowed to find any employment by which to gain a livelihood. He never met the fact of any priest after that, for many years at least, but to see the deepest expression of hatred and scorn. He was completely boycotted, and ostracized by his church.

He was made a witness again on the trial of John H. Surratt, when every effort was made by the counsel for the defense to cause him to contradict the testimony he had given before the commission; but without avail. To discredit him, much of the cooked up testimony previously referred to was brought in.

In this effort, also, they were foiled. He was badgered on the witness stand for two whole days, and treated with the most scornful contempt by the counsel for the defense. He was branded by them as a perjured witness, although they had been unable to impeach him by the methods known to the law. He was even charged with having been a member of the conspiracy; and that he had testified falsely, to save his own neck by convicting Mrs. Surratt. It was even charged that he had bought his immunity from the government by consenting to give the testimony which it had prepared for him, in order to convict Mrs. Surratt. This charge had also been reiterated publicly, within a very recent period. Wiechmann was on the witness stand, at the time of the visit of the president of St. Mary's college, and of its students to Surratt, in the courtroom, but could not gain the slightest token of recognition from any of them. They were fast and free to show their warmest sympathy with the man who stood before the world as guilty of the murder of the President of the United States, but would not recognize the man, who, but recently, had stood on equal terms with him at the college, as a fellow student. And why was this? The only obvious reason was that he had been an honest and conscientious witness to the truth.

The same treatment was given by the counsel for the accused to another witness: Dr. McMillen.

It will be remembered that this witness was the surgeon of the Peruvian, and that it was to his care that Surratt had been committed, under the name of McCarthy, by his co-conspirators, Boucher and LaPierre.

The voyage across the Atlantic occupied seven or eight days, and as the doctor was the only man on board in whom Surratt could confide, and as he was carrying in his breast the secrets of a great crime, that was weighing heavily on his conscience, and being all the time haunted by the spectra of detectives, it was natural that he should seek relief in the confidential companionship of McMillen. He became very communicative, and related the difficulties that he experienced and overcame, in making good his escape from Washington, and in getting back to Canada, after the assassination--the parts taken by Porterfield, Boucher and LaPierre, in keeping him hidden away in Canada for five months, and many other things relating to the conspiracy; and finally, he revealed to him his identity. The testimony of this witness was entirely conclusive as to his guilt, and so, he was particularly obnoxious to the prisoner's counsel.

He was treated by them, from the start, just as they would have treated a witness who had been convicted of perjury, although they were unable to discredit him, by the legal methods. They could not look at him, or speak of him, but with the air and language of scorn and contempt. So important did it seem to discredit this witness, that priest Boucher voluntarily came all the way from Canada, to rebut his testimony. His man, DuTilly, was also brought: but notwithstanding the fact that they showed themselves to be swift witnesses, of the most ready kind, they failed to discredit this witness. Under the searching cross-examination of Judge Pierrepont they were made to corroborate the testimony given by the doctor, in all of its most essential and important particulars, and the unholy Father was made to convict himself of being equally guilty with the prisoner. (See report of the trial of John H. Surratt, published in two volumes by the government.)

It would seem that the Jesuits had had it in mind, from the beginning of the war, to find an occasion for the taking off of Mr. Lincoln. Early in the war, they set a paragraph going the rounds of the press, as far as they had it under their control, to the effect that Mr. Lincoln had been born in the Catholic Church, and had been made a member of the church by his baptism into it and that he had apostatized and became a heretic. Mr. Lincoln had seen this statement going the rounds of the press, and believed that such a gross falsehood would not have been published without a purpose. On the occasion of a visit from Father Chiniquy about this time. Mr. Lincoln called his attention to this paragraph, saying he had been greatly perplexed in trying to discover the object of its publication; and asking him if he could give any clue to the motive that had inspired such a falsehood. I will give Father Chiniquy's own account of his interview with the President on this subject.

"The next day, I was there at the appointed hour, with my noble friend, who said, 'I could not give you more than ten minutes yesterday. but I will give you twenty today: I want your views about a thing which is exceedingly puzzling to me, and you are the only one to whom I like to speak on that subject. A great number of Democratic papers have been sent to me, lately, evidently written by Roman Catholics, publishing that I was born a Roman Catholic; and baptized by a priest. They call me a renegade, an apostate, on account of that; and they heap upon my head mountains of abuse. At first, I laughed at that, for it is a lie, thanks be to God. I have never been a Roman Catholic. No priest of Rome has ever laid his hand on my head. But the persistency of the Romish press to present this falsehood to their readers as a gospel truth, must have a meaning: Please tell me, as briefly as possible what you think about that.' "My dear President:" I answered, "it was just this strange story published about you, which brought me here yesterday. I wanted to say a word to you about it; but you were too busy.

"Let me tell you that I wept like a child when I read that story for the first time. For, not only my impression is, that it is your sentence of death, but I have it from the lips of a converted priest, that it is in order to excite the fanaticism of the Roman Catholic murderers, whom they hope to find, sooner or later, to strike you down, they have invented that false story of your being born in the church of Rome, and of your being baptized by a priest. They want by that to brand your face with the ignominious mark of apostasy. Do not forget that, in the Church of Rome, an apostate is an outcast, who has no place in society, and who has no right to live. The Jesuits want the Roman Catholics to believe that you are a monster, an open enemy of God and of the church, that you are an excommunicated man. I have brought to you the theology of one of the most learned and approved of the Jesuits of his time. Bussambaum, who, with many others, say that the man who will kill you will do a good and holy work. More than that, here is a copy of a decree of Gregory VII, proclaiming that the killing of an apostate, or a heretic, and an excommunicated man, as you are declared to be, is not murder; nay, that it is a good, a Christian action. That decree is incorporated in the canon law, which every priest must study, and which every good Catholic must follow.

"My dear President. I must repeat to you here, what I said in Urbanna, in 1856. My fear is that you will fall under the blows of a Jesuit assassin, if you do not pay more attention than you have done, till now, to protect yourself. Remember that because Coligny was a heretic, as you are, he was brutally murdered in the St. Bartholomew night; that Henry IV was stabbed by the Jesuit assassin, Revaillae, the 14th of May, 1610, for having given liberty of conscience to his people, and that William, the Taciturn, was shot dead by another Jesuits murderer, called Girard, for having broken the yoke of the Pope. The Church of Rome is absolutely the same today, as she was then; she does believe and teach, today, as then, that she has the right and that it is her duty to punish with death any heretic who is in her way as an obstacle to her designs.

"The unanimity with which the Catholic Hierarchy of the United States is on the side of the rebels, is an incontrovertible evidence that Rome wants to destroy the Republic, and as you are, by your personal influence and popularity, your love of liberty, your position, the greatest obstacle to their diabolical scheme, their hatred is concentrated on you; you are the daily object of their maledictions; it is at your breast they will direct their blows. My blood chills in my veins when I contemplate the day which may come, sooner or later, when Rome will add to all her other iniquities, the murder of Abraham Lincoln."

The charge that Rome was responsible for the assassination of Abraham Lincoln was first made, so far as I am advised, by Father Chiniquy; and was founded not only on the facts which I have here given; but the facts that came to him as a result of his own personal research. His charge is distinctly and explicitly made in his book. entitled, Fifty Years in the Church of Rome." He there shows that Mr. Lincoln had incurred the deadly enmity of the Jesuits by foiling and disappointing them in an effort they made to convict Father Chiniquy of a crime, of which they had falsely accused him; and which, had they succeeded in convicting him, would not only have ruined his reputation, but would have secured his incarceration in prison.

Mr. Lincoln defended Father Chiniquy, and being furnished, apparently by a special Providence, with evidence that revealed their wicked conspiracy to destroy him, and convicted them of perjury, he was able triumphantly, to defeat their wicked scheme; and gave them such a scathing as made them tremble with rage, and slink away with vows of vengeance in their hearts.

Father Chiniquy, in making his warm acknowledgements to Mr. Lincoln, could not refrain from shedding tears. Upon Mr. Lincoln's expressing surprise at this, and saying to him that he ought to be the happiest man in the world, Father Chiniquy replied, that it was for Mr. Lincoln, and not for himself, that his tears were falling. He then explained the cause of his emotion, saying that, knowing the Jesuits as he did, and reading a purpose of vengeance in their murderous eyes, he knew that they would never rest until they had compassed his death. This occurred at Urbana, Illinois, in 1856. In the Providence of God, the duty fell on Mr. Lincoln of putting down a most formidable rebellion, and of maintaining the authority of the government by its military arm; and Father Chiniquy, realizing that a state of war would afford the Jesuits the opportunity that they sought, to at once wreak their vengeance on personal account, and give a stab at the life of the government, made three different visits to the President during his administration, to give him warning of his danger and to put him on his guard. As Father Chiniquy has kindly give me liberty to use his book freely for the purposes of this book, I have given above the result of one of these visits, and shall make still further use of his book, in closing up this inquiry.

In doing so. however, I feel that I ought to commend Father Chiniquy's book to all who desire to inform themselves fully of the character, claims, and wicked purposed of the Roman Catholic Hierarchy. Father Chiniquy had a long, varied and cruel experience in the Roman Catholic Church; spending twenty-five years of his life in its priesthood. By the grace of God he was led to see and abjure the errors of the church in which he had been reared, and so, becoming a Christian, he has spent nearly another fifty years as an able and honored minister of the Protestant church, and in warning the nation of its danger from the Roman Catholic Hierarchy, and especially from the Jesuits. Would that every American citizen could read his book! It would prove to him an eye opener.

We have now traced the history of this assassination as revealed by the testimony given before the Military Commission, and before a civil court, two years later; and we find ourselves coming in contact with the Roman Catholic Church, at every point, and always as a deeply interested party, thus showing its relation to the crime. Its sympathy was always with the assassins wherever we came in contact with it. Its animus toward government was always seen to be that of the bitterest hatred and scorn. Its manner that of a lion robbed of its prey. Its every effort was to shield, and give aid to those on trial; and when it failed in this, to cast obloquy on the government, and to bring it into contempt. Thus the history of this great crime reveals to us Rome's responsibility for the assassination of Abraham Lincoln, not as an individual man, however much of personal hatred on the part of the Jesuits might have led them to plan for his death, but as the head of the nation they desired to destroy. But we shall now proceed to give the most positive and unequivocal proof of the complicity of the Romish Hierarchy in, and its responsibility for, this crime.

Father Chiniquy was so well satisfied that the priests of Rome were at the bottom of this plot, that he spent a great deal of his time in investigating the matter, to see if he could not find convincing proof of the fact. The result of his investigations will be best given in his own words.

"Murder will out" is a truth repeated by all nations from the beginning of the world. It is the knowledge of that truth which has sustained me in my long and difficult researches of the authors of the assassination of Lincoln, and which enables me, today, to present to the world a fact, which seems almost miraculous, to show the complicity of the priests of Rome in the murder of the martyred President.

"Some time ago, I providentially met the Reverend F. A. Conwell of Chicago. Having known that I was in search of facts about the assassination of Abraham Lincoln, he told me he knew one of those facts, which might perhaps throw light on the subject of my researches.

"The very day of the murder, he said, he was in the Roman Catholic village of St. Joseph, Minnesota State, when, at about six o'clock, in the afternoon, he was told by a Roman Catholic of the place, who was a purveyor of a great number of priests who lived in that town, where they have a monastery, the State Secretary Seward, and the President, Lincoln, had just been killed.

"This was told me," he said. "in the presence of a most respectable gentleman, called Bennett, who was not less puzzled than myself As there were no railroad lines nearer than forty miles, nor telegraph offices nearer than eight miles, from that place, we could not see how such news was spread in that town. The next day, the 15th of April, I was at St. Cloud, a town about twelve miles distant, where there are neither railroad nor telegraph. I said to several people that I had been told in the priestly village of St. Joseph, by a Roman Catholic, that Abraham Lincoln and the Secretary Seward had been assassinated, the very day before, which was Friday the 14th, at 10 o'clock p.m.

"But how could the Roman Catholic purveyor of the priests of St. Joseph have told me the same thing, before several witnesses, just four hours before its occurrence? I spoke of that strange thing to many, the same day and the very next day I wrote to the St. Paul Press, under the head of "A Strange Coincidence."

"Some time later, the editor of the St. Paul Pioneer having denied what I had written on that subject, I addressed him the following note, which he had printed, and which I have kept. Here it is; you may keep it as an infallible proof of my veracity.

"To the Editor of the St. Paul Pioneer: You assume the non-truth of a short paragraph addressed by me to the St. Paul Press, viz.:

"A STRANGE COINCIDENCE!

"At 6:30 p.m., Friday last, April 14th, I was told as an item of news, 8 miles west of this place, that Lincoln and Seward had been assassinated. This was three hours after I had heard the news."

St. Cloud, 17th April, 1865.

"The integrity of history requires that the above coincidence be established. And if anyone calls it in question, then proofs more ample than reared their sanguinary shadows to comfort a traitor can now be given.

Respectfully,
F.A. Conwell.

"I asked that gentleman if he would be kind enough to give me the fact under oath, that I might make use of it in the report I intended to publish about the assassination of Lincoln. And he kindly granted my request in the following form:

"STATE OF ILLINOIS,
COOK COUNTY.

"Reverend F. A. Conwell, being sworn deposes and says, that he is seventy-one years old; that he is a resident of North Evanston, in Cook County, State of Illinois; that he has been in the ministry for fifty-six years, and is now one of the chaplains of "Seamen's Bethel Home," in Chicago; that he was chaplain of the First Minnesota Regiment, in the war of the rebellion. That on the 14th day of April, A.D., 1865, he was in St. Joseph, Minnesota, and reached there as early as six o'clock in the evening in company with Mr. Bennett, who, then and now, is a resident of St. Cloud, Minnesota. That on that date, there was no telegraph nearer than Minneapolis about 80 miles from St. Joseph; and there was no railroad communication nearer than Anoka, Minnesota, about 40 miles distant. That when he reached St. Joseph on the 14th day of April, 1865, one Mr. Linneman, who then kept the hotel of St. Joseph, told affiant that President Lincoln and Secretary Seward were assassinated; that it was not later than half past six o'clock on Friday, April 14th, 1865, when Mr. Linneman told me this. Shortly thereafter, Mr. Bennett came into the hotel, and I told him that Mr. Linneman said the President and Secretary Seward were assassinated; and then the same Mr. Linneman reported the same conversation to Mr. Bennett in my presence. That during that time, Mr. Linneman told me that he had charge of the friary, or college for young men, under the priests, who were studying for the priesthood at St. Joseph; that there was a number of this kind at St. Joseph at the time. Affiant says, that on Saturday morning, April 15th, 1865, he went to St. Cloud, a distance of about 10 miles, and reached there about 8 o'clock in the morning; that there was no railroad or telegraph communication to St. Cloud. When he arrived there he told Mr. Haworth, the hotelkeeper, that he had been told that President Lincoln and Secretary Seward had been assassinated, and asked if it was true. He further told Henry Clay Wait, Charles Gilman, who afterwards was Lieutenant Governor of Minnesota, and Reverend Mr. Tice, the same thing, and asked them if they had any such news; and they replied that they had not heard anything of the kind.

"Affiant says that on Sunday morning, April 16th, 1865, he preached in St. Cloud, and on the way to the church, a copy of a telegram was handed to him, stating that the President and Secretary were assassinated on Friday evening at about nine o'clock. This telegram had been brought to St. Cloud by Mr. Gorton, who had reached St. Cloud by stage; and this was the first intelligence that had reached St. Cloud of the event. Affiant says further, that, on Monday morning, April 17th, 1865, he furnished the Press, a paper of St. Paul, a statement that three hours before the event took place, he had been informed, at St. Joseph, Minnesota, that the President had been assassinated, and this was published in the Press.

Father Chiniquy adds,

"Though this document was very important and precious to me. I felt that it would be much more valuable if it could be corroborated by the testimony of Mr. Bennett and Mr. Linneman, themselves, and I immediately sent a magistrate to find out if they were still living. and if they remembered the facts of the sworn declaration of Reverend Mr. Conwell. By the good Providence of God, both of these gentlemen were found living, and both gave the following testimonies:

"STATE OF MINNESOTA,

STERNS COUNTY,
City of ST. CLOUD,

"Horace B. Bennett, being sworn, deposes and says, that he is aged sixty-four years; that he is a resident of St. Cloud, Minnesota, and has resided in this county since 1856; that he is acquainted with Reverend F.A. Conwell, who was chaplain of the First Minnesota Regiment in the war of the rebellion; that on the 14th day of April, 1865, he was in St. Joseph, Minnesota, in company with Mr. Frances A. Conwell; that they reached St. Joseph about sundown of said April 14th; that there was no railroad or telegraph communication with St. Joseph at that time, nor nearer than Anoka, about 40 miles distant. That affiant, on reaching the hotel kept by Mr. Linneman went to the barn, while Reverend F.A. Conwell entered the hotel; and shortly afterward, affiant had returned to the hotel, Mr. Conwell had told him that Mr. Linneman had reported to him the assassination of President Lincoln; that Mr. Linneman was present and substantiated the statement;

"That on Saturday morning, April 15th, affiant and Reverend Conwell came to St. Cloud and reported that they had been told at St. Joseph about the assassination of President Lincoln; that no one at St. Cloud had heard of the event at this time: that the first news of the event which reached St. Cloud, was on Sunday morning, April 16th, when the news was brought by Leander Gorton, who had just come up from Anoka, Minnesota; that they spoke to several persons of St. Cloud concerning the matter, when they reached there, on Sunday morning, but affiant does not now remember who those different persons were, and further affiant says not.

HORACE P. BENNETT.

"Sworn before me, and subscribed in my presence, this 18th day of October. A.D., 1883.

ANDREW C. ROBINSON,
Notary Public.

In regard to Mr. Linneman, Father Chiniquy says:

"Mr. Linneman having refused to swear on his written declaration which I have in my possession, I take only from it what refers to the principal fact, viz.: that three or four hours before Lincoln was assassinated at Washington, the 14th of April, 1865, the fact was told as already accomplished in the priestly village of St. Joseph, Minnesota.

"He (Linneman) remembers the time that Messrs. Conwell and Bennett came to his place (St. Joseph, Minnesota) on Friday evening, before the President was killed, and he asked them if they had heard he was dead, and they replied they had not. He heard this rumor in his store from people who came in and out. But he cannot remember from whom.

October 20th, 1883. J.H. LINNEMAN."

We have now before us positive evidence that these Jesuit Fathers, priests of Rome, engaged in preparing young men for the priesthood away out in the village of St. Joseph, in far off Minnesota, were in correspondence with their brethren in Washington City, and had been informed that the plan to assassinate the President had been matured, the agents for its accomplishment had been found, the time for its execution had been set, and so sure were they of its accomplishment, that they could announce it as already done, three or four hours before it had been consummated. The anticipation of its accomplishment so elated them that they could not refrain from passing it around, in this Romish crowd, as a piece of glorious news.

It is plain from this testimony that Good Friday had been set, as the time for its accomplishment; and that ways and means had been planned, and that there was to be no such word as fail.

At the time that this news had been transmitted to these Fathers, it was not known that President Lincoln would attend Ford's theatre; and so, it is plain that had not this opportunity been afforded to Booth and his co-conspirators, they would still have attempted it in some other way; that their purpose had been fixed; and so desperate was their determination that they would not have been foiled in their attempt by any difficulties that they might have had to encounter.

The word had been passed to this Jesuit college in St. Joseph, Minnesota, and no doubt to all other Jesuit institutions in the United States, in Canada and in the Confederacy, that, on that Good Friday, Lincoln was to be slain.

That this was to be done to overthrow our government is to be seen in the fact that Secretary Seward was also to be taken off that day.

This news could only have been communicated to these Jesuits by their Jesuit friends in Washington, who, under the protection and hospitality of our government, were thus, in the hour of its sore trial, and extreme peril, planning and plotting for its destruction: and ready, for this purpose, to resort to their favorite policy of assassination. I feel, however that I must give my readers Father Chiniquy's own construction of this evidence. He says.

"I present here to the world a fact of the greatest gravity, and that fact is so well authenticated that it cannot allow even the possibility of a doubt.

"Three or four hours before Lincoln was murdered in Washington, the 14th of April, 1865, that murder was not only known by some one, but it was circulated and talked of in the streets, and in the houses of the priestly and Romish town of St. Joseph, Minnesota. The fact is undeniable; the testimonies are unchallengable, and there were no railroad or telegraph communication nearer than 40 or 80 miles from the nearest station to St. Joseph. Naturally every one asked: 'How could such news spread? Where is the source of such a rumor?'

"Mr. Linneman, who is a Roman Catholic, tells us that, though he heard this from many in his store, and in the streets, he does not remember the name of a single one who told him that. And when we hear this from him, we understand why he did not dare to swear upon it, and shrunk from the idea of perjuring himself.

"For everyone feels that his memory cannot be so poor as that, when he remembers so well the names of the two strangers, Messrs. Conwell and Bennett, to whom he had announced the assassination of Lincoln, just seventeen years before. But if the memory of Mr. Linneman is so deficient on that subject, we can help him and tell him with mathematical accuracy.

"You got the news from your priests of St. Joseph! The conspiracy which cost the life of the martyred President was prepared by the priests of Washington in the house of Mary Surratt, No. 541 H Street.

"Those priests of Washington were in daily communication with their priests of St.

Joseph; they were their intimate friends.

"There were no secrets amongst them, as there are no secrets among priests. They are the members of the same body, the branches of the same tree. The details of the murder, as the day selected for its commission were as well known among the priests of St. Joseph, as they were among those of Washington. The death of Lincoln was such a glorious event for those priests! The infamous apostate, Lincoln, who, baptized in the Holy Church, had rebelled against her, broken his oath of allegiance to the Pope, taken the very day of his baptism, and saved the life of an apostate! That infamous Lincoln, who had dared to fight against the Confederacy of the South after the Vicar of Christ had solemnly declared that their cause was just, legitimate and holy! That bloody tyrant, that godless and infamous man was to receive, at last, the just chastisement of his crimes, the 14th of April. What glorious news! How could the priests conceal such a joyful event from their bosom friend, Mr. Linneman?

"He was their confidential man; he was their purveyor; he was their right hand man among the faithful of St. Joseph.

"They thought that they would be guilty of a great want of confidence in their bosom friend if they did not tell him all about the glorious event that great day. But, of course, they requested him not to mention their names, if he would spread the joyful news among the devoted Roman Catholics, who, almost exclusively, formed the people of St. Joseph. Mr. Linneman has honorably and faithfully kept his promise never to reveal their names, and today we have in our hand the authentic testimonies, signed by him, that though somebody on the 14th of April told him that President Lincoln was assassinated, he does not know who told him that!

"But there is not a man of sound judgment who will have any doubt about the fact.

"The 14th of April, 1865, the priests knew and circulated the death of Lincoln four hours before its occurrence in their Roman Catholic town of St. Joseph, Minnesota. But they could not circulate it without knowing it, and they could not know it without belonging to the band of conspirators who assassinated Abraham Lincoln."

Our case is now before the jury of our countrymen. What say you, gentlemen? Is the charge that the Roman Hierarchy was implicated in the assassination of our martyred President sustained by the evidence which we have presented; or, has it been unjustly made?

We have no doubt of the verdict of the American people when all of this evidence, both circumstantial and positive, shall have been duly considered and weighed.

The case is too plain to admit of a reasonable doubt; and the charge of being sustained, we have before us matter for the gravest consideration, and calling for the wisest, firmest and gravest consideration, and calling for the wisest, firmest and most heroic treatment. That same foe to our liberties, secured to us in our Constitution and Governmental institutions, that so insidiously and malignantly sought to take advantage of our civil war, which it had had a great hand in fomenting, to overthrow and destroy our government, is still in our midst; and under the guise of friendship for and love to our governmental institutions, is gaining position after position, to be used, finally, for their destruction. There is an impending crisis, an irrepressible conflict, before us. The history of the assassination of our martyred President, which we have now before us, reveals the desperate character of the foe that we are called to face. It is unwise to shut our eyes to the situation that confronts us. It may not be a pleasant task to contemplate the greatest of possible dangers; but it will be wiser to do so than to shut your eyes and cry peace! peace! when there is no peace. Rome will never let go her hand, nor relax her efforts to establish her despotism until she shall have been completely despoiled of her power.

Then let the trumpet be sounded throughout the length and breadth of the land, to marshal the hosts of freedom for the conflict. Let us agitate, agitate and agitate; and then let us organize for the conflict. Let this be a war of discussion and agitation for the peaceful settlement of the great issues involved, that it may not have to be settled on the field of carnage and blood.

If it fails of the former, and much to be desired settlement, then there is but the other dread alternative left. It can never be a drawn battle; it will be a fight to the finish. Rome seems now to have the advantage in the contest: but it is only because the hosts of freedom are not fully awake to the issues involved. A wily Jesuit Arch-bishop has had the ear of the President recently elected; and has endeavored to control his cabinet and other appointments in the interest of his church; and the patriotic people, who voted for McKinley, have expressed great disappointment at the freedom of access which the wily Jesuit has to the executive head of our nation. They have felt mortified and grieved to see him take up his quarters in Washington, and for months giving his attention to the political, rather than to the spiritual interests of his church. They have felt that it was ominous of no good to see this Arch-bishop and Cardinal Gibbon cultivating such friendly relations with the President, evidently for the purpose of securing certain very desirable appointments. And they have felt disposed to censure the President for allowing this to be.

But they have no reason to find fault with the President. The Arch-bishop got the party down at St. Louis, when he caused the committee on platform to reject the resolutions offered to it by the representatives of the American Protective Association; the party having made this surrender to him, he felt himself to be master of the situation, and expected, of course, to have the President in his power, just as it has turned out that he has.

Neither would the case have been different had Bryan been elected. The party that nominated him would not have entertained these resolutions had they been offered in the Chicago convention; and the candidate could not have taken higher ground than his party.

It would only have been another Archbishop that would have taken him in charge, and the result would have been the same. We have, however, grounds for encouragement in the fact, now well known, that States, which the wily Jesuit had thought he had well fixed, have been smashed by the volume of protests that came to the President from all parts of the country. The patriotic orders were weak in the convention. but strong in protests.

It becomes us now to consider the cause of their weakness in the convention. Their weakness did not lie in lack of numbers, but in the want of an organization. The vote of the various patriotic orders in the United States outnumbers the Roman Catholic vote by at least three to one; and yet it was the Roman Catholic vote that could command the consideration of the political leaders of the land. It is easy to see why this was the case. The thorough organization of the forces of the Hierarchy is well understood. It is known that this vote can be wielded, virtually, as a unit by the priesthood, and that it can be secured by whichever party makes the highest bid for it. It is thought to be a balance of power vote in a presidential election, and the priests desire to have it so considered, in order to secure the highest price for it; not in cash, but in place and power. This is the secret of Rome's power with the politicians.

And now the question of prime importance is, how is this power to be broken?

It can only be done by a compact and thorough organization of the entire patriotic vote of the country. This vote is sufficiently large to control the entire situation; but is powerless in its present disorganized condition. It is vain to think of gaining the victory over Rome through either of the two dominant parties. They have gotten so demoralized, through long subservience to Rome, and know so well the power of its organization, and have so little dread of the patriotic organizations in their present scattered and disjointed condition, that nothing short of a crushing defeat will ever cause them to follow the dictates of patriotism. It will take a new party. The flame of patriotism must be aroused to the height of a sublime endeavor. Men must be taught to follow the flag, rather than party. We must have a party that will boldly take its stand on a platform of American fundamental principles. It must declare for the immediate incorporation of the XVIth Amendment into our National and State Constitutions. This will settle, for good, the question of the appropriation of public funds to any sectarian purposes whatever, and secure the complete separation of the Church and State.

It must also declare for such amendments to our emigration laws as will exclude all undesirable classes from coming to our shores: such as criminals, paupers, illiterates, vicious, and all who are in any way disqualified for making good and desirable American citizens. Then, to those admitted, the limit of their probation must be extended to such a length of time as is necessary to enable them to become acquainted with the nature and to catch the spirit of our institutions. The right to vote must be based upon a qualification of intelligence. The rightful jurisdiction of the civil power must be exercised over all private institutions in which people are held under surveillance and control for the preservation of the rights and liberties of their inmates. No property held by any religious society, other than actual houses of worship, should be exempt from taxation. Now, whatever party can rise to the highest of these requirements for the protection of our institutions, and will incorporate these measures in its platform, should receive the undivided support of the American Protective Association, and of all of the other patriotic organizations, and individual citizens; provided, that in connection with these, it shall embrace all other reforms in our policy that are essential to the prosperity of our country. A party that is sound in its Americanism, and patriotic in its purposes, may be safely trusted to find, ultimately, the right side of all other questions.

The People's party ought in addition to its other reform measures, to be able to arise to the height of these requirements; but it will perhaps be found to be too much under the influence of the politicians, who seem to think that to set themselves against the Romish Hierarchy would be fatal to the success of any party. It will, in all probability, be found necessary to organize the patriotic forces into a new party, that will have the courage to accept, and to meet the issues presented fairly and squarely; and to take the name that logically presents itself: "The Protestant American Party."

They are but the garnered fruit of the tree of the Reformation. The foe we have to fight is the same that they had to contend against. The contention is in a part, at least, over the same issues; for it is the civil claims of the Papacy, and not its religious dogmas, that we are, in the present field of operations, called upon to resist. These latter we accord to it the right to hold, and to teach; believing with Jefferson that "error is harmless whilst truth is left to combat it;" so, that, however erroneous, and soul-destroying we may think its dogmas to be, they must still be held to be under the domain of reason, and to be overthrown by truth; and so, not under civil control. But the claim of the Papacy to supreme civil jurisdiction must be met, according to its nature, in the field of politics. To admit this claim is to surrender all human rights, and human liberty, to the keeping of a fallible fellow-mortal; and to enthrone him as a despot. This is what is done in theory by every loyal son of the church of Rome; and to bring all mankind into the same bondage with himself is ever to be his supreme endeavor.

Every Roman Catholic priest, of whatever grade, believes the Pope to be Christ's vicar on earth, and to stand to the human race, in all matters, spiritual and temporal, in the place of God. This places him in the position of supreme authority; so that all civil power must be dispensed under his direction and control. Every priest not only believes this, but is put under the obligation of his oath of ordination to use all the means that may at anytime be in his power to bring the whole world into the acceptance of this dogma, and to submission to the Pope's authority.

This is what the whole body of the Romish priesthood in the United States are engaged in today; and it means the subjugation of our Protestant civil institutions, and the surrender of our liberties. Here we have Romanism pitted against Protestantism, and its success simply means the destruction of our government, and the enthronement over us of the Prince of all Despots.

Let us then have the courage to take a name that immediately suggests the issues involved in the contest, and the nature of the contention, and thus raise a banner that will draw to its support every lover of liberty, and foe of despotism. Nothing would more alarm the foe we have to fight than this party name, that would so clearly indicate the real matter at issue; and nothing would more cheer and encourage the hosts of freedom.

I am aware that this proposition will be met with the objection that it would be unwise and dangerous to introduce the element of religious differences into our political contests, and especially, to make this the basis of party organizations.

But it is sufficient to meet this objection with the simple truth, that it is the civil claims of the Romish Hierarchy that we resist; and these come clearly under the domain of politics. In this resistance we do not interfere with, or even call in question, the Papal system of religion. Every American citizen, who had had his mind expanded with the Protestant ideas of civil and religious liberty, will ever stand ready to accord to his Roman Catholic fellow citizens the same right to protection in their rights of conscience, in matters of religion, that he claims for himself; but he will at the same time see to it, that under the guise of religion, he shall not be allowed to undermine the very foundation of these privileges.

Our country must be maintained as it is now, the land of liberty, under the protection of Protestant institutions. Let us then declare to the world this purpose, by bringing it under the control of a "Protestant American Party."

The Hierarchy has never had to encounter anything in this country that has given it so much concern as does the present patriotic awakening. It affects, however, to regard it with contempt, but at the same time redoubles its efforts to tighten its grasp on the politicians. It is to them that it looks for help, and appeals for aid. It tries to hide the real issues, by its usual resort to misrepresentation and falsehood. It represents it as a revival of know-nothingism. In this it is not so far wrong. The A.P.A. is, however, built on a broader foundation, as a result of a wider knowledge, and more extended experience of the deadly hostility of Rome to our civil institutions; and so upon a better comprehension of the safeguards that are necessary for the protection.

It represents this, and all the other patriotic organizations as founded on bigotry and for the purpose of religious persecution, and so, as being un-American and unpatriotic. And all this is to throw chaff into the eyes, that they may be closed to the threatened danger.

But in this way many well meaning people and true friends of our institutions. and lovers of our country's flag, are being deceived, and lulled to sleep. Now, why does Rome resort to this line of defense? It is because all of the facts are against her, and so, as they cannot be denied or controverted, her policy is to hide them out of sight, by changing the line of vision. Rome knows; and every American citizen ought to know, that these anti-Catholic agitators are unearthing her purposes, and uncovering her plans to get hold of all the departments of our Government; and then give to the Pope all that he claims as Christ's vicar; supreme control over our civil institutions; that he may wield the civil power for the upbuilding of the so-called church. We have only to turn to the pages of history to learn how he would use this power. We want no more of his interference with our God-given rights. We want no more union of church and state; and the danger lies more than anything else, in the seeming incredibility that there should be any persons found at this late day, and in this land of ours, who would favor a return to the rack, the thumbscrews, and other instruments of inquisition torture, for the promotion of the glory of God, and the salvation of souls.

Let the incredulous look at Rome's boasted declaration: Semper eadem. (Always the same.) Let them also scan the declarations made by Romish priests of every grade, in recent years, in the Roman Catholic Journals and Periodicals, and they will learn that all that Rome wants is the power to enable her to revive these mild methods of propagating her version of the Gospel of Christ. Why doesn't she meet the charges that are made against her openly and fairly? When it is charged that she is storing away arms in the basements of her churches, why does she not proffer the keys, and invite inspection? When it is charged that she is restraining helpless females of their liberty, for the basest purposes, and inflicting upon them untold cruelties to bring them under subjection to a lecherous, drunken priesthood, why does she not open her doors, and appeal to the civil magistrates to make the most rigid inspection and examination, that they may thus show the charges to be false? This she has never yet done, and never will do; neither will she permit it to be done as long as she can find means for successful resistance.

In the name of liberty, in the cause of humanity, let us compel her to submit to such inspections. In the name of Protestant Americanism, let us set up our banners for complete subjugation of this corrupt, unscrupulous, and dangerous foe to liberty, and murderer of human rights.

Let it be known to the world that American freemen will ever stand on the watch tower, and will compel the submission of all within the domain of our government to submit themselves to its rightful authority---that there can be in this country in civil affairs no power greater than the State.

How I would love to read the entire manuscript of this hidden book, fantastic. can I get my hands on it ? wolveshater.

Check the auction sites and anywhere you can. I've seen some hard-to-get books turn up on ebay believe me and people sell them for peanuts not knowing what they are. I would also suggest you look up that book company which David Icke is a part of which reprints amazing books.

Alexandra - December 4, 2006 01:19 AM (GMT)

Charles Chiniquy also talks about the Jesuits' murder of Lincoln. You can get his book "Fifty Years in the 'Church' of Rome" at Chick Publications, or you can run a Google search--some people actually have the book online.

Now Harris' book sounds interesting. Maybe I should search eBay myself.

I'm in northeastern Ohio, not too far south of Cleveland. I wonder whose jurisdiction I'm in, out of curiosity...?

You'll be under the rule of Robert J Scullin.

Are there one or 2 provincials for Canada? I'm in Vancouver which is the far west. I take it they run Canada from Montreal, but they must have someone out here to oversee things...especially since this is said to be the biggest heroin port in North America. It's also a hotbed of all kinds of 'satanic' activity so I'd suspect there would be a serious presence here.

CRAIG-OXLEY - October 29, 2006 10:13 PM (GMT)

Canada is split into two regions:

LOWER [French Speaking]

UPPER (Provincial Jean-Marc Laporte) [English speaking]

If you come across the French speaking LOWER Canadian Provincial let me know. I know at one time there was a Provincial who controlled both. When I find out the French Provincial of Canada I will post it here.

Jean-Marc Laporte

Avles - October 30, 2006 06:50 PM (GMT)

Two questions.

1) Who is the Provincial in Italy? Just Hans Peter?

2) I noted that Saturnia/Italy is surrounded with a Catholic belt: Croatia, Slovenia, Austria, Switzerland, noto to mention Spain and France. Does it have a role in the structure of the jurisdiction?

Thanks.

Avles.

I'm in the Province of Quebec, born there, raised there, lived there my entire life, and even I don't know. And I'm kinda worried, because there's a college not too far away from where I live (in the capital city of Quebec) that's named "College-des-Jesuites" ("College of the Jesuits"). :unsure:

No Peter Hans Kolvenbach is the SUPERIOR GENERAL and therefore he leads all his Provincials including the Italian Provincial Francesco Tata SJ.

Francesco Tata SJ

I cannot answer your next question right now as I do not know exactly!

You're correct that once the New Atlantis or New World Order as most know it gets established then truthsayers will be rounded up and removed for good. This is why we have so many Temporal Coadjutors like Alex Jones, Texe Marrs, Hal Turner weeding out the dissidents ready for their destruction, its a very old trick of the Jesuits used even with their own Company to destroy many traitors amongst them. This is why when people can't get their head round the fact that these people are giving us many facts but why would they be giving them if they were working for the Jesuit Order system. Its to lure the waking up and clever sheep so that they can prepare more harder ways to destroy us and most of all IDENTIFY us.

I've said many a time I do NOT fear death. This Earth is a wonderful place if the invisible prison is removed but until then its a hell hole and a devious covert one at that until you wake up like myself. So removal from this hell of a life would be a blessing and at the same time knowing that I will no longer make any money for the establishment just from me breathing (International Maritime Admilitary product) will suit me. So the Jesuit Order can bring whatever they wish upon me and I do not care that Provincial Michael Holman down at Stonyhurst College is aware of me or even his boss man Kolvenbach. Wether Brendan Comerford SJ and his Manresa House are keeping an eye on me I do not give a damn, this group is evil, cretinous and needs EXPOSING!

Not being afraid of death is one thing. I'm not afraid of death either. It's the transition that's troublesome. Especially if the transition involves being tortured for YEARS in a concentration camp.

Thanks 2TUFF for the info about Canada.

Your graphic illustrating the American Provincials was excellent. Sadly, few people are able to associate the Provincials as being relevant. Most people see them as boring man in costume, and not much more.

I took an introduction to Catholicism class in 1996 or so and I found church office to be filled with very suspicious, paranoid people. I will try to find out more about what is going on up here in Vancouver.

I was nearly in a movie when I walked a block north to photograph a chemtrail. A film crew was shooting in new film with holy Rosary Cathedral in the background. The movie is called Case 39. <http://www.imdb.com/title/tt0795351/>

For me, this is interesting because I turn 39 in mid November. I also had a film crew filming on the block east of my apartment last week. [It's as if I'm in the middle of a living psyop right now] Nothing of course can be "proven in court", but I have picked up a lot of static since dropping out of masonry before they could get me to the second degree. My one time business "partner" was from Montréal and a dead ringer for Henry Ford Senior. He appears to have been abused in a Catholic orphanage when one side of his influential family "assassinated" the other. He was a Rosicrucian, Martinist and probably the nastiest person I have ever met. (possible drug dealing, and doing rip-offs) I believe he was a mind-controlled individual being used to set up a business front. I had a hand in ruining his and "someone's" plans, because I would not go along with the criminality that I began to see.

<http://www.honesty.org/tkra/prebay.jpg>

In my personal case, I'm not afraid of these Jesuits. I actually am so disgusted with the global system that I nearly went through with suicide circa 1999, but my plans were circumvented by the surveillance I was under, which they did not want to reveal... but had to momentarily. (I received a transmission that stopped my planetary exit in that particular case)

The Jesuits suffer from linear brain problems. They compute reality like mathematicians and are not empathic as many of us are. They need elaborate rule sets to define reality for them. They do not appear to have the capacity to triangulate when they think. On one hand some are intellectuals far beyond the scope people like myself will ever be, but there is an entire dimension in their thought process that is completely missing. They appear to believe that all will be well once their complete monopoly rule set is implemented, but sadly for them is not the case and the entire population pretty much despises what they are doing.

The diagnosis I have made is clear. In a nutshell they are Greedtarded. I recently met an intellectual Catholic fellow who may also have been a victim of some kind of abuse. At the very least this person had been under great stress as a child. These people value money and status and they compute very rapidly. Their values are all mathematical and emotionally they are child like, but often nasty and dangerous. They easily become fixated on people such as Jews because they believe that the solution to their own problems can only come about if every one thinks according to the same set of rules. It is troubling situation because they are not slow or stupid... they are intellects, but their intuitional capacity is abysmal.

The Jesuits can attempt another Holocaust and Inquisition if they choose that that will never solve their problem. I have resolved to try to be as moral and useful as possible regardless of their threats and greed retarded agenda. What they are doing is never going to lead to a better world, and fearing them is not going to help anything. They are trying force the rest of the world to adapt to their own inadequacies, rather then search for the actual solutions. All we can do is to go on with life and try to make a difference. Eventually the general public will be forced to wake up and make changes.

I believe the root of their problem in a genetic sense is greed. These people have done nothing but inbreed and count money, assets, titles and status for centuries. They are so selfish that all they understand are binary calculations. They are the ones with the biggest problem of all, and all they're going to implement with their takeover attempt is catastrophe. As I always say, we are ruled by the law of the atom and not the dictates of foolish humans. The solution to our world quagmire is to divest ourselves of greed based thought altogether. We must become whole thinkers and not selfish, conflicting dictators. The step we must make is to rise above the level of the Jesuit mind. This may sound daunting and is difficult when one assesses their intellectual capacities, but this is a step we must take.

The binary thought processes that they base reality on can only take us so far. We have to do better, and we can do better. Psychologically they are inferior to those of us who are developing trinary thinking patterns. I am not worried about them at all, and in reality I believe they have been studying me and others from afar in search of answers that they cannot find on their own. We all are going to have to move to a new level because the age of the jungle is now ending. We have to form cooperative behavior patterns and scrap this useless survival of the fittest thought process the manifests itself as the quest for world empire.

The Jesuits are obsolete and always have been. Yes they can be dangerous and they have military capabilities. Therefore we must study ethics and begin to teach them what they do not understand. Ethics is a subject that is easy to understand if your mind can triangulate. A whole mind makes its choices based on understanding and not a hierarchy of fear based (binary) calculations. The Jesuits and Royals operate within the constraints of etiquette which is a polite form of jungle law. We must end the age of the jungle and begin the age of voluntary ethics.

If we are a civilized and behave ourselves there will be no reason for the Jesuits to take action against us. They are talented at many things, but they do not have all the answers. I will do my best to stick around, get busy and present what I have learned. Again, their system is broken and will never function as they intend it to. The only option we have is to work towards a more intelligent future. I believe that we may be able to work through the mess we are in provided that we remain ethical. Ultimately we need revised ideas as quickly as possible. Terrible events will take place in future if we fail to ensure that common sense prevails. I believe we have to do a lot more in regarding the issue of financial ethics. That is the Achilles heel of the plan for world empire.

All for now...

The Jesuits (society of Jesus) have totally taken over just about every facet of America. From all religions to all secret societies, all government agencies, intelligence agancies in America and all over the world. Here an ex-jesuit priest Alberto Rivera (murdered by the Vatican in 1997 by poisoning) tells of why and how the Jesuits are doing this. We can see the evidence of this by the attacks on our civil liberties and the U.S. Constitution. It's time to wake up. Share this video and and post it anywhere you can.

This file by the way for those who still haven't downloaded it, its about 760 meg. I know how annoying it can be not knowing how much is left.

These AVI files also player perfectly fine in a Microsoft XBOX console chipped up and running XBOX Media Center. This allows easy access to television screens and recording onto video/dvd etc easier.

This is fantastic gneiss! I have never heard the late Brother Alberto Rivera speak before nor have I seen a video-I have only read Bro. Jack Chick's Comic series. I have Googled in the past searching for an interview with Bro. Rivera, but was unsuccessful I hope it works because I want to hear what he had to say about his killers-the Jesuit Order who infiltrated a Bible believing Protestant church and poisoned this courageous hero. The host Jim Arrabito was murdered by the Order having sabotaged a plane he was on board. I do not agree with the Seventh Day Adventists being a saved, born again King James Bible believing Independent Baptist-Calvinist but they have exposed the Jesuits and their Vatican and for that I commend them. Thank you gneiss for finding this video and linking it for us.

Brother Nicholas N. Rivera

CRAIG-OXLEY - July 27, 2006 12:07 AM (GMT)

Wow I didn't realise the host was assassinated at all let alone by the Jesuits, thats sad news indeed. Yes Nicholas this video explains well the Order's infiltration into the protestant churches and much more, with PLENTY of footage of Alberto Rivera. You can see that Alberto Rivera was a very knowledgable man and something about him gives a presence of high intelligence and power just perfect for the Sons of the Perfect. Amazing video which should be copied and posted to all local protestant churches.

So the host died too thats bad cause he seemed like a nice guy. I believe a few others have been "taken care of" by plane crashes as well. All they need to do is sabatoge something on the plane then you could lose full control over it.

That reminds me didnt someone try to assassinate Bush Sr a few months ago the plane he was suppose to go in crashed and the pilots was killed.

According to Jack Chick, Alberto wound up with a type of cancer...he was poisoned. Jesuits are supposed to be masters of poisoning.

I have the comics too, and Alberto put up with a lot of guff...getting shot at, run off the road in his car, someone tried to put ground glass in his food at a prayer meeting...he was Jesuit Enemy #1.

AVBibleBeliever - July 27, 2006 05:11 AM (GMT)

See this webpage- http://www.manresa-sj.org/stamps/1_Loyola_2.htm and see the Espana (Spain) stamp picturing Loyola and a sun with the all-seeing eye of Horus/ Lucifer/Satan. I sent this to you sometime ago and you displayed the actual photo so people could see it for themselves that the the Sons of Loyola head the Illuminati and according to the late Brother Alberto Rivera-Loyola founded the Spanish Alumbrados so it all makes sense.

The Illuminati/Freemasonry is openly secular and the Jesuit Order is openly religious. According to Unam Sanctam (1302) by Papal Antichrist Boniface VIII. Though he was not referring to the Jesuit Order or the Illuminati at the time it was written you can see how Unam Sanctam is applied today and why the Jesuits love it so and incorporated its claim of universal spiritual and temporal power of the Papacy controlled by the Black Pope in their evil and bloody Council of Trent and Extreme Oath of the Fourth Vow. This is what a Professed Fourth Vow Jesuit lives for and the end that he believes justifies the means to achieve this diabolical aim.

"Both swords, therefore, the spiritual and the temporal, are in the power of the church. The former is to be used by the church, the latter for the church; the one by the hand of the priest (the Jesuit), the other by hands of kings and knights (Knights of Malta and Knights Templars perhaps? They were the forerunners of Scottish Rite Freemasonry), but at the command and permission of the priest (Jesuit namely the Black Pope) Moreover, it is necessary for one sword (Illuminati/Freemasonry) to be under the other, the temporal authority (Illuminati/Freemasonry) to be subject to the spiritual (Jesuit Order); for the apostle says, "For there is no power but of God: and the powers that be are ordained of God" [Rom. 13:1]; but they would not be ordained [i.e. arranged or set in order; note the play on words] unless one were subjected to the other, and, as it were, the lower made the higher by the other...

The Black Pope-the head of the Roman Catholic Institution behind the scenes wields the spiritual sword (false doctrine of Romanism/Sun worship) and the temporal sword (openly secular Freemasonry, Illuminism, and all secret societies all subject to the Black Pope on Borgo Santo Spirito). He is the quintessential and most powerful fascist (Black Pope Kolvenbach has what is called the FASCI fund that is supposedly going toward "hurricane relief") Socialist-Communist, atheistic political Zionist, and Luciferian on earth.

We therefore declare, say, and affirm that submission on the part of every man to the bishop of Rome (the Antichrist Papacy) is altogether necessary for his salvation" (this why the Bible believer and the Papist have no common ground) The Pope is a usurper and a tyrant (the Jesuits say this about anyone who opposes their order and Pope both White and Black).

The Bible says otherwise so the Pope is a liar and he is of his father the devil and the lusts of his father he will do. Yea, let God be true but every man (including the Pope and his master the Jesuit General) a liar (Romans 3:4).

The Jesuits (society of Jesus) have totally taken over just about every facet of America. From all religions to all secret societies, all government agencies, intelligence agencies in America and all over the world. Here an ex-jesuit priest Alberto Rivera (murdered by the Vatican in 1997 by poisoning) tells of why and how the Jesuits are doing this. We can see the evidence of this by the attacks on our civil liberties and the U.S. Constitution. It's time to wake up.

The problem is that few people know this truth: Vatican is behind 9 11, draconian laws, assassinations, terrorism, wars, nuclear energy, mankind control... In Italy there are no sites which reveal these things. I try to do it, but i'm almost the one. We must wake up, but soon or we will wait, yes, but in a nightmare.

CRAIG-OXLEY - October 28, 2006 02:26 PM (GMT)

Most Italians are devastatingly mind controlled into worshipping the Vatican, remember she is the evil Circe.

We must wake up, but soon or we will wait, yes, but in a nightmare.

No, my dear Zret, in Italy there are NO sites in which people CLEARLY say that:

Luogo Comune of Massimo Mazzucco (in which you write).

<http://luogocomune.net/site/modules/newbb/...#forumpost55749>

Comedonchisciotte (in which you write).

ARE COVERTLY PRO-JESUIT AND PRO-VATICAN SITES.

(Not to speak to Nexus Italian site of Tom Bosco and Effedieffe of the fascist Maurizio Blondet).

For me it is not sufficiency that you put links about The Unhived Mind in your posts (and just one time about my blog which now I can't use! --- The site, Blogger, refuse all new posts; I tried to create a new blog, Avles Beluskes Exposed 2 but I can't post anything... My error or... --- added 2006 10 28 19.57 Italian hour).

THIS SOUNDS TO ME MOORE SUSPICIOUS, AS YOU WANT TO LEGITIMATE YOURSELF.

WHY YOU DIDN'T SAY A SINGLE WORD WHEN THEY (Comedonchisciotte site) MANIPULATED AN ANSWER OF MINE TRANSFERRING IT TO A BRAND NEW THREAD?

But you continue to write on these sites.... IN FACT THESE SITES NEED PEOPLE LIKE YOU (and me, but fortunately they couldn't no more manage me because I spooke clearly!) IN ORDER TO ATTRACT ALL KIND OF PROTESTER AND TO CLOSE THEM IN THEIR DUMMY AND COVERT PRO-JESUIT PAGES!!!

Is not sufficient to talk about the "Evil of the Vatican". If you do this AND - CONTEMPORANEAOUSLY - DO NOT CLEARLY RESPONSE THE ROLE OF THE "ALTERNATIVE" SITES IN THE SATURNIA/ITALY COUNTRY, YOU HELP THE BLACK POPE WHO IS ALWAYS SEARCHING FOR COVERT AGENTS.

You remember me the old "democristians", the old Italian Political Christian class, who spoke with great knowledge of rethoric and philosophy, obviously in order to cheat people.

I DON'T TRUST YOU.

Title: The REAL Controllers of the USA

Description:  FULL VERSION ***

TruthSeeker24 - January 30, 2006 04:34 PM (GMT)

FACING AMERICANS TODAY!

Issue # 74 // January 13, 2006//editor: Darryl Eberhart

http://www.tacklingthetoughtopics.net/Eber...ollers_usa.html

(Updated: Evening of January 13, 2006 with additional paragraph for Internet posting)

“The Real Controllers of the USA”

(And of Much of the Rest of the Western World)

The questions of the day concerning these very powerful controllers:

- (1) Are they “the Jews, Israel, & the Zionists”, or are they the Vatican and her Jesuits?
- (2) Who really choreographed World War II – was it “the Jews and the Zionists”, or was it the Vatican and her Jesuits?

((NOTE: All emphasis throughout this newsletter, unless otherwise noted, is by the editor of “Tackling the Tough Topics (TTT)”. Some issues of my TTT newsletters and my “Examining the Tough Issues (ETI)” newsletters can be read on the following three Internet web sites:

www.tacklingthetoughtopics.net , www.calltodecision.com , and www.libertytothecaptives.net. The last site has a link to the first site.))

WARNING: This issue of the TTT newsletter may seriously “disturb” some folks’ “comfort zones”. However, TRUTH is more important than any of our “comfort zones”.

IMPORTANT NOTE #1: I (the editor of the ETI & TTT newsletters) am not a Roman Catholic; I also most definitely am not anti-Roman Catholic as far as individual Roman Catholics go. My dad and 90% of my relatives are Roman Catholic; my best friend is Roman Catholic; and the majority of my friends are Roman Catholic. I am, however, against the top levels of secret societies (from the hierarchy of the Jesuit Order to the hierarchy of Freemasonry). This is because these secret societies control the leadership of the Roman Catholic Church (through the Jesuit Order and P2 Masonry). These secret societies also control the leadership of most of the larger, non-Catholic, Christian denominations. I am also against any religious hierarchy that tries to place itself equal to or above the Lord Jesus Christ, the Son of God – or equal to or above God’s Holy Word (i.e., the Holy Bible) and His Ten Commandments!

IMPORTANT NOTE #2: We can no longer afford to REMAIN SILENT on these issues for fear of offending any particular group – in this case, Roman Catholics. Please carefully consider this quote by author Dave Hunt: “We are told to love one another as Christ has loved us. Pop psychology trivializes that command by equating it with a ‘positive’ attitude. Forgotten is the first duty of love: to speak the truth (Ephesians 4:15). Real love does not flatter or soothe when correction is needed but [rather] points out the error which is blinding and harming the loved one. Christ said, ‘As many as I love, I rebuke and chasten; be zealous therefore, and repent’ (Revelation 3:19). Instead, the idea is now current that love excludes rebuke, ignores the truth, and seeks unity at any price. Only disaster can result.”

Why Am I Writing More & More About Roman Catholicism?

This editor of the ETI and TTT newsletters has been writing more on the Roman Catholic Church’s hierarchy, and especially its Jesuit Order, in recent newsletters because I keep uncovering more and more about the deep hatred that the hierarchy of the Roman Catholic Church has for independent Bible-believing Christians, Protestants, Orthodox Christians, and Jews. We Americans have, for the most part, been largely ignorant of the well-documented history of the Roman Catholic Church in conducting brutal religious genocide (via Inquisition, ‘holy’ wars, and ‘holy’ crusades) against all the afore-mentioned groups. (Please see my TTT newsletters entitled “Death by Government and Death by Church” and “Bloody Hands & Wicked Hearts” on the following Internet web sites: www.tacklingthetoughtopics.net and www.calltodecision.com.) Sadly, many Americans believe the “ecumenical rhetoric” of the Roman Catholic Church’s hierarchy – i.e., that she has “changed her ways” and now loves all the “separated brethren”. However, my study of the Papacy shows me that this is just a RUSE. (Per Webster’s New World Dictionary a “ruse” is: “a stratagem” [which is] “any trick or scheme for achieving some purpose”.) The “purpose” is to bring all non-Catholic Christian denominations under the “umbrella” (i.e., the authoritative and totalitarian rule) of the Papacy!

Yes, the Papacy, despite its “ecumenical rhetoric”, has not changed a bit over the many centuries in the following categories:

- Its deep hatred of Jews, all independent Bible-believing non-Catholic Christians, Protestants, and Orthodox Christians (as recently as the 1940s we find the Roman Catholic Ustashi in Croatia, led on by priests, monks, and friars, brutally slaughtering from 600,000 to one million Serb Orthodox Christian men, women, elderly, and children);
- Its long-held dream to bring all non-Catholic Christians under its monopolistic, totalitarian, ecclesiastical control;
- Its long-held dream to head up a totalitarian one-world religious organization; and,
- Its long-held dream to bring all world leaders – especially those in “Christian” countries – under the temporal power of the pope. (That is, the Papacy would be the top player and “controller” in a one-world government – just like it was the top player and “controller” on the European continent for many centuries! Kings indeed bowed before popes.)

Indeed, power – absolute power – has long been the Vatican’s “primary objective”. History has recorded the Vatican’s deep hatred for religious liberty and freedom of conscience. The U.S. Constitution, with its “Bill of Rights” guaranteeing such liberties, has long been hated by the Vatican. (For a good example of this hatred of religious liberty and freedom of conscience, read the Syllabus of Errors that was issued in 1864 by Pope Pius IX.) I have heard that there is an acronym in use by some Knights of Columbus in America. This acronym is “M.A.C.”: “Make America Catholic”. America is the last “roadblock” in the way of the Vatican and the rest of the globalist rich and power elite in their dreams for one-world government and one-world religion. Is America scheduled for a religious genocide – another Inquisition – as occurred in the 1940s in Croatia? I believe the danger is very real and possibly quite imminent – and that is why I am writing about the Roman Catholic Church’s hierarchy, its long-held dreams for domination, and its well-documented history of religious genocide!

DEFINITIONS (Listed, hopefully, alphabetically):

((Please carefully read all these definitions – they are critical to understanding this newsletter.))

“ADL” (per Editor of TTT): The Jewish Anti-Defamation League – a sub-organization of the Jewish Masonic B’nai B’rith organization.

“B’nai B’rith” (per Editor of TTT): A Jewish Masonic organization.

“B’nai B’rith” (per 1955 World Scope Encyclopedia): “(Hebrew [for] ‘Sons of the Covenant’): Oldest and largest Jewish service and fraternal organization in the U.S. Founded [in] 1843; membership in this country and Canada, 1950, was 345,000... Lodges also exist in more than a score of foreign countries... National Headquarters are located at Washington, D.C.”

“Freemason” (per Webster’s New World Dictionary): “A member of an international secret society having as its principles brotherliness, charity, and mutual aid.”

“Front” (per Webster’s New World Dictionary): (Meaning #15): “A person or group used to cover or obscure the activity or objectives of another controlling person or group.”

“Illuminati” (per Webster’s New World Dictionary): “1. People who have, or profess to have, special intellectual or spiritual enlightenment. 2. Any of various societies, usually secret, composed of such people.”

((Ed. Comment to the preceding definition: The modern version of the Illuminati was formed on May 1, 1776 by Jesuit-trained Adam Weishaupt, who taught Catholic Canon Law at Jesuit Ingolstadt University in Bavaria (in southern Germany). Weishaupt pretended to leave the Jesuit Order (i.e., he was ‘sheep dipped’ – see definition of ‘sheep dipping’ listed later in this newsletter) so that he could set up a front group called the Illuminati (that the Jesuits could use for their own purposes). This Jesuit front group, the Illuminati, fomented and orchestrated the bloody French Revolution of 1789-1799. Thus, by using this “front group”, the Jesuit Order was given a great degree of “plausible deniability” as to its role in the French Revolution.))

“Israel” (per Webster’s New World Dictionary): (Meanings #5 through #7): “5. Country between the Mediterranean Sea and the country of Jordan: established (1948) by the U. N. as a Jewish state... 6. The Jewish people, as descendents of Jacob. 7. Any group of Christians regarding themselves as chosen by God.”

“Jesuit” (per Webster’s 1828 Dictionary of the English Language): “One of the Society of Jesus, so called, founded by Ignatius Loyola; a society remarkable for their cunning in propagating their principles.”

“Jesuitism” (per Webster’s 1828 Dictionary of the English Language): “[1.] The arts, principles and practices of the Jesuits. 2. Cunning; deceit; hypocrisy; prevarication; deceptive practices to effect a purpose.”

((IMPORTANT NOTE: Please carefully read the following excerpts about the Jesuit Order.))

“Jesuit Order” or “Jesuits” (Excerpts from the 1955 World Scope Encyclopedia):

“Jesuits, or Society of Jesus: A monastic order of the Roman Catholic Church, founded (1536) in Paris by Ignatius of Loyola. Originally the special function of the order was to care for the sick and to fortify the position of the Pope within the [Roman Catholic] Church. [Ed. Note: The Jesuit Order was primarily founded to counter the Protestant Reformation.] The latter function soon became the principal one of the order and thus it is not surprising that the order was approved by Pope Paul III as early as 1540, the first generalship being vested in the founder. By the time Ignatius died in 1566...his order had increased from 60 to more than 1000 members. The members had to vow not only chastity, poverty, and implicit obedience to authority...but, especially, compliance with the commands of the Pope in going to any country and under any conditions to convert heretics and infidels, especially Moors and Jews.

...Their special obedience to the Pope naturally caused the Jesuits to fight against the greatest danger to the Catholic Church, Protestantism. Through this fight, the Jesuits developed political talents which soon made the members of the order the most versatile representatives of the Catholic Church in worldly affairs. In order to achieve this goal, a complicated organization of the utmost rigidity was developed. The Jesuits received the rights both of mendicant orders and of secular priests. They recognized only the superiority of their general [Ed. Note: the Jesuit Superior General] and the Pope. This gave them great worldly power. Furthermore, from their inception they devoted much interest to education, and early in their history were appointed to many highly important chairs of theology at the leading universities of Europe.

...Associated with all layers of society, from the humble to the powerful, the Jesuits combined great intellectual versatility and a shrewd political apprehension with a deep religious mysticism which was especially connected with the adoration of the Blessed Virgin. A certain soldierly spirit was furthered by the constitution of the order which provided severest punishment for members who did not comply with their vows.

...The Jesuits tried also to restrain nationalistic tendencies everywhere and to emphasize the universality of the Catholic Church. Their missionary branch was no less important. Due to the fact that they [initially] worked principally in the Indies, Japan, China, and Abyssinia, the Jesuits' spiritual work was often connected with the play of power politics. [Ed. Note: And it still is!] Thus they often played, directly or indirectly, a vital role in the political and economic conquest of the countries in which they served. ... Flourishing particularly in Spain and Portugal, members of the [Jesuit] order were among the first to set foot on the Spanish and Portuguese colonies in America.

Their remarkable rise in power at European courts [Ed. Note: where they became father confessors to kings (and their mistresses), queens, princes, and other leading figures in the royal court] and among the people led many institutions of learning, their teachers, and the non-Jesuit clergy to fear the Jesuits. It was largely for this reason that the parliament of France resisted the Jesuits in their attempts to obtain a foothold.

...By 1710, the order had more than 19,000 members and more than 22,000 by 1749. Increasingly feared and suspected by many European rulers [Ed. Note: most of whom were Roman Catholic], they were first driven out of Portugal (1759), and other countries followed suit. [Ed. Note: This occurred because the Jesuits had a very nasty habit of fomenting wars and revolutions, and of assassinating heads of State who wouldn't "play ball" with them.] In France...they were finally expelled in 1764. [Ed. Note: The French Revolution was "payback" for that expulsion.] Three years later Spain revoked its approval of the order. [Ed. Note: By 1931, according to Canadian historian J.E.C. Shepherd, the Jesuits had been expelled from 83 countries, city-states, and cities.]

In 1773, Pope Clement XIV suppressed ["forever"] the entire Jesuit Order by a papal bull, but in 1814, it was restored by Pope Pius VII. [Ed. Note: Pope Pius VII restored the Jesuit Order in exchange for his release from prison, where he had spent five years thinking over his decision to restore the Jesuits.]

...Later in the 19th century, however, the Jesuits were alternately driven out and permitted to exist in various European countries. They had to leave Italy in 1861, but were allowed to return in 1929. They were expelled from Germany in 1872, but permitted to exist there again after the fall of the Empire in 1918. In France the order was frequently expelled and restored after 1830 and finally permitted to return in 1919. England, Ireland, and the U.S., however, never passed any laws against the Jesuits. [Ed. Note: This was not a very smart move!]

At present [Ed. Note: this was written around 1955], the order totals about 25,000 members in 50 'provinces' [Ed. Note: each supervised by a Jesuit Provincial General], several of them in the U.S. Their influence on the hierarchy of the [Roman] Catholic Church has increased continually since about 1860. In the U.S. they possess a large number of educational institutions, the most noteworthy being in New York City; Washington and Georgetown, D.C.; Baltimore; Buffalo, New York; St. Louis, Missouri; New Orleans, Louisiana; Denver, Colorado; Cincinnati and Cleveland, Ohio; Omaha, Nebraska; and San Francisco, California."

"Jew" (per Webster's New World Dictionary): "1. A person descended, or regarded as descended, from the ancient Hebrews of Biblical times. 2. A person whose religion is Judaism."

"Knights of Columbus" (per Webster's New World Dictionary): "An international fraternal, benevolent, and proselyting society of Roman Catholic men, founded in 1882." [Ed. Note: I have heard that it is also called "the Pope's militia".]

((Ed. Comment concerning the preceding 'definition': Author and publisher Jack T. Chick tells us the following about the Knights of Columbus in his 1983 book Smokescreens: "The legions of Rome are awesome. More than one million practicing Catholics make up the ranks of the Knights of Columbus. They are fraternally pledged to the ideal of bringing America under papal rule. They are powerful, wealthy, [and] loyal."))

"Knights of Malta" (per excerpts from the Order's own historical data as provided to Eric Jon Phelps, author of the well-researched book Vatican Assassins):

"The Order of St. John [Ed. Note: which later became the Knights of Malta] was founded before the taking of Jerusalem in 1099 by the armies of the First Crusade [Ed. Note: by Roman Catholic Crusaders, and in accordance with the proclamation calling for 'Holy Crusade' by Pope Urban II]. It began as a monastic community dedicated to St. John the Baptist, which administered a hospice-infirmary for pilgrims to the Holy Land. Originally connected with the Benedictines, it became, under Blessed Gerard (1120), an independent organization. By the [papal] Bull of 15 February 1113, addressed to Gerard, Pope Pascal II approved the confraternity of the Hospital of St. John, placed it under the protection of the Holy See, and ensured its right of freely electing its heads...without any interference from other ecclesiastical or any lay authority. In virtue of this [papal] Bull and of subsequent Papal acts, the Hospital became an exempt Order of the [Roman Catholic] Church.

Owing to the political situation after the setting up by the Crusaders of the Kingdom of Jerusalem, the Order...was obliged to assume military functions for the protection of the sick, the pilgrims, and the Christian territory which the Crusaders had won back from the Muslims. Accordingly, the Order of the Hospital of St. John acquired the additional character of an Order of Knighthood. The Knights were thus also Religious, bound by the three monastic vows of Obedience, Chastity, and Poverty. It thus became a persona mixta, a religious-military Order.

...In 1291 Acre, the last Christian stronghold in the Holy Land was lost and the Order settled temporarily in Cyprus.

...With the occupation of the island of Rhodes, completed in 1310...the Order acquired territorial sovereignty as well (and the Knights of St. John came to be called Knights of Rhodes).

...The Knights gallantly repulsed numerous Turkish assaults, until the Sultan Suleyman the Magnificent attacked Rhodes... On Christmas Eve of 1522 the Knights were forced to capitulate and, on 1 January 1523, left the island with military honors. For the next seven years the Order, while vested with international sovereignty, was deprived of territory, until the cession by the Emperor Charles V...of the islands of Malta, Gozo, and Comino, as well as Tripoli in North Africa, in sovereign fief.

...The navy of the Order of St. John (or of Malta as it now came to be called) became one of the most powerful in the Mediterranean...

...In 1607 and, again, in 1620, the dignity of Grand Master was conjoined with the title of Prince of the Holy Roman Empire and in 1630 with the style of Eminence.

...In 1798 [Napoleon] Bonaparte, engaged in a campaign against Egypt, occupied the island of Malta and drove out the Order.

...After temporary seats in Messina, Catania, and Ferrara the Order finally established itself in 1834 in Rome, where it holds, extra-territorially, the Malta Palace... From 1805 the Order was ruled by Lieutenants, until in 1879 when Pope Leo XIII restored the Grandmastership and the honors of a Cardinal attaching to it.

...The Order of Malta constitutes the sole unbroken continuation of the Order of the Hospital of St. John recognized in 1113. It alone is a religious Order of the Catholic Church and at the same time a Catholic Order of Knighthood.

...On April 28, 1927 at the special request of...Pope Pius XI, the Supreme Council of the Sovereign Military Order of Malta granted a Constitution (Charter) creating the: American Chapter of the Knights of the Sovereign Military Order of Malta.”

((Interesting Note by Editor of TTT: The Hospitallers (later to become the Knights of Malta) were one of three religious-military orders founded in the 12th century – the other two being the Knights Templar (or, the Templars) and the Teutonic Knights. Concerning the Templars we are told the following by the 1955 World Scope Encyclopedia: "The Templars were founded in Jerusalem... The new order was given lodgings near the so-called Temple of Solomon... It was formally confirmed by Pope Honorius II in 1128. ...The order became...the international bankers of their time. They were the predecessors of the great banking families such as the Medici. ...The Templars were brought down by [King] Philip IV of France, and Pope Clement V. ...The order [i.e., the Knights Templar] was disbanded in 1312, and much of their great wealth was given to the Knights of St. John [which later became the Knights of Malta]." This is indeed very important to remember – that this Roman Catholic Military Order, the Knights of Malta, which is co-located with the Jesuit Superior General in Rome, inherited "much" of the "great wealth" of the Knights Templar! Also quite interestingly, at least three Knights of Malta have headed up the CIA: William "Wild Bill" Donovan, John McCone, and William Casey. Another Knight of Malta, James Jesus Angleton, for many years was the chief of the Counterintelligence Division at the CIA – as well as heading up both the Vatican and Israel "Desks" at the CIA – and, was the CIA liaison to the Warren ("Whitewash") Commission.)

"Mafia" (per Webster's New World Dictionary): (Meaning #2): "A secret society of criminals thought [Ed. Note: it has been well proven] to exist in the U.S. and other countries, engaging in blackmail, illicit trade in narcotics, etc."

((Ed. Comment to the preceding definition: If you doubt that the Mafia exists, then please read the book Double Cross by Sam and Chuck Giancana. This book reveals connections between "the Mob" and the CIA – especially in the assassination business. It is $10.45 postpaid from "Radio Liberty". To order a copy by credit card, please call their toll-free order line at 1-800-544-8927.))

"Masonry" (per Webster's New World Dictionary): (Meaning #3): "Same as Freemasonry."

"Opus Dei" ((per The World Book Dictionary (1989)): "An international religious organization of Roman Catholic laymen and priests, founded in Spain." ((Ed. Question: Might the primary objective of this organization, which includes in its membership a fair number of wealthy and powerful Roman Catholics, be to advance the New World Order agenda of the Papacy?))

"P2 (or P-2) Masonry" (per John Daniel, author of the book The Grand Design Exposed): "There is a Masonic Propaganda group, number two...known as the 'P-2 Club', with its headquarters being in Rome. ...The P-2 Club is a propaganda society of the world's elite which includes high-ranking Roman Catholic prelates and, of course, Jesuits."

((Ed. Comment to the preceding 'definition': P2 Masonry had its fingerprints all over the murder of Pope John Paul I, who was eliminated when he decided to “clean house” at both the Vatican and the Vatican bank – i.e., he had learned that many top-level Roman Catholic prelates, including cardinals, were high-level Masons and he had made plans to remove them from power. If you have trouble believing that Pope John Paul I was murdered, then I suggest that you read the book The Murder of John Paul I by Vance Ferrell. This book is $6.50 postpaid. It provides very strong evidence that Pope John Paul I was murdered by his Masonic enemies inside the Vatican. “Papacy” (per Webster’s New World Dictionary): “1. The position, authority, or rank of the pope. 2. The period of time during which a pope rules. 3. The succession of popes; popes collectively. 4. The government of the Roman Catholic Church, headed by the Pope.”

“Red Herring” (per Webster’s New World Dictionary): (Meaning #2): “Something used to divert attention from the basic issue.”

“Scapegoat” (per Webster’s New World Dictionary): (Meaning #2): “A person, group, or thing upon whom the blame for the mistakes or crimes of others is thrust.”

“Sheep dipping” (per author Craig Roberts in his excellent book The Medusa File):

“An individual who was ‘sheep-dipped’ was discharged from the military ‘on paper’, but during his absence his time in grade, promotions, retirement years and other perks continued just as if he had never left the service. After serving with the CIA, the person could return to his regular branch [of military service] and continue just as if he had never left. ...During the Cold War, and later Vietnam, it [i.e., sheep dipping] was done to provide the CIA – by now referred to as ‘the Company’ because of the number of contract agents being handled – with a system of ‘Plausible Deniability’.”

((Ed. Comment to the preceding definition: The Vatican has done the same thing for centuries through its Jesuit “temporal coadjutors” – i.e., its “Jesuits of the short robe” – men who infiltrate governments, publishing companies, newspapers, other church denominations, other churches’ seminaries, revolutionary movements, etc., in order to “steer” (i.e., direct) these governments, organizations, institutions, and movements in the direction that the Vatican (or the Jesuit Superior General) desires! Jesuit-trained Adam Weishaupt (who taught Catholic Canon Law at Jesuit Ingolstadt University in Bavaria) is a classic example of this “Jesuit sheep dipping”. Weishaupt, who pretended to leave the Jesuit Order (i.e., he was ‘sheep dipped’), set up a front group called the Illuminati on May 1, 1776 that the Jesuits could use for their own nefarious purposes. This Jesuit front group, the Illuminati, fomented and orchestrated the bloody French Revolution of 1789-1799. Thus, the Jesuit Order was given a great degree of “plausible deniability” as to its major role in fomenting & orchestrating this bloody revolution.))

“Smoke screen” (per Webster’s New World Dictionary): (Meaning #2): “Anything said or done to conceal or mislead.”

“Tammany Society [a.k.a., Tammany Hall] (per 1955 World Scope Encyclopedia): “A powerful Democratic political organization of New York City, incorporated in 1789 and historically often associated with bossism and other political abuses.”

((Ed. Comment to the preceding definition: It has been reported that one cannot run for dog catcher in New York City (and certain other large cities in the USA) without the blessing of the Roman Catholic Knights of Columbus!))

“Vatican” (per Webster’s New World Dictionary): “1. The papal palace, consisting of a group of buildings in Vatican City. 2. The papal government or authority.”

“Vatican City” (per Webster’s New World Dictionary): Independent papal state, constituted in 1929 as an enclave in Rome...”

“Zionism” (per Webster’s New World Dictionary): “A movement formerly for reestablishing, now for supporting, the Jewish national state of Israel.”

“Zionist” (per Editor of TTT): “A member of the Zionist movement (i.e., Zionism).”

HERE ARE SOME RELEVANT QUOTATIONS:

“Aware that the Rothschilds are an important Jewish family, I looked them up in [the] Encyclopedia Judaica and discovered that they bear the title ‘Guardians of the Vatican Treasury’... The appointment of Rothschild gave the Black Papacy [i.e., the hierarchy of the Jesuit Order] absolute financial privacy and secrecy. Who would ever search a family of orthodox Jews for the key to the wealth of the Roman Catholic Church?”

F. Tupper Saussy (Author of the book Rulers of Evil)

“The Rothschilds were Jesuits who used their Jewish background as a façade to cover their sinister activities. The Jesuits, working through Rothschild and [financier Nicholas] Biddle, sought to gain control of the banking system of the United States.”

Bill Hughes (Author of The Secret Terrorists and The Enemy Unmasked)

“The Jesuits function like the Papacy’s secret worldwide police. They are very secretive and go to great lengths to keep their operations secret. They tell no one that they are Jesuits. To all outside appearances, they appear as normal people.”

Bill Hughes

“...The [Roman Catholic] Church to rule the world; the [‘White’] Pope to rule the Church; [and] the Jesuits [Ed. Note: headed by the ‘Black Pope’, the Jesuit Superior General] to rule the [‘White’] Pope – such was and is the program of the Order [i.e., Society] of Jesus [i.e., the Jesuit Order].”

John Daniel (Author of the book The Grand Design Exposed)

“The Jesuit Order at last reached the pinnacle of its power and prestige in the early eighteenth century [i.e., the early 1700s]. It had become more influential and more wealthy than any other organization in the world. It held a position in world affairs that no oath-bound group of men has ever held before or since... ‘Nearly all the Kings and Sovereigns of Europe had only Jesuits as directors of their consciences [i.e., as confessor-priests], so that the whole of Europe appeared to be governed by Jesuits only.’” (1927; using a short quote by Jesuit Cordara)

Boyd Barrett (Ex-Jesuit)

((Ed. Comment to the preceding quote: The Jesuits are “back”, stronger today than they ever were in the past! And much of their power base is here in the USA (e.g., Georgetown!))

“There was no disguise they (the Jesuits) could not assume, and therefore, there was no place into which they could not penetrate. They could enter unheard the closet of the Monarch, or the Cabinet of the Statesman. They could sit unseen in convocation or General Assembly, and mingle unsuspected in the deliberations and debates.

There was no tongue they could not speak, and no creed they could not profess, and thus there was no people among whom they might not sojourn, and no church whose membership they might not enter and whose functions they might not discharge. They could execrate [i.e., sharply denounce] the Pope with the Lutheran, and swear the Solemn League with the Covenanters.”

J.A. Wylie (Rev.; Author of The History of Protestantism)

“There are other secret and semi-secret organizations such as the International Bankers, the Council on Foreign Relations, the Bilderberger Group, [the] Club of Rome, the Trilateral Commission, the New Age Movement, the Illuminati, and Freemasonry, who are all deeply involved in global politics, and who actively promote the uniting of the people of our planet under a New World Order. However...these all are but mere ‘front’ organizations, behind which the true source of power [Ed. Note: the Vatican and its Jesuits] hides and uses to distribute and channel its designs. And, as in any conspiracy, secrecy and shifting attention and blame away from itself is paramount to its success.”

John Daniel

“The conscious and intelligent manipulation of the organized habits and opinions of the masses is an important element in democratic society. Those who manipulate this unseen mechanism of society constitute an invisible government which is the true ruling power of our country... It is they who pull the wires which control the public mind, who harness old social forces and contrive new ways to bind and guide the world...” (1928)

Edward Bernays (Called by some the “Father of Public Opinion”)

“Power tends to corrupt, and absolute power corrupts absolutely.”

‘Lord’ John E. E. Dalberg Acton (1843-1902; English historian)

“Men and women become accomplices to those evils they fail to oppose.”

I. INTRODUCTION

One of the most important topics of our day that needs to be openly and fully discussed is this: “Who is really running America, and much of the western world, today – who is really at the top of the power elite pyramid? Is it ‘the Jewish bankers, Jewish Masonry such as B’nai B’rith and the Anti-Defamation League (ADL), Zionists, Jewish neo-conservatives in the current U.S. Administration, and Israel’ (collectively known to some as ‘the Jews’), OR is it the Vatican State/Papacy with her Jesuit Order, Opus Dei, Knights of Malta, Knights of Columbus, numerous monastic orders, and large priesthood?” Indeed, surely “inquiring minds” would like to know.

Another very important question that we must ask is this: “Who controls the very powerful top levels of Freemasonry?”

Another very important question that we need to consider: “Where do organized crime and big political machines (such as ‘Tammany Hall’) fit into the picture of globalist elite control of nations?”

Let’s take a brief look at some interesting history (such as the attempts to restore papal authority in England in the 1500s; the bloody French Revolution [1789-1799]; the secret meetings at Vienna, Verona, and Chieri; World War I; and, World War II), and then we will try to ascertain who is running the USA today.

I covered some interesting “territory” concerning World War II in my TTT newsletter entitled “World War II” and in my TTT newsletter entitled “Death by Government and Death by Church”. Both of these newsletters can be viewed on these two Internet web sites: www.tacklingthetoughtopics.net and www.calltodecision.com.

True history is indeed often “stranger than fiction”.

II. ATTEMPTS TO RESTORE PAPAL AUTHORITY IN ENGLAND IN THE 1500s

What happened in England in the 1500s and following centuries actually has a lot to do with what has happened in the history of the United States!

Here is a statement I made in a recent article that I wrote: “Editor of ETI and TTT has come to the following conclusion after studying the history of the Roman Catholic Church and Europe: It is virtually impossible to clearly understand European history from the 16th century to the present time without ‘viewing’ it through the ‘lens’ of the ‘Reformation-Counter Reformation’, Roman Catholic efforts to bring England back under papal authority, and the Jesuit Order.”

Indeed, the Vatican tried mightily, especially through her Jesuit Order, to return England under papal authority by force. This “force” included attempts to assassinate various English monarchs, such as Queen Elizabeth I and King James I; attempts to foment revolution and civil war in various parts of Great Britain; and an actual direct “frontal assault” invasion attempt (i.e., the launching of the infamous Spanish Armada in 1588).

Please consider this quote from an article that I wrote on December 28, 2005:

“The Vatican (and especially her Jesuit Order from the mid 1500s) tried to bring England back under papal authority by force and subversion. A number of popes and European monarchs conspired to assassinate British monarchs, to foment revolutions in the British Isles, and to actually land foreign troops on British soil. These attempts to bring England back under the pope’s authority by force reached their zenith in 1588 when the 130-ship Spanish Armada, carrying 20,000 troops, sailed for the British Isles. Pope Sixtus V had promised Spanish King Phillip II 200,000 crowns the moment the armada sailed, and another 100,000 crowns when troops were placed on shore in England. Researchers have examined British, French, and Spanish ‘State papers’ – and Vatican documents, for this era. These State papers and Vatican documents clearly show the Vatican’s involvement not only in the planned invasion of England by the Spanish Armada, but also in numerous attempts to assassinate Queen Elizabeth II!

Sadly, Roman Catholic writers, editors, and apologists have made, and continue to make, tremendous efforts to rewrite and revise history and, in the process, whitewash the Vatican and her Jesuit Order’s frequent involvement in court intrigues, assassinations and attempted assassinations of heads of State, fomenting of revolutions and wars, infiltration of governments, orchestration of religious genocide, etc. Fortunately, a number of researchers and authors, such as Albert Close, have examined various nations’ State papers and/or actual Vatican documents, which substantiate totally the nefarious activities of the Vatican and her Jesuit Order in Britain throughout the past four centuries!”

When the Vatican and her friends amongst the European Catholic monarchs saw that their efforts to bring England back under papal authority through force were not working out, they decided to bring England back under the pope’s thumb through massive infiltration of the British government, British publishing interests, churches and seminaries in Great Britain, etc. Where force had failed, infiltration succeeded beyond the Papacy’s wildest dreams!

When the Vatican and her friends amongst the European Catholic monarchs saw that their efforts to destroy the American Constitutional Republic (with religious liberty) through force, they decided to destroy the American Constitutional Republic through massive infiltration of its government, its publishing interests, its churches and seminaries, etc. Where force had failed, infiltration succeeded beyond the Papacy's wildest dreams! ((If you don't believe this, then please check out F. Tupper Saussy's quotes in Section X., A.))

CRAIG-OXLEY - January 31, 2006 12:43 AM (GMT)

III. THE FRENCH REVOLUTION (1789-1799)

The modern version of the Illuminati "took the heat" for fomenting and orchestrating the bloody French Revolution of 1789-1799. But who were the real culprits, working as they usually do, "behind the scenes"?

Remember how we earlier described Jesuit-trained Adam Weishaupt, founder of the modern version of the Illuminati, as a Jesuit who had been "sheep dipped". In other words, Adam Weishaupt pretended to forsake the Jesuits while continuing to work "under cover" for the Jesuits. (Please see again the definition for "sheep dipping" at the beginning of this newsletter.) By the way, Weishaupt died "in the good graces" of the Roman Catholic Church!

Here are a number of quotes concerning the French Revolution by Bill Hughes, author of the two excellent books The Secret Terrorists and The Enemy Unmasked:

"[Jesuit Adam] Weishaupt established the [modern version of the] Illuminati specifically to be a front organization behind which the Jesuits could hide. After being [formally] abolished by [Pope] Clement XIV in 1773, the Jesuits used the Illuminati and other organizations to carry out their operations. Thus, the front organizations would be blamed for the trouble caused by the Jesuits."

"Why would the Jesuits use their implacable enemy, the Jews, to further their designs for world dominion? The Jesuits never do anything out in the open where they can be exposed. If they are recognized as the culprits, they will be blamed and suffer the consequences, but if they can use someone else as the 'cause of the world's problems', especially an enemy they can destroy in the process, then they have simultaneously accomplished two of their objectives. The Jewish people are the perfect scapegoat. Since the Rothschilds are Jesuit agents operating under a Jewish cover, using them in forming the Illuminati back in 1776 effectively throws the onus of this conspiracy on the Jews. The Rothschilds are certainly not the only Jesuit agents that operate under a Jewish front.

The following sources [Ed. Note: Bill Hughes lists a number of books at the end of this paragraph] indicate that [Jesuit] Adam Weishaupt and the Rothschilds [Ed. Note: the "Guardians of the Vatican Treasury"] were the brains and the wealth behind the French Revolution.”

“The Jesuits, [Jesuit Adam] Weishaupt, and the Rothschilds managed to cast the blame for the French Revolution on their front organization, the Illuminati!”

Front organizations, “sheep dipping”, scapegoats, red herrings, and smoke screens – all of these are SOP (standard operating procedures) for the Jesuit Order!

IV. WHO CONTROLS THE TOP LEVELS OF FREEMASONRY?

This is indeed a very important question. I have listed many top-level Freemasons who have served in powerful positions in the U.S. government and in U.S. Intelligence agencies in a number of my TTT newsletters. For example, J. Edgar Hoover, longtime director of the FBI, was a high-level Freemason. Allen Dulles, the CIA director whom JFK fired, was a high-level Freemason. A number of U.S. presidents have also been high-level Freemasons, such as Franklin Delano Roosevelt, Harry S. Truman, and Gerald Ford. So it is indeed very important that we know who or what controls the top levels of Freemasonry.

Please carefully consider the following quotes:

“...If you trace up Masonry, through all its Orders, till you come to the grand tip-top, head Mason of the World, you will discover that the dread individual and the Chief [i.e., the Black Pope, the Superior General] of the Society of Jesus [i.e., the Jesuits] are one and the same person.” – James Parton (American historian)

“This inner and invisible Freemasonry is international in extent, and it is within the Inner Circle that the Jesuits conceal themselves, work, and mastermind the projects that suit their goals.” – John Daniel (Author of The Grand Design Exposed)

Now consider the ramifications of this: The Jesuit Superior General, the “Black Pope”, not only controls his own Jesuit Order and his powerful Knights of Malta, but also the high-level Freemasons. Considering how many high-level Freemasons and Knights of Malta have been directors and assistant directors at such organizations as the CIA and FBI ought to tip us off as to who often directs and steers “covert operations” and other nefarious activities, such as assassinations, here in the USA!

V. THE SECRET MEETINGS AT VIENNA, VERONA, AND CHERI

Sadly, many Americans are largely unaware of three very important secret meetings that took place in the 19th century. These meetings took place in:

- Vienna, Austria (1814-15);
- Verona, Italy (1822); and,

· Chieri, Italy (1825).

You see, dear reader, this American “experiment” with religious liberty for all, democratic representative government under a constitutional republic, freedom of speech, etc., greatly disturbed both the Papacy and the Roman Catholic European monarchs. They feared that this “disease” of freedom might, if unchecked, spread to Europe. Thus, the American Constitutional Republic, with its religious liberty (and populated mainly by Protestants), was targeted for destruction soon after the birth of this republic! ((If you doubt this, then please read the Vatican’s own words of hatred for religious liberty and for the U.S. Constitution in the next section (i.e., Section VI.!!))

Here is what Bill Hughes, author of the two excellent books The Secret Terrorists and The Enemy Unmasked, has written about these three important historical meetings:

“These three meetings, at Vienna, [Austria in 1814-15,] Verona, [Italy in 1822,] and Chieri, [Italy in 1825] were held with as much secrecy as possible. However, one man attended the first two meetings that would not be silenced. British foreign minister George Canning contacted the U.S. government to warn them that the monarchs of Europe [Ed. Note: with the encouragement and support of the Papacy and its Jesuits] were planning to destroy the free institutions of America.”

“During this Congress [of Verona, Italy in 1822], it was decided that America would be the target of Jesuit emissaries and that America was to be destroyed at all costs. Every principle of the [U.S.] Constitution was to be dissolved and new Jesuitical principles were to be put into place in order to exalt the Papacy to dominion in America.”

“[American Secretary of the Navy R.W.] Thompson pinpointed exactly who would be the agents used by the monarchs of Europe to destroy the republic of America, namely, the Jesuits of Rome! Since 1815 there has been a continual assault on America by the Jesuits to try to destroy the constitutional rights of this great nation.

The famous inventor of the Morse code, Samuel B. Morse, also wrote of this sinister plot [of the Jesuits] against the United States.”

“The Monroe Doctrine was America’s response to the Jesuits’ Congresses of Vienna [in 1814-15] and Verona [in 1825]. America would consider it an act of war if any European nation sought colonial expansion in the Western Hemisphere. The Jesuits have been able secretly to attack and infiltrate America to accomplish exactly what the Monroe Doctrine was stated to protect against. They [i.e., the Jesuits] have been able to get away with it because it was done with utmost secrecy and under the façade of being a church.

...The Monroe Doctrine challenged any advance on America by Europe. However, [President] Monroe did not really understand that the crafty Jesuits would not initially use the force of arms to gain their objectives. They [i.e., the Jesuits] would use cunning, craftiness, and utmost secrecy. They would appeal to men’s basest points. They would plant their agents in positions of wealth and power [Ed. Note: such as in the U.S. Congress and in U.S. intelligence agencies] and then use their influence to gain their great prize – the subversion and destruction of every Protestant principle as outlined in the Constitution of the United States.”

VI. THE VATICAN'S HATRED OF RELIGIOUS LIBERTY AND THE AMERICAN CONSTITUTIONAL REPUBLIC

“The unrestrained freedom of thinking and of openly making known one’s thoughts is not inherent in the rights of citizens and is by no means worthy of favor and support.”
Pope Gregory XVI

“These false and perverse opinions [of democracy and individual freedom] are so much the more detestable, by as much as they...hinder and banish that salutary influence which the [Roman] Catholic Church, by the institution and command of her Divine Author, ought freely to exercise, even to the consummation of the world, not only over individual men, but [over] nations, [over] peoples, and [over] sovereigns.” (Quanta Cura; December 8, 1864)

Pope Pius IX (1792-1878; pope: 1846-1878)

“The State has not the right to leave every man free to embrace whatever religion he should deem true.

...The [Roman Catholic] Church has the right to require that the Catholic religion shall be the religion of the State, to the exclusion of all others.

...Cursed be those who assert liberty of conscience and of worship and such that maintain that the [Roman Catholic] Church may not employ force.”

The Syllabus of Pope Pius IX (December 1864)

“No man has a right to choose his religion. Catholicism is the most intolerant of creeds. It is intolerance itself. We might as rationally maintain that two and two does not make four as the theory of Religious Liberty. Its impiety is only equaled by its absurdity.” (1864)

John Hughes (Roman Catholic Archbishop of New York)

((What now follows is some proof of this hatred of religious liberty, freedom of conscience, and/or representative government that has appeared in several Roman Catholic publications.))

“...We do not accept it [i.e., the Constitutional Republic of the United States of America], or hold it to be any government at all... If the American Republic is to be sustained and preserved at all, it must be by the rejection of the principle of the [Protestant] Reformation, and the acceptance of the Catholic principle...”

Catholic World (August 1871; page 735)

((Ed. Comment to the preceding quote: Let me get this straight: If we want our American Republic “to be sustained and preserved at all”, then this can only take place if we reject “the principle of the [Protestant] Reformation” (i.e., religious liberty for all, freedom of conscience, and freedom of the press) and accept “the Catholic principle” (i.e., no religious liberty, ecclesiastical tyranny, and the extermination of all who disagree with the Catholic principle). That’s certainly an interesting choice!))

“Fascism is the regime that corresponds most closely to the concepts of the Church of Rome.” – Civiltà Cattolica (House organ of the Jesuits)

“The [Roman Catholic] church has persecuted. Only a tyro [i.e., novice] in church history will deny that...one hundred and fifty years after [Roman Emperor] Constantine, the Donatists were persecuted and sometimes put to death. ...Protestants were persecuted in France and Spain with the full approval of the [Roman Catholic] church authorities. ...When she [i.e., the Roman Catholic Church] thinks it good to use physical force, she will use it.”

The Western Watchman (A Roman Catholic publication out of St. Louis)

((And here are some more quotes showing the Vatican’s hatred of religious liberty and of America’s Constitutional Republic.)):

“Have not the popes [e.g., Pope Pius IX in his Syllabus of Errors] publicly and repeatedly anathematized the sacred principle of Liberty of Conscience? Have they not boldly said, in the teeth of the nations of Europe, that Liberty of Conscience must be destroyed – killed at any cost? Has not the whole world heard the sentence of death to liberty coming from the lips of the old man of the Vatican [i.e., the pope]?”

Charles Chiniquy (Ex-Catholic priest; personal friend of President Abraham Lincoln)

“The Constitution of the United States was condemned by the Papacy because it separated church and state and prohibited the establishment of any religion [Ed. Note: as an official State-sponsored religion] by the government. The popes, on the other hand, had long required governments to make Roman Catholicism the official religion and to prohibit the practice of any other.” – Dave Hunt (Author of numerous books)

“During a sermon in 1850, [Roman Catholic] Archbishop John Hughes of New York, the nation’s leading Vatican spokesman, acknowledged that a conspiracy to subjugate free America did exist after all. The Catholic press was ecstatic. An excerpt from ‘Shepherd of the Valley’, the official journal of the [Roman Catholic] Bishop of St. Louis, declared, ‘If Catholics ever gain a sufficient numerical majority in this country, religious freedom is at an end. So our enemies say, so we believe.’ [Catholic Archbishop] Hughes’ own paper, the ‘New York Freeman’ brazenly announced, ‘No man has a right to choose his religion.” – Dr. William P. Grady

“For over 200 years, the goal [of the Jesuits] has been the complete destruction of the United States Constitution.

...In the religious arena, the goal of the Jesuits is to wipe out any trace of Protestantism and other religions, and to restore worldwide domination by the pope.”

Bill Hughes (Author of The Secret Terrorists and The Enemy Unmasked)

VII. “Tammany Hall” and ORGANIZED CRIME

Should anyone find it difficult to believe what follows in this section, then I most highly recommend that such a person obtain the book Double Cross by Sam and Chuck Giancana. This book reveals connections between “the Mob” and the CIA – especially in the assassination business. It can be ordered from “Radio Liberty” for $10.45 postpaid by calling their toll-free order line at 1-800-544-8927.

There are many connections between Organized Crime, the U.S. government (including the Central Intelligence Agency), and the Vatican (such as in the world of banking). The afore-mentioned book describes the relationship between the CIA and the Mob – a relationship that led to cooperation on assassinations (such as the JFK assassination) within the U.S. borders!

Oh yes, we can’t forget about “Tammany Hall”. Tammany Hall, “a powerful Democratic political organization of New York City”, quickly became synonymous with bribery, corruption, and many other forms of criminal activity. Heavy Roman Catholic immigration for decades headed for America’s largest cities, such as New York City, Boston, etc. Organized crime quickly developed in these cities. Politicians soon either had to be Roman Catholic to run for any important office – or, if non-Roman Catholic, had to have the endorsement of such Catholic organizations as the Knights of Columbus. Many large cities soon became cesspools of prostitution, racketeering, drugs, etc. Did all of this occur by accident, or was it planned?

Indeed, the ties between the Mafia, the CIA, and the Vatican run deep. By the way, the money generated by CIA-controlled criminal activities helps to fund their “covert operations”.

Please consider the following three quotes about Roman Catholic political power:

“The fact is that very few Protestants [Ed. Note: or other non-Catholic Christians] have realized how entirely Rome is a political church, and that she always makes her political advancement her first object.” (1896)

M. F. Cusack (Ex-nun of Kenmore; author of the book The Black Pope)

“But we recognize in the Roman Catholic priesthood, and the Jesuit brotherhood, two distinct political organizations, united in purpose and using religion as a mask for political purpose, as they always have done in all ages and countries.”

J. Wayne Laurens (American historian; author of the book The Crisis: Or, the Enemies of America Unmasked)

“There is no doubt that the American Catholic hierarchy has entered the political arena, and that it is becoming more and more aggressive in extending the frontiers of Catholic authority into the fields of medicine, education, and foreign policy... As we shall see in this book [Ed. Note: American Freedom and Catholic Power], the Catholic hierarchy in this country [i.e., the USA] has great power as a pressure group, and no editor, politician, publisher, merchant or motion-picture producer can express defiance openly – or publicize documented facts – without risking his future.”

Paul Blanchard (Journalist and author) (1949; Quote was taken from his book American Freedom and Catholic Power.)

((Important Ed. Note: Due to newsletter length considerations, I will not get into the Vatican/Jesuit involvement in the U.S. Civil War and in the assassination of President Abraham Lincoln. Please read my TTT #60, “The Civil War and Abraham Lincoln”, that can be found on the first two Internet web sites listed at the beginning of this newsletter. Suffice it to say here, the evidence of the Vatican/Jesuit involvement in the assassination of President Lincoln was so overwhelming that the U.S. government broke all diplomatic relations with the Vatican in 1867, shortly after the trial of one the conspirators, John Harrison Surratt. If you doubt this, then you need to read the two-books-in-one volume concerning the Lincoln assassination that will be listed at the end of this newsletter.))

VIII. WORLD WAR I

The Vatican and her Jesuits were clearly responsible for the carnage that occurred in both World War I and World War II. Please carefully consider the following quote by Edmond Paris:

“The public is practically unaware of the overwhelming responsibility carried by the Vatican and its Jesuits in the starting of two world wars – a situation which may be explained in part by the gigantic finances at the disposition of the Vatican and its Jesuits, giving them power in so many spheres, especially since the last conflict.”

Please consider this quote by Pope Pius X (1835-1914; pope: 1903-1914):

“It would certainly have been better if Austria-Hungary had punished the Serbians for all the wrongs they had done.” (1913)

((Ed. Comment to the preceding quote: In The Secret History of the Jesuits, Edmond Paris points out that, contrary to Catholic Church propaganda, Pope Pius X actually helped instigate hostilities between Austria-Hungary and Serbia. Clearly both the Hapsburg dynasty (rulers of Austria-Hungary) and the Vatican saw the growing power of Serbia [made up mostly of Orthodox Christians] as a “threat”. In fact, in late 1913 Prince Schonburg had an audience with Pope Pius X, who told Schonburg the words contained in the preceding quote. In other words, the Roman Catholic pope was letting this Roman Catholic European power (Austria-Hungary) know that it was past time to “take care of” the Serbian “problem”!))

CRAIG-OXLEY - January 31, 2006 12:44 AM (GMT)

IX. WORLD WAR II

Please carefully consider the following quotations concerning World War II contained in this section:

“Actually, nobody has a right to be more angry at the Rothschild clique than their fellow Jews. The Warburgs, part of the Rothschild empire, helped finance Adolph Hitler. There were few if any Rothschilds or Warburgs in the Nazi prison camps! They sat out the war in luxurious hotels in Paris or emigrated to the United States or England. As a group, Jews have suffered most at the hands of these power seekers. A Rothschild has much more in common with a Rockefeller than he does with a [Jewish] tailor from Budapest or the Bronx.”

Gary Allen (Author of the book None Dare Call It Conspiracy)

((Ed. Comment to the preceding quote: German Roman Catholic Knight of Malta Franz von Papen and the German Roman Catholic Centrum (or, Zentrum) Party in Bavaria helped put Hitler into power. American Knights of Malta (big financiers) helped finance Hitler’s rise to power. And who controls the Knights of Malta? The answer: The Jesuit Superior General controls the Knights of Malta. Thus the Vatican and its Jesuit Order, which for centuries have hated and butchered large numbers of Jews (e.g., during the Crusades), were able to butcher millions more during World War II. Roman Catholic dictators were installed all over Europe prior to and during the early stages of World War II – Hitler in Germany, Mussolini in Italy, Jesuit Monseigneur Tiso in Slovakia, Ante Pavelic in Croatia, etc. Then these Roman Catholic dictators were able to slaughter the Jews, Protestants, and Orthodox Christians in Europe – all favorite and historic targets of the Vatican – with great vigor and great efficiency.))

Eric Jon Phelps, author of the well-researched book VATICAN ASSASSINS: Wounded in the House of My Friends, lets us know the names of the Roman Catholic dictators throughout Europe during World War II (dates shown are born/died dates):

“The Jesuits, in control of [Adolph] Hitler’s occultic and homosexual Third Reich..., installed puppet dictators throughout Europe. They were:

- Bavarian Germany and the Third Reich – [Adolph] Hitler [1889-1945]
- Italy – [Benito] Mussolini [1883-1945]

- 'Vichy' France – [Henri Philippe] Petain [1856-1951]
- Spain – [Francisco] Franco
- Austria – Seyss-Inquart
- Poland – Frank
- Slovakia – [Jesuit] Priest [Monseigneur] Tiso
- Croatia – [Ante] Pavelitch ((Ed. Note: alternate spelling: Pavelic))
- Belgium – Degrelle.

All these Roman Catholic, Jesuit-controlled, Jew-hating dictators were loyal to the greatest war criminal of all, Papal Caesar Pius XII and his master, Jesuit [Superior] General Wlodimir Ledochowski.”

“The declaration of [Roman Catholic Jesuit] Monseigneur [Ed. Note: French spelling of ‘Monsignor’] Tiso, chief of the Slovakian state, stating his intention to build up Slovakia according to a Christian [sic] plan, has the full approval of the Holy See [i.e., the Papacy].”

(June 1940) – Radio Vatican

((Ed. Comment to the preceding quote: This Jesuit monster (Tiso) was put into power by Hitler’s Nazi Germany, with the blessings of the Vatican. Tiso, using his ‘Christian’ plan, brutally persecuted Protestants and Jews in Slovakia, sending them to concentration camps!))

“I have learnt most of all from the Jesuit Order. ...So far, there has been nothing more imposing on earth than the hierarchical organization of the [Roman] Catholic Church. A good part of that organization I have transported direct to my own [Nazi] party. ...The Catholic Church must be held up as an example. ...I will tell you a secret. I am founding an order [Ed. Note: the Nazi SS]. ...In [Heinrich] Himmler [who would become head of the Nazi SS] I see our Ignatius de Loyola [Ed. Note: the founder of the Jesuit Order].”
Adolph Hitler (1889-1945; Nazi leader and chancellor of Germany from 1933-1945)

“In Hitler’s Pope, award-winning journalist John Cornwell shows that Eugenio Pacelli, Pope Pius XII, was instrumental in negotiating an accord that helped the Nazis rise to unhindered power – and sealed the fate of the Jews in Europe.

Drawing upon secret Vatican and Jesuit archives to which he had unprecedented access, Cornwell tells the full, tragic story of how narcissism, long-standing personal antipathy for the Jews, and political and ‘spiritual’ ambition combined to make Pius the most dangerous churchman in history. Not just a firm and final indictment of Pius XII’s papacy, Hitler’s Pope is also a searing exploration of its lingering consequences for the Catholic Church today.”

Hitler’s Pope: The Secret History of Pius XII (book by John Cornwall)

Why did I list all of the above quotations? I did so because the Vatican planned, fomented, and orchestrated two world wars in an attempt to achieve Vatican objectives in Europe. The Vatican also planned, fomented, and orchestrated those two bloody world wars in order to slaughter millions of the favorite “targets”: Jews, Protestants, and Orthodox Christians! Indeed, the Vatican and her Jesuits have been at the forefront of almost every major bloody war and major bloody revolution in the western world in the past four centuries. Numerous historians have documented this. Please see the section entitled “What Can We Do?” – it will contain a number of books that document this nefarious history of bloodshed and violence.

Questions: If “the Jews” (i.e., Jewish bankers, Zionists, etc.) run the banking in the USA and in Europe, then why in blazes did they finance Hitler, Mussolini, and many other Catholic dictators in Europe during World War II? If “the Jews” have been running the USA and western European countries for ages, then why did they help ensure that millions of Jews would be slaughtered during World War II by supporting Catholic Fascist dictators? The answer is quite simple: It was NOT “the Jews” running the show in Europe during World War II, but rather the Vatican with her Jesuits and her powerful and wealthy Knights of Malta – with the help of a few rich secular Jews who work with the Vatican on such enterprises as world wars.

X. THE USA TODAY – WHO REALLY RUNS THIS COUNTRY?

Here’s an interesting quote by author and publisher Jack T. Chick:

“I questioned Dr. [Alberto] Rivera about the briefings he received in the Vatican when he was a Jesuit priest. I asked him if he was briefed on how the Vatican planned to take over the United States. He told me [that] his indoctrination [training as a Jesuit] went back [into American history] to the time of the Pilgrims. Because of the knowledge of the Inquisition and the slaughter of Christians by the Roman Catholic system, the early immigrants in America began passing laws to keep Jesuits out of this country and to outlaw the mass...to protect themselves from a Vatican takeover. These were Christian communities deeply concerned about the ‘whore of [found in the book of] Revelation’. Jesuits began arriving in America as early as the second group of Pilgrims. They used different names with identifications. They were followed years later when the Vatican sent multitudes of Catholic families from England, Ireland, and France – posing as Protestants – into the colonies. These were ‘plants’. They were holding secret masses in defiance of the laws. In those days, no Roman Catholic was to hold any position in civil government. The Jesuits made sure this part of our history was erased and removed.

The next major move by the Jesuits was to destroy or control all the Christian schools across America. Throughout the years, Jesuits, working undercover, have gotten into special committees on school boards to remove the emphasis of the Bible and replace it with psychology as found in the Spiritual Exercises of Ignatius de Loyola, the founder of the Jesuit Society. Later, Catholic schools and universities sprang up all across the nation under the Jesuits. Today, they probably outnumber all the Christian schools and colleges put together.

The third stage was to move into the courts and legislation...to take over as judges and lawyers in order to manipulate the Constitution in their favor until it could be changed. Once this was accomplished, the thrust was into politics to capture the political parties. Then [the Jesuits moved on to] the military and the newspapers. Even back in the time of Lincoln over half the newspapers in the United States were controlled by the Vatican.” ((Ed. Comments to the preceding quote:

(1) If you have any doubts about the above claims by Jack Chick concerning the power and influence of the Papacy, and especially her Jesuit Order, then you need to check out his book Smokescreens, the book A Woman Rides the Beast by Dave Hunt, the book The Secret History of the Jesuits by Edmond Paris, the book 50 Years in the Church of Rome by Charles Chiniquy, and the book Is Alberto for Real? (compiled by Sidney Hunter). These books can all be ordered via credit card by calling 1-909-987-0771.

(2) If you have any doubts about the Vatican’s heavy-duty takeover of much of America’s newspapers, magazines, etc., then please do some research on such Jesuit-controlled Knights of Malta named William Randolph Hearst and Henry Robinson Luce.))

Here is an interesting quote by Felix Frankfurter (1882-1965; a Supreme Court justice):

“The Order’s working and involvement in America is immense. The real rulers in Washington [D.C.] are invisible and exercise power from behind the scenes.”

And another quote by John F. Hylan (Mayor of New York City from 1918-1925):

“The real menace of our Republic is this invisible government which like a giant octopus sprawls its slimy legs over our cities, states, and nation.

A. The U.S. Congress

Please consider the following quotations by F. Tupper Saussy, which were taken from his book RULERS OF EVIL: Useful Knowledge About Governing Bodies, along with some of my editorial comments:

“What [Professor Carol A.] Brown [of the University of Massachusetts] had learned from Carl Bernstein, I [i.e., F. Tupper Saussy] had discovered for myself over several years of private investigation: the papacy really does run United States foreign policy... Yes, [Carl] Bernstein noted that the leading American players behind the Reagan/Vatican conspiracy, to a man, were ‘devout Roman Catholics’ – namely,

- William Casey – Director, CIA [Ed. Note: And a Knight of Malta];
- Richard Allen – National Security Advisor;
- Judge William Clark – National Security Advisor;
- Alexander Haig – Secretary of State [Ed. Note: And a Knight of Malta];

- Vernon Walters – Ambassador-at-Large; and,
- William Wilson – Ambassador to the Vatican State.

But the reporter neglected to mention that the entire Senate Foreign Relations committee was governed by Roman Catholics as well. Specifically, Senators

- Joseph Biden – Subcommittee on European Affairs;
- Paul Sarbanes – International Economic Policy, Trade, Oceans, and Environment;
- Daniel P. Moynihan – Near Eastern and South Asian Affairs;
- John Kerry – Terrorism, Narcotics, and International Communications; and,
- Christopher Dodd – Western Hemisphere and Peace Corps Affairs.”

((Ed. Comments to the previous quote:

(1) Please consider also that there are 18 Jesuit colleges and universities in the United States. One of them, Georgetown University, is famous for educating many U.S. diplomats and Foreign Service personnel. A Jesuit priest and professor at Georgetown University, ‘Father’ Edmund Walsh (who founded the School of Foreign Service at Georgetown University), in 1922 led the “Relief Mission” to the Soviet Union after the Bolsheviks had seized power.

(2) The Knights of Malta is headquartered with, and subordinate to, the Jesuit Superior General in Rome. Powerful Knights of Malta have held key positions in the U.S. government, in U.S. intelligence agencies (e.g., William Casey, James Jesus Angleton, William Donovan, and John McCone), in publishing (e.g., William Randolph Hearst and Henry Robinson Luce), etc.

(3) Senator John Kerry, during his presidential run, revealed his Jewish background.))

“In fact, when the ‘Holy Alliance’ story hit the stands [in 1992], there was virtually no arena of federal legislative activity, according to ‘The 1992 World Almanac of US Politics’, that was not directly controlled by a Roman Catholic senator or representative. The committees and subcommittees of the United States Senate and House of Representatives governing commerce, communications and telecommunications, energy, medicine, health, education and welfare, human services, consumer protection, finance and financial institutions, transportation, labor and unemployment, hazardous materials, taxation, bank regulation, currency and monetary policy, oversight of the Federal Reserve System, commodity prices, rents services, small business administration, urban affairs, European affairs, Near Eastern and South Asian affairs, terrorism/narcotics/international communications, international economic/trade/oceans/ environmental policy, insurance, housing, community development, federal loan guarantees, economic stabilization measures (including wage and price controls), gold and precious metals transactions, agriculture, animal and forestry industries, rural issues, nutrition, price supports, Food for Peace, agricultural exports, soil conservation, irrigation, stream channelization, flood control, minority enterprise, environment and pollution, appropriations, defense, foreign operations, vaccines, drug labeling and packaging, drug and alcohol abuse, inspection and certification of fish and processed food, use of vitamins and saccharin, national health insurance proposals, human services, legal services, family relations, the arts and humanities, the handicapped, and aging – in other words, virtually every aspect of secular life in America – came under the chairmanship of one of these Roman Catholic laypersons:

Frank Annunzio Edward Kennedy Daniel Moynihan
Joseph Biden John Kerry John Murtha
Silvio Conte John LaFalce Mary Rose Oaker
Kika De la Garza Patrick Leahy David Obey
John Dingell Charles Luken Claiborne Pell Christopher Dodd Edward Madigan Charles Rangel
Vic Fazio Edward Markey Dan Rostenkowski
James Florio Joseph McDade Edward Roybal
Henry Gonzalez Barbara Mikulski
Thomas Harkin George Miller

Vatican Council II's 'Constitution on the Church' (1964) instructs [Roman Catholic] politicians to use their secular offices to advance the cause of Roman Catholicism."
((Ed. Comment to the preceding quote: Senator John Kerry, during his presidential run, revealed his Jewish background.))

"An updating of this list will not reflect a significant change in the presence of Roman Catholic laypersons in the higher legislative reaches. According to the 'Association of Jesuit Colleges and Universities', in the 106th Congress there are 40 'Jesuit alumni' who graduated from 17 Jesuit institutions [of higher learning]. There are 5 alumni in the U.S. Senate and 35 alumni in the House of Representatives. Out of these 40 alumni, 23 received graduate or professional degrees from Jesuit universities. [Jesuit] Georgetown University has the most graduates, boasting 15 alumni in the U.S. Congress."

((Ed. Comment to the preceding quote: Please remember that these folks are graduates of Jesuit institutes of higher learning. There are other Roman Catholic institutes of higher learning that do not belong to the Jesuit Order. Many Roman Catholic laypersons that have served in the U.S. Congress have come from non-Jesuit Roman Catholic colleges and universities.))

Please also consider these two quotes by Avro Manhattan, taken from his book Murder in the Vatican:

"The Vatican is a superpower – on a par with the USA and Soviet Russia. Indeed, since at times it can act as a formulator of the policies of both, it can be reckoned as the paramount superpower of our times.

Its adherents, a massive portion of mankind, nearing a billion [Ed. Note: it's now over a billion], can be made to operate in every corner of the world. [There are] sixty million [Roman Catholics] within the USA herself.

...Therefore the Vatican is a superpower in its own right. Indeed, because of its duality as a political and as a religious center, it can outbid the other two [superpowers].”

((Ed. Comments to the preceding quote:

(1) The Vatican today needs no standing armies of her own. Why is this so? It is because she can mobilize the armies of other nations to do her bidding. This happened on a massive scale during World War II – a war that was fomented and largely orchestrated by the Vatican.

(2) The Vatican is often able to “steer” (i.e., direct) the foreign policy of other nations through her many agents that she infiltrates into foreign policy-making governmental committees and organizations – and, into the most powerful intelligence agencies in the World, such as the CIA. In the USA, the Vatican is able to draw upon her powerful Jesuits, Knights of Malta, Knights of Columbus, Opus Dei, etc. – many of whom hold positions of great power in the U.S. government! Sadly, many of these powerful individuals give a far greater degree of their loyalty to the Pope and/or to the Jesuit Superior General than they do to the U.S. Constitution and to the American people!

(3) There were 60 million Roman Catholics in the USA in 1985 (when Manhattan’s book was written). However, when one adds to this number the normal growth in population of 20 more years, PLUS all the illegal immigrants coming into the USA (the vast majority of whom are Roman Catholic), the number of Catholics in America today is probably closer to 100 million.))

“Thus, whereas the USA has a mere 250 million citizens [Ed. Note: Remember, this was written in 1985] and the Soviet Union about 300 million, the Vatican, via the [Roman] Catholic Church, can influence between 800 and 1000 million [i.e., one billion] Catholics.

These [now over one billion Roman Catholics], unlike the citizens of the other two superpowers (who are strictly confined within physical and political barriers), have no frontiers whatsoever. They are posted within the USA, Soviet Russia, and within hundreds of other countries, and can be made to operate independently of their own administrations, governments or regimes.

A Catholic citizen, therefore, owing to the fact that he is a member of the Catholic Church, can and often is influenced in his social and ideological attitudes by those taken by the Vatican, acting as the political facet of the Catholic Church.

It cannot be otherwise, since [Roman] Catholics, notwithstanding their disclaimer, are affected directly, tangentially, by the Vatican’s political stance in the belief that such a stance is that of the Catholic Church.”

And please consider this quote by Jeremiah J. Crowley (Irishman; ex-priest in the Roman Catholic Church; author of the book Romanism: Menace to the Nation):

“Today they [i.e., the Jesuits] are stronger in the United States than they ever were in any of the countries of Europe which expelled them as a menace to the government.” (1912)

B. The Mainstream Media and Press

I would like to repeat journalist Paul Blanchard’s quote again:

“There is no doubt that the American Catholic hierarchy has entered the political arena, and that it is becoming more and more aggressive in extending the frontiers of Catholic authority into the fields of medicine, education, and foreign policy... As we shall see in this book [Ed. Note: American Freedom and Catholic Power], the Catholic hierarchy in this country [i.e., the USA] has great power as a pressure group, and no editor, politician, publisher, merchant or motion-picture producer can express defiance openly – or publicize documented facts – without risking his future.” (1949; Quote was taken from his book American Freedom and Catholic Power.)

Please remember that this quote was made in 1949. The power of the Roman Catholic hierarchy in the USA has not diminished from that time, but has, in fact, grown. Many powerful Knights of Malta (under the control of the Roman Catholic Jesuit Order) have held key positions in the media (e.g., Henry Robinson Luce and William Randolph Hearst), in U.S. Intelligence (e.g., CIA chiefs William Donovan, John McCone, and William Casey), in banking, in the U.S. government, etc. Top-level Knights of Columbus (e.g., Senator Ted Kennedy) have held, and continue to hold, key positions in the U.S. government. Many of these men do NOT have the best interests of the American people at heart – rather, they serve the interests of the globalist rich and power elite and the Vatican. These men share the goals of the Vatican for one-world government and one-world religion under the leadership of the papacy!

Here are some interesting quotes about America’s controlled mainstream media (which is probably the most controlled media in the western world):

“In March 1915, the J.P. Morgan interests [Ed. Note: controlled by the Rockefellers]... got together 12 men high up in the newspaper world and employed them to select the most influential newspapers in the U.S. and [a] sufficient number of them to CONTROL generally the policy of the daily press of the United States. These 12 men worked the problem out by selecting 179 newspapers, and then began, by an elimination process to retain only those necessary for the purpose of CONTROLLING. They found it was necessary to purchase CONTROL of 25 of the greatest [news] papers. The 25 [news] papers were agreed upon; emissaries were sent to purchase the policy, national and international, of these papers. An agreement was reached; the policy of the papers was bought, to be paid for by the month; an editor was furnished for each paper to properly SUPERVISE and EDIT information regarding the questions of preparedness, militarism, financial policies, and other things of national and international nature considered vital to the INTERESTS of the PURCHASERS... This policy also included the SUPPRESSION of everything in opposition to the wishes of the INTERESTS SERVED.” (Statement placed in the Congressional Record in 1917)

Oscar Callaway (U.S. Congressman)

“There is probably no important magazine or newspaper in the country [Ed. Note: the USA] that is not COMMUNIST-penetrated to some degree.”
Whittaker Chambers (1901-1961; American journalist; ex-member of the Communist Party of the United States)

((Ed. Comment to preceding quote: The communists are merely “front men” for more powerful forces working “behind the scenes” – controlled by secret societies, such as the Jesuits.))

Authors Texe Marrs and Dr. Cathy Burns, and other writers, have reported that such “Protestant” evangelical leaders, such as Billy Graham and Pat Robertson (both of whom are high-level Masons), were financed and set up (“puffed” in the press as they started their religious careers) by such Roman Catholic Knights of Malta as Henry Robinson Luce and William Randolph Hearst. Isn’t that very interesting – “Protestant” leaders (who are Masons) being set up by Roman Catholic Knights of Malta?

Who really controls America’s mainstream media? Some allege that it is “the Jews” running America’s mainstream media. If that is so, then how do these powerful Roman Catholic Knights of Malta achieve such mighty positions in the world of publishing and electronic media? If “the Jews” run America’s press and publishing houses, then how does a Roman Catholic pope get to be named “man of the year” in major U.S. newsmagazines? If “the Jews” run our television networks, then how does a masterful piece of propaganda on Roman Catholic Pope John Paul II get to be aired on American television? If “the Jews” run America’s media, then why in blazes do popes and other Catholic prelates get wonderful press in this country? ((Remember, no one has hated and slaughtered Jews like the Vatican has! If you doubt this, please see my TTT newsletter entitled “Bloody Hands & Wicked Hearts” that is posted on the first two Internet web sites listed at the beginning of this newsletter.))

XI. RED HERRINGS, SCAPEGOATS, & SMOKESCREENS

I would like to repeat a statement I made earlier in this newsletter:

Front organizations, “sheep dipping”, scapegoats, red herrings, and smoke screens – all of these are SOP (standard operating procedures) for the Jesuit Order!

One of the favorite “red herrings” [i.e., something used to divert attention from the basic issue] used by the Jesuit Order is that “such-and-such a person is a Jew”. You can find various web sites that will tell you that Hitler was a Jew – or Stalin was a Jew. First of all, let's get a few things straight from the beginning here:

- Adolph Hitler was a practicing Roman Catholic who was never excommunicated from the Roman Catholic Church. (Neither was Mussolini!) He was put into power by German Roman Catholic Knight of Malta Franz von Papen and the Roman Catholic Centrum (or, Zentrum) Party in Bavaria. And, Hitler signed a Concordat with the Vatican.
- Joe Stalin was trained by the Jesuits at the Jesuit Tiflis Seminary in Soviet Georgia.

Again, this is “standard operating procedures” for the Jesuit Order. That is, after the dastardly deeds are done, then accuse every powerful individual who was involved – usually after he is dead – of being a Jew.

Something else to consider: The Jews settled extensively throughout much of Europe, and despite warnings to the contrary, did intermarry amongst the surrounding Gentiles. Thus many Europeans probably have at least a little Jewish blood from somewhere on the “family tree”. It has been reported that Adam Weishaupt was born a Jew. Even if true, so what? Adam Weishaupt was Jesuit-trained, and he taught Roman Catholic Canon Law at a Jesuit university in Catholic Bavaria (i.e., at Jesuit Ingolstadt University). Weishaupt, as already mentioned, died in the good graces of the Catholic Church (after being “sheep dipped” for a period of time). Likewise, Stalin was Jesuit-trained.

Something else to consider: I have read in several books that at one time a Jew was found in the Jesuit Order and was immediately put out of the Order – and that a rule was made that no [real] Jew could be a Jesuit. Do the Jesuits use some Jews as front men? It would certainly appear that they do.

The main point here is: It does not matter what one is born (whether Jew, Christian, Moslem, etc.), but rather whom does one serve! We can take a look at World War II and see that history recorded in great detail that the monsters who fomented, choreographed, and conducted this bloody world war were Roman Catholics who had the full support of the Vatican. And they carried out the Vatican's agenda in World War II. Take a good, close look again at the Eric Jon Phelps' quote in the World War II section that lists those Roman Catholic dictators.

As far as scapegoats go, the Vatican has for centuries used “the Jews” as their favorite “scapegoat”. Again, please read my TTT newsletter entitled “Bloody Hands & Wicked Hearts” for some historical examples of this use of the Jews as a scapegoat by the Vatican. The Jesuits certainly use “the Jews” quite often as a “smoke screen” to cover their own nefarious activities!

XII. SUMMARY

History has shown us quite clearly that the Vatican hates religious liberty and loves ecclesiastical tyranny. It also shows us that she hates the Constitutional Republic of the United States of America (where religious liberty has flourished) and loves Fascist regimes.

The plans to destroy America and her Constitutional Republic were made quite early in American history. Roman Catholic monarchs and the highest levels of the Roman Catholic Church's hierarchy (to include a number of popes) CONSPIRED to destroy religious liberty and representative government. Top Catholic leaders gathered in at least three largely secret meetings to discuss how to squash religious liberty and representative government wherever and whenever they appeared – whether on the European continent or in the United States of America.

These three meetings were:

- The Congress of Vienna [Austria] from 1814 through 1815;
- The secret meeting at Verona, Italy in 1822; and,
- The secret meeting at Chieri, Italy in 1825.

Indeed, plans were carefully laid out at these meetings for the takeover of the United States through infiltration of our government, our education system, our press and media, and even our non-Catholic Christian churches and seminaries. The same plans had earlier been used quite successfully in England. The degree to which most Americans are totally unaware of these three secret meetings (Vienna, Verona, and Chieri), Vatican and Jesuit involvement in the assassination of President Abraham Lincoln, the Vatican's involvement in fomenting both World War I and World War II, the Vatican's support of Nazi Germany and Fascist Italy (and other Fascist states in Europe) during World War II, etc., speak volumes about how successful their takeover of America's history books, publishing industry, press, and media has been!

The primary “weapon” against religious liberty, the Protestant Reformation, representative government, etc., of the Vatican for the past four plus centuries has been the infamous Jesuit Order (with its powerful Knights of Malta and its control of the top levels of Freemasonry). The primary “tool” of the Jesuit Order has been INFILTRATION. Wherever the Jesuit Order has been allowed to flourish, political intrigue, revolutions, civil wars, assassinations of heads of State, etc., have been the fruit of this den of vipers.

CRAIG-OXLEY - January 31, 2006 12:44 AM (GMT)

XIII. FINAL THOUGHTS

Question: After having read this newsletter, who do you think is the greatest threat to our Constitutional Republic and our religious liberty – the Vatican & Jesuits OR “the Jews”?

((The following paragraph is an addition for the “electronic version” of this issue of TTT that will soon, D.v., be posted on the Internet. I asked the same question as immediately above in a January 6, 2006 piece I wrote entitled “New Year’s Thoughts”. I think the information is worth repeating in this section of this newsletter.))

“For heaven’s sake, there are 18 million Jews in the world, and over one BILLION Roman Catholics (that the Vatican State can draw on). The Vatican State not only has diplomatic relations with many nations of the world, but also has the largest (by far) and most efficient intelligence-gathering network in the world (especially through her numerous monastic orders, large priesthood, and the Confessional)! The Vatican has a well-documented history of over 1000 years of religious genocide on a massive scale ((against Jews; against Christian groups such as the Albigenses and Waldenses; against Protestants (the French Huguenots, Irish Protestants, Bohemians, etc.); and against Orthodox Christians (as recently as the 1940s)). The Vatican has a well-documented history of Inquisition (especially against Jews and Christians), and of the most brutal torture. (The Office of Inquisition STILL exists – now called the ‘Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith’ – and the Catholic Church has never repudiated its ‘right’ to use force, torture, and extermination of all who oppose her doctrines and practices! The Vatican has a well-documented history of infiltrating governments and royal courts with her Jesuits, papal knights, etc. The Vatican’s Jesuit Order has a well-documented history of infiltrating other Christian denominations and seminaries, of assassinating heads of State, of fomenting revolutions and wars, and of carrying out many other nefarious activities. The Vatican has a well-documented history of loving Fascist regimes (such as Nazi Germany and Fascist Italy in World War II) and of hating religious liberty. The Vatican also loves ecclesiastical monopoly, and regularly persecutes other religions whenever and wherever she has the power and opportunity to do so (e.g., Croatia in World War II)! Now, in view of what was stated in this paragraph, I ask you, dear reader:

Who is the greatest threat to religious liberty and conscience, and to the American Republic – “the Jews” or the Papacy/Vatican/Jesuits?”

((End of added paragraph for “electronic version” to be posted, D.v., on the Internet))

America is at the brink of destruction. And that destruction has been carefully planned. We – none of us – can afford to remain “silent” for fear of offending anyone or any institution.

Please carefully consider these quotes concerning “silence”:

“Truth is violated by falsehood, but it is outraged by silence.”

Henri-Frederic Amiel (1821-1881; Swiss writer and philosopher)

“When freedom is at stake, silence is not golden – it is yellow [i.e., cowardly].”

Tom Anderson (Writer)

Indeed, many of us have Roman Catholic relatives and friends. We don't do them – or ourselves – any favors by remaining “silent” concerning the hierarchy of the Roman Catholic Church and its well-documented history of:

- Hating religious liberty and freedom of conscience;
- Plotting the overthrow of the U.S. Constitution and our most basic God-given Rights;
- Assassinating heads of State, such as President Abraham Lincoln;
- Fomenting and orchestrating revolutions and wars, such as World War I and World War II;
- Planning and carrying out religious genocide on a mass scale against such groups as: Jews, Bible-believing Christians such as the Albigenses and Waldenses, Protestants such as the Irish Protestants and French Huguenots, and Orthodox Christians (as recently as the 1940s in Croatia); and,
- Planning and working to be at the very top of a one-world religion and a one-world government.

If we are worried about offending our Catholic relatives and friends, then we ought to consider this following quote by the Greek philosopher Aristotle (384-322 B.C.): “...Piety requires us to honor truth above our friends.”

Some commentators continue their main focus on “the Jewish bankers, the Masonic Jews, the Jewish neo-conservatives in the U.S. Administration, the Zionists, and Israel” – sometimes lumping them all together as “the Jews”. Those individuals who do so, while largely ignoring the much greater threat from the geopolitical/financial/religious powerhouse made up of the Vatican State with her Jesuits, Knights of Malta, Knights of Columbus, Opus Dei, numerous monastic orders, a large priesthood, plus control of the top levels of Freemasonry, etc., are doing the following:

- “Straining at a gnat while swallowing a camel.”
- Focusing on two “growling Chihuahuas” (what they call “the Jews” and Israel) while largely ignoring ten “Bengal (Romish) Tigers” (Vatican State, Jesuits, Opus Dei, papal knights, etc.).
- Pointing out to us an “infantry squad” attacking in the middle of the battlefield while missing the “ten armored divisions” quickly enveloping us on one of our flanks.

By doing this, I believe that they are, perhaps without knowing it, aiding and abetting the most powerful enemies of our Republic and of our liberties. And everyone who remains SILENT about this great threat to our Republic and our liberties is also aiding and abetting those who desire to destroy everything we hold dear!

We can go on pretending that there is no real threat from the Vatican's designs for world domination – to be at the head of one-world government and one-world religion, or we can do some research and study to find out the truth about the Vatican and her hatred of our most precious liberties. Which brings us to the section entitled, “What Can We Do?”

XIV. WHAT CAN WE DO?

1. If you think that this issue of the TTT newsletter contains important information, then please make copies of it and give them away free-of-charge to others.

2. Please check out these two Internet web sites: www.tacklingthetoughtopics.net and www.calltodecision.com. Please read some of my TTT and ETI newsletters, especially “Death by Government and Death by Church” and “Bloody Hands & Wicked Hearts” that deal with religious genocide (to include Inquisition, papal crusades against Christians, ‘holy’ wars, etc.). Please also check out my TTT newsletters on “The Jesuits” (parts I through IV), and the series of TTT newsletters that I did on wars in which American troops fought. If you find that any of these newsletters contain important information, then please make copies of them to give to others. Also, please tell as many folks as you can about the above-listed web sites.

3. Please purchase good books that will tell you the truth about religious genocide, Inquisition, assassinations of heads of State, etc. Here are some that everyone should read:

(a.) Foxe’s Book of Martyrs by John Foxe; 470 pages; $11 postpaid: This book contains the stories of many victims of ecclesiastical tyranny – stories of martyrs like John Huss, William Tyndale, Hugh Latimer, Nicholas Ridley, etc. These martyrs paid the ultimate price for opposing false doctrine – some being horribly tortured – some being slowly burned (roasted) at the stake. Their stories of courage must not be allowed to die. This book is “must read” for all Christians – both Catholics and non-Catholic Christians should learn the truth about ecclesiastical tyranny! To order a copy, please call “Power of Prophecy” toll-free at 1-800-234-9673. Or, make check or money order payable to “Power of Prophecy” and mail it to: Power of Prophecy // 1708 Patterson Road // Austin, TX 78733-6507.

(b.) The Vatican’s Holocaust by Avro Manhattan; 236 pages; 1986; Publisher: Ozark Books; $9.95 postpaid: This book deals with the Roman Catholic clergy-led religious genocide against Serb Orthodox Christian peasants and farmers in Croatia during World War II, and includes photographs of both the victims and perpetrators of this barbaric genocide. To order a copy, please make check or money order payable to “Ozark Book Publishers”, and mail it to: Ozark Book Publishers // P.O. Box 3703 // Springfield, MO 65808.

(c.) A Woman Rides the Beast by Dave Hunt; 550 pages; 1994; Publisher: Harvest House Publishers; ISBN 1-56507-199-9: This book is $16.20 postpaid. It has chapters on the Croatian Holocaust of World War II, the Vatican Ratlines that helped Nazi and Fascist war criminals escape punishment at the end of World War II, and much more. To order, make check or money order payable to "Chick Publications" and mail it to: Chick Publications // P.O. Box 3500 // Ontario, CA 91761-1019. For credit card orders, please call 1-909-987-0771.

(d.) Smokescreens by Jack Chick; 95 pages; 1983; Publisher: Chick Publications; ISBN 0-937958-14-X; $6.75 postpaid: This book has an excellent chapter entitled "A 20th Century Inquisition" that exposes the horrors of the Vatican's Holocaust in Croatia during World War II, and includes photographs of both the victims and perpetrators of this barbaric genocide. It also has a chapter dealing with other mass murders and massacres carried out on the orders of the hierarchy of the Roman Catholic Church. For credit card orders, please call 1-909-987-0771. Or, make check or money order payable to "Chick Publications" and mail it to: Chick Publications // P.O. Box 3500 // Ontario, CA 91761-1019.

(e.) The Secret History of the Jesuits by Edmond Paris; 206 pages; Publisher: Chick Publications; ISBN 0-937958-10-7; $10.75 postpaid: This book covers the history of the Jesuit Order from its founding in 1534 through World War II. The author exposes the Jesuit-controlled Vatican's involvement in world politics, intrigues, and the fomenting of wars. This book reveals the involvement of the Vatican in helping to foment both World War I and World War II, and its involvement in supporting Nazi and Fascist regimes in Europe during World War II. Much of the slaughter that occurred in World War II can be laid at the feet of the Vatican and her Jesuits. To order a copy, make check or money order payable to "Chick Publications" and mail it to: Chick Publications // P.O. Box 3500 // Ontario, CA 91761-1019. To order by credit card, please call 1-909-987-0771.

(f.) The Grand Design Exposed by John Daniel; 411 pages; 1999; Publisher: CHJ Publishing; ISBN 0-927022-41-9; $20 postpaid: This book is a well-documented exposé about Jesuit control of Freemasonry. It also fills in many "historical gaps" concerning the sinister activities of the Jesuit Order. This book provides evidence of some heavy-duty Jesuit involvement in fomenting the bloody French Revolution (1789-1799). (This book also deals with some very important aspects of Bible prophecy!) To order a copy, please make check or money order payable to "American Sentry Books" and mail it to: American Sentry Books // P.O. Box 14 // Crawley, WV 24931. ((If you have any questions on bulk orders, please call 1-304-392-6155.))

(g.) The Secret Terrorists by Bill Hughes; 150 pages; 2002; Publisher: Truth Triumphant; $5 postpaid: This book deals with the assassination of a number of U.S. presidents (Harrison, Taylor, Buchanan, Lincoln, Garfield, McKinley, and JFK), and exposes those who had the motive for assassinating these men. It also reveals some fascinating facts about the sinister activities of the Jesuit Order. To order this book, please make check or money order payable to “Truth Triumphant” and mail it to: Truth Triumphant // P.O. Box 1417 // Eustis, FL 32727-1417. ((You can obtain this book and Bill Hughes’ follow-on book “The Enemy Unmasked” for $9 postpaid – and save a $1 – each book is $5 if ordered separately.))

(h.) The Enemy Unmasked by Bill Hughes; 160 pages; 2004; Publisher: Truth Triumphant; $5 postpaid: This book exposes the Jesuit Order, the Illuminati, and treasonous activities during America’s history. To order, please make check or money order payable to “Truth Triumphant” and mail it to: Truth Triumphant // P.O. Box 1417 // Eustis, FL 32727-1417. ((You can obtain this book and Bill Hughes’ first book “The Secret Terrorists” for $9 postpaid – and save a $1 – each book is $5 if ordered separately.))

(i.) Rome’s Responsibility for the Assassination of Abraham Lincoln by Brigadier General Thomas M. Harris AND The Suppressed Truth about the Assassination of Abraham Lincoln by Burke McCarty (Two books in one volume); 270 pages; available through Ozark Books; $14.00 postpaid: Here are two books that provide proof of Jesuit involvement in the assassination of President Abraham Lincoln. To order a copy, please make check or money order payable to “Ozark Book Publishers”, and mail it to: Ozark Book Publishers // P.O. Box 3703 // Springfield, MO 65808.

XV. CLOSING QUOTES TO PONDER:

“It is my opinion that if the liberties of this country – the United States of America – are destroyed, it will be by the subtlety of the Roman Catholic Jesuit priests, for they are the most crafty, dangerous enemies to civil and religious liberty. They have instigated most of the wars of Europe.”

Marquis de LaFayette (1757-1834; French statesman and general; served in the Continental Army under General George Washington)

“If the American people could learn what I know of the fierce hatred of the priests of Rome against our institutions, our schools, our most sacred rights, and our so dearly bought liberties, they would drive them out as traitors.”

Abraham Lincoln (1809-1865; 16th President of the United States)

((Ed. Comment to the preceding quote: While the above statement has certainly not applied to all Roman Catholic priests residing in America, either past or present, it surely does apply to the top levels of the Roman Catholic hierarchical system. A number of popes and other top-level Catholic prelates have condemned freedom of religion, conscience, and the press in the strongest possible words. For a good example of this hatred of liberty, please read Pope Pius IX’s Syllabus of Errors of 1864.))

“Let America again be forewarned as to Rome’s intention ‘to make America Catholic’.”
Larry Harrison (Publisher)

“Popes have been consistent in their declarations that freedom of religion should NOT exist, and that the Church of Rome represents the only true faith and therefore should alone be allowed to spread its doctrines.”

Larry Harrison

“...The Church of Rome, with its sixteen [Ed. Note: now approaching 17] centuries of intrigue, plans fifty or a hundred years ahead. The ultimate goal of the GREAT SCHEME is to throw the ‘lever of time’ back by restoring the Pope as the ‘universal arbiter’ from whom all the rulers of the earth must receive their authority to rule, as [occurred] during the Dark Ages.”

Burke McCarty (Author of the book The Suppressed Truth about the Assassination of Abraham Lincoln)

“Persecution of non-Catholics in Catholic-controlled countries should warn Americans as to what will happen here if the pope ever gains full control of this country. Rome never changes.” (March 16, 1960)

Raywood Frazier

“Now more than any other time since the 16th century Reformation, God is looking for Christians to stand in the gap, to be watchmen, courageous enough to pay, as [Jan] Hus did, the flaming death of martyrdom. Remember: there is a battle to be fought (Ephesians 6:16-20). There is an enemy to be overcome (1 Peter 5:8, 9). There is a watch to maintain (Jude 3,4, [and] 17-23).” – Bartholomew F. Brewer (Ex-Roman Catholic priest of the Discalced Carmelite Order)

“Who will rise up for me against the evildoers, or who will stand up for me against the workers of iniquity?” – Psalm 94:16

Vatican and 911 Hello everybody, I'm an Italian boy (I live in the burrow of the wolf). I should like to know if there are some proofs of Vatican involvement in 911. I think Rome is the centre of conspiracy, but i can't convince my friends because I haven't got something real to show them. May you help me to give them these real things? Maybe you wrote something about it in your posts, but i couldn't read anything. Thank you very much.

CRAIG-OXLEY - October 25, 2006 08:28 PM (GMT)

My friend you need to study everything you can on the Jesuit/Vatican control then you shall see who are the real players in the world. You will not convince many people because of their religious beliefs and if anything they wish it all to be down to the U.S Gov/CIA or mostly jews with Mossad (just as the Vatican wished). The person you need to study up on is the Archbishop of New York Edward Michael Egan. This cardinal is a Prince of the Roman Catholic Church being in the Cardinal College and hes also the leadership of the Sovereign Military of Malta within the Americas making him what we would term the American Pope. Hes covertly controlled by Jesuit NY Provincial Gerald J Chojnacki from Fordham University. Also you need to study the Sovereign Military of Malta and their Maltese Round Table in New York of which once again American Prince Egan is the head.

You must remember that theres no way the Vatican/Jesuits will ever leave easy evidence lying around for everyone to pick up on. This if every will only occur with intelligence agencies or anything linked to jews. The Jesuits are the master and chamelons of this world and their damn good at it, whilst utilising the ultimate veil - Religion- to hide. Who cares what your friends wish or think, as long as you know the truth.

Retinger was not a Freemason or a Jesuit priest, but he was a Knight of Malta. He was also involved in creating the EU.

tlthe5th - August 20, 2006 09:27 PM (GMT)

website states that George Bush and others are SMOM.

http://www.bibliotecapleyades.net/sociopol...pol_malta03.htm

"This Order, which at various times in the progress of its history received the names of Knights Hospitalers, Knights of St. John of Jerusalem, Knights of Rhodes, and lastly, Knights of Malta, was one of the most important of the religious and military orders of knighthood which sprang into existence during the Crusades which were instituted for the recovery of the Holy Land. It owes its origin to the Hospitalers of Jerusalem, that wholly religious and charitable Order which was established at Jerusalem, in 1048, by pious merchants of Amalfi for the succor of poor and distressed Latin pilgrims.... [big section on its history over nine centuries]

"The Organization of the Order in its days of prosperity was very complicated, partaking of both a monarchial and a republican character. Over all presided a Grand Master, who, although invested with extensive powers, was still controlled by the legislative action of the General Chapter....

"... There are now two bodies -- one Catholic and the other Protestant, but each repudiates the other....

"The degree of Knight of Malta is conferred in the United States as "an appendant Order" in a Commandery of Knights Templar. There is a ritual attached to the degree, but very few are in possession of it, and it is generally communicated after the candidate has been created a Knights Templar...."

[end of quote]

The Knights of Malta are the militia of the Pope, and are sworn to total obedience by a blood oath which is taken extremely seriously and to the death. The Pope as the head of the Vatican is also the head of a foreign national power.

This has virtually nothing to do with the Roman Catholic religion, and everything to do with being a participant in one of the four major "player-organizations" for world domination -- those players being:

*

British Freemasonry

*

French Freemasonry

*

International Zionism

The Vatican

As a member of the Knights of Malta, and by virtue of your blood oath of obedience to the Pope, you are required to support to the death the desires of the head of the Order of the Knights of Malta -- in this case, Pope John Paul II -- over and above any other allegiance you may feel or pretend to feel toward any other loyalty -- such as a loyalty to the Constitution for the united States of America.

Those who are presently members of the Knights of Malta must on penalty of death support those policies advocated by the Vatican. It is not hard for them to do this. They BELIEVE in these policies and principles. The policies which are espoused and proclaimed by Pope John Paul II are as follows:

1. End of sovereignty for the United States and other countries.
2. End of absolute property rights.
3. End of all gun rights.
4. The new international economic Order (world government).
5. The redistribution of wealth and jobs.
6. Calls for nations to trust the United Nations.
7. Total disarmament.
8. Promote the United Nations as the hope for peace.
9. Promote UNESCO, the deadly educational and cultural arm of the United Nations.
10. Promote interdependence.
11. Support sanctions honoring Father Pierre Teilhard de Chardin -- the New Age Humanist Priest.
12. Support the belief that the economic principle of traditional Christian or Catholic social doctrine is the economic principle of communism.
13. Promote the Pope as the acting go-between for the United States and the Soviet Union.

The secret society members in the high levels of political and economic power -- if they are not the actual decision-makers -- are OWNED by others. They are compromised -- by the freedom of their will. They chose to believe what they believe. And Buchanan is not a decision-maker. He is a member in service to that Order and under complete and total obedience to the Vatican's political ambitions, the SMOW is the MILITIA of the POPE. In times when the Pope is threatened the Swiss mercenaries that guard the Vatican are dismissed and the Knights of Malta take station as the elite Militia and guardians of the Pope.

The Knights are also sworn to instantly forsake everything and everyone and hasten to the aid of the Pope should they be called. They are sworn to absolute and total obedience to the Pope forsaking all other allegiances or duties or obligations whatsoever. Now understand I am not talking Catholic here... no American Catholic that I know of owes any allegiance to any foreign power or Pope through any blood oath of any kind whatsoever... and no American Catholic that I know of carries a Diplomatic Passport from a foreign nation.

Could such a man serve as our President when the Pope is openly calling for a world government and has stated that he will be the head of that government by the year 2007?

Bob Dole is a 33 degree Freemason of the Scottish Rite, Southern Jurisdiction.

Please take this in the spirit that it is intended. The truth sometimes hurts but it is the truth. We must never believe anyone or anything in this day of supreme deception. What makes a con man great is his ability to convince his mark that he is totally honest, loyal, and "a good ole boy.." Stop listening to what Buchanan says and research meticulously his history and read every column he has written.

Did you know that he is on record as writing that we need a Constitutional Convention to deal with the fact that the constitution is outdated? Did you know that Ross Perot is on record saying exactly the same thing? Did you know that Buchanan was the Chairman of a super secret Intelligence group named for the number of the room in which the group met in the White House? Did you know that Buchanan has direct ties to the CIA? Did you know that William Casey, Director of the CIA was Knights of Malta? Did you know that Ollie North is Knights of Malta? Did you know that George Bush is knights of Malta and just finished a Central and South American Speaking tour on behalf of the Knights of Malta?

I haven't come across anything yet thats conclusive that George W Bush is SMOM and I do not believe he is. We know that G.W Bush is a Bonesmen in the Germanic originating Chapter 322. Now Bush snr is a definate KNIGHT of the SMOM and a very powerful entity amongst the visible puppets.

tlthe5th - August 21, 2006 09:55 AM (GMT)

Maybe that's the George Bush they were talking about on that website. it would seem right because George Bush Sr was mixed up with Ollie North somehow. The beginnings of FEMA and I guess he was Vice President when the whole thing with the Iran-Contra affair went down.

Wow, I would at least expectet Oscar Bronner and Hans Peter Haselsteiner at the last Bilderberg meeting, as i would rate them as being "constructive" people in my country.

So what do you know about Jörg Haider??

Title: Rome is the enemy of United States

CRAIG-OXLEY - October 9, 2005 03:00 PM (GMT)

America Will Soon Lose Its Constitution

by Unknown

<http://illuminati-news.com/lose-constitution.htm>

Soon the United States must face its most deadly enemy. The Bible clearly identifies this enemy and shows the tragic outcome of this confrontation.

Bible prophecy also shows that the United States will shortly repudiate every principle of its Constitution and will become one of history's worst persecuting powers.

Already we can see the beginning of these sad events in the Waco massacre, where the United States government slaughtered helpless and defenseless women and children with a battle tank and poison gas!

When the New World Order is instituted, freedom will be gone from the earth.

There will be no United States to escape to, no United States Constitution, no Bill of Rights, and no guarantees of freedom of any kind. The whole world will be one vast prison. The freedom we have enjoyed that was so dearly purchased by our founding fathers is now being thrown away by unscrupulous politicians and their sovereignty-destroying treaties.

The preceding paragraphs were written shortly after February 28, 1993, when the Waco massacre occurred. One would have to be blind not to see the many losses of liberty that have occurred since then. The following article will explain how and why we are losing our constitution.

THE MOST DEADLY ENEMY THE UNITED STATES WILL EVER HAVE TO FACE

We are determined . . . to take possession of the United States, and rule them; but we cannot do that without acting secretly and with utmost wisdom.

If our plans become known, they will surely be defeated. - Charles Chiniquy, Fifty Years in the Church of Rome, The Wickliffe Press, Protestant truth Society, Wickliffe Avenue, 104 Hendon Lane, Finchley, London, N3, 1885, p. 373.

How sad will their awakening be, when, with our out-numbering votes, we will turn them, for ever, from every position of honor, power and profit! What will those hypocritical and godless sons and daughters of the fanatical Pilgrim Fathers say, when not a single judge, not a single teacher, not a single policeman will be elected if he be not a devoted . . . Roman Catholic? What will those so-called giants think of their matchless shrewdness and ability, when not a single Senator or member of Congress will be chosen, if he be not submitted to our holy father the Pope? What a sad figure those Protestant Yankees will cut when we will not only elect the President, but fill and command the armies, man the navies, and hold the keys of the public treasury?

Then, yes! then, we will rule the United States, and lay them at the feet of the Vicar of Jesus Christ [the pope], that he may put an end to their godless system of education, and sweep away those impious laws of liberty of conscience which are an insult to God and man!

. . . The American people must be very blind indeed, if they do not see that if they do nothing to prevent it, the day is very near when the Jesuits will rule their country, from the magnificent White House at Washington, to the humblest civil and military department of this vast Republic. - ibid, p. 374.

The papacy is the most deadly enemy the United States will ever have to face. Using the utmost secrecy to conceal her plans, the papacy, through her facade of religion, has for many decades been infiltrating the United States in all levels of government. As a result, the United States will soon lose its constitution and become a tyrannical, persecuting power.

As you read the following, keep in mind that they have said it is their goal to take over the United States and trash the Constitution. The American Constitution is thoroughly detested by the papacy, because the freedom safeguards it contains make it impossible for the papacy to take over the United States as long as the Constitution is in force.

Rome is in constant conspiracy against the rights and liberties of man all over the world; but she is particularly so in the United States. Long before I was ordained a priest I knew that my Church was the most implacable enemy of this Republic. My professors of philosophy, history, and theology had been unanimous in telling me that the principles and laws of the Church of Rome were absolutely antagonistic to the laws and principles that are the foundation stones of the Constitution of the United States.

1st. The most sacred principle of the United States Constitution is the equality of every citizen before the law. But the fundamental principle of the Church of Rome is the denial of that equality.

2nd. Liberty of conscience is proclaimed by the United States a most sacred principle, which every citizen must uphold But liberty of conscience is declared by all the Popes and Councils of Rome, a most godless, unholy, and diabolical thing, which every good Catholic must abhor and destroy at any cost.

3rd. The American Constitution assures the absolute independence of the civil from the ecclesiastical or Church power; but the Church of Rome declares, through all her Pontiffs and Councils, that such independence is an impiety and a revolt against God.

4th. The American Constitution leaves every man free to serve God according to the dictates of his conscience; but the Church of Rome declares that no man has ever had such a right, and that the Pope alone can know and say what man must believe and do. - ibid, p. 375.

And when the papacy takes over there will be bloodshed.

The Church of Rome says that she has a right to punish with the confiscation of their goods, or the penalty of death, those who differ in faith from the Pope. - ibid, p. 376.

America simply has no idea of the terrible trouble and persecution that is coming soon at the hands of the papacy. The people of America have forgotten the wanton cruelty and unrestrained butchery this unholy power demonstrated during the Dark Ages when it slaughtered over 150 million Christians because they wanted to worship God according to the Bible. Hitler's holocaust against the Jews was tiny compared to the papal holocaust against Christians during the Dark Ages, and the Jesuit-controlled news media never mention these atrocities.

Don't misunderstand here. The Catholic Church is NOT a Christian religion.

It is a strange combination of the old pagan religions with a Christian facade. Just because they claim to be a Christian church does not make it so.

Here is a statement from the same book that shows the power these people have already amassed in the United States.

The Jesuits of the United States form one of the richest and most powerful corporations the world ever saw. - ibid, p. 375.

The papacy is by far the wealthiest institution on earth.

Jesus, the founder of Christianity, was the poorest of the poor. Roman Catholicism, which claims to be His church, is the richest of the rich. - Avro Manhattan, The Vatican Billions, Chick Publications, p. 17.

The Catholic church is the biggest financial power, wealth accumulator and property owner in existence. She is a greater possessor of material riches than any other single institution, corporation, bank, giant trust, government or state of the whole globe. - Jack Chick, Smokescreens, Chick Publications, p 73.

Very few people know anything about the Jesuits because of their extreme secrecy.

Here is a description of them from the book The Great Controversy that shows the abominable character and deceptiveness of the pope's Jesuits.

Throughout Christendom, Protestantism was menaced by formidable foes. The first triumphs of the Reformation past, Rome summoned new forces, hoping to accomplish its destruction. At this time the order of the Jesuits was created, the most cruel, unscrupulous, and powerful of all the champions of popery. Cut off from earthly ties and human interests, dead to the claims of natural affection, reason and conscience wholly silenced, they knew no rule, no tie, but that of their order, and no duty but to extend its power. The gospel of Christ had enabled its adherents to meet danger and endure suffering, undismayed by cold, hunger, toil, and poverty, to uphold the banner of truth in face of the rack, the dungeon, and the stake. To combat these forces, Jesuitism inspired its followers with a fanaticism that enabled them to endure like dangers, and to oppose to the power of truth all the weapons of deception. There was no crime too great for them to commit, no deception too base for them to practice, no disguise too difficult for them to assume. Vowed to perpetual poverty and humility, it was their studied aim to secure wealth and power, to be devoted to the overthrow of Protestantism, and the re-establishment of the papal supremacy.

When appearing as members of their order, they wore a garb of sanctity, visiting prisons and hospitals, ministering to the sick and the poor, professing to have renounced the world, and bearing the sacred name of Jesus, who went about doing good. But under this blameless exterior the most criminal and deadly purposes were often concealed. It was a fundamental principle of the order that the end justifies the means. By this code, lying, theft, perjury, assassination, were not only pardonable but commendable, when they served the interests of the church. Under various disguises the Jesuits worked their way into offices of state, climbing up to be the counselors of kings, and shaping the policy of nations. They became servants to act as spies upon their masters. They established colleges for the sons of princes and nobles, and schools for the common people; and the children of Protestant parents were drawn into an observance of popish rites. All the outward pomp and display of the Romish worship was brought to bear to confuse the mind and dazzle and captivate the imagination, and thus the liberty for which the fathers had toiled and bled was betrayed by the sons. The Jesuits rapidly spread themselves over Europe, and wherever they went, there followed a revival of popery." - E. G. White, The Great Controversy, pp. 234, 235, 1911, Pacific Press Publishing Assn.

Today the pope's Jesuits are not only entrenched at the highest levels of all branches and departments of the U.S. Government, but they are also entrenched at the highest levels of virtually all the major corporations and industries in the United States. The Jesuits are the major stockholders of many of the largest corporations. They own 51% of the stock in Bank of America for instance. And because the papacy is a so-called church, they pay not one penny of taxes. Because they are a so-called church, they are able to operate internationally outside of the laws and legal proceedings everyone else must follow.

Here are a few of the Jesuit-controlled corporations that totally support their Jesuits in congress and the government: American Airlines, TWA, Anheuser Busch, AT&T, Bell Atlantic, Boeing, Cigna, Coca-Cola, Daimler Chrysler, Exxon, Ford Motor Company, General Electric, Hewlett-Packard, Home Depot, May Company, McDonald's, Motorola, Philip Morris, Price-Waterhouse, Rite Aid, RJR Nabisco, Sony Corp. of America, Texaco, United Parcel Service, Walt Disney Company, and Wells Fargo.

These corporations give their Jesuit senators and congressmen in both the Democratic and Republican parties many thousands of dollars for their election campaigns. These senators and congressmen are the most radical and dangerous this country has ever had. They do everything they can to pass laws and regulations prohibited by our constitution, laws designed to destroy the United States, to eliminate freedom, and to convert the United States into a ruthless tyranny. They lie constantly to deceive the people so the people will go along with the laws and regulations they want to pass.

Everyone in high positions in the government takes a solemn oath to uphold and obey the Constitution, but nearly all of them totally ignore the Constitution. The president issues executive orders that are totally unconstitutional, and Congress passes laws that the Constitution specifically forbids. Our God-given Constitution is the reason the United States has become the greatest country in the world, but it is being thoroughly undermined today by the Jesuits in government as they work to convert the United States into a ruthless police state.

The laws and regulations they pass are designed to export the industrial and manufacturing base of the United States to other countries. They are designed to destroy our energy base by restricting oil prospecting, fuel production, and nuclear power plants. The Jesuits in the House, Senate and regulating agencies restrict the private use of land with nonsensical environmental rules and regulations. They pass laws and regulations about what is "proper" to be taught in schools so that children will grow up being extremely ignorant under the banner of being educated.

The Jesuits are not recognized by the general populace because of their treachery and secrecy. They tell no one that they are Jesuits. They even belong to other churches, other cultures, and other organizations, that they have infiltrated, to hide their identity and to control these organizations.

There are millions and millions of the pope's Jesuits. They are everywhere.

They are into everything.
They are into every major organization, and control nearly every political organization and government in the world.

Because of the Jesuits' extreme secrecy, many of these organizations and governments are totally unaware that they are being infiltrated and controlled.

It is easy to identify the Jesuits and the Jesuit puppets in the United States Congress, because they are the ones that continually try to get all kinds of laws passed that require exactly the opposite from what the Constitution says. They continually pass laws that restrict the liberty of the citizens of the country. They continually pass laws to regulate every aspect of life in the United States. They continually pass laws that restrict freedom of speech such as the Campaign Finance Reform Act.

Incidentally, they always use names for these laws that will sound good to the American people, but rarely indicate what is in the law. They use every means they can to deceive the people of the country.

The USA Patriot act of 2001 is in almost total violation of the constitution, requiring many of the regulations Nazi Germany and communist Russia had. When all the requirements of this act are implemented, the citizens of this country will rue the day they ever allowed such a monstrosity to become law. Jesuits in the government were responsible for this act and forced its passage. They forced a vote on this act without giving the congressmen and senators an opportunity to read it! Why didn't the congressmen and senators have the good sense to vote "no" and defeat this act since they were never able to read it?

The Homeland Security Act of 2002 is another act that was passed to take away freedom and security in the United States and is in total violation of the constitution. As all the requirements of these acts become implemented, the people of the country will learn first-hand how it feels to have absolutely no freedom. These and other laws and regulations on the books will, when implemented, convert the United States into a more ruthless police state than was Nazi Germany or communist Russia and Red China. The Jesuits continually try to pass restrictive gun legislation. The second amendment to the Constitution says, "the right of the people to keep and bear arms, shall not be infringed." Every gun law that congress has ever passed is a direct violation of the United States' Constitution. Because of the crime and terrorism in our country today, and because of the government and media propaganda against guns, people are made to believe that these laws are necessary.

When the citizens of a nation are armed, where their right to own guns is not infringed, the crime rate is extremely low.

Every man in Switzerland, for instance, is required to have guns in his home, including assault rifles. Crime in Switzerland is almost non-existent.

In states and cities in America that allow people to carry guns, the crime rate is extremely low.

During World War Two, Hitler wanted to invade Switzerland. The Swiss told him that he could send his army across the border, but none of his officers would return. Hitler gave the order to invade Switzerland several times, but his officers refused to obey. Switzerland remained safely neutral all during the war because Hitler could not overcome the guns in the hands of Swiss private citizens. No dictator wants to be the dictator of a nation with 200 million guns around.

Christians generally do not want to have anything to do with guns, because a Christian would never take the life of another individual. It is not the USE of the guns that keeps the crime rate low; it is just the fact that the guns are there, and the criminals and would-be dictators know that the guns are there. That knowledge keeps them at bay.

In order to motivate the people of the United States to give up their guns, the Jesuits stage shootings periodically to show how "dangerous" guns are.

These shootings occur in the most emotional places such as schools where children die. But Waco shows what will happen when only the government has guns. Some 86 children died a torturous death at Waco at the hands of the government.

Today, the United States is run and controlled by its most dedicated enemies. If you wonder at the things the government and the people in control of the government do that are so damaging to the United States, it is because they are our enemies and are determined to destroy the United States. Treason is running rampant throughout all levels and branches of the U.S. government today.

A nation can survive its fools, and even the ambitious. But it cannot survive treason from within. An enemy at the gates is less formidable, for he is known and carries his banners openly against the city. But the traitor moves among those within the gates freely, his sly whispers rustling through all the alleys, heard in the very halls of government itself. For the traitor appears no traitor; he speaks in the accents familiar to his victims, and he wears their face and their garments and he appeals to the baseness that lies deep in the hearts of all men. He rots the soul of a nation; he works secretly and unknown in the night to undermine the pillars of a city; he infects the body politic so that it can no longer resist. - Marcus Cicero, speaking to Caesar, Crassus, Pompey and the Roman Senate.

Many wonder today why the Republican party does nothing to defeat the treasonous schemes of the Democrats. It is because the pope's Jesuits have thoroughly infiltrated the Republican party as well as the Democratic party.

Many wonder why the news media lie so much to support and protect the Democrats. It is because the pope's Jesuits have thoroughly infiltrated the news media. The news media and schools and colleges, with their lies and propaganda, have so conditioned the people of the country that they are unable to recognize what has been done to them. Victory for the Jesuits seems very near. The Jesuits are like a cancer that has pervaded nearly every fiber of the society of the United States. We are being defeated by the enemy within.

For many years the Jesuits have prevented the United States from developing additional sources of energy within its own territory. Exploiting the vast oilfields on the Alaskan north slope, that probably contain more oil than the entire middle east, is forbidden. New nuclear power plants, the safest source of electric energy ever discovered, are not permitted. There is no end to the lies people have been made to believe about Nuclear energy. The environment is used as the club to subdue the people of the country into going along with this idiocy. Modern technology is able to develop these sources of power without any damage to the environment. Needless to say, without sufficient energy, the United States will not be able to defend itself. All the papacy has to do is cut off the oil supply from the middle east.

The United States is now starting to feel the pinch of the energy shortage the Jesuits have created. People have experienced blackouts over large areas as power is shut off to stay within the limits of generating capacity.

Today, instead of constructing additional nuclear power plants, some of these plants are being dismantled! Will the people of the United States be able to wake up in time to prevent the coming national tragedy?

Not only in the United States is this treachery being perpetrated by the papacy, but they are secretly at work all over the world to subvert all the nations of the world, as we read earlier from Charles Chiniquy's book.

The papacy's slaughter of Christians continues to this day. Since the papacy is a small country with little military capability, they always beguile other nations to do their fighting for them. Today the United States is their favorite bully. Thus, they are never directly involved, and people do not realize who is behind the wars, the trouble, and the terrorism. Avro Manhattan's book, The Vatican's Holocaust, describes in detail the papacy's continuing slaughter of millions of Christians in the 20th century. At the time of this writing, the complete text of The Vatican's Holocaust is available on the internet for downloading. A link for this book is provided at the bottom of this page.

The slaughter in Bosnia, Kosovo, Serbia, Croatia and others is a direct result of the Vatican's involvement in this area, but you will never hear about it because the Jesuit-controlled news media not only refuse to mention it but they lie about the situation to keep the papacy from being suspected of her true involvement.

The Jesuits seem to have a code that guides their every action. That code is: "Call your enemy what you are and always tell the exact opposite of the truth." This makes it very difficult to counter their lies and explain clearly and understandably what they are actually doing.

And now the world has terrorism to a degree that was unimaginable before the destruction of the World Trade Center's twin towers in New York City where nearly 4,000 people lost their lives. This terrorism is part of the plan the Jesuits are implementing to scare the American people into giving up their freedoms, and it is working. The Bible says in Revelation 18:24 that the papacy is responsible for ". . . the blood of . . . all that were slain upon the earth." Evidence strongly indicates that Muslims hijacked the airliners and flew them into the towers. Thus we have rather strong evidence that the papacy's Jesuits have even been able to infiltrate the Muslims.

Remember that the papacy and the Jesuits have been at this business for many hundreds of years. Remember, also, that no disguise is too difficult for them to assume.

Let us now consider some of the tactics the papacy is using to subvert the United States. Just because they call themselves a church does not mean that they are honest or honorable. Remember that Satan, the devil, gave the papacy their power and great authority (Revelation 13:2). The Catholics, through their Jesuits, are working to accomplish the exact opposite from what the Catholic Church claims they stand for. For instance, the church claims to be against abortion, but their Jesuits, working in secrecy and masquerading as regular citizens in the government, work to pass laws and make judicial rulings permitting abortion. They have their right hand fighting their left hand to thoroughly confuse the people of the United States and to keep the people from ever connecting this evil conspiracy with them. Here is another example. The pope gets on television and, acting very piously, prays for peace, while his Jesuits are behind the scenes stirring up all kinds of wars, conflicts and terrorism in the world.

The Jesuits are making a dedicated effort in the United States to degrade the morality of the people of the country, to destroy family life, and to destroy all the traditional values that made this country the greatest nation in the world. This is being done by the abominable subjects being taught in government schools and colleges. It is being done by history courses that teach from revisionist history books containing many more lies than the truth. It is being done with pornographic sex education courses in the schools. It is being done with the destruction of religious values and the law of God, the Ten Commandments. It is being done by television programs, where entertainment is watching people break God's law. The natural result is a drastic increase in crime. Acts of the most abominable and shocking character are daily perpetrated within this country. The murder of one and a half million unborn babies in this country each year is one result of the demoralization of this nation.

The Jesuits are also flooding the United States with aliens, most of which are Catholic. Not only are we being defeated by the Jesuit enemy within, we are constantly being invaded by an army of aliens from without. These aliens dilute the traditional American society that understands our Constitution and how it works. This makes it much easier for the Jesuits in congress to pass the unconstitutional laws so damaging to the United States. And, of course, along with these aliens come the people who actually blow up the buildings.

There is talk in Washington of giving illegal aliens amnesty again, and also of converting our southern border into a "regional power block" where the area within 100 miles on either side of the border between Mexico and the United States would be administered jointly by Mexico and the U.S. The Jesuits are working to "eradicate the borders that separate Canada, Mexico, and the United States as part of a larger design to create a regional political and economic bloc duplicating the European Union." - The New America, October 8, 2001.

There is also talk of putting Mexican citizens in Mexico on United States'

Social Security payments. The purpose of this, along with all the wars and police-keeping actions the U.S. military is into and all the welfare the government pays for, is to completely bankrupt the United States.

Pushed by the Mexican government, the Bush administration is working on a Social Security accord that would put tens of thousands of Mexicans [in Mexico] onto the Social Security roster and send hundreds of millions of dollars in benefits south of the border." - Jonathan Weisman, The Washington Post, Dec. 19, 2002.

Since the Jesuits beguiled the United States into giving the Panama Canal to the Red Chinese, there are now over 200,000 Red Chinese in the Canal Zone.

This portends extremely serious problems for both the United States and Panama. A large percentage of Panamanian citizens want the U.S. to come back and restore the Canal Zone as before. Incidentally, the treaty giving the canal to Panama was never properly ratified. There were two versions of the treaty: an English version and a Spanish version. These two versions were not the same. The Senate ratified one version and the Panamanians ratified the other version. And the treason goes on and on.

When America was young, it was the envy of the entire world. In it's youth, America was kind, gracious, and gentle. America was a country of great religious and political liberty available to all under the United States Constitution. America was a nation without a king and it had a church without a pope. On American money the message of her trust in God was proclaimed, and the great blessing of God rested upon this country.

Alexis de Tocqueville, a young French philosopher of the last century, came to our shores to discover what magical quality enabled a handful of people to defeat the mighty British Empire twice in 35 years. He looked for the greatness of America in her fertile soil, her limitless forests and natural resources. He examined America's schools, her Congress and her unique Constitution without fully understanding the source of America's strength.

It was not, he said later, until he went to the churches of America and found congregations aflame with righteousness, that he began to comprehend the secret of this power. Upon his return to France, de Tocqueville wrote:

"America is great because America is good, and if America ever ceases to be good, America will cease to be great." - Des Griffin, Descent into Slavery?, Emissary Publications, PMB: 1776, 9205 SE Clackamas Rd., Clackamas, Oregon 97015, 1980, p. 267.

The United States was the champion of liberty and freedom throughout the world. Before this time no nation in history ever had a written constitution that guaranteed the liberty and freedom of its people. But the glorious beginning of this country was to be corrupted in later years. The gentle, gracious, freedom-loving character of the United States in its youth was later used as a facade to hide the character that this country subsequently developed. This facade has successfully kept hidden, even from most of its own citizens, the real character the United States developed in these last days as a result of Jesuit infiltration and subversion.

When the Jesuits are successful in taking over the United States and converting it into a ruthless police state, the people of the country will begin to realize what has happened to them. But then, of course, it will be too late to do anything about it.

The papacy has made colossal fools of untold millions of people down through history, and it is still doing so today.

Please order the book, The Secret Terrorists, to get the whole history of how the Jesuits have been responsible for nearly all the tragedies that have happened to the United States. If enough people understand the contents of this astounding book, it might be possible to defeat the Jesuits before they can complete their destruction of the United States. Before I understood that these Vitamin supplements were POISON I was worried I'd lose all my pills which I was suckered into thinking I needed big time. I'm just glad I've found how to get true health for almost free. So quite frankly they can remove all this junk and it would do the people a world of good as long as they stayed away from David Rockefeller's Big Pharma of course.

it was interesting to me though, that there is that branch of the FDA in Rome.

Title: Tasting the cup of the Borgia.

Description: "THE "CANTARELLA,"

CRAIG-OXLEY - July 6, 2006 11:13 PM (GMT)

Tasting the cup of the Borgia

<http://www.reformation.org/borgia-ch5.html>

"THE "CANTARELLA," DEADLY POISON OF THE BORGIA,' THE SECRET OF ITS PREPARATION HAS BEEN LOST—"ETERNITY POWDERS" AND "TIME POISONS"—RICH CARDINALS FORCED TO DRINK THE FATAL CUP—RAISING MONEY FOR THE ARMIES OF THE POPE'S SON—THE BANQUET OF DEATH WITH THE GRIM GODDESS NEMESIS AS AN UNBIDDEN GUEST—THE LAST DAYS OF ALEXANDER, AND HIS HORRIBLE END.

The Vatican looms large in the proverbs of the Roman populace. The dominant note is one of fear and distrust. "He who drinks of the water in the Vatican will die soon," is a saying that is heard to this day. "Tasting the cup of the Borgia" means the sudden or mysterious passing out of this world into the next. Proverbs are not only crystals of wisdom but often reflections of history. The history of the Roman church has been altered more than once by poison skillfully prepared and cunningly administered. In the biographies of popes and cardinals the tale of poisoning is not unfamiliar. Not all the poison in the Vatican, however, was made by hands. There has always been the deadly venom conceived in the mind and distilled to the world even at this hour in the pulpit and the press and the school. The Inquisition, the St. Bartholomew massacre, wars between nations and civil strife, ills and woes without number have come from the toxic laboratory of the Vatican, where they brew poisons for the mind in such infinite variety.

The doctrine that all power on earth is but a fief of the pope; that the state is and ought to be subject to the jurisdiction of the church, that there is no salvation outside of Romanism; that the pope is infallible; that the control of all schools belongs to the pope as of divine right—there you have some of the ingredients of that "leprous distilment," which is decanted by Romanism in vessels of all shapes and sizes. Fraud, violence, deceit, forgery—an analysis of popery will show the presence of all these poisonous elements as well.

The Borgias were experts in poisons for the mind, but in the decoction of poisons for the body they have attained a mastery which has never been equalled in the history of the human race. Their skill and knowledge of the terrible art died with them; they have left to history the name of their dreaded poison, "cantarella," but the secret of its preparation and the manner of its use are buried with them. Modern science has evolved toxicology, a special knowledge of poisons, but the "cantarella" of the Borgia Pope has baffled even the experts in toxicology. We can only guess at its composition by the symptoms of its victims. How the pope and his interesting family were able on the one hand to prepare the so-called "eternity powders" warranted to insure death in a few minutes and on the other hand contrived the manufacture of so-called "time poisons" which killed within a desired period will never be known.

It is now generally believed that the base of the "cantarella" was arsenic. Arsenic in its pure form, unless taken in large doses, rarely kills outright. Indeed the human system has shown itself capable of absorbing small doses of arsenic regularly without any apparent evil effect. There is a province in Austria known for its "arsenic eaters." They are hardy mountaineers who after years of regular use of the drug, even in quantities far beyond a medicinal dose, seem to enjoy excellent health. The attempt to kill a human being with one dose of arsenic in its pure form results in symptoms at once distressing and characteristic.

The Borgias, therefore, disdained the use of arsenic in such form as something too coarse and too obvious. They discovered that when arsenic is mixed with inorganic matter it loses none of its lethal qualities, but kills more unostentatiously. In this way they learned the art of making doses of varying strength—in other words the "time poisons." Much, of course, depended on the matter of solution and mixture with wine, milk and other liquids. According to one report the raw material of the "cantarella," or its original crude form, was obtained in this manner. Some animal, by preference a pig, was slaughtered and disembowelled. The entrails were then freely sprinkled with pure arsenic. The poison checked but did not entirely arrest the ensuing process of putrefaction. After allowing a certain time to elapse, the semi-putrid matter was squeezed out. The juice thus obtained became far more deadly than arsenic in its pure form but continued just as tasteless. All now depended on the size of the doses, the manner of mixing it, and the best way of administering.

To ascertain the exact effects of given quantities and given mixtures the pope and his son Cesare experimented for some time on living animals. These experiments being not entirely satisfactory, they next tried out their preparations on human beings. It may have been this diabolical work which gave them that pre-eminence that has associated the word poison with the name of Borgia in the minds of all readers of history. The victims, always of humble origin, having served their purpose, were flung into the Tiber through the secret passageways in the Castel S. Angelo. Many of these subterranean openings exist in the historic building to this day, but others have been walled up since it passed out of possession of the popes.

We have no intention to catalogue the crimes of the Borgias, for even if we were to confine ourselves to their murders by means of the "cantarella" the record would prove far too bulky for a volume of so modest a size. We will, therefore, only take up four well authenticated cases. In three cases the "cantarella" worked to perfection, in the fourth the intended victim, through some mysterious turn of luck, escaped, while the poisoners, i. e., the pope and his eldest son, were both caught in the toils of fate. Alexander VI died shortly after, the involuntary victim of his own poison, while his son was brought to the verge of the grave. Of this last case we propose to speak later at some length.

It must be pointed out here that the Borgia generally reserved the "cantarella" for their "friends" and even relatives. Men of wealth and power close to the papal court, preferably cardinals or influential churchmen, were removed by what one of them facetiously called the "liquor of succession." The estates of victims always passed quickly into the hands of the pope or his son or daughter.

The pope bitterly hated the cardinals who had sold themselves to him to insure his election. This feeling was not due of course to any promptings of conscience. Borgia hated them because of his belief that the price he had paid for their votes had been too high. The simplest way to get back the money and the lands and the offices he had used as bribes was to put the offending "princes of the church" out of the way. For this purpose the "cantarella" was eminently the straightest means.

The killing need not be done too openly. His meditated malice had centered on Cardinals Orsini and Michiel. They were now the two wealthiest members of the Sacred College. Upon some trivial pretext Orsini was taken to the Castel S. Angelo, which in those days might well have been likened to the Tower of London. Orsini had hidden his wealth away and a swift death might have spoiled the proposed robbery of the dead. The cardinal was therefore treated to "time poisons." The doses at first were small and produced only the earliest stages of arsenic poisoning, an inflammation and compression of the alimentary canal. This was enough to alarm the relatives who, Alexander hoped, would soon appear with offers to give up the cardinal's treasures to save his life. None appeared, however, but the cardinal's aged mother, who had heard that her son had been taken ill and was suffering from fits of vomiting. She went to the Holy Father with a rare and most precious pearl, offering to exchange it for the pope's permission to have the food for the imprisoned cardinal supplied from her own kitchen. Alexander VI accepted the pearl and thereafter had the poison put in the food sent by the mother. The cardinal lingered for a week but pressure on the family failed to bring the desired results and the angry pope finally sent him the Borgia cup full of the fatal drops. He was given two hours to drain it. When at the end of that time the papal jailer found the cup untouched there appeared another visitor in the cardinal's cell—the most dreaded of all the secret executioners of the pope, his countryman from Spain, the cruel Michelotto.

Now the specialty of Michelotto was not poison but strangling. The cardinal chose the poison and died within the hour. The other cardinal who had been among those who were bought was Michiel. He was poisoned in his home through the treachery of his own servant. The pope had bribed this man who mixed the slower variety of the "cantarella" with his master's food and drink. Cardinal Michiel endured the four painful stages of the "cantarella": violent compression of the alimentary canal, appearance of a horrible rash, "the most vile and loathsome crust," an undermining of the whole nervous system, and finally a fatty and rapid degeneration of the heart. He died in four days.

Curiously enough the treacherous servant, bribed by the pope, was afterward arrested, made a full confession and was burned at the stake. This of course happened after the death of Alexander. Cardinal Ferrari was poisoned in exactly the same way, the pope corrupting a young priest in the cardinal's household. The symptoms were much the same, death ensuing at the end of the second day after the first dose. The estates of the dead churchmen were immediately seized by Borgia, but were in part restored to the heirs after the election of a new pope. The young priest who had served as the pope's tool was also arrested some years later, made a full confession and suffered death by burning—the penalty for poisoners in that age.

It may be well to mention in passing that the vast sums which the pilgrims of the "Holy Year" of 1500 had brought to Rome and the huge tax that had been collected by the Vatican as a tribute for the prosecution of the wars against the Turks had all found their way into the hands of Cesare Borgia, who constantly needed new funds for the maintenance of his armies. It was the dream of both of the pope and his son to advance the fortune of Cesare until he was to become the ruler of all Italy. The money realized from the seizure of the estates of the poisoned cardinals all had gone to satisfy the demands of the mercenaries of Cesare. A new victim was needed and was soon found.

For some time the pope had had his eye on the immense wealth of another cardinal, Adrian by name. The wealth of Adrian was mostly liquid, just what Cesare wanted most. Adrian owned an estate on Vatican Hill, where the pope was a frequent visitor. Not all of the facts in the tragedy which was enacted on that estate have come down to us. The events occurred in the early part of August, in the year 1503, not long before the date of the anniversary of Borgia's election, which had he lived would have been the eleventh.

Before relating the happenings on the fatal summer evening let us take a rapid glance at the state of the Borgia fortunes at this time.

The cunning political genius of Cesare Borgia had maneuvered the pope into a position of great advantage. France and Spain were bidding for the support of Alexander, who through his son now controlled a not inconsiderable portion of Italian territory. All indications pointed to a further increase of Cesare's conquests and to a corresponding augmentation of the papal power in the politics of Europe. It is not too much to say that the Borgia were on the road to absolute dominance of the world when they plotted to poison and rob the aged Cardinal Adrian of Corneto. Fortune seemed to have singled them out for her favorites at every turn. Though now well past sixty, Alexander was in robust health and gifted with an almost incredible capacity for enjoyment. He seemed at his zenith rather than at his decline. As to Cesare, in all human probability he was destined to fill a great part in the annals of mankind. He had reduced most of the petty rulers of Italy to obedience and had taken their lands from them. Nothing seemed capable of stopping his career of triumph. If he could hold his armies together another month or two he and his father would be in a position to gain the support of the great monarchs of the world for the complete subjugation of Italy and its surrender to the Borgia ambitions.

Like many a smaller criminal, the pope had resolved that this poisoning should be his last and that with the cardinal's wealth in his hands he need no longer stoop to the common crime of murder for money.

We do not know how the dinner in the cardinal's villa had come about, but it appeared rather probable that the pope and Cesare had diplomatically invited themselves and that from the very outset their plan had been very cleverly conceived. Unless some circumstances altogether unforeseen and unforeseeable intervened, the old cardinal must soon be in the great beyond and his money in the hands of the pope and his son. Adrian had invited a number of distinguished guests, whether with or without the pope's knowledge we do not know. If he asked the pope's consent it is most likely that he received it, for a refusal might have awakened suspicion. Guicciardini, a contemporary historian and usually most painstaking and reliable, relates that Cesare Borgia some hours ahead of the dinner sent his personal messenger to the cardinal's villa with several bottles of wine mixed with suitable doses of the "cantarella."

The messenger had instructions to hand the bottles to the head steward of the cardinal's household and to enjoin the latter not to open the bottles under any circumstances until after Cesare's arrival at the banquet. According to all accounts the day was extremely hot. Alexander, tortured by the heat and a great thirst, arrived at the villa some time before the banquet, which was set for a late hour. The cardinal being out, he was received by the head steward. The pope complained of the weather and asked for a glass of wine. The head steward thinking that the wine sent by Cesare was undoubtedly some very fine brand probably intended for the pope in any event, disregarded the injunction of Cesare's messenger and opened the forbidden bottles. He filled the pope's glass and while the latter was sipping the wine, Cesare appeared and unaware of the true state of affairs, drank likewise of the wine that had been served to his father. The trouble with this version is that it does not account for the sickening of the cardinal and his guests at the banquet, which must have taken place not long afterwards.

There is another version which may seem more plausible. According to this account, the cardinal had received a warning and knew what the Borgia intended to do. He investigated and was led to suspect his steward. Putting the latter to a gruelling cross examination and threatening to have him hung on the spot if he did not make a clean breast of the affair, the cardinal obtained a full confession. Having learned of the bribe which his servant had accepted from the Borgia he doubled the amount upon condition that he, the steward, put the poisoned wine before the pope and Cesare. We know that the pope and his son did drink of the poisoned wine in quantities, which proved fatal to the pope and almost fatal to the son.

The fact that the cardinal himself was poisoned in a less dangerous degree remains to be explained. It is quite possible that the steward in his nervous fear made a mistake all around and had lost the means of distinguishing the poisoned wine from the other. The cardinal probably owed his better fortune to the general suspicion which must have filled his mind and which no doubt made him partake very sparingly of any of the wines offered at his table.

Unfortunately we get no help from Burckard's diary, which is a blank between the months of February and August, 1503. However, the poisoning of the cardinal, the Borgias, father and son, and the other guests at the banquet are sufficiently proven from other sources. We know from the dispatches of various ambassadors to their masters that the pope and Cesare immediately after the banquet showed unmistakable signs of poisoning. Both complained of fever and both had vomiting spells. The pope appeared terribly depressed. The next day the vomiting spells increased in violence and the discharges were mixed with gall and greenish substances. There follows a passing improvement, but presently the gravest symptoms reappear and the doctors cut and bleed the pope. The frightful heat, the exhaustion consequent upon the vomiting and later upon the letting of blood rapidly exhausted the vitality of the pope, who was then over seventy-three years old. As the death of Borgia now seemed but a matter of hours, orders were issued that no one be allowed to leave the Vatican. In spite of the prohibition, a number of persons succeeded in leaving the place and taking great treasures with them. Shortly before he expired, the pope fell into a coma and was unable to remember anyone, not even Cesare and Lucrezia. All this time Cesare suffered much in the same way as the pope, but his youth was in his favor and he passed through a very painful crisis to escape with his life.

When it is remembered that Cardinal Adrian was likewise poisoned, though in some way much less severely, it is obvious that the "cantarella" had been at work at the banquet and that in all human probability it had been introduced by the Borgia or their servants. The symptoms of the "cantarella" with its arsenic base are conclusive as to the nature of the illness. Had any further proof been wanting, however, it was soon furnished in most fearful fashion. The pope had died without regaining consciousness.

His body was washed and dressed and was placed in a chamber of his apartments. Two candles only were provided; there were no prayers and no night vigils. The next morning, according to custom, the dead body was carried into St. Peter's. The cardinal who had charge of the transportation was afraid that some personal enemy might want to disfigure the corpse, which would have been atrocious, of course, but strictly within the etiquette of the Italian "vendetta," or revenge. To make sure that nothing untoward would happen the cardinal ordered the body placed in a side chapel with a strong and high railing made of iron. And now appeared a last and most terrible symptom of the poison to which the pope had given his name. While a slight discoloring of the face had been noticed before death, a ghastly black crust now began to form on the corpse.

I hesitate to translate the description Burckard has given of the state of the body as it lay in state in the basilica. In its painstaking details and its crudeness it is scarcely fit to be placed before the modern reader. He says that the pope looked "like a very black negro "morus nigerrimus"—that "the mouth was wide open, the nose heavily swollen, the tongue split in two, the parts hanging over the lips * * * all of which was so horrible that no one would ever have believed it was the same man." The ambassador of Venice writes home to this effect: "Today the pope, according to custom, was carried to St. Peter's and shown to the people, but it was the most loathsome and the most monstrous and frightful corpse that had ever been seen. It had neither the form nor the aspect of a human being." Another ambassador writes that the body was horribly swollen and entirely black, "many think that he died of poison." Another eyewitness declares that the body looked "more black than the devil" Ghastly as the spectacle must have been in the day time it was even more insufferable at night in the yellow flickering and smoky light of the candles. Without further ceremony and long before the usual time, the remains of the pope were turned over to some carpenters and laborers to be put into a coffin. The men went about their work, as Burckard says, "joking and cursing." When it was found that the coffin was somewhat small for the distended proportions of the deceased pontiff they kicked and pushed the remains until they were able to close the coffin and nail it down. Such was the end of Roderigo Borgia, known among the .popes as Alexander VI. Here we may well leave him forever.

Foreign conspiracy against the liberties of the United States.

RECOMMENDATIONS.

NEW-YORK, Jan. 1, 1835.

To Messrs. Leavitt, Lord & Co.,

Gentlemen,-Learning that you are about to publish in a small volume, the articles, signed Brutus, (which recently appeared in the New-York Observer, shewing that a conspiracy is formed against the United States by the Papal powers of Europe,) the undersigned, who read those articles with interest, have great satisfaction in expressing their approbation of your undertaking. These articles are written by a gentleman of intelligence and candor, who has resided in the south of Europe, and enjoyed the best opportunities for acquaintance with the topics on which he writes.

While we disapprove of harsh, denunciatory language towards Roman Catholics, their past history, and the fact that they every where act together, as if guided by one mind, admonish us to be jealous of their influence, and to watch with unremitting care all their movements in relation to our free institutions. As this work is now to be published in a portable form, and with additional notes by the author, we hope it may obtain an extensive circulation and a careful perusal.

Yours, with friendly regard,

JAMES MILNOR,
THOMAS DE WITT,
N. BANGS,
JONATHAN GOING.

CHAPTER I

The first impressions of the improbability of a Foreign conspiracy considered-Present political condition of Europe favors an enterprise against our institutions-The war of opinions commenced; Despotism against liberty-The vicissitudes of this war-Official declarations of the despotic party against all liberty-Necessity to the triumph of Despotism that American liberty should be destroyed-The kind of attack most likely to be adopted from the nature of the contest-Reasons why our institutions are obnoxious to European governments-Has the attack commenced? Yes! by Austria-Through a Society called the St. Leopold Foundation-Ostensibly religious in its design.

CHAPTER II

Political character of the Austrian government-The old avowed enemy of Protestant liberty-Character of the people of Austria, slaves-Character of Prince Metternich, the arch contriver of plans to stifle liberty-These enemies of all liberty suddenly anxious for the civil and religious liberty of the United States-The absurdity of their ostensible design exposed-The avowed objects of Austria in the Leopold Foundation-Popery the instrument to act upon our institutions.

CHAPTER III

Popery in its political not its religious character the object of the present examination-The fitness of the instrument to accomplish the political designs of despotism-The principles of a Despotic and a Free government briefly contrasted-Despotic principles fundamental in Popery-Infallible testimony adduced-Papal claims of divine right and plenitude of power-Abject principles of Popery illustrated from the Russian Catechism-Protestantism from its birth in favor of Liberty-Luther on the 4th of July attacks the presumptuous claim of divine right-Despotism and Popery united against liberty of conscience, liberty of opinion, and liberty of the press-The anti-republican declarations of the present Pope Gregory XVI.

CHAPTER IV

The cause of Popery and Despotism identical-A striking difference between Popery and Protestantism as they exist in this country-American Protestantism not controlled by foreign Protestantism-American Popery entirely under foreign control-Jesuits, the foreign agents of Austria, bound by the strongest ties of interest to Austrian policy, not American-Their dangerous power, unparalleled to any Protestant sect-Our free institutions opposed in their nature to the arbitrary claims of Popery-Duplicity to be expected-Political dangers to be apprehended from Popish organization-American Popery uncontrolled by Americans, or in America-Managed in a foreign country by a foreign power for political purposes-Consequences that may easily result from such a state of things.

CHAPTER V

Points in our political system which favor this foreign attack-Our toleration of all religious systems-Popery opposed to all toleration-Charge of intolerance substantiated-The organization of Popery in America connected with and strengthened by foreign organization-Without a parallel among Protestant sects-Great preponderance of Popish strength in consequence-The divisions among Protestant sects nullifies their attempts at combination-Taken advantage of by Jesuits-Popish duplicity illustrated in its opposite alliances in Europe with despotism, and in America with democracy-The laws relating to immigration and naturalization favor foreign attack-Emigrants being mostly Catholic and in entire subjection to their priests-No remedy provided by our laws for this alarming evil.

CHAPTER VI

The evil from immigration further considered-Its political bearings-The influence of emigrants at the elections-This influence concentrated in the priests-The Priests must be propitiated; by what means-This influence easily purchased by the demagogue-The unprincipled character of many of our politicians favor this foreign attack-Their bargain for the suffrages of this priest-led band-A church and state party-The Protestant sects obnoxious to no such bargaining-the newspaper press favors this foreign attack; from its want of independence, and its timidity-An anti-republican fondness for titles, favors this foreign attack-Cautious attempts of Popery to dignify its emissaries and to accustom us to their high-sounding titles-A mistaken notion on the subject of discussing religious opinion in the secular journals, favors this foreign attack-Political designs not to be shielded from attack because cloaked by Religion.

CHAPTER VII

The political character of this ostensibly religious enterprise proved from the letters of the Jesuits now in this country-Their antipathy to private judgment-Their anticipations of a change in our form of government-Our government declared too free for the exercise of their divine rights-Their political partialities-Their cold acknowledgment of the generosity, and liberality, and hospitality of our government-Their estimate of our condition contrasted with their estimate of that of Austria-Their acknowledged allegiance and servility to a foreign master-Their sympathies with the oppressor, and not with the oppressed-Their direct avowal of political design.

CHAPTER VIII

Some of the means by which Jesuits can already operate politically in the country-By mob discipline-By priest police-Its great danger-Already established-Proofs-Priests already rule the mob-Nothing in the principles of Popery to prevent its interference in our elections-Popery interferes at the present day in the political concerns of other countries-Popery the same in our country-It interferes in our elections-In Michigan-In Charleston, S. C.-In New-York-Popery a political despotism cloaked under the name of Religion-It is Church and State embodied-Its character at head-quarters in Italy-Its political character stripped of its religious cloak.

CHAPTER IX

Evidence enough of conspiracy adduced to create great alarm-The cause of liberty universally demands that we should awake to a sense of danger-An attack is made which is to try the moral strength of the Republic-The mode of defence that might be consistently recommended by Austrian Popery-A mode now in actual operation in Europe-Contrary to the entire spirit of American Protestantism-True mode of defence-Popery must be opposed by antagonist institutions-Ignorance must be dispelled-Popular ignorance of all Papal countries-Popery the natural enemy of general education-Popish efforts to spread education in the United States delusive.

CHAPTER X

All classes of citizens interested in resisting the efforts of Popery-The unnatural alliance of Popery and Democracy exposed-Religious liberty in danger-Specially in the keeping of the Christian community-They must rally for its defence-The secular press has no sympathy with Protestants; in this struggle it is opposed to them-The Political character of Popery ever to be kept in mind and opposed-It is for the Papist not the Protestant to separate his religious from his political creed-Papists ought to be required publicly and formally and officially to renounce foreign allegiance and anti-republican customs.

CHAPTER XI

The question what is the duty of the Protestant community? considered-Shall there be an Anti-Popery Union? The strong manifesto that might be put forth by such a union-Such a political union discarded as impolitic and degrading to the Protestant community-

Golden opportunity for showing the moral energy of the republic-The lawful and efficient weapons of this contest-To be used without delay.

CHAPTER XII

The Political duty of American citizens at this crisis.

PREFATORY REMARKS.

THE following Numbers written for the New-York Observer in the beginning of the year 1834, and during several weeks of confinement by indisposition, have been, perhaps, more extensively copied into the religious journals of the different Christian denominations than any communications, (with perhaps a single exception,) of the same extent since the establishment of religious newspapers; and although the subject matter is almost altogether political, giving proofs of a serious foreign conspiracy against the government, yet the writer is not aware that a single secular journal in the United States has taken the pains to investigate the matter, or even to ask if indeed there may not be good grounds for believing it true. The silence of the secular press on a subject which has roused the attention of so large a body of the Protestant community may indeed be accounted for in part, perhaps altogether, from the all engrossing election contests which have agitated the country from one extremity of the land to the other; for the writer would certainly be very reluctant to adopt the belief, which has repeatedly been urged upon him by many, that the secular journals dare not attack Popery; he will not believe that dare not ever stood in the way of the duty of any patriotic independent conductor of the American press. Footnote: A friend to whom this part was read smiled, and said "you are sufficiently guarded in your language, but how many patriotic independent conductors of the American press are there? Can you name one?"

At the solicitation of many citizens without distinction of religious denomination or of political party, the writer has consented to collect the numbers into a pamphlet, adding notes illustrative of many matters which could not so well have been introduced into the columns of a newspaper.

That a vigorous and unexampled effort is making by the despotic governments of Europe to cause Popery to overspread this country, is a fact too palpable to be contradicted. Did not official documents lately published, put this fact beyond dispute, yet the writer had personal evidence sufficient to convince him of the fact and of the political object of the enterprise, while residing in Italy in the years 1830-31, from conversations with nobles and gentlemen of different countries, with the officers of various foreign governments, visiting and resident in the Roman and Austrian states, and with priests and other ecclesiastics of the Roman faith. Sometimes it was hinted to him as a check to too sanguine anticipations of the triumph of the experiment of our democratic republican government; sometimes it was told him by the former class in a tone of exultation that a cause was in operation which would surely overthrow our institutions and gradually bring us under a form of government less obnoxious to the pride, and less dangerous to the existence, of the antiquated despotic systems of Europe. In addition to these hints to the writer, concerning the efforts making by the governments of Europe to carry Popery through all our borders, other American travellers will testify to similar hints made to them. By one I am permitted to say, that the celebrated naturalist, the late Baron Cuvier, known also as a zealous Protestant, inquired of him with marks of concern, if it were indeed true that Popery had made such progress in the United States, as to cause the exultation (which it seems was no secret) among the legitimates of Europe. And again, that a distinguished member of one of the Protestant German embassies, in Rome also made similar inquiries of him, having heard much boasting of the progress of Popery in the United States, adding this pertinent remark, "they will be hammer or nails, Sir, they will persecute, or be persecuted." These facts may be of so much importance in aid of the other proofs of a conspiracy which these numbers unfold, as to show that among the various higher classes of Europe the enterprise of a Popish crusade in this country is not only a subject of notoriety, but is viewed with great interest, and is considered as having a most important political bearing.

In the following numbers the writer has chosen to rest the evidence of conspiracy mainly on official documents published in Vienna, because they have been translated and published, Footnote: In the New-York Observer, of the months of January, February, 1834. and are within the reach of any citizen of the country who chooses more closely to examine them. He has also availed himself of facts in the operations of Popish agents in this country, so far as their workings have been occasionally revealed.

The writer will add in conclusion, that he writes not in the interest of a sect or a party, for the question of Popery is not identified with either political party. He has lived too long in foreign countries to be able to identify himself with the local interests of mere party at home, whether in religion or politics. The great democratic features of his country's institutions, as contradistinguished from the despotic, monarchical and aristocratic systems of Europe, were admired by him as they appeared more boldly relieved, viewed from abroad in such striking contrast to all around him; and he is thoroughly persuaded that these democratic institutions, if suffered to have their unobstructed course, unobstructed except by the natural checks of education and religion actively and universally diffused and sustained, are more favorable to civil liberty and to the final triumph of truth, and consequently to human happiness, than any other civil institutions in the world. The writer entertaining these views has deemed it an imperative duty, at any sacrifice, to warn his countrymen, of a subtle enemy to the democracy of the country, and to conjure them as they value their civil and religious institutions, to watch the Protean shapes of Popery, to suspect and fear it most when it allies itself to our interests in the guise of a friend. Mistrust of all that Popery does, or affects to do, whether as a friend or foe in any part of the country, is the only feeling that true charity, universal charity, allows us to indulge.

CHAPTER I.

The first impression of the improbability of foreign conspiracy considered-Present political condition of Europe favors an enterprise against our institutions-The war of opinions commenced-Despotism against Liberty-The vicissitudes of this war-The official declaration of the despotic party against all liberty-Necessity to the triumph of despotism that American Liberty should be destroyed-The kind of attack upon us most likely to be adopted from the nature of the contest-Particular reasons why our institutions are obnoxious to the European governments-Has the attack commenced? Yes! by Austria-Through a Society called the St. Leopold Foundation-Ostensibly religious, in its designs.

DOES this heading seem singular? What, it will be said, is it at all probable that any nation or combination of nations, can entertain designs against us, a people so peaceable, and at the same time so distant? Knowing the daily increasing resources of this country in all the means of defence against foreign aggression, how absurd in the nations abroad to dream of a conquest on this soil? Let me, nevertheless, ask attention, while I humbly offer my reasons for believing that a conspiracy exists, that its plans are already in operation, and that we are attacked in a vulnerable quarter which cannot be defended by our ships, our forts, or our armies.

Who among us is not aware that a mighty struggle of opinion is in our days agitating all the nations of Europe; that there is a war going on between despotism on one side, and liberty on the other. Footnote: The War of Opinions. EVERY account from Europe attests the correctness of the views here taken more than a year since, of the political state of the civilized world. This war of opinions, or of categories, as Lafayette termed it, is in truth commenced, and Americans, if they will but use common observation, cannot but feel that a neglect to notice, and provide against the consequences of that settled, systematic hostility to free institutions so strongly manifested by foreign powers, and which is daily assuming a more serious aspect, will inevitably result in mischief to the country, will surely be attended with anarchy if they wake not to the apprehension of the reality of this danger. Americans, you indeed sleep upon a mine. This is scarcely a figure of speech; you have excitable materials in the bosom of your society, which, skilfully put in action by artful demagogues, will subvert your present social system; you have a foreign interest too, daily, hourly, increasing, ready to take advantage of every excitement, and which will shortly be beyond your control, or will be subdued only by blood. You have agents among you, men in the pay of those very foreign powers, whose every measure of foreign and domestic policy has now for its end and aim the destruction of liberty every where. To increase your peril, you have a press that will not apprise you of the dangers that threaten you; we can reach you with our warnings only through the religious journals; the daily press is blind, or asleep, or bribed, or afraid; at any rate, it is silent on this subject, and thus is throwing the weight of its influence on the side of your enemies. Foreign spies have clothed themselves in a religious dress, and so awe-struck are our journalists at its sacred texture, or so unable or unwilling to discern the difference between the man and his mask, that they start away in fear, lest they should be called bigoted or intolerant, or persecuting, if they should venture to lift up the consecrated cloak that hides a foreign foe. Americans, if you depend on your daily press, you rely on a broken reed; it fails you in your need. It dare not, no, it dare not attack Popery. It dare not drag into the light the political enemies of your liberty, because they come in the name of religion. All despotic Europe is awake and active in plotting your downfall, and yet they let you sleep, and you choose not to be awaked; "a little more sleep, a little more slumber, a little more folding of the hands to sleep." And now like a man whose house is on fire, dreaming of comfort and security, you will perhaps repel with passion and reproach the friendly hand that would wake you in season to escape with your life.

Do you doubt whether Europe is in hostile array against liberty? Read of the movements and revolutions of foreign cabinets, as one or the other principle temporarily predominates. Read the views of the statesmen of Europe. A distinguished member of the Spanish Cortes Don Telesforo de Trueba, in a speech delivered before that body a few months since, says, "The present war is not a war of succession but of principle—liberty and despotism are at issue. England, France, Belgium, Spain and Portugal, have ranged themselves under the banner of the former, but it is not necessary for me to name those powers who follow the standard of the latter."—Of Don Carlos and his government he says, "Ignorance, hypocrisy, and fanaticism, are his only counsellors, whispering to him new modes of oppressing his people. Every thing around is stamped with the marks of baseness and falsehood, while in this infernal region desolation and death reign triumphant. A sanguinary priesthood is sacrificing human victims to the God of peace and love,—men who wish to bring back the dark ages, the age of tyranny, and ignorance, and death."

The foreign correspondent of the Evening Post, in a letter from Florence, Italy, published in that journal, Dec. 27, 1834, has the following information, directly from Tuscany.

"Hitherto" (in the administration of the government) "a disposition has been shown to let off political offenders as lightly as possible-but lately, however, something of the same jealousy of republicanism has shown itself, which has been manifested by the other absolute governments of Europe. A quarterly journal was suppressed a few months since, on account of something which gave offence to Austria. This, and several other acts of the Grand Duke, have greatly diminished his personal popularity. The rulers of Italy appear to have come to an understanding, that it is time to make an example of some of the disaffected."

Now this Austria is the same busy, meddling government that is operating in this country; we scarcely read the name of Austria in a foreign journal, or in letters from abroad, but in connection with some plan for extinguishing liberty, and yet we harbor her emissaries, promote their secret designs, contribute our money to swell their coffers, build for them their seminaries and convents, entrust our children to their instruction, court their favor, shield them from all attack, yes, even put ourselves under their protection: all, all this we do, and our native blood flows evenly in our veins. Spirit of 76 where dost thou sleep? And with what deep anxiety should Americans watch the vicissitudes of the conflict. Having long since achieved our own victory in the great strife between arbitrary power and freedom, having demonstrated by successful experiment before the world, the safety, the happiness, the superior excellence of a republican government, a government proceeding from the people as the true source of power; enjoying in overflowing abundance the rich blessings of such a government, must we not regard with more than common interest the efforts of mighty nations to break away from the prejudices, and habits, and sophistical opinions of ages of darkness, and struggling to attain the same glorious privileges of rational freedom? But there are other motives than that of curiosity, or of mere sympathy with foreign trouble, that should arouse our solicitude, in the fearful crisis which has at length arrived, a crisis which the prophetic tongue of a great British statesman Footnote: Mr. Canning. long since foretold, the war of opinion, threatening the world with a more frightful sacrifice of human life, than history in any of its blood-stained pages records. Happily separated by an ocean-barrier from the great arena where the physical action of this bloody drama is to be performed, we are secure from the immediate physical effects of the strife; but we cannot remain unaffected by the result.

Of European wars arising from the craving of personal ambition, from thirst for national glory, from desire of territorial increase, or from other local causes, we might safely be ignorant both of cause and result. No armed bands of a conqueror flushed with victory, could give us a moment's alarm. But in a war of opinions, in a war of principles, in which the very foundations of government are subverted, and the whole social fabric upturned, we cannot, if we would, be uninterested in the result. Principles are not bounded by geographical limits. Oceans present to them no barriers. All of principle that belongs to despotism throughout the world, whether in the iron systems of Russia and Austria; or the scarcely less civilized system of China, and all of principle that belongs to pure American freedom in the United States, or in the mixed systems of Britain, France, and some other European states, are in this great contest arrayed in opposition. The triumph of the one or the other principle, whether in the field of battle, or in the secret councils of the cabinet, or the congress of ministers, or the open debate, produces effects wherever society exists. The recent convulsions in Europe should not pass unheeded by Americans. The three days' revolution of France, the reform in Britain on the side of liberty; the suppressed revolutions of Italy and Poland on the side of despotism; the yet doubtful victory of the two principles now in contest in Portugal and Spain; Footnote: These numbers were written in January and February, 1834. the crooked diplomacy, the contradictory measures, the faithless promises of the despotic cabinets, all show that the war of principles has indeed commenced, and that Europe is agitated to its very centre with the anxieties of the contest.

No open annual message reveals frankly to all the world the true internal condition of the oppressed nations of Europe. From the well guarded walls of the secret council chamber of the imperial power, documents seldom escape to show us the strength of the opposing principle. Despotism glosses over all its oppressions. The people are always happy under the paternal sway. They that plead for liberty are always enemies of public order. "Order reigns in Warsaw," was the proclamation that told the world that despotism had triumphed over Poland, and none now may know the number of her sons of freedom still at large. still unexiled to the mines of Siberia; yet it is great; for Russia, and Prussia, and Austria. have leagued anew against unconquerable Poland; and the agony of determination, the desperate resolution which the Russian Autocrat has just uttered, tells the secret of the yet unvanquished spirit of Polish patriots, and at the same time discloses the plot of mighty efforts, of united efforts, of persevering efforts utterly to extinguish liberty.

"As long as I live," says the Emperor, "I will oppose a will of iron to the progress of liberal opinions. The present generation is lost, but we must labor with zeal and earnestness to improve the spirit of that to come. It may require an hundred years; I am not unreasonable, I give you a whole age, but you must work without relaxation."

This is language without ambiguity, bold, undisguised; it is the clear official disclosure of the determination of the Holy-Alliance against liberty. It proclaims unextinguishable hatred, a will of iron. There is no compromise with liberty, a hundred years of efforts unrelaxed, if necessary, shall be put forth to crush it for ever. Its very name must be blotted from the earth. What! and is there a Holy Alliance, a "union of Christian princes," leagued to extinguish the kindling sparks of liberty in Europe? and will they make no effort to quench the great altar-fires, that blaze in their strength in the temples of this land of liberty? An oversight like this would seem to be too palpable for the wisdom of the despotic cabinets to commit. This conquest must be achieved, or liberty will never die in Europe.

With declarations before us, thus officially put forth by despotism, of such exterminating hostility to liberty, is it not possible that an attack on us may be made from a quarter, and in a shape little expected? Should we not at least look about us? Nations may be attacked and conquered too, with other weapons than the sword. The diplomatic pen, as England can testify, has often wrested from her that territory which her sword had won. We need not look, therefore, to the ports of Europe to see if fleets are gathering. We are safe enough from ships. Nor need we fear diplomacy, for we have "entangling alliances with none." Where, then, shall we look? What shape would attack be likely to assume? Let the nature of the contest aid us in the inquiry. It is the war of opinion; the war of antagonist principles: the war of despotism against liberty. But how can this contest be carried on in this country? We have not the warring opinions to set in array against each other. One principle is certainly absent. We have no party in favor of despotism. This party is to be created. If then a scheme can be devised for sowing the seeds, and rearing the plants of despotism, that is the scheme which would find favor with the Holy Alliance, to subserve its designs against American liberty.

Is it asked, Why should the Holy Alliance feel interested in the destruction of transatlantic liberty? I answer, the silent but powerful and increasing influence of our institutions on Europe, is reason enough. The example alone of prosperity which we exhibit in such strong contrast to the enslaved, priest-ridden, tax-burdened despotisms of the old world, is sufficient to keep those countries in per-petual agitation. How can it be otherwise? Will a sick man, long despairing of cure, learn that there is a remedy for him, and not desire to procure it? Will one born to think a dungeon his natural home, learn through his grated bars, that man may be free; and not struggle to obtain his liberty? And what do the people of Europe behold in this country? They witness the successful experiment of a free government; a government of the people; without rulers de jure divino, (by divine right:) having no hereditary privileged classes; a government exhibiting good order and obedience to law, without an armed police and secret tribunals; a government out of debt; a people industrious, enterprising, thriving in all their interests; without monopolies; a people religious without an establishment; moral and honest without the terrors of the confessional or the inquisition; a people not harmed by the uncontrolled liberty of the press, and freedom of opinion; a people that read what they please, and think, and judge, and act for themselves; a people enjoying the most unbounded security of person and property; among whom domestic conspiracies are unknown; where the poor and rich have equal justice; a people social and hospitable; exerting all their energies in schemes of public and private benefit without other control than mutual forbearance. A government so contrasted in all points with absolute governments, must, and does engage the intense solicitude, both of the rulers and people of the old world. Every revolution that has occurred in Europe for the last half century, has been in a greater or less degree the consequence of our own glorious revolution. The great political truths there promulgated to the world, are the seed of the disorders and conspiracies, and revolutions of Europe, from the first French revolution, down to the present time. They are the throes of the internal life, breaking the bands of darkness with which superstition and despotism have hitherto bound the nations struggling into the light of a new age. Can despotism know all this, and not feel it necessary to do something to counteract the evil?

Let us look around us. Is despotism doing any thing in this country? It becomes us to be jealous. We have cause to expect an attack, and that it will be of a kind suited to the character of the contest, the war of opinion. Yes! despotism is doing something. Austria is now acting in this country. She has devised a grand scheme. She has organized a great plan for doing something here, which she, at least, deems important. She has her Jesuit missionaries travelling through the land; she has supplied them with money, and has furnished a fountain for a regular supply. She had expended a year ago more than seventy four thousand dollars in furtherance of her design! Footnote: From the best authority, I have just learned, Dec. 1834, that $100,000 have been received from Austria, within two years! These are not surmises. They are facts. Some official documents giving the constitution and doings of this Foreign Society, have lately made their appearance in the New-York Observer, and have been copied extensively into other journals of the country. This society having ostensibly a religious object, has been for nearly four years at work in the United States, without attracting, out of the religious world, much attention to its operations. The great patron of this apparently religious scheme is no less a personage than the Emperor of Austria. The Society is called the St. Leopold Foundation. It is organized in Austria. The field of its operations is these United States. It meets and forms its plans in Vienna. Prince Metternich has it under his watchful care. The Pope has given it his apostolic benediction, and "His Royal Highness, Ferdinand V., King of Hungary, and Crown Prince of the other hereditary states, has been most graciously pleased, prompted by a piety worthy the exalted title of an apostolic king, to accept the office of Protector of the Leopold Foundation." Now in the present state of the war of principles in Europe, is not a society formed avowedly to act upon this country, originating in the dominions of a despot, and holding its secret councils in his capital, calculated to excite suspicion? Is it credible that a society got up under the auspices of the Austrian government, under the superintendence of its chief officers of state, supplying with funds a numerous body of Jesuit emissaries who are organizing themselves in all our borders, actively passing and re-passing between Europe and America; is it credible, I say, that such a society has for its object purely a religious reform? Is it credible that the manufacturers of chains for binding liberty in Europe, have suddenly become benevolently concerned only for the religious welfare of this republican people? If this Society be solely for the propagation of the Catholic faith, one would think that Rome, and not Vienna should be its headquarters! that the Pope, not the Emperor of Austria, should be its grand patron! It must be allowed that this should be a subject of general and absorbing interest. If despotism has devised a scheme for operating against its antagonist principle in this country, the stronghold, the very citadel of freedom, it becomes us to look about us. It is high time that we awake to the apprehension of danger. I propose to show, why I believe this ostensibly religious society covers other designs than religious.

CHAPTER II.

Political character of the Austrian government, the power attacking us-The old avowed enemy of Protestant liberty-Character of the people of Austria-Slaves-Character of Prince Metternich the arch contriver of plans to stifle liberty-These ENEMIES of all liberty, suddenly anxious for the civil and religious liberty of the United States-The absurdity of their ostensible design exposed-The avowed objects of Austria in the Leopold foundation-Popery the instrument to act upon our institutions.

THE documents to which I have alluded, exhibit so much of the correspondence of the "St. Leopold Foundation," as it was deemed advisable to publish in Vienna. They consist of letters and statements from Jesuits, bishops and priests, residing or itinerating in this country, and whose resources are derived chiefly from the Society in Austria. In documents thus prepared by Jesuits, (the most wary order of ecclesiastics,) to draw forth more liberal supplies of money from abroad, and then submitted to the revision of the most cautious cabinet of Europe, that so much only may be published as will attain, their object in the Austrian dominions, while all that might excite suspicion in the United States is concealed, we must expect to find great care to avoid any unnecessary exposure of covert political designs. The evidence therefore of a concerted political attack upon our institutions, which I conceive to lurk under the sudden and extraordinary zeal of Austria for the religious welfare of the United States, will not depend altogether on the information derived from these documents. Such an attack is what might be expected from the present political attitude of the European nations, in regard to the principles of despotism and liberty; from the powerful and unavoidable effect which our institutions exert in favor of the popular principle; and also from the known political character of Austria.

Who, and what is Austria, the government that is so benevolently concerned for our religious welfare? Austria is one of that Holy Alliance of despotic governments, one of the "union of Christian princes," leagued against the liberties of the people of Europe. Austria is one of the partitioners of Poland; the enslaver and despot of Italy. Her government is the most thorough military despotism in the world. She is the declared and consistent enemy of civil and religious liberty; of the freedom of the press; in short, of every great principle in those free institutions which it is our glory and privilege to inherit from our fathers. Austria, from the commencement of the Reformation to the present time, has been the bitter enemy of Protestantism. The famous thirty years' war, marked by every kind of brutal excess, was waged to extirpate those very principles of civil and religious liberty which lie at the foundation of our government, and had Austria then triumphed, this republic would never have been founded.

And what are the people of Austria? They are slaves, slaves in body and mind, whipped and disciplined by priests to have no opinion of their own, and taught to consider their Emperor their God. They are the jest and by-word of the Northern Germans, who never speak of Austrians but with a sneer, and, "as slaves unworthy the name of Germans; as slaves both mentally and physically." [Dwight.]

And who is Prince Metternich, whose letter of approval, in the name of his master the Emperor, is among the documents? He is the master of his Master, the arch contriver of the plans for stifling liberty in Europe and throughout the world. "Metternich," says Dwight in his Travels in Germany, "by his wonderful talent in exciting fear, has thus far controlled the cabinets of Europe, and has exerted an influence over the destinies of nations, little, if any inferior to that of Napoleon." He persuaded the Emperor of Austria and King of Prussia not to fulfil the promise they so solemnly made to their German subjects of giving them free constitutions. It was the influence of Metternich that prevented Alexander from assisting Greece in her struggles for liberty. He lent Austrian vessels to assist the Turks in the subjugation of the Greeks. Metternich crushed the liberties of Spain by inducing Louis XVIII., against his wishes, to send 100,000 men thither under the Duke d' Angouleme to restore public order! "When Sicily, Naples, and Genoa, in 1820-1, threw off the galling yoke of slavery, Metternich sent his 30,000 Austrian bayonets into Italy and re-established despotism. And when in 1831, (as the writer can testify from personal observation,) goaded to desperation by the extortion and tyranny, and bad faith of the Papal government, the Italian patriots made a noble and successful effort to remedy their political evils by a revolution firm, yet temperate, founded in the most tolerant principles, marked by no excess, and hailed by the Legations with universal joy, again did this arch-enemy of human happiness let loose his myrmidons, overwhelming the cities, dragging the patriots, Italy's first citizens to the scaffold, or incarcerating them in the dungeons of Venice, filling whole provinces with mourning, and bringing back upon the wretchedly oppressed population the midnight darkness which the dawn of liberty had begun to dispel. "Prince Metternich," says Dwight, "is regarded by the liberals of Europe as the greatest enemy of the human race who has lived for ages. You rarely hear his name mentioned without exciting indignation, not only in the speaker but in the auditors. Metternich has not been attacking MEN but PRINCIPLES, and has done so much towards destroying on the continent those great political truths, which nations have acquired through ages of effort and suffering, that there is reason to fear, should his system continue for half a century, liberty will forsake the continent to revisit it no more. The Saxons literally abhor this Prince. The German word mitternacht means midnight. From the resemblance of the word to Metternich, as well as from his efforts to cover Europe with political darkness, the Saxons call him Prince Mitternacht-Prince Midnight."

This is the government and the people, which have, all at once, manifested so deep an interest in the spiritual condition of this heretic land. It is this nation of slaves, this remnant of the superstition and vassalage, and degradation of the dark ages, from whom the light of the nineteenth century has been so carefully shut out, that it fondly conceits its own darkness to be light, its death-like torpor, order,-it is this nation, not yet disenthralled from the chains of superstition, that is anxious to enlighten us, in the United States, in the principles of civil and religious liberty. Civil and religious liberty! words that may not be uttered in Austria but at the risk of the dungeon; words that would carry such shrieks of dismay through the ranks of Prince Metternich's vassals, as the flash of a torch would bring forth from a cavern of owls.

And can it be believed that such a government, the determined, consistent enemy of liberty, has no interested motive, no political design, no other than sentiments of Christian benevolence in her operations in this country ? Is it likely that we, Protestant republicans of the United States, have won the kind regards of the Austrian government, which has been the persevering foe of the Reformation and its republican fruits since the days of Luther? Has not Austria had vexation and anxiety and trouble enough for fifty years past, in stopping up the opening crevices of the European dungeon through which the unwelcome light of American liberty has so often broken, to be perfectly apprised of the hated source of that light ? Yes, she cannot but now perceive, that those Protestant principles, which she has been incessantly engaged in endeavoring to suppress, driven by the winds of persecution from Europe, have been taking root, and strengthening in a congenial soil, and are here bearing their genuine fruits, liberty and happiness, and all the religious and social virtues. She cannot view this Protestant nation growing to gigantic dimensions, a living proof of the truth and salutary influence of the principles she hates, without feeling that her own principles of darkness are in danger. And well may she be dismayed. Yes, Austria has turned her eyes towards us, and she loves us as the owl loves the sun. Can any one doubt that she would extinguish every spark of liberty in this country, if she had the power? Can any one believe that she would make no attempt to abate an evil which daily threatens more and more the very existence of her throne? We may be told by some, perhaps, that her designs are purely of a religious character. Who can believe it? No one who has been in Austria. Every intelligent man who has resided even for a short time in the Aus-trian dominions, must have seen enough of the craft, both of the government and the priests, to make him suspicious of all their doings, and most so, when they are most lavish of their professions of kindness and benevolence. "Timeo Danaos et dona ferentes."

But let us see what Austria avows as her design in the formation of the Leopold Foundation. Footnote: Some may be inclined to ask. Is not this society a private association, merely chartered by the government, not differing materially from the religious societies in our own country? I answer that, were the Leopold Foundation an association of private individuals, (which it is not.) yet got up in the Austrian dominions, it would still be a government affair.-For we must not confound the practices of two governments, so totally opposite in the administration of all their affairs as the Austrian and our own. From the happy, separation of church and state in our own country, religious societies, of whatever cha-acter, have no connection with the government.

They move in a separate sphere of action, yet in perfect harmony with it. But in Austria, no plan, no society of any kind, is private; the government interferes in every thing, is all in all. Even the persecuted Maroncelli, confined in the dungeons of Spielberg for the crime of loving the political principles of this country, must wait a week, at the risk of this life, for a gracious permission from the Paternal government to have his leg amputated. Yes, a private matter like this is a government affair; how much more then a grand society, with the Emperor its patron, the Crown prince and heir to the imperial throne its protector, and Prince Metternich, and all the dignitaries of the empire, temporal and ecclesiastical, engaged in its operations? It is the Austrian government that is engaged in this plan of an ostensibly religious character. The first great object is "To promote the greater activity of Catholic missions in America." She may be, and doubtless is, perfectly sincere in this design, for it is only necessary that she should succeed in her avowed object to have her utmost wishes accomplished. She need avow no other aim. If she gains this, she gains all. If she succeeds in fastening upon us the chains of Papal bondage, she has a people as fit for any yoke she pleases to grace our necks withal, as any slaves over whom she now holds her despotic rod. She has selected a fitting instrument for her purpose. Her armies can avail her nothing against us, for the ocean intervenes. Her diplomacy gives her no hold, for there are scarcely any political relations between us. The only instrument by which she can gain the least influence in these States is that precisely which she has chosen. Its perfect fitness to accomplish any political design against the liberties of this country and of the world, I shall next consider.

CRAIG-OXLEY - June 3, 2006 12:57 AM (GMT)

CHAPTER III.

Popery, in its political not its religious character, the object of the present examination-
The fitness of the instrument to accomplish the political designs of despotism considered-The principles of a despotic and free government, briefly contrasted-Despotic principles fundamental in Popery-Proved by infallible testimony-Papal claims anti-republican declarations of the present Pope Gregory, XVI.

BEFORE commencing the examination of the perfect fitness of the instrument, Catholic missions, to accomplish the political designs upon this country of Austria and her despotic allies, I would premise, that I have nothing to do in these remarks with the purely religious character of the tenets of the Roman Catholic sect. They are not in discussion. If any wish to resolve their doubts in the religious controversy, the acute pens of the polemic writers of the day will furnish them abundant means of deciding for themselves. But every religious sect has certain principles of government growing out of its particular religious belief, and which will be found to agree or disagree with the principles of any given form of civil government. Footnote: Opposite tendencies of Popery and Protestantism. On the very threshold of the examination upon which I have here entered, and while searching among the records of the two sects for the political tendencies of the principles of Popery and Protestantism, I was struck with the marked difference in extent which the two fields of inquiry legitimately offered for examination. The prime dogma of the Catholics, that all which their church teaches is infallible, unchangeable; that what she has once taught as truth must now and forever be truth, lays open to our examination a wide field. All and each of the precepts, laws, and acts of Popery, from the earliest ages to the present day, may be legitimately quoted to show the political character of that sect. Innovation, repeal, reform, or progress can find no admittance into the Papal system, without destroying the fundamental principle on which the whole system rests. "The whole of our faith," says Cardinal Pallavicini, an infallible authority, "rests upon one indivisible article, namely the infallible authority of the church. The moment, therefore, we give up any part whatever, the whole falls, for what admits not of being divided, must evidently stand entire, or fall entire."

Protestantism, on the contrary, is founded on the Bible; the Bible is the rallying point of all Protestant religious sects. They all believe that God is its author. The religious faith of each is bound to this one volume. But as the Bible prescribes no form of faith, or doctrine, or of church government, in which all, in the exercise of the natural and revealed right of private judgment, can agree, each sect adopts that form most in accordance with what it believes to be the spirit of the doctrines which the Bible teaches. Hence there is diversity of views, according to the diversities of human constitution, according to the varying degrees of intellectual cultivation, or the peculiar wants and condition incident to the infinite variety of circumstances in which human society exists. Upon this freedom to choose according to the dictates of reason and conscience, granted to man by his Maker, denied by Roman Catholics and claimed by Protestants, is built the fabric of religious liberty. Difference of opinion being allowed, controversy of course ensues, and converts are to be made not by force of arms, but by force of truth supported by appeals to reason and conscience. Zealous according to the strength of his belief in the dogmas of his sect, the Protestant calls to his aid all the treasures of science. He believes that the divine Author of truth in the Bible is also the author of truth in Nature. He knows, that as truth is one, He that created all that forms the vast field of scientific research cannot contradict truth in Scripture by truth in nature; the Protestant is therefore the consistent encourager of all learning, of all investigation. Every discovery in science, he feels, brings to religious truth fresh treasures. Free inquiry, and discussion, all intellectual activity legitimately belong to Protestantism. It is by thus opening wide the doors of knowledge, and letting in the light of natural science upon what it believes to be the revealed truth of the Bible, that Protestantism has been able gradually to bring out the principle of religious liberty, and in its train the invaluable blessing of civil liberty.-At the commencement of the Reformation, however, we are not to look for a full development of the free principles of Protestantism. We must expect to find many truths, (which to us who live in the noon of freedom, are as clear as the sun,) then obscured or entirely invisible in the popish darkness of the times. The slavish prohibitions, the deep-rooted heathen rites, and the arbitrary dogmas of Popery were then enforced by power, by ignorance, and corruption, so that the struggle of free with despotic principles was attended, through many generations, with constant vicissitude. No maxim or usage of Popish intolerance, that for a long time clung or still clings to any of the Protestant systems of Europe, can be quoted against American Protestantism; consequently I am under no necessity of defending any despotic or intolerant practice, which may be charged or proved upon foreign, or ancient Protestantism, while every act or practice, past or present of Popish enactment is, (Papists themselves being judges,) available to demonstrate the immutable character of Popery. It is my design, therefore, briefly to consider some of the antagonist principles of the government of Austria and of the United States, and compare them with the principles of government of the Catholic and Protestant sects. By this method we shall be able to judge of their bearing on the permanency of our present civil institutions.

Let us first present to view the fundamental principle of government, that principle which, according to its agreement with one or the other of the two opposite opinions that divide the world, decides entirely the character of the government in every part of the body politic. From whom is authority to govern derived? Austria and the United States will agree in answering,-from God. The opposition of opinion occurs in the answers to the next question. To whom on earth is this authority delegated? Austria answers, To the EMPEROR, who is the source of all authority,-"The Emperor do ordain," &c. The United States answers, To the PEOPLE, in whom resides the Sovereign power,-"We the People do ordain, establish, grant," &c. In one principle is recognized the necessity of the servitude of the people, the absolute dependence of the subject, unqualified submission to the commands of the rulers without question or examination. The Ruler is Master, the People are Slaves. In the other is recognized the supremacy of the people, the equality of rights and powers of the citizen, submission alone to laws emanating from themselves; the Ruler is a public servant, receiving wages from the people to perform services agreeable to their pleasure; amenable in all things to them; and holding office at their will. The Ruler is Servant, the People are Master. The fact and important nature of the difference in these antagonist doctrines, leading, as is perceived, to diametrically opposite results, are all that is needful to state in order to proceed at once to the inquiry, which position does the Catholic sect and the Protestant sects severally favor? The Pope, the supreme Head of the Catholic church, claims to be the "Vicegerent of God," "supreme over all mortals;" "over all Emperors, Kings, Princes, Potentates and People;" " King of kings and Lord of lords." He styles himself, "the divinely appointed dispenser of spiritual and temporal punishments;" "armed with power to depose Emperors and Kings, and absolve subjects from their oath of allegiance:" "from him lies no appeal ;" "he is responsible to no one on earth;"

"he is judged of no one but God." But not to go back to former ages to prove the fact of the Pope's claiming divine right, let the present Pontiff Gregory XVI. testify. He claims, and attempts the exercise of this plentitude of power and asserts his divine right. The document I quote is fresh from the Vatican, scarce four months old, a document in which the Pope interferes directly in the political affairs of Portugal against Don Pedro. "How can there be unity in the body," says the Pope, "when the members are not united to the head and do not obey it? And how can this union and obedience be maintained in a country where they drive from their sees the bishops, legitimately instituted by Him to whom it appertains to assign pastors to all the vacant churches, because the DIVINE RIGHT grants to Him alone the primacy of jurisdiction and the plentitude of power." The Catholic catechism now taught by Catholic priests to the Poles in all the schools of Poland, and published by special order at Wilna, 1832, is very conclusive of the character of Catholic doctrine. The following questions and answers are propounded

"Quest. 1. How is the authority of the Emperor to be considered in reference to the spirit of Christianity? Ans. As proceeding immediately from God.

"Quest. 2. How is this substantiated by the nature of things? Ans. It is by the will of God that men live in society; hence the various relations which constitute society, which for its more complete security is divided into parts called nations; the government of which is intrusted to a Prince, King, or Emperor, or in other words, to a Supreme ruler; we see, then, that as man exists in conformity to the will of God, society emanates from the same divine will, and more especially the supreme power and authority of our lord and master, the Czar.

"Quest. 3. What duties does religion teach us the humble subjects of his majesty the Emperor of Russia, to practice towards him? Ans. Worship, obedience, fidelity, the payment of taxes, service, love and prayer, the whole being comprised in the words worship and fidelity.

"Quest. 4. Wherein does this worship consist, and how should it be manifested? Ans. By the most unqualified reverence in words, gestures, demeanor, thoughts and actions.

"Quest. 5. What kind of obedience do we owe him? Ans. An entire, passive, and unbounded obedience in every point of view.

"Quest. 6. In what consists the fidelity we owe to the Emperor? Ans. In executing his commands most rigorously, without examination, in performing the duties he requires from us, and in doing every thing willingly without murmuring.

"Quest. 8. Is the service of his Majesty, the Emperor, obligatory on us? Ans. Absolutely so; we should, if required, sacrifice ourselves in compliance with his will, both in a civil and military capacity, and in whatever manner he deems expedient.

"Quest. 9. What benevolent sentiments and love are due to the Emperor? Ans. We should manifest our good will and affection, according to our station, in endeavoring to promote the prosperity of our native land, Russia, (not Poland,) as well as that of the Emperor, our father, and of his august family.

"Quest. 13. Does religion forbid us to rebel, and overthrow the government of the Emperor? Ans. We are interdicted from so doing, at all times, and under any circumstances.

"Quest. 14. Independently of the worship we owe to the Emperor, are we called upon to respect the public authorities emanating from him? Ans. Yes; because they emanate from him, represent him, and act as his substitute, so that the Emperor is every where.

"Quest. 15. What motives have we to fulfil the duties above enumerated? Ans. The motives are two-fold-some natural, others revealed.

"Quest. 16. What are the natural motives? Ans. Besides the motives adduced, there are the following: The Emperor, being the head of the nation, the father of all his subjects who constitute one and the same country, is thereby alone worthy of reverence, gratitude, and obedience: for both public welfare and individual security depend on submissiveness to his commands.

"Quest. 17. What are the supernatural revealed motives for this worship? Ans. The supernatural revealed motives are, that the Emperor is the vicegerent and minister of God to execute the divine commands; and, consequently, disobedience to the Emperor is identified with disobedience to God himself, that God will reward us in the world to come for the worship and obedience we render the Emperor, and punish us severely to all eternity should we disobey and neglect to worship him. Moreover, God commands us to love and obey from the inmost recesses of the heart every authority, and particularly the Emperor, not from worldly considerations, but from apprehension of the final judgment.

"Quest. 19. What examples confirm this doctrine? Ans. The example of Jesus Christ himself, who lived and died in allegiance to the Emperor of Rome, and respectfully submitted to the judgment which condemned him to death. We have, moreover, the example of the Apostles, who both loved and respected them; they suffered meekly in dungeons conformably to the will of Emperors, and did not revolt like malefactors and traitors. We must, therefore, in imitation of these examples, suffer and be silent."

This is the slavish doctrine taught to the Catholics of Poland. The people, instead of having power or rights, are according to this catechism mere passive slaves, born for their masters, taught by a perversion of the threatenings of religion to obey without murmuring, or questioning, or examination, the mandates of their human deity, bid to cringe and fawn and kiss the very feet of majesty, and deem themselves happy to be whipped, to be kicked, or to die in his service. Is it necessary to say that there is not a Protestant sect in this country that holds such abject sentiments, or whose creed inculcates such barefaced idolatry of a human being? Protestantism, on the contrary, at its birth, while yet bound with many of the shackles of Popery, attacked, in its earliest lisplings of freedom, this very doctrine of divine right. It was Luther, and by a singular coincidence of day too, on the fourth of July, who first in a public disputation at Leipsic with his Popish antagonist, called in question the divine right of the Pope.

Let us now examine in contrast other political rights, liberty of conscience, liberty of opinion, and liberty of the press. Austria and the United States differ on these points as widely as on the fundamental question. Austria not only has the press in her own territory under censorship, but intermeddles to control the press in neighboring states on the principle of self preservation. "In Saxony," says Dwight, "the press is fettered by Austria and Prussia, who allege this reason, 'that all the works published in Saxony, which are not on the proscribed list, are freely admitted into our dominions. For our happiness, therefore, and the stability of our thrones, it is necessary that the press should be fettered!!'" As to liberty of opinion, political or religious, in Austria, no one dreams of the existence of such a thing; the dungeon is a summary mode there of obtaining a most happy uniformity of opinion throughout all the imperial dominions. It is our glory, on the contrary, that all these rights are secured to us by our institutions, and freely enjoyed, not only without the least danger to the peace of the state, but from the very genius of our government, they are esteemed among its most precious safeguards. What are the Catholic tenets on these points? Shall I go back some three or four hundred years, and quote the pontifical law which says. [Art. 9.] "The Pope has the power to interpret Scripture and to teach as he pleases, and no person is allowed to teach in a different way." Or to the fourth Council of Lateran in 1215, which decrees "That all heretics, (that is all who have an opinion of their own,) shall be delivered over to the civil magistrate to be burned." Or shall I refer to the Catholic Index Expurgatorius to the list of forbidden books, to show how the press is still fettered? No! it is unnecessary to go farther than the present day. The reigning pontiff Gregory XVI. shall again answer the question. He has most opportunely furnished us with the present sentiments of the Catholic church on these very points. In his encyclical letter, dated Sept. 1832, the Pope, lamenting the disorders and infidelity of the times, says,

"From this polluted fountain of 'indifference,' flows that absurd and erroneous doctrine, or rather raving, in favor and defence of 'liberty of conscience,' for which most pestilential error, the course is opened to that entire and wild liberty of opinion, which is every where attempting the overthrow of religious and civil institutions; and which the unblushing impudence of some has held forth as an advantage to religion. Hence that pest, of all others most to be dreaded in a state, unbridled liberty of opinion, licentiousness of speech, and a lust of novelty, which, according to the experience of all ages, portend the downfall of the most powerful and flourishing empires."

"Hither tends that worst and never sufficiently to be execrated and detested LIBERTY

OF THE PRESS, for the diffusion of all manner of writings, which some so loudly contend for, and so actively promote."

He complains too of the dissemination of unlicensed books.

"No means must be here omitted, says Clement XIII., our predecessor of happy memory, in the Encyclical Letter on the proscription of bad books-no means must be here omitted, as the extremity of the case calls for all our exertions, to exterminate the fatal pest which spreads through so many works; nor can the materials of error be otherwise destroyed than by the flames, which consume the depraved elements of the evil."

Now all this is explicit enough, here is no ambiguity. We see clearly from infallible authority that the Catholic of the present day, wherever he may be, if he is true to the principles of his sect, cannot consistently tolerate liberty of conscience, or liberty of the press. Is there any sect of Protestants in this country, from whose religious tenets doctrines so subversive of civil and religious liberty can be even inferred? If there be, I am ignorant of its name. The subject will be pursued in the next chapter.

CHAPTER IV.

The cause of Popery and despotism identical-Striking difference between Popery and Protestantism as they exist in this country-American Protestantism not controlled by foreign Protestantism-American Popery entirely under foreign control-Jesuits the foreign agents of Austria, bound by the strongest ties of interest to Austrian policy, not to American-Their dangerous power-unparalleled in any Protestant sect-Our free institutions opposed in their nature to the arbitrary claims of Popery-Duplicity to be expected-Political dangers to be apprehended from Roman Catholic organization-American Roman Catholic ecclesiastical matters uncontrolled by Americans or in America-Managed in a foreign country by a foreign power for political purposes-Consequences that may easily result from such a state of things.

I EXPOSED in my last chapter the remarkable coincidence of the tenets of Popery with the principles of despotic government, in this respect so opposite to the tenets of Protestantism; Popery, from its very nature, favoring despotism, and Protestantism, from its very nature, favoring liberty. Is it not then perfectly natural that the Austrian government should be active in supporting Catholic missions in this country? Is it not clear that the cause of Popery is the cause of despotism?

But there is another most striking and important difference between Popery and Protestantism, in their bearing upon the liberties of the country. No one of the Protestant sects owns any head out of this country, or is governed in any of its concerns by any men or set of men in a foreign land. All ecclesiastical officers are nominated and appointed or removed by the people of the United States. No foreign body has any such union with any sect of Protestants in the United States, as even to advise, much less to control any of its measures. Our Episcopalians appoint their own bishops without consulting the church of England; our Presbyterians are entirely independent of the church of Scotland ; and our Wesleyan Methodists have no ecclesiastical connection with the disciples of Wesley in the old world. But how is it in these respects with the Catholics? The right of appointing to all ecclesiastical offices in this country, as every where else, is in the Pope, (now a mere creature of Austria. He claims the power, as we have seen, by divine right. All the bishops, and all the ecclesiastics down to the most insignificant officer in the church, are from the genius of the system entirely under his control. And he, of course, will appoint none to office but those who will favor the views of Austria. He will require all whom he appoints, to support the agents whom Austria is sending to this country for the accomplishment of her own purposes.

And who are these agents? They are, for the most part Jesuits, an ecclesiastical order, proverbial through the world for cunning, duplicity, and total want of moral principle; an order so skilled in all the arts of deception that even in Catholic countries, in Italy itself, it became intolerable, and the people required its suppression. They are Jesuits in the pay and employ of a despotic government, who are at work on the ignorance and passions of our community; they are foreigners, who have been schooled in foreign seminaries in the doctrine of passive obedience; they are foreigners under vows of perpetual celibacy, and having, therefore, no deep and permanent interest in this country; they are foreigners, bound by the strong ties of pecuniary interest and ambition, to the service of a foreign despot. Footnote: The foreign Emissaries of Popery rewarded in their own country. This is a matter deserving of serious attention. Where now is Bishop Cheverus, who passed about fourteen years in Boston? He was a foreigner, with no ties to this country, paid for his services by a foreign government, he had a duty to his foreign masters to perform. What that duty was, may now easily be conjectured. Boston, as the capital of New-England, was considered at the time he arrived, the strong hold of Protestant, of Anti-Popish principles. Popery was there, and throughout New-England, held in the greatest abhorrence, for to Popery may be traced, though remotely, yet clearly, the persecutions which drove the Pilgrim fathers to this country. The history of those fathers, for ages previous, is but the history of hard fought battles, to wrest from Popish usurpation those invaluable rights, civil and religious, which they fled to this wilderness securely to enjoy. Ere popery then could expect to gain foothold among the descendants of the persecuted Puritans, their almost innate abhorrence to popery must be overcome. What plan could be better devised to accomplish the end, than to send the mild, conciliating, gentle Bishop to demonstrate by his example and his teaching, that Popery was not that monster their fathers had taught them to believe it to be, or at least that now the tyrant had grown mild and tolerant. If this were the design, no plan could have been more successful. Who that has visited Boston, does not know the epithets with which Bishop Cheverus' name is coupled. The good bishop, the liberal bishop, the excellent, pious, tolerant, mild bishop. Now all this might have been and perhaps is true of the bishop. The instrument was well chosen, his duty was well accomplished, and he receives the reward of a faithful servant from his foreign masters, in a translation to the wealthy archbishopric of Bordeaux.

Again, where is Bishop Dubourg, of New-Orleans? He has resided in this heathen land his stated time, and having accomplished the duty prescribed to him is translated to the Bishopric of Montauban, in France.

And again, where is Bishop Kelly, of Richmond, Va.? He also sojourns with us until his duties to foreign masters are performed, and then is rewarded by promotion at home to the Bishopric of Waterford and Lismore.

And where, soon will be that busy, pompous Jesuit, who has been so often announced as passing and repassing between Rome, Vienna, and the United States, Bishop England? If report speaks truth, he is soon to be rewarded for his services in the cause of his foreign masters with a Cardinal's hat. The following from the Dublin Freeman's Journal, preceded by a nauseous mass of fulsome compliment, gives substance to the report:—"After escorting these ladies (some nuns) to Charleston, Dr. England proceeds without delay as Legate from the Pope to Hayti, over the eccle-siastical affairs of which republic he carries with him from the Holy See the most full and unlimited powers; from which we confidently trust ere long he will again return to Europe, to receive as some reward for all his labors and services, a Cardinal's hat; for instead of receiving dignity from, should such an appointment take place, Dr. England will confer dignity upon the sacred purple."

Now in view of these instances of services in this country, rewarded by appointments in Europe, the question naturally occurs: What interest have these servants of a foreign despotism in the free institutions of this country? What sympathies with American liberty can these foreigners have, educa-ted, as they have been in their own country, in the principles of despotic institutions, living but temporarily in this country, (whose entire political sys-tem is diametrically opposed to their whole educa-tion,) and looking forward, after their task is per-formed, to a recal to comfortable benefices and high places of profit and honor at home, to rewards devised by Austria and the Pope, and meted out to their faithful advocates according to the zeal and devotion manifested to their interests? What would be said of the Episcopalian, or Presbyterian, or Methodist, or Baptist clergy, were they announ-ced as foreigners sent from England, who after a short sojourn of active service in this country, were known to be recalled and promoted in their own country, to be Bishops, and dignified officers under the British government? Is there no danger to our free institutions from a host commanded by such men, whose numbers are constantly increasing by the machinations and funds of Austria?

Consider, too, the power which these Jesuits and other Catholic priests possess through the confessional, of knowing the private characters and af-fairs of all the leading men in the community; the power arising from their right to prescribe the kinds and degrees of penance; and the power arising from the right to refuse absolution to those who do not comply with their commands. Suppose such powers were exercised by the ministers of any other sect, the Episcopalian, the Methodist, the Presbyterian, the Baptist, &c. what an outcry would be raised in the land! And should not the men who possess such powers be jealously watched by all lovers of liberty?

Is it possible that these Jesuits can have a sincere attachment to the principles of free institutions? Do not these principles oppose a constant barrier to their exercise of that arbitrary power, which they claim as a divine right, and which they exercise too in all countries where they are dominant? Can it not be perceived, that although they may find it politic for the present to conceal their anti-republican tenets, yet this concealment will be merely temporary, and is only adopted now, the better to lull suspicion? Is it not in accordance with all experience of Popish policy, that Jesuits should encroach by little and little, and persevere till they have attained to plenitude of power. At present they have but one aim in this country, which absorbs all others, and that is to make themselves popular. If they succeed in this we shall then learn, when too late to remedy the evil, that Popery abandons none of its divine rights. The leaders of this sect are disciplined and organized, and have their adherents entirely subservient to their will. Here then is a regular party, a religious sect, ready to throw the weight of its power, as circumstances may require, ready to favor any man, or set of men, who will engage to favor it.

And to whom do these leaders look for their instructions? Is it to a citizen or body of citizens belonging to this country; is it to a body of men kept in check by the ever jealous eyes of other bodies around them, and by the immediate publicity which must be given to all their doings? No, they are men owning no law on this side of the ocean; they are the Pope and his Consistory of Cardinals, following the plans and instructions of the imperial cabinet of Austria, -plans formed in the secret councils of that cabinet, instructions delivered in secret, according to the modes of despotism, to their obedient officers, and distributed through the well disciplined ranks in this country, to be carried into effect in furtherance of any political designs the Austrian cabinet may think advantageous to its own interests. And will these designs be in favor of liberty? With a party thus formed and disciplined among us, who will venture to say that our elections will not be under the control of a Metternich, and that the appointment of a President of the United States will not be virtually made in the Imperial Cabinet of Vienna, or the Consistory of Cardinals at Rome? Will this be pronounced incredible? It will be the almost certain result of the dominion of Popery in this country.

But we need not imagine that it will always be deemed expedient to preserve the name of President, or even the elective character of our chief magistrate. How long would it take the sophistry that deludes the mind of its victim into the belief of a man's infallibility, and fixes the delusion there indelibly, binding him soul and body to believe against the evidence of his reason, and his senses; holding him in the most abject obedience to the will of a fellow-man; how long, I say, would it take such sophistry to impose the duty of acknowledging the divine right of an emperor over the priest conquered vassals of this country-vassals well instructed in the Russian Catechism, and prepared to worship, love and obey as their Lord and Master, some scion of the House of Hapsburg,-the Emperor of the United States?

CRAIG-OXLEY - June 3, 2006 12:59 AM (GMT)

CHAPTER V.

Points in our political system which favor this foreign attack-Our toleration of all religious systems-Popery opposed to all toleration-Charge of intolerance substantiated-The organization of Popery in America connected with and strengthened by foreign organization-Without a parallel among Protestant sects-Great preponderance of Popish strength in consequence-The divisions among Protestant sects nullifies their attempts at combination-Taken advantage of by Jesuits-Popish duplicity illustrated in its opposite alliances in Europe with despotism, and in America with democracy-The laws relating to immigration and naturalization favor foreign attack-Emigrants being mostly Catholic and in entire subjection to their priests-No remedy provided by our laws for this alarming evil.

WHAT I have advanced in my previous chapters may have convinced my readers that there is good reason for believing that the despots of Europe are attempting, by the spread of Popery in this country, to subvert its free institutions; yet many may think that there are so many counteracting causes in the constitution of our society, that this effort to bind us with the cast-off chains of the bigotry and superstition of Europe cannot meet with success. I will, therefore, in the present chapter, consider some of the points in our political system, of which advantage has already been taken to attack us, by the wily enemies of our liberties.

It is a beautiful feature in our constitution, that every man is left to worship God according to the dictates of his own conscience, that the church is separated from the state, and that equal protection is granted to all creeds. In thus tolerating all sects, we have admitted to equal protection not only those sects whose religious faith and practice support the principle on which the free toleration of all is founded, but also that unique, that solitary sect, the Catholic, which builds and supports its system on the destruction of all toleration. Yes, the Catholic is permitted to work in the light of Protestant toleration, to mature his plans, and to execute his designs to extinguish that light, and destroy the hands that hold it. It is no refutation of the charge of intolerance here made against Catholics as a sect, to show that small bodies of them, under peculiar circumstances, have been tolerant, or that in this country, where they have always been a small minority, they make high professions of ardent love for the republican, tolerant institutions of our government. No one can be deceived by evidence so partial and circumscribed, while the blood of the persecuted for opinion's sake, stains with the deepest tinge every page of the history of that church, aye, even while it is still wet upon the dungeon floors of Italy; while the intolerant and anti-republican principles of Popery, are now weekly thundered from the Vatican, and echoed in our ears by almost every arrival from Europe. Footnote: Sanguinary spirit still existing in Modern Popery. If any suppose that Popery has changed its intolerant character in modern times, we refer them to the following specimen of its spirit. It is Popery of the present day; Popery of 1833.

In the recent journals of Modena, in Italy, are articles signed by the duke of Canosa, the language of which knows no bounds. He justifies the St. Bartholomew's Massacre. He says, "when a disease has made such progress, that it cannot be cured by magnesia and calomel, to save life, resort must be had to arsenic. If Charles IX. had recoiled from the massacre of the Huguenots, he would certainly have perished, a few weeks after, upon the scaffold, as happened to the indulgent and compassionate Louis XVI., because he took an opposite course. He who in such a case has not the courage of a lion, and does not resolve on rigorous measures, is lost. The pusillanimous alone are ignorant of this truth." Such shocking sentiments, be it remembered, are published in a country, where there is a censorship of the press: and they are therefore the language of the government.

The duke reasons like a true legitimate. The happiness and lives of the people to any amount, are mere chaff compared with the happiness and life of that sainted bauble called a king. His reasoning amounts to this: "better that thousands of the common people should perish by the bloodiest butchery, than that the single life of one human being endowed with divine right to reign, should like Louis XVI. perish on the scaffold." It is not necessary to defend the shedding of royal blood, but there is a trick of kingcraft which ought to be exposed, because its influence is not unfelt in this country. The divine right to reign is first assumed, then the human being thus invested with power partakes of divinity, he becomes sacred, and all the names and paraphernalia of idolatrous worship surround him. He becomes a God, every word he utters, every step he takes, every action, however unimportant in any other human being, is invested in this earthly divinity with a sacred character. Does the god-king ride out, the whole country must know the important event; is he married, the whole nation keeps jubilee; is he dead, the world is clad in mourning. The misfortunes of his offspring are magnified and consecrated by all the arts of the imagination, by all the embellishments of romance. Is an illustration wanted? Take a recent case. Look at the history of the Duchess de Berri, an infamous woman, notoriously profligate, of a character that in common life would condemn her to the neglect of the world, and cast her out of all society. But she is a princess, she has a spark of royal divinity that shines upon her brazen front, and the duped multitude bow in adoration before her. Her sufferings, her wanderings, her dress in the minutest particulars, her words, her looks, are the subject of sympathetic appeals to the compassion of the world; ladies shed tears over the distresses of the unfortunate princess. Alas! alas! that royal blood should suffer! And are we not influenced by this mawkish, morbid sympathy for suffering despots? Where are our sympathies, when the interested statements of a government-controlled foreign press, inform us of the struggles of the people against age-consecrated oppression. Are they with the people? Do we ever suspect the truth of the glowing details of the doings of the scandalous mob, the high-wrought accounts of outrage and rebellion of a wicked rabble against lawful authority, which circulate through our land, the production abroad of pensioned writers; of a licensed press, and those too without remark or explanation from our press? What should be the feelings of a true American? Where should be his sympathies, who has been nurtured in the air of liberty, who has learned from his father's lips the black catalogue of despotic wrongs, which his ancestors suffered, and which were defended by all the tricks and glosses, and arts of oppression? If any human being should feel quick sympathy with the struggles of the people, should examine with the greatest care the charges preferred against them, and exercise a willing charity for their apparent or real excesses, and quick mistrust of all the doings, representations and fair speeches of despotism, it is an American.

Let me not be charged with accusing the Catholics of the United States with intolerance. They are too small a body as yet fully to act out their principles, and their present conduct does not affect the general question in any way, unless it may be to prove that they are not genuine and consistent Catholics. The conduct of a small insulated body, under the restraints of the society around it, is of no weight in deciding the character of the sect, while there are nations of the same infallible faith acting out its legitimate principles uncontrolled, and producing fruits by which all may discern, without danger of mistake, the true nature of the tree. If Popery is tolerant, let us see Italy, and Austria, and Spain, and Portugal, open their doors to the teachers of the Protestant faith; let these countries grant to Protestant missionaries, as freely as we grant to Catholics, leave to disseminate their doctrine through all classes in their dominions. Then may Popery speak of toleration, then may we believe that it has felt the influence of the spirit of the age and has reformed; but then it will not be Popery, for Popery never changes; it is infallibly the same, infallibly intolerant.

The conspirators against our liberties who have been admitted from abroad through the liberality of our institutions, are now organized in every part of the country; they are all subordinates, standing in regular steps of slave and master, from the most abject dolt that obeys the commands of his priest, up to the great master-slave Metternich, who commands and obeys his Illustrious Master the Emperor. Footnote: Popery is organized throughout the World. This organization is asserted in the late proclamation of the Pope to the Portuguese. In the catalogue of his complaints he says: "Nevertheless, that which principally afflicts us is, that those acts and measures have evidently for their aim to break every bond of union, with that venerable chair of the blessed Peter" (his own throne) "which Jesus Christ has made the centre of unity; and thus the society of communion being once broken, to wound the church by the most pernicious schism. In fact, how can there be unity in the body, when the members are not united to the head, and do not obey it?" They report from one to another, like the sub-officers of an army, up to the commander-in-chief at Vienna, (not the Pope, for he is but a subordinate of Austria. Footnote: Lest the charge often made in these numbers should seem gratuitous; of the Pope being the creature of Austria, and entirely subservient to the Imperial Cabinet, it may be as well to state that the writer was in Rome during the deliberations of the Conclave, respecting the election of the present Pontiff. It was interesting to him to hear the speculations of the Italians on the probability of this or that cardinal's election. Couriers were daily arriving from the various despotic powers, and intrigues were rife in the anti-chambers of the Quirinal palace; now it was said that Spain would carry her candidate, now Italy, and now Austria, and when Cardinal Capellani was proclaimed Pope, the universal cry, mixed too with low-muttered curses, was that Austria had succeeded. The new Pope had scarcely chosen his title of Gregory XVI. and passed through the ceremonies of coronation, before the revolution in his states, gave him the opportunity of calling in Austria to take possession of the Patrimony of St. Peter, which his own troops could not keep for an hour, and at this moment Austrian soldiers hold the Roman Legations in submission to the cabinet of Vienna. Is not the Pope a creature of Austria?) There is a similar organization among the Catholics of other countries, and the whole Catholic church is thus prepared to throw its weight of power and wealth into the hands of Austria, or any Holy Alliance of despots who may be persuaded to embark for the safety of their dynasties, in the crusade against the liberties of the country which, by its simple existence in opposition to their theory of legitimate power, is working revolution and destruction to their thrones.

Now, to this dangerous conspiracy what have we to oppose in the discipline of Protestant sects? However well organized, each according to its own manner, these different sects may be, there is not one of them that can by any possibility derive strength through its organization, from foreign sects of the same name. Nor is this a matter of regret; it is right that it should be so; no nation can be truly independent where it is otherwise. Foreign influence, then, cannot find its way into the country through any of the Protestant sects, to the danger of the State. In this respect Catholics stand alone. They are already the most powerful and dangerous sect in the country, for they are not confined in their schemes and means like the other sects, to our own borders, but they work with the minds and the funds of all despotic Europe.

And not only are each of the Protestant sects deprived of foreign aid; they are weak collectively, in having no common bond of union among them-selves, so far as political action is concerned. The mutual jealousies of the different sects have hitherto prevented this, and it is a weakness boasted of by Catholics, and of which advantage is and ever will be taken while the unnatural estrangement lasts. Catholics have boasted that they can play off one sect against another, for in the petty controversies that divide the contending parties, the pliable conscience of the Jesuit enables him to throw the weight of his influence on either side as his interest may be the command of his superiors, and the alleged good of the church, (that is the power of the priesthood,) being paramount to all other considerations.

This pliability of conscience, so advantageous in building up any system of oppression, religious or political, presents us with strangely contradictory alliances. In Europe Popery supports the most high-handed despotism, lends its thunders to awe the people into the most abject obedience, and maintains at the top of its creed, the indissoluble union of church and state! while in this country, where it is yet feeling its way, (oh! how consistent!) it has allied itself with the democracy of the land, it is loudest in its denunciations of tyranny, the tyranny of American patriots! it is first to scent out oppression, sees afar off the machinations of the native American Protestants to unite church and state! and puts itself forth the most zealous guardian of civil and religious liberty! With such sentinels, surely our liberties are safe, with such guardians of our rights, we may sleep on in peace!

Another weak point in our system is our laws encouraging immigration, and affording facilities to naturalization. Footnote: Immigration and our Naturalization Law. The subject of immigration is one of those which demands the immediate attention of the nation, it is a question which concerns all parties: and if the writer is not mistaken in his reading of the signs of the times, the country is waking to a sense of the alarming evil produced by our naturalization laws. Let us war among ourselves in party warfare, with every lawful weapon that we can convert to our purpose. It is our birthright to have our own opinion, and earnestly to contend for it, but let us court no foreign friends. Every American should feel his national blood mount at the very thought of foreign interference. While we welcome the intelligent and persecuted of all nations and give them an asylum and a share in our privileges, let us beware lest we admit to dangerous fellowship those who cannot and will not use our hospitality aright. That such may come, and do come, there is no reason to doubt. Consider the following testimony of an emigrant, given before a justice in Albany. He says that "in June last, the parish officers paid the passages of himself and about forty others of the same parish, from Chatham to the city of Boston, in America, on board the ship Royalist, Capt. Parker, and that they landed in Boston in the month of July last-that the parish officers gave him thirty shillings sterling, in money, in addition to paying his passage,-that he is now entirely destitute of the means of living, and is unable to labor, and prays for relief."

Now here are forty paupers cast upon our shores from one parish in England, and in five years they become citizens, entitled to vote!! Is there an American of any party, who can believe that there is no danger in admitting to equal privileges with himself such a class of foreigners. A remedy to this crying evil admits of not a moment's delay. At this moment the ocean swarms with ships crowded with this wretched population, bearing them from misery abroad to misery here.

The expense incurred in this city (New York) for the support of foreign paupers, it is well known is enormous. In Philadelphia more than three fourths of the inmates of their Almshouse are foreigners. Whole families have been known to come from on board ship, and go directly to the Almshouse. In the Boston Dispensary there were the last year, (1831) from two districts only, 477 patients; of these 441 were foreigners!! Leaving but 36 of our own population to be provided for. In the Boston Almshouse, the following returns show the increase of foreign paupers in five years.

The year ending Sept. 30, 1829, Americans 395

" " " " " Foreigners 284

The year ending Sept. 30, 1834, Americans 340

" " " " " Foreigners 613

Thus we see that native pauperism has decreased in five years, and foreign pauperism more than doubled.

In Cambridge, (Mass.) more than four fifths of the paupers are foreigners.

The first and immediate step that should be taken, is to press upon Congress and upon the nation, instant attention to the NATURALIZATION LAWS. We must first stop this leak in the ship, through which the muddy waters from without threaten to sink us. If we mean to keep our country, this life-boat of the world, from foundering with all the crew, we must take on board no more from the European wreck until we have safely landed and sheltered its present freight. But would you have us forfeit the character of the country as the asylum of the world? No: but it is a mistaken philanthropy indeed that would attempt to save one at the expense of the lives of thousands; that would receive into our families those dying of the plague. Our naturalization laws were never intended to convert this land into the almshouse of Europe, to cover the alarming importation of every thing in the shape of man that European tyranny thinks fit to send adrift from its shores, nor so to operate as to compel us to surrender back all the blessings of that freedom for which our fathers paid so dear a price into the keeping of its foreign enemies. No, we must have the law so amended that NO FOREIGNER WHO MAY COME INTO THE COUNTRY, AFTER THE PASSAGE OF THE NEW LAW, SHALL EVER BE ALLOWED TO EXERCISE THE ELECTIVE FRANCHISE. This alone meets the evil in its fullest extent.

Who can complain of injustice in the enactment of such a law? Not the native American, he is not touched by it. Certainly not the foreigner now in the country, whether naturalized or not. It cannot operate against him. It would take away no right from a single individual in any country. This law would withhold a favor, not a right from foreigners, and from those foreigners only who may hereafter come into the country. If foreigners abroad choose to take offence at the law, we are not under obligations to consult their wishes, they need not come here. This favor, it should be understood, has repeatedly been abused, and it is necessary for the safety of our institutions in future to withhold it. The pressing dangers to the country from Popery, which I think I have shown not to be fictitious; other visible indications of foreign influence in the political horizon; the bold organization of foreigners as foreigners in our elections-these all demand the instant attention of Americans, if they mean not to be robbed by foreign intrigue of their liberty and their very name. In the early state of the country liberality in these points was thought to be of advantage, as it promoted the cultivation of our wild lands, but the dangers which now threaten our free institutions from this source more than balance all advantages of this character. The great body of emigrants to this country are the hard-working men-tally neglected poor of Catholic countries in Europe, who have left a land where they were enslaved, for one of freedom. However well disposed they may be to the country which protects them, and adopts them as citizens, they are not fitted to act with judgment in the political affairs of their new country, like native citizens educated from their infancy in the principles and habits of our institutions. Most of them are too ignorant to act at all for themselves, and expect to be guided wholly by others. These others are of course their priests. Priests have ruled them at home by divine right; their ignorant minds cannot ordinarily be emancipated from their habitual subjection, they will not learn nor appreciate their exemption from any such usurpation of priestly power in this country, and they are implicitly at the beck of their spiritual guides. They live surrounded by freedom, yet liberty of conscience, right of private judgment, whether in religion or politics, are as effectually excluded by the priests, as if the code of Austria already ruled the land. They form a body of men whose habits of action, (for I cannot say thought,) are opposed to the principles of our free institutions, for they are not accessible to the reasonings of the press, they cannot and do not think for themselves.

Every unlettered Catholic emigrant, therefore, that comes into the country, is adding to a mass of ignorance which it will be difficult to reach by any liberal instruction, and however honest, (and I have no doubt most of them are so,) yet from the nature of things they are but obedient instruments in the hands of their more knowing leaders to accomplish the designs of their foreign masters. Republican education, were it allowed freely to come in contact with their minds, would doubtless soon furnish a remedy for an evil for which, in the existing state of things, we have no cure. It is but to continue for a few years the sort of immigration that is now daily pouring in its thousands from Europe, and our institutions, for aught that I can see, are at the mercy of a body of foreigners, officered by foreigners, and held completely under the control of a foreign power. We may then have reason to say, that we are the dupes of our own hospitality; we have sheltered in our well provided house a needy body of strangers, who, well filled with our cheer, are encouraged by the unaccustomed familiarity with which they are treated, first to upset the regulations of the household, and then to turn their host and his family out of doors.

CHAPTER VI.

The evil from immigration further considered-Its political bearings-The influence of emigrants at the elections-This influence concentrated in the priests-The priests must be propitiated-By what means-This influence easily purchased by the demagogue-The unprincipled character of many of our politicians favor this foreign attack-Their bargain for the suffrages of this priest-led band-A church and state party-The Protestant sects obnoxious to no such bargaining-The newspaper press favors this foreign attack-From its want of independence and its timidity-An anti-republican fondness for titles favors this foreign attack-Cautious attempts of Popery to dignify its emissaries and to accustom us to their high-sounding titles-A mistaken notion on the subject of discussing religious opinion in the secular journals favors this foreign attack-Political designs not to be shielded from attack because cloaked by religion.

I WILL continue the consideration of some of the points in our political system, of which the foreign conspirators take advantage in their attacks on our liberties. We have seen that from the nature of the case the emigrant Catholics generally are shamefully illiterate, and without opinions of their own. They are and must be under the direction of their priests. The press, with its arguments for or against any political measure, can have no effect on minds taught only to think as the priest thinks, and to do what the priest commands. Here is a large body of ignorant men brought into our community, who are unapproachable by any of the ordinary means of enlightening the people-a body of men who servilely obey a set of priests imported from abroad, bound to the country by none of the usual ties, owing allegiance and service to a foreign government, depending on that government for promotion and reward, and this reward too depends on the manner in which they discharge the duties prescribed to them by their foreign master; which is, doubtless for the present, to confine themselves simply and wholly to increasing the number of their sect and the influence of the Pope in this country. It is men thus officered and of such a character, that we have placed in all respects on a level at our elections with the same number of native patriotic and intelligent citizens.

The Jesuits are fully aware of the advantage they derive from this circumstance. They know that a body of men admitted to citizenship, unlearned in the true nature of American liberty, exercising the elective franchise, totally uninfluenced by the ordinary methods of reasoning, but passively obedient only to the commands of their priests, must give those priests great consequence in the eyes of the leaders of political parties; they know that these leaders must esteem it very important that the priests be propitiated. And how is a Catholic priest to be propitiated? How, but by stipulating for that which will increase his power or the power of the church, for be it always borne in mind, that they are identical. The Roman church is the body of priests and prelates; the laity have only to obey and to pay, not to exercise authority. The priest must be favored in his plans of destroying Protestantism, and building up Popery. He must have money from the public treasury to endow Catholic institutions; he must be allowed to have charters for these institutions which will confer extraordinary powers upon their Jesuit trustees; Footnote: One College at the West under Austrian influence. The following fact illustrates the dangerous, successful intriguing spirit of the Jesuits, and the culpable negligence of one of our state legislatures (that of Kentucky) who has thus suffered itself to be the dupe of Popish artifice. "St. Joseph's College, at Bardstown, Kentucky, was incorporated by the State Legislature in 1824. The Bishop of Bardstown is Moderator, and five Priests are Trustees. And there is this provision in the charter: "The said trustees shall hold their station in said college one year only, at which time the said moderator shall have the power of electing others, or the same, if he should think proper, and increase the number to twelve, and this power may be exercised by him every year thereafter, or his successor or successors to the Bishopric; and in case of the removal, resignation or death of either of the said trustees, his place may be supplied by an appointment that may be made by the said Bishop, or his successor or successors, who may also become moderators in the institution, and act and do as the said B. J. Flaget is empowered by this act to do."

The Bishop of Bardstown, in a letter to a friend in Europe, dated February, 1825, says:-"Our Legislature has just incorporated the college. The Bishops of Bardstown are continued perpetually its moderators or rectors. I might have dictated conditions, which I could not have made more advantageous or honorable; and what is still more flattering is, that these privileges were granted almost without any discussion, and with unanimity in both houses."

Now the Pope it is well known appoints all Bishops. Here then is one college in the country already placed in perpetuo under the exclusive control of the Pope, and consequently for an indefinite period under that of Austria!! he must be permitted quietly to break down the Protestant Sabbath, by encouraging Catholics to buy and sell on that day as on other days; in one word, he must have all the powers and privileges which the law or the officers appointed to administer the law can conveniently bestow upon him. The demagogue or the party who will promise to do most for the accomplishment of these objects, will secure all the votes which he controls. Surely there is great danger to our present institutions from this source, and men as skilful as are the Jesuits we may be sure will not fail to use the power thus thrown into their hands to work great mischief to the republic.

The recklessness and unprincipled character of too many of our politicians give a great advantage to these conspirators. There is a set of men in the country who will have power and office, cost what they may; men who, without a particle of true patriotism, will yet ring the changes on the glory and honor of their country, talk loud of liberty, flatter the lowest prejudices, and fawn upon the powerful and the influential; men who study politics only, that they may balance the chances of their own success in falling in with, or opposing, this or that fluctuating interest, without caring whether that interest tends to the security or the downfall of their country's institutions. To such politicians a body of men thus drilled by priests, presents a well fitted tool. The bargain with the priest will be easily struck. "Give me office, and I will take care of the interests of your church." The effect of the bargain upon the great moral or political interests of the country, will not for a moment influence the calculation. Thus we have among us a body of men, a religious sect, who can exercise a direct controlling influence in the politics of the country, and can be moved together in a solid phalanx; we have a church interfering directly and most powerfully in the affairs of state. There is not in the whole country a parallel to this among the other sects. What clergymen of the Methodists, or Baptists, or Episcopalians, or of any other denomination, could command the votes of the members of their several congregations in the election of an individual to political office? The very idea of such power is preposterous to a Protestant. No freeman, no man accustomed to judge for himself, would submit even to be advised, unasked, by his minister in a matter of this kind, much less dictated to.

Connected with these evils, and assisting to increase them, we have a Press, to an alarming extent, wanting in independence. Most of our journals are avowedly attached to a particular party, or to particular individuals, they are like council retained for a particular cause; they are to say every thing that makes in favor of their client, and conceal every thing that makes against him. Does a question of principle arise, of fundamental importance to the country?-the inquiry with a journal thus pledged is not, how are our free institutions, how is the country affected by the decision, but how will the decision affect the interests of our particular party or favorite? How few are there among our newspaper editors who dare to take a manly stand for or against a principle that affects vitally the constitution, if it is found to bear unfavorably upon their party or their candidate? A press thus wanting in magnanimity and independence is the fit instrument for advancing the purposes of unprincipled men; and editors of this stamp, and they are confined to no particular party, whether they have followed out their conduct or not to its legitimate results can easily be made the tools of a despot to subvert the liberties of their country.

Again we have, still unsubdued, some weaknesses: (perhaps they belong to human nature,) of which advantage may be taken, to the injury of our republican character, and in aid of despotism, and which may seem to some too trivial to merit notice in connection with the more serious matters just considered. One of these weaknesses is an anti-republican fondness for titles; Footnote: Glory-giving Titles. One of the plainest doctrines of American Republicanism, which is essentially democratic, is, that mere glory-giving titles, or titles of servility, are entirely opposed to its whole spirit. They are considered as one of those artificial means of kingcraft by which it fosters that aristocratic, unholy pride in the human heart, which loves to domineer over its fellow-man, which loves artificial distinction of ranks, a privileged class, and of course which helps to sustain that whole system of regal and papal usurpation which has so long cursed mankind. If such titles are to some extent still acknowledged in this country, they have either been thoughtlessly but unwisely used as mere epithets of courtesy, or they are the remains of old deep-rooted foreign habits, which, in spite of the uncongenial soil to which they have been transplanted, still maintain a sort of withered existence. It now, however, becomes a serious inquiry, whether this practice, hitherto seemingly unimportant, may not be attended with danger to the institutions of the country. For Popery, it appears, is already taking advantage of this, as of all other weaknesses in our habits and customs, to introduce its anti-democratic system, and this too while it manifests in words great zeal in defence of democratic liberty. Let the democracy look well to this.

Is it asked, to what extent should titles or names of distinction be abolished throughout the land, the answer is plain. Every title that merely designates an office, is perfectly in accordance with our institutions, such as President, Secretary, Senator, General, Commodore, &c. So are letters after a name which designate the office or membership in a society, but titles of reverence, titles which imply moral qualities, such as Your Excellency, Your Honor, The Reverend, Rt. Reverend, Honorable, &c.; and letters which imply moral or intellectual superiority, I think it must be conceded are now not only useless but dangerous. There needs no law to abolish these gewgaw appendages to a name; they must be left to the good sense of the individual who uses them, to discontinue them; and fortunately they generally belong to intellectual men, who have minds capable of discerning the remote evils to which the practice leads, and patriotism enough to make a greater sacrifice than this occasion calls for to avert dangers which threaten their country.

Will it be said that this is a little matter. Nothing is of little consequence that may endanger, however remotely, the civil liberty of the country. Nay more, no practice is unworthy of reform, which continued may aid by its example in the surrender of Religious liberty into the hands of Popery. and whoever has lived in the old world, and knows the extraordinary and powerful influence which mere titles of honor exercise over the minds of men, and their tendency to keep in due subjection the artificial ranks into which despotic and aristocratic power divide the people, subduing the lower orders to their lords and masters, will not think it amiss in this place to draw attention to the subject. Republicans as we are, I fear we are influenced, in a greater degree than we are aware, by the high sounding epithets with which despotism and aristocracy surround their officers, to awe into reverence the ignorant multitude. A name having half a dozen titles for its avant couriers, and as many for its rear guard, swells into an importance, even in the estimation of our citizens, which the name alone, and especially the individual himself, could never assume. Let Mr. Brown, or Mr. Smith, or any other intelligent, upright, active citizen, be elected president of a benevolent society, does he excite the gaze of those who meet him, or inspire awe in the multitude? No one regards him but as a respectable, useful member of the community. But let us learn that a gentleman, not half as intelligent, or upright, or active, is to land in our city who is announced as the "Most Illustrious Archduke and Eminence his Imperial Highness the Cardinal and Archbishop of Olmutz, RODOLPH, (this last is the gentleman's real name) Highest Curator of the Leopold Foundation," and although not half as capable in any respect as Mr. Brown, or Mr. Smith, or ten thousand other honest, untitled citizens among us, I very much fear that the Battery would be thronged, and the windows in Broadway would be in demand, and the streets filled with a gaping crowd to see a man who could have such a mighty retinue of glittering epithets about him. Yet this title-blazoned gentleman holds the same office as Mr. Brown or Mr. Smith. Poor human nature! Alas, for its weakness? Footnote: There is reason to believe we are reforming in this particular, for we have now titled foreigners, respectable men, travellers in the country, and our press no longer lends itself to announce their unimportant presence or movements.

Who is not struck with the difference of effect upon the imagination, when we describe a person thus : "Mr. ----, a good-hearted old gentleman, rather weak in the head, who finds in the manufacture of sealing-wax one of the chief and most agreeable employments of his time," and when we should describe a man thus: "His Imperial Majesty FRANCIS I., Emperor of Austria, King of Jerusalem, Hungary, Bohemia, of Lombardy and Venice, Dalmatia, Croatia, Sclavonia, Galizia, and Lodomeria, Archduke of Austria, Duke of Lorena, Salsburg, Styria, Carinthia, and Carniola, Grand Prince of Transylvania, Margrave of Moravia, Count Prince of Hapsburg, and Tyrol," &c. &c.-and yet these two descriptions belong to one and the same individual.

There used to be a sound democratic feeling in the country, which spurned such glosses of character and frowned out of use mere glory-giving title. Austria, however, is gradually (as fast as it is thought safe) introducing these titled gentlemen into the country. Bishop Fenwick, a Catholic priest, is "his Grace of Cincinnati," Mr. Vicar-General Rese, another priest, is only "his Reverence," and Bishop Flaget, and all the other Bishops, are simple Monseigneurs, this title in a foreign language being less harsh at present to republican ears than its plump, aristocratic English translation, "My Lord Bishop of New-York," "My Lord Bishop of Boston," "My Lord Bishop of Charleston," &c. &c. &c. As we improve, however, under Catholic instruction, we may come to be quite reconciled even to his Eminence Cardinal, so and so, and to all the other graduated fooleries, which are so well adapted to dazzle the ignorant. The scarlet carriage of a Cardinal, too, bedizzened with gold, and containing the sacred person of some Jesuit, all scarlet and humility, as is at this day often seen in Rome, may yet excite our admiration as it rolls through our streets, and even a Pope, (for in these republican times in Italy, who knows but his Holiness may have leave of absence,) yes, even a Pope, a Vicegerent of God, the great divinely appointed appointer of Rulers, the very centre from which all titles emanate, may possibly in his scarlet and gold and jewel-decked equipage, astonish our eyes, and prostrate us on our knees as he moves down Broadway. To be sure some of his republican friends, now in strange holy alliance with his faithful subjects here, might find their Protestant knees at first a little stiff, yet the Catholic schools which they are encouraging with their votes and their money and their influence, will soon furnish them good instructors in the art of reverential gesture, and genuflexion.

Again, there are some minds of a peculiarly sensitive cast, that cannot bear to have the subject of religious opinion mooted in any way in the secular journals. They use a plausible argument that satisfies them, namely, that religion is too sacred a subject to be discussed by the daily press. I agree to a certain extent, and in a modified sense, with this sentiment, but it should be remembered that all is not religion which passes under that name. The public safety makes it necessary sometimes to strip off the disguise, and show the true character of a design which may have assumed the sacred cloak, the better to pass unchallenged by just such feeble hearted objectors. Were such objections valid, how easy would it be for the most dangerous political designs, (as in the case we are considering,) to assume a religious garb, and so escape detection. The exposure I am now making of the foreign designs upon our liberties, may possibly be mistaken for an attack on the Religion of the Catholics, yet I have not meddled with the conscience of any Catholic; if he honestly believes the doctrine of Transubstantiation, or that by doing penance he will prepare himself for heaven, or in the existence of Purgatory, or in the efficacy of the prayers and masses of priests, to free the souls of his relatives from its flames, or that it is right to worship the Virgin Mary, or to pray to Saints or keep holy days, or to refrain from meat at certain times, or to go on pilgrimages, or in the virtue of relics, or that none but Catholics can be saved, or many other points; however wrong I may and do think him to be, it is foreign from the design of these chapters, to speak against them. But when he proclaims to the world that all power temporal as well as spiritual exists in the Pope, (denying of course the fundamental doctrine of republicanism;) that liberty of conscience is a "raving," and "most pestilential error," that "he execrates and detests the liberty of the press;" when his intolerant creed asserts that no faith is to be kept with heretics, (all being heretics in the creed of a Catholic who are not Catholics,) and many other palpable anti-republican as well as immoral doctrines, he has then blended with his creed political tenets that vitally affect the very existence of our government, and no association with religious belief shall shield them from observation and rebuke. It would indeed be singular if these mere "ravings" (the Pope's phrase is appropriate here,) subversive of the fundamental principles of our government, should be shielded from exposure because misnamed religion. If incendiar-ies or robbers should ensconce themselves within a church, from the windows and towers of which they were assailing the people, the cry of sacrilege shall not prevent us from attempts to dislodge them, though the walls which protect them should suffer in the conflict.

CRAIG-OXLEY - June 3, 2006 01:02 AM (GMT)

CHAPTER VII.

The political character of this ostensibly religious enterprise proved from the letters of the Jesuits now in this country-Their antipathy to private judgment-Their anticipations of a change of our form of government-Our government declared too free for the exercise of their divine rights-Their political partialities-Their cold acknowledgment of the generosity, and liberality, and hospitality of our government-Their estimate of our condition contrasted with their estimate of that of Austria-Their acknowledged allegiance and servility to a foreign master-Their sympathies with the oppressor, and not with the oppressed-Their direct avowal of political intention.

LET me next show the political character of this ostensibly religious effort, from the sentiments of the Austrian emissaries expressed to their foreign patrons. The very nature of a conspiracy of this kind precludes the possibility of much direct evidence of political design; for Jesuit cunning and Austrian duplicity would be sure to tread with unusual caution on American ground. Yet if I can quote from their correspondence some expressions of antipathy to our free principles, and to the government; some hinting at the subversion of the government; prevailing partialities for arbitrary government; and siding with tyranny against the oppressed; and some acknowledgments of POLITICAL EFFECTS to be expected from the operations of the society, I shall have exhibited evidence enough to put every citizen who values his birthright, upon the strict watch of these men and their adherents, and to show the importance of some measures of repelling this insidious invasion of the country.

The Bishop of Baltimore writing to the Austrian Society, laments the wretched state of the Catholic religion in Virginia, and as a proof of the difficulty it has to contend with, (a proof doubtless shocking to the pious docility of his Austrian readers,) he says:

"I sent to Richmond a zealous missionary, a native of America. He travelled through the whole of Virginia. The Protestants flocked on all sides to hear him, they offered him their churches, courthouses, and other public buildings, to preach in, which however is not at all surprising, for the people are divided into numerous sects, and know not what faith to embrace. In consequence of being spoiled by bad instruction, they will judge every thing themselves; they, therefore, hear eagerly every new comer," &c.

The Bishop, if he had the power, would of course change this "bad instruction" for better, and, as in Catholic countries, would relieve them from the trouble of judging for themselves. Thus the liberty of private judgment and freedom of opinion, guaranteed by our institutions, are avowedly an obstacle to the success of the Catholics. Is it not natural that Catholics should desire to remove this obstacle out of their way? Footnote: A Catholic journal of this city, (the Register and Diary,) was put into my hands as I has completed this last paragraph. It contains the same sentiment, so illustrative of the natural abhorrence of Catholics to the exercise of private judgment, that I cannot forbear quoting it.

"We seriously advise Catholic parents to be very cautious in the choice of school-books for their children. There is more danger to be apprehended in this quarter, than could be conceived. Parents, we are aware, have not always the time or patience to examine these matters: but if they trust implicitly to us, we shall with God's help, do it for them. Legimus ne legantur." We read, that they may not read!!

How kind! they will save parents all the trouble of judging for themselves, but "we must be trusted implicitly" Would a Protestant journal thus dare to take liberties with its readers?

My Lord Bishop Flaget, of Bardstown, Kentucky, in a letter to his patrons abroad, has this plain hint at an ulterior political design, and that no less that the entire subversion of our republican government. Speaking of the difficulties and discouragements the Catholic missionaries have to contend with in converting the Indians, the last difficulty in the way he says, is "their continual traffic among the whites, WHICH CANNOT BE HINDERED AS LONG AS THE REPUBLICAN GOVERNMENT SHALL SUBSIST!" What is this but saying, that a republican government is unfavorable in its nature to the restrictions we deem necessary to the extension of the Catholic religion; when the time shall come that the present government shall be subverted, which we are looking forward to, or hope for, we can then hinder this traffic?

Mr. Baraga, the German missionary in Michigan, seems impressed with the same conviction of the unhappy influence of a free government upon his attempts to make converts to the church of Rome. In giving an account of the refusal of some persons to have their children baptized, he lays the fault on this, "TOO FREE (allzu freien) GOVERNMENT." In a more despotic government, in Italy or Austria, he would have been able to put in force compulsory baptism on these children. Footnote: Compulsory Baptism. Perhaps Father Baraga was thinking of the facilities afforded in Spain in the time of Ximenes for administering baptism, when "Fifty thousand (50,000,) Moors under terror of death and torture received the grace of baptism, and more than an equal number of the refractory were condemned, of whom 2,536 were burnt alive." May our government long be "too free" for the enacting of such barbarity.

These few extracts are quite sufficient to show how our form of government, which gives to the Catholics all the freedom and facilities that other sects enjoy, does from its very nature embarrass their despotic plans. Accustomed to dictate at home, how annoying it is to these Austrian ecclesiastics to be obliged to put off their authority, to yield their divine right of judging for others, to be compelled to get at men through their reason and conscience, instead of the more summary way of compulsion! The disposition to use force if they could, shows itself in spite of all their caution. The inclination is there. It is reined in by circumstances. They want only strength to act out the inherent despotism of Popery.

But let me show what are some of the political partialities which these foreign emissaries discover in their letters and statements to their Austrian supporters. They acknowledge their unsuspecting reception by the people of the United States; they acknowledge that Protestants in all parts of the country have even aided them with money to build their chapels and colleges and nunneries, and treated them with liberality and hospitality, and-strange infatuation!!-have been so monstrously foolish as to intrust their children to them to be educated! so infatuated as to confide in their honor and in their promises that they would use no attempts to proselyte them! And with all this, does it not once occur to these gentleman, that this liberality, and generosity and openness of character are the fruits of Protestant republicanism? Might we not expect at least that Popery, were it republican in its nature, would find something in all this that would excite admiration, and call forth some praise of a system so contrasted to that of any other government; some acknowledgments to the government of the country that protects it, and allows its emissaries the unparalleled liberty even to plot the downfall of the state? But no, the government of the United States is not once mentioned in praise. The very principle of the government, through which they are tolerated, is thus slightly noticed: "The government of the United States has thought fit to adopt a complete indifference toward all religions." Footnote: Quart. Regist. Feb. 1830, p. 198. They can recognize no nobler principle than indifference.

Again, of the people of our country they thus write: "We intreat all European Christians to unite in prayer to God for the conversion of these unhappy heathen, and obstinate heretics." We are spoken of as a country "on which the light of faith has hitherto not shined." "A vast country, destitute of all spiritual and temporal resources." But if Austria is mentioned, what are the terms? "Your Society, (the Leopold Foundation) which is an ornament to the illustrious Austrian Empire,"-"the noble and generous inhabitants of the Austrian empire." "Of many circumstances in our condition, few perhaps in your happy empire can form a correct notion;" and again, "Here are many churches, if you may so call the miserable wooden buildings, differing little from the barns of your happy land!" Austria, happy land!! How enthusiastic, too, is another Bishop, who writes, "we cannot sufficiently praise our good Emperor (of Austria,) were we to extol him to the third heaven!" Such are the political partialities which are discovered in various parts of these documents. Are they in favor of our republican darkness, and heathenism, and misery, or of Austrian light, and piety and happiness?

In the struggles of the European people for their liberty, do these foreign teachers sympathize with the oppressor or with the oppressed? "France no more helps us," (Charles X. had just been dethroned,) "and Rome, beset by enemies to the church and public order, is not in a condition to help us." And who are these men stigmatized as enemies of public order? They are the Italian patriots of the Revolution of 1831, than whom our own country in the perils of its own Revolution did not produce men more courageous, more firm, more wise, more tolerant, more patriotic; men who had freed their country from the bonds of despotism in a struggle almost bloodless, for the people were with them; men who, in the spirit of American patriots, were organizing a free government; rectifying the abuses of Papal misrule, and who, in the few weeks of their power, had accomplished years of benefit. These are the men afterwards dragged to death, or to prison by -Austrian intruders, and styled by our Jesuits, enemies of public order! Austria herself uses the self-same terms to stigmatize those who resist oppression.

I will notice one extract more, to which I would call the special attention of my readers. It is from one of the reports of the society in Lyons, which society had the principal management of American missions under Charles X. When this bigoted monarch was dethroned, and liberal principles reigned in France, the society so languished that Austria took the design more completely into her own hands, and through the Leopold Foundation she has the enterprise now under her more immediate guardianship.

"Our beloved king (Charles X.) has given the society his protection, and has enrolled his name as a subscriber. Our society has also made rapid progress in the neighboring states of Piedmont and Savoy. The pious rulers of those lands, and the chief ecclesiastics, have given it a friendly reception."

Charles X., be it noticed, and the despotic rulers of Piedmont and Savoy, took a special interest in this American enterprise. The report goes on to say-

"Who can doubt that an institution which has a purely spiritual aim whose only object is the conversion of souls, desires nothing less than to make whole nations, on whom the light of faith has hitherto not shined, partakers of the knowledge of the gospel; an institution solemnly sanctioned by the supreme head of the church: which, as we have already remarked, enjoys the protection of our pious monarch, the support of archbishops and bishops; an institution established in a city under the inspection of officers, at whose head stands the great almoner, and which numbers among its members, men alike honorable for their rank in church and state; an institution of which his excellency the minister of church affairs, lately said, in his place in the Chamber of Deputies, that, independent of its purely spiritual design, IT WAS OF GREAT POLITICAL INTEREST."

Observe that great pains are here taken to impress upon the public mind the purely spiritual aim, the purely spiritual design of the society, and yet one of the French ministers, in the Chamber of Deputies, states directly that it has another design, and that it was of "GREAT POLITICAL INTEREST."-He gives some of these political objects-"because it planted the French name in distant countries, caused it, by the mild influence of our missionaries, to be loved and honored, and thus opened to our trade and industry useful channels," &c. Now if some political effects are already avowed as intended to be produced by this society, and that too, immediately after reiterating its purely spiritual design, why may not that particular political effect be also intended, of far more importance to the interests of despotism, namely, the subversion of our Republican institutions?

CHAPTER VIII.

Some of the means by which Jesuits can already operate politically in the country-By mob discipline-By priest police-Their great danger-Already established-Proofs--Priests already rule the mob-Nothing in the principles of Popery to prevent its interference in our elections-Popery interferes at the present day in the politics of other countries-Popery the same in our country-It interferes in our elections-In Michigan-In Charleston, S. C.-In New-York-Popery a political despotism cloaked under the name of Religion-It is Church and State embodied-Its character at head-quarters in Italy-Its political character stripped of its religious cloak.

BUT some of my readers, notwithstanding they may be convinced that it is for the interest of despotism to subvert our institutions, and are even persuaded that this grand enterprise has been actually undertaken, may be inclined to ask in what manner can the despots of Europe effect, by means of Popish emissaries, any thing in this country to counteract the influence of our liberal institutions? In what way can they operate here?

With the necessity existing of doing something from the instinct of self-preservation, to check the influence of our free institutions on Europe, with the funds provided, and agents on the spot interested in their plans, one would think it needed but little sagacity to find modes and opportunities of operating, especially too, when such vulnerable points as I have exposed, (and there are many more which I have not brought forward,) invite attack.

To any such inquirers, let me say, there are many ways in which a body organized as are the Catholics, and moving in concert, might disturb (to use the mildest term) the good order of the republic, and thus compel us to present to observing Europe the spectacle of republican anarchy. Who is not aware that a great portion of that stuff which composes a mob, ripe for riot or excess of any kind, and of which we have every week or two, a fresh example in some part of the country, is a Catholic population; Footnote: Priests control the Mob. If farther proof were wanting of the fact of the supreme influence of the Catholic priests over the mob, it is opportunely furnished in the testimony on the trial of the rioters at Charlestown, (Mass.). Mr. Edward Cutter testified that the Lady Superior, in an interview previous to the burning of the convent, thus threatened him; she said "the bishop had 20,000 of the vilest (or boldest) Irishmen under his control, who would tear down the houses of Mr. Cutter and others; and that the selectmen of Charlestown might read the riot act till they were hoarse, and it would be of no use."

But if any doubt is thrown over Mr. Cutter's testimony because he is a Protestant, hear what the Lady Superior herself testifies; "I told him," she says, that "the Right Reverend Bishop's influence over ten thousand brave Irishmen might lead to the destruction of his property, and that of others."

Here we have the startling fact, acknowledged in a court of justice by the Superior of the convent, that the Bishop has such influence over a mob of foreigners, that he can use them for vengeance or restrain them at pleasure. The question that occurs is, How much stronger is it necessary for this foreign corps to become, before it may prudently act offensively against our noxious Protestant institutions? The fact is established by Catholic testimony, that the Popish population is not an un-organized mob, but is moved by priestly leaders, Jesuit foreigners in the pay of Austria. They are ready to keep quiet or to strike as circumstances may render expedient. But exclusive of other proof, another most important fact is rendered certain by this singular confession of the Lady Superior, and that is Roman Catholic interference in our elections. Jesuits are not in the habit of slighting their advantages, and the Bishop who can control ten or twenty thousand, or five hundred thousand men, as the case may be, for the purpose of destruction and riot, can certainly control the votes of these obedient instruments! Will not American freemen wake to the apprehension of a truth like this? and what makes it turbulent? Ignorance, an ignorance which it is for the interest of its leaders not to enlighten; for enlighten a man and he will think for himself, and have some self-respect; he will understand the laws and know his interest in obeying them. Keep him in ignorance, and he is the slave of the man who will flatter his passions and appetites, or awe him by superstitious fears. Against the outbreakings of such men, society, as it is constituted on our free system, can protect itself only in one of two ways: it must either bring these men under the influence and control of a sound republican and religious education, or it must call in the aid of the priests who govern them, and who may permit, and direct, or restrain their turbulence, in accordance with what they may judge at any particular time to be the interest of the church. Yes, be it well remarked, the same hands that can, whenever it suits their interest, restrain, can also, at the proper time, "let slip the dogs of war." In this mode of restraint by a police of priests, by substituting the ecclesiastical for the civil power, the priest-led mobs of Portugal and Spain, and South America, are instructive examples. And start not, American reader, this kind of police is already established in our country! We have had mobs again and again, which neither the civil nor military power have availed any thing to quell, until the magic 'peace, be still' of the Catholic priest has hushed the winds, and calmed the waves of popular tumult. Footnote: At the time this was written, riots in this country were almost entirely confined to the emigrants from foreign countries employed as laborers on our rail-roads, canals, &c. While I write, what mean the negotiations, between two Irish bands of emigrants, in hostile array against each other, shedding each other's blood upon our soil, settling with the bayonet miserable foreign feuds which they have brought over the waters with them? Why have not the civil and military power been able to restore order among them, and obedience to our laws, without calling in the priests to negotiate and settle the terms on which they will cease from violating our laws? Footnote: As our readers have probably forgotten the particulars of the affair here alluded to, we subjoin from the Journal of Commerce, a copy of the agreement subscribed by the leaders of the riot. The civil and military authorities of Maryland had tried repeatedly, but in vain, to quell the riot.-Ed. Obs.

From the Journal of Commerce.

THE RIOTERS.-It appears by the following notice, that the rioters on the Baltimore and Washington Rail-road have concluded a treaty of peace, through the intervention of a priest. There was considerable talk during the late riots in this city, of calling in the agency of the priests, to put an end to the disturbance. No doubt it would have been effectual.

AGREEMENT.

On the 24th of June, 1834, the subscribers, in the presence of the Rev. John McElroy, have respectively and mutually agreed to bury forever, on their own part, and on behalf of their respective sections of country, all remembrance of feuds and animosities, as well as injuries sustained. They also promise to each other, and make a sincere tender of their intention to preserve peace, harmony, and good feeling between persons of every part of their native country without distinction.

They further mutually agree to exclude from their houses and premises all disorderly persons of every kind, and particularly habitual drunkards. They are also resolved, and do intend to apply in all cases where it is necessary, to the civil authorities, or to the laws of the country for redress-and finally they are determined to use their utmost endeavors to enforce, by word and example, these, their joint and unanimous resolutions.

Signed by fourteen of the men employed on the 4th, 5th, and 8th sections of the 2d division, B. and W. R. R. } on behalf of all employed.
And also by thirteen of the 8th section of the 1st division. } on behalf of all employed.

Have the priests become necessary in our political system? Have the emissaries of a foreign despotic power stolen this march upon us? Can they tell their foreign masters, "we already rule the mob?" Yes, and facts will bear them out in their boasting. Footnote: See previous footnote "Priests control the Mob."

And what now prevents the interference of Catholics as a sect directly in the political elections of the country? They are organized under their priests: Is there any thing in their religious principles to restrain them? Do not Catholics of the present day use the bonds of religious union to effect political objects in other countries? Did not the Pope interfere in Poland in the late revolution, and through the priests command submission to the tyranny of the Czar? At the moment I am writing, are not monks and priests leaders in the field of battle in Spain; in Portugal? Is not the Pope encouraging the troops of Don Miguel, and exciting priests and people to arms in a civil contest? Has Popery abandoned its ever busy meddling in the politics of the countries where it obtains foothold? Footnote: Political interference of Popery. The kind of interference in the political affairs, of other countries by the Sovereign of Rome, may be learned from the following extracts from the Pope's Proclamation against Don Pedro in which he thus speaks of Portugal.-He laments the defection of "That kingdom, cited, until now, as a model of devotion and of fidelity to the Catholic faith, to the Holy See, and to the Roman pontiffs, our predecessors; a kingdom which, as is meet, has already felt it an honor to obey its Sovereigns, distinguished by the title of Most faithful Kings. We confess that we could not at first believe what report and public rumor related upon enterprises so audacious, but the unexpected return to Italy of him who represented us in the said kingdom as Apostolic Nuncio, and the most positive testimony of many persons, soon convinced us that what had been previously announced to us was but too true.

"It is then as certain as it is greatly to be deplored, that the above-mentioned Government has unjustly driven away him who represented our person and the Holy See, commanding him to quit the kingdom without delay. But after so gross an insult offered to the Holy See, and to us, the audacity of these perverse men has been carried still further against the Catholic Church, against ecclesiastical property, against the inviolable rights of the Holy See. Considering that all these measures have been exercised, almost at the accession of a new Power, and in consequence of a conspiracy prepared beforehand, our mind is filled with horror, and we cannot refrain from tears. All the public prisons have been opened, and, after having let those who were detained there go forth, they have thrown into them, in their place, some of those of whom it is written, Touch not my Anointed. Laymen have rashly arrogated to themselves a power over sacred things; they have proclaimed a general reform of the secular clergy, and of religious orders of both sexes."

After enumerating various acts of rigor of the new government against those priests, monks and other ecclesiastics, who had taken an active part in the civil war, the Pope continues:—"For this reason, venerable brethren, we expressly proclaim that we absolutely reprobate all the decrees issued by the aforesaid government of Lisbon, to the great detriment of the Church, of its holy ministers, of the ecclesiastical law, and Holy See prerogatives; we, therefore, declare them to be null and of no effect, and express our most serious complaints against the audacious measures we have referred to; we declare that in exercising the duties of our office, and with God's help, we will oppose ourselves as a wall for the House of Israel, and show ourselves in the combat at the day of the Lord, as the interests of religion and the gravity of circumstances may require."

He hopes this low rumbling of the thunders of the Vatican will prevent his "having recourse to those spiritual arms with which God has invested his apostolic ministry," namely anathemas, curses of excommunication, &c. And these are not the records of doings of the dark ages, but are fresh from the papal throne, the acts of 1833.

Will it be said, that however officious in the old countries, yet here, by some strange metamorphosis, Popery has changed its character, and is modified by our institutions; that here it is surely religious, seeking only the religious welfare of the people, that it does not meddle with the state? Footnote: If any suppose that Popery meddles not with civil matters in this country, let them peruse the following extract of a letter from one of their missionaries.

"Mr. Baraga to the Central Direction of the Leopold Foundation, dated L'ARBRE CROCHE, October 10th, 1832.

" * * On the 5th of August, after partaking the sacrament of confirmation, the bishop called all the chiefs and head men of the mission, and made known to them some civil laws, which he had made for the Ottowas. The Indians received these laws with much pleasure, and promised solemnly to obey them. The missionary and four chiefs are the administrators of these laws.

"FREDERICK BARAGA, Missionary."

Here is a specimen of the disposition of Popery to meddle in civil matters in this country where it has the power; the Bishop is the propounder, and the Missionary one of the administrators of the civil laws. It is not true that Popery meddles not with the politics of the country. The cloven foot has already shown itself. Popery is organized at the elections! For example: In Michigan the Bishop Richard, a Jesuit (since deceased,) was several times chosen delegate to Congress from the Territory, the majority of the people being Catholics. As Protestants became more numerous, the contest between the bishop and his Protestant rival was more and more close, until at length by the increase of Protestant immigration the latter triumphed. The bishop, in order to detect any delinquency in his flock at the polls, had his ticket printed on colored paper; whether any were so mutinous as not to vote according to orders, or what penance was inflicted for disobedience, I did not learn. The fact of such a truly Jesuitical mode of espionage I have from a gentleman resident at that time in Detroit. Is not a fact like this of some importance? Does it not show that Popery, with all its speciousness, is the same here as elsewhere; it manifests, when it has the opportunity, its genuine disposition to use spiritual power for the promotion of its temporal ambition. It uses its ecclesiastical weapons to control an election.

In Charleston, S. C., the Roman Catholic Bishop England is said to have boasted of the number of votes that he could control at an election. I have been informed, on authority which cannot be doubted that in New-York, a priest, in a late election for city officers, stopped his congregation after mass on Sunday and urged the electors not to vote for a particular candidate, on the ground of his being an anti-Catholic; the result was the election of the Catholic candidate.

It is unnecessary to multiply facts of this nature nor will it be objected that these instances are unworthy of notice, because of their local or circumscribed character. Surely American Protestants, freemen, have discernment enough to discover beneath them the cloven foot of this subtle foreign heresy, and will not wait for a more extensive, disastrous, and overwhelming political interference, ere they assume the attitude of watchfulness and defence. They will see that Popery is now, what it has ever been, a system of the darkest political intrigue and despotism, cloaking itself to avoid attack under the sacred name of religion. They will be deeply impressed with the truth, that Popery is a political as well as a religious system; that in this respect it differs totally from all other sects, from all other forms of religion in the country? Popery embodies in itself THE CLOSEST UNION OF CHURCH AND STATE. Observe it at the fountain head. In the Roman States the civil and ecclesiastical offices are blended together in the same individual. The Pope is the King. A Cardinal is Secretary of State. The Consistory of Cardinals is the Cabinet Council, the Ministry, and they are Viceroy's in the provinces. The Archbishops are Ambassadors to foreign courts. The Bishops are Judges and Magistrates, and the road to preferment to most if not all the great offices of State is through the priesthood. In Rome and the patrimony of St. Peter the temporal and spiritual powers are so closely united in the same individual, that no attack can be made on any temporal misrule, without drawing down upon the assailants the vengeance of the spiritual power exercised by the same individual. Is the Judge corrupt or oppressive; and do the people rise against him, the Judge retires into the Bishop, and in his sacred retreat cries "Touch not the Lord's anointed."

Can we not discern the political character of Popery? Shall the name of Religion, artfully connected with it, still blind our eyes? Let us suppose a body of men to combine together, and claim as their right, that all public and private property, of whatever kind, is held at their disposal; that they alone are to judge of their own right to dispose of it; that they alone are authorized to think or speak on the subject; that they who speak or write in opposition to them are traitors, and must be put to death; that all temporal power is secondary to theirs and amenable to their superior and infallible judgment; and the better to hide the presumption of these tyrannical claims, suppose that these men should pretend to divine right and call their system Religion, and so claim the protection of our laws, and pleading conscience, demand to be tolerated. Would the name of Religion be a cloak sufficiently thick to hide such absurdity, and shield it from the frown of public indignation? Take then from Popery its name of Religion, strip its officers of their pompous titles of sacredness, and its decrees of the nauseous cant of piety, Footnote: Through the Leopold foundation reports there is this perpetual cant of piety. We have "pious prelate," "pious purpose," "pious end," "pious curiosity," "pious dread," and even "pious progress," and "pious dress." and what have you remaining? Is it not a naked, odious Despotism, depending for its strength on the observance of the strictest military discipline in its ranks, from the Pope, through his Cardinals, Archbishops, Bishops, &c., down to the lowest priest of his dominions? And is not this despotism acting politically in this country?

Let us suppose, for the sake of illustration, that the Emperor of Russia, in a conceited dream of di-vine right to universal empire, should parcel out our country into convenient districts, and should proclaim his intention to exercise his rightful sway over these States, now not owning his control. Should we not justly laugh at his ridiculous pretensions? But suppose he should proceed to appoint his Viceroy's, Grand Imperial Dukes, giving to one the title of "his Grace of Albany," to another the "Grand Duke of Washington," and to another "his Imperial Highness of Savannah," and should send them out to take possession of their districts, and subdue the people as fast as practicable to their proper obedience to his legitimate sway. And should these pompous Viceroy's, with their train of sub-officers, actually come over from Russia, and erect their government houses, and commence by compliant manners and fair promises to procure lands and rentals to hold in the power of the Emperor, and under the guise of educating the rising generation should begin to sap the foundations of their attachment to this government, by blinding their reasoning faculties, and by the Russian catechism instilling the doctrine of passive obedience and the divine right of the Emperor, what should we say to all this? Ridiculous as the first conceited dream of imperial ambition appeared, if matters got to this pass, we should begin to think that there was something serious in the attempt, and very properly too, be a little alarmed. Suppose then further that the Emperor's cause, by Russian emigration, and the money supplied by the Emperor, had become so strong that the Viceroy's were emboldened in a cautious way, to try their influence upon some of the local elections, that the Russian party had become a body somewhat formidable, that its foreign leaders had their passive obedience troops, so well under command as to make themselves necessary in the police of the country, that we feared to offend them, that the secular press favored them; Footnote: Is this a harsh judgment on the secular press? If a secular paper ventures to remonstrate against Catholics, is not the cry of intolerance or persecution at once raised and the editor scared away from his duty of exposing the secret political enemies of the republic, under the false notion that he is engaged in a Religious controversy? and the unprincipled courted them; to what point then, in the process of gradually surrendering our liberties to the Russian Czar, should we have come; and how near to their accomplishment would be those wild dreams of imperial ambition, which we had in the first instance ridiculed?

And is this a caricature? What is the difference between the real claims, and efforts, and condition of Popery at this moment in these United States, and the supposed claims, and efforts, and condition of the Russian despotism? The one comes disguised under the name of Religion, the other, more honest and more harmless, would come in its real political name. Give the latter the name of Religion, call the Emperor, Pope, and his Viceroy's, Bishops, interlard the imperial decrees with pious cant, and you have the case of pretension, and intrigue, and success too, which has actually passed in these United States! Yes, the King of Rome, acting by the promptings of the Austrian Cabinet, and in the plenitude of his usurpation, has already extended his sceptre over our land, he has divided us up into provinces, and appointed his Viceroy's who claim their jurisdiction, Footnote: "Indiana and Illinois, two states depending on my jurisdiction!"- [My Lord Bishp Flaget's letter.] from a higher power than exists in this country, even from his majesty himself, who appoints them, who removes them at will, to whom they owe allegiance, for the extension of whose temporal kingdom they are exerting themselves, and whose success let it be indelibly impressed on your minds, is the certain destruction of the free institutions of our country.

CRAIG-OXLEY - June 3, 2006 01:04 AM (GMT)

CHAPTER IX.

Evidence enough of conspiracy adduced to create great alarm-The cause of liberty universally demands that we should awake to a sense of danger-An attack is made which is to try the moral strength of the republic-The mode of defence that might be consistently recommended by Austrian Popery-A mode now in actual operation in Europe-Contrary to the entire spirit of American Protestantism-True mode of defence-Popery must be opposed by antagonist institutions-Ignorance must be dispelled-Popular ignorance of all Papal countries-Popery the natural enemy of general education-Popish efforts to spread education in the United States delusive.

Is not the evidence I have exhibited in my previous numbers sufficiently strong to prove to my countrymen the existence of a foreign conspiracy against the liberties of the country? Does the nature of the case admit of stronger evidence? or must we wait for some positive, undisguised acts of oppression, before we will believe that we are attacked and in danger? Must we wait for a formal declaration of war? The serpent has already commenced his coil about our limbs, and the lethargy of his poison is creeping over us; shall we be more sensible of the torpor when it has fastened upon our vitals? The house is on fire; can we not believe it, till the flames have touched our flesh? Is not the enemy already organized in the land? Can we not perceive all around us the evidence of his presence? Have not the wily manœuverings of despotism already commenced? Is he not inveigling our children to his schools? Is he not intriguing with the press? Is he not usurping the police of the country, and showing his front in our political councils? Because no foe is on the sea, no hostile armies on our plains, may we sleep securely? Shall we watch only on the outer walls, while the sappers and miners of foreign despots are at work under our feet, and stealthily advancing beneath the very citadel? Where is that unwearying vigilance which the eloquent Burke proclaimed to be the characteristic of our fathers, who did not wait to feel oppression, but "augured misgovernment at a distance, and snuffed the approach of tyranny in every tainted breeze?" Are we their sons, and shall we sleep on our posts? We may sleep, but the enemy is awake; he is straining every nerve to possess himself of our fair land. We must awake, or we are lost. Foundations are attacked, fundamental principles are threatened, interests are put in jeopardy, which throw all the questions which now agitate the councils of the country into the shade. It is Liberty itself that is in danger, not the liberty of a single state, no, nor of the United States, but the liberty of the world. Yes, it is the world that has its anxious eyes upon us; it is the world that cries to us in the agony of its struggles against despotism, THE WORLD EXPECTS AMERICA, REPUBLICAN AMERICA, TO DO HER DUTY.

Our institutions have already withstood many assaults from within and from without, but the war has now assumed a new shape. An effort is now making that is to try the MORAL STRENGTH of the Republic. It is not a physical contest on the land, or on the water. The issue depends not on the strength of our armies or navies. How then shall we defend ourselves from this new, this subtle attack?

"Defend yourselves!" cries the Austrian papist, "you cannot defend yourselves;" your government, in its very nature, is not strong enough to protect you against foreign or domestic conspiracy. You must here take a lesson from legitimate governments. We alone can teach the effectual method of suppressing conspiracies. You say you have a body of conspirators against your liberties, a body of foreigners who are spreading their pernicious heresies through your land, and endangering the state. The weakness of republicanism is now manifest. What constitutional or legal provision meets the difficulty? Where are your laws prohibiting Catholics from preaching or teaching their doctrines, and erecting their chapels, churches, and schools? Where is your Passport system, to enable you to know the movements of every man of them in the land? Where is your Gens d'armes, your armed police, those useful agents, whose domiciliary visits could ferret out every Catholic, seize and examine his papers, and keep him from further mischief in the dungeons of the state? Where are your laws that can terrify, by the penalty of imprisonment, any man that dares to utter an opinion against the government? Where is your judicious censorship of the press, to silence the Catholic journals, and stifle any Catholic sentiments in other journals? Where is your Index expurgatorius, to denounce all unsafe books, that no Catholic book may be printed or admitted into the country? Where is your system of espionage, that no Protestant may read a Catholic publication, or express in conversation a single sentiment unfavorable to Protestantism, without being overlooked, and overheard by some faithful spy, and reported to the government? Where are the officers in your post-office department for the secret examination of letters, so that even the most confidential correspondence may be purified from dangerous heresy? Where is your secret Inquisitorial Court for the trial and condemnation of apostate Protestants? Without these changes in the constitution and laws of your government, you can oppose no efficient obstacle to the success of this conspiracy.

And what shall I reply to this consistent Papist? The methods he would prescribe have the sanction of successful experiment for some centuries. They are in sober truth the very means that Popery employs at this very day, in the countries where it is dominant, to prevent the spread of opinions contrary to its own dogmas.

But are these the methods that commend themselves to American Protestants? Does not such a cumbrous machinery of chains, and bolts, and bayonets, and soldiers, to hold the mind in bondage, seem rather a dream of the dark ages, than a real system, now in actual operation in the nineteenth century? Away with Austrian and Popish precedent. American Protestantism is of a different school. It needs none of the aids which are indispensable to the crumbling despotisms of Europe; no soldiers, no restrictive enactments, no index expurgatorius, no Inquisition. This war is the war of principles; it is on the open field of free discussion; and the victory is to be won by the exercise of moral energy, by the force of Religious and Political Truth. But still it is a war, and all true patriots must wake to the cry of danger. They must up, and gird themselves for battle. It is no false alarm. Our liberties are in danger. The Philistines are upon us. Their bonds are prepared, and they intend, if they can, to fasten them upon our limbs. We must shake off our lethargy, and like the giant awaking from his sleep, snap these shackles asunder. We are attacked in vulnerable points by foreign enemies to all liberty. We must no longer indulge a quiet complacency in our institutions, as if there were a charm in the simple name of American liberty sufficiently potent to repel all invasion. For what constitutes the life of our justly cherished institutions? Where is the living principle that sustains them? Is it in the air we breathe? Is it in the soil we cultivate? Is our air or our soil more congenial to liberty than the air and soil of Austria, or Italy, or Spain? No! The life of our institutions! It is a moral and intellectual life; it lies in the culture of the human mind and heart, of the reason and conscience; it is bound up in principles which must be taught by father to son, from generation to generation, with care, with toil, with sacrifice. Hide the Bible for fifty years-(we will not ask for the hundred years so graciously granted by the autocrat to stifle liberty)-hide the Bible for fifty years, and let our children be under the guidance of men, whose first exercise upon the youthful mind is to teach that lesson of old school sophistry, which distorts it forever, and binds it through life in bonds of error to the dictation of a man; a man whom, in the same exercise of distorted reason, he is persuaded to believe infallible; let these Jesuit doctors take the place of our Protestant instructors, and where will be the political institutions of the country? Fifty years would amply suffice to give the victory to the despotic principle, and realize the most sanguine wishes of the tyrants of Europe.

The first thing to be done to secure safety, is to open our eyes at once to the reality and the extent of the danger. We must not walk on blindly, crying "all's well." The enemy is in all our borders. He has spread himself through all the land. The ramifications of this foreign plot are every where visible to all who will open their eyes. Surprising and unwelcome as is such an announcement, we must hear it and regard it. We must make AN IMMEDIATE, A VIGOROUS, A UNITED, A PERSEVERING EFFORT TO SPREAD RELIGIOUS AND INTELLECTUAL CULTIVATION THROUGH EVERY PART OF OUR COUNTRY. Not a village, nor a log-hut of the land should be overlooked. Where Popery has put darkness, we must put light. Where Popery has planted its crosses, its colleges, its churches, its chapels, its nunneries, Protestant patriotism must put side by side college for college, seminary for seminary, church for church. And the money must not be kept back. Does Austria send her tens of thousands to subjugate us to the principles of darkness? We must send our hundreds of thousands, aye our millions, if necessary, to redeem our children from the double bondage of spiritual and temporal slavery, and preserve to them American light and liberty. The food of Popery is ignorance. Ignorance is the mother of papal devotion. Ignorance is the legitimate prey of Popery.

But some one here asks, are not the Roman Catholics establishing schools and colleges, and seminaries of various kinds, in the destitute parts of the land? Are not they also zealous for education? May we not safely assist them in their endeavors to enlighten the ignorant? Enlighten the ignorant? Does Popery enlighten the ignorant of Spain, of Portugal, of Italy, of Ireland, of South America, of Canada? What sort of instruction is that, in the latter country, for example, which leaves 78,000 out of 87,000 of its grown up scholars signers of a petition by their mark, unable to write their own names, and many of the remaining signers, who write nothing but their names. What sort of light is that which generates darkness? Popery enlighten the ignorant? Popery is the natural enemy of GENERAL education. Do you ask for proof? It is overwhelming. Look at the intellectual condition of all the countries where Popery is dominant. If Popery is in favor of general education, why are the great mass of the people, in the papal countries I have named, the most ill-informed, mentally degraded beings of all the civilized world, arbitrarily shut out by law from all knowledge but that which makes them slaves to the tyranny of their oppressors? No! look well to it! If Popery in this country is professing friendship to general knowledge, it is a feigned alliance. If it pretends to be in favor of educating the poor, it is a false pretence, it is only temporizing. It is conforming for the present, from policy to the spirit of Protestantism around it, that it may forge its chains with less suspicion. If it is establishing schools, it is to make them prisons of the youthful intellect of the country. If the Papists in Europe are really desirous of enlightening ignorant Americans, by establishing schools, let them make their first efforts among their brethren of the same faith in Canada and Mexico.

Do our fellow citizens at the South and West ask for schools, and are there not funds and teachers enough in our own land of wealth and education to train up our own offspring in the free principles of our own institutions? or are we indeed so beggared as to be dependent on the charities of the Holy Alliance, and the Jesuits of Europe for funds and teachers to educate our youth-in what? The PRINCIPLES OF DESPOTISM! Forbid it patriotism! Forbid it religion!-Our own means are sufficient; we have wealth enough, and teachers in abundance. We have only to will it with the resolution and the zeal that have so often been shown, whenever great national, or moral interests are to be subserved, and every fortress, every corps of Austrian darkness would be surrounded: the lighted torches of truth, political and religious, would flash their unwelcome beams into every secret chamber of the enemies of our liberty, and drive these ill-omened birds of a foreign nest to their native hiding-place.

CHAPTER X.

All classes of citizens interested in resisting the efforts of Popery-The unnatural alliance of Popery and Democracy exposed-Religious liberty in danger-Specially in the keeping of the Christian community-They must rally for its defence,-The secular press has no sympathy with them in this struggle, it is opposed to them-The Political character of Popery ever to be kept in mind and opposed-It is for the Papist, not the Protestant to separate his religious from his political creed-Papists ought to be required publicly and formally and officially to renounce foreign allegiance and anti-republican customs.

In considering the means of counteracting this foreign political conspiracy against our free institutions, I have said that we must awake to the reality and extent of the danger, and rouse ourselves to immediate and rigorous action in spreading religious and intellectual cultivation through the land. This indeed would be effectual, but this remedy is remote in its operation, and is most seriously retarded by the enormous increase of ignorance which is flooding the country by foreign immigration. While therefore the remote effects of our exertions are still provided for, the pressing exigency of the case seems to require some more immediate efforts to prevent the further spread of the evil. The two-fold character of the enemy who is attacking us must be well considered. Popery is doubly opposed, -civilly and religiously, -to all that is valuable in our free institutions. As a religious system, it is the avowed and common enemy of every other religious sect in the land. The Episcopalian, the Methodist, the Presbyterian, the Baptist, the Quaker, the Unitarian, the Jew, & c. & c., are alike anathematized, are together obstinate heretics, in the creed of the Papist. He wages an indiscriminate, uncompromising, exterminating war with all.

As a Political system, it is opposed to every political party in the country. Popery in its very nature is opposed to the genius of our free system, notwithstanding its affected, artful appropriation (in our country only,) of the habits and phraseology of democracy. Present policy alone dictates so unnatural an alliance, aye, most unnatural alliance. What! Popery and Democracy allied? Despotism and Liberty hand in hand? Has the Sovereign Pontiff in very deed turned Democrat in the United States? Let us look into this incongruous coalition, this solecism in politics-Popish Democracy. Do Popish Bishops or Priests consult the people? Have the people any voice in ecclesiastical matters? Can the people vote their own taxes? or are they im-posed upon them by irresponsible priests? Do the bishops and priests account for the manner in which they spend the people's money? Has Popery here adopted the American principle of RESPONSIBILITY TO THE PEOPLE; a responsibility which gives the most insignificant contributor of his money towards any object, a right to examine into the manner in which it is disbursed? No! the people account to their priests in all cases, not the priests to the people in any case. What sort of Democracy is that where the people have no power, and the priests have all, by divine right? Let us hear no more of the presumptuous claim of Popery to Democracy.-Popery is the antipodes of Democracy. It is the same petty tyrant of the people here, as in Europe. And this is the tyranny that hopes to escape detection by assuming the name and adopting the language of democracy. Footnote: The poor, the illiterate, and the working classes, the most deeply interested in quelling riot and disorder. I have elsewhere hinted at the danger to the stability of our institutions of the mob spirit which has been manifested in different parts of the country. But I fear that the process of disorganization, the gradual change which frequent riot necessarily works in the nature of government has not been duly considered by those whom it most deeply, most vitally concerns; I mean the hardworking, uneducated poor. Let me endeavor to trace this process. What is the proper effect of our democratic republican institutions upon the various classes into which human society must ever be divided? How do they affect the condition of the rich and the poor, the educated and the illiterate? Equality, the only practicable equality, is their result; not that spurious, visionary equality which would make a forced community of property, but that equality which puts no artificial obstacles in the way of any man's becoming the richest or most learned in the state; which allows every man without other impediment than the common obstacles of human nature and the equal rights of his neighbor impose, to strive after wealth and knowledge and happiness. True Christian republicanism, by its benevolent and ennobling principles, impels the wealthy and the educated to use their talents for the benefit of the whole community; it prompts to acts of public spirit, to self-sacrifice, and to unwearied effort to lessen the natural obstacles in the way of the poor and uneducated to competence and intellectual character, by affording them both employment and education. The kindness and benevolence thus shown to the poor beget in this class of our citizens, industry and mental effort. They feel that they are not like the proscribed of other countries, they see that the way is equally open to all to rise to the same rank of independence in mind and condition, and they consequently are without the exciting causes of envy and ill-will and bitterness of feeling towards the wealthy and educated, which exist and produce these fruits in other and arbitrary governments. Society in its two extremes is thus knit together by a mutual confidence, and a mutual interest, for causes beyond human control are ever varying the condition of men. He that is rich to-day may be poor to-morrow; and thus there is a constant interchange, a mingling of ranks, which like a healthful circulation in the natural body, begets soundness and vigor through the political body. The vicious, and voluntarily ignorant being the only portions of society naturally and justly excluded from the benefits of this system.

Let us now look at the condition of these same classes under an arbitrary government. In Austria, for example, the poor and illiterate are considered as the natural slaves of the wealthy and learned. These classes are perpetually separated by the artificial barrier of hereditary right; the line of separation is distinctly drawn, and in all that relates to social intercourse there is an impassable gulf. There may be condescension on the one part, but no elevation on the other. High birth, learning, wealth, and polished manners are on the one side, strengthening the hands of the arbitrary power that sustains them; on the other, low birth, ignorance, poverty, and boorishness, kept down by their intrinsic weakness, generation after generation in irretrievable subjection; the upper classes knowing that their own security is based upon the perpetuity of ignorance and superstition in the lower classes. Now to make the change from republicanism to absolutism, what means would an arbitrary power like Austria be most likely to devise? Would she not attain her object entirely by the creation on the one hand, in the wealth and talent of this country, a necessity for employing physical force to hold in subjection the poor and illiterate? And the production, on the other hand, of a class ignorant and unprincipled, and turbulent enough to need the very restraints the other class might be compelled to employ? Are there any indications of such a change in this country? We have a daily increasing host of emigrants, a portion of the very class used to foreign servitude abroad. How could Austrian emissaries better serve their imperial master's interests, than by keeping these unenlightened men in the same mental darkness in which they existed in the countries from which they came, surrounding them here with a police of priests, and shutting out from them the light which might break in upon them in this land of light, nourishing them for riot and turbulence, at political meetings, and for bullying at the polls those of opposite political opinions? And what would be the effect of such a mode of proceedings upon that class, who have acquired by lives of honest industry and studious application, wealth, and knowledge, and political experience? Is not such a course calculated to drive them away from any participation in the politics of the country, and is not such seditious conduct intended to produce this very result? Will not men who have any self-respect, who have any sense of character, turn away and ask with feelings of indignation, where is that intelligent, sober, orderly body of native mechanics and artizans, who once composed the wholesome, substantial democracy of the country, and on whose independence and rough good sense the country could always rely, that well-trying body of their own fellow-citizens, accustomed to hear and read patiently, and decide discreetly? And when they see them associated with a rude set of priest-governed foreigners, strangers to the order and habits of our institutions, requiring us for their hospitable reception by conduct subversive of the very institutions which make them freemen; when they see them become the dupes of the machinations of a foreign despotic power, refusing to be undeceived, and madly rushing to their own destruction, will they not from motives of self preservation be willing to adopt any system of measures, however arbitrary, which will secure society from violence and anarchy? When disgust at priest-guided mobs shall have alienated the minds of one class of the citizens from the other, we have then one of the parties nearly formed, which is necessary for the designs of despotism in accomplishing the subversion of the republic. And the other party is still easier formed. The alienation of feeling in the wealthier class, and their remarks of disgust, may be easily tortured into contempt for the classes below them, and then the natural envy of the poor towards the rich, will always furnish occasions to excite to violence. When hostility between these two parties has reached a proper height, the signal from the arch jugglers in Europe to their assistants here, can easily kindle the flames of civil strife. And then comes the dextrous change of systems. Frequent outrage must be quelled by military force, for the public peace must at all events be preserved, and the civil arm will have become too weak, and thus commences an armed police, itself but the precursor of a standing army. And which party will be the sufferer? All experience answers that wealth and talent are more than a match for mere brute force, for the plain reason that they can both purchase and direct it. The rich can pay for their protection, and soldiers belong to those who pay them. The man of talent is wanted to direct, and he also is retained by the rich. What then becomes of the illiterate and laboring poor? Reduced after ineffectual, ill-concerted resistance to the same state of perfect subjection that obtains in the "happy Austrian empire." It is the poor then, the poor and ignorant, not the rich and learned, that have every thing of hope and liberty to lose from the machinations of Austria. In a moral and intelligent Democracy, the rich and poor are friends and equals, in a Popish despotism the poor are in abject servitude to the rich. Let the working men, the laboring classes, well consider that their liberty is in danger, and can be preserved only by their encouragement of education and good order. It is this tyranny that is courted and favored at political elections by our politicians of all parties, because it has the advantage of a despotic organization. Footnote: And infidelity too, it seems, has just learned the secret of political power, and not content with civil and religious liberty, has introduced a third kind, and organizing itself into a new interest, demands to be represented in the state as the advocate of irreligious liberty! How much longer are the feelings of the religious community to be scandalized, and their moral sense outraged, by the bare-faced bargainings for Catholic and infidel votes? Have the religious community no remedy against such outrage? If they have not, if there is not a single point on which they can act together, if the religious denominations of various names can have no understanding on matters of this kind, if they have no common bond to unite them in repelling common enemies, then let us boast no more of religious liberty. What is religious liberty? Is it merely a phrase to round a period in a fourth of July oration? Is it a dazzling sentiment for Papists to use in blinding the eyes of the people, while they rivet upon them their foreign chains of superstition? Is it a shield to be held before Infidels, from behind which, they may throw their poisoned shafts at all that is orderly and fair in our civil as well as religious institutions? Or is it that prize above all price, that heaven-descended gift to the world, for which, with its twin sister, we contended in our war for independence, and which we are bound by every duty to ourselves, to our children, to our country, to the world, to guard with the most jealous care? And has it ever occurred to Christians that this duty of guarding religious liberty in a more special manner devolves on them? Who but the religious community appreciate the inestimable value of religious liberty?—Are their interests safe in the hands of the infidel, who scoffs at all religion, and uses his civil liberty to subvert all liberty? Is it safe in the hands of imported radicals and blasphemers? Is it safe in the hands of calculating, selfish, power-seeking politicians? Is it safe in the keeping of Metternich's stipendiaries, the active agents of a foreign, despotic power? Does the secular press take care of our religious liberty? Is there a secular journal that has even hinted to its readers the existence of this double conspiracy? The most dangerous politico-religious sect that ever existed, a sect that has been notorious for ages, for throwing governments into confusion, is politically at work, in our own country, under the immediate auspices of the most despotic power of Europe, interested politically and vitally in the destruction of our free institutions, and is any alarm manifested by the secular press? No! they are altogether silent on this subject. They presume it is only a religious controversy, and they cannot meddle with religious controversies. They must not expose religious imposture, lest they should be called pious. They have no idea of blending church and state. They have a religion of their own, a worship in which the public, they think, feel a more exciting interest. One has a liberty pole to be erected, another a hickory tree, and the rival pretensions to superiority of these wooden gods of their idolatry, it is of the last importance to settle, and the bacchanalian revelry of their consecration must be recorded and blazoned forth in italics and capitals in its minutest particulars. "Oh Pole! oh Tree! thou art the preserver of our liberty!" No; If the religious community, (in which term I mean to include Protestants of every name who profess a religious faith,) awake not to the defence of their own rights in the state, if they indulge timidity or jealousy of each other, if they will not come forward boldly and firmly to withstand the encroachments of corruption upon their own rights; the selfish politicians of the factions of the day (and they swarm in the ranks of all parties,) will bargain away all that is valuable in the country, civil and religious, to the Pope, to Austria, or to any foreign power that will pay them the price of their treason.

We cannot be too often reminded of the double character of the enemy who has gained foothold upon our shores, for although Popery is a religious sect, and on this ground claims toleration side by side with other religious sects, yet Popery is also a political, a despotic system, which we must repel as altogether incompatible with the existence of freedom. I repeat it, Popery is a political, a despotic system, which must be resisted by all true patriots.

Is it asked, how can we separate the characters thus combined in one individual? How can we repel the politics of a Papist, without infringing upon his religious right? I answer, that this is a difficulty for Papists, not for Protestants to solve. If Papists have made their religion and despotism identical, that is not our fault. Our religion, the Protestant religion, and Liberty are identical, and liberty keeps no terms with despotism. American Protestants use no such solecism as religious despotism. Shall political heresy be shielded from all attack, because it is connected with a religious creed? Let Papists separate their religious faith from their political faith, if they can, and the former shall suffer no political attack from us. "But no," the Papist cries, "I cannot separate them; my religion is so blended with the political system, that they must be tolerated or refused together; my 'whole system is one, and indivisible, unchangeable, infallible'-I am conscientious, I cannot separate them." What are we to do in such a case? Are we to surrender our civil and religious liberty to such presumptuous folly?

No! our liberties must be preserved; and we say, and say firmly to the Popish Bishops and Priests among us, give us your declaration of your relation to our civil government. Renounce your foreign allegiance, your allegiance to a FOREIGN SOVEREIGN. Let us have your own avowal in an official manifesto, that the Democratic Government under which you here live, delights you best. Put your ecclesiastical doings upon as open and popular a footing. as the other sects. Open your books to the people, that they may scrutinize your financial matters, that the people, your own people, may know how much they pay to priests, and how the priests expend their money; that the poorest who is taxed from his hard earned wages for church dues, and the richest who gives his gold to support your extravagant ceremonial, may equally know that their contributions are not misapplied. Come out and declare your opinion on the LIBERTY OF THE PRESS, on LIBERTY OF CONSCIENCE, and LIBERTY OF OPINION, Americans demand it. They are waking up. They have their eyes upon you. Think not the American eagle is asleep. Americans are not Austrians to be hoodwinked by Popish tricks. This is a call upon you, you will be obliged soon to regard. Nor will they be content with partial, obscure avowals of republican sentiments in your journals, by insulated priests or even bishops. The American people will require a more serious testimonial of your opinions on these fundamental political points. You have had Convocations of Bishops at Baltimore. Let us have at their next assembling their sentiments on these vital points. Let us have a document full and explicit, signed by their names, a document that may circulate as well in Austria, and Italy, as in America. Aye, a document that may be published "Con permissione" in the Diario di Roma, and be circulated to instruct the faithful in the united church, the church of but one mind, in the sentiments of American democratic Bishops on these American principles. Let us see how they will accord with those of his Holiness Pope Gregory XVI. in his late encyclical letter! Will Popish Bishops dare to put forth such a manifesto? No? They dare not.

CRAIG-OXLEY - June 3, 2006 01:08 AM (GMT)

CHAPTER XI.

The question, what is the duty of the Protestant community, considered-Shall there be an Anti-Popery Union?-The strong manifesto that might be put forth by such a union-Such a political union discarded as impolitic and degrading to the Protestant community-Golden opportunity for showing the moral energy of the Republic-The lawful, efficient weapons of this contest-To be used without delay.

THERE is no question of more pressing, more vital importance to the whole country, than this: What is the duty of the Protestant community in the perilous condition to which religious as well as civil liberty is reduced by the attempts of Popery and foreign enemies upon our free institutions? Have Christian patriots reflected at all on the possible, nay, I will say probable loss of religious liberty; or in idea attempted to follow out to their result and in their immeasurable extent the fearful consequences of its loss? Why is it then, that no more energetic efforts are made to save ourselves?

----we hear this fearful tempest sing,
Yet seek no shelter to avoid the storm;
We see the wind sit sore upon our sails,
And yet we strike not, but securely perish.

* * * * *

We see the very wreck that we must suffer;
And unavoided is the danger now,
For suffering so the causes of our wreck.
~Shakspeare~

Yes, the rocks are in full view on which American liberty must inevitably be wrecked, unless all hands are aroused to immediate action. Our dangers are none the less, be assured, because they are not those against which the general cry of alarm is so loudly raised by the two great political parties of the day. In the heedless strife they are now waging, the most superlative epithets of alarm have been already exhausted by each, on fictitious, or comparatively trivial dangers to the commonwealth. The public ear is deafened by their noise; its sense of hearing is grown callous with the reiterated cries of alarm on every slight occasion. "Wolf! Wolf!" has been so often falsely cried, that now, when the wolf has in reality appeared, we cannot be made to realize it. "If the trumpet give an uncertain sound, who shall prepare himself for the battle?" We are busying ourselves in quenching the few falling sparks that threaten the deck of the ship without heeding the fire beneath, that is approaching the magazine. In this reckless warfare of passion, and falsehood, and slander, and aided by the deafening din of party strife, neither party seem to have observed that a secret enemy, an artful foreign enemy, has stolen in upon us, joining his foreign accents to swell the uproar, that he may with less suspicion do his nefarious work. Footnote: Dangers from a riotous spirit, and the kind of treatment due from Protestant Americans to Catholic Emigrants. All the topics which grow out of this momentous subject of Popery as their prolific parent, are of absorbing national interest, but no one forces itself upon our consideration more imperiously at this moment than that which heads this note. For, unless I am greatly deceived, the waking up of this great nation's indignation, the shaking off of the lethargy which has so long held in unaccountable stupor the senses of the people, which has shut their eyes and stopped their ears to the proofs of foreign conspiracy which every where surround them, the mighty gathering of all real patriots to the defence of their liberties, which the sounds of preparation from all quarters of the land but too strongly indicate, may be attended with effects disastrous to the cause of true liberty, may produce through excess or ill-regulated zeal, the evil which it is desirous to remedy. For excess even in favor of right principles, doubles the amount of the evil which it attempts to cure. Excess of all kinds, whether in thought, word, or action, (oh! that this could be impressed on every American heart,) is just so much gain to the side of Popery. I know not how prevalent is error on this point, but I am persuaded that it exists to an extent to make an American tremble for the permanency of our democratic institutions.

Is there not a culpable acquiescence in the doings of a mob, if their violence is directed against some apparent or real irritating popular evil? Is not the language of such acquiescence most dangerous? It amounts to this; "Although we are averse to mob law, yet on the whole there are cases where the sin is venial, and the character of the nuisance it would abate justifies its violence." Now once concede in a democratic community, a community which makes its own laws according to modes prescribed by itself, that an irresponsible minority may set at defiance these laws, and then let me ask where is government? It is prostrated. It has become anarchy, and on the ruins of social order will arise another form of government more or less arbitrary, according to the more or less profound causes which effected the destruction of the first. Of all forms of government, a truly democratic government, while it is least obnoxious to the disturbing influences of mobs, can at the same time least of all bear the shocks of their turbulence. No events, therefore, that have occurred in the eventful history of the country, have so justly caused alarm for the stability of the government, as the spirit of mob violence which has lately manifested itself so frequently in our large cities. We should do well to remember that we have secret and artful enemies busily at work, who can and will take advantage of this unnatural state of the public feeling, and who will not fail secretly to administer fuel, in modes in which they are perfectly familiar, to a diseased excitement so favorable to their views.

We have in the country a powerful religious-politico sect, whose final success depends on the subversion of these democratic institutions, and who have therefore a vital interest in promoting mob-violence. The saying of the German ambassador concerning the Papists, (quoted in the prefatory remarks,) is full of meaning, and should be constantly borne in mind; it lets us into the secret of much of their manœuvering in this country; "they will be hammer or nails, they will persecute or be persecuted." Where they are in power they always persecute; when not in power and consequently unable to persecute, they will be sure to conduct, either in so outrageous or mysterious, or deceptive a manner, as to rouse public indignation. They will contrive ingenious modes of irritation that shall draw upon them popular vengeance, and then all meekness and innocence, and resignation, raise the imploring cry of persecution. And how do they gain by these opposite modes? If they are strong enough to persecute, they will destroy their opponents, in obedience to the openly avowed principles of their sect, by exile, by dungeons, and by death. If they themselves are persecuted in a Protestant community, (Protestant principles being in known direct opposition to persecution,) it is always by an irreligious mob, acting in defiance of Protestant principle, and unsustained by public opinion, and the reaction of Protestant sympathy for the sufferers on any such occasion, more than makes amends by its gifts for the injury sustained. Thus the very virtues of Protestants growing out of principles directly antagonist to Popish principles, are made to work against Protestantism, and in favor of Popery. Do not Jesuits know the well known truth, that a sect is helped by a little persecution? Do they not now act upon a knowledge of it? And should not Americans replenish their memory with it also, that they may most rigidly abstain from disorder, and discountenance every disposition to riot or violence? Let them remember that the laws that govern them are their own laws, and they must not allow them to be broken. Let them suspect a Popish plot to rob them of their liberties in every disorderly assemblage, and by good order, by firmness of resistance to every temptation to riot, defeat the designs of these worst enemies of Democracy.

In close connection with this topic, is that of the kind of treatment which Protestant Americans should show to Catholic emigrants. On this subject a volume could be written. I have space but for a few remarks.

The condition of the Catholic emigrants that are daily pouring into the country from Germany and Ireland should awaken the strongest sympathies of Americans; and in whatever aspect viewed, should enlist all their feelings of benevolence. Reflect a moment who and what they are. We have read, and our own countrymen who have travelled and seen them in their native land, bear testimony to the effects upon the people of the grinding oppressions of Papal government; to the mental degradation, to the poverty, to the wretchedness of the vassals of despotism. And as if to prove to us what we might doubt on the authority of others, so sombre is their picture of human misery, the very subjects of foreign oppression are brought and placed before our eyes. See yonder ship slowly furling her sails. She approaches the city. She casts her anchor. Who are those that crowd her decks? With eager eyes they gaze in one direction. They see at length the far-famed land of liberty. Yes; its name has been wafted even to their ears, and with the longings of captives for freedom they have broken away from slavery and sought the asylum of the oppressed. They land upon our shores. Look, Americans, see before you the fruits of papal education! of papal care of the bodies and minds of its children. Filthy and ragged in body, ignorant in mind, and but too often most debased in morals, they fill your streets with squalid beggary, and your highways with crime; they are such a loathsome picture of degradation, moral and physical, that you turn away in disgust from the sight. But why should this be? They are human beings, although oppression has blotted out their reason and conscience and thought. They are the progeny of Popery; they are the victims of its iron despotism. It is Popery that has reared them up in its own caverns of superstition. They exhibit before you the blighting effects of this scourge of the earth. It is Popery that has filled their minds with puerile fables, closed their mental eyes in the darkness of ignorance, fleeced them of their property by systematic robbery, kept them from the knowledge of their natural rights as men to liberty of conscience, and of opinion, extorted an abject obedience to their fellow-men, to blasphemous usurpers of the prerogatives of Deity. Their ignorance is their lasting, fatal curse; their reason and conscience stifled at their birth, they are cast upon our care mere human machines, for the fell usurpers of God's power have torn out of them their very minds. To think for themselves, that inalienable right of a rational being, is rebellion against their priest; they read not, they understand not our charter of liberty. They love liberty, indeed, but what shape has liberty to men without minds? What perception of light has a sightless eye? Their liberty, is licentiousness, their freedom, strife and debauchery.

And now with what emotions should Protestants look on these suffering, deluded men? In what channel should their sympathies flow? They have already been beaten to the dust by tyranny. Is it for freemen to follow up the cruel blow of foreign tyrants? They have been brutalized by neglect; shall they now be hunted by proscription? Shall no Christian effort be made to light up again in their darkened bosoms the extinguished spark of humanity? They are followed into our habitations; yes, Americans, they are pursued into your own asylum of liberty by their foreign oppressors, who, like hungry wolves, have ventured with unhallowed feet into the very sanctuary of freedom to grasp again their scarcely escaped prey. And have Americans no compassion? Have they no courage? Will they not protect the oppressed? Will they not interpose between them and their priestly oppressors, and say to the latter, "Stand off; this is a land of freedom; these men are now American citizens. They have a right to American education; to republican education; to Bible education. They have a right to the knowledge that they owe no allegiance to priests, that here there are no forbidden books, that knowledge here is not meted out in scanty drops to serve the purposes of power grasping despots, but is spread out before them wide and deep as the ocean; that American laws protect them from ecclesiastical as well as civil proscription, from ecclesiastical as well as civil extortion, that they owe no obligation to pay an arbitrary tax of bishop or priest, that they have a right to know the amount, and the manner of disbursement, of every cent they are called on to contribute in church as well as state."

Will not Americans teach them these truths, and aid them to break the chains with which foreign tyrants have bound them? or will they compel them, by proscription and persecution, or unfeeling neglect, to clan together around their priests, because deserted by those who should, and who alone can, undeceive and enlighten them? In the one case there is hope of incorporating them into the American republican family as useful fellow-citizens. In the other, there is the certainty of perpetuating a distinct foreign and hostile interest in the country, to distract its councils, to sully the peaceful character of its institutions, and finally to aid in the complete destruction of this stronghold, this last hope of Freedom.

---"but once put out thy (light,) Thou cunning'st pattern of excelling nature, I know not where is the Promethean heat That can thy light relume."

Like incendiaries at a conflagration, they even cry fire! loudest, and are most ostentatiously busy in seeming to protect that very property which they watch but to make their prey.

What then can be done? Shall Protestants organize themselves into a political union after the manner of the Papists, and the various classes of industry and even of foreigners in the country? Shall they form an Anti-Popery Union, and take their places among this strange medley of conflicting interests? And why should they not? Various parties and classes do now combine and organize for their own interest; and if any class of men are allowed thus to combine to promote their own peculiar interests at the expense of another class, that other class surely has at least an equal right to combine to protect itself against the excess of its antagonist. A denial of this right would certainly come with an ill grace from those who are already formed into separate organizations, as a Working Men's party, as a Trade's Union party, as a Catholic party, as an Irish party, as a German party, yes, even as a French and an Italian party. Footnote: By classing these together at this moment, I do not intend to commit myself as expressing approval or disapproval of the right of each and all of these to organize, but merely to show that such organization does already exist among other classes in the community, and if even foreigners among us are allowed to exercise the right to organize into a separate interest, yes, even as foreigners, can the right with any propriety be refused to American Christians? Having thus stated the case, I am now free to make the passing remark, that excluding from view the three classes first named, the right of foreigners to organize as foreigners for political purposes is at least very questionable; but were their right unquestionably legal through the mildness of our laws, yet the practice is dangerous, indecorous and a palpable abuse of political liberality. The Irish naturalized citizens who should know no other name than Americans, for years have clanned together as Irish, and every means has been used and is still used especially by Catholics, to preserve them distinct from the American family. Recently a portion of the Germans have organized to keep up their distinct nationality, and the French and Italians have just followed the example. [Nov. 1834] To what will all this lead?

And now, on the supposition that such a political organization of Protestants were expedient, (for it resolves itself altogether into a question of expediency) let us see whether any party or interest could show a stronger claim upon the support of the whole nation. Its manifesto might run thus:

Popery is a Political system, despotic in its organization, anti-democratic and anti-republican, and cannot therefore coexist with American republicanism.

The ratio of increase of Popery is the exact ratio of decrease of civil liberty.

The dominance of Popery in the United States is the certain destruction of our free institutions.

Popery, by its organization, is wholly under the control of a FOREIGN DESPOTIC SOVEREIGN.

AUSTRIA, one of the Holy Alliance of Sovereigns leagued against the liberties of the world, HAS THE SUPERINTENDENCE OF THE OPERATIONS OF POPERY IN THIS COUNTRY.

The agents of Austria in the United States are Jesuits and priests in the pay of that foreign power, in active correspondence with their employers abroad, not bound by ties of any kind to our government or country, but, on the contrary, impelled by the strongest motives of ambition, to serve the interests of a despotic foreign government; which ambition has already, in one or more instances, been gratified, by promotion of these agents to higher office and wealth in Europe.

Popery is a UNION OF CHURCH AND STATE, nor can Popery exist in this country in that plenitude of power which it claims as a divine right, and which, in the very nature of the system, it must continually strive to obtain, until such a union is consummated. Popery on this ground, therefore, is destructive to our religious as well as civil liberty.

Popery is more dangerous and more formidable than any power in the United States, on the ground that, through its despotic organization, it can concentrate its efforts for any purpose, with complete effect, and that organization being wholly under foreign control, it can have no real sympathy with any thing American. The funds and intellect, and intriguing experience of all Papal and Despotic Europe, by means of agents, at this moment organized throughout our land, can, at any time, be brought in aid of the enterprises of foreign powers in this country.

These are the grounds upon which an appeal for support might be made to the patriotism, the love of liberty, the hatred of tyranny, temporal and spiritual, which belong in common to the whole Protestant American family.

But is this the plan of opposition to Popery that should be proposed, the plan which ought to be adopted by the Protestant community? No; distinctly and decidedly NO; plausible as it may appear, and perfectly in accordance as it is with the practice of politicians, the Christian community ought not, cannot adopt such an organization. There must not be a Christian party. What! shall Christianity throw aside the keen moral and intellectual arms with which alone it has gained and secured every substantial victory since the commencement of its glorious career; shall it exchange those arms of heavenly temper, "mighty in pulling down strong holds," for the paltry, earthly (I might even say infernal) weapons of party strife? Can Christianity stoop so low? Can it bring itself down from contemplating its great work of revolutionizing the world by bringing moral truth to bear on the conscience and the heart, and narrow its vision to the contracted sphere of party politics? Can it enter, without defilement, into the polluted and polluting arena of political contest? Can it consent to be bargained for by political hucksters, or have the price of its favors hawked in the market by political brokers? Footnote: Both political Parties intrigue for Catholic votes. Let neither political party throw upon its antagonist the exclusive odium of courting this foreign, priest-disciplined band. There are some of both parties who must hide their heads with shame, when real Americans, the patriots of the country, disregarding party name, shall turn their indignant eyes upon this lurking enemy of liberty, and shall apprehend the reality of this foreign conspiracy. Is either political party disposed to upbraid the other with tampering with Popery, or to congratulate itself that it has kept its own garments unspotted from the crime of this indirect treason? If either thus flatters itself, let it be dumb; let guilt stop the utterance of both. Both are deplorably, notoriously guilty. This is a truth that cannot and will not be denied. Both have bargained with these organized vassals of a foreign power. Both in their eager recklessness to triumph over each other, have aided foreign despotism to prostrate at its feet the liberties of their country, the liberties of the world. All parties, religious and political, are suffering, and have yet much more to suffer from the evils already produced by this their blind folly, by their culpable servility to priest-governed foreigners, their cowardly backwardness in not daring to drag into the light this covert treason, because, forsooth, it comes in a sacred garb, their wretchedly loose notions of tolerance, and charity and liberality, their shameful disregard of the consequences of their bargainings.-And is it indeed come to this? A nation of Protestant freemen, nurtured in Protestant principles, the only true principles of liberty, principles wrested from tyranny by the persevering valor of their fathers, the result of the intellectual, aye, and physical combats of centuries, the fruits of obstinately contested struggles with despotism, and superstition, and bigotry, struggles of ages against the united intrigues of kingcraft and priest-craft; Americans, thus emancipated, having enjoyed the peaceful fruits of these blood-earned truths for two centuries, at length grow careless of their treasure; they sport with their liberty as if it were nothing worth; they grow weary of guarding their happiness, they sleep on their posts, they settle down into quiet security. They have ships, and forts, and arms, and brave hearts to defend their shores, and so there is no danger, all is peace, for the battle has long since been won, they can now safely doff their armor, there is no further need of the watchings of the camp. Our enemies, they say, have in truth become our friends; Kings are now Republican, and the Pope, yes the Pope, (his bulls and proclamations to the contrary notwithstanding,) we hope and believe has turned a Protestant Republican, at least in this country.-Let us be generous, say these descendants of ever jealous sires, let us invite our former foes to partake of our hospitality. How noble the sentiment! How will the world applaud! let us show an example of liberality unparalleled. The invitation is accepted, and they flock in countless thousands to our shores; a motley band, the oppressor and the oppressed together, and their relations to each other too unchanged. They have needed no Trojan Horse to hide them from our too credulous eyes, we lead them openly into the midst of us.-They parade our streets with foreign banners, already they flaunt them in our faces in derision. They even threaten us with their vengeance, and we cower beneath their frown. Yes, we plead with them to spare us, we thank them for restraining their rod, we humbly confess the sins of our ancestors, we tell them our fathers were bigotted and fanatical, they were too prejudiced against these our regal and papal friends.

We their children, grown more liberal, will show our freedom from narrow prejudices; we will make amends for past offences; our papal friends shall be received with open arms; we will even urge them to be the umpires in our family quarrels; we will beseech them to educate our children in their foreign principles of passive obedience; we will build for them their fortresses on our own soil, to attack our own strong holds, and then we will trust to their mercy; we shall then have delivered up to them all the keys of our house, and what will remain for us but to bow our necks beneath the foot of the Pope, and asking absolution for our own sins, and our father's sins of long rebellion against his rightful sovereignty, humbly beg a legal charter for our country, and a consecrated king for our throne? Can it consent to compete with Popery in the use of those instruments of intrigue, and trick, and gambling management, in which Popery is perfectly skilled from the hoarded experience of ages? Can Christians present themselves before the country and the world, in this enlightened age and country, as a mere political party? No, no; God forbid, that we should forget the holy character of our cause; let us not be caught in that snare of the enemy. The danger cry of Church and State may safely be left to the people, to trumpet aloud through the land, when the blind infatuation, which now closes their eyes, shall have been removed, and they shall be able to see, what many already see, the secret political manœuverings

Footnote: Popish experiment on the Military of the country. The experiments of Popery in various parts of the country on the ignorance or credulity, or apathy of the people, are every day, I might say every hour, more manifest, and they are prosecuted with a boldness, with an audacious defiance of American habits, and the feelings of American Republicanism, truly astonishing. Yet upon reflection, is it so astonishing that a tyranny of such inexhaustible resources of cunning and artifice, backed by the treasures, and the open encouragement of the arbitrary governments of Europe, should be more than ordinarily bold? For if success attends the advance of these arch intriguers against our Protestant habits and institutions, high honors and pecuniary rewards await them at home: if detection at any time overtakes them from the sudden waking of their victim, and his restive efforts to break off the bands that they would spider-like softly bind upon him, they have a retreat from punishment in their own country. A new experiment, another step forward in the march against our freedom, and to all appearances at present, a successful one has been tried at the West, at St. Louis, in the consecration of the Popish cathedral. The account is from a Popish Journal, called the Catholic Telegraph. They shall have the benefit of their own recital.

"The Cathedral of St. Louis is 134 feet long by 84 wide. There are 8 rows of pews. 25 in each row, calculated to contain at least 8000 persons. There are two magnificent colonnades at opposite sides in the body of the church, consisting of five massive pillars, of brick, elegantly marbled, and each four feet in diameter.

"The altar is of stone. It is only temporary, and will soon be superseded by a superb marble altar, which is hourly expected from Italy.

"The church it is said has already cost $42,000. It is presumed that about $18,000 more will be required to finish it, according to the original and magnificent design of its founders; so that the entire cost of the building and its furniture cannot be less than $60,000.

"The consecration took place on the Sabbath Oct. 26, 1834.

"At an early hour, 7, A. M. on the day of consecration, four Bishops, twenty-eight Priests, twelve of whom were from TWELVE different nations-and a considerable number of young aspirants to the holy ministry, making the entire ecclesiastical corps amount to fifty or sixty, were habited in their appropriate dresses. As soon as the procession was organized, the pealing of three large and clear-sounding bells, the thunder of two pieces of artillery raised all hearts, as well as our own to the Great Almighty Being.

"When the HOLY RELICS were moved towards their new habitation, where they shall enjoy an anticipated resurrection-the presence of their God in His holy tabernacle, the guns fired a second salute. We felt as if the SOUL OF ST. LOUIS, Christian, Lawgiver and HERO, was in the sound, and that he again led on his victorious armies in the service of the God of Hosts, for the defence of his religion, his sepulchre, and his people.

"When the solemn moment of the consecration approached, and the Son of the living God was going to descend for the first time, into the new residence of his glory on earth, the drums beat the reveille, three of the star-spangled banners were lowered over the balustrade of the sanctuary, the artillery gave a deafening discharge.

"The dedication sermon was preached by the Bishop of Cincinnati. During the Divine Sacrifice, two of the military stood with drawn swords, one at each side of the altar; they belonged to a guard of honor formed expressly for the occasion. Besides whom, there were detachments from the four militia companies of the city, the Marions, the Grays, the Riflemen, and the Cannoneers from Jefferson Barracks, stationed at convenient distances around the church.

"Well and eloquently did the Rev. Mr. Abell, pastor of Louisville, observe in the evening discourse, alluding to his own and the impressions of the clergy and laity, who were witnesses to the scene ; 'Fellow-Christians and Fellow-citizens! I have seen the flag of my country proudly floating at the mast-head of our richly freighted merchantmen; I have seen it fluttering in the breeze at the head of our armies, but never, never did my heart exult, as when I this day behold it, for the first time, bow before its God! Breathing from infancy the air which our artillery had purified from the infectious spirit of bigotry and persecution, it would be the pride of my soul, to take the brave men by the hand, by whom these cannons were served. But for these cannons, there would be no home for the free, no asylum for the persecuted."

What are the reflections of an American on an occurrence like this? What must they be to one who has ever felt his pride of country stir within him, when in foreign lands he has beheld the degraded slaves of despotism bow in like manner before the altars and idols of heathenish superstition, awed into seeming reverence by the military array which always accompanies the imposing ceremonial of the Popish church? But the military were only a guard of honor! Yes; this is the soft name given to this despotic chain, the musical sound to charm us away from scrutinizing it, and it will be sufficient, doubtless, to drown its harsher clanking in our torpid ears. The guard of honor, that universal appendage of kings and sacred despots, is a serviceable band. It not only helps to swell a procession by its numbers, but with the glitter of its arms, and accoutrements, and gay banners, it adds splendor to the pageant of a heathen ritual. But, reader, it has an essential duty to perform. Its duty is to enforce the ceremonies of worship upon all present. Do you doubt this duty of the guard of honor? The writer will give his own experience of the duties of the guard of honor. I was a stranger in Rome, and recovering from the debility of a slight fever, I was walking for air and gentle exercise in the Corso, on the day of the celebration of the Corpus Domini. From the houses on each side of the street were hung rich tapestries and gold embroidered damasks, and towards me slowly advanced a long procession, decked out with all the heathenish paraphernalia of this self-styled church. In a part of the procession a lofty baldechino, or canopy, borne by men, was held above the idol, the host, before which, as it passed, all heads were uncovered, and every knee bent but mine. Ignorant of the customs of heathenism, I turned my back upon the procession, and close to the side of the houses in the crowd, (as I supposed unobserved,) I was noting in my tablets the order of the assemblage. I was suddenly aroused from my occupation, and staggered by a blow upon the head from the gun and bayonet of a soldier, which struck off my hat far into the crowd. Upon recovering from the shock, the soldier, with the expression of a demon, and his mouth pouring forth a torrent of Italian oaths, in which il diavolo had a prominent place, stood with his bayonet against my breast. I could make no resistance, I could only ask him why he struck me, and receive in answer his fresh volley of unintelligible imprecations, which having delivered, he resumed his place in the guard of honor, by the side of the officiating cardinal.

Americans will not fail to observe in the precious extract of the discourse in which the priest gives vent to his feelings of exultation upon seeing our national flag, the star-spangled banner, humbled in the dust before the Pope, that with the cunning of his craft he flatters the soldiery, and in a sermon professedly to the God of Peace, and in dedicating a temple to his name, he is inspired with no loftier feelings of soul than this, "it would be the pride of my soul, to take the brave men by the hand, by whom these cannons were served." Why? Is it such a brave act to touch off a cannon? Or was the imagination of the priest revelling in the dream of seeing the military power of the country, at a future day, at the beck and service of the Pope, and his Austrian master? of a sect whose very existence depends upon a Union of Church and State. No; let American Christianity proclaim anew to all the world that it can never be wooed to any such unholy alliance. It will keep its garments unspotted from the crimes of the State. It will take none of the responsibilities of the political errors of the age, nor father any of the evils which the unprincipled politicians of the day may bring upon the country and the world as the effect of their political bargainings.

Now is the time for this Christian Republic to show her moral energy. Europe is an anxious spectator of our contests, and is watching the success of this new trial of the strength of our boasted institutions. Oh! what a lesson, what an impressive lesson might free America now read to Europe! what an example of the power of moral over physical government, can she give to the world if she will but rouse herself in her moral might, to the grand effort which the occasion demands? How would the petty jealousies of the different Protestant sects be swallowed up in the magnitude of the one great enterprise? How would every sect rather cheer the others on in their united march against a common foe, and make a common rejoicing of the success of any and every corps, as of a victorious regiment in the same great army?

Will American Christians prepare themselves for this enterprise? Will each sect awake to the feeling of its being a corps of the great Christian army, marching under the command of no earthly leader, fighting with no earthly weapons, and against no earthly foe. Will they wake to the perception of the great truth, that while their great Captain al-allows each to act separately and independently with-in certain limits, it is he that commands in chief and now orders all his soldiers, under whatever earthly banner enrolled, in united phalanx to go forward, forward in his single service. Which corps will first marshal itself for action? Which will be first in the field? Which will press forward with most zeal for the honor of the advance, for the post of danger? Which in the battle will be most in earnest to carry forward the standards of truth and plant them upon the battlements of papal darkness? Will any shrink back for fear? Will any be deterred from unholy jealousy of its neighbor? Will any indulge in unchristian, ignoble suspicion of its brethren? What cause have any for fear, or jealousy, or suspicion? This enterprise asks no sacrifice of sectarian principle; it demands no surrender of conscientious predilection of each to its own modes and forms; but it does ask the sacrifice of petty prejudice; it does demand the surrender of those miserable jealousies and envyings which more or less belong to some of every sect, when they learn the greater success of another, as if the victory of one were not the victory of all. And what are the weapons of this warfare? The Bible, the Tract, the Infant school, the Sunday school, the common school for all classes, the academy for all classes, the college and university for all classes, a free press for the discussion of all questions. These, all these, are weapons of Protestantism, weapons unknown to Popery! Yes, all unknown to genuine Popery! Let no one be deceived by the Popish apings of Protestant institutions. The Popish seminary has little in common with the Protestant seminary but the name. It is but the sheep's skin that covers the wolf's back; the teeth and the claws are not even well concealed beneath. With the weapons we have named, and with our Education societies, Theological seminaries, and Missionary societies, we need no new organization, no Anti-Popery union. But we must use our arms, and not rest satisfied with the possession of them. They must be furnished anew, and we must prepare ourselves for a vigorous warfare. We must be stirring, if we mean indeed to be victorious. Not a moment is to be lost. The enemy knows well the importance of the present instant. Hear what he says, "We must make haste, the moments are precious.- IF THE PROTESTANT SECTS ARE BEFOREHAND WITH US, IT WILL BE DIFFICULT TO DESTROY THEIR INFLUENCE." Ought not this acknowledgment of the enemy to quicken and encourage to instant effort. And again writes a Catholic Missionary, "zeal for error is always hot, particularly among the Methodists, whom nothing can turn from their track, and who heap absurdity upon absurdity. I should despair, if I should see this sect building a church in my neighborhood." Will not our Methodist brethren take this hint?

CRAIG-OXLEY - June 3, 2006 01:09 AM (GMT)

CHAPTER XII.

The political duty of American citizens at this crisis.

IN my last number I deemed it a duty to warn the Christian community against the temptation to which they were exposed, in guarding against the political dangers arising from Popery, of leaving their proper sphere of action, and degrading themselves to a common political interest. This is a snare into which they might easily fall, and into which, if Popery could invite or force them, it might keep a jubilee, for its triumph would be sure. The propensity to resist by unlawful means the encroachments of an enemy, because that enemy uses such means against us, belongs to human nature. We are very apt to think, in the irritation of being attacked, that we may lawfully hurl back the darts of a foe, whatever may be their character; that we may "fight the Devil with fire," instead of the milder, yet more effective weapon of "the Lord rebuke thee." The same spirit of Christianity which forbids us to return railing for railing, and persecution for persecution, forbids the use of unlawful or even of doubtful means of defence, merely because an enemy uses them to attack us. If Popery, (as is unblushingly the case,) organizes itself at our elections, if it interferes politically and sells itself to this or that political demagogue or party, it should be remembered, that this is notoriously the true character of Popery. It is its nature. It cannot act otherwise. Intrigue is its appropriate business. But all this is foreign to Christianity. Christianity must not enter the political arena with Popery, nor be mailed in Popish armor. The weapons and stratagems of Popery suit not with the simplicity and frankness of Christianity. Like David with the armor of Saul, it would sink beneath the ill fitting covering, before the Philistine. Yes! Popery will be an overmatch for any Christian who fights behind any other shield than that of Faith, or uses any other sword than the sword of the spirit of Truth.

But whilst deprecating a union of religious sects to act politically against Popery, I must not be misunderstood as recommending no political opposition to Popery by the American community. I have endeavored to rouse Protestants to a renewed and more vigorous use of their religious weapons in their moral war with Popery, but I am not unmindful of another duty, the political duty, which the double character of Popery makes it necessary to urge upon American citizens, with equal force, -the imperious duty of defending the distinctive principles of our civil government. It must be sufficiently manifest to every republican citizen that the civil polity of Popery is in direct opposition to all which he deems sacred in government. He must perceive that Popery cannot from its very nature tolerate any of those civil rights which are the peculiar boast of Americans. Should Popery increase but for a little time longer in this country with the alarming rapid-ity with which, as authentic statistics testify, it is advancing at the present time, (and it must not be forgotten that despotism in Europe, in its desperate struggles for existence, is lending its powerful aid to the enterprise,) we may even in this generation learn by sad experience what common sagacity and ordinary research might now teach, in time to arrest the evil, that Popery cannot tolerate our form of government in any of its essential principles.

Popery does not acknowledge the right of the people to govern; but claims for itself the supreme right to govern all people and all rulers by divine right.

It does not tolerate the Liberty of the Press; it takes advantage indeed of our liberty of the press to use its own press against our liberty; but it proclaims in the thunders of the Vatican, and with a voice which it pronounces infallible and unchangeable, that it is a liberty "never sufficiently to be execrated and detested."

It does not tolerate liberty of conscience nor liberty of opinion. The one is denounced by the Sovereign Pontiff as "a most pestilential error," and the other, "a pest of all others most to be dreaded in a state."

It is not responsible to the people in its financial matters. It taxes at will, and is accountable to none but itself.

Now these are political tenets held by Papists in close union with their religious belief, yet these are not religious but civil tenets; they belong to despotic government. Conscience cannot be pleaded against our dealing politically with them. They are separable from religious belief; and if Papists will separate them, and repudiate these noxious principles, and teach and act accordingly, the political duty of exposing and opposing Papists, on the ground of the enmity of their political tenets to our republican government, will cease. But can they do it? If they can, it behoves them to do it without delay. If they cannot, or will not, let them not complain of religious persecution, or of religious intolerance, if this republican people, when it shall wake to a sense of the danger that threatens its blood-bought institutions, shall rally to their defence with some show of indignation. Let them not whine about religious oppression, if the democracy turns its searching eye upon this secret treason to the state, and shall in future scrutinize with something of suspicion, the professions of those foreign friends, who are so ready to rush to a fraternal embrace. Let them not raise the cry of religious proscription, if American republicans shall stamp an indelible brand upon the liveried slaves of a foreign despot, the servile adorers of their "good Emperor," the Austrian conspirators, who now sheltered behind the shield of our religious liberty, dream of security, while sapping the foundations of our civil government. Let no foreign Holy Alliance presume, or congratulate itself, upon the hitherto unsuspecting and generous toleration of its secret agents in this country. America may, for a time, sleep soundly, as innocence is wont to sleep, unsuspecting of hostile attack; but if any foreign power, jealous of the increasing strength of the embryo giant, sends its serpents to lurk within his cradle, let such presumption be assured that the waking energies of the infant are not to be despised, that once having grasped his foes, he will neither be tempted from his hold by admiration of their painted and gilded covering, nor by fear of the fatal embrace of their treacherous folds.

THE MASK THROWN ASIDE.

A charge of hostility to American institutions, against any sect or class in the community, is a very serious one, and only requires evidence to support it, to draw upon all its doings the watchful eye of American freemen. Is it asked, what evidence should you think sufficiently strong to substantiate the charge? I answer, the general principles of the sect would be sufficient, but its own declarations of hostility would certainly substantiate the charge. If a Presbyterian journal, in commenting on the trial of the rioters at Charlestown, should make remarks like the following, the evidence would doubtless be considered complete:

"A system of government which admits a feeling of alarm in the execution of the laws from the vengeance of the mob, which Mr. Austin" (the prosecuting attorney,) "distinctly allows to be the case—a vengeance exhibited by letters to the public officers and threats to the public authorities—may be very fine in theory, very fit for imitation on the part of those who seek the power of the mob in contradistinction to justice and the public interest, but it is not of a nature to invite the reflecting part of the world, and shows at least that it has evils. A public officer in England, who would publicly avow such a fear of executing his duty and carrying into effect the law of the realm, ought and would be thrust out of office by public opinion. This one fact is condemnation OF THE SYSTEM OF AMERICAN INSTITUTIONS, confirmed lately by numerous other proofs."

Now, could hostility to our institutions be more strongly expressed? and were Presbyterians or any other Protestant sect, thus boldly to avow its political antipathies, every political journal would seize upon this evidence of treason, and trumpet it through the whole country. Why then are they now silent? This treason is actually uttered, nor is it less humiliating, or less dangerous that it is flung in our faces by a set of foreigners in the employment and pay of a foreign government, instead of native citizens. The very words I have quoted are from the Catholic Telegraph, a Roman Catholic journal, edited and published at Cincinnati. Let it be borne in mind too, that a Catholic journal is under the supervision of the Bishops, who exercise a rigid censorship over it, that it speaks the authorized sentiments of the sect, and we shall then perceive something of the importance to be attached to these anti-republican declarations. They are indeed a precious, an invaluable testimonial to the People, of the duplicity of their professed friends. Every where in the land hitherto, Papists have been loudest in professions of attachment to American republican institutions. They have now thrown off the mask. They unblushingly declare, that "our system of government, though very fine in theory, is not of a nature to invite the reflecting part of the world," in short, that it is an experiment that has failed: that "American institutions stand condemned by a single fact in the trial in Boston, and by numerous other proofs." And what has brought out this precious confession; what has occurred to make it a fit time to lay aside the disguise in which they have till now deceived the democracy of the country? What has produced this sudden revolution in their opinion of our form of government? Let us look into this matter.

A body of native citizens is excited to indignation by rumors, (whether true or false alters not the case,) that an act of foul play, such as the history of those nuisances, (convents,) in all countries have abundantly furnished, had occurred in the Charlestown nunnery. This mob, instead of being met with efforts to appease it by immediate explanation, as would have been the case in any Protestant seminary in the land, (for Protestants have no secret mysteries in their discipline,) this mob, I say, is kept for days in an excited state by mysterious manœuvering, on the part of the Catholics, and by irritating threats from the Superior of the Convent, that, 20,000 foreigners under the orders of the Bishop would take vengeance upon the citizens, if they dared to commit any injury upon the Convent, and this threat was uttered in sight of Bunker's hill. Under this provocation the outrage was committed. And is it a matter of surprise? I know of no one who justifies the illegal violence in burning the Convent, but I unhesitatingly say, that the feeling of indignation which animated the populace, was a just and proper feeling. It was roused by the belief, that a young and helpless female had been illegally and cruelly abducted from her friends, and subjected to a secret tyrannical punishment. The feeling, I say under this belief, was not only honorable to the Charlestownians, but had they viewed such an outrage with indifference, they would have shown themselves unworthy of American citizens. Their error, (and it cannot be defended, however it may be palliated by the gross insult which they received,) consisted in suffering their just indignation to flow in an illegal channel, and instead of rallying round the laws, and strengthening them by a strong expression of public opinion at a special meeting of citizens, they leaped the bounds of law and committed a crime which the Papists are trying every possible means to cause to react in their favor. But allowing that no palliating circumstances attended the act of the rioters, that no excuse could be pleaded for them as acting under the impulse of the most stinging insult that could be given to any people by a foreigner; what have these acts to do with our "system of government," or with "American institutions?" In England, forsooth, they manage things better. There are never riots in England! London, Manchester, Bristol, I suppose were never agitated by riots! Paris, Lyons, Marseilles, Nismes, St. Petersburg, Brussels, Frankfort, Rome, Constantinople, none of these places under various systems of government, are ever witnesses to riots!! But this Popish enemy to our institutions may say, it is not the riot but the threatening letters sent to the prosecuting attorney to intimidate him in his duty, that tells against the government. Indeed, and who wrote the letters? Is it quite certain that they were not the production of some Jesuit to fan an excitement which was so likely to be turned to the advantage of his schemes? Threatening letters are much in use in a certain Catholic country called Ireland, under a monarchical system of government. But suppose these letters were not written by Jesuits, but were the production of some wicked, or thoughtless person, what then? Is our form of government the cause of the writing of anonymous threatening letters? Would any other form of government prevent this evil of so alarming magnitude in the eyes of the Catholic Telegraph? Can it be prevented in England, or in any other form of government in the world? Yes, there is one government which could probably prevent it. It is one in which the Inquisition is established, and by means of which, aided by the confessional, all that is considered necessary for the good of the church, could be brought to light, or rather to the ears of those most interested in knowing all secrets that bear upon their own power. How soon we shall be prepared for such a change of government to suit the designs of these busy, foreign emissaries, depends on the continuance of the character for sagacity, intelligence, and virtue of the American people.

Whatever doubts some may have hitherto had in regard to the existence of a foreign conspiracy in the country, I think the case is now become too plain to need further proof. Indeed so bold are these foreign emissaries in the utterance of their anti-republican dogmas, so unblushing in their attacks upon our institutions, that we are often led to exclaim what does this mean? Are these men fools, or madmen? or are they so strong in their support from abroad, that they feel secure in bearding American freemen in their own homes? The latter supposition alone satisfactorily explains their conduct. Austria is now playing a desperate game against liberty, for the safety of her own throne, and for that of her allies. It is the last hazard, and her object is gained if she can destroy the influence of our prosperity upon the people of Europe, a prosperity the natural result of our popular free institutions; and this latter object is effected if by any means, no matter how, riot and disorder can be produced in this country, to be pointed at as the effect of republican government. Americans! Friends of liberty; Friends of order; examine this subject, and decide with your usual sagacity and discretion. You have a busy, a crafty, a powerful, a dangerous set of foreign leaders, controlling and commanding a foreign population, ignorant and infatuated, intermixed with your own population, and who at a single signal from the Pope or from Metternich when the cause of despotism shall require the deed, can spread disorder and riot through all your borders.

Shrink not, Americans, from looking at the truth. You may boast of your peace and prosperity, you hold them both at this moment, at the mercy of Austria! She has a disciplined band of foreigners in the midst of you, who in any season of excitement, she can make to fill your streets and dwellings with fear and confusion. She may not think it prudent or expedient just now to exercise her power, but she has the power, through Popish priests, who hold in check, at their pleasure, the elements of discord, and whose favor you are compelled humbly to conciliate as the price of your tranquillity. And this power is daily increasing, not merely by foreign immigration, and foreign money, but, with the deepest shame be it spoken, by the assistance, direct and indirect, of Protestant Republican Americans, who, with a facility most marvellous, fall into every snare and pleasant baited trap that Popery spreads for them.

 As the last sheet was printing, an article of intelligence was received, bearing importantly on the subject of this volume. Bishop England, the busy Jesuit, whom I have had occasion before to notice, has just put forth an address to his Diocese, at Charleston, on his return from Europe, from which we make the following extracts "During my absence I have not been negligent of the concerns of this Diocese. I have endeavored to interest in its behalf several eminent and dignified personages whom I had the good fortune to meet; and have continued to impress with a conviction of the propriety of continuing their generous aid, the administration of those societies from which it has previously received valuable succor. In Paris and at Lyons I have conversed with those excellent men who manage the affairs of the Association for propagating the Faith. This year their grant to this Diocese has been larger than usual. I have also had opportunities of communication with some of the Council which administers the Austrian Association; they continue to feel an interest in our concerns. The Propaganda in Rome, though greatly embarrassed, owing to the former plunder of its funds by rapacious infidels, has this year contributed to our extraordinary expenditure; as has the holy father himself, in the kindest manner, from the scanty stock which constitutes his private allowance; but which he economizes to the utmost for the purpose of being able to devote the savings to works of piety, of charity, and of literature."

"The prelates of the Church of Ireland, are ready, as far as our hierarchy shall require their co-operation, to give to them their best exertions in selecting and forwarding from amongst the numerous aspirants to the sacred ministry that are found in the island of saints, (Ireland,) a sufficient number of those properly qualified to supply our deficiencies. I have had very many applications, and accepted a few, who, I trust, have been judiciously selected."

We have here additional confirmation, if any were wanted, that in countries where Church and State are closely united, and where consequently every religious association, (totally unlike our religious associations, which have no connection with the government,) is directly connected with political objects, there is a great and special effort making to effect certain objects in the United States. We have no less than three great societies, all formed to operate on this country. THEY say religiously, but let Americans, who know that Austria makes no movement which is not intended for political effect, judge whether religious benevolence towards this benighted land, or a deeper and more earthly feeling of political self-preservation prompts her "continued feeling of interest in our concerns."

Title: JESUITS HELPED TO START TWO WORLD WARS

JESUITS HELPED TO START TWO WORLD WARS (1 & 2)

In every major world wide events such as civil wars, world wars, revolutions, rebellions, terrorism, assassinations, political, social and all kinds of turmoils or chaos - the Jesuits are the orchestrator. Many historians and writers such as ERIC JON PHELPS, AVRO MANHATTAN, ALBERTO RIVERA, JOHN LOFTUS, EDMUND PARIS, DARYL EBERHART, DAVID GUYAT, ALEXANDER JAMES, CHARLES CHINIQUY, JOSE RIZAL, AND OTHERS point their finger to the Jesuits and the Vatican as the culprits.

The Jesuits are also the culprits and detonated the Atomic Bomb blast in Hiroshima during the closing end of World War II. The Jesuits are also the culprits for the Sinking Of Titanic killing John Jacob Astor on board who is against the creation of the Federal Reserve Bank - A Privately Owned Bank. And Jesuit's boys (satanic bloodlines) meeting better known as the Creatures of the Jekyll Island).

The Roman Catholic Church is a mere continuation of the Roman Empire (Julius Ceasar, Nero, Constantin, Agustus Ceasar, etc.) and the Jesuit Order is the old Roman Empire Pretorian Guard where NAZI SS was pattern from the Jesuit Order. NAZI notorious general Reinhard Ghelen trained and created the CIA and the Israeli Masonic-Zionist MOSSAD. In the Philippines, the Light A Fire Movement during Marcos regime was led by Ed Olaguer and master-minded by the Jesuit Order. Fr. Romeo "Archie" Intengan and Norberto Gonzales (GMA's National Security Adviser)

The 9/11 WTC Terrorist Attack was ordered by the Jesuit General - Count Peter

Hans Kolvenbach according to Eric Jon Phelps. The masonic Osama bin Ladin praised the attack allowed by the traitor to the American people George W. Bush a member of the secret society Skull & Bones. I've a picture of Bush Sr. & Bush Jr. including Gen. Eisenhower inside the satanic worship location in the Bohemian Grove in California. Inside the Bohemian Grove, the Jesuit practice satanic rituals. The Jesuit Order are also sorcerers, like Ignatius Loyola founder of the Jesuit Order levitate above the ground during meditation according to Alberto Rivera, former Jesuit Priest.

The Jesuitism is the issue that many Bible Believing Christian Pastors doesn't realized. In-fact, many of them don't knew what is New World Order. This is the reason why many Bible Believing Christians led by their Pastors are trapped by their invincible enemies, infiltrated their churches by the Jesuits. This unawareness by many Pastors (not all) cause the death of millions of Bible Believing Christians, they were not been warned and alarmed.

Now, take your time to read below how the Jesuits orchestrated World War 1 & World War II.

By : Bobby G. Limeta

The heroes of communism, Marx and Engels, who wrote the communist manifesto, in the 1880s, were actually coached and directed by Jesuit priests. The communist party was formed for the task of destroying the protector of the hated orthodox church, the Czar of Russia. It was for revenge. The communist party was financed in secret by agents of Rome (the illuminati) in order to create another power that was a servant of the vatican.

Before World War 1, a large group of wealthy Jews was trying to gain control over Jerusalem. This made the Vatican very angry. The vatican had been wanting to move to Jerusalem for a long time, since Christianity had started there. These Jews that were fighting against the vatican's plans were to be made to pay for their stubbornness. The Vatican constucted a plan that destroy the European Jews and turn the world against them. The Vatican directed some Jews that were loyal to the catholic church to write an article called the protocols of Zion. This document would pave the way for the coming Jewish holocaust, even if it would also cause the deaths of many Roman catholics as well. In the early 1900s, France made the Vatican angry by making a political deal with the Czar of Russia. Previously, France had dumped its catholic King and had become a republic; this also made the Vatican angry. In the meantime, the orthodox church was spreading thoooughout Bulgaria, Rummania, Greece, part of Turkey, and Serbian Yugoslavia. The Vatican wanted to bring France to its knees and also stop the religious competition in the Balkans. The solution to these problems was simple, the Jesuits would start World War 1. The pope was backing Germany, so when the catholic Kaiser asked the Vatican if it could expand Germany's borders, Pope Pius X and the Jesuits gave him their blessings and permission. Germany started fighting France and treaties pulled more nations into the conflict; Germany was fighting France, England, Russia and the US. Millions died, many were Roman catholic, in 4 years of bloody war. Even while men were still dying in World War 1, the Jesuits were already busy preparing World War 2 and a new catholic inquisition, the holocaust. In July 1919, when the allies were signing the treaty of Versailles, at the end of World War 1, they were so angry at the Vatican for starting the war that they refused to recognize the Vatican as a political power anymore and kept them away from the conference table.

In Russia the empress, the wife of Czar Nicholas, told Rasputin, a monk, where the Czar's gold was hidden. Rasputin told this information to the patriarch of the Russian Orthodox church.

The Jesuits worked closely with Marx, Engels, Trotsky, Lenin and Stalin, while they were carefully preparing for the Russian revolution. The Jesuits secretly moved their gold into Russia, to finance this, using their key men. They believed that communism would rise up as a new strong daughter of the Vatican. The Russian revolution succeeded, the Czar was forced to abdicate and his family was put under house arrest. The Royal family was moved to the Urals for security reasons, while an army of Czechs was coming to try to rescue him where he was being held. A group of Ural Soviets held a quick trial and the Royal family was found guilty; some of these soviets were Jesuits pretending to be communists. The protector of the Russian orthodox church, the Czar, was now facing the Jesuits of Rome, and he and his family were killed. The communists then moved to destroy the Vatican's religious competitors, the Russian orthodox church; its religious leaders were being hunted down. However, when the communists approached the old patriarch, he greeted them and told them he was holding the Czar's gold for them. The communists put down their weapons, accepted the Czar's gold and his friendship and the killing of the Russian orthodox clergy was stopped. The communists not only got the Czar's gold but they betrayed the Vatican and kept the pope's gold too, which was worth over 600 million dollars. The Vatican went wild with anger; they had been double-crossed. The Vatican was going to make the communists pay for this no matter what it would cost. The Jesuits decided to start another war so that they could have another inquisition and the victims would now include the orthodox church and the communists of Russia along with the Jews and protestants. The financial arm of the Vatican (the illuminati, Opus Dei, and key masons) have so much wealth that they can sway the economy of the world and cause planned depressions. After the first World War, Germany was in a terrible depression. Certain pro-catholic Jews were ordered to buy up the land from the poor broke Germans. The money was supplied by the Vatican and the land was bought at a cheap price. This was going to be used to stir up hatred against the Jews at a future date. The Jews would be accused of showing no mercy to the Germans when they stole their lands during the depression.

At the end of World War 1, the Jesuits moved on three fronts.

Moussolini came to power in Italy and his black shirted thugs beat all opponents into submission. A jesuit named Venturi was assigned to work with Moussalini. The catholic vote, controlled by the Vatican put Moussolini into power. To pay off the Vatican, Mousalini signed a concordat (a document of mutual support) with the Vatican, and this made catholicism the only religion allowed in Italy and its territories.

The German government was very weak, and the economy was ruined. Some people wanted to make Germany a republic; the Vatican moved to stop this. They prepared the way for Germany's new Roman Catholic leader, Adolph Hitler. Hitler's brown shirts, the Nazis, backed by the Vatican, beat all of their opponents into submission, this included opposing Roman catholics. A jesuit priest, father Staempfle, wrote a book for Hitler, titled Mein Kampf; the book was the master plan of the Jesuits for Hitler's take over of Germany. [It was the Jesuits that perfected the famous Pan-German program laid out in this book, and Hitler endorsed it. - This is taken from the book, THE SECRET HISTORY OF THE JESUITS page 138, by Edmond Paris, a catholic French historian.] Street battles between catholics that were Nazis and catholics that were communists took place. The Jesuits built the third Reich, with its symbol the swastika, a massonic symbol. (Note; Hitler and his associates were all catholic and they all had some jewish blood in their veins. - according to Alberto Rivera, former Jesuit priest.) Pope Pius XI supported Hitler, and the catholic vote put Hitler into power in 1933. Gemany signed a concordat with the Vatican in 1933. The catholic Nazi, Von Papen, one of Hitler's diplomats, boasted to the world, "the third Reich is the first power, which not only recognizes, but puts into practice, the high principles of the papacy." (Der Voelkischer Beobachter, Jan. 14, 1934.) {You might say that these, so called, high principles of the papacy resulted in millions of people being murdered in concentration camps.}

In Spain, tunnels were found between the convents and priest rectories in which little baby skeletons were found; the priests and nuns were having sex and allowing the babies that were born to the nuns to die. The discovery of this led to the Spanish civil war. Some Spanish catholics revolted against the Vatican because of this. The Pope hired several divisions of Moslem mercenaries fighting under Franco, to kill all Roman catholics, Jews and protestants that opposed them. Because a few of the catholic revolters were communists, the catholic controlled press leaked out the story that it was a communist rebellion and not what it really was, a catholic rebellion. General Franco won the battle and became the catholic dictator of Spain, ending the Spanish republic government that Spain had previously. So now the Jesuits had leaders of Italy, Germany, and Spain that would obey the Jesuits. German catholics under orders from the Vatican began joining protestant churches and pretending to be protestant. When the anti-Jewish atrocities began, these undercover catholics, in protestant churches, publicly accused the Jews and turned them over to the Gestapo for shipment to the death camps. [The Jesuits are masters of deceit. They took 1000 Roman catholic Jews and hid them at the Vatican for the duration of the war. This was just in case Hitler lost the war. If Hitler lost the war, the Vatican could say they also helped the Jews. But these were catholic Jews. It was the non catholic Jews that the Gestapo wanted to kill.] The vatican always covers itself in case its plans backfire.

While Hitler was building his war machine, in the 1930s, the Jesuits were busy establishing 5th columns in the countries scheduled for the Nazi invasions. A 5th column is a secret army within a country that is ready to surrender and help an invading country to capture its own nation. The organization called catholic action, in these countries, was the 5th column. Jesuit priests, Picard, Arendt, and Foucault preached a Hitlerite, fascist Gospel, calling it a spiritual renewal in Belgium. In the United States, the Jesuit father Coughlin (the apostle of the swastika) reached over 20 million listeners by radio, saying that the German war is a battle for Christianity. He also headed secret commando cells that were trained by Nazi agents, from 1936 - 1942 in the United States.

Hitler started his fast attacks in Europe and World War 2 started. Germany, Italy and Japan fought the rest of the world and millions died. One of Hitler's greatest sources of intelligence information came through the Roman catholic confessionals all over the world. Hitler's secret servic, the Gestapo, was built up after the principles of the Jesuit Order, by Heindrich Hemler. Many catholic priests wore the uniform of Hitler's Gestapo. The Jesuit father Himmler, Heindrich Himmler's uncle, was one of the superior officers of the Gestapo. It was mainly through the Gestapo that six and a half million Jews suffered torture and death; the 20th century catholic inquisition was in full swing. Bible believing protestants that tried to help the Jews also went into the concentration camps. In Yugoslavia, the Greek orthodox church, the Serbians, were terribly tortured and murdered by the Ustachi killer squads, catholic groups that were led by Jesuits.

Many catholic priests were members of the Ustachi killer squads. The Jesuit monseigneur Tiso, in Slovakia, chief of the Slovakian state, provided the first contingent of Jews, from Slovakia, to be murdered at Auschwitz. Monseigneur Tiso was hanged as a war criminal after the war was over. You can read about the Ustachi killer squads and see actual photographs of them in action at this website: Read THE VATICAN'S HOLOCAUST, online, here:

Pope Pius XII, after building the Nazi war machine, saw Hitler losing his battle against Russia, and he immediately jumped to the allies side as he saw that Hitler was going to lose the war. Then the Vatican began to use the organizations under its control to cover up the Vatican's involvement with starting World War 2 and its involvement in the holocaust. Germany surrendered May 8th 1945 and Europe was in ruins. The Vatican had these contingency plans in case Hitler lost the war:

1. Make everyone believe that the Vatican had nothing to do with the war and, in time, try to convince people that the holocaust never happened.
2. Make sure that rebellious nuns, monks, and priests were also put into the concentration camps to try to convince the world that the catholic church was also persecuted.
3. They ordered catholic families and priests to protect Jews in their homes so this could be used in the future as good public relations material for books and films. Those Jews that were protected had already been converted to catholicism.
4. Put on a new face by setting up the Vatican II council.
5. Set up a communist pope from behind the Iron Curtain to please the communists and try to convert them to catholicism. This was Pope John 23rd.

Read what the press of the Catholic, Spanish dictator, Franco, published on the 3rd of May, 1945, the day of Hitler's death. It said, "Adolf Hitler, son of the Catholic Church, died while defending Christianity." It is therefore understandable that words cannot be found to lament over his death, when so many were found to exalt his life. It goes on to say, "Over his mortal remains stands his victorious moral figure. With the palm of the martyr, God gives Hitler the laurels of Victory." This funeral oration of Adolph Hitler was voiced by the Holy See itself, under the cover of Franco's press. It is a communique of the Vatican via Madrid. Hitler himself stated, "I learned much from the Order of the Jesuits. Until now, there has never been anything more grandiose, on the earth, than the hierarchical organization of the Catholic church. I transferred much of this organization into my own party." Walter Schellenberg, former chief of Nazi counter-espionage made this statement: "The S.S. organization had been constituted by Himmler according to the principles of the Jesuit Order. Their regulations and the Spiritual Exercises prescribed by Ignatius of Loyola were the model Himmler tried to copy exactly. Himmler's title as supreme chief of the S.S. was to be the equivalent of the Jesuits' 'General' and the whole structure was a close imitation of the Catholic Church's hierarchical order."

Hitler was also ready to discuss with the Bishop his views on the Jewish question: Adolph Hitler said, "As for the Jews, I am just carrying on with the same policy which the Catholic church has adopted for fifteen hundred years, when it has regarded the Jews as dangerous and pushed them into ghettos etc., because it knew what the Jews were like. I don't put race above religion, but I do see the danger in the representatives of this race for Church and State, and perhaps I am doing Christianity a great service." "The Nazi Persecution of the Churches" by J S Conway pages 25, 26 and 162

In his book FIFTY YEARS IN THE CHURCH OF ROME, former catholic priest Charles Chiniquy had this to say about the Jesuits: "The Jesuits are a military organization, not a religious order. Their chief is the general of an army, not the mere father abbot of a monastery. And the aim of this organization is power. Power in the most despotic exercise. Absolute power, universal power, power to control the World by the volition (will) of a single man. Jesuitism is the most absolute of despotisms (dictatorship); and at the same time, the greatest and the most enormous of abuses." (The most monstrous hurt, injury and damage) "The general of the jesuits insists on being master, sovereign over the sovereign. Wherever the jesuits are admitted they will be masters, cost what it may. Their society is by nature dictatorial, and therefore it is the irreconcilable enemy of all constituted authority. Every act, every crime, however atrocious, is a meritorious work, if committed for the interest of the society of the jesuits, or by the order of its general. page 174, in the book, FIFTY YEARS IN THE CHURCH OF ROME, by Charles Chiniquy. Title: Phelps - Quick info on the Banning of VATICAN ASSA

CRAIG-OXLEY - October 10, 2005 12:39 AM (GMT)

I cannot get into the details right now, but the basics are these:

- 1. No mainstream bookseller would carry VA; they would order it if a customer so desired. This is an indirect form of banning a book.
- 2. VA could not be openly shipped into England, as we had to write like a child in addressing the parcels or they would be returned.
- 3. Amazon only sold used copies and my publishers never shipped to Amazon.

Interesting! Saussy's ROE was sold in every major retail outlet, including Barnes and Noble. VA was never allowed on the shelf. I wonder Why?

I trust this is helpful.

Sincerely in Faith,

Brother Eric

Eric,

Can you give us some information on when and how your book Vatican Assassins was banned in the U.S or elsewhere? It was sold on Amazon at one time right?

Thankyou

Description: Jesuits, Kings, Emperors, Czar conspirac

CRAIG-OXLEY - November 5, 2005 03:54 AM (GMT)

The following text is a copy of a most secret International document of a conspiracy between The Jesuits at the Vatican, Kings, Emperors and the Russian Czar in the year 1822, which is archived at the library of the U.S Congress in Washington D.C.

http://www.theforbiddenknowledge.com/hardt...y_of_verona.htm

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD - SENATE.

64th CONGRESS, 1st SESSION

VOLUME 53, PART 7

25 April 1916

I wish to put in the RECORD the secret treaty of Verona of November 22, 1822, showing what this ancient conflict is between the rule of the few and the rule of the many. I wish to call the attention of the Senate to this treaty because it is the threat of this treaty which was the basis of the Monroe doctrine. It throws a powerful white light upon the conflict between monarchical government and government by the people. The Holy Alliance under the influence of Metternich, the Premier of Austria, in 1822, issued this remarkable secret document :

[American Diplomatic Code, 1778 - 1884, vol. 2 ; Elliott, p. 179.]

SECRET TREATY OF VERONA

The undersigned, specially authorized to make some additions to the treaty of the Holy Alliance, after having exchanged their respective credentials, have agreed as follows :

ARTICLE 1. The high contracting powers being convinced that the system of representative government is equally as incompatible with the monarchical principles as the maxim of the sovereignty of the people with the high divine right, engage mutually in the most solemn manner, to use all their efforts to put an end to the system of representative governments, in whatever country it may exist in Europe, and to prevent its being introduced in those countries where it is not yet known.

ART. 2. As it can not be doubted that the liberty of the press is the most powerful means used by the pretended supporters of the rights of nations to the detriment of those princes, the high contracting parties promise reciprocally to adopt all proper measures to suppress it, not only in their own states but also in the rest of Europe.

ART. 3. Convinced that the principles of religion contribute most powerfully to keep nations in the state of passive obedience which they owe to their princes, the high contracting parties declare it to be their intention to sustain in their respective States those measures which the clergy may adopt, with the aim of ameliorating their own interests, so intimately connected with the preservation of the authority of the princes ; and the contracting powers join in offering their thanks to the Pope for what he has already done for them, and solicit his constant cooperation in their views of submitting the nations.

ART. 4. The situation of Spain and Portugal unite unhappily all the circumstances to which this treaty has particular reference. The high contracting parties, in confiding to France the care of putting an end to them, engaged to assist her in the manner which may the least compromit them with their own people and the people of France by means of a subsidy on the part of the two empires of 20,000,000 of francs every year from the date of the signature of this treaty to the end of the war.

ART. 5. In order to establish in the Peninsula the order of things which existed before the revolution of Cadiz, and to insure the entire execution of the articles of the present treaty, the high contracting parties give to each other the reciprocal assurance that as long as their views are not fulfilled, rejecting all other ideas of utility or other measure to be taken, they will address themselves with the shortest possible delay to all the authorities existing in their States and to all their agents in foreign countries, with the view to establish connections tending toward the accomplishment of the objects proposed by this treaty.

ART. 6. This treaty shall be renewed with such changes as new circumstances may give occasion for, either at a new congress or at the court of one of the contracting parties, as soon as the war with Spain shall be terminated.

ART. 7. The present treaty shall be ratified and the ratifications exchanged at Paris within the space of six months.

Made at Verona the 22d November, 1822.

For Austria :-----METTERNICH.

For France :-----CHATEAUBRIAND.

For Prussia :-----BERNSTET.

For Russia :-----NESSELRODE.

I ask to have printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD this secret treaty, because I think it ought to be called now to the attention of the people of the United States and of the world. This evidence of the conflict between the rule of the few verses popular government should be emphasized on the minds of the people of the United States, that the conflict now waging throughout the world may be more clearly understood, for after all said the great pending war springs from the weakness and frailty of government by the few, where human error is far more probable than the error of the many where aggressive war is only permitted upon the authorizing vote of those whose lives are jeopardized in the trenches of modern war.

Mr. SHAFROTH. Mr. President, I should like to have the senator state whether in that treaty there was not a coalition formed between the powerful countries of Europe to reestablish the sovereignty of Spain in the Republics of South and Central America?

Mr. OWEN. I was just going to comment upon that, and I am going to take but a few moments to do so because I realize the pressure of other matters. This Holy Alliance, having put a Bourbon prince upon the throne of France by force, then used France to suppress the constitution of Spain immediately afterwards, and by this very treaty gave her a subsidy of 20,000,000 francs annually to enable her to wage war upon the people of Spain and to prevent their exercise of any measure of the right of self-government. The Holy Alliance immediately did the same thing in Italy, by sending Austrian troops to Italy, where the people there attempted to exercise a like measure of liberal constitutional self-government ; and it was not until the printing press, which the Holy Alliance so stoutly opposed, taught the people of Europe the value of liberty that finally one country after another seized a greater and greater right of self government, until now it may be fairly said that nearly all the nations of Europe have a very large measure of self government. However, I wish to call the attention of the Senate and the country to this important history in the growth of constitutional popular self-government. The Holy Alliance made its powers felt by the wholesale drastic suppression of the press in Europe, by universal censorship, by killing free speech and all ideas of popular rights, and by the complete suppression of popular government. The Holy Alliance having destroyed popular government in Spain and in Italy, had well-laid plans also to destroy popular government in the American colonies which had revolted from Spain and Portugal in Central and South America under the influence of the successful example of the United States. It was because of this conspiracy against the American Republics by the European monarchies that the great English statesman, Canning, called the attention of our government to it, and our statesmen then, including Thomas Jefferson, took an active part to bring about the declaration by President Monroe in his next annual message to the Congress of the United States that the United States should regard it as an act of hostility to the government of the United States and an unfriendly act if this coalition or if any power of Europe ever undertook to establish upon the American Continent any control of any American Republic or to acquire any territorial rights. This is the so-called Monroe doctrine. The threat under the secret treaty of Verona to suppress popular governments in the American Republics is the basis of the Monroe doctrine. This secret treaty sets forth clearly the conflict between monarchical government and popular government and the government of the few as against the government of the many. It is a part, in reality, of developing popular sovereignty when we demand for women equal rights to life, to liberty, to the possession of property, to an equal voice in the making of the laws and the administration of the laws. This demand on the part of the women is made by men, and it ought to be made by men as well as by thinking, progressive women, as it will promote human liberty and human happiness. I sympathize with it, and I hope that all parties will in the national conventions give their approval to this larger measure of liberty to the better half of the human race.

Description: and future! Its all the Jesuits as usua

CRAIG-OXLEY - October 15, 2005 10:16 PM (GMT)

Regarding the apparent Jesuit Coadjutor Patrick Fitzgerald, I will ask this question. If Bush is a mere puppet of the Order in beginning its Crusade against Islam via 911, why is one of the Order's footsoldiers, under orders and obedient to his superiors, bringing charges (and rightfully so) against Coadjutor Skull and Bones Bush? The same could be asked of the Roman Catholic Jesuit Coadjutor Michael Moore. The same could be asked of Jesuit Daniel Berrigan in his opposition to Cardinal Spellman's War in Vietnam promoted by Jesuit "Father Hawk" Dan Lyons who was an advisor to both Generals Westmoreland and Abrams. So why the actions of Fitzgerald?

We know that the Order is always on both sides of the street. The real history of WWII teaches us this truth. Jesuits ruled the SS/SD; Jesuits were in the French Resistance; Jesuits were in the OSS and NKVD. In manning both the thesis and antithesis in any revolution or agitation, the synthesis is always in their hands. I believe prominent Jesuit coadjutors such as Hal Turner, Texe Marrs, Patrick Fitzgerald, SMOM Pat Buchanan, etc., will lead in the opposition to socialist Coadjutor Bush in furthering the agenda of establishing a fascist military dictatorship in the American Empire.

This was attempted in 1932. The Order using its CFR founder and Freemason West Virginia Senator John W. Davis and Knight of Malta John J. Raskob (the Roman Catholic head of General Motors), sought to bring about a coup d'etat ("a stroke concerning the state") in making Roman Catholic Marine Corps General Smedley Butler the nation's dictator, or 33rd Degree Freemason FDR the Order's CFR-controlled dictator. The coup failed thanks to the courage and patriotism of Butler, but this time it may well succeed.

In playing the game "If I were the Jesuit General," I would begin to attack my Skull and Bones puppet George W. Bush using Jesuit-trained Fitzgerald and Coadjutor Michael Moore. Thus, my Order could never be blamed for not resisting Bush, at least openly. Secretly I would continue all of my policies instituted under the reign of my Bush dynasty knowing full well that the President's popularity is falling. At the ebb of his fall, to be sometime in 2006-7, I would use my CIA to detonate a series of nuclear devices preset in the US for at least 20 years. Yes, the triggers will remain intact for that period of time. I would then blame Iran or South Korea for the blasts, justifying martial law and vindicating my Bush's "War on Terror." That vindication will go all the way back to the reason for inciting the war---the presence of weapons of mass destruction. In the eyes of the public, my Bush will have been right all along, Dick Cheney of course being the real brains and power behind the Presidency. (What Edward M. House was to Wilson; what Bormann was to Hitler, what Harry Hopkins was to FDR, what Jesuit Tacchi-Venturi was to Mussolini; what Kissinger was to Nixon; Cheney is to Bush.)

Now the Empire will be on a total war footing with a compulsory draft and a willing population to fight my Crusade against Islam which my Order has planned since no later than 1968 with the assassination of RFK by an Arab Muslim--- Sirhan. (Of course Sirhan never shot RFK; yes we ordered the CIA to kill RFK as it killed MLK, JFK and Malcolm X.)

Meanwhile I shall incite a race war, Blacks against Whites and Mexicans against Whites further driving the Whites into my fascist military camp. This is true ecumenicism! Using the White race, as it is the most useful in fulfilling my master's mystery of iniquity, I will then roundup all the enemies of the state, moslems, Bible-reading Christians and illegal aliens that my President Bush and Mexican President Fox have brought into the country with the blessing of Washington Cardinal McCarrick. Last but not least I will roundup all Jews due to the involvement of "court Jews" who are also in my CFR (Wolfowitz, Kissinger, and one hundred others), blaming them for my War on Terror and fascist takeover in the US.

With the passing of my Bush for a job well done, my new military dictator will conduct a two-front war which is intended to be checked and defeated by my coadjutors in the Pentagon. It will be a repeat of what Hitler's German High Command did to the German Army in the East---the sacrifice of three entire armies. Meanwhile I would be rounding up as many Jews as my beloved Office of Homeland Security can find, thanks to the record keeping of IBM and the use of the ubiquitous SSN, "dispatching" these "Christ-killers" in my many Rex 84 Concentration Camps.

The Black Pope's scenario will transpire something like the above. "The ends justify the means," and the Order will be in every "means" to effect "the ends" so desired by its Superior General. Patrick Fitzgerald is one of those "means."

Sincerely in Faith,

Brother Eric

BALANCED VIEW OF POPES

possible series, Part One

Having financial hang-ups, the spy-riddled, oil-soaked, heavily tax-cheating Monopoly Press cannot bring you a balanced view of any subject. If you are well informed, you certainly know that.

So, some will like what they read here. Others will not.

Before he became Pope, he was Papal Nuncio in Berlin. Some contend he was supportive of the rise of Adolf Hitler. For some years before, during, and after World War Two, he was Pope Pius 12th.

Some authors accused him of being pro-Nazi.

["The Deputy" by Rolf Hochhuth. "Hitler's Pope: The Secret History of Pius XII", by John Cornwell, 1999.]

It is beyond dispute that after World War Two, Pius assisted wanted war-criminal Nazis to escape down the "Rat-lines" to the U.S. South America, and Croatia.

["Aftermath" by Ladislav Farago.]

As a young man, he was a theater expert and actor. During his later career, was he just acting as well? During World War Two, he held a position in a facility of I.G. Farben, the Nazi poison gas factory, part of a chemical cartel.

[For background, "The Crime and Punishment of I.G. Farben" by Joseph Borkin.]

Karol Wojtyla was a sort of chief assistant to the Bishop of Krakow, who being pro-Nazi, controlled fellow Poles with an iron fist and kept them submissive and docile for the benefit of the German occupation forces. Later, far too many Poles claimed they knew nothing of the round-up of the Jews from the ghettos and transporting them to concentration camp for slave labor for I.G. Farben.

Millions of Jews, labor leaders, and other "enemies of the State" were worked to death while being starved. Elderly and disabled Jews were quickly disposed of; they were of no use in the Nazi war factories.

Most Poles later either denied knowing of this when it was happening or claimed they did not participate in the crimes against humanity. Presumably, Wojtyla took the same position as his fellow Poles. In his later career, did anyone in the Monopoly Press ever dare ask him?

Then there is the story of another one. In 1978, in their secret Conclave, the Cardinals selected another Italian to be Pope, John Paul 1st. But, soon it became evident from a geopolitical and religious standpoint, they most likely made a wrong selection.

He soon enough let it be known that he was for modifying the Vatican position of absolute prohibition for Catholics to use birth control. In simple terms, he was against birthing more children than a couple could financially take care of. It was a reasonable, humane position to non-Catholics.

Furthermore, he was determined to put an end to the traditional Sicilian and Italian Mafia, jointly with certain corrupt Archbishops, and the American CIA, in using the Vatican Bank as a money laundry for stolen gold treasuries, dope money, illicit weapons deals, assassination funds, and superior counterfeit currency dealings, among other dirty, bloody business.

Some Italian editors dared demand that Pope John Paul 1st, do something about the Continental Bank of Chicago, the majority owners jointly being the Vatican and the Queen of England. The bank, some Italian editors stated, was a laundry for the Mafia.

[As we dared point out publicly, the Chief Judge of the Chicago Federal Appeals Court, Walter Cummings, Jr., was a "man of trust" for the Vatican, and held a large block of shares, as nominee and front man for the Pope. Judge Cummings, a banker-judge, did NOT disqualify himself when his Continental Bank and their major clients were litigants in his tribunal. Guess who won in his crooked Court?]

[As predicted accurately by this writer, Continental Bank collapsed in 1984 and was taken over later by Bank of America owned jointly by the Jesuits and the Japanese underworld, the Yakuza.]

Thirty-three days after taking office, Pope John Paul 1st was poisoned with a cup of tea. It was a symbolic warning and death warrant by the Free Masons, the Jesuits, and Opus Dei, the super-fascist, super-secret group (by 2005, Opus Dei occupying their own large building in New York city).

[More details of the plot against Pope John Paul 1st in the book "In God's Name" by David Yallop.]

Thereafter, the Vatican secret Conclave of Cardinals put together a scheme, with the urging of the American CIA, to topple the Soviet government.

To understand the rationale, you have to have a good understanding of history. The Anglo-American Aristocracy financed the rise of the Nazis and Adolf Hitler, as a bulwark against the Soviets.

In the beginning, the Prussian/German Aristocracy was reluctant to finance Hitler. [See, "Who Financed Hitler" by Susan Poole.]

With his background with the pro-Nazi Polish Bishop of Krakow, Wojtyla was a suitable and forceful Anti-Communist.

But he lacked humanity for Italians. In 1979, there was a terrible earthquake in the historically impoverished southern part of Italy. The destitute Italians demanded that John Paul 2nd, the new Pontiff, relieve some of their suffering, by sending them financial aid from his Mafia/American CIA controlled Vatican Bank. The Pope refused.

John Paul 2nd kept censored, as best he could, through his helpers, Vatican Intelligence, of the growing scandal of international swindler Michele Sindona operating through the Vatican Bank and the Vatican-owned Continental Bank of Chicago.

[See "St. Peter's Banker" by Luigi DiFonzo.]

Starting about 1980, the American CIA jointly with a deal with the bosses of Time Magazine, arranged tremendous secret financing for their paid-for Polish provocateur, Lech Walesa. As a leader of the Polish Solidarity Movement, Walesa stirred up the workers at the Lenin Shipyards at Gdansk.

As the Soviets understood it, Pope John Paul 2nd, by his statements and speeches, jointly with Western paid-for provocateur Lech Walesa, was stirring up fellow Poles in rebellion against the Moscow government. To the Soviets, Wojtyla was a rotten intermeddler, considering how many Soviet lives were lost in freeing Poland from the Germans.

In May 1981, a deranged supposed left-wing Turk, was grabbed after reportedly being the "lone assassin" attempting to kill Pope John Paul 2nd by shooting him in the abdomen right in Vatican Square.

Thereafter, two opposing spy shops released supposed details that the other side instigated the would-be assassin. The American CIA planted a flood of apparently phony details that the Bulgarian Secret Police were accomplices of the Turk in Italy and maybe even right in Vatican Square.

Various international inquiries tended to show the CIA stories had no basis.

On the other hand, the Soviets planted stories that seemed to have "legs". The Soviets made a compelling case that the supposed deranged Turk was part of a RIGHT-wing Military group in Turkey financed by the American CIA.

These two versions tended to cancel each other out. Left unanswered were questions that the Polish Solidarity Movement was reportedly not receiving the funding promised them by the West.

So wounding Wojtyla right on the grounds of the Vatican, was perceived by savvy folks as a way of reminding the West to send more money to the Solidarity Movement. Or, maybe it was just a leftover warning for the Pope to be sure to keep covered up the Sindona scandal. After all, some claimed Sindona's main efforts in accounting were to whisk huge Italian business funds out of Italy to escape the tax collectors.

Or, wounding the Pope was a way for the southern Italians and the Sicilians to remind the Pontiff not to be so stingy refusing earthquake relief funds in 1979.

Compare the following with the position of the murdered Pope John Paul 1st regarding possibly modifying the Church's position on birth control. When Pope John Paul 2nd visited Mexico, implicit in his statements was that he was urging Mexicans to go full speed ahead in fathering children. Yet, Mexico City, for example, is over-populated with more than 32 million inhabitants. The authorities have no funds left for sanitation. So the streets in many poor sections become the toilet and dumping grounds. It makes for a terribly unhealthy situation. The Pope offered no remedy, only being interested in more members for his Church.

Over a number of years, Pope John Paul 2nd made apologies for various historical crimes of his Church.

For example, in 1492, Columbus landed in the new world. Thereafter, the Catholic Church committed terrible crimes against the natives of Mexico and Central America and black and other slaves. Five hundred years later, in 1992, Pope John Paul 2nd visited Central America and made apologies for the crimes of five hundred years previous. To some it was an idle gesture.

And the Pope visited a memorial to the Holocaust in Israel and made apologies there. To some, it was an idle, worthless ceremony.

Seldom mentioned in Pope John Paul 2nd's efforts to topple the Soviet Union, was the more important purpose of the Vatican. That is, to smash, if possible, the Eastern Orthodox Church, a competitor if not enemy of the Vatican for more than a thousand years.

Some people conveniently forget a few things. Such as, Popes up to the beginning of the 19th Century, threatened to throw members out of the Church, excommunicate them, for daring to say the Earth is not flat. That is, the Vatican was the headquarters of the Flat Earth Committee.

Also, did any Pope ever urge scientific progress in medicines, healthcare, transportation, and communications? Or urge progress in laborsaving machinery so human beings would not be just above a pack animal? Why does it seem the Popes have their Church in full reverse gear instead of forward and progressive?

Title: INDUCTION AND EXTREME OATH OF THE JESUITS

CRAIG-OXLEY - October 9, 2005 02:57 PM (GMT)

INDUCTION AND EXTREME OATH OF THE JESUITS

When a Jesuit novice is about to be inducted into the higher levels of the Order, he kneels on a red cross before the Superior of the Order. Before him are two flags, the familiar yellow and white flag of the papacy, and the black flag with a dagger and red cross above a skull and crossbones, the flag of the Jesuit Order. On the Jesuit flag is written the words, IUSTUM, NECAR, REGES, IMPIOS. (It is just to exterminate or annihilate impious or heretical kings, governments, or rulers.) The Superior of the Order hands the novice a small black crucifix which he presses to his heart, and the Superior then presents to the novice a dagger. The novice grasps the bare blade and presses the point to his heart. The Superior, still holding the hilt of the dagger then speaks to the novice.

Superior

My son, heretofore you have been taught to act the dissembler: among Roman Catholics to be a Roman Catholic, and to spy even among your own brethren; to believe no man, to trust no man. Among the Reformers, to be a Reformer; among the Huguenots, to be a Huguenot; among the Calvinists, to be a Calvinist; among the Protestants, generally to be a Protestant; and obtaining their confidence to seek even to preach from their pulpits and to denounce with all the vehemence in your nature our Holy Religion and the Pope; and to descend so low as to become a Jew among the Jews, that you might be enabled to gather together all information for your Order as a faithful soldier of the Pope.

You have been taught to insidiously plant the seeds of jealousy and hatred between communities, provinces and states that were at peace, and incite them to deeds of blood, involving them in war with each other, and to create revolutions and civil wars in countries that were independent and prosperous, cultivating the arts and sciences and enjoying the blessings of peace. To take sides with the combatants and to act secretly in concert with your brother Jesuit, who may be engaged on the other side, but openly opposed to that with which you might be connected; only that the Church might be the gainer in the end, in the conditions fixed in the treaties for peace and that the end justifies the means.

You have been taught your duty as a spy, to gather all statistics, facts and information in your power from every source; to ingratiate yourself into the confidence of the family circle of Protestants and heretics of every class and character, as well as that of the merchant, the banker, the lawyer, among the schools and universities, in parliaments and legislatures, and in the judiciaries councils of state, and to "be all things to all men," for the Pope's sake, whose servants we are unto death.

You have received all your instructions heretofore as a novice, a neophyte, and have served as a coadjutor, confessor and priest, but you have not been invested with all that is necessary to command in the Army of Loyola in the service of the Pope. You must serve the proper time as the instrument and executioner as directed by your superiors; for none can command here who has not consecrated his labors with the blood of the heretic; for "without the shedding of blood no man can be saved." Therefore, to fit yourself for your work, and make your own salvation sure, you will, in addition to your former oath of obedience to your Order and your allegiance to the Pope, repeat after me.

I, M----- N-----, Now, in the presence of Almighty God, the Blessed Virgin Mary, the blessed Michael the Archangel, the blessed St. John the Baptist, the holy Apostles St. Peter and St. Paul and all the saints and the sacred hosts of heaven, and to you, my ghostly father, the Superior general of the Society of Jesus, founded by St. Ignatius of Loyola, in the Pontificate of Paul the Third, and continued to the present, do by the womb of the Virgin, the matrix of God, and the rod of Jesus Christ, declare and swear, that his holiness the Pope is Christ's Viceregent and is the true and only Head of the Catholic or Universal Church throughout the earth; and that by virtue of the keys of binding and loosing, given to his Holiness by my Saviour, Jesus Christ, he hath power to depose heretical kings, princes, states, commonwealths and governments, all being illegal without his sacred confirmation and that they may safely be destroyed.

Therefore, to the utmost of my power, I shall and will defend this doctrine and his Holiness' right and custom against all usurpers of the heretical or Protestant authority, and all adherents in the regard that they be usurped and heretical, opposing the sacred Mother Church of Rome.

I do now renounce and disown any allegiance as due to any heretical king, prince or state named Protestants or Liberals or obedience to any of their laws, magistrates or officers. I do further declare that the doctrines of the churches of England and Scotland, of the Calvinists, Huguenots and others of the name Protestants or Liberals to be damnable, and they themselves damned and to be damned who will not forsake the same.

I do further declare that I will help, assist and advise all or any of his Holiness' agents in any place wherever I shall be, in any other kingdom or territory I shall come to, and do my uttermost to extirpate the heretical Protestants or Liberals' doctrines and to destroy all their pretended powers, regal or otherwise.

I do further promise and declare, that notwithstanding I am dispensed with, to assume any religion heretical, for the propagating of the Mother Church's interest, to keep secret and private all her agents counsels' from time to time, as they may entrust me, and not to divulge, directly or indirectly, by word, writing or circumstance whatever; but to execute all that shall be proposed, given in charge or discovered unto me, by you, my ghostly father, or any of this sacred convent.

I do further promise and declare, that I will have no opinion or will of my own, or any mental reservation whatever, even as a corpse or cadaver, (perinde ac cadaver,) but will unhesitatingly obey each and every command that I may receive from my superiors in the Militia of the Pope and Jesus Christ. That I will go to any part of the world whithersoever I may be sent, without murmuring or repining, and will be submissive in all things commanded to me.

I furthermore promise and declare that I will, when opportunity presents, make and wage relentless war, secretly or openly, against all heretics, Protestants and Liberals, as I am directed to do, to extirpate and exterminate them from the face of the whole earth; and that I will spare neither age, nor sex or condition; and that I will hang, burn, waste, spoil, flay, strangle, and bury alive these infamous heretics, rip up the stomachs and wombs of their women and crush their infants' heads against the walls, in order to annihilate forever their execrable race.

That when the same cannot be done openly, I will secretly use the poisoned cup, the strangulating cord, the steel of the poinard or the leaden bullet, regardless of the honor, rank, dignity, or authority of the person or persons, whatever may be their condition in life, either public or private, as I at any time may be directed to do so by any agent of the Pope or Superior of the Brotherhood of the Holy Faith, of the Society of Jesus.

In confirmation of which, I hereby dedicate my life, soul, and all of my coporeal powers, and with this dagger which I now receive, I will subscribe my name written in my own blood, in testimony thereof; and should I prove false or weaken in my determination, may my brethren and fellow soldiers of the Militia of the Pope cut off my hands and feet, and my throat from ear to ear, my belly opened and sulphur burned therein, with all the punishment that can be inflicted upon me on earth, and my soul to be tortured by demons in an eternal hell forever.

All of which I, M----- N-----, do swear by the blessed Trinity and blessed Sacrament, which I am about to receive, to perform and on my part to receive inviolably; and do call all of the heavenly and glorious host of heaven to witness these my real intentions to keep this my oath.

In testimony hereof I take this most holy and blessed sacrament of the Eucharist, and witness the same further, with my name written with the point of this dagger dipped in my own blood and sealed in the face of this holy convent.

Superior

You will now rise to your feet and I will instruct you in the Catechism necessary to make yourself known to any member of the Society of Jesus belonging to this rank.

In the first place, you, as a Brother Jesuit, will with another make the ordinary sign of the cross as any Roman Catholic would; then one crosses his wrists, the palms of his hands open, the other crosses his feet, one above the other; the first points with forefinger of the right hand to the center of the palm of the left, the other with the forefinger of the left hand points to the center of the palm of the right; the first then with his right hand makes a circle around his head, touching it; the other then with the forefinger of his left hand touches the left side of his body just below his heart; then the first with his right hand draws it across the throat of the other, and the latter then with his right hand makes the motion of cutting with a dagger down the stomach and abdomen of the first.

The first then says lustum; the other answers Nectar; the first then says Reges. The other answers Impios. The first will then present a small piece of paper folded in a peculiar manner, four times, which the other will cut longitudinally and on opening the name JESU will be found written upon the head and arms of a cross three times. You will then give and receive with him the following questions and answers.

Q: From where do you come?

A: From the bends of the Jordan, from Calvary, from the Holy Sepulchre, and lastly from Rome.

Q: Whom do you serve?

A: The Holy Father at Rome, the Pope, and the Roman Catholic Church Universal throughout the world.

Q: Who commands you?

A: The successor of St. Ignatius of Loyola, the founder of the Society of Jesus or the Soldiers of Jesus Christ.

Q: Who received you?

A: A venerable man with white hair.

Q: How?

A: With a naked dagger, I kneeling on a cross beneath the banners of the Pope and of our sacred Order.

Q: Did you take an oath?

A: I did, to destroy heretics and their governments and rulers, and to spare neither age, sex or condition. To be as a corpse without any opinion or will of my own, but to implicitly obey my superiors in all things without hesitation or murmuring.

Q: Will you do that?

A: I will.

Q: How do you travel?

A: In the bark of Peter the fisherman.

Q: Whither do you travel?

A: To the four quarters of the globe.

Q: For what purpose?

A: To obey the orders of my General and Superiors and execute the will of the Pope and faithfully fulfill the conditions of my oath.

Go ye, then, into all the world and take possession of all lands in the name of the Pope. He who will not accept him as the Vicar of Jesus and his Viceregent on earth, let him be accursed and exterminated.

The Jesuit Oath Exposed

<http://www.ianpaisley.org/article.asp?jesuit>

"Go ye, then, into all the world and take possession of all lands in the name of the Pope. He who will not accept him as the Vicar of Jesus and his Vice-Regent on earth, let him be accursed and exterminated."

Professor Arthur Noble

[The following is the text of the Jesuit Extreme Oath of Induction as recorded in the Journals of the 62nd Congress, 3rd Session, of the United States Congressional Record (House Calendar No. 397, Report No. 1523, 15 February, 1913, pp. 3215-3216), from which it was subsequently torn out. The Oath is also quoted by Charles Didier in his book Subterranean Rome (New York, 1843), translated from the French original. Dr. Alberto Rivera, who escaped from the Jesuit Order in 1967, confirms that the induction ceremony and the text of the Jesuit Oath which he took were identical to what we have cited below. – A. N.]

When a Jesuit of the minor rank is to be elevated to command, he is conducted into the Chapel of the Convent of the Order, where there are only three others present, the principal or Superior standing in front of the altar. On either side stands a monk, one of whom holds a banner of yellow and white, which are the Papal colours, and the other a black banner with a dagger and red cross above a skull and crossbones, with the word INRI, and below them the words IUSTUM NECAR REGES IMPIUS. The meaning of which is: It is just to exterminate or annihilate impious or heretical Kings, Governments, or Rulers.

Upon the floor is a red cross at which the postulant or candidate kneels. The Superior hands him a small black crucifix, which he takes in his left hand and presses to his heart, and the Superior at the same time presents to him a dagger, which he grasps by the blade and holds the point against his heart, the Superior still holding it by the hilt, and thus addresses the postulant:

(The Superior speaks:)

My son, heretofore you have been taught to act the dissembler: among Roman Catholics to be a Roman Catholic, and to be a spy even among your own brethren; to believe no man, to trust no man. Among the Reformers, to be a Reformer; among the Huguenots, to be a Huguenot; among the Calvinists, to be a Calvinist; among other Protestants, generally to be a Protestant; and obtaining their confidence, to seek even to preach from their pulpits, and to denounce with all the vehemence in your nature our Holy Religion and the Pope; and even to descend so low as to become a Jew among Jews, that you might be enabled to gather together all information for the benefit of your Order as a faithful soldier of the Pope. Therefore, to fit yourself for your work and make your own salvation sure, you will, in addition to your former oath of obedience to your order and allegiance to the Pope, repeat after me:

(Text of the Oath:)

I _____, now in the presence of Almighty God, the blessed Virgin Mary, the blessed St. John the Baptist, the Holy Apostles, St. Peter and St. Paul, and all the saints, sacred host of Heaven, and to you, my Ghostly Father, the superior general of the Society of Jesus, founded by St. Ignatius Loyola, in the pontification of Paul the Third, and continued to the present, do by the womb of the Virgin, the matrix of God, and the rod of Jesus Christ, declare and swear that His Holiness, the Pope, is Christ's Vice-Regent and is the true and only head of the Catholic or Universal Church throughout the earth; and that by the virtue of the keys of binding and loosing given to His Holiness by my Saviour, Jesus Christ, he hath power to depose heretical Kings, Princes, States, Commonwealths, and Governments, and they may be safely destroyed. Therefore to the utmost of my power I will defend this doctrine and His Holiness's right and custom against all usurpers of the heretical or Protestant authority whatever, especially the Lutheran Church of Germany, Holland, Denmark, Sweden and Norway, and the now pretended authority and Churches of England and Scotland, and the branches of same now established in Ireland and on the continent of America and elsewhere and all adherents in regard that they may be usurped and heretical, opposing the sacred Mother Church of Rome. I do now denounce and disown any allegiance as due to any heretical king, prince or State, named Protestant or Liberal, or obedience to any of their laws, magistrates or officers. I do further declare the doctrine of the Churches of England and Scotland of the Calvinists, Huguenots, and others of the name of Protestants or Masons to be damnable, and they themselves to be damned who will not forsake the same. I do further declare that I will help, assist, and advise all or any of His Holiness's agents, in any place where I should be, in Switzerland, Germany, Holland, Ireland or America, or in any other kingdom or territory I shall come to, and do my utmost to extirpate the heretical Protestant or Masonic doctrines and to destroy all their pretended powers, legal or otherwise. I do further promise and declare that, notwithstanding, I am dispensed with to assume any religion heretical for the propagation of the Mother Church's interest; to keep secret and private all her agents' counsels from time to time, as they entrust me, and not to divulge, directly or indirectly, by word, writing or circumstances whatever; but to execute all that should be proposed, given in charge, or discovered unto me by you, my Ghostly Father, or any of this sacred order. That I will go to any part of the world whithersoever I may be sent, to the frozen regions north, jungles of India, to the centres of civilisation of Europe, or to the wild haunts of the barbarous savages of America without murmuring or repining, and will be submissive in all things, whatsoever is communicated to me. I do further promise and declare that I will, when opportunity presents, make and wage relentless war, secretly and openly, against all heretics, Protestants and Masons, as I am directed to do, to extirpate them from the face of the whole earth; and that I will spare neither age, sex nor condition, and that I will hang, burn, waste, boil, flay, strangle, and bury alive these infamous heretics; rip up the stomachs and wombs of their women, and crush their infants' heads against the walls in order to annihilate their execrable race. That when the same cannot be done openly I will secretly use the poisonous cup, the strangulation cord, the steel of the poniard, or the leaden bullet, regardless of the honour, rank, dignity or authority of the persons, whatever may be their condition in life, either public or private, as I at any time may be directed so to do by any agents of the Pope or Superior of the Brotherhood of the Holy Father of the Society of Jesus. In confirmation of which I hereby dedicate my life, soul, and all corporal powers, and with the dagger which I now receive I will subscribe my name written in my blood in testimony thereof; and should I prove false, or weaken in my determination, may my brethren and fellow soldiers of the militia of the Pope cut off my hands and feet and my throat from ear to ear, my belly be opened and sulphur burned therein with all the punishment that can be inflicted upon me on earth, and my soul shall be tortured by demons in eternal hell forever. That I will in voting always vote for a Knight of Columbus in preference to a Protestant, especially a Mason, and that I will leave my party so to do; that if two Catholics are on the ticket I will satisfy myself which is the better supporter of Mother Church and vote accordingly. That I will not deal with or employ a Protestant if in my power to deal with or employ a Catholic. That I will place Catholic girls in Protestant families that a weekly report may be made of the inner movements of the heretics. That I will provide myself with arms and ammunition that I may be in readiness when the word is passed, or I am commanded to defend the Church either as an individual or with the militia of the Pope. All of which I, _____, do swear by the blessed Trinity and blessed sacrament which I am now to receive to perform and on part to keep this my oath. In testimony hereof, I take this most holy and blessed sacrament of the Eucharist and witness the same further with my name written with the point of this dagger dipped in my own blood and seal in the face of this holy sacrament.

(He receives the wafer from the Superior and writes his name with the point of his dagger dipped in his own blood taken from over his heart.)

(Superior speaks:)

*You will now rise to your feet and I will instruct you in the Catechism necessary to make yourself known to any member of the Society of Jesus belonging to this rank. In the first place, you, as a Brother Jesuit, will with another mutually make the ordinary sign of the cross as any ordinary Roman Catholic would; then one crosses his wrists, the palms of his hands open, and the other in answer crosses his feet, one above the other; the first points with forefinger of the right hand to the centre of the palm of the left, the other with the forefinger of the left hand points to the centre of the palm of the right; the first then with his right hand makes a circle around his head, touching it; the other then with the forefinger of his left hand touches the left side of his body just below his heart; the first then with his right hand draws it across the throat of the other, and the latter then with a dagger down the stomach and abdomen of the first. The first then says lustum; and the other answers Necar; the first Reges; the other answers Impious. The first will then present a small piece of paper folded in a peculiar manner, four times, which the other will cut longitudinally and on opening the name Jesu will be found written upon the head and arms of a cross three times. You will then give and receive with him the following questions and answers:*

From whither do you come? Answer: The Holy faith.

Whom do you serve? Answer: The Holy Father at Rome, the Pope, and the Roman Catholic Church Universal throughout the world.

Who commands you? Answer: The Successor of St. Ignatius Loyola, the founder of the Society of Jesus or the Soldiers of Jesus Christ.

Who received you? Answer: A venerable man in white hair.

How? Answer: With a naked dagger, I kneeling upon the cross beneath the banners of the Pope and of our sacred order.

Did you take an oath? Answer: I did, to destroy heretics and their governments and rulers, and to spare neither age, nor sex, nor condition; to be as a corpse without any opinion or will of my own, but to implicitly obey my Superiors in all things without hesitation or murmuring.

Will you do that? Answer: I will.

How do you travel? Answer: In the bark of Peter the fisherman.

Whither do you travel? Answer: To the four quarters of the globe.

For what purpose? Answer: To obey the orders of my General and Superiors and execute the will of the Pope and faithfully fulfil the conditions of my oaths.

Go ye, then, into all the world and take possession of all lands in the name of the Pope. He who will not accept him as the Vicar of Jesus and his Vice-Regent on earth, let him be accursed and exterminated.

Title: Arafat and the Jesuits

CRAIG-OXLEY - September 11, 2005 12:01 AM (GMT)

I believe that Masonic Arafat, like Masonic JP II, was poisoned by his physicians as both had served their purposes and it was time for the changing of the guard. The Order often poisons their tools even after a life of faithful service: CIA Director SMOM William Casey is a prime example as he was murdered at the Order's Georgetown Hospital in Washington.

Further, Arafat, like JP II, was a sexually wicked man. He may well have contracted AIDS and was helped into hell by the benevolent "poison cup."

I trust this is helpful.

By the way, would you please resend me the documentation on the good administration of President Warren Harding. I now can prove the Order poisoned him via his doctor, "Doc" Sawyer. Any help would be appreciated.

Sincerely in Faith,

Brother Eric

Truthseeker01 - June 10, 2007 06:37 AM (GMT)

What is meant by the "Poison Cup" I heard while watching VA III Phelps use the term quite a bit.

AVBibleBeliever - June 10, 2007 08:23 AM (GMT)

The poisoned cup is mentioned in the Jesuit Extreme Oath of Induction taken by all Jesuits professed of the Fourth Vow-the Vatican Assassins-in which they swear total unconditional obedience to the Black Pope the Superior Father General of the Society of Jesus (Jesuits) to do whatever he asks, to become "perinde ac cadaver" (like a corpse) ready to be galvanized at the command of the Black Pope to do anything like commit an assassination, foment a war, kill anyone who gets in the way of the goals of the Order ad majorem dei gloriam in the Vatican or even sacrifice themselves (as was the case with the Titanic with Captain John Smith and the co-captain who were under oath and obeyed the order to bring it down. They were briefed by Jesuit Francis Browne who was ordered to get off that ship by his provincial which he did after he took pictures of the doomed passengers and their targets being disobedient Jewish Freemason John Jacob Astor and other Jewish bankers like Benjamin Guggenheim and Isador Strauss who did not want to go along with the creation of the Federal Reserve Bank so they perished in the sinking of Titanic) if it furthers the ends they seek to accomplish. For them the ends justifies the means.

It says "I furthermore promise and declare that I will, when opportunity present, make and wage relentless war, secretly or openly, against all heretics, Protestants and Liberals, as I am directed to do, to extirpate and exterminate them from the face of the whole earth; and that I will spare neither age, sex or condition; and that I will hang, waste, boil, flay, strangle and bury alive these infamous heretics, rip up the stomachs and wombs of their women and crush their infants' heads against the walls, in order to annihilate forever their execrable race. That when the same cannot be done openly, I will secretly use the poisoned cup, the strangulating cord, the steel of the poniard or the leaden bullet, regardless of the honor, rank, dignity, or authority of the person or persons, whatever may be their condition in life, either public or private, as I at any time may be directed so to do by any agent of the Pope or Superior of the Brotherhood of the Holy Faith, of the Society of Jesus."

You can read it in its entirety here. <http://www.reformation.org/oath.html>

Hope this helps.

Title: SMOM controlled and Le Cercle Member GEORGE SOROS

Description: Woody Harrelson handle Doreen Bishop

CRAIG-OXLEY - June 6, 2007 12:28 AM (GMT)

What is George Soros a member of? LE CERCLE! Who controls Le Cercle? The SOVEREIGN MILITARY ORDER OF MALTA through its CIA. Study his links to British Intelligence, British Secret Air Service and Prince Phillip. Remember folks the real controllers of Hollywood are the SMOM and Mafiosi and its always been this way. -Craig

George Soros and Woody Harrelson

Marsha and group members, It is true that I called Marsha at home to inform her of the ugly reality of that piece of Khazar Garbage named George Soros. He has over 100 Foundations that fund all manner of social programs that change the fabric of societies world wide and not hardly at all for the benefit of the targeted groups but ALWAYS for the benefit of himself. I became involved with a woman here in Denver back in August of 1998. That came about because I was looking for Stew Webb to return from Las Vegas with money that he owed me for numerous phone calls that he made from my business phone in the previous 6 months. He had left Denver late July 1998 ostensibly to pick up a $20,000 check that was originally to be FED EXed to my business. The plan changed and he left for Vegas to get that check there;he was supposed to be back in 3-4 days. About 7-8 days later,I start making phone calls to find out why he was not back. Those calls I placed to Al Martin (Alexander Martin,former ONI/CIA player in Iran Contra(Operation Black Eagle)who was in the direct employ of Oliver North as a bean counter(that's accountant). I had had numerous and lengthy conversations with him because of being put in contact with him by Webb. I soon came to realize that he was a disinfo agent(my conversations included Project Paperclip which he tried to discredit-that was just one clue). After placing several calls to him to get Webbs' whereabouts, he became frustrated(of course he knew all along where that piece of shit Webb was) and told me about a woman in Denver who would know. That woman was Doreen Bishop-a former Mouseketeer who was born and raised in Hollywood and whose 1st cousin owns and controls the very powerful William Morris Agency headquartered in Hollywood; he was the bagman that paid off Oliver North $20 million for his lying performance before Congress at the Skull&Bones Kerry Iran Contra Hearings. Doreen and I immediately hit it off because of the subject matter that I was familiar with and because of what she told me in our first 2 or 3 conversations. I was at that time reading the Montauk series of books(by Peter Moon) and also Fritz Springmeier/Cisco Wheeler books on Illuminati Monarch Mind Control. DAMN! Doreen was out of those books with some of the things that she told me-in a very dissociative manner. One of the big things she told me was her association with George Soros and Woody Harrelson and also Mark Culverhouse AND Laurence Rockefeller in the Medical Marijuana and Hemp(paper,fuel,fiber)initiatives. Soros has been funding the legalization of ALL drugs besides Marijuana and had been involved with Doreen Bishop for about 15 years prior to she and I being introduced-because of Stew Webb. Doreen and I had talked on the phone for about 4 months before we finally met at the Preparedness Expo in Denver in Dec 1998 at the booth of Terry Reed, former CIA asset(his book,"COMPROMISED-How the Whitehouse Was Co-opted By the CIA" caused a huge furor), brought there by her separated husband specifically to meet me. I started to visit her at her home the following January. By that time, my name had circulated back to the people in Hollywood because of all the trouble that they had to start damage control on-I had started many fires with the info I was giving Doreen and also the dots that I was connecting to inform her of circumstances in her life from the time she was a little girl. All this trouble could NOT have been created by just one guy "THEY" reasoned, it HAD to be several people so I was dubbed "The Denver Group". Doreen had told me that she was a trained SOMNAMBULIST, one that could be hypnotized, programed with info, brought back to "normal" state, then taken to any location, to the person to receive that info, re-hynotized, downloaded, then brought TOTALLY back to "normal"-ALL without her knowledge of what had happened. After those sessions, Doreen would be rewarded with a trip or some other perk to make her happy and compliant. One of Doreens' controllers and one who has used her for this is GEORGE SOROS. When Doreen and I first tried to become intimate for the first time, late Feb 1999, at her home, an unusual and startling occurrence happened. We were on her bed and partly undressed and talking about whether or not to use "protection" since her immune system is compromised from her being a colon cancer survivor-she finally said "To hell with it! Let's just do it!". At that instant, the phone rang in the living room and she jumped off bed to answer. Her face became beet red with anger and she started yelling "You fucker! You fucking Cossack! You can't do this to me! I am NOT a WHORE. I am NOT a slut, you son of a bitch". THAT name Cossack I knew from our talks in the previous months. That was her name for SOROS. He was calling from his home in Scottsdale-he had been listening to us talk on her bed and he was listening in REAL TIME. Talk about Coitus Interruptus! We dressed and went into the den to light up a joint and discuss what had just happened. About 15 minutes later, the phone rings again. This time it was Woody Harrelson who was saying "Doreeeen! What are you doing!? Please don't be a bad girl and get George mad at you-now behave"! I had my head next to the phone so I heard this very clearly. Soros, I KNOW FOR SURE, has investigated me and does know what kind of threat I am. His name appears in all the dictionaries used by the Echelon System; just keep on using his name in conversations on the phone and you will very soon have those that listen for better service and quality on your line-in REAL TIME-I KID YOU NOT! I will write more about this in a while, perhaps more when I see some response to this. Stew Webb(Lithium Stewwie), Al Martin, Barbara Hartwell, Doreen Bishop, many, many others(I have ALL the names) will be having fits real soon because of what I am preparing for them; THEY set me up to be busted and they will pay for what was done to me-THAT IS A PROMISE!!!!

For instance you can't find those old books about the jesuits, wich are to find here as pdf, in german, although one of them was written in vienna.

A lot of evil starts with burning books, even if you don't like what's in it. And Rome was the most busy doing it (Alexandria, all of sources from atztecs, inkas...), looks like they tried to monopolize knowledge troughout the centuries.

If you like board games, you could join one of my favourite sites.. I could help getting into it and one match lasts no longer than 1 1/2 to 2 hours.

It's far better than the above for sure and for free, you just need java.

Title: Ron "Temporal Coadjutor" Paul is a fake

CRAIG-OXLEY - May 5, 2007 10:29 PM (GMT)

I call Ron Paul a fake and a traitor because of his compromising and cowardly stand with regard to the federal government. Aaron Rousso's interview of him in From Freedom to Fascism furthers this conclusion. Instead of resigning as a Congressman over the Federal Reserve Fraud, the theft of our gold and silver coins and the Income Tax Fraud, he still files his tax returns and votes for Congress to accept money from the Federal Reserve at the beginning of every fiscal year.

Ron Paul should resign from Congress and publicly state that the State of Texas is the slave of the Federal Reserve System---and thus the Papacy. He should advocate secession of the State of Texas and work diligently to that end. He stands by and watches the alien Mexican invaders swarm into Texas thus driving the Whites to the extreme of right wing fascism beginning with the "Minutemen." If Ron Paul was really an enemy of the system he purports to resist he would have been silenced or murdered years ago---like Senator Paul Wellstone.

No, Ron Paul is one of them.

Sincerely in Faith,

Brother Eric

Controlled opposition I guess...I did think it was odd how Alex Jones endorses him, and Dr. Paul's been on Jones' show.

Guess politics is going to be more or less a spectator sport for me from now on...you think you have someone who's actually a patriot...oh well.

Mark Brewer - May 6, 2007 04:52 AM (GMT)

The Minutemen are not, "the extreme of right wing fascism" and they are made up of all different nationalities. Jim Gilchrist was once a Catholic but left the church over its support of illegal aliens. He has removed the white supremacists who have tried to infiltrate his organization and has actually slowed down the amount of illegals entering the country. That is why the government hates him.

Alexandra - May 6, 2007 11:58 AM (GMT)

I agree there--the Minutemen are simply doing the job that the government won't do! From what I understand, all they're doing is sitting there with binoculars and a phone and reporting people illegally crossing the border.

Daniel - May 6, 2007 04:02 PM (GMT)

I had my suspicions about Ron Paul due to his lack of knowledge on the Gold and Silver markets. He's been claiming that we can all prevent the crash and that the money will just come from somewhere. Come from where? His FED knowledge is a joke and even if he were to step into office, the evil ones might cause the crash early just to make him look bad.

Personally, I think he is scared and knows that he is controlled. He does not have the charisma or the intellect to be a leader. Perhaps he remains in office for several reasons, one of which may include the fact that he knows that he may be corrupt but not totally evil like the majority of them and he figures he can do a little better than they.

Eric Jon Phelps isn't one of them and anyone who says so is a complete liar. At one time you hardly seen anything of Eric's work highlighted anywhere. It wasn't till a few good people helped spread the truth around more and highlight these damn Jesuits properly that the Temporal Coadjuting Superstars of Shortwave had any wishes to present Phelps on their shows. They do this only to make themselves look like their opposites when infact their opposames in most cases. You do not see Phelps on the likes of the Alex Jones show and so forth. Only a few small shows broadcast him. Like I say this is only down to the fact that more people have been made aware of the Society of Jesus. Once again an Illusion has to come forth to help try to show opposition from these shows.

Eric Phelps did have one incidence with the 'Cup of Borgia' as he's spoke of in the past. Like what was said above it may take many years, it may not. They may try to get him on the IRS again who knows. One things for sure he is NOT Knights of Malta and company. Eric Phelps connects more dots than anyone else. This is why now-controlled Jordan Maxwell basically leaves the Jesuit information to Eric Phelps as Maxwell's been warned and he is compromised I believe. I believe Fritz Springmeier was not compromisable and what probably motivated his false imprisonment is his de-programming of SMOM Mind Control victims. That would be a serious no no still punishable with extermination or imprisonment.

The Jesuits know their power in the World. They know how little people care for truth, politics and religion. They made it this way with social engineering through subversion. They know that its unlikely any serious challenge would ever occur to them now they have cemented their control across the board. So what the hell let Phelps have his piddly small mentions in small circles. One things for certain you will not see Eric Phelps on mainstream TV like you've see coadjutor Alex Jones who makes a mockery in reality of this whole real truth movement. How dare anyone speak bad of Eric Phelps in this way. One of few good, honest men alive today.

QUOTE

Show me his connections to the Jesuits Phelps not false accusations on how hes not doing enough! As far as I see Paul and Gore are the only 2 not blantly connected to the bush-clinton SIS crime syndacyte.

Give me strength! Does anyone out there listen/read and understand clearly whats going on? Eric Jon Phelps is absolutely correct about Ron Paul. Ron Paul in reality simply would not be in the Senate if British Intelligence weren't controlling him and/or have him blackmailed. Regardless of that, Ron Paul would never, ever become anywhere near President. For start of, theres the Bloodline domination within the Position. You also have to be chosen by the Royal Institute of International Affairs. This as Phelps said will most likely be Senator John McCain, which I also said on the Galloway show much to his amazement. He also believes Rudy Guilani (Closet homosexual Knight of Malta) may stand a chance and very much so I believe too.

We have to get real about these controlled opposames. Al Gore JR is CONTROLLED, I've known that, you know that. The only thing is that theres a divide between them and the Bush clique. In the reality of things BIG DEAL! Whilst Bush works hard with the actual bully boying of the 14th Amendment "Holy Roman" Empire by invading and do the harder work. Gore does exactly the same but he promotes the Global Warming/Co2 bunkum following strict SMOM guidelines spoke of within the Iron Mountain Report in order to help usher in World Governance. Who will Govern this World? The evidence if you understand and see clearly is the VATICAN! I recognise in fighting and I recognise opposames.

Do you honestly think that SIS have no controls over Gore? British SIS rule roost over the United States in intelligence under the SOVEREIGN MILITARY ORDER OF MALTA the same group Gore is ruled by and all these other cretins wether it be Queen Guelph Elizabeth II, Egan or King Juan Carlos. Wake up and see the bigger picture. You will notice Phelps speak of this intelligence crowd and how at the bottom they fight somewhat and at the time they are ONE!!!! This is the basic teaching within Conspiracy that the top of these systems they are ONE!!!!

So how dare you claim Phelps has false accusations, if you understood clearer you would see the foolishness of your words. What has Ron Paul done exactly? NOTHING! Everything Phelps said is absolutely true. Everything Phelps said about unfortunate Senator Paul Wellstone was true. If anyone is a true opposite within their system they're removed wether smear, imprisonment or DEATH! Right now these Ron Pauls are working in order to forment agitation amongst the populace which the Vatican will once again steer and direct in accordance. Its like when Eric speaks of all these Tax Protesting highlighters coming out the woodwork. Many of them are fake and posting semi-truths which land you in a mess. What does this do? It helps once again weed out the awakening and dissidents. Then what? These people get angry and decide I wont go along either. Then what? The real punishment starts when they dont know what their doing through disinformation. Whats that? Their homes and livelihoods get taken from them! So what you have is DISSIDENT HIGHLIGHTING AND PUNISHMENT THROUGH THEIR OWN INITIATING. Bingo the Order has you!

HOW DARE THEY! THOSE LONG ROBED THIEVES, TYRANTS, MURDERERS AND POPISH PERSONS....

Seems like when people wake up they're induced to get angry at the wrong group of people. I don't think they could care less if you bash Bush so long as you don't know who's REALLY behind everything.

It's like people are becoming upset at the government (rightly so to a point--because they've sold out), but they need to open the curtain and see who's standing behind it. Our government being full of sell-outs and traitors isn't a cause--it's a SYMPTOM, with the DISEASE being the Jesuit Order and ultimately SATAN, Kolvenbach's master.

Daniel - May 6, 2007 05:51 PM (GMT)

Look at it this way folks:

Aurora's point may not be an insult to Brother Phelps as much it is the feeling of mistrust that many people have today. I have seen the idea pushed also, that all people who are dead patriots MUST not have been on the payroll also, which is not necessarily the case either. Both are extremist ways of thinking.

If the only time we trust someone is when they are dead, then we will have no true patriots left alive today. There are many who speak out and many degrees of Karma. Many are not dead, in fact some have never been directly threatened, or as of yet have not. If we all thought like this then my God, there would be no progress whatsoever.

If we condemn anyone who is still alive today, and only accept them when they are dead, then we reduce ourselves to the times of old when a rock would be attached to the feet of the 'supposed' witch and thrown in the lake. If the person floated up to the surface of the lake, they were a witch and burned. If they sunk deep down, then they were INNOCENT!!!

Please, let's not ONLY look to trust those who are dead and also let's not condemn ALL those still alive. Whereas those who were murdered are very likely exposing much truth, they could also have been telling half-truths and ONLY murdered for stepping on the wrong toes etc. Their death may be a big SIGN but not necessarily an absolute.

We need to look for truth in all things and truths spoken plainly is what matters. One might argue that the truth should not be heard if it is half-truths. But those who engage in this method of telling half-truths "willingfully" will eventually have to own up to their lies also because most people who are thinking correctly already understand that in order to make a truly informed choice in any matter, we must have all the facts. Pertenant facts that are left out (like ALEX Jones does) will rebound eventually. Half-truths just don't cut it for the person who looks deeper. And I have been myself, critical of several people like Webb and Heneghan but not for merely telling half truths, but also for what I call telling blatant lies.

To the best of his own ability, Brother Eric Phelps has never lied or told half-truths and this is my indicator - not whether he is alive or dead.

Yeah, so true! Bob Chapman has been a little concerned at Paul's lack of Knowledge or understanding of the financial system. But Ron Paul knows that the FED is a cartel, he said so before. He knows America is bankrupt and he knows that a Depression is coming, yet he still maintains that the money will just magically appear and will somehow save the economy.

Now either he knows more than the Vatican Bankers and all the people like Bob Chapman, or he is dead wrong, or worse, he is misleading. I'd still love to see him voted into office though.

Alexandra - May 6, 2007 07:02 PM (GMT)

I'd still prefer Ron Paul over any other candidates in the offing, especially witch Hillary Clinton.

I dunno...I'll probably sit this election out too. Wouldn't even matter.

wolveshater - May 6, 2007 07:57 PM (GMT)

Id much rather see the Satanic Oval office fall into the Atlantic ocean due to a 11.5 Earth Quake emmediatly followed by the rest of Washington DC. Good by to all those masonic symbols, Namely the Washington Masonic monument, which I have no doubt that if the First ever president could arise again he would knock that shit tower down himself, And byby to all those Illuminatti streets in DC around the SATANIC pentagramm building, you all know the place, its that building the 757 never hit on 911. Then we get hold of that little nuclear arsenal we all payed thru the nose and bled for and point those friggen rockets strait towards the SATANIC Vatican and tell them sonsofbitches still on our SOIL to leave pronto cause Im a real Cowboy with a real itchy trigger finger. THERE IS NO WAY IM SUPPORTING THESE TREASONOUS TRAITOROUS POPYRY VANDALS AND THEIVES EVER, I WANT THEM ALL DEAD, I WANT TO NAIL THEM BASTARDS TO THEIR OWN CROSS AND DUMP SOME KEROSENE ON THEIR FEET. I WANT TO GET MY BRANDING IRON RED HOT AND SCORCH THEIR ASSES. ITS GAME OVER TIME, THIS IS A REAL F---KEN DEAL, NOT THE SAME OLD GAME. Never has these political hacks ever done their damm job. Like Eric says in chapter 29 WHERE THE F----K Are the folks at that will stand up and fight these vermin. What the hell do they got to do us before we have enough, bust our doors down and dump gas on us, is that what we are waiting for, Shit. F---K Ron Paul. F---K this hi-jacked Masonic government, NEVER LOOK TO IT AGAIN, its for fools only.

Mongo - May 6, 2007 09:13 PM (GMT)

I think we all know that they are going to put whoever they want into office, and there isnt much if anything we can do about it. We must continue spreading the word on the Satanic Vatican and her Jesuits and be ready for our King when He comes! Amen.... Which I believe is going to be Very Soon.

I would like to thank all the people on this site especially Craig for all this soul saving information that is posted here. If there is anything I can do for you guys just let me know.

Take Care and God Bless, you people hand out that term like fucking candy, and it only discredits yourself

Yeah, but Eric made a good point. why hasn't he been 'Wellstoned' ? Also how he votes along with the rest of the senate on the fed reserve every year. Something aint right. Alex Jones could just be jumping on the bandwagon because that's his forte'. He is a 'patriot' like Ron Paul is. I don't trust anyone running but like Alexandra said, I would rather have him in there than any of the others.

wolvshater - May 6, 2007 11:24 PM (GMT)

Alex Jones is a Fraud that would not make a pimple on the ass of a true Patriot. The American government was sabotaged in 1868 with the 14th Amendment, Then in 1900 traitor Teddy Roosevelt pushed us over the brink of no return with creation of the Orders massive Military Industrial complex for the Jesuits Second thirty years war, Roosevelt had a statue of Albert Pike placed in Washington DC as well. This Government is an enemy to humankind and freedom, It is the filth of Roman civil law from sea to shining sea. it is an abortion version of what the founders true intent was for the Peoples of this land, it has authorized the deaths of untold millions worldwide, It has poisoned the minds of the citizens for 140 years, it has poisoned the food and water supply, it has planned our demise and strives towards that goal, open your eyes and recognize the fourth reich being polished and tuned for the final take over of this land, and the annihilation of the last breath of freedom, which these traiters hate. Ron Paul is a distraction nothing more, A teaser at best.

Edgar - May 7, 2007 12:33 AM (GMT)

thats why I said Alex is a Patriot (in quotes). because thats what they call themselves. I call him the biggest traitor going. Or not even. he cant be a traitor when he was always a vatican jesuit plant. you misunderstood my post.

(thats ok, i might not have made myself clear) wolvshater - May 7, 2007 01:34 AM (GMT)

Ron Paul may not have done anything to us that is visible at present, Im researching his voteing records now at the Congressional Globes and seeing what hes been up to. And we must research what he has done for Texans. then you can make a decision as to his true self, Ive dealt with these people over the years and they are all dirty. Helen Chenoweth was up in Congress four years and she had enough of it and left, She told me it is so corrupt it sickened her. She also told me she Dare not bring up the 16th amendment fraud as she feared them so bad. I Know Ron Paul is aware that the 13th thru 17th Amendments were never Ratified legally. They all know this.

I find it incredible that you say Matt that Eric Phelps dosent prove his case with the Vatican and all the Jesuits in history when in fact he does just that. Even the courts records concerning Lincolns assassination show this to be true, The 13 support books also prove phelps is aiming directly at the true enemy, and The Secret history of the Jesuits also supports the history as well. I have studied the Constitution and Communism for years, and fully understand the Magna Carta And Common laws that the Vatican hates, And I understand and HATE their dammed Roman Civil law that is 100% Communism. That also proves Phelps case. Rome is about slavery, Catholicism is slavery as well, and 100% false dogma nonsense.

RON PAUL INTERVIEW BY ALEX JONES

wolveshater - May 7, 2007 01:31 PM (GMT)

I see Matt, somehow I knew I was reading that wrong. Republican Congressman George Hansen went after the Federal reserve and the IRS with bills and speeches and even wrote a book," To Harass our people" The IRS and Government abuse of power. Suddenly he was a bad check writer and committer of fraud, and was put in prison where he died. Still even Congressman Hansen was not 100% strait forward about the 16th amendment fraud or the illegal phoney insurance script we all call money, the federal reserve is the creator of that script, they own it and every thing it purchases and they own us. when one of these Congressman starts addmitting that fact I will pay attention, Ron Paul knows the truth, Has he said as much. NOPE. We can not keep this Satanic Masonic monster in check, not ever.

How many here have seen a Certificate of title for your vehicle once you own it, Have you ever wondered where the real title is, cause the Certificate is not it, guess why, you bought that car with federal reserve insurance script, The States are keeping the real title to their car real safe from you. When Ron Paul starts addmitting that little white lie, I will pat attention. We can not except nothing less than 100% truth, and a Satanic Masonic Government can only give us 100% lies. It will never be fixed by being passive, impossible. You guys can keep voting and hoping, Ive watched this bullshit for 40 years, My first book was Lanes, Rush to judgement in 66, Ive seen several Ron Pauls. They either are fake or soon to be dead, I even suspect they like Paul are being instructed to carry on in this fashion, and unknown to Paul he will get sacrificed as a lesson to others when the evil bastards decide they need another example. Dont fall for this age old trick.

wolveshater - May 7, 2007 02:07 PM (GMT)

I find it strange that Ron Paul fails to mention the original Bills introduced to Congress and the Jekyl Island Documents which give the Congress a way out of this Federal reserve merger with the buy out option put in place upon the original arguements and final agreements 94 years ago, disolving the Fed and all its holds on America. I know Ron is aware of it. He should be asking foir this, and for damages to our Nation, such as several of a Brave WW1 and WWII war dead, then there is Korea, Veitnam, their fake Cold War, the Gulf War, And Iraqi Freedom, HAR HAR HAR. All the Drug deaths created by this banking cartel over the counter, and under the counter drugs. the FDA failures of mass poisonings and deaths, All the suicides from IRS pressure for the last 70 years. the staged airlines crashes and murders, namely TWA 800, and the Egyptian flight for starters. I guess that about summs up the 450 million dollar buy back option, any body got some real money, I know the federal reserve banking cartel will not except their play money for the buy back, they only want gold. after all the way they will see it they murdered all our country men and women fair and square. Paul is a stooge.

Alexandra - May 8, 2007 12:24 PM (GMT)

I think the thing is, it sounds way too good to be true.

I'm on the fence with this one now...I'm just going to wait and see.

wolveshater - May 8, 2007 01:53 PM (GMT)

Abolish the original Contracts of the federal reserve means the Criminals get off scott free. The 16th Amendment is not nor ever was a LAW, how do you repeal a non-LAW. Repealing the fake amendment continues the fakery, and justifies the stolen Americans funds all the more. Where does Ron Paul offer to repeal the 14th amendment and return my Sovereignty to me, and give me back my State powers stolen from me in 1868. He dosent. Where has Ron Paul offered to throw out the 13th thru all the phoney Amendments and return us to the original 12 Amendments that supply us with all the freedoms we ever needed. He dosent. He offers to polish up this grundgy government and get it to back off at best. There is no nice Communism system period, Romanism is Communism. period. Where does Ron Paul offer to throw out this Communist Roman civil law, he dosent. He offers to rework it to a softer version. Bring me a Confederated Republic and Common Law by returning this American Continent to the original 12

Amendments there by returning true freedom and Sovereignty to me as a real Person. Not an offer of a cleaned up cage and a cheaper illegal tax cut. Tell me to research more thats Laughable.

John, I urge you to dig deeper and take a closer look at Paul-He is a trojan horse, just like Jones who promotes him. He talks big on Jones's show and then goes up to D.C. and kisses Jesuit hindquarters. Ron Paul is knowingly working inside a corrupt government-if he were an America First patriot he would not be working with co-adjutor Jones, and showing respect and deference for his hopelessly corrupt colleagues in the house. His job is to soak up any real opposition and give them false hopes of change, and he is good at it. Have you ever seen Jones promote anyone who will really get to the heart of the American problem, which is Rome on the Potomac- by naming the Vatican as the source of our troubles? Has Paul ever taken aim at Rome one time? Being in D.C. for as long as he has been, he knows who runs the show, but has told no one. That is why they are letting him participate in the little dog and pony show election, the outcome of which has been determined already. What more could you want? When Paul calls for treason trials of Bush, Cheney, Rice, and calls for expulsion of the Vatican ambassador, then I'll believe him. When Paul advocates the abolition of the Federal Reserve Bank on the floor of the House, names the Jesuits and Catholics as the cause of the illegal immigration tsunami, calls the Iraq war a Papal Crusade, then I will believe he is an America first guy. Not that this is important, but is the Ron Paul thread locked or otherwise being moderated in ways that threads here are not normally moderated? I would have put this post there, but the forum is not displaying the normal "reply" option in order to reply to an existing thread.

The last reply from Craig seems to be a copy of an email exchange and is signed "NCT".

Who or what is NCT? I've never seen Eric sign an email like that, so I'm wondering who that reply was from.

On a related note, frequently there are what appears to be copies of email exchanges (between various people) copied into threads here. Im just curious, how does one (like Craig) come by these email exchanges? Are they publicly avialble somewhere, or are these from "insider" sources?

Ron Paul himself is the evidence, The Evidence is The Constitution of this Republic, Namely the 14th Amendment, The Evidence is 13 thru 17 Were never Ratified, EVER. The Evidence is Citizen ship, versus Sovereignty. Freedom versus Slavery, Had you done your Constitutional research you would know whats wrong with all these politicians. They all know the truth about history, and the Founders true intent and purpose of the document, Including Ron Paul. He has played the good little Roman soldier amongst the bad Roman Soldiers, We will never be free in this system of government under Roman civil law, its Communism. I prefer a Confederated Republic and a Common Law system of freedom. I have written hundreds of letters to our Congressmen, I have served 12 years in this military, I have served 33 months in federal prison for fighting the government as a Constitutional Patriot and Tax protester. I have had inventions that could make your vehicle run 350 miles on one gallon of fuel stolen from me under threat of death. I have studied the Constitution for 30 years. I will never support this enemy tyrant stealing my country and blinding its people ever again, Not even When they look or sound pretty Like Ron Paul. The truth and Evidence is right in front of you. When has Ron Paul ever came out and stated the Facts, NEVER ONCE, He continues the FRAUD. Im a walking dead man, Ive been writing to the State Senators for years, Burning down buildings will not change minds, Even though I would love to. Assassinations are the acts of Cowards, even as Ive thought of it. I fight them with paper and Pen, I make them give me full Auto machine guns and Silencers because they have to. I call them what they are to their faces in Public, and have done so for years. Im not a Yank, and I do not eat or grow Potatoes. And finally Ive sued magistrate Judges and Civil Court Justices and been paid by their bonding companys for violating my Sovereignty and the Bill of rights while attacking me. Ive stood my ground and registered as a Sovereign in this State and Country as well, By denouncing Roman citizenship, under the jurisdiction of the United States. So tell me Matt what have you done, besides spew bitter filth, and act like the enemy I know so well. Ive also wrote many manuals on the History of American Constitutional Law and Common Law, Versus Roman Civil, Equity And Merchant Law. So people Like you could know the difference. Ive sacrificed over thirty years trying to wake people up to the truth of this illusion. Ronny Pauly is a fraud. And anybody believing in this fake American Government is a traitor right along with it.

Why Does Ron Paul and Alex Jones Hide Vatican And Jesuit Order Evils In NWO?

According to researchers not afraid of satanic retribution, they are fakes and paid propagandists leading people down the wrong rabbit holes.

By Greg Szymanski
May 11, 2007

Rep. Ron Paul (RDL-Tex) like House leader Nancy Pelosi are nothing more than traitors and shills for the Vatican and Jesuit Order, according to researchers and historians not afraid to ruffle feathers inside the hierarchy of the Catholic Church.

Although alternative broadcasters like Alex Jones and others like to tell people that Rep. Paul and several other liberals in the House and Senate can save America from the evils of the New World Order, these fake news broadcasters fail to tell listeners the "other side of story."

And according to these researchers, the "other side of the story" is, of course, the Vatican and Jesuit Order involvement in the takeover of America.

Further, by hiding these Vatican facts from the public, all of the above, including Rep. Paul and the fake broadcasters like Jones are, in fact, working for Vatican interests as well, according to researchers finally pinning the Vatican for its role in the NWO.

To prove this point, many listeners and readers have come to the Arctic Beacon, expressing their concern about censorship on the Alex Jones staged show, saying anytime the dreaded "V" word is mentioned Jones either turns rude and obnoxious to the callers or drops them off the line like a hot potato.

"If you don't believe it," said one Arctic Beacon reader, "try getting on blabber mouth Jones' show if you want to discuss intelligently the Vatican connection to the New World Order. It just doesn't happen and I bet he is paid to keep this message off the air.

And regarding Rep. Paul, he has never addressed the Vatican and Jesuit Order issue and appears to avoid it like the plague.

To prove this point, he only appears on "safe radio shows" in the alternative media and even his office staff refuses to address the Vatican issue, recently laughing in the face of a patriot who called his office trying to get answers.

"I just called Congressman Ron Paul's office today at approximately 4:00pm eastern time on Friday," said Michigan patriot Walt Williams. "An aide answered the phone and I asked him many questions. The aide claimed that Paul was not in his office.

"I then asked his aide about Paul's knowledge about the Vatican's control over our country and if he was going to do anything about it if he was elected President. He said NO. The aide started laughing about it and finally told me not to call back that they would call me if Paul wanted to talk to me. If any of you think he is a good honest candidate THINK AGAIN.

"He is nothing more than a sidetracking Coadjutor POLITICIAN. If you think I am making this up YOU call him and ask him about his knowledge of ROME. He says he is a Protestant, ask him questions YOURSELF about what he believes from God's Word about the anti-christ in the Vatican. His phone number is: 1-202-225-2831."

In defense of Rep. Paul, one supporter named John had this to say:

"Ron Paul is ahead in every poll in the country. He is a Libertarian that has had to run as a Republican. His voting record is excellent, to say the least. He is a pro GUN, anti-illegal alien, close the borders, shut down the IRS, BATF, get the HELL out of Iraq, America First, Patriot! What more could you want. Stop the North American Union dead in it's tracks!"

In response, patriot Nelson Turner said:

"John, I urge you to dig deeper and take a closer look at Paul-He is a trojan horse, just like Jones who promotes him. He talks big on Jones's show and then goes up to D.C. and kisses Jesuit hindquarters. Ron Paul is knowingly working inside a corrupt government-if he were an America First patriot he would not be working with co-adjutor Jones, and showing respect and deference for his hopelessly corrupt colleagues in the house. His job is to soak up any real opposition and give them false hopes of change, and he is good at it.

"Have you ever seen Jones promote anyone who will really get to the heart of the American problem, which is Rome on the Potomac- by naming the Vatican as the source of our troubles? Has Paul ever taken aim at Rome one time? Being in D.C. for as long as he has been, he knows who runs the show, but has told no one. That is why they are letting him participate in the little dog and pony show election, the outcome of which has been determined already. What more could you want?

"When Paul calls for treason trials of Bush, Cheney, Rice, and calls for expulsion of the Vatican ambassador, then I'll believe him. When Paul advocates the abolition of the Federal Reserve Bank on the floor of the House, names the Jesuits and Catholics as the cause of the illegal immigration tsunami, calls the Iraq war a Papal Crusade, then I will believe he is an America first guy.

"His work is to garner contributors/supporters and help build the lists for the internment/death camps-JUST LIKE CO-ADJUTORS ALEX JONES, JOHN STADTMILLER, JOYCE RILEY, STAN MONTEITH, BUTCH PAUGH, JACK BLOOD, EVERY OTHER HOST ON GCN, REPUBLIC RADIO NETWORK AND MORE. I am going to send this around, and let's see what info other people have on him. Blessings to you brother-N C T."

And inevitably when criticism goes out to the so-called "Holy Grail" of the liberal Congress and corrupt alternative media, hoodwinked truth seekers and readers come to their defense with statements like this coming from one reader:

"Hey Greg, I respect you and your work, but please think when slamming people in the truth movement, you don't want to come off sounding like Daryl BS Smith. Everyone knows the Vatican and the Zionist work hand in hand. But see this is a time in our day when we need to remain if not friends but civil with all our brothers and sisters, and this advice goes for them also. It takes a big man to remain focused on their objective then being sidetracked and focusing all your energy on attacking others in the movement like Daryl Smith. I wish you good luck and hope to hear more from you and Leo Zagami, even though he has been quiet as of late."

Claims like these need to be addressed since information to the Arctic Beacon has recently surfaced, telling just how the fake critics like Bradford Smith, Wing TV and others like them really work.

According to inside sources close to where the covert money flows to the fakes in the alternative media, people like Smith and Wing TV are ordered to criticize "their own" inside men like Jones and Stadtmiller in order to protect their alterative leading front men from real and true criticism from credible patriots.

According to those on the inside of this "control over the alternative." this method of confusion then protects the likes of Jones and Stadtmiller by conveniently placing any criticism to the alternative front men "in the crazy category presented by the likes of Smith and Wing TV.

Editor's Note: Sound confusing? That's exactly what the "fakers" want.

However, don't let them hoodwink you. Ask the tough questions concerning the Vatican and Jesuit Order and demand intelligent answers.

Mr. Speaker, I rise to introduce legislation to restore financial stability to America's economy by abolishing the Federal Reserve. I also ask unanimous consent to insert the attached article by Lew Rockwell, president of the Ludwig Von Mises Institute, which explains the benefits of abolishing the Fed and restoring the gold standard, into the record.

Since the creation of the Federal Reserve, middle and working-class Americans have been victimized by a boom-and-bust monetary policy. In addition, most Americans have suffered a steadily eroding purchasing power because of the Federal Reserve's inflationary policies. This represents a real, if hidden, tax imposed on the American people.

What gold? cloakanddagger has said America has no gold.

Here is a 1999 bill he introduced.

Whether he's sincere or not, he's a carrot being dangled in front of the patriot community.

Let's face reality: the Order is NOT going to let someone in office who would actually go by the Constitution. So it seems to me that whether or not he's a co-adjutor is rather moot.

We do not want the abolition of the Federal Reserve Bank, We want to buy it back under the original agreement for the 450 million. A forced buy back, Then we must arrest every banker on American soil and charge them with Crimes against humanity, every politician, every corporate owner, the Rockefellers, the list is huge. round up the entire gang of deceivers and HANG THEM UNTIL DEAD. for mass murders, around the globe, and across this country. This group of madmen owes every American family 50 million in damages, They also owe the Humans of the World Damages for Wrongful deaths and persecutions. They owe us their own blood, In the early 1980s another Republican Congressman was doing this very same thing as Ron Paul, I knew the man personally, went fishing with him more than once, He knew the truth about the Banks, He never said the right things in public, and his book only talked of a better Roman civil government, just as Ron Paul is doing now. Their all Traitors, deceivers, schills for the Vatican. I will not be fooled ever again, Once a liar always a liar, that is all this Congress has done for 48 years of my life, LIE, STEAL RIGHTS, MAKE RIGHTS PRIVELEDGES. Now they want to imprison us for our thoughts. Dont fall for the Ron and Pony show. :blink:

My biggest beef with Ron Paul is that he claims that the US economy can be saved at this point - it cannot!!! After that, and second to a "Restoration", Ron Paul may be our ONLY hope left for some kind of reform. I cannot deny that seeing Ron Paul as President would be better than what we got now, even if he is controlled. We are in dire times and so I think Ron Paul needs this oppertunity to show what he can do.

Yes, I think Bob Chapman thinks the amount of Gold reserves in America is less than 5000 tons, or was it lbs, I cannot remember now? :blink:

Most of the worlds gold is in the hands of the Jesuit-Banksters. These guys are the ONLY people who can afford to sell or short the gold on the market, like billions of dollars worth each day to try and make gold go down in value. Then they try and buy it all back at cheaper prices. So the gold is owned by the same criminals and they simply pass it all back and forth between each other! And when it all falls apart, these criminals will jump ship first and leave us all left to hold on to useless paper money. Now if these criminals want to hang on to the gold and silver at the end, then so do we!

After them, India, Russia, the Middle-East and industry itself has the rest of the gold.

Many think the Gold standard is a bad idea but I think moving to a gold standard would be a great idea. People's faith is in gold and when the US dollar collapses, owners of gold will make some incredible gains.

Tony Blair plans to convert to Catholicism after stepping down as Prime Minister, it was claimed last night.

The prediction was attributed to Father Michael Seed, a Franciscan friar who has said mass at Downing Street for Mr Blair and his Catholic wife and children.

Father Seed is said to have made the comments to friends at a recent memorial service and told The Times yesterday: "He's been going to Mass every Sunday. He goes on his own when he is abroad, not just when he is with his wife and children."

Sometimes called the "priest to the stars" for his record of converting people including the Duchess of Kent, John Gummer and Ann Widdecombe, the cleric has been visiting Downing Street for five years to celebrate mass for the Blair family.

A spokeswoman for Downing Street said last night: "This story is always circulating in one form or another. The PM remains a member of the Church of England."

Last month, Mrs Blair had a private audience with the Pope amid growing speculation that her husband will take the final steps towards becoming a Roman Catholic.

She also paid tribute to Father Seed during an interfaith ceremony at his order's Westminster base, saying: "There are so many people here who love Father Michael and who have come here tonight as they have come here on many other occasions because of the good man that he is."

She praised his "ability to reach out to all kinds of people, whether it is the homeless on the streets to the people in the highest places in the land, including even in Downing Street".

Blair 'may become a Catholic deacon'

Visit to Vatican to see the Pope as last trip before quitting No10 'is highly significant'

By JONATHAN OLIVER and MARTIN DELGADO - More by this author »

Last updated at 21:20pm on 9th June 2007

http://www.dailymail.co.uk/pages/live/arti...11&in_a_source=

Tony Blair has discussed becoming a Roman Catholic deacon when he quits office.

The revelation comes as he prepares to meet the Pope amid speculation that he will use the audience in the Vatican to announce his conversion.

In his last foreign engagement, just days before he leaves Downing Street for the final time, the Prime Minister will visit Pope Benedict XVI in what officials say will be a "highly significant" personal mission.

Reports that he will convert from the Church of England to the Catholic faith of his wife Cherie have often surfaced during Mr Blair's decade in office.

The claims were supported by revelations that he has already discussed not only converting to Rome, but also taking a formal lay position within the Church.

Deacons are just below priests in the Catholic hierarchy and have the right to administer certain sacraments and wear a special white robe known as a dalmatic.

Mr Blair discussed the idea of his taking such a role with Canon Timothy Russ, priest at the Immaculate Heart of Mary near the Prime Minister's official country residence, Chequers.

The revelation is contained in a new book soon to be serialised by The Mail on Sunday – The Darlings Of Downing Street by Garry O'Connor.

The book states: "Tony expressed his strong desire when he stepped down to become a deacon – and a Roman Catholic deacon at that, confirming the often-speculated belief that he would convert to Roman Catholicism sometime in the future."

Mr Blair is reported as asking his confidant Father Timothy: "Would this be possible?" He was told: "It usually takes two or three years", to which he replied: "The fact that I'm PM, could this make a difference?"

The deacon idea emerged in a conversation a few years ago about Mr Blair's plans after he leaves office.

Father Timothy suggested that taking on a formal role in the Church could give him fresh moral clout when he campaigns on climate change and Africa.

The priest added: "He has a lot of potentiality for good. He is still looking for the meaning in his life."

The Blairs stopped attending Mass at the Immaculate Heart of Mary last year for "security reasons". The relationship with the priest became strained after he spoke out against the Iraq War, accusing the Prime Minister of moral surrender.

It is understood that Mr Blair will be accompanied by Cherie at the audience with the Pope in the papal apartments a week on Saturday. The couple are expected to spend the weekend in Rome before returning for their last 72 hours in Downing Street.

It will be Mr Blair's third visit to the Vatican in four years and a source said: "The fact that he will meet the Holy Father for his last official overseas engagement is highly significant and must raise speculation over his conversion to Catholicism."

The latest revelations follow recent comments by Father Michael Seed, who provides private Masses for the Blairs in their Downing Street flat.

The priest, known for bringing high-profile politicians and aristocrats into the Catholic fold, believes Mr Blair is poised to join the Church of Rome.

Converts are usually welcomed into the Church at the Easter Vigil Mass, held the night before Easter Sunday, but these arrangements are considered flexible.

Admittance to the Church is normally a two-year process. But Mr Blair, because he is already a regular attender, is likely to be fast-tracked.

As a deacon, he could help priests administer Mass, preside over baptisms and read the gospel in Church services. Unlike priests, deacons are not required to take a vow of chastity.

Mr Blair, whose children have been brought up as Catholics, regularly attends Mass at Westminster Cathedral and has become close to the leader of Catholics in England and Wales, Cardinal Cormac Murphy-O'Connor.

The Prime Minister's first meeting with the present Pope took place last June, but he had an audience with Pope John Paul II in February 2003, shortly before the US and British-led invasion of Iraq.

It later emerged that the Prime Minister had received Holy Communion from the Polish-born pontiff at a private service for the Blair family in the Vatican.

Mrs Blair, who is a devout Catholic, had an unexpected meeting with Pope Benedict last year when she was on a speaking engagement in Rome.

In 1996 Cardinal Basil Hume, the late Archbishop of Westminster, asked that the Prime Minister – a member of the Church of England – cease taking Communion at his wife's London church in Islington.

Mr Blair is not believed to have received the sacrament in British Catholic churches since then. However, he is understood to have taken the Eucharist during holidays in Italy where an Anglican church was not easily available.

Mr Blair has always been reluctant to discuss his religious beliefs. Alastair Campbell, his former Downing Street communications chief, famously told one interviewer: "We don't do God."

A Downing Street spokesman said: "It is true that the Prime Minister will visit the Vatican. But I am not going to confirm the date. He will discuss various issues with the Pope including inter-faith issues, the Middle East peace process and international development and aid."

President Bush proved himself less than familiar with Catholic etiquette when, on his way home from the G8 summit in Germany, he stopped for an audience with the Pope in the Vatican.

First he failed to bow before shaking hands, saying: "It's great to be here."

Then officials cringed as he repeatedly called the Pontiff 'sir'. Later, a Vatican spokesman said: "I don't think President Bush meant anything by his use of words. The expression "sir" is widely used in English and especially by Americans – but of course the correct term is "Your Holiness"."

QUOTE

Edward Jenner was an S.J. -- a Slick Jesuit -- who taught the medical world how to use the POISONED NEEDLE. He was the first to associate human diseases with that of animals. This idea paved the way for vaccination which is responsible for the deaths of multiplied millions of people around the world. The idea that humans and animals are related and share the same diseases led to the theory of evolution which is responsible for the spiritual death of multiplied millions more.

In the countryside in Gloucestershire, England, where Jenner lived, the farmers had a legend or superstition that catching cowpox (a disease of cows which was transferred to the cows' udders by unwashed or bleeding hands) would act like a charm or amulet to make them immune from catching the human disease of smallpox.

Medicine man Jenner took this local legend or old wives' tale and turned it into a scientific FACT. He did this by first getting some scientific credentials (M.D., F.R.S. - Fellow of the Royal Society). Next he wrote a book and on the title page only he used the term VARIOLAE VACCINAE. This means in Medieval Latin: smallpox of the cow. Thus associating a human disease with a disease of the cow. There never was such a disease as smallpox of the cow until "Dr." Jenner invented it for the title of his book.

Gates was also funding some special tracking chip technology which was being tested apparently in South Korea. I came across this information when I first woke up and it included the weird designs of all these sports stadiums etc which if you look at them, they look like Antennas or Transmitters.

Bono And Bill Gates Crowned As Time's Persons Of The Year

December 19th, 2005 at 13:00 by Stuart Heritage

Time magazine has named its Person's Of The Year for 2005 as Bill and Melinda Gates and Bono. Bono and the Gates' join an auspicious list which includes Hitler, Stalin and The World.

Bill and Melinda Gates and Bono were jointly chosen under the name The Good Samaritans, for all their humanitarian work over the last 12 months. Still, it could have been worse. Time could have gone with Jennifer Aniston like everyone else did.

The naming of Time's Person Of The Year has been an annual event ever since 1927, and the accolade is given to whoever "most affected the news and our lives, for good or ill," over the course of any year.

Usually, Time magazine's Person Of The Year is a Pope or a President or a head of state. This year, though, Time had a change of heart. It decided to award the Person Of The Year title to the man who made it possible for you to play computer solitaire when your boss isn't looking (and his wife) and the tiny man who goes "Doo doo doo," on the iPod adverts.

Obviously, though, this is nothing new. Solitaire has been on computers since - roughly - the dawn of time, and Bono has been going "Doo doo doo," in any number of identikit songs of his since he was a nipper. So why has Time decided to name Bill and Melinda Gates and Bono (CDs) as its Persons Of The Year for 2005? Let's ask the magazine itself:

"For being shrewd about doing good, for rewiring politics and re-engineering justice, for making mercy smarter and hope strategic and then daring the rest of us to follow, Bill and Melinda Gates and Bono are Time's Persons of the Year."

As well as being a slightly sinister nerd, Bill Gates is arguably the world's greatest philanthropist. The Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation is the world's biggest charity and, according to Time magazine, has been "giving more money away faster than anyone ever has." It's thought that The Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation has saved more than 700,000 lives by supporting vaccination programmes in developing countries, as well as donating thousands of computers to libraries and sponsoring enormous scholarship funds.

And Bono? Bono gets to shout at politicians and stuff.

Okay, now we'll get into probably the most obscure part of this symbolism game, and it has to do with the Irish rock band U2. I wrote a post just a day before the Pope's first hospitalization (Feb. 1) in which I noted that there was something going on with U2's song/video released late last year titled 'Vertigo', the first single off their new CD. Among other things what caught my attention was the clear concentric-circle pattern shown in the video - a major theme in the Super Torch Ritual stemming from the Athens Olympics. I won't go into all the details but it's instructive to bring up the European Huygens probe that Cassini recently released onto the surface of Titan. The probe carried onboard four songs presumably recorded on a CD - a little project called 'Music2Titan' the official logo for which is posted below.

The resemblance speaks for itself and represents just the little tip of the iceberg for this theme.

In any case, the fact that vertigo has to do with balance (or the lack thereof) was in retrospect a foreshadowing of the 'Balanced Judgment Day Time Code', thus also a demonstration of the song's usefulness in deciphering the 'puzzle'. U2 is also from Ireland, which is not only 'land of peace' but also the land of St. Malachy - together alluding to 'the Glory of the Olive', the next pope (remember, Vertigo came out last year before JP II fell ill).

The clincher here is the visually striking black smokes coming out of the U2 members performing in the music video! Evoking not only the black smoke of an unsuccessful papal election ('the cloud will make two suns appear') but also the infamous 'black wind of death' mentioned in the letter sent by a group claiming responsibility for the 3/11 Madrid train bombings - the key event without which the 'Judgment Time Code', particularly the 'balanced' version, wouldn't have been detected.

Bush to 'Be in Listening Mode' With Pope

By JENNIFER LOVEN

AP

ROME (June 9) - President Bush says he'll "be in listening mode" when he meets Pope Benedict XVI for the first time on Saturday. It's a good thing, because the Pope has a lot to say. Benedict will discuss the Iraq war and the plight of Christians in that unstable, violence-wracked country, as well as "the big ethical and social questions" of the day, said Cardinal Tarcisio Bertone, the Vatican's No. 2. This includes praise for Bush's staunch opposition to abortion.

But there's concern about the war, vigorously opposed by the late Pope John Paul II and raised on occasion by Benedict. In his Easter message, Benedict said "nothing positive comes from Iraq, torn apart by continual slaughter as the civil population flees."

Putting on his listening ears doesn't mean Bush will be silent, however, during his third papal audience at the Vatican.

The president plans to tout U.S. aid for fighting AIDS and malaria in Africa and spreading democracy around the world.

"I think His Holy Father will be pleased to know that much of our foreign policy is based on the admonition to whom much is given, much is required," Bush said in a pre-trip interview.

He promised to "go in open-minded."

"Sometimes I'm not poetic enough to describe what it's like to be in the presence of the Holy Father. It is a moving experience," the president said. "He's a good thinker and a smart man. I'll be in a listening mode."

Bush arrived in Rome Friday night, after a stop in the Czech Republic, three days at a summit of industrialized democracies on Germany's northern coast, and a quick, three-hour visit to Poland. The president stays in Rome Saturday night, too, before going on to Albania and Bulgaria.

While in Rome, he'll help back up his message to the Pope about his humanitarian record by visiting a lay Roman Catholic organization that does extensive work in the area.

The Sant'Egidio Community has a $25 million program to provide free antiretroviral drugs for HIV-positive people in 10 African countries, along with follow-up and home care.

Bush helped lead the Group of Eight summit this week to agree to a new program worth more than $60 billion to fight AIDS, malaria and other disease in Africa. The president recently urged Congress to double the current U.S. commitment for combatting AIDS in Africa to $30 billion over the next five years.

To cut hassle, Bush is meeting with the group at the U.S. Embassy instead of its headquarters in Rome's picturesque Trastevere neighborhood. He's also canceled a planned tour of the nearby Basilica of Santa Maria.

The president has a short meeting with Italian President Giorgio Napolitano at Quirinale Palace, his official residence, followed by longer talks and lunch with Premier Romano Prodi, also fresh from the G-8 meetings.

Italian-U.S. relations are busy right now - and a bit strained.

Just hours before Bush's arrival Friday, the first trial involving the CIA's extraordinary rendition program opened in a Milan courtroom. Along with the 26 Americans on trial for the abduction of an Egyptian cleric, a U.S. soldier is on trial in Rome for the March 2005 slaying of an Italian spy in Baghdad . In both cases, the U.S. citizens are being tried in absentia.

Meanwhile, a report out Friday from European investigator Dick Marty accused Italy and Germany of obstructing his probe into alleged secret prisons run by CIA in Europe. Marty said they were located in Poland and Romania from 2003 to 2005 to interrogate suspected terrorists.

Italy also has withdrawn troops from Iraq and is reluctant to send additional soldiers to Afghanistan .

Bush said he wants his visit with Prodi to "help boost his courage in doing the right thing in Afghanistan."

Washington is concerned that U.S. troops, along with those from Canada and Britain and elsewhere, are the only NATO countries sending forces to fight the Taliban in the most violent areas in the south. Other NATO-contributing countries, such as Germany, France and Italy, restrict the use of their forces to relatively peaceful areas of the north.

A series of small incidents involving the Italians and heavy fighting elsewhere in the country have heightened concerns in Italy over the mission and shaken Prodi's leadership.

Large protests against Bush are planned for Saturday. Prodi even asked Cabinet members to refrain from joining them.

Prodi ousted Silvio Berlusconi a year ago, replacing a like-minded conservative and staunch ally of Bush's with a center-left leader whose government has spared Washington no criticism.

Despite differences, Bush and Prodi have said they want good ties. Still, the U.S. leader is hedging his bets on Italian politics. He'll end his day with a private talk with his old friend Berlusconi.

Prodi's fragile, squabbling center-left coalition recently fended off a major challenge by Berlusconi in local elections. Berlusconi's camp appeared to have made some gains, but achieved no landslide.

Benedict, Bush both benefit from meeting
U.S. leaders have long relationship with the Vatican

By David Jackson
USA TODAY

ROSTOCK, Germany — When Al Smith lost the 1928 presidential race, he was attacked for being Roman Catholic and therefore too close to the pope.

Today, U.S. presidents and the leader of the Catholic Church enjoy a working relationship that has spanned decades.

President Bush has his fourth papal audience on Saturday and his first with Pope Benedict XVI. Bush will tie a meeting record set by presidents Ronald Reagan and Bill Clinton, who both met four times with Pope John Paul II.

Bush told a group of European journalists last week that he is looking forward to meeting with Benedict, calling him a "a good thinker and a smart man. I'll be in a listening mode.

"Sometimes I'm not poetic enough to describe what it's like to be in the presence of the Holy Father," Bush said. "It is a moving experience."

Americans generally like the idea of presidents conferring with popes. About seven in 10 say Bush should pay more attention or the same amount to Benedict as he does to other world leaders, according to a recent USA TODAY/Gallup Poll. Only 27% say the pope should receive less attention.

While American political history includes a thread of anti-Catholicism, church observers and political analysts say the meetings between the president and the pontiff offer something for both.

The president represents "the one great superpower and all that signifies," said Archbishop Donald Wuerl of Washington, D.C. "The pope speaks from a worldwide perspective of faith, spirituality and conscience."

Matthew Wilson, a political scientist at Southern Methodist University in Dallas, said "a sense of approval from the Vatican" can only help a president on the international stage. Closer to home, he said, the White House "has seen good relations with the Vatican as part of (its) domestic effort to woo Catholic voters, particularly conservative Catholic voters."

Bush won 52% of the Catholic vote in 2004, according to media exit polls, and beat Sen. John Kerry, who is Catholic.

Bush's meeting with Benedict will probably touch on the Iraq war, which the Vatican has long opposed. John Paul dispatched a cardinal to the White House in 2003 to plead against the U.S.-led invasion of Iraq, and echoed his opposition to the war when he met with Bush in 2004. John Paul also opposed the Persian Gulf War.

The president's other meetings with John Paul touched on politically sensitive issues such as embryonic stem cell research and charges of clergy sex abuse

In his Easter message this year, Benedict bemoaned that "nothing positive comes from Iraq, torn apart by continual slaughter as the civil population flees."

Cardinal Theodore McCarrick, former archbishop of Washington, D.C., said, "War and peace are always on the mind of the Holy Father."

Benedict, who became pope in April 2005, has had his share of controversy. His suggestion of a link between violence and Islam in September 2006 sparked a protest throughout the Muslim world, though Benedict sought to clarify his remarks on a visit to Turkey a few months later.

And while traveling to Brazil earlier this year, Benedict said politicians risked excommunication if they supported abortion laws.

The Rev. Thomas Reese, a senior fellow at the Woodstock Theological Center at Georgetown University, said the meeting between Bush and the pontiff is a "photo op." Still, he said, it "allows for an exchange of information and views" on a wide range of issues.

"The Vatican has been called one of the great listening posts of diplomacy," Reese said. "Let's hope the administration listens."

Some historical facts about presidents and popes, according to the Rev. James Garneau, who lectured on the topic at Catholic University:

- Woodrow Wilson was the first president to meet with a pope, Benedict XV in 1919. A president did not have a papal audience again until 1959, when John XXIII received Dwight Eisenhower. That began a tradition that has included every president since.
- John F. Kennedy, the first Catholic elected to the White House, ignored anti-Catholic sentiment to visit Pope Paul VI in 1963. They discussed the civil rights movement.

•Reagan, who nodded off during his first meeting with John Paul II, formed an anti-communist pact with the pontiff whose native Poland was temporarily behind the Iron Curtain.

Vatican statement after Pope's meeting with Bush

Jun. 9, 2007 (CWNews.com) - This morning, Saturday June 9 2007, President George W. Bush of the United States of America was received in audience by His Holiness Benedict XVI. The president subsequently went on to meet Cardinal Secretary of State Tarcisio Bertone S.D.B. and Archbishop Dominique Mamberti, secretary for Relations with States.

In the course of the cordial discussions, the main themes of the international political situation were considered. On the question of the Middle East, particular attention was given to the Israeli-Palestinian question, to Lebanon, to the worrying situation in Iraq, and to the critical conditions being experienced by the Christian communities. On the part of the Holy See, hope was once again expressed in a "regional" and "negotiated" solution to the conflicts and crises afflicting the region. Discussions also turned to the question of Africa and its development, also with reference to Darfur, and there was an exchange of opinions on Latin America.

Finally contemporary moral and religious issues were examined, among them those concerning human rights and religious freedom, the defense and promotion of life, marriage and the family, the education of the young and sustainable development.

Maybe Bush is there to talk to the Pope about this also:

Luciferian Skull and Bonesman and Mason (See the film Megiddo: The March to Armageddon for footage from a Masonic Museum in Los Angeles with a lifesize replica/image of George W. Bush) Came Bearing Gifts and the Pope awarded Bush with a medal of St. Peter's Basilica (mirrored by the U.S. Capitol ((Capitoline Hill)).

According to the article "The pontiff presented the president with a drawing of St. Peter's Basilica, an official Vatican gold medal."

My additions in []

According to this article from Yahoo: "The president gave the pope a rare first edition of an autobiography of [Jesuit] John Carroll, the first archbishop in the United States and founder of the Roman Catholic Church in America [and Georgetown University]. Bush also gave the pope lithographs of documents from the National Archives and a Moses [in the occult Moses represents something different] walking sticking, made by a former homeless man in Dallas, Texas, who engraved it with the Ten Commandments."

I wonder what version of the Ten Commandments because in the Catholic bibles the commandment about not making and worshipping graven images is omitted.

What this tells me is of course Bush is the abject slave of the White and Black Pope. The photos on this thread tell us that especially the first one with Bush bowing his head-HOW DESPICABLE AND DISGUSTING! (Bush is an absolute traitor, he does not represent the American people and the atrocities committed in our name such as the ritual sacrifice of thousands on 9/11 of the two pillars Jachin and Boaz with the all-seeing eye globe and circle left in preparation for the rebuilding of the temple of Solomon, the mass sacrifices of men and women who are nothing but cannon fodder to the Jesuits and their many Papal Knights in Iraq and Afghanistan to his god, the staged ritualistic beheadings committed by Masonic "Al CIA Qaeda" created by the American intelligence apparatus in the service of Rome, all in accordance with the Skull and Bones initiation ritual during which he kissed the slippered toe (placed on top of a human skull) of a Bonesman dressed in papal vestments and knighted by Don Quixote aka Ignatius Loyola a Knight of Eulogia shows his allegiance to his secret society by exhibiting total obedience to the Black and White Papacy first and foremost under threat of the Charles bloody Fourth Vow of Extreme Induction. Since he gave his master the Papal Caesar a rare autobiography of Georgetown University founder-John Carroll- (whose brother was the only reported Roman Catholic to sign the Declaration of Independence) the first powerful Jesuit in America this is most telling and significant. Bush is basically saying, Thank you Holy Father for this medal and for blessing me in your crusade against Islam. I carried out 9/11 for your predecessor after he ordered me to before he died now let this be a token of my allegiance and promise what I'll do for you. Now, your Holiness, what's the next move boss?"

If Bush has not already signed a concordat with the Unholy See (honorary Scottish Rite Mason, Shriner, and SMOM Ronald Wilson Reagan pictured February 11, 1988 in the White House with several Masonic leaders two of whom had honorary Scottish Rite and Shrine certificates in hand-<http://bessel.org/reagan.htm> . The traitorous Reagan reestablished diplomatic relations between the U.S. and the Vatican by recognizing Vatican City as a sovereign state. These ties were severed shortly after the assassination of Abraham Lincoln because everyone knew the Jesuits and their Roman Catholic Church assassinated President Lincoln and that they were hiding John Surratt who was advised by Jesuit B.F. Wiget. So Reagan betrayed the memory of Lincoln by hooking up with his Jesuit assassins and their Roman whore. This was made official January 10, 1984 which is the prerequisite for a concordat or binding agreement in which the Roman Catholic Church gets the final say in all civil and ecclesiastical matters in the country which enters into such a covenant with death and agreement with hell. Bush most likely will enter into a concordat (just as Germany did in 1933) before the Archbishop of New York selects another slave (my guess would be John McCain or Rudy Guiliani) to publicly preside over the Black Pope's Fourteenth Amendment Unholy Roman American empire while taking orders privately from Georgetown Jesuits, the Archbishop of New York and his Council on Foreign Relations.

Bush and "the Rat" "discussed" the war in Iraq and in the process undoubtedly received orders as to how to proceed with his master's crusade in the Middle East. Georgetown alum General Peter Pace (who I suspect is a member of Opus Dei given his and former Georgetown adjunct prof Chief Justice John G. Roberts' connection to Grand Orient of Italy Propaganda Due (P2) Mason Lio Cardinal Laghi), Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff is a member of the Jesuit John Carroll Society who might resign if his Georgetown masters and Cardinals Wuerl and Egan order him to. Masonic Donald Rumsfeld was a Georgetown Law drop-out and even the CFR media admits Pace and Rumsfeld have worked closely together.

<http://www.johncarrollsociety.org/>

See the honorary membership and medal recipients list http://www.johncarrollsociety.org/new_page_7.htm

See photos from this year's annual dinner and the man of the hour- Knight of Columbus U.S. Supreme Court Justice Samuel Alito whose along with his wife were awarded medals. I think Alito and Roberts were frequent visitors of the Opus Dei house on the campus of Harvard University. There is also a Masonic lodge on the campus.

http://www.johncarrollsociety.org/new_page_39.htm

See this photo: K of C Alito w/ his local master Donald Cardinal Wuerl as he points to a priest (most likely a Jesuit). I can just imagine him saying "let me introduce you to one of my superiors from Georgetown."

In order to succeed we must secede! It is high time to break from the Jesuit-controlled American empire either that or move to Canada or Europe because this country's American Reich is coming to full fruition. It's been working up to this point in earnest for at least 74 years and where it is now was planned since the very founding of the U.S. corporation with Rome on the Potomac. The Jesuits and their Freemasons/Illuminati (who have built this wicked empire) are prepared to place the capstone on the pyramid of their empire (a concordat with the Papacy) in worship of their god of forces whom the little horn will serve according to the Book of Daniel that being Satan/Lucifer. This would be the end of their Hegelian Dialectic having achieved synthesis from the thesis and antithesis of the Protestant and Counter-Reformations or Masonic/Illuminist Ordo Ab Chao (Order Out of Chaos) and that would be the kiss of death for not only every American but the Protestant Reformation in general the dawning of a new DARK age of restored Papal universal spiritual and temporal power for a time, times, and half a time (3 1/2 years).

Bush tours Vatican in style

By JENNIFER LOVEN
ASSOCIATED PRESS WRITER

VATICAN CITY -- President Bush moved through the Vatican like royalty on Saturday.

Live television coverage recorded the arrival of his limousine in the courtyard and showed the president stepping from his car. But it didn't stop there.

Television cameras were positioned throughout the Vatican to capture Bush's every move as he walked through marbled hallways, turned left and right on his way to the private library of Pope Benedict XVI. Bush was escorted by delegation of Italian noblemen, members of Rome's aristocracy. They are known as the pope's gentlemen.

American presidents have gotten splashy treatment since Ronald Reagan established diplomatic relations with the Vatican in 1984.

Seated on opposite sides of a desk, the president and the pope made small talk during a photo opportunity. Bush surprised some Vatican watchers by addressing the pope as "sir" rather than "your holiness."

The ANSA news agency headline said: "Gaffe Presidente."

Bush appeared very relaxed, leaning back in his chair with his legs crossed as the pope sat upright. Typically, visitors show deference and physical respect in the pontiff's presence.

When in Rome, look up friends.

Bush made time for coffee Saturday with former Italian Prime Minister Silvio Berlusconi. Bush was questioned about that move as he stood with the current prime minister, Romano Prodi - who last year defeated Berlusconi, a political rival.

"I'm doing so for a couple of reasons," Bush explained. "One, he is the opposition leader. And two, he's a friend."

The president said Prodi had no problem with his plans.

"His attitude was, 'I don't blame you,'" Bush said. "It's the kind of thing he does when he goes to other countries."

Then Bush defended the meeting one more time.

"I'm looking forward to seeing Silvio," he said. "One shouldn't read anything into it other than, we made some decisions together, we've known each other for a while - just like I've known Romano. ... I consider it an honor to have friends with two important leaders here in Italy."

To Bush, Berlusconi is a like-minded conservative, and there was no denying their chummy relationship.

In 2001, Berlusconi went to the White House five months after taking office. Prodi, in office for more than a year, still hasn't been - although Bush said he wanted to rectify that.

"We're just going to have to work through our schedules, but he's invited any time," Bush said.

When first lady Laura Bush admired the breathtaking view from Italy's presidential palace on Saturday, one site caught her attention the most: the Seven Hills of Rome. (Rev 17:9)

She was given a tour of the Quirinale Palace - itself resting on one of the hills - during the talks between Bush and Italian President Giorgio Napolitano.

"Wow, this is wonderful," the first lady said as she saw the 360-degree view of Rome from the "Torrino" - or Little Tower crowning the building.

"So, where are the seven hills?" she asked, as a translator explained what was before her eyes.

The first lady was accompanied by the wife of the Italian president, Clio Napolitano.

The Quirinale palace was built in the 16th century as a summer residence for popes. It went on to serve as royal palace and, when the monarchy was abolished after World War II, it became the residence of the president of the republic.

The president's wife kept a busy schedule during the official visit to Italy and the Vatican.

She began her day on a more sobering subject, having breakfast at the U.S. ambassador's residence with Sister Eugenia Bonetti, a major advocate against trafficking of women.

The first lady later wore a black suit and a veil covering her head for the private audience with the pope.

She also went underground during her visit in Rome, taking a tour of the necropolis underneath Vatican City. The necropolis, which was discovered during excavations, contains what is believed to be the tomb of St. Peter.

Alexandra - June 10, 2007 01:26 PM (GMT)

Except that the Vatican got caught in a lie when Peter's tomb was found in Jerusalem. Peter wasn't in Rome--and he wasn't the first pope. Constantine was, in the 4th century.

Title: Symbolism: Christian Cross origin?

Daywalker - June 8, 2007 08:28 PM (GMT)

At this moment it is my speculation.

These are pictures out of an article by Crichton E. M. Miller about a tool to measure the pyramids and also, more importantly the stars.

Cross Staff and Plumbline and the Great Pyramid

So my momentary theory is that this could be the origin of the cross as a symbol. Second it could also be a connection to roman times when people on the cross could through this connection be seen as sacrifice to the universe and/or the Sun.

Can you out there help me bring it together?

CRAIG-OXLEY - June 9, 2007 12:45 AM (GMT)

Look also into the Planet Venus and its tie in with the Sun.

Alexandra - June 9, 2007 01:34 AM (GMT)

I don't wear a cross because of its origin. As for the crucifix--Alberto Rivera said it's the Jesuit symbol of death.

skr56 - June 9, 2007 03:54 AM (GMT)

Daywalker, Maybe this guy's explanation could help as he speaks of the pyramids and the cross connection. I can't get the pics onto this site, so maybe you can just go to the link.

CROSS SYMBOLS OF THE SACRED FOUR.--The Specialized Cross was one of the figures used by the ancients to denote the Sacred Four--the Four Great Primary Forces. The cross was always a favorite symbol among the ancients probably because they found it more expressive than any other figure. Studying and writing about the Sacred Four appears also to have been an absorbing theme with them. Today the Pueblo Indians of Arizona and New Mexico refer to the Sacred Four as "Those above."

The mother of all crosses was plain with four arms of equal length. I first find it in the Sacred and Inspired Writings as the symbol of The Sacred Four--The Great Creative Forces.

Mexican Tablet No. 672: Is an exact duplication of the cross heretofore mentioned as appearing in the Oriental copies of the Sacred Inspired Writings of Mu. As time went on this cross evolved. It developed into four distinct lines, becoming more intricate as time went on.

1. The end of the first line and the shortest, I have called the Pyramid Cross.
2. The end of the second line is a cross formed of four loops, having the symbol of the Deity in the center. These I have called the Loop Crosses.
3. The end of the third line is the well-known Swastika, known as "the good luck symbol."
4. The end of the fourth line was the winged circle. The ancients rioted in designs for this figure; the Egyptians excelling others in beautiful devices and marvelous artistry.

Besides these four main lines, there were many single special designs.

THE PYRAMID CROSS. LINE 1.--A group of Crosses among Niven's collection of Mexican tablets is especially interesting. I have called them the Pyramid Crosses because they are designed on the lines of a pyramid. They are the cosmogony of a pyramid illustrated by a cross.

The four arms are composed of four triangles corresponding with the four sides of a pyramid.

The points of these triangles are covered with the monotheistic symbol of the Deity.

The base of a pyramid is square; the four triangles brought together form a square. The pyramid is built on astronomical lines; so is the Cross.

These Crosses were drawn before the submersion of Mu. Were any pyramids built before that date? I know of none. Were pyramids evolved out of these Crosses?

Fig. A. Is the base of a pyramid divided into four triangles.

Fig. B. Dotted lines within the circle show the points of the triangles, corresponding to the top of a pyramid.

Fig. C. Shows the Cross with the monotheistic symbol of the Deity, Naga Pattern, crowning the points.

Fig. D. Is the same as Fig. C with the exception that the Uighur monotheistic symbol crowns the points.

Fig. E. The point of the triangle covered by the monotheistic symbol. The following is written on these tablets:

"The Four Great Pillars," "The Sacred Four," "The Four Great Architects," "The Four Great Builders" and "The Four Powerful Ones."

No. 777 confirms the fact that the four triangles forming the Cross are the Sacred Four because the symbol within the triangle reads: "Pillar." The four triangles with their inscriptions therefore read: "The Four Great Pillars"--one of the names given to the Sacred Four.

During the life of Mu it was taught that the Four Great Pillars sustained the Universe. After the destruction of Mu the Universe was forgotten and the earth given the honor of anchoring and sustaining the Pillars. A pillar was placed at each of the Cardinal Points:-- North, South, East and West.

THE LOOPED CROSSES. LINE 2.--The evolution of this line started with the plain cross shown in the Sacred Writings and ended with the Deity being added to four loops symbolizing the Four Great Forces, with the names of the Forces given within the loop.

The evolution of the Looped Crosses

Fig. 1. The Original Cross.

Fig. 2. The oldest form of Looped Cross I have as yet found. It is very ancient from the fact that the symbol of the Deity is of the ancient pattern and not specialized. It is a question in my mind whether a link is not missing between Fig. 1 and Fig. 2; the change appears to me to be too radical for the ancients.

Sometime during the teachings of primitive man trouble apparently began to accumulate over the circle, which was used to symbolize various things. It was then decided to specialize the circle which symbolized the Deity. The Nagas added a dot in the center and the Uighurs an inner circle. Fig. 2 has neither of these specializations.

Fig. 3a. Is the same as Fig. 2 except that Fig. 3a has the Naga pattern of the symbol for the Deity.

Fig. 3b. Is the same as Fig. 2 except that this cross has the Uighur pattern for the symbol of the Deity.

Fig. 4. This figure shows the last addition to the Looped Crosses. Within the arms of the loops the names of the Force are written, in this case the name of the Force being "builder" (a two-sided square). The loop is a symbol that a certain divine order has been carried out. The Force has returned to the giver of the command.

Various other Crosses were used by the ancients in their writings, and each one had a different meaning. They are however easily distinguishable from the Crosses symbolizing the Sacred Four. The original Cross of the Sacred Four was a solid plain cross; all the others are open crosses.

1. This Cross reads U-luumil which means "the land of," "the Country of," "the Empire of," et cetera.
2. Another Cross is formed by four lines drawn across each other.
3. Sometimes but not often we find the ends of this Cross connected. The meaning of it is "slowly," "little by little" "slow progress," et cetera.

THE SWASTIKA. LINE 3.--The Swastika was originally associated with good luck from being the favorite symbol of the Sacred Four who were in charge of the physical Universe and therefore the means by which all good things came to man. While the Swastika is one of the oldest and most universal of symbols, being found throughout the ancient world, its origin and meaning have been lost for the past 3,500 years. The loss occurred when the fierce Brahminical priesthood of India persecuted and drove their teachers, the mild and highly educated Naacals, into the snow-capped mountains of the North.

I found the origin and meaning of this symbol:

First: In the Naacal writings which were brought from the Motherland and for thousands of years, probably, had lain dust covered and almost forgotten in the archives of Oriental temples and monasteries.

Second: Confirmed by the Mexican Stone Tablets.

Fate, however, ordained that their coverings of dust and ashes of thousands of years should be removed and their secrets be once more known to the world.

The "good luck symbol" is a very appropriate name for the Swastika, since it represents the physical welfare of man and all the Universe. The Swastika evolved from the plain original Cross.

The Evolution of the Swastika:

Fig. 1. Is the original plain Cross.

Fig. 2. Here we have a circle added, surrounding the Cross. The Circle is the symbol of the Deity. The Cross is shown within the Deity; therefore it is apart of Him, emanating from Him. This accounts for the ancients calling their works: "the Commands of the Creator," "His Desires," "His Wishes," et cetera. The Forces symbolized by the Cross were the executors of His commands. With the circle drawn around the Cross it became a composite glyph symbolizing the ancient's full Godhead of Five--i. e. The Deity and His Four Great Primary Forces, the Four original Gods.

Fig. 3. Is a glyph found among the North American cliff writers. The arms of the Cross extend beyond the circle.

Fig. 4. The next step was to project the arms beyond the circle and turn their ends down at right angles thus forming a two-sided square, which was the ancient glyph for "Builder." Thus were shown the Four Great Builders of the Universe. Without question it soon became evident to the ancients that by extending the original Cross they had deprived themselves of the possibility of mentioning the Four Great Forces without including the Deity. They could not write the Sacred Four, but they must write the full Godhead of five. To rectify this and bring back the symbol to its original meaning they eliminated the circle, leaving only the Four Great Builders of the Universe.

Throughout the world have been found glyphs which archaeologists have called Swastikas. I refer to a glyph which is formed by crossing the hieratic letters N which are crossed thus This is not a Swastika but the diphthong Sh in the Motherland's alphabet. Where the ends of a cross are curved, it is not a Swastika. The arms of a Swastika must be bent over at perfect right angles to form a perfect two-sided square, the symbol for "Builder."

Clement of Alexandria wrote: "These Four Powerful Ones, these Four Canobs, these Heavenly Architects, emanate from the Great Supreme Infinite One, and evolved the material Universe from chaos."

As far as I know, the reason the Romans had the custom of crucifying ppl was to make them suffer like the sun suffers on his cross of the zodiac aswell as at equinox.

I submit to you that this astronomical allegory is as old as man's intellect itself.

When the sun's arch passes over equator, for one day, it is thus in the middle of a cross section, equinox.

That's why Judaism has "Passover", it's the passing over equator of the sun around vernal equinox, the ancient new year which is also still the Hebrew new year.

At autumnal equinox, he's on the cross once again and this time passes away to the beyond, winter solstice, death.

That's why we use the term "to pass away" or to "pass" when somebody dies. The sun passes equator and dies. On the cross. It passes to the beyond.

Just like my grandad a couple of years ago, he wasn't crucified tho!

But they would crucify ppl like the sun was crucified.

Some places they'd also use to put a horizontal piece of wood/branch unto a tree in the form of this "crucifixion cross" to function as a solar clock.

So without a shadow of a doubt, the symbol of the cross is astronomical in its ancient origin.

Basic sun hieroglyph, the sun in the middle and the yearly cycle/circle.

And if you want to put down on a piece of paper (or rock I guess) these mathematical principals of the yearly cycle, in order to get an understanding of when's the best time to plow, to plant and to harvest (food/survival, pretty important stuff) the first most fundamental symbol to learn/teach is to divide the year into the four exactly naturally occurring equal parts:

The vernal equinox, summer solstice, autumnal equinox, and winter solstice.

Thus the most ancient symbol of all time, the suncross, the eternal (more or less!) doctrine of the yearly cycle, God's sun right smack on the cross.

The four points divide the cycle into four seasons:

First at new year, vernal equinox, the sun will "spring" up to the summit, "summer", then he will again pass over equator and "fall" back down to winter solstice, where he lays still for three days.

Spring, summer, fall, winter.

This has to be the origin, its the fundamental doctrine of a succesful harvest. And that was pretty important back then!

Now, as for the "Christian" cross... Same thing in my mind.

God's sun Ixion on the equinoctial cross.

EDIT: Notice his arms spread out like wings to form the cross, this is in relation to the sacred mushroom, whos cap at first is vertical alongside it's body, then spreads out like wings to form the cross. Perhaps also why he wears that dress.

At vernal equinox, many ancients would celebrate God's sun's resurrection from the dark winter months and the 3 days of death at winter solstice.

The "Christian" cross:

Easter mass, vernal equinox:

The story of the life of Jesus is the story of the sun. 4 seasons, 4 gospels.

Jesus is the sun of God

"In this work I have given my personal view why religion is in such a chaotic state today. There are over three hundred religions and sects and only One God."

<http://www.sacred-texts.com/atl/ssm/ssm03.htm>

Taylor might with advantage consult the North American Indian, the semi-civilized Polynesians, the Maoris, the South African savages, and, beyond all, the Teachings of Jesus. The savages and semi-savages do not claim great knowledge on the subject. I have, however, found that they possess great wisdom which is untrammelled by the Queen of Myths, known as Science.

De Broses says, "All nations had to begin with fetishes, to be followed afterwards by Polytheism and Monotheism."

I suspect De Broses of toying with theories of our Simian origin. They have upset everyone who has ever come in contact with them. However, we shall let it pass because such writers as Max Müller, Dr. Happell, and Professor Pfliderer are directly opposed to such assumptions.

Hereafter, when dealing with the beginnings of religion, I shall show that man started with monotheism and it was only after Mu's destruction that there was polytheism and idolatry was practiced. The next quotation is as extraordinary:

"At a very remote period in the civilization of Egypt, Babylon, Mexico and Peru, the Sun God had gained supremacy as the first and greatest of gods."

This is contradicted by all ancient writings. The sun was never looked upon as a god by the ancients but as a symbol only of the Deity. Therefore, it was never worshipped by them.

The sun, from the beginning, was the monotheistic symbol of the Deity. Being the monotheistic or collective symbol of the Deity, it was esteemed the most sacred of all sacred symbols.

This monotheistic symbol of the Deity existed tens of thousands of years before man settled in either Egypt, Babylon, Mexico or Peru. How, therefore, could it have gained supremacy during their time?

<http://www.sacred-texts.com/atl/ssm/ssm04.htm>

Throughout his teachings early man was constantly reminded that no symbol, however sacred, was to be worshipped in any way;

skr56: And this is the first commandment - No other gods - no graven images (because the symbols and images eventually become the worshipped because they can be physically seen and felt - instead of just representing God, The Creator - they are then misrepresenting God, the Creator.)

Religion cannot die until man has attained the perfection ordained for him.

<http://www.sacred-texts.com/atl/ssm/ssm05.htm>

During the early history of man there were no gods but the One Great Infinite. The gods crept into religious ceremonies later. The beginning of the gods was when the Four Great Creative Forces were given the name of gods. skr56: I think the symbol of the cross in a circle is what is on the site at this point, and also the pyramid cross pic.

Scientists and archaeologists, not comprehending the ancient form of writing and symbolisms, have unfortunately spread broadcast the error that the ancients worshipped the Sun, when the fact is that they regarded the Sun as a symbol only;

QUOTE (skr56 @ Jun 9 2007, 05:16 AM)

Scientists and archaeologists, not comprehending the ancient form of writing and symbolisms, have unfortunately spread broadcast the error that the ancients worshipped the Sun, when the fact is that they regarded the Sun as a symbol only;
<http://www.sacred-texts.com/atl/ssm/ssm06.htm>

I agree with that 100%.

Unfortunately, in Egypt, things took a very bad turn. Im referring to the priestly mystery schools.

Cuz when we're told again and again that these mystery schools worshipped the sun, it is infact the exact opposite!

What they worshipped was the One True Deity/God, whatever you wanna call it. Now, the trouble is these superstitious Osiris/Horus/Isis etc. gods.

These are merely astronomical allegories for the movements of the heavens which was so important to know in order to have agriculture. That is to survive.

Only the learned of course, knew when the time for plowing and planting had come, the community had to rely on these wise men.

When they became "priests", that's when trouble started.

Bcuz the priests had these solar and lunar and stellar allegories of Osiris and Isis etc. in order to have a system of teaching these important facts of the yearly cycle.

They obviously knew that Osiris was the sun. They'd invented this symbolism.

However, the community did not know Osiris was the sun!

Very important!!!

The profane were led to believe that Osiris was some magical creature they should worship and that the priests were in alliance with these divine beings.

They didnt know Osiris was the sun! They were indoctrinated from birth to venerate this dog-headed fella and that scary one with the ant eater head and the other members of the royal family. In time, the priests would make sure that these gods were VERY real to the profane, to the whole community.

But not to the initiates of the mystery schools, the priests, for they were taught in the highest degree, the biggest secret: There is no Osiris, he's the sun! There is no Isis, she's the moon/earth! There is but one Deity, the one true God, creator, "grand architect of the universe" etc.

Everyone else didnt know...

ONLY the initiated elite knew the truth, that the Osiris religion was infact just superstitious allegories for astronomical facts. Naturally with the sun centered in these "mysteries", it all being astronomical.

Just like today.

So the trick is:

A priestly mystery school is an institution which first and foremost guards from the masses the one great secret that the particular religion is infact astronomical science retold in superstitious allegories, and a mystery school initiate therefore studies the true God of the universe, the true forces of nature and the true spirituality of man, unaffected by any superstition.

They have been doing this for more than 6000 years now. They dont worship the sun. Or the moon, or a cow! They make US worship them in the form of allegories, "religion", in order to harness for themselves the true spiritual knowledge and wisdom without superstition.

The very rituals of Freemasonry go right back 6000 years to Egypt, sometimes completely unchanged, and are 100% astronomical in origin and build. They first and foremost guard the secrets of religion. Of Christianity in this case.

These mystery schools spread throughout the whole Asia Minor, and eventually also Rome's elite Sol Invictus sun cult, where Constantine was the high-priest.

In Greece for instance it was the Bacchus mystery schools. There they also used the same blueprint as Egypt, they invented Bacchus & Co. for the profane masses, so they could have the true power and knowledge, cuz those who controlled the gods controlled society. And those who controlled the facts of astronomy controlled these "gods"!

And you couldnt learn these, the "mysteries", without being initiated, so there you have it... The power of the "degrees", the elite's secret societies.

When our agricultural society ended, this control system was way too integrated and its been part of the elite now for 6000 years.

But in the end, the common Egyptian had NO idea that Osiris was the sun. Thats the point we're never told which is so relevant to this very day.

1.1 billion Catholics to begin with.

Indeed, pharao was the Vicar of Osiris. But the people didnt know Osiris was the sun!
Now, who's the Vicar of Christ?

:rolleyes:

Wow...

JagDRS - June 10, 2007 06:01 PM (GMT)

One of the concepts put forth by Tsarion that really sticks in my mind relates to his _____ (call it what you will: component-thesis / theory / speculation, etc as it pertains to some particular ancient history) for the symbol better known as "cross".

According to this _____, the symbol is said to have originated as a result of the ancients' faithful observation (what one in the modern day may even call "religious practice") & study of heavenly bodies. In particular it was the regular observation of the continuum of heavenly planets - their repeating, cyclical paths through the sky as observed by those on Earth. The specific & momentary (relative to such yearly cycles) path of the Sun intersecting with the projected line of the Earth's "ecliptic" (IE> projected through the center of the Earth as it sits on it's axis while going through it's own annual spinning/revolving gyrations) that forms a cross.

I probably messed up the explanation from how Tsarion and other astro-theologists know it, but I hope this is close enough for you to get the idea.

The part of this that is less theory and more easy to prove is the known, repeating cycles of said planets. The part of this that is more theory and less easy to prove is that the ancients adopted this particular, cyclical sky / planet phenom into the orgins of the cross as a religious symbol/remembrance of those long ago sky observing habits.

wolveshater - June 10, 2007 07:38 PM (GMT)

Every where we look we find the cross, I learned that from this site. When you look thru a rifle or pistol scope there is the cross hair, so when you trip the trigger did you nail your victim to the cross ?? when you line up iron sites on a gun barrel with your eye you have made an invisible cross. Some big time deep thought went into that symbol.

WOW.

Dear Friends,

If Cheney was responsible for the selling of nuclear detonators to Iran, then it can be said that Iran has nuclear weapons---for detonators are highly sensitive devices. When we then are "attacked" with nuclear detonations, Iran can be blamed justifying her invasion and total war against Islam. The US selling detonators to Iran is very important to the Black Pope's scenario.

Remember, the Zionist Jews do not rule; the Zionist Jesuits rule the Masonic Zionist Jews from the Vatican.

Dolphin:

when and where was that photo of the queen taken? is it widely known that the queen is the head of the british knights of malta and has taken an oath to the Vatican!!! I don't live in Britian, is it a guarded secret or not that she is in the SMOM?

Where does the word Guelph come from?

At what stage did the Jesuits take control of the Vatican. The Jesuits were in conflict with the Vatican many times, how did they turn that around to a stage where they were in control? Spain and Portugal banished the Jesuits in 1700's.

The Jesuits appeared to do alot of good for the people of Paraguay, the Jesuit Republic of paraguay saved the locals from slave-traders. It appears the jesuits were doing "good" at that time.

Loyola appears to be a good, interesting and intellectual character.

How do the Jesuits control the SMOM?

How do the SMOM exercise control over the world? What is the power structure and what are their names.

I'm not here to spend masses of my precious life time going over information which is easily available if you look, listen and read correctly. You need to go through all the information on this site and others.

I'm not sure when that picture or where abouts it was taken.

No in England not many people are aware of the Knights of Malta infact people here aren't aware of much these days since they go through this pathetic so-called education system. You'd find more people aware of the Knights Templar than the Knights of Malta and its true underpinnings.

English people aware of the Queen and the Knights of Malta simply believe this order is a health order as they disguise themselves within this St John and Hospittler nonsense. It is very secretive within the masses what we speak about with her connections to the Vatican. Your not meant to know her true power of this land and certainly not her SERVILITY to Rome. They will then discuss all day the definition of Patron to try and riddle out of it. Too many people think she's the protector of the Protestantism here but its nothing of the sort infact she detests it. Shes a Guelph and just understand them and understand her and this information comes straight from ex British SIS Dr John Coleman and others.

Study the Guelph Black Nobility family for answers on this. Remember also her cousin is the 78th Grandmaster and Prince you see above, Cardinal Andrew Bertie. He controls the whole Order with his cousin controlling the British division whilst Egan controls the Americas and King Juan Carlos of Spain controls the Middle East. I cannot remember the others and I think theres another 3 regions but I may be wrong.

The Jesuits took full control of the Vatican in their face style within 1870 when their Doctrines of Infallibility was thrust upon the Pope. In reality they had the Papacy back in 1814. They came back and got control through their creation of the Illuminati as its spoke about. They were whacked by the Pope in 1773 and the Bavarian Illuminati was created in 1776 by sheep-dipped JESUIT Weishaupt who incidentally helped turn the Pope around sneakily of course. Then what happened? The Jesuits took serious REVENGE as usual. The film 'Count of Monte Cristo' is really the representation of this story and how the Superior General used his Rothschilds to destroy the Bank and then buy it back for pennies.

Dolphin if you wish to triumph up this most devious, evil minded and blood revengeful Order and its Black Nobility Creator then feel free to do it elsewhere. They have diseased this World more than the Vatican ever did before the Jesuits were even created. People are dying in their masses in Iraq through these Crusaders including Women & Children. Your so-called freedoms are being curbed even more as they once again are about to plunge us back into the Dark Ages in the Protestant nations.

The SMOM control all Banking, politics, media, entertainment, Intelligence the lot through their many loyal subordinate high ranking Knights such as King Juan Carlos, Edward Egan and so forth. You then have the levels like Henry Kissinger, Rudy Guilliani and so forth. Their in all the positions of power and they exercise this power. The SMOM were subordinate to the Pope for his helping them in times of trouble. Remember who controls the Papacy? The JESUITS have the SMOM Order more as a Brother these days but alas its not equal in no means. The Council above are the leadership of the Sovereign Military Order of Malta, theres your names. Bet you didn't think we could oust these people but its not that hard when you get through all their diversions and veils which their little piddly wannabe agents like Alex Jones put forth. Its not as big a mystery as they would have you think. Think of it just like the Wizard of Oz and how this Wizard is merely a weak man behind a curtain and not this great mystical wizard of power. I unveil the TRUTH and sometimes it hurts but sometimes its not so amazing either and guess what? Its FREE! I should also point out that the film Wizard of Oz is so popular for a reason and thats because its full of triggers for various Manchurian Candidates Worldwide as is Star Trek and other nonsense productions which don't deserve the spotlight.

Do your homework! Get the Vatican Assassins III book and so forth. There was a good SMOM book at one time but I forget its damn name and I know it wasn't easy to find. Although we lift the veil on this amazing Order theres still many secrets within it that would amaze us and its still manages to be kept quite secretive. It has many inner cores and outer cores and its the outer cores many see and simply think it then cannot be so powerful but alas these inner cores are RAW POWER! Fritz Springmeier has spoke a bit on the SMOM also. Funny I should speak of Manchurians and SMOM above because Fritz spoke of both and deprogrammed Manchurians. Wheres Fritz right now? Jail for around 9 years! Why? Because he was fitted up on phony robbery charges thats why! Check up on that most even shit known as Francis Spellman the once Archbishop, Military Vicar and KING of NY & the AMERICAS! Him and the likes of his subordinate SMOM Papal Knight David Rockefeller can do as they please literally and they did/DO!

QUOTE

The Jesuits appeared to do alot of good for the people of Paraguay, the Jesuit Republic of paraguay saved the locals from slave-traders

I'm sure you can gets tons of the infomation to explain the historic truths. But for an esoteric idea of what they planned:

The Jesuits used Paraguay as one of their first experiments in Communism. Their next big experiment took place long after with Lenin, Hitler and Stalin. The after-effects of their first experiment in Paraguay was horrendous and Latin America still suffers today as a consequence of their deeds.

The Jesuits through ritual black magic and occult sciences, were able to force upon the people of Paraguay a state likened to "animal-man". The Jesuits are one with Communism and have always tried to suppress the Freedom of Will of man. Communism not only supresses Free Will but it is an attack upon the social 3-folding of the Holy Spirit within man.

Thanks for reply Daniel. Having learned some of the real nature of the Jesuits makes me question everything they have done and their real motivations, so I want to know more about Paraguay, when in the surface they did appear to be working for "good". I want to know more details of what were the horrendous consequences of the Paraguay experiment as you call it. We are told that the Jesuits were helping protect the people of Paraguay from slavetraders, and the Jesuits were imprisoned afterwards, seems they were working to protect the people from the "evil" invaders from Iberia. So I want to know more details about what Paraguay was really all about, if there was another more sinister motivation. I am having difficulties finding such information despite trawling through endless pages on this site and many others.

[b]]m not here to spend masses of my precious life time going over information which is easily available if you look, listen and read correctly. You need to go through all the information on this site and others.

Dolphin if you wish to triumph up this most devious, evil minded and blood revengeful Order and its Black Nobility Creator then feel free to do it elsewhere.

Quite a ridiculous response to a very legitimate question. I am attemptng to learn as much as I can about the Jesuits history as much as their present situation. I want to know if the Jesuits were always "evil" or were they hijacked and corrupted along the way, and despite going through many, many pages on this site I am still having problems finding answers to all the questions I have about the Jesuits and the SMOM on this site.

I don't expect you to answer any questions I have, but if you wish to answer I will appreciate it, however I think it is very immature to make such a response. The information you talk about isn't so easy to verify on this website as you suggest. I have already spent many hours on this site in a short time, but still can't find particular pages I am looking for. Are there pages detailing Loyola for example, what he was all about, if so I haven't found it.

Researching info about Loyola from most other sources paints a very different view of the Jesuits than what you are suggesting. I am inclined to believe what you suggest about the Jesuits leading the NWO. I want to learn how all of that came about. On your Society of Jesus page it doesn't give the history and original goals of the Jesuits, or if it is there I can't see it. You could simply link to such a page if you decided to give some of your precious life time to assist me, or you could simply not reply, the tone of the reply you gave doesn't do you any credit.

I have studied alot about the NWO, many of their goals, how they created WW1 and WW2, 9/11 etc, etc etc, but it was never very clear to me who was the leader of the NWO, the banks, or the zionists or the freemasons and so on. After finding this website I am confident you are correct in your claim that the Jesuits are the leaders of the NWO, so I am attempting to learn as much as I can about it, I am a researcher.

I have never Trumped the Jesuits so where are you getting that BS from. I asked a question, very legitimate question about the Jesuits appearing to do good on the surface, I am trying to find how such appearances or actions furthered their real agenda and when they "turned to the dark side". Such an accusation does remind me of something I would expect to hear from the "sheeple" if you try asking questions of the government/establishment. I would have expected you would be above such a reply and so quickly jumping to the wrong conclusion.

If you don't wish to answer a question then that is your decision and I don't expect any replies from anyone, I just simply appreciate helpful replies. People ask me questions all the time, I will either not bother to answer or will try to give an honest and respectful answer if I do bother.

However I do still greatly appreciate that you did give time to write an extensive answer to my question, it is all very useful to me. And I do very commend the great work you are doing on this forum, I have voted this site the top conspiracy site and out of choice now would prefer to return to this site rather than Szymanski or Phelps own site which both discuss the Jesuits. I think you have done a great job with the health pages on this forum also. I would agree with what you said about Phelps taking the money also, it will certainly lose him alot of respect and could even potentially do as much damage to the "truth" movement (if we can call it that) as did Ickes reptiles stories.

I am not on this site to waste any of my precious lifetime either, I am attempting to research and learn as much as I possibly can, I can't find all the info I am looking for on this site even though I suspect most of the answers I am seeking are detailed on some pages on this site. I have spent many hours looking for certain answers but can't find them.

I could suggest that instead of taking alot of typing time to answer a question you could link to a previously posted page on this site that gives the answer. But that is just a suggestion and it is none of my business what you chose to answer or how you chose to answer it if you wish to answer any questions at all.

I am sure you are aware that if it is said to most people that the Jesuits are evil and control the world many people would point to all the "good" that Jesuits supposedly do, I am trying to discover the true motivations behind everything the Jesuits have done and also to know how to answer such questions myself if someone were to say to me "The Jesuits aren't all evil, look at the good they have done, for example, in Paraguay, all the schools they have to educate the public" etc, and such replies that the Jesuits don't own the Vatican, look at how the Vatican has perscuted Jesuits at various times etc etc etc, you know how it goes or what to expect.

I am wishing to learn the truth, and I greatly appreciate any answers or assistance you give, I don't expect you to answer any questions of mine. You are suggesting I don't ask you further questions.

QUOTE (CRAIG-OXLEY @ May 23 2007, 02:59 AM)

I should also point out that the film Wizard of Oz is so popular for a reason and thats because its full of triggers for various Manchurian Candidates Worldwide as is Star Trek and other nonsense productions which don't deserve the spotlight.

Interesting that you mention those movies being triggers for Manchurian Candidates. I have learned some of the MK Ultra projects, and I assume RFK and even John Lennon were shot by manchurian candidates, I have even heard it suggested Elvis was shot because of his fascination with the JFK conspiracy. I don't know how a movie would be a useful trigger from a practical point of view, but I am sure the whole media including Hollywood is to dumb down the masses. Other movies like Star Wars, Independence Day and so on got alot more attention than they deserved.

I would be interested if anyone can throw any more light on Stanley Kubricks work. I have seen it suggested that his movies have alot of illuminati or masonic symbolism, and this may be so, but what hasn't been explained satisfactorily is why he would put such symbols in his work. I watched docu detailing his work and suggesting that he was warning us in a way about the NWO, but was he really warning us, because if he was I would suspect he would have done it a bit more openly, was it a warning at all, or was he "one of them" and he included such symbolism for the same reason that many big companies use such symbolism for their corporate logos.

The Jesuits took full control of the Vatican in their face style within 1870 when their Doctrines of Infallibility was thrustured upon the Pope.

The Infallibility of the Pope being necessary to the Jesuits is still not clear to me, I can't see how making such a ridiculous declaration of the Pope being infallible strengthened the Jesuits grip of the Vatican. How would the Pope being declared Infallible or not being infallible affect the Jesuit grip of power of the Vatican.

Does anyone know if the Jesuits control the elections for Pope, or do they only control the Pope is elected?

CRAIG-OXLEY - May 26, 2007 12:12 AM (GMT)

To understand mind control and triggers you need to look at people such as Fritz Springmeier (ex-deprogrammer now JAILED), Stewart Swerdlow and Cathy O Brien etc. Theres quite a lot of info on Wizard of Oz and Star Trek especially, check the manuals for Star Trek their HUGE. You will always notice things which are being used to program more so when their over hyped and simply do not deserve the spotlight. These would include pop groups like the terrible Spice Girls who were yet another London Tavistock experiment on the populace like the Beatles and Rolling Stones. The Beatles were infact pretty poor yet look at their success? You'll find many groups far excelling them such as The Kinks. I find it funny how they were banned from going to the States! Were they worried their boys would have no longer got the spotlight? You work it out.

Stanley Kubrick was well in the thicket of this conspiracy theres no doubt about that. You must remember that if Stanley wished to live then he cannot be so blatent as you would have liked. When you understand the conspiracy and their codings/teachings then you see he was really putting forth much in front of us, we just weren't aware back then. Its like many houses having Chubb alarm systems you take no notice whatsoever of. Then you learn about the pyramid and eye of horus etc. What happens then? You start to check out all these blue pyramid boxes with the highlighted flasher capstone haha.

Theres an analyst of Stanley's Clockwork Orange and so forth in the Video area which is quite good! You must realise people were being whacked back even in the 1990's for this sort of information if they wasn't a paid agent diverting etc. When people like Stanley Kubrick speak out people will take note and if they can no longer control them or they've decided to become true opposition they have to be whacked. Its not that often now that people get whacked as the SMOM simply almost no longer care what gets out as they've got the alternative market wrapped up with agents so what little truth gets out many wont believe it and stick with the diversion crap and so forth.

The Jesuits control the Vatican since 1814 and therefore control and order everything which goes on. The Jesuits decide who will be Pope and that person will become Pope period! There is no disobeying within the Vatican, they know who their masters are even though many do not like it. Mind you by now most of those may have been removed anyhow. The Jesuits are just such a powerful force that if you mess with them they will haunt you till your death and knowing those buggers they will still haunt your soul. Maybe this is why they collect the bones of enemies and so forth?

If you watch that Jesuit video by Jim Arabitto containing many TRUTH teachers you will hear what the Jesuits do to Cardinals and how the Church fear the Jesuits and their visits. Remember what happened to almost all involved with that video, ASSASSINATIONS! Study what the Infallibility actually does for the Pope then sit and think how that may play a part with helping to govern the World. Remember also that governance is linked with his TEMPORAL statue granted back in 756. Temporal power is simply WORLD GOVERNMENT as ex 4th Vow Rivera tells us all! You should also note that the Pope's don't actually like having the title of Infallibility. Its something to do with locking them to Rome if I remember like a subject or something.

You do as your told by the Jesuit or else your dead PERIOD! People on here need to realise what sort of a group we're dealing with here. They know some of the badness of groups like CIA but the Jesuits make the CIA look like kindergarden teachers and by the way they control the CIA through their SMOM. You don't control this World if your weak or thick you need Power, strength, Organisation and Intelligence which the Jesuits flourish within.

Marshal W Earp:

Actually the Jesuits have controlled the Vatican since the conclusion of the Council of Trent in the 1500s when they replaced the Franciscans and Dominicans as the top "enforcer" arm of what came to be called the "Counter Reformation".

I understand where your coming from but it wasn't until 1814 my friend and like I say 1870 when it was cemented 100% no turning back. Remember the Pope tried to destroy them in 1773 only three years before they created the Order of the Bavarian Illuminati to take their dreaded revenge. People also note how the Cardinals detest having to remove their hats when they speak of the "Society of JESUS." The Jesuits were even smart in what they called their Order knowing it would be of power just from the Jesus. Give anything a name you give it energy, then find a certain powerful name and well you know the score. Now also notice what happened to Pope's and co when they tried to get the Society of Jesus to change its name. DEAD!

Lets not forget the amazing power granted to this Andrew Willoughby Ninian Bertie by the Society of Jesus. Finally people can have the World's truly most powerful people shown to them.

1955-56 American Cancer Association Honorary Dir. SMOM Wild Bill Donovan and Board Member SMOM Elmer Bobst, Shem, Ham, and Japheth (change in position)

I think this is evidence the American Cancer Society was and is a CIA-front org ensuring that cancer continues to kill "liberals and heretics" pursuant to the Jesuits' Council of Trent. SMOM Wild Bill Donovan head of the OSS/CIA was made an honorary director of the ACS and SMOM Elmer Bobst of Warner Lambert was on the Board.

Brother Nicholas

When we speak of the Medical establishment we need to concentrate on SMOM Papal Knight David Rockefeller, a Prince of New York. It is this family which controls the Medical establishment and they will never allow the known cures for Cancer or even any known profitable medical aids. The Cancer industry is about making a large sum of money quick whilst reaching their de-population targets at the end of it for the Club of Rome. Yes they can make profits from drugging you for years but they need that kill shot. We could say well why don't they do it like with AZT and whack you a little later via the drug itself. They do this somewhat with Chemo/Rad which allows a quicker death from high body damage. Well why set yourself up for possible exposure and liability with drugs when you can let the natural Cancer do the kill quick enough, people aware of the hiv myth are now exposing the dangerous AZT and ARV's. The SMOM are ruthless in enforcing their Medical poisoning upon the sheople public. More and more alternative healers actually curing Cancer get raided daily and are drove to places like Mexico. Germany and Russia are the kings of real alternative health but alas these are ignored. One of the biggest pioneers of Ozone is Germany and who did we have to thank for this? It was actually Adolph Hitler himself who brought real health information availability to German. Now who flew to Germany for Ozone treatments for his Cancer? SMOM Papal Knight Ronald Reagan. This dirty Knight also consumed up to 2 litres of the wonderful Kombucha Tea a day which is the usual protocol levels for Cancer. Guess what? He was cured!

English people aware of the Queen and the Knights of Malta simply believe this order is a health order as they disguise themselves within this St John and Hospittler nonsense. It is very secretive within the masses what we speak about with her connections to the Vatican. Your not meant to know her true power of this land and certainly not her SERVILITY to Rome.

Thanks for excellent detailed answer once again. Is there a page on this website detailing when the Church of England came back under Jesuit/Vatican control, if indeed the Church of England is under Vatican control. Or did I misundersand, is it simply the Queen (head of Church of England) who is under Vatican influence. Is there a page detailing at what stage the English Royal Family came under the Jesuit control, as you suggest the current Queen is? Why would the British Monarch become subservient to another organisation considering the power Britain had? I have heard t suggested that the British Queen was the head of world Freemasonry, from this site I learn that it is the Jesuit Superior General who is leader of world fremasonry. Why would a British monarch accept that, considering the power the British had? And why would the British monarch join the British Knights of Malta? As a member of the British Knights of Malta she is supposed to have taken an oath of allegiance to the Papacy, correct??? Is there a page on this site detailing the British Royal Families history under Jesuit rule? Are the other leaders of the Church of England aware that the Queen is subserviant to the Vatican???

not meaning the present queen, but going back in history when the British Empire and the crown were at their height, overtly. After Henry VIII embraced the Protestant church, at what stage did the british royals come back under vatican influence, and why? Is there a page on this site detailing the history of the english royals.

The english royals were cousins of the russian royals, so why murder the russian monarchy and not the english?

JESUIT/SMOM CONTROL OF BRITAIN, U.S AND THE WORLD

CRAIG OXLEY

MON 28 2007

http://z13.invisionfree.com/THE_UNHIVED_MI...opic=26007&st=0

The Jesuits knew it would not be easy to take The British after their defeat with the attempt utilising the Spanish "Invincible Fleet" Armada on August 8 1588. So what did the Jesuits result to which was most effective right up to this day by themselves and their many arms? INFILTRATION! By the way did you notice the day was the 8-8-1588, the four eights? There must be some significance!

You will notice that the Jesuits were expelled in 1604 from England by King James I and once again their revenge was sort after. What was this revenge? It was the attempted destruction of the Parliament building which we know as Guy Fawkes day. Some places here in England still burn the Pope on the bonfire instead of Guy Fawkes. Sneaky cretinous Jesuits Greenway, Gerard and Garnett were involved in that plot. You should note that the Jesuits controlled Charles I who was the son of King James I, yes its true!! You should realise that his mother Mary Queen of Scots was also controlled by the Jesuits. Can we can see things more clearly now? So after being hammered in 1604 they took control once again in 1625 with Charles I only twenty one years later. These Long Robes simply never give in or up.

England's throne has been fully controlled by Jesuits since King George III who they were mildly giving the Cup of Borgia in order to control him during the middle 18th Century. Remember George was part of the group known as The Venetian Party of the North. This is why we're told he was mad, it was simply the poisons the Order were giving him which gave these symptoms. You should also note what George III actually called himself and signed as. He was known as Prince Elector of the New Holy Roman Empire. You should note that British Prime Minister Shelburne was an actual JESUIT himself. He was a PM during King George III's reign.

Queen "Guelph" Elizabeth II showing her Servility to the POPE!

There is no Monarch who will can ever take up the British throne unless they believe the Pope is "Infallible" which once again was Jesuitism and a way of helping them control easier since 1870. Once again if you go deep enough you find that SMOM Queen Elizabeth II is a descendant of the high power GUELPH family of Venetian Black Nobility. Infact most of these cretins come from this line. There was a photo at one time of her doing a curtsie down at the U.K's "Powerhouse" military fortress of Stonyhurst College. Eric Phelps had this photo in his lecture at ConCon2002 if I remember rightly. I find it suspicious how its totally gone missing when its such a powerful tool?

SMOM Papal Knight, Peter J. Grace

Now if we go further back you will see how the British Royalty were controlled by the Sovereign Military Order of Malta family the Grace's who were linked into the House of Stuart and incidentally Irish Roman Catholics as far back as early 17th Century. Check into how Oliver Cromwell & William of Orange III removed them from England. You should also note how the Grace's have pulled the strings of U.S Presidents such as being advisers to at least three of them. Look into William Russell Grace's W.R. Grace Company.

I suggest people check out the power of the modern day Grace, Peter J. This guy was the U.S chairman of the SMOM along with being in its creation known as Council on Foreign Relations, Newcomen Society. Notice how he graduated from the Russell Trust's Yale University linked to the Bavarian Chapter 322 (Russell Trust). He was also apart of Operation Paperclip bringing many Nazis through to the United States via Vatican marked trains which people believed were mercy trains. Vatican passports and dress were used. Go check into the W.R. Grace chemical company links to all this. When we know the Jesuit control of the SMOM and how it all controls Intelligence we begin to connect all the dots finally.

You should remember that the Council on Foreign Relations is a SMOM creation utilising Rockefeller money. What are the Rockefeller's? SMOM Papal Knights. David Rockefeller is a loyal SMOM Papal Knight controlled by Cardinal Edward Egan and of course the more powerful SMOM higher inner cores within London. When you look into these Grace's you can start to understand how much of these so-called truthteachers on the major alternative radios and sites are fully controlled agents. Once again the Order controlling BOTH sides creating oppo-sames. When we speak of Knights of Columbus, J.F.K we should never forget Peter J. Grace's contributions to this. Guess what else this rotten SMOM was known to do? Advise Cardinals which in itself shows extreme power. Remember what we've been told about how Jesuits treat Cardinals like dirt! When we know the SMOM is subordinate to the Superior General of the Jesuits this becomes more understandable since being made almost a brother Order.

Check into how Peter J Grace was linked with Citibank and Citicorp. Whilst Joseph P Grace was linked with National City Bank and the creation in 1915 of Grace National Bank which is now known as HSBC Bank USA. Remember the SMOM control all Business, Banking, Finance and Insurance. Oh funny that as he was an Atlantic Mutual Insurance Company trustee. He also goes as far to be linked into "Powerhouse" Jesuit Fordham University and also Notre Dame. Remember his work with SMOM Reagan? Reagan was groomed from when he played within that film based on American Football and Notre Dame. Funny that isn't it how Grace is a Trustee of these education "Military Fortresses?"

You know what worries me about this cretin? He was apart of Respiratory & Immune research and drugging. Now we know SMOM Papal Knight David Rockefeller controls the Medical Cartel. We also know that right now the two biggest areas of our health their attacking are both of these areas. One of their main assaults occurs from the Chemtrail Aerosol spraying of the skies almost daily, via utilising the Open Skies Treaty. Funny that isn't it? Just look into the chemicals that the Grace's were working with. These people are rooted so deeply its incredible. Unfortunately for us Peter J. Grace has nine children so although he's dead now since 1995 he still lives on after 81 years of his life in the physical and certainly his past devious works. So I just thought I'd inform you of these Grace cretins. Once again we see SMOM insurance connections with Peter J Grace's successor SMOM William J. Flynn who was the CEO up till 1994 for Mutual of America Life Insurance Company. Before I forget you should also note how William R. Grace played his part in the assassination by slug of William McKinley, the 25th U.S President back in September 1901. Who was McKinley's Vice President then? Teddy Roosevelt. Who then became President till 1909? Teddy Roosevelt. Big deal some may say but look who was one of his greatest friends. It was William R. Grace himself. This was the time when things in America really changed for the worse. Finally the Jesuits who controlled the U.S since 1868 were on a roll and their stench was smelling more amongst the aware public. So really things had gone down well before John F Kennedy came along and who the Roman Catholic Institution saw as a traitor and a complete danger. You have the likes of Lenny Bloom and Tom Heneghan speak of the changes to America since Nov 22 1963 but its well before this in reality.

Notice the timing how since 1919 that the SMOM's Royal Institute of International Affairs have controlled the States through Wall Street from 'The City' in London. To this very day the Chief Executive Officer of J.P Morgan and Chase as its now called gives the orders to the Secretary of State who relays the orders back to the U.S President. Why do you think the original Morgan Guaranty Trust Building was blown up on 16th Sept 1920? Some patriotic true opposition obviously was aware of this powerhouse. Right now the Chief Executive Officer is the young Jamie Dimon. We must remember the power of Wall Street which is riddled with British SIS Intelligence fronts such as the Blackwater Group, Blackstone Group. I must point out how Olive Group is a British SIS front within Washington D.C whilst British SIS have their U.S Headquarters within the Hay Adams Hotel in Washington D.C, recently utilised for planning to overthrough President Putin of Russia.

So in conclusion the British Royal throne and complete control of Gt Britain by the Society of Jesus has gone on since the middle 18th Century. Before this the Jesuits had control on and off and much battling was going on. These Jesuits are cockroaches that simply never go away. Remember you can set off a Nuclear device but the cockroaches will still exist and thrive. This is why the Jesuit Order has been unstoppable and so powerful all this time since their terrible creation back in 1534. I'm quite sure Royon Elias Lara SJ will certainly lead the Jesuit Order well with his Assistants when he takes over from the old Peter Hans Kolvenbach. I believe new younger blood is needed within the Superior General position for the tough finalising of the new World system their gearing us for known as New World Order.

SMOM Papal Knight Bush snr with Military Vicar & SMOM leadership Cardinal Edward Egan at the Al Smith Dinner.

Note who first publically announced New World Order back in 1991 at Congress? SMOM Papal Knight George H. W. Bush who himself has recently been questioned as to wether he's really a Bush or a Nazi Scherff. It was Bush 41's Grandfather George Herbert Walker who attended the "Military Fortress" of Stonyhurst "JESUIT" College in England, UK. You should also note that this Al Smith Dinner is where Presidents get chosen and eyed up as with hotels in London such as the Rochester. Recently John McCain was down there sucking up to Cardinal Egan calling him his Emminence. Its highly tipped that Rep John McCain will be the 44th U.S President.

[dohtml]<embed src='http://www.youtube.com/v/AKV0_LzpmHM' type='application/x-shockwave-flash' wmode='transparent' width='425' height='350'></embed>[/dohtml]

Now recently Bilderberg attendee, Gordon Brown likes to utilise these words of New World Order many times in his recently C.B.I Speech for 2007. As we've seen the Jesuits have totally controlled and created the U.K's Labour Party. Also never forget that the Jesuits were the brainchilds and true masterminds behind the Bilderberg Group which was come up with by Joseph Retinger SJ. Shame many researchers purposely forget this fact more in favour of speaking about Black Nobility Prince Bernard or more less powerful people like the con of Dennis Healey.

Hope this helps you and others.

The Aspen "SMOM" Institute

By Craig Oxley
1st June 2007

Matt who makes up the Hierachy levels of the SMOM? Black Nobility! The Sovereign Military Order of Malta have three commands within the Jesuit United States. St Patrick's Cathedral (CFR), The Aspen Institute (RIIA) and I need to located the other. You will notice Walter Paepcke from Chicago & his brother-in-law Paul Nitze creating the Aspen Institute back in 1950. Now can you now see a SMOM connection? I can! Look at Paul Nitze, what a shock once again a Banker this time with the Dillon, Read & Company. Nitze once was a director of the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs, financial division. Headed by SMOM Papal Knight Nelson Rockefeller. Who created this Office in the first place? Teddy Roosevelt who was the very person who was made U. S President thanks to SMOM Papal Knight William R. Grace. Remember Grace was one of the conspirators in the assassination of U.S President William McKinley thus making the vice-President, President. Do you think I'm connecting a few dots here?

SMOM Kissinger with Paul Nitze

Nitze also was part of the Board of Economic Warfare representing the SMOM Rockefellers. Walter was also a one time attendee in 1959 of the Bilderberg Group created by the mastermind Jesuit Joseph Retinger utilising his Prince Bernard. remember that Bilderberg is not the great all powerful secret society it is claimed to be. Bilderberg is controlled from 'The City' within london. Who controls this area? The Sovereign Military Order of Malta via their inner cores known as the Committee of 300, Order of the Garter and the more powerful Pilgrim Society. In other words the Red Brotherhood levels of power. You should also note that Nitze was married to John Teele Pratt's daughter Phyllis Pratt. John was a financier of the SMOM Rockefeller Standard Oil. Remember how we've exposed the SMOM as the true controller of Hollywood and all forms of Roman appeasement entertainment? Well Paul Nitze was a Chairman of 20th Century Fox until he helped sell it back in 1978. You should also note how highly regarded he was by many and especially SMOM Papal Knight George P. Shultz who called him "The finest public servant" he had ever known.

Walter Paepcke

Notice Walter Paepcke's Festival in Aspen for Masonic Philosopher Johann Wolfgang von Goethe's would be 200th Birthday. Goethe died in Weimar, Germany funny enough on the 22 March 1832. What could be significant about that? Well 22 of the third month meaning 22 3 therefore there may be a connection to the Bavarian Chapter 322 what most know as the Skull & Bones or Russell Trust?. Why does this get highly interesting? Well Walter attended Yale University and gained his Degree in History and Economics back in 1917. Remember where 'The Tomb' is located which is apart of the Chapter 322 (Russell Trust)? Yes Yale University exactly where Bush and others have attended and been apart of. Now heres another SMOM Connection coming forth via Paepcke's father Hermann Paepcke. You should be aware that Hermann controlled the most powerful company of its kind, known as the Chicago Mill and Lumber Company. Now whos been a Chairman of this Company? Allen M. Turner! What he is exactly? A Knight Commander of the SMOM. By the way check into Turner's connections to the Dutch.

Walter Isaacson

You should be aware of the Biography of SMOM Papal Knight Henry Kissinger. This biography was written by a director of The Aspen Institute known as Walter Isaacson. People should remember that Kissinger is a Sabbatean Apostate Racial Jew working as a loyal Labor Masonic Zionist Court Jew for the Jesuit Order. Henry Kissinger has been a conduit for the Vatican for a long time and recently was made an adviser to the Vatican although they tried to hush this up after it was originally announced. It was SMOM Papal Knight Nelson Rockefeller who bought Kissinger into the spotlight with National Security Issues. Henry Kissinger has always been closely associated with the Rockefeller family ever since. All of these SMOM Papal Knights are subordinate to Archbishop of NY, Cardinal Edward Egan and other higher level SMOM leaderships within London and Rome. You'll notice that Henry Kissinger paying tribute to the SMOM in the 1955 created Thesis called "The Meaning of History." This outlined how we're living now with all these Wars going on with more to come. It outlined the Society of Jesus's plan for their New World Order which their SMOM help them create via their pyramidal power structure.

The above video talks of the power of The Aspen Institute in Colorado. Its known as 'Wake Up America' and its an amazing lecture by ex British Intelligence agent, Dr John Coleman. You will notice the third command center is most likely also in Colorado as this seems to be a center to the Intelligence agencies which the SMOM fully control. Also notice how much land the Guelph descendant, Queen Elizabeth II owns in this area. Also remember she's the head of the British division of the Protestant arm of the SMOM. You may also be interested to know that she owns over 50% of the U.S Oil Market.

UPDATE:

2 June 2007 - Paul Nitze himself is an actual SMOM Papal Knight and a friend of SMOM William F. Buckley. Also note Nitze's Council on Foreign Relations membership. Teddy Roosevelt had his "Maltese Ranch" in the Dakotas. Thankyou to Eric Phelps for this important information.

Thanks again for excellent extensive answer. It is all very informative.

What exactly is your view on Putin? You imply CIA-MI6 want to remove him, and both of those are under Vatican control. Is Putin under Vatican control. I have read reports which both suggest he is and he isn't under Vatican/NWO control, he can't be both, so is he or isn't he. If he is then why remove him? Or is Putin an obstruction to the NWO? I did read before (elsewhere) that Kodorovskys money went into Rothschilds bank account after he was arrested in Russia. Putins regime wanted to confiscate his money and were dismayed to discover it went to Rothschilds (apparently). The implication being that Kodorovksy was being pushed/funded as a NWO future president of Russia, opposition to Putin, this in itself implying that Putin wasn't under NWO control.

You mentioned before that after the Jesuit funded Russian revolution the communists double-crossed the Vatican. Does this mean Stalin??? Did the leaders of communist Russia come under Jesuit/NWO control since??? Or is Putin outside Jesuit influence? Is there a page on this site detailing exactly the power struggle in Russia since the Russian revolution. I understand that Trotsky was intended to lead the NWO-communist Russia, but he became ill at the wrong time and when at the Black Sea being treated Stalin was able to seize power. Stalin diverted russia away from NWO/banskter/Vatican control, which is partly why the banksters funded Hitlers rise, to remove Stalin (however after Nazi Germany started printing their own money Hitler became a bigger threat to the banksters than Stalin). The Rakovsky files are evidence of this story, detailing the Rothschilds Red Symphony.

I have seen references on this site which contradict that story to a certain degree, but when I read them they weren't very clear and the logic didn't seem to be very consistent in explaining Hitler or Stalin, or indeed why Hitler lost the war if indeed the jesuits have so much control (and wanted hitler to win as seemed to be suggested in a few pages I read here)

I will very much appreciate a reply, thanks in advance

Dear Craig,

I cannot tell you how much your work has helped me and many others. Keep it up and never relent!

Matt who makes up the Hierachy levels of the SMOM? Black Nobility! The Sovereign Military Order of Malta have three commands within the Jesuit United States. St Patrick's Cathedral (CFR), The Aspen Institute (RIIA) and I need to located the other. You will notice Walter Paepcke from Chicago & his brother-in-law Paul Nitze creating the Aspen Institute back in 1950.

Nitze is a SMOM. He is also a CFR presider and friend of SMOM William F. Buckley, Jr.

Now can you now see a SMOM connection? I can! Look at Paul Nitze, what a shock once again a Banker this time with the Dillon, Read & Company. Nitze once was a director of the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs, financial division. Headed by SMOM Papal Knight Nelson Rockefeller.

Agreed.

Who created this Office in the first place? Teddy Roosevelt who was the very person who was made U.S President thanks to SMOM Papal Knight William R. Grace.

Grace was also most beloved by the Jesuits of Peru.

Remember Grace was one of the conspirators in the assassination of U.S President William McKinley thus making the vice-President, President. Do you think I'm connecting a few dots here?

Perfect! Grace controlled Roosevelt and Teddy had his "Maltese Ranch" in the Dakotas.

I would appreciate a clear view on Putins situation, and on communist Russias control since Trotsky died, and NWO control of Stalin and his successors. Did Stalin steer russia away from NWO control? Is that why he was so paranoid? Were any of his successors under NWO control. I woulhave to guess Gorbachev and Yeltsin were NWO agents, but if this is the case why did they allow Putin become president (if Putin isn't NWO), some of Putins action suggest he is an evil megalomaniac but at the same time it does appear as though he isn't NWO.

I have another question about the Protocols of Zion, I think I found a page on it previously on this site but can't locate it again. I must guess that the Protocols of Zion was written by Jesuits, or at least it was written under the instructions of the Jesuits in an effort to turn the world against jews, is this correct. I would appreciate specific information about the Protocols of Zion, who wrote it exactly, what names, and which particular Jesuits instructed for it to be written, and whatevidence there is to support this?

Thanks in advance for any answers

Every corporate permission to ACT hinges on relationship.

This means, understanding what's going on is forbidden to all who are not in relationship to one of the major >dual< parties to this worldwide conflict.

We're either in relationship to the Covenants of God, or we're in relationship to the Rebellion of Enki/Satan/ Babylon IF we manifest true understanding from the perspective of OUR particular Side of this planetary struggle, whichever side that is.

I was court-ordered by Judge Long of Montgomery County Juvenile and Domestic Relations Court to attend the STEP class through NRV Cares. I don't know why the judge ordered me to take this class except that it generates revenues for the County; the class costs $80 per person. My problem is not being able to communicate effectively with my ex-husband. ... the class is all about children. My son was in counseling and the counselor, after 3 sessions, said that he was fine and not in need of any counseling.

The STEP Course material is copyrighted by AGS/Pearson Education Inc. and was written by Don Dinkmeyer, Sr., Gary D. McKay, James S. Dinkmeyer, Don Dinkmeyer, Jr., and Joyce L. McKay.

Information on Don Dinkmeyer can be found at the AGS/Pearson website: www.agsglobe.com/parenting/don_sr.asp

Don Dinkmeyer based his writings on the work of Alfred Adler and received his certificate in psychotherapy from the Alfred Adler Institute in Chicago.

Alfred Adler was a communist and based his 'social psychology' on the works of Karl Marx. Adler's wife was a member of the communist organization "Red Help" and smuggled pieces of Marx's work out of Russia. Both Adler and his wife were deported from Austria for being communist.

Please see, "Socialist Influences on Adlerian Psychology" written by Kurt Adler.

Adlerian Psychology was instituted by the Nazis in order to help control the German population. This is mentioned in an interview with Kurt Adler, Alfred's son, the transcript of which can be found at the Alfred Adler Institute of San Francisco here:

<http://ourworld.compuserve.com/homepages/hstein/kurt-90.htm>

On Monday, June 4, 2007 I arrived at Fairlawn Presbyterian Church to attend my third class. After the information I had found out about the class material I approached Jayne Johnson, the course director, about the communist foundation for the material.

Ms. Johnson immediately suggested that I should attend some other class to satisfy my court order. She also volunteered to write a letter to the judge explaining that the class was not a good 'fit' for my needs.

When I suggested that I should continue the class in order to fulfill my obligation to the court, Ms. Johnson told me that was no longer an option. I asked her why it was no longer an option and she told me that I was too emotionally involved in order to facilitate anything constructive.

I had not been emotional in my questioning of the course material. I had merely asked if the instructor knew what the information was based on. I was questioned as to where I had gotten my information and warned about believing everything I read on the internet; most of my information was from Alfred Adler Society websites. Ms. Johnson also tried to convince me that Adlerian was the ONLY psychology available--totaling dismissing Freud or Jung. When I reminded Ms. Johnson about Freud and Jung, she then tried to convince me that Adler and Freud used the same school of thought for their psychoanalysis. The truth is Freud kicked Adler out of the Wednesday meetings because he did not share Adler's socialist views. They were associates for only six years.

I showed Ms. Johnson the information that I had printed out, with reference given to the various websites. Ms. Johnson looked over my information and then tried to keep it. She didn't ask if she could make copies, she took my documents and said, "You don't mind if I keep this do you?" I responded that they were the only copies I had and I did not wish to give her my only copies.

My conversation with Ms. Johnson took place in the community room of the church, while the students attending the class were in the classroom downstairs along with my personal belongings that I had deposited in the classroom before seeking out Ms. Johnson. When I began to leave, Ms. Johnson suggested that maybe she should get my belongings for me. ... I asked her if she was trying to keep me from speaking to the other students about what she and I had just discussed? She then suggested that she would escort me to the classroom.

From this point on I was treated as a criminal by Jayne Johnson. While I was retrieving my personal effects from the classroom Ms. Johnson called the pastor of the church (the manse is on the same property as the church) and the Sheriff's Department. I did not know she had made these calls until I had climbed the stairs from the basement classroom where I had retrieved my belongings.

When I got to the main floor of the church the Pastor was entering the doors in a hurry and when I got home (the drive from the church took about 15 minutes) a Christiansburg Police Officer arrived after I had been home about 10 minutes. He said that he had been called by a Sheriff that was at the church; he was to 'check' on me to make sure that I was OK ... because I was so distressed when I had left the church.

Ms. Johnson is a court appointed counselor. If she told the sheriff that I was a danger to myself or others I could be picked up and hauled to St. Albans Behavioral Health Hospital.

My experience is proof positive that the communism and police state that Jayne Johnson is teaching is firmly in place in the United States. If you question the communism being court ordered in the US you will be labeled unstable by the communist social workers running the system.

The court systems are run on YOUR tax dollars. They are taking your hard earned dollars to teach communism in the United States. What are you going to do about?

I would like to know more about the structure and control of the medical cartel. How do you know it is Rockefeller who is in control of the medical mafia, as you call it. And how does this power structure work. Presumably you are saying that all companies like BAYER, Pfizer, Monsanto, GlaxoSmithKline etc etc are all under some form of control by Rockefeller. So supposing one of those compainies developed a product to remove all cancers without any side-effects and surgery and would sell relatively inexpensive but they knew would make them a huge profit, Just for example, are you suggesting Rockefeller would surpress that knowledge being made public and would prevent the drug being developed, well how would he achieve that exactly, some of those medical companies are worth so much that it can't be so straight forward to make them to tow the line if it affects their profits.

How does Rockefeller affect the research and the medical education worldwide. Presumably he must control the FDA and other equivalentns.

I would very much appreciate as detailed reply as possible, particularly with names of those leading the Medical Cartel, and any evidence to support it.

If you have a page on the site covering it already you might link me to it.

The Rockefeller family have been in control of the Medical "Mafia" system present on this Earth going back around 1890. Investment Manager, Frederick T. Gates played a major part in all this. The Rockefellers had dominated all medical education since 1907. The Rockefellers wiped out hundreds of medical schools by the year 1918 via their Flexner Report and American Medical Association which they created in 1848. Study up on Harris Livermore Coulter and his teachings on the AMA along with James Gordon Burrow. Theres also the book 'Confessions of a Medical Heretic' by Jewish Dr Robert S. Mendelsohn. The American Medical Association is the top dog of the chain controlling the likes of the American Pharmaceutical Association and so forth. They dominate the lot from pricing, licensing, education, insurance and treating. It should be noted that Fordham "Military Fortress" University in the Bronx, NY has a powerful known Jesuit known as Fr' Joseph A. O'Hare SJ. This Jesuit controlled many of the these powerful players in this Medical Inquisition.

The Rockefeller family are Sovereign Military Order of Malta Papal Knights. The SMOM control every aspect of your life. The system you live within was actually a creation of the Knights Templars. Who took over from the Knights Templars? The SMOM "The Greatest Merchants on Earth!" Just look who controls the Red Cross which is used for depopulation Worldwide. Look into the Eugenics projects and you'll see how the Rockefellers dominate this along with the British Royalty once again SMOM. You should study how John D Rockefeller took control of all the Blood banks. Look to the New York City blood council and Lawrence Rockefeller. Allen Dulles is a SMOM Papal Knight and his brother is a high 4th Vow Jesuit known as Fr' Avery Dulles SJ. Whats special about these? Well check into the Cold Spring Harbor Laboratory, NY more so linked to Allen Dulles and his Estate along with Averell Harriman and John F. Dulles. These Dulles's promoted the "Racial Hygiene Doctrines" of John D. Rockefeller. This laboratory was opened in 1909. You should also note the deals behind the scenes with I.G Farben in Germany with the Rockefellers. Note its President was a SMOM Papal Knight by the name of Herman Schmitz. Once again we see banking connections to the SMOM with Schmitz being a Director of Deutsche Bank.

It is not in the Sovereign Military Order of Malta's best interests to give out cures. These have to be suppressed. We hear all day the establishment make out theres still no cure for Cancer. Well theres been many and most have been known for eons across the World and its cultures. They suppress the likes of Harry Hoxsey like you wouldn't believe and destroy anyone who helps the populace. You must remember the SMOM control their creation known as the Club of Rome. Its this organisation which controls the depopulation agenda and environment scams to help justify their devilish actions. A populace of happy, healthy people is a threat. You must realise these bluebloods make up 2% max of the Populance and they fear us like you wouldn't believe. They have to control us! One of their techniques is creating illness which enslaves you to the Medical Cartels and their quackery treatments. If your ill your hardly likely to care about uprising against them. They can profit from your misery whilst depopulating you at some point and in a way most sheople wouldn't realise. A great example of this is the hiv scam on the public and its enforced death treatments like AZT. Now we have normal children being forced on Ritalin. They do this by planting false information across the medical system and their media. The sheople fall for this thinking "well its the big boys telling me this, it must be true." Then they utilise their Education system staff to gatekeeper and decide who needs Ritalin by giving them a system such as the one they have now. These teachers study the children without real knowledge or experience. They decide if a child meets 6 of the 9 given options then they need Ritalin. This is enforced by telling the Parent they will have to put their child in other easy-learning schools. The Parent most times believes the crap in the first place and even if they dont they fear the school change. Its a system which enforces itself via the useage of the sheople who act as Gatekeepers for a system they simply do not see, choose to see or understand. Yes the FDA is fully controlled by the SMOM via their Rockefeller AMA. The FDA do not test any of the products! This is done by the Pharmaceutical companies subordinate to the AMA. They then say yes this is fine and the FDA then passes it over to the sheople to promote disease and control. You should note it was SMOM Papal Knight Teddy Roosevelt who established the FDA in June 1906 with the passing of the Pure Food and Drugs Act! Remember who conspired to assassinate U.S President William McKinley which led to Roosevelt taking office. It was the devious SMOM Papal Knight William R. Grace of the most powerful Irish Roman Catholic, Grace Family of SMOM Papal Knights. Most importantly remember that William R. Grace was a big friend of Roosevelt.

Sickening.

During my undergraduate Nutrition and Biochemistry courses, I noticed how dogmatic and unreasonable my professors were.

I wondered about it at the time. I wondered why it is that Dieticians earn less than secretaries, after four-to-six years of college education. And then when I saw what they actually practiced -- condoning and pandering to corporate bottom-line politics instead of customizing diets to make people well --

I simply left the field, and I had to start all over, in graduate school, on another line of work.

May God please intervene and restore justice and fairness to the medical profession. In the meantime, they're so rule-bound to merely reckoning where they are in their systems, processes and procedures, -- for seven years I have struggled with adrenal tumors, and they have done nothing positive whatsoever, just generated thousands of dollars in multiple, repetitive tests.

The system is so broken, it's hard to talk about it.

Title: The Role and Freedom of Conscience

Description: By Bruce Sabalasky

CRAIG-OXLEY - June 9, 2007 10:55 PM (GMT)

The Role and Freedom of Conscience

By Bruce Sabalasky

1. Introduction

The conscience is a highly misunderstood concept today, due primarily to lack of good catechesis, as well as being a much abused tool to foster the errors of modernism on today's Catholics. Freedom of conscience is used to justify any belief or behavior inconsistent with Catholic doctrine and dogma. Touting the common phrase "Spirit of Vatican II," dissenters claim that Vatican II focused on changing the Church to become up to date with the modern times. That is simply a misrepresentation of the Truth. While dissenters want to replace the Truths contained in teachings of the Church with their own under the guise of "getting up to date," what Vatican II really focused on was to find a new method to teach the same unchanging Truth (see the Opening Speech of Pope John XXIII). Essentially the intent was to change the method of teaching, not the teaching itself. This article will summarize the Church's teachings on conscience, while focusing on the authentic teachings of Vatican II, and point out the common errors today.

For a more detailed analysis of conscience, please see the Catechism of the Catholic Church (sections 1776-1802) and Summa Theologica by St. Thomas Aquinas.

2. Definition of Conscience

Before we begin, let's start with some definition of terms. First, what is the conscience? The Oxford dictionary defines conscience as:

1. a moral sense of right and wrong, especially as felt by a person and affecting behavior (my conscience won't allow me to do that)

2. an inner feeling as to the goodness or otherwise of one's behavior (my conscience is clear; has a guilty conscience)

One will notice the focus on "sense" and "feeling." Such is to be expected from a secular (i.e. humanist) book. In today's society, most people, Catholics included, would agree with such a definition. However, this definition is defective and partially contradictory with Catholic doctrine. As will be discussed later, such a definition is vague enough to support erroneous modernist views of freedom of conscience.

In Vatican II Gaudium et Spes, the conscience is defined thusly:

16. In the depths of his conscience, man detects a law which he does not impose upon himself, but which holds him to obedience. Always summoning him to love good and avoid evil, the voice of conscience when necessary speaks to his heart: do this, shun that. For man has in his heart a law written by God; to obey it is the very dignity of man; according to it he will be judged. [Cf. Rom. 2:15-16.] Conscience is the most secret core and sanctuary of a man. There he is alone with God, Whose voice echoes in his depths. [Cf. Pius XII, March 23, 1952: AAS (1952), p. 271] In a wonderful manner conscience reveals that law which is fulfilled by love of God and neighbor.

Comparing Catholic doctrine and secular views highlights the differences. One can easily see the modernist dissenters follow the secular humanist definition of conscience.

Catholic View of Conscience Secular (Humanist) View of Conscience

God's law written into a person's very heart. Moral sense or inner feeling.

A law which man does not impose on himself, because it comes from God. Emanates from within the person ("sense," "feeling")

Love good, avoid evil, love God and neighbor - always. No guidance as to what "goodness" means. Therefore, anything goes as long as the "conscience is clear."

To be obeyed. Just another factor which affects behavior.

Offers a person his/her very dignity. Dignity is ignored.

3. The Role of Conscience

What is the purpose or role of the conscience? Even the secular dictionary definition has this part right. Very simply, the conscience is used to guide moral behavior. Where the dictionary offers such guidance via human "sense" or "feeling," all subject to concupiscence[1], As was seen above, the very definition of conscience in Catholic doctrine also expounds on its role, which is to "summon man to love good and avoid evil" and "hold him to obedience" to "a law written by God into man's heart."

Dissenters always quote the Vatican II Dignitatis Humanae opening statement #1: "A sense of the dignity of the human person has been impressing itself more and more deeply on the consciousness of contemporary man, and the demand is increasingly made that men should act on their own judgment, enjoying and making use of a responsible freedom, not driven by coercion but motivated by a sense of duty."

Dissenters do agree with Catholics that the conscience is used by guide a person's behavior. However, they quickly diverge from Catholic teaching with regard to forming their conscience and applying conscience to the situations of daily life. In summary, a dissenter reduces the role of conscience to "informed choice," a term commonly heard when promoting abortion. Continuing with Vatican II Dignitatis Humanae, it is clearly seen that true Catholic teaching reaffirms the necessary obedience to the teachings of Jesus' Church:

#1: "First, the council professes its belief that God Himself has made known to mankind the way in which men are to serve Him, and thus be saved in Christ and come to blessedness. We believe that this one true religion subsists in the Catholic and Apostolic Church, to which the Lord Jesus committed the duty of spreading it abroad among all men. Thus He spoke to the Apostles: "Go, therefore, and make disciples of all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit, teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have enjoined upon you" (Matt. 28: 19-20). On their part, all men are bound to seek the truth, especially in what concerns God and His Church, and to embrace the truth they come to know, and to hold fast to it."

"This Vatican Council likewise professes its belief that it is upon the human conscience that these obligations fall and exert their binding force. The truth cannot impose itself except by virtue of its own truth, as it makes its entrance into the mind at once quietly and with power."

#2: "It is in accordance with their dignity as persons--that is, beings endowed with reason and free will and therefore privileged to bear personal responsibility--that all men should be at once impelled by nature and also bound by a moral obligation to seek the truth, especially religious truth. They are also bound to adhere to the truth, once it is known, and to order their whole lives in accord with the demands of truth."

Canon Law confirms this:

Canon 748 B1 "All are bound to seek the truth in the matters which concern God and his Church; when they have found it, then by divine law they are bound, and they have the right, to embrace and keep it."

Quite clearly according to Vatican II, the role of conscience is to seek God's Truth, embrace it, and then hold on to it once found. This negates the concept of pluralism as will be discussed later.

4. Formation and Application of Conscience

Now that we know what the conscience is and it's purpose, how does a person form his/her conscience so that proper behavior can be obtained? And when is the conscience to be used? Catholic teaching is again straightforward.

Vatican II Lumen Gentium explicitly requires the conscience to be Catholic and for the Catholic conscience to guide every action of the person all the time - no exceptions:

#36: "Because of the very economy of salvation the faithful should learn to distinguish carefully between the rights and the duties which they have as belonging to the Church and those which fall to them as members of the human society. They will strive to unite the two harmoniously, remembering that in every temporal affair they are to be guided by a Christian conscience, since not even in temporal business may any human activity be withdrawn from God's dominion."

So how are Catholic consciences formed? Vatican II Dignitatis Humanae tells us clearly:

#14: "In the formation of their consciences, the Christian faithful ought carefully to attend to the sacred and certain doctrine of the Church. [Cf. Pius XII, radio message, March 23, 1952: AAS 44 (1952) pp. 270-278] For the Church is, by the will of Christ, the teacher of the truth. It is her duty to give utterance to, and authoritatively to teach, that truth which is Christ Himself, and also to declare and confirm by her authority those principles of the moral order which have their origins in human nature itself."

The Catechism of the Catholic Church elaborates further, while referencing Dignitatis Humanae:

#1784-1785: "The education of the conscience is a lifelong task. From the earliest years, it awakens the child to knowledge and practice of the interior law recognized by conscience. Prudent education teaches virtue; it prevents or cures fear, selfishness and pride, resentment arising from guilt, and feelings of complacency, born of human weakness and faults[1]. The education of the conscience guarantees freedom and engenders peace of heart. In the formation of the conscience, the Word of God is the light for our path [Cf. Ps. 119:105], we must assimilate it in faith and prayer and put it into practice. We must also examine our conscience before the Lord's Cross. We are assisted by Gifts of the Holy Spirit, aided by the witness or advice of others and guided by the authoritative teachings of the Church [Dignitatis Humanae #14]"

So Vatican II states obviously that humans can know how to behave via the unchanging Truths taught by the Church, that they are obligated to learn said Truths, and to live their lives - via a properly formed and informed Catholic conscience - according to those Truths. Dissenters totally ignore this Truth as taught by the Church for its entire existence and reiterated by Vatican II.

5. Practical Matters - Decisions and Errors

Now that we see a person's conscience is God's law written into his/her heart, and that it is the obligation of the person to form said conscience, the next basic area is how to practically apply one's conscience to matters of daily life. A key question is can conscience err? Unfortunately, the answer is yes, due to our concupiscence[1]. The Catechism of the Catholic Church expounds well in detail, liberally referencing the Bible and Vatican II, on how to use your conscience as well as how errors are made:

#1786-1789: "Faced with a moral choice, conscience can make either a right judgment in accordance with reason and the divine law or, on the contrary, an erroneous judgment that departs from them. Man is sometimes confronted by situations that make moral judgments less assured and decision difficult. But he must always seriously seek what is right and good and discern the will of God expressed in divine law. To this purpose, man strives to interpret the data of experience and the signs of the times assisted by the virtue of prudence, by the advice of competent people, and by the help of the Holy Spirit and his gifts. Some rules apply in every case:

One may never do evil so that good may result from it; the Golden Rule: "Whatever you wish that men would do to you, do so to them." [Mt 7:12; cf. Lk 6:31; Tob 4:15.]

*charity always proceeds by way of respect for one's neighbor and his conscience:
"Thus sinning against your brethren and wounding their conscience ... you sin against Christ." [1 Cor 8:12] Therefore "it is right not to ... do anything that makes your brother stumble." [Rom 14:21]*

#1790-1794: "A human being must always obey the certain judgment of his conscience. If he were deliberately to act against it, he would condemn himself. Yet it can happen that moral conscience remains in ignorance and makes erroneous judgments about acts to be performed or already committed. This ignorance can often be imputed to personal responsibility. This is the case when a man "takes little trouble to find out what is true and good, or when conscience is by degrees almost blinded through the habit of committing sin." [Gaudium et Spes 16] In such cases, the person is culpable for the evil he commits. Ignorance of Christ and his Gospel, bad example given by others, enslavement to one's passions, assertion of a mistaken notion of autonomy of conscience, rejection of the Church's authority and her teaching, lack of conversion and of charity: these can be at the source of errors of judgment in moral conduct. If - on the contrary - the ignorance is invincible, or the moral subject is not responsible for his erroneous judgment, the evil committed by the person cannot be imputed to him. It remains no less an evil, a privation, a disorder. One must therefore work to correct the errors of moral conscience. A good and pure conscience is enlightened by true faith, for charity proceeds at the same time "from a pure heart and a good conscience and sincere faith." [1 Tim 5; cf. 3:9; 2 Tim 3; 1 Pet 3:21; Acts 24:16] The more a correct conscience prevails, the more do persons and groups turn aside from blind choice and try to be guided by objective standards of moral conduct. [Gaudium et Spes 16]"

Since dissenters follow the notion of "informed choice," they again ignore the Truth as taught by Vatican II. As a side note, one will observe that the so-called and often touted "spirit of Vatican II", with respect to conscience, does not at all agree with the real Truth of Vatican II.

6. Freedom of Conscience

Now to the fundamental point for which we've all been waiting. So what exactly is freedom of conscience? Back to Vatican II Dignitatis Humanae, starting with its opening statement:

#1: "A sense of the dignity of the human person has been impressing itself more and more deeply on the consciousness of contemporary man, and the demand is increasingly made that men should act on their own judgment, enjoying and making use of a responsible freedom, not driven by coercion but motivated by a sense of duty."

Does this mean that anything goes, as long as one acts on his or her own judgment responsibly motivated by a sense of duty? If the notion of "informed choice" is used, then one could come to such a conclusion. That is what dissenters want, who further claim that the "restrictive old-fashioned" teachings of the Church are coercive and oppressing their right to choose. So then, what is true freedom of conscience according to Catholic teaching? Vatican II Dignitatis Humanae has the answer:

#3: "Further light is shed on the subject if one considers that the highest norm of human life is the divine law--eternal, objective and universal--whereby God orders, directs and governs the entire universe and all the ways of the human community by a plan conceived in wisdom and love. Man has been made by God to participate in this law, with the result that, under the gentle disposition of divine Providence, he can come to perceive ever more fully the truth that is unchanging. Wherefore every man has the duty, and therefore the right, to seek the truth in matters religious in order that he may with prudence form for himself right and true judgments of conscience, under use of all suitable means."

"Truth, however, is to be sought after in a manner proper to the dignity of the human person and his social nature. The inquiry is to be free, carried on with the aid of teaching or instruction, communication and dialogue, in the course of which men explain to one another the truth they have discovered, or think they have discovered, in order thus to assist one another in the quest for truth."

"Moreover, as the truth is discovered, it is by a personal assent that men are to adhere to it."

"On his part, man perceives and acknowledges the imperatives of the divine law through the mediation of conscience. In all his activity a man is bound to follow his conscience in order that he may come to God, the end and purpose of life. It follows that he is not to be forced to act in a manner contrary to his conscience. Nor, on the other hand, is he to be restrained from acting in accordance with his conscience, especially in matters religious. The reason is that the exercise of religion, of its very nature, consists before all else in those internal, voluntary and free acts whereby man sets the course of his life directly toward God. No merely human power can either command or prohibit acts of this kind.[3]"

"The social nature of man, however, itself requires that he should give external expression to his internal acts of religion: that he should share with others in matters religious; that he should profess his religion in community. Injury therefore is done to the human person and to the very order established by God for human life, if the free exercise of religion is denied in society, provided just public order is observed."

"There is a further consideration. The religious acts whereby men, in private and in public and out of a sense of personal conviction, direct their lives to God transcend by their very nature the order of terrestrial and temporal affairs. Government therefore ought indeed to take account of the religious life of the citizenry and show it favor, since the function of government is to make provision for the common welfare. However, it would clearly transgress the limits set to its power, were it to presume to command or inhibit acts that are religious."

#4. "The freedom or immunity from coercion in matters religious which is the endowment of persons as individuals is also to be recognized as their right when they act in community. Religious communities are a requirement of the social nature both of man and of religion itself."

"Provided the just demands of public order are observed, religious communities rightfully claim freedom in order that they may govern themselves according to their own norms, honor the Supreme Being in public worship, assist their members in the practice of the religious life, strengthen them by instruction, and promote institutions in which they may join together for the purpose of ordering their own lives in accordance with their religious principles."

"Religious communities also have the right not to be hindered, either by legal measures or by administrative action on the part of government, in the selection, training, appointment, and transferal of their own ministers, in communicating with religious authorities and communities abroad, in erecting buildings for religious purposes, and in the acquisition and use of suitable funds or properties."

"Religious communities also have the right not to be hindered in their public teaching and witness to their faith, whether by the spoken or by the written word. However, in spreading religious faith and in introducing religious practices everyone ought at all times to refrain from any manner of action which might seem to carry a hint of coercion or of a kind of persuasion that would be dishonorable or unworthy, especially when dealing with poor or uneducated people. Such a manner of action would have to be considered an abuse of one's right and a violation of the right of others."

"In addition, it comes within the meaning of religious freedom that religious communities should not be prohibited from freely undertaking to show the special value of their doctrine in what concerns the organization of society and the inspiration of the whole of human activity. Finally, the social nature of man and the very nature of religion afford the foundation of the right of men freely to hold meetings and to establish educational, cultural, charitable and social organizations, under the impulse of their own religious sense."

Boiling down the long explanation results in one simple idea - that no one can be forced against his/her will to believe one thing or another. Only the individual person has the right to choose his/her beliefs. Yes, that means that even the 100% Truth of Catholic beliefs cannot be forced onto a person. Canon Law confirms this:

Can. 748 §2 "It is never lawful for anyone to force others to embrace the Catholic faith against their conscience."

However, this does not imply that one can believe anything and act accordingly, especially if one claims to be Catholic. As clearly stated previously, Vatican II Dignitatis Humanae tells us "In the formation of their consciences, the Christian faithful ought carefully to attend to the sacred and certain doctrine of the Church." Jesus teachings as transmitted through His Church provide us the real freedom - the freedom from sin and eternal death (i.e. loss of salvation).

7. Errors Commonly Derived from Misunderstanding Freedom of Conscience

Various errors flow from the incorrect application or a distorted view of freedom of conscience. The most common errors today are directly inter-related and are essentially part of a self-affirming system of error.

7.1 False Religious Freedom - Any Religion is as Good as Another - False Ecumenism

Let's refresh our memory with respect to the teaching of Vatican II Dignitatis Humanae on religious freedom:

#1: "Religious freedom, in turn, which men demand as necessary to fulfill their duty to worship God, has to do with immunity from coercion in civil society. Therefore it leaves untouched traditional Catholic doctrine on the moral duty of men and societies toward the true religion and toward the one Church of Christ."

We see the real definition of religious freedom, that being immunity from coercion. Applying an erroneous view of freedom of conscience to religion leads to the modernistic, but false, notion whereby "one religion is as good as another." Vatican II clearly states not that any belief system is good, but rather that a person is duty-bound to seek and hold to God's Truth [Dignitatis Humanae, Canon Law #748]. While it is true that one cannot force another to be Catholic, similarly one cannot just believe any religion's tenets and then claim to be Catholic.

Subsequently derived, then, is a false ecumenism whereby dissenters want to incorporate other faith's ideas into Catholicism. Vatican II specifically teaches that the Catholic Church has the complete fullness of Truth, and that it is the (singular!) Church founded personally by Jesus Christ [3]. There is one true Church and one true Faith. There is no need and no logic to incorporate erroneous faith ideas into Catholicism which already possesses the fullness of Truth - because that Truth came from Jesus Christ. These themes are much more fully developed in the recent document Dominus Iesus.

Those dissenters who want to "update the Catholic Faith to modern times" are really people who reject God's gift of Faith and want to take others down with them - misery loves company as they say. Here we learn how totally hypocritical are the dissenters. True Catholics have the right to the Truth as taught by the Church. Dissenters are trying to coerce the Church to accept their errors and opinions which thereby pollutes the Catholic Faith. Therefore, by oppressing the Truth, the dissenters deny a true Catholic's right to a pure and proper Catholic Faith. Obstinate dissenters should convert to the Truth or, failing that, just leave the Church and go find a religion which suits their fancy. Of course, the father of lies, the author of dissension, doesn't want dissenters to leave because his plan is to destroy Jesus Christ's Church.

Sedevacantists often pick on one point that they use to claim that the Vatican II Council is invalid, that being on religious freedom. They believe that in the past, many Popes have taught that religious freedom is against the teachings of the Church. Referring back to Dignitatis Humanae #1 above, what Vatican II teaches is that the unchanging Catholic doctrine is still, has always been, and always will be - in effect. Vatican II is by no means inconsistent with past Church teachings.

What is made crystal clear is that civil society may not coerce a religious belief, such as forced in atheistic communist China, and that individuals cannot be forced to believe the Truth, even the Catholic Faith of the One True God. The Catholic Church is obligated to teach the Truth to the best of its ability, but the bottom line is that God endowed each person with a free will, and that person must - by that same free will - accept the Truth. Faith is a gift which must be accepted by the person, and it cannot be shoved down their throat. A person can refuse the gift of Faith, and their soul will suffer the consequences of their choices for all eternity after their particular judgment after death.

7.1. Pluralism - One can Believe Anything Given Thoughtful Consideration

Pluralism is the concept whereby many belief systems exist and that each one, with its set of rules, is roughly equivalent to another. All one needs to do is thoughtfully consider the information or opinions (and perhaps even some facts!) to form a responsible opinion used to guide behavior. Pluralism depends on a misapplication of freedom of conscience because with many belief systems to choose from, a person requires "freedom of conscience" to pick what belief system best suits that person. Instead of modifying behavior to match a belief system, the pluralist searches for a belief system - or more likely, a syncretistic (i.e. pick and choose from here and there - like New Age does) set of parts of belief systems - which matches, or better stated, justifies, his/her behavior. This, of course, is in error. The Church teaches that pluralism, which inherently lacks the concept of a transcendent unchanging Truth, leads to a totalitarian society. [2].

One popular belief system hatched from pluralism is "situation ethics" where the rules of moral behavior are dependent on the circumstances rather than being set upon a firm solid foundation of unchanging Truth. This is effectively a license to justify any immoral behavior since one can easily find some excuse given our concupiscence. [1]

Another common behavior of dissenters who practice pluralism is the aggressive attack on orthodox Catholic teaching. Such dissenters will claim that the Churches teachings - and those who faithfully follow them - are "oppressive" or "intolerant" or "deny a person their rights." The fact of the matter is that the dissenters are essentially intolerant of and are oppressing the Truth of God as taught by His Church.

Some dissenters also claim that pluralism is acceptable as long as one adds the qualifier of "without harm to the other person," which is clearly false. For example, abortionists and women who choose abortion purportedly claim their right as enabled by freedom of conscience but it is obvious that an innocent unborn baby is killed. This is a real example of whereby those in power - the adults - force their erroneous belief on a person incapable of defending himself at the cost of his very life - the baby.

Pluralism has clearly been condemned throughout Church history, from Biblical times to the Catechism of the Catholic Church today.

CCC #815 What are these bonds of unity? Above all, charity "binds everything together in perfect harmony." [Col 3:14] But the unity of the pilgrim Church is also assured by visible bonds of communion: profession of one faith received from the Apostles; common celebration of divine worship, especially of the sacraments; apostolic succession through the sacrament of Holy Orders, maintaining the fraternal concord of God's family. [Cf. Unitatis Redintegratio 2; Lumen Gentium 14; CIC, can. 205.]

John 17:11 "And now I am no more in the world, but they are in the world, and I am coming to thee. Holy Father, keep them in thy name, which thou hast given me, that they may be one, even as we are one."

Luke 11:17 "But he, knowing their thoughts, said to them, Every kingdom divided against itself is laid waste, and a divided household falls."

Mark 3:24-25 "If a kingdom is divided against itself, that kingdom cannot stand. And if a house is divided against itself, that house will not be able to stand."

Matthew 12:25 "Knowing their thoughts, he said to them, Every kingdom divided against itself is laid waste, and no city or house divided against itself will stand;"

Rather, the Church teaches unity - that we all believe the same dogma and doctrine in the Faith. Lack of unity leads to destruction, and pluralism is certainly a lack of unity since everyone can believe something different. A fuller treatment of this subject is contained in Dominus Iesus.

Conclusion

This analysis has shown that Vatican II has clearly and consistently promoted the authentic and unchanging Truth of the Catholic Faith as handed down from Jesus Christ and His Apostles. Your conscience is God's very law written into your heart, which must be nourished to keep it alive and well. Form your conscience enlightened by God's Truth. Don't settle for ignorance, which is certainly not bliss, but rather possible damnation (Hosea 4:6) due to negligence. Why wait? Start today, your soul depends on it.

#44. "If there is no transcendent truth, in obedience to which a person achieves his full identity, then there is no sure principle for guaranteeing just relations between people. Their self-interest as a class, group or nation would inevitably set them in opposition to one another. If one does not acknowledge transcendent truth, then the force of power takes over, and each person tends to make full use of the means at his disposal in order to impose his own interests or his own opinion, with no regard for the rights of others. People are then respected only to the extent that they can be exploited for selfish ends. Thus, the root of modern totalitarianism is to be found in the denial of the transcendent dignity of the human person who, as the visible image of the invisible God, is therefore by his very nature the subject of rights which no one may violate--no individual, group, class, nation or State. Not even the majority of a social body may violate these rights, by going against the minority, by isolating, oppressing, or exploiting it, or by attempting to annihilate it. (Cf. Leo XIII, Encyclical Letter Libertas Praestantissimum: loc. cit., 224-226.)".

NI deal struck in historic talks

http://news.bbc.co.uk/1/hi/northern_ireland/6494599.stm

Devolved government is to return to Northern Ireland following an historic meeting between the leaders of the DUP and Sinn Fein.

Ian Paisley and Gerry Adams, sitting side by side for their first news conference in Stormont, confirmed that power-sharing would begin on 8 May.

Mr Paisley said the DUP was committed to full participation in government and Mr Adams said it was a "new era".

Tony Blair said it was a very important day for the people of Northern Ireland.

The British and Irish governments had said they would shut the assembly if an executive was not agreed on Monday.

Emergency legislation will now be rushed through Parliament on Tuesday to give effect to the 8 May power-sharing deal.

Mr Adams - wearing his Easter lily to commemorate those who died in the 1916 rebellion - and Mr Paisley were sitting at one corner of a table at Stormont.

After the meeting, Mr Paisley said: "Our goal has been to see devolution returned in a context where it can make a real, meaningful improvement in the lives of all the people of this part of the United Kingdom.

"On Saturday, the DUP executive overwhelmingly endorsed a motion committing our party to support and participate fully in government in May of this year - this is a binding resolution."

Mr Adams said he welcomed Mr Paisley's statement.

"I believe the agreement reached between Sinn Fein and the DUP - including the unequivocal commitment made by their party executive and reiterated today - to the restoration of political institutions on 8 May marks the beginning of a new era of politics on this island," he said.

"The basis of the agreement between Sinn Fein and the DUP follows Ian Paisley's unequivocal and welcome commitment to support and participate fully in the political institutions on 8 May."

Prime Minister Tony Blair said it was "a very important day for the people of Northern Ireland, but also for the people and the history of these islands".

"Everything we have done over the last 10 years has been a preparation for this moment."

Irish Prime Minister Bertie Ahern said this had "the potential to transform the future of this island".

"This morning saw unprecedented and very positive developments."

Northern Ireland Secretary Peter Hain said: "When you have got both major parties saying we will deliver... that gives me confidence that this process is finally achieved."

He said people now wanted their politicians to concentrate on "bread and butter issues".

After 8 May, he said there would still be a need for a secretary of state, as well as ministers, until there was devolution in justice and policing.

Water 'reprieve'

Both Sinn Fein and the DUP have asked the British government not to issue water bills due to be sent out this week for the first time.

Until now, people in Northern Ireland have not had to pay separate charges for their water supply. But the government has moved to change this, in line with the rest of the United Kingdom.

Speaking after Mr Paisley and Mr Adams' historic news conference, SDLP leader Mark Durkan while welcoming the development, said he could not understand why devolution could not happen on Monday.

The Ulster Unionist leader Sir Reg Empey said the DUP could have got the same deal much earlier.

An order signed by the NI secretary restarted devolution at midnight.

In the assembly election earlier this month, the DUP and Sinn Fein emerged as the two largest parties.

Chancellor Gordon Brown promised an extra £1bn if devolution was back on Monday on top of £35bn pledged by the government over four years.

The power-sharing executive will have four DUP ministers, three Sinn Fein, two UUP and one SDLP.

The Northern Ireland Assembly has been suspended since October 2002, amid allegations of an IRA spy ring at Stormont.

A subsequent court case collapsed. Direct rule has been in place since that date.

I was told by an expatriate Irish Protestant in Cyprus four years ago that Ian Paisley was a traitor to the gospel and a coadjutor for Rome. I did not believe it at the time, but after this treason with the pro-Nazi Jesuit Coadjutor Jerry Adams, it is obvious.

Paisley is also a friend of that pro-Masonic Jesuit coadjutor ruling Bob Jones University, Bob Jones III.

Wolf in sheep's clothing. I'm still pretty disappointed....

CRAIG-OXLEY - May 5, 2007 10:49 PM (GMT)

Dear Pastor Keator,

Personally, I wish to know just who is on the Lord's side. This one of the purposes of my ministry. When Alex Jones, Ron Paul and a host of other supposed patriots begin to attack Rome, then I will cease my attack upon these men.

Further, comparing the Prophet Daniel to Ian Paisley is quite unfair to Daniel. Daniel was thrown into the lion's den---and all the children of Israel in Babylon knew it! They knew of his faithfulness to the LORD and of his attempted murder by the king and his agents. Daniel NEVER COMPROMISED his loyalty to the Son of God who delievered him from "the mouths of the lions" Heb. 12:23. Before Belshazzar, Daniel rebuked the king, thus risking his life before a royal guard who would have loved to have kill him on the spot.

But Paisley? First he is an advisor to that Jesuit pawn and betrayer of both the Anglican Church and the Protestant Northern Irish, Queen Elizabeth II. Paisley should be denouncing her in open Parliament as a Jesuit tool serving the Papacy. This witch actually lowered herself to have an "audience" with that "man of sinn" in Rome, JP II! How can she possibly be fulfilling her oath as the protector of the Protestant faith as per her coronation oath? Secondly, Paisley sits down with the murderer of his brethren, Jesuit Gerry Adams. I would rather die than make this agreement with the devil and betray my own people of race and faith. The Northern Irish will die by the thousands for this once Ireland is "united!" "Home Rule" in Ireland is Rome Rule!

These things Ian Paisley has done! He has betrayed us, unlike Daniel. There is no comparison dear brother!

In conclusion, all the gospel preaching in the world will never stop the Jesuits unless we get civilly involved by directly opposing these exceedingly great sinners before the Lord. Thieves caught in the act of ransacking your home don't need the gospel, they need a bullet to the head.

As our Reformed Calvinist brethren both preached the gospel in the open fields and fought with their swords of just defense under the banner of a legitimate government, SO MUST WE!

With much love and concern,

Brother Eric

Notice folks the background behind Jesuit Gerry Adams. The Council on Foreign Relations controlled by the Sovereign Military Order of Malta from St Patrick's Cathedral by Archbishop of NY and SMOM Americas head Cardinal Edward Egan, Prince of the Roman Catholic Church.

A truly sickening picture of Sovereign Military Order of Malta Papal Knight Tony Blair walking along with Jesuit Gerry Adams and that first hand bloody murderer Martin McGuinness.

CRAIG-OXLEY - May 9, 2007 04:09 PM (GMT)

Bro. Eric

Thank you for this post. I have been in contact over the years with a Rev. Ivan Foster, a staunch AV1611 Bible believer and long time colleague of Dr Paisley's. With all due respect to Dr Paisley, I believe that Rev Foster is in a position to know whether or not Dr Paisley was coerced into the present arrangements.

I reproduce below an exchange of emails I have had today with Rev Foster. His deep concern over today's developments is shared by many bible believers over there. Whatever practical progress Dr Paisley may be aspiring to, the cardinal rule when dealing with Rome must always be: "Never trust the Pope, or any of his agents."

[And the doctrine of the Jesuits is to never keep faith with heretics. Jesuit Gerry Adams will make sure of it.]

I believe that your researches will amply justify that principle.

But this rule has been broken and dark days lie ahead for the Province.

[Indeed! Between the destruction of Orthodox Serbia and Protestant Northern Ireland and the Anglican Church uniting with the Papacy, the European Union can now be fully under Papal/Roman Catholic control. We are witnessing the end of Reformation civilizations as intended by the Order and its militaristic Counter Reformation. And Paisley knows this!]

The Lord's people in Ulster need prayer as never before.

See this article in particular, <http://www.ivanfoster.org/article.asp?date=5/3/2007&seq=1>.

For the character of Adams and McGuinness, see also The Informer, ISBN 0-59-304285-9 by Sean O'Callaghan, a former IRA insider and hit man, who voluntarily surrendered to the authorities in 1988. He was gaoled for a total of 539 years (that is the figure, it's not a mistake on my part) for terrorist offences, including two murders but was released in 1996 under the so-called 'Good Friday' Agreement, by which 300 convicted terrorists were freed (many were convicted multiple murderers, about 80% were Catholic IRA members, the others being so-called 'Loyalist' or Protestant paramilitaries but many were more likely underworld gangsters ruthlessly intent on exploiting the unstable political situation for their own ends - the IRA of course repeatedly resorted to armed robbery with violence to finance their terror campaign).

For example, Callaghan reveals, p 298-9, how both Adams and McGuinness were complicit in the IRA bombing of Canary Wharf in February 1996 in the heart of London, which claimed two lives, caused a total of 39 casualties and resulted in an estimated £s 85 million in damage (approximately $US 170 million). They now 'share power' in Ulster.

[This would not be possible if the Jesuits did not rule the British government. This means that the IRA and British Intelligence work together and have done so since the early 20th century. Paisley also knows this!]

See <http://news.bbc.co.uk/onthisday/hi/dates/s...000/2539265.stm>

Note that Westminster has never supported our Protestant brothers and sisters in Christ in Ulster. Westminster despises them - as proved by the heinous Anglo-Irish Agreement arranged by the then Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher in 1985 which laid the foundation for enabling a hostile foreign power, namely the Republic of Ireland, to meddle in the affairs of part of the United Kingdom, with a view to re-absorbing the Province into a united Catholic Ireland, against the wishes of the Protestant majority. (Readers should consult Catholic Terror in Ireland, by Avro Manhattan, for useful background detail and insight into the Irish Catholic mentality. I seem to recall you have some reservations about Avro Manhattan but he did research his material on Ulster in some depth, visited the Province and interviewed representatives of both sides.)

[Although a Jesuit Coadjutor and Knight of Malta/MI5, Avro Manhattan did tell the truth about the essential problem in Ireland. He wrote of the Jesuits seeking to unite the entire island under their Provincial in Dublin but never said that the Order ruled the British government via the RIIA. Both Manhattan and Paisley knew this and were silent, thus betraying the Lord and his Body in the North.]

See <http://news.bbc.co.uk/onthisday/hi/dates/s...000/2539849.stm>

That strategy for dismantling Ulster is still on track, as proved by today's developments, Dr Paisley's evident optimism notwithstanding. I believe that your researches will confirm a fact that Dr Paisley should staunchly have adhered to, in spite of the various pressures on him, which I readily acknowledge to be real:

Rome does not share power.

[Amen! When does a man of God unequivocally say "NO," no matter what? If this was not the time, there is never a time! The Jesuits with their Irish Catholic fanatics had been murdering Irish Protestants for eight years (1641-1649). According to the priests themselves, the total number killed was in excess of 300,000! Cromwell was on his sickbed suffering from malaria when he tore himself from that bed and invaded Ireland. He quickly reduced Drogheda and Wexford resulting in the surrender of the island. Had Cromwell refused to do this, all of the Protestants would have been murdered and the Reformation finished in that land. After Ireland was given its "independence" in 1922 over 200,000 Protestants left Ireland so that they could have a life in the US and Canada. More persecution is now sure to follow.]

She moves from being a lamb when in the minority, to a fox when in equality, to a tigress when in the majority, as Bro. Chick observed in Smokescreens, p 32.

Bro. Chick in Smokescreens p 17, also reveals how Rome, at the end of the 'fox' phase of her strategy often became friendly towards Protestants to make them drop their guard so she could embark more efficiently on the 'tigress' phase. This was true of the St Bartholomew's Day massacre of 1572, the Irish massacres of 1641 and Waldensian massacre of 1655. I am sure that there are other instances. Ulster is dangerously close to another 'tigress' phase. Her Protestant people have no protection from Westminster and politically are subject to the over-arching Catholic EU.

[Agreed!]

Moreover, foreign immigration (thanks to the Catholic EU, European Union, precursor, I believe, to the Beast's kingdom of Revelation 13) of non-Protestants into the Province, together with the rest of the UK, is making the position of Ulster Protestants (both saved and unsaved) even more precarious.

Ulster is in effect surrounded, outflanked and infiltrated by the enemy - just as the US was in the Vietnam War, another Vatican-inspired bloodbath. (See Manhattan, Why Did We Go?)

Note also Rome's most recent efforts to discredit the testimony of the late Dr Rivera and Bro. Chick, http://www.catholic.com/library/sr_chick_tracts_p1.asp.

Rome does not change and neither does the Devil, John 8:44. That too should be remembered - see below.

We can only hope for the Lord's soon return, 1 Thessalonians 4:16, 17.

Yours in the Lord Jesus Christ, 2 Chronicles 14:11
Alan

Dear Rev Foster

It is with foreboding that I listened to today's media reports of power sharing going ahead.

I do not believe that Rome has changed since the terrible events of 1641, because the Devil has not changed, 1 Peter 5:8-10.

That simple biblical fact seems to have been overlooked in many quarters, even where it ought to have been kept uppermost in the mind.

You, your family and your fellow bible believers are assured of my continuing prayer support.

Miracle in Belfast as Protestant `Dr. No' joins forces with IRA chieftain to govern together

SHAWN POGATCHNIK | AP | May 8, 2007 04:08 PM EST
<http://www.huffingtonpost.com/huff-wires/2...orthern-ireland>

BELFAST, Northern Ireland — Bitter enemies from Northern Ireland's bloody past joined forces Tuesday atop a new Northern Ireland government, a once-unimaginable achievement that both sides pledged would consign decades of death and destruction to history.

The bombastic Protestant evangelist Ian Paisley, long known as "Dr. No" for his refusal to compromise with the Roman Catholic minority, formed an administration with Sinn Fein deputy leader Martin McGuinness, a veteran commander in the outlawed Irish Republican Army, which long dreamed of wiping Northern Ireland from the map.

Their long-polarized parties will jointly run a 12-member administration that took control of the territory's government departments from Britain. Their new shared agenda: improve hospitals, schools, roads and other services and formally cooperate with the neighboring Republic of Ireland.

Power-sharing was the central goal of the U.S.-brokered Good Friday accord of 1998, a pact rejected by Paisley's Democratic Unionist Party at the time because it included Sinn Fein. Britain and Ireland toiled to bring the factions together after 2003, when voters made them the dominant parties in the Northern Ireland Assembly, the foundation stone for cooperation.

Paisley's conversion to compromise became possible because the IRA finally convinced him it would no longer try to oust Northern Ireland from the United Kingdom by force. The IRA renounced violence and disarmed in 2005, has not been implicated in significant violence since, and this year agreed with its Sinn Fein allies to accept the authority of the Northern Ireland police.

British Prime Minister Tony Blair, who made brokering peace a top priority since rising to power in 1997, paid particular tribute to Paisley — noting his stubborn stand had forced the Sinn Fein-IRA movement to go farther than many thought possible.

"I lost count of how many times I was told he would never accept sharing power," Blair said of Paisley. "But he told me, in the right circumstances, that he would. He said he wanted to see Northern Ireland at peace and would not flinch from doing what was necessary to get that peace — on the only terms that he thought would endure. I believed him, and he has been true to his word."

Paisley's Democratic Unionists hold five Cabinet posts and Sinn Fein four, while the moderate Protestants of the Ulster Unionists got two and the moderate Catholics of the Social Democratic and Labour Party one. Positions were allocated on the basis of each party's strength in the Assembly.

Even though all of Northern Ireland knew for weeks this day was coming, it still stunned observers to see Paisley, 81, and McGuinness, 56, smiling beside each other alongside Blair and Irish Prime Minister Bertie Ahern.

Paisley shared the amazement.

"If you had told me some time ago that I would be standing here to take this office, I would have been totally unbelieving," Paisley told a crowd of jubilant, even giddy politicians and other dignitaries, including U.S. Sen. Ted Kennedy, packed into the lobby of Stormont Parliamentary Building.

Paisley, who leads his own fire-and-brimstone church as well as a political party, mined the wisdom of the Old Testament's King Solomon, who held that societies inevitably face a time of war and of peace, of hate and of healing.

"From the depths of my heart, I believe Northern Ireland has come to a time of peace, a time when hate will no longer rule," Paisley said. "How good it will be to be part of a wonderful healing in this province. Today we have begun the work of planting, and we will all look for the great and blessed harvest."

McGuinness, renowned as an organizer but not for oratorical flair, said the road ahead for Northern Ireland will bring "many twists and turns. It is however a road which we have chosen."

Turning to Paisley, McGuinness wished his new partner "the best as we step forward towards the greatest and most exciting challenge of our lives."

Back in the 1960s headwaters of the sectarian conflict, Northern Ireland was governed exclusively by Protestants _ and Catholics were demanding equal rights in housing, jobs and the vote. Extremists on both sides opted for violence.

Paisley, dismissed in those days by most Protestant politicians as a lunatic bigot, led Protestant mobs against Catholic marchers, while his hate-filled speeches fanned support for outlawed Protestant paramilitary groups.

He spent time in prison for organizing illegal protests, but rebounded to build a Protestant party, the Democratic Unionists, that campaigned on a promise to "smash Sinn Fein." He was known for thundering "Not an inch!", "No surrender!" and "Never!" when urged to compromise.

McGuinness, a high school dropout and apprentice butcher, joined a revived IRA that developed new tactics, particularly car bombs, to ravage Northern Ireland and reduce the territory to near-anarchy in the early 1970s, the bloodiest years.

He spent three years in prison for IRA membership, but emerged to become a senior commander committed to making the IRA an unbreakable force of small, secretive cells.

Throughout the conflict, about 3,700 people died and tens of thousands were maimed in Northern Ireland, England and the Irish Republic before Sinn Fein leader Gerry Adams, McGuinness and other senior IRA figures persuaded the underground organization to cease fire in 1997.

The Good Friday accord of 1998, supported by Sinn Fein even though it contained a target for the IRA to disarm by mid-2000, foresaw a future of compromise centered on Protestants and Catholics sharing power. It assumed traditional moderate parties would stay solidly in the majority.

But when the IRA initially refused to surrender any of its Libyan-supplied arsenal, Protestant support faded for Nobel Peace Prize laureate David Trimble, the Protestant pragmatist who led power-sharing, and toward Paisley, who decried the Good Friday pact for conceding too much to Sinn Fein.

A 2003 election for the Northern Ireland Assembly produced twin triumphs for Paisley and Sinn Fein, a seemingly impossible combination.

But Blair and Ahern coaxed the two sides together in a seemingly endless series of summits, bluntly telling Sinn Fein leaders they must meet Paisley's demand for a cast-iron end to the IRA. Eventually, it happened to Paisley's satisfaction.

With the IRA fading away and Sinn Fein helping govern part of the United Kingdom, Blair _ who is expected to announce his retirement from office this week _ called on the crowd to remember the horrors of Northern Ireland's yesteryears.

"We need to remember what it was like _ to marvel at how it was changed," he said.

I agree in premise that this is where a lot of the trauma based mind control i.e. John Decamps book, the Franklin Cover-up- came from. but I think that many of the techniques actually goes muc farther back as this was nothing new for the Babylonian church, having practiced these things from the beginning of time, and from Nimrod on down.

Scripture says, the anti-christ sits on the throne of God, saying he is god, the old Baptist and protestant denominations used to hold this in common, but with the advent of the rapture lye and baptist converting to sunday, see ana baptist and waldesses and thier holding of true biblical doctrin.

Title: Chris has some info to give

CRAIG-OXLEY - June 1, 2007 01:31 AM (GMT)

Hey Eric,

I have some information you might find useful. The full title of our new documentary is, "Riddles in Stone: The Secret Architecture of Washington D.C." During the production phase, I made two trips to Washington and was able to shoot both inside and outside government buildings. On the inside of the US Capitol/ Senate building, there are several statues of Catholic priests, including the Jesuit priest who discovered the Mississippi River (can't remember his name, but he's got a large statue in the hallway).

Jacques Marquette after whom Marquette University in Milwaukee, Wisconsin, is named. This stinking Jesuit is in the Senate building? What an abomination.

In addition, inside the hall of lawmakers, alongside images of Moses, Confucius and Solomon (and others) are busts of at least two popes (again, can't remember their names).

Wow!

The reason I tell you this information is because it is not included in the film.

I wish it was!

Also, were you aware that the Vatican Bank and the bank used by the Freemasons of Europe are one and the same?

No! It fits.

This was told to me by a friend, Buff Parry (not a Christian, but we interview him in the film) who is a professional cypher and researcher. Buff believes this connection may have had something to do with the murder of Roberto Calvi (i.e. known as "God's Banker" -- as I'm sure you know).

Makes sense!

Another piece of information comes from Trevor McKeown, the Grand Historian of the Masonic lodge in British Columbia -- that the double headed eagle used by Scottish Rite Masonry was once the emblem of the Eastern & Western Roman empire. Did you know this, or can you confirm it?

I knew this and it most assuredly true. This is why Scottish Rite Masonry is in essence Roman fascism as is Stalinist Communism.

God bless,

Chris

Brother Eric

CRAIG-OXLEY - June 1, 2007 02:22 AM (GMT)

Dear Eric,

Many have used the Double-Headed Eagle and it goes way back further than the Roman Empire. Its really the representation of 'The Rebis' or the Hermaphrodite. You will notice how Jesuit William J Fulco utilised the Hermaphrodite in Opus Dei Mel Gibson's 'The Passion.' Of course the Jesuits have to twist the creator(s) reasons for initial Hermaphroditism.

What you need to understand is how when your in the womb before your a fetus your an embyro. Your neither male or female and therefore looked upon as a Hermaphrodite. This word comes from the Greek gods of Hermes and Aphrodite united in the act of creation. You will notice from day 49 onwards the spirit enters the body via the Pineal Gland area known as the Third Eye Chakra and from then on you develope into the sex and human being you become by birth. So in reality theres nothing evil about this but the Jesuit has to make it out to be bad. This is why its known as the divine hermaphrodite.

The symbolism is everywhere and we could also say its linked to the Amanita Muschari mushroom which most of the priestly dresses of not only Jewish priests but Catholic priests also tie into it. Remember the Mushroom is looked also as a Hermaphrodite as its stem is the Phallic or Yod whilst the round head when first forming is the female organ known as the Yoni. Do not slag me off for using these terms, they come from the Judiac peoples who supposedly created much of what Christianity is based on being Judeo-Christian of course. You'll also find the Freemasons use Yod and Yoni. Anyhow when the mushroom is formed properly the buldging head is known as the one breast. So you have the Penis, Vagina and one Female breast = THE HERMAPHRODITE, the Divine. So alas this is nothing special only to the Old and New Holy Roman Empires. I suggest people look into the Rebis's links to ISHTAR and how important she is to the Catholics but as Mary of course. Funny enough notice the Owls next to her and remember the worship at the Bohemian Club:

Constantine's Empire Seal, 4th century

It's actually the Phoenix to begin with.

Habsburg Emperor seal

Ecumenical Patriarchate of Constantinople

Liniya, St. Petersburg (crouching down, I believe is military organisation)

Anichkov, St. Petersburg

The one-headed eagle looking east is very rare, I've only seen it used by the nazies.

Imperial nobility of Russia

The important 32nd degree

Albert Pike's "Morals and Dogma", notice the 32 stars below the 33rd degree

The modern US Seal, 32 feathers on western wing, 33 feathers on eastern wing

CRAIG-OXLEY - June 1, 2007 02:58 AM (GMT)

You also note that the PHEONIX which came before the EAGLE was simply symbolism for the Amanita Muscharia and its ashes were the nest left over when the Mushroom is pulled. It will arise once again thanks to the spores spread in the air.

Papal insignia

That the keys are upside down might have something to do with the insignias so told origin in St.Peter (bearer of the key), who was crucified upside down. That would also correspond with the old pagan beliefs of it being a symbol for Lucifer like the upside down cross is.

But it goes even further. The tip of the triangle is pointing upwards in the papal insignia.

Dear Craig,

I disagree with your explanation on the beginning of life in the womb as scripture is clear that it is at conception.

But the pics are wonderful!!!

Brother Eric

Dear Eric,

I suggest you study when the Dimethyltryptamine cycle kicks off and you'll find its the 49th day. When we realise that its the third eye Chakra and Crown Chakra which are our connections with the holographic infinity and therefore Spiritual it makes more sense. The Shamans of this World fully experienced with these experiences know the truth. You'll find the Crown allows out-of-body experiences within the Holographic Universe whilst the Third Eye seems to keep you still within the Holotropic Mind (Body).

I've watched an Amazon Shaman using Ayahuasca claim to have left his body, enter within the couple of Westerners. He then goes on to explain what they have wrong with them in full detail. They didn't take no notice and within two months and about 3 weeks of leaving the Amazon they came down with very bad illness which hospitalised them. Guess what? Everything this amazing Shaman had told them was true and it was the exact region and problem he'd described.

But alas I fear your Bible probably prohibits talk of Chakras and so forth? Well the Chinese peoples are fully aware of this system of the body and in truth the real reason for the Caduceus symbol which in reality is the pathway through the body of the Kundalini firing up the Chakra systems reaching to the Third Eye before the amazing Crown Chakra. Its funny isn't it how this symbol is the Medical symbol and was used as Mad-Arsenal said upon my site for trading by Merchants and we see that Mushroom headed Priest with his Caduceus staff. Do you even deny the Hermaphrodite stage and how Males originate from Females?

Thankyou

Looks like an owl or an eagle (or some bird of prey) in the top left of the photo.

Do you think the Jesuits believe in the Bible to any degree. All or part of the Bible, which particular books of the Bible are of interest to them?

Mad.Arsenal - June 7, 2007 01:10 PM (GMT)

Hmm Dolphin, if you ask me, I'd say absolutely not! That is of course what Eric Phelps would call the "professed" Jesuits, of the 4th vow, we're talking about.

But I really don't know much about the Jesuits, haven't even finished Vatican Assassins, I've only heard of the Jesuits the last couple of months after studying conspiracy non-stop 24/7 since I watched Loose Change first time...

But "believing in the Bible" is of course a very subjective term. I think they're experts on it so that they can suppress its true spiritual knowledge (that which I believe is veiled beneath the superstitious astronomical allegories) and personally I think that they use Revelations for a blueprint of some sort or in some manner to some extent.

Ah yes, this goes well hand in hand with my theory of the crouching eagle being military insignia. We also know the aquila from our lovely P2 Gladio friends:

What I meant was an eagle looking east as in looking to its own left. So that this aquila would be looking west like the American bald-headed eagle on the seal and all of the other one-headed eagles.

Looking east:

I have a picture on my own pc of an OSS insignia with an eastern looking eagle. My internet is down now for 7 days running and for a further week tho :angry:

Yeah, there are 18 countries, I think, that use the double-headed eagle today, and hundreds other mainly European provinces, dutchies, cities, families or organisations who use it, all coming out of the Holy Roman Empire somehow. As for the one-headed eagle, that's even more widespread throughout the whole world, probably wherever some form of Roman power has spread.

The Egyptians said that, at vernal equinox, it would fly into the sun temple at On (Heliopolis) into the Holiest Holy part (penis head...) of the temple where it would lay its egg to impregnate the Egyptian Ark of the Contract (some 1000 years before the Hebrew's Ark of Contract)

The Ark was a representation of a womb which is why the high-priest would spill blood upon it, menses blood, "moon-blood". And 9 months later, at 25th December, the sun would thus be reborn/resurrected after winter solstice (the house of Saturn)

The Phoenix is a symbol of the SUN in the end, just like the mushroom is a microcosmic representation of the SUN, especially in conjunction with the Roman version of sun-god Mithras with his primordial egg etc.

It's all about the sun-rebirth-resurrection-drama-eternal-life-on-earth-enlightenment that all these myths and allegories of saviors as well as symbols of human spiritual enlightenment were built upon. The life of Jesus included.

Another symbol for the phoenix eternal-life-resurrection-sun-drama is the palm tree. Apparently, when you burn down a palm tree to the ground, it grows right back up from the ashes. Just like the phoenix and the sacred mushroom.

R. Swinburne Clymer, 'The Mysteries of Osiris' , p. 42, 1951

"When they [pagans] desired to express the renewal, or beginning, of the year, they represented it in the form of a door-keeper. It could easily be distinguished by the attributes of a key ... At times, they gave it two heads, back to back ... In time, this [back-to-back key symbol] became the double-headed Eagle of symbolic Masonry."

Papal Keys:

user posted image

Excellent! This makes sense! Speculating on that, seeing how the two keys also refer to papal caesars power on earth (temporal) and in heaven (spiritual), maybe a one-headed eagle represents the temporal power?

Anyway, when I get my internet back up at home, I can show you how this (double-headed eagle/papal keys) connects with the equinoxes, Osiris lord, judge and gatekeeper of the Underworld and the X-symbol, death, skull and crossbones, Freemasonry's doctrine of immortality of man, the Royal Arch, Boaz and Jachin, the Temple of Solomon and other sun temples with their winged-healing sun symbol (and caduceus) etc.
Its all about the equinoxes and summer solstice, the generative principle, eternal life, rebirth/resurrection, divine power and the gateway to the beyond/heavens gate/holy door (keys to heaven and hell, spiritual/temporal powers of the pharao/pope/king)

QUOTE (CRAIG-OXLEY @ Jun 1 2007, 02:22 AM)

Dear Eric,

Many have used the Double-Headed Eagle and it goes way back further than the Roman Empire. Its really the representation of 'The Rebis' or the Hermaphrodite. You will notice how Jesuit William J Fulco utilised the Hermaphrodite in Opus Dei Mel Gibson's 'The Passion.' Of course the Jesuits have to twist the creator(s) reasons for initial Hermaphroditism.

What you need to understand is how when your in the womb before your a fetus your an embyro. Your neither male or female and therefore looked upon as a Hermaphrodite. This word comes from the Greek gods of Hermes and Aphrodite united in the act of creation. You will notice from day 49 onwards the spirit enters the body via the Pineal Gland area known as the Third Eye Chakra and from then on you develope into the sex and human being you become by birth. So in reality theres nothing evil about this but the Jesuit has to make it out to be bad. This is why its known as the divine hermaphrodite.

The symbolism is everywhere and we could also say its linked to the Amanita Muschari mushroom which most of the priestly dresses of not only Jewish priests but Catholic priests also tie into it. Remember the Mushroom is looked also as a Hermaphrodite as its stem is the Phallic or Yod whilst the round head when first forming is the female organ known as the Yoni. Do not slag me off for using these terms, they come from the Judiac peoples who supposedly created much of what Christianity is based on being Judeo-Christian of course. You'll also find the Freemasons use Yod and Yoni. Anyhow when the mushroom is formed properly the buldging head is known as the one breast. So you have the Penis, Vagina and one Female breast = THE HERMAPHRODITE, the Divine. So alas this is nothing special only to the Old and New Holy Roman Empires. I suggest people look into the Rebis's links to ISHTAR and how important she is to the Catholics but as Mary of course. Funny enough notice the Owls next to her and remember the worship at the Bohemian Club:

I still see Amanita muscaria as a TWO EDGED SWORD! It can free you from dogma or LOCK YOU EVEN FURTHER INTO DOGMA if your subconscious mind has been programmed in a dogmatic fashion. An example of this I believe is the Marian and "dancing" sun visions from Fatima Portugal near the end of Wolrd War I. What happened with the SUN in those visions points to Amanita muscaria being the cause of them. (The SUN growing closer (actually ENLARGING) and returning to its normal position in the sky (Shrinking back to normal size as the effect wore off) This vision of size changing and position changing in objects is common in Amanita muscaria use.

This mushroom knowledge is interesting and there is some truth to it, but there has to be more to it than just that. This stuff about mushroom symbolism seems very exoteric, and not really esoteric. I'm very familiar with the idea of the catholic church being a cover up for mushroom symbolism, but to say that is all there really is I think is a ruse. What about the fact that Free Mason is French and means "sons of the light". That any time they talking about the morning star they are referring to the sun, which means they are talking about Lucifer. What kind of intelligent person would worship a plant, or celestial object? These people who are members of the secret societies and Rome wouldn't be that ignorant. So I don't think they are really a bunch of sun/mushroom worshipers in the sense of actually worshiping the things themselves, but what those things represent. I'm not saying taking mushrooms is evil, but that were only scratching the surface when it comes to this stuff. The Holy Roman Empire is nothing more than Luciferianism.

The Vatican hill in ancient times was a place where many deities were worshipped – including some I believe contributed much to the “biographies” of St. Peter, the Virgin Mary, and Jesus. Numerous altars to Cybele (the Great Mother or Magna Mater and prototype of Mary) have been found very close to St. Peter’s Cathedral, and in 1949 a pagan altar was dug up in the Piazza San Pietro – just several yards north of the statue of Saint Pete himself! The altar is inscribed with the names not only of the Great Mother, but of Mithra and her son Attis as well. Attis, we may remember, was a dying and resurrecting god who bore the title of Papa (“Father”), just as did the Mithraic pontiff and the pope today. Mithra, the dying and resurrecting god born of a virgin on 25 December, not only bore the epithet Peter (“Rock”), but was often represented as carrying the key to a gate of heaven. A key was just as much a Mithraic symbol as a symbol of St. Peter – and Mithra had it earlier!

Very close to the Vatican cult complex is the Janiculum hill where, according to the testimony of the apocryphal Acts of Peter and Paul, Peter was crucified upside-down. Here too in ancient times the oldest of Italian gods, Janus, was worshipped. (By the first century, Janus had largely fused with Mithra – and with St. Peter as well.) Interestingly, the Feast of St. Peter is celebrated on 18 January, the date on which the sun enters the sign of Aquarius – an alias of Janus and the beginning of the Mithraic zodiac. Janus too was a fisherman, since Pisces follows Aquarius. He is the oldest god said to have held the keys to the gates of heaven.

Title: Knights of Malta (SMOM) attack Dave Hinkson

Description: By Tim White

CRAIG-OXLEY - June 5, 2007 11:32 PM (GMT)

see www.davehinkson.com for the whole story

This is the case that disinfo agent, liar, libeler, slanderer, FBI informant/snitch and perjurer -STEWVED WEBB-was "testifying" in federal court in Boise Idaho this past January against Ted Gunderson and Anthony Hilder as being the 2 men responsible for the set up of David Hinkson in order to take over WATER OZ. The "testimony" of Webb was thrown out by the judge because it is 100% LIES. The truth is, from over 3 hours of conversations that I had with Roland Hinkson, Davids' father who lives in Ouray Colorado, is FAR different than what came out of the slimey mouth of Webb. In short form, it is the KNIGHTS of MALTA who are behind this outrageous action against David Hinkson. I found out from Roland Hinkson himself that he is a member of the COUNCIL for NATIONAL POLICY-one of 500 members of this very exclusive "club". The CNP is CONTROLLED by the Knights of Malta and has some very well known names included in this membership, Oliver North(Knight of Malta), Gen Jack Singlaub(Knight of Malta), Dr Stan Monteith, Don McAlvany, Larry Pratt(Gun Owners of America), Joe Coors(Knight of Malta and founder of the Heritage Foundation), Jeffery Coors(Knight of Malta, Chairman Coors Brewing), J Peter Grace(top Knight of Malta in the U.S.), Gary Bauer, Pat Boone, Dr James Dobson, Jerry Falwell, Edwin Meese, Tim LaHaye, Alan Keyes, Frank Shakespeare, D James Kennedy, Herbert and Nelson Bunker Hunt, any more names can be seen by Googling-The Council for National Policy by Barbara Aho. This organization is yet another Masonic group controlled by the Knights of Malta who are in fact AGENTS of the VATICAN. vid Hinksons' Water Oz is a DIRECT threat to the Knights controlled pharmaceutical industry and directly against the Vatican-in truth. About 15 months ago, Roland Hinkson had a very secret meeting with an attorney in Gainesville Florida-his name, Milton Baxley-at Baxleys' home at the end of a very long road outside of Gainesville. The purpose of the meeting was for the sale of Water Oz-the Knights of Malta had an offer of 3 million dollars for Water Oz and Baxley was representing the Knights. On the wall in the room where the meeting was held was a large world map that had thousands of stick pins inserted. Those pins represented the location of ALL the Knights of Malta worldwide-about 2,500 are here in the U.S. and they control ALL industry and corporations in America. Roland turned the offer down flat as Water Oz is worth many times that and Roland walked out. All hell broke loose after that and subsequently the set up BY THE KNIGHTS OF MALTA-NOT by Ted Gunderson and Anthony Hilder-continued on, resulting in a fraudulent conviction and a 45 year sentence. Stew Webb PERJURED himself from first word to last word, in FEDERAL COURT, and he now must be brought to justice. I now firmly believe that it is the Knights of Malta who actually control disinfo/set up agent/ FBI snitch, Stew Webb, and that is WHY he is "allowed" to do what he does. I explained to Roland Hinkson that he IS indeed in the belly of the beast and surrounded by pit vipers-NONE are "real" friends. When I first spoke with Roland Hinkson,he was in Washington DC seeking the "help" of Gen Jack Singlaub for his sons' case. I immediately told Roland,"Who the hell do you think actually IS responsible for your son being set up"? I told him that Jack Singlaub IS just one of the true conspirators' causing this to occur.I know that Bob Fletcher can sure tell Roland Hinkson what kind of a sinister and back stabbing character Jack Singlaub truly is since he had the unfortunate experience of having his own toy company in Atlanta taken over as a CIA front during Iran Contra, also involving Gen Harry(Heinie)Aderholt and Gary Best. Like the famous line from Dirty Harry,"A man's got to PAY ATTENTION"!

Title: Jesuits and Slavery, Baghdad College in NYTimes

Description: Ian Paisley-Masonic?

AVBibleBeliever - June 7, 2007 05:01 AM (GMT)

I addressed this to Bro. Eric who won't be answering email until next week.

From the Georgetown Voice: The Jesuits' Slaves: Georgetown and the Peculiar Institution <http://www.georgetownvoice.com/2007-02-08/...-jesuits-slaves>

NYTimes Dec. 5, 2005-"Baghdad College Boys Vie For Prime Minister"
<http://www.nytimes.com/2005/12/12/internat...53938e3&ei=5070>

I have proof Ahmad Chalabi is Masonic. I sent the photo to you with him w/ his brother Mason 33rd Degree Jesse Helms.

Masonic Saddam Hussein sent his sons to Baghdad College after it was nationalized. What gets me is if Hussein's Baath Party expelled the Jesuits then why didn't they just tear down the Order's schools Baghdad College and Al-Hikma University? The sons of the wealthy affluent families were sent to Baghdad College plus the Jesuits raised up the Baath Party to punish the those who were suspicious of the Order due to a series of political assassinations. I will address these and other details that show without a doubt that the Jesuits controlling the U.S. and the new Iraqi government which they will rule is reason why the U.S. is there-to facilitate the reconstruction of the old city of Babylon.

Is Ian Paisley Masonic?

These handshakes w/ Irish PM Roman Catholic Bertie Ahern is suspect. Paisley's grip is not an ordinary one.

I suspect this is just another example of the Hegelian dialectic the Jesuit game plan of thesis<-----SYNTHESIS----->antithesis. The Masonic Orangemen and Masonic Jesuit-run IRA pitted against each other for decades during a centuries old conflict between what were once truly saved Bible believing men and fanatical Papists controlled by the Jesuits. The Company through their Masonic craft infiltrated and co-opted the genuine resistance and when Paisley entered politics he wasn't assassinated because he had given up, conceded, and agreed to play the game. This is tragic and treasonous! Like you asked dear brother just where are the Lord's men, the true men of God? Well, based on what we've seen and what history has shown is they are not on TV, in politics, or in the public eye receiving the CFR's "good press" but they are the local soldiers on the front lines who refuse to incorporate and prostitute the churches they lead, preach the AV1611 King James Bible and actually feed their flocks, preach against Jesuitism, Romanism, and the New Age ecumenical movement, etc. they are the unsung heroes of the faith who take unto them the whole armour of God that they may be able to stand against wiles of the devil, and able to withstand in this, the evil day and having done all to stand (Ephesians 6:11,13). As the Book says if they were of us they no doubt would have continued with us.

What a paradox we see in mainstream apostate Protestantism today.

Many of the men assumed to be men of God by the majority of evangelical Arminians because they are on TV worship Lucifer being members of the Masonic craft like Billy Graham, Pat Robertson, Robert Schuller, Kenneth Copeland, and many others. These men bow to the Jesuits and their White Papacy and/or incorporate Masonry in their false teachings. The Jesuits' Charismatic/Pentecostal/Word-Faith cult is a satanic mess of Father Divine's New Thought, Masonic Kenneth Hagin's Name it, Claim it Positive Confession popularized by his brother Mason Vincent Norman Peale, the heresy that the Holy Spirit is female, Dominionist heresy, Rick Joyner (who is a Knight of Malta and was introduced to the SMOM by Knight of Malta Nazi Kurt Waldheim once Secretary General of the Pope's UN) who said God gave him a prophecy of a war in which Joel's army is raised up to fight against those who do not believe the Charismatic movement is of God.

I still owe you a post on the statistics regarding race in this country and analysis of Coadjutor Texe Marrs email to you. I'm currently in the middle of reading his book "Codex Magica" and a book on Skull and Bones. I have some info he might be interested in since he has been researching Javier Solana (means SUNshine) and Ban-Ki-MOON Secretary General of the UN, but he would just run away with it and wrongly conclude that the Jews run the NWO which is flagrantly incorrect. I would not write to him again myself because he did not extend the courtesy of a reply. I have "The Good Shepherd" on DVD and viewed it twice. I plan on watching it again and I will provide analysis my interpretation of the film.

Have you seen the film "Idiocracy?" I highly recommend it. It is a comedy but once you get past the foul language you will see that the Order communicates a message through this film about what they planned and are implementing in their Fourteenth Amendment American Empire today.

All this info will be going in American Reich which I am preparing to write. I cannot write it fast enough and Lord willing it will be written and put out there before it is too late, before the planned detonations if the Lord wills. I love you dear brother and you will most definitely be included in the Dedication. I sent my dear beloved Bible believing uncle links to your 3 part history of the Jesuit Order. He was taken aback by the fact that I described myself in the VAIII Dedication as a Baptist-Calvinist which he believes is a heresy and that Five-Point Calvinists destroy churches. He owns practically all of Dr. Peter S. Ruckman's books and I have some of my own (I've learned much from them as have you). In one of your videos you dispel the lie that being a Calvinist means you don't preach the gospel to the lost and I want him to see that. I explained to him that the fact that God elected would motivate the Christian all the more to evangelize because he does not know who the elect are. My uncle has a problem with limited atonement but I explained to him that to know from the Scriptures that God selected you, chose you from before the foundation of the world that would move us to cherish and value the free gift of eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord because a child of God is not a dime-a-dozen turned out by the assembly line of the Arminian Sinner's Prayer/altar call/ Romanist-like sacrament but rather God elected certain human beings rotten and depraved by nature who are not at all inclined toward righteousness and God's perfect standard so the only way one gets saved is he must be convicted by the Holy Ghost (John 16:8) drawn by the Father (John 6:44) and given and imparted the faith to believe on His Son the Lord Jesus Christ and with that comes His imputed righteousness for eternity. I told him I'm not a Calvinist by today's standards but rather I believe in the sovereignty of God over the will of man like the Puritans, like Jonathan Edwards. Calvin articulated what the Book says about the sovereignty of God. Historically, it is known as Calvinism (named after a man which my uncle objected to) but it is Biblicism and that existed way before Calvin or any of the Reformers. like The label and title of "Christian fundamentalist" which was not coined until after Marsden and his boys put out a series of pamphlets and booklets called "The Fundamentals" in the early 20th century I believe, but there were saved men and women who believed the Book literally who predated the term "fundamentalist." I told him (and I actually learned this in college in a European history class when we were talking about Martin Luther, John Calvin, and Luciferian Ignatius Loyola about what they said about freewill and predestination). My professor, an unsaved man who recommended a book to me by Jesuit Daniel Berrigan on the Book of Daniel said well if man has a freewill well then the betrayal of Christ by Judas Iscariot was a free choice and Christ's crucifixion hinged on Judas' decision of his own free will to betray Jesus. We know in the Psalms the Holy Ghost moved David to prophesy the betrayal of the Son of God and the way in which he would die and in the Gospels we read that Satan entered into Judas, the son of perdition. The prophecy had to be fulfilled and it was decreed, intended, and destined to happen. JUDAS HAD NO CHOICE!! That is what the Arminians don't get and they are blinded to this fact by the god of this world.

I'm no Calvinist and I'm no Arminian...more like dispensationalist at my end. I believe that we're in the Church Age, which runs from Pentecost to the pre-trib catching away (rapture). After that is Daniel's 70th Week, or Jacob's Trouble.

I have a couple of friends who run the boards I'm a moderator on, and they live in the next county over...had lunch with them once, took my son along, and sometimes I visit one of them where she works. They've been helping me along. :)

So you think Paisley might be a Freemason or linked with them? Hmmm...might very well be. Wolf in sheep's clothing.

That's disappointing as I always enjoyed his site. Oh well...can't put men up on pedestals.

Alexandra,

I believe as you do in terms of dispensationalism. I once got tripped up after I learned that the Jesuits had a hand in propagating a futurism of their own (so I looked into historicism) which emphasized the Eucharist (sun idol) in the Millennium which is a lie.

I spoke with my Bible believing uncle about Calvinism and Arminianism. After our discussion I began to think about how I was taught those were the only two positions but they are extremes. There's Calvin and Arminius-two men- but there is and always will be the Bible. I learned about Calvin's Geneva in a few college courses and some of the harsh measures its government took. One who was accused of heresy or any kind other kind of sin was brought before a consistory or tribunal (not unlike medieval Catholicism and the Inquisition I've been told) and if one was found guilty he or she would either be publicly punished or worse. If a child cursed his or her parents death was the penalty just like in the Old Testament. Jacobus Arminius found a friend in the Jesuits who liked his emphasis on freewill and works salvation.

I've looked into Jordan Maxwell's material and last year I got tripped up on that because he talked about the saviors of the world but I came to the conclusion that the others are just clever satanic counterfeits of the true Saviour the Lord Jesus Christ. I found Maxwell's info challenging and compelling. Of course, I don't know everything and I keep an open mind trusting the Spirit of truth to guide me as I study to shew myself approved unto God. If my mind were closed then I'd never learn anything. If it remained closed I'd still be a GOP Bush-bot as you call them lol blindingly supporting the Papal Crusade in the Middle East which I will have no part of. Praise God I don't look at things the same way I used to just four years ago or so. The truth isn't always pleasant or convenient and it seldom is but I don't believe that ignorance is bliss and I'd rather be aware and know what's going on than wander aimlessly deceived and blind. I'm a truthseeker-you and I know THE truth (John 14:6) and He will guide us and show us the truth about everything else. God bless sister and yours.

P.S. I like your web avatars on the board. I'm thinking of making one.

The pre-trib con was before Darby. The Jesuits invented it in the late 1500's. The Bible, the early church, and many church leaders were Post-Trib. Yet, I do agree we can agree to disagree on being Pre-trib or Post-trib.

This is another Jesuit lie about Darby being first to coin the term rapture

John Nelson Darby (April 29, 1882)

John Gill (October 14, 1771):

1Th 4:15 - For this we say unto you by the word of the Lord,.... The apostle having something new and extraordinary to deliver, concerning the coming of Christ, the first resurrection, or the resurrection of the saints, the change of the living saints, and the RAPTURE both of the raised and living in the clouds to meet Christ in the air

Matthew Henry (died June 22, 1714), :

) Those that shall be found alive will then be changed. They shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air, 1Th_4:17. At, or immediately before, this RAPTURE into the clouds, those who are alive will undergo a mighty change, which will be equivalent to dying. This change is so mysterious that we cannot comprehend it: we know little or nothing of it, 1Co_15:51. Only, in the general, this mortal must put on immortality, and these bodies will be made fit to inherit the kingdom of God, which flesh and blood in its present state are not capable of. This change will be in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye (1Co_15:52), in the very instant, or not long after the raising up of those that sleep in Jesus. And those who are raised, and thus changed, shall meet together in the clouds, and there meet with their Lord, to congratulate him on his coming, to receive the crown of glory he will then bestow upon them, and to be assessors with him in judgment, approving and applauding the sentence he will then pass upon the prince of the power of the air, and all the wicked, who shall be doomed to destruction with the devil and his angels.

Mark, notice how Jordan, in almost all of his presentations mentions how there is a profoundly important message to be told in the New Testament that has been mis-represented by Rome.

That website makes the claim of Jesus' birthday on Sept 11 and this may be correct. I know Jesus was spiritually re-born or Baptised as "Christ" on January 6, and this was the original Christmas until 325 AD Nicea.

Interesting website though.....may be the only part I disagree with is the claim of Jesus not being an Essen. I personally believe he was an "Essen Nazarene".

Im not denying evil exist of course it does, however if this "satan" figure is so big bad and such a boogymen why does he come out of his hideing spot and reveal himself? since hes so powerfull? or is he just going to cower and hide like a chicken$#%%

Its not like hes going to come out of a valcano and be the size of a giant monster then pick all us little people up and eat us come on this sounds like a bunch of fairy tales. And the same for this fake man called Jesus if hes so powerfull he can cure the sick walk on water why does he let good people suffer and bad people get away with there crimes? why does he make me suffer for the last 5 years? why when i always prayed to him he never helped me? maybe cause he does not exist.

MoroccoMole - June 8, 2007 11:17 AM (GMT)

Matt i wouldn't like to comment on the pain you endured as i have obviously no idea what it is like, i cannot justify it or explain why the good seem to be downtrodden while the evil run amok, yet more evidence IMO that Satan is the "lord" of this world.

In regards to Jesus i believe there was a real man who simply harmonised with the laws of nature, if you read about the Essenes (as i too believe Jesus was a Nazarene Essene), you read about the community spirit, brotherly love and virtous lifestyle that Josephus wrote about, within which divinity/love can prosper.

The Nazarenes were recorded to live a vegan lifestyle, offering compassion for all life, combined with this optimum natural diet we also read of the Fasting Jesus undertook, in excess of forty days, in some cases reportedly without even water so yes it may have appeared as divine to some people imo however Jesus had tapped into a power we all share and abilities we may all possess, though perhaps not to that level, we ourselves can attain a christlike consciousness.

Even the writings of Arnold Ehret of the 20th century point to this idea, we hear of the spiritual awakenings-through optimum health, nutrition and fasting that he experienced, all this man did was re-attune to the divine laws of Nature, harmonised with the creative force and was thus rewarded with extreme vitality and health, that this man made "a return to Eden" or the practices of Eden should say to you that, "hold on perhaps there is something of worth in the bible, unless i am wrong the bible was the driving force behind many nutritionists return to natural dietary laws and mucusless diet.

Whether indeed Christ will again return and smash the empire i do not know, will the consciousness of Christ re-emerge rendering the empire useless, perhaps, will evil and this satanically inspired NWO be defeated, i don't doubt it for a second.

Best wishes
micky

From <http://www.velocity.net/~edju/Pretrib4.htm>

In Search Of The Origins Of The Pretrib Doctrine:

Part 4: The Birth Of The Pretribulation Doctrine In The 1800s

Before getting into this chapter, an important statement has to be made concerning Futurism. Historism believes that the Antichrist and all that surrounds his appearing develops throughout history all the way to when Christ returns at the end of the age. This was the viewpoint of the Reformers who applied these prophecies directly to the pope and Rome. A Counter Reformation was implemented through the Jesuits of the Middle Ages that countered Historism's prophetic view with one called "Jesuit Futurism." This view as introduced by the Jesuits stipulated that prophecies concerning the appearing of Antichrist had nothing at all do with Papal Rome of that time, but with the man of sin's appearance at the end of the age. This, actually, was the viewpoint of the early Church, though it must be taken into consideration that the Catholic Church had not yet come into existence.

The point to made here is this: the early Church fathers, as shown in Part 2, held to Futurism, but not for the purpose the Jesuits developed it, which has been called "Jesuit Futurism." The early Church fathers promoted Futurism because that is what the Scriptures said. Futurists today do not negate the probability that Rome and its pope will indeed have something to do with the appearance of the endtimes. More and more it appears Rome will have a part in the last days, and Christians today are watching and praying as we draw near to the time of Antichrist's coming on the scene. The Catholic system and pope is certainly a major player in what will be manifested in the few short years ahead.

Because of the Historical view of prophecy from the Middle Ages up to the Reformation, a series of writings by various authors were published to counter the Historic view of prophecy. These books were written from a Futurist point of view to take Rome out of the fire regarding the pope at that time being the Antichrist. They were not written because of a desire to return to the doctrine of Futurism held by the early Church.

FRANCISCO RIBERA (1537-1591), FUTURISM
JESUIT Priest and Doctor of Theology

The Spanish Ribera was a Jesuit, a doctor of theology, who started writing (1585) a 500 page commentary on the book of Revelation six years before his death (1591). The commentary was written from an Historic viewpoint because of the belief that Catholicism and its pope were the Antichrist system and the Antichrist himself. It was that the heat would be taken off of the Catholic Church as a candidate for the Antichrist and his rule. It placed these events into a future period of three-and-a-half years just prior to the return of Christ (this agreed with the teachings of the early Church fathers). The conclusion that was to be drawn from Ribera's commentary, it was hoped, was that the Catholic Church of his time could not, therefore, be the Antichrist system headed by the Pope of Rome. Ribera's commentary would have some influence on those who would eventually put the Pretribulation doctrine together.

In his commentary, Ribera believed that the rapture would occur 45 days before the end of the 3-1/2 year tribulation period (also shades of the future PreWrath doctrine). This was the first time the second coming was split into two separate comings, one for the Church and then one at the end of the age with the raptured Church returning with Christ in wrath.

CARDINAL ROBERT BELLARMINE (1542-1621), FUTURISM
JESUIT Scholar, the most prominent of his time

Also during this period, acclaimed Jesuit apologist Cardinal Robert Bellarmine, wrote "Polemic Lectures Concerning the Disputed Points of the Christian Belief Against the Heretics of This Time." His purpose in doing so was to refute the Historic theory of figuring Daniel's 1260, 1290 and 2300 days as years, relegating these to actual days, e.g., 1260 days, etc. By doing so, the reign of Antichrist was pushed into a future time and negated Catholicism and its pope as the man of sin and his system during his time.

MANUEL DE LACUNZA (1731–1801), FUTURISM
JESUIT Priest

In a book titled, "Hidden Beast 2," E. H. Skolfield writes this Lacunza:
"There was a Spanish family living in Chili named de Lacunzas. In the year of our Lord, 1731, they had a baby boy. Fifteen years later, the lad was sent to Spain to become a Jesuit priest. Twenty-two years later after that, in 1767, the Jesuits were expelled from Spain because of their brutality. The now Father Manuel de Lacunza y Diaz had to move. He went to Imola, Italy, where he remained for the rest of his life.

"In Imola, he claimed to be a converted Jew. Under the alias of 'Rabbi Ben Ezra' he wrote a book. The title: 'The Coming of Messiah in Glory and Majesty.' In that book he theorized that the church would be 'raptured' (taken up to be with the Lord) some 45 days before the real return of Jesus to the Earth. During that 45 days (while the church was in heaven with the Lord) God would judge the wicked still on earth."

This last sentence shows shades of PreWrath doctrine of today, though that was put together during the 1990s.

Lacunza wrote his manuscript in Spanish and it was published in 1812 under a pseudonym, Juan Josafa [Rabbi] Ben-Ezra. By doing so, his book would more easily be accepted by Protestantism. This proved true as it was placed on Rome's Index of prohibited books, which only made it sought out by the Protestants.

Lacunza emphasized a return to interpreting prophecy literally from the Futurist viewpoint. He wrote of a future Antichrist and a 1260-day (literal days) tribulation, events just preceding the coming of the Lord. He wrote in opposition to the 'year-day' theory of the Historicists (1260 days = 1260 years). He did not promote a pretribulation rapture of the saints at the future time of the Antichrist. His rapture of the saints occurred 45 days before the end of Daniel's 70th week, probably an influence from Ribera. Lacunza's book would have a dramatic influence on Edward Irving and his formation of the Pretribulation doctrine. It most likely influenced Irving to add another coming of Christ to the one described in Scripture.

MORGAN EDWARDS (1722-1795), FUTURISM
BAPTIST Minister

Edwards wrote the earliest paper on the Pretribulation doctrine, using no references to anyone in the past. It was not written as a document to be seriously considered as the following will show:

"The earliest published reference to a pre-tribulation rapture occurred in 1788. Around 1740, a young Baptist named Morgan Edwards wrote an essay for eschatology class on his views of Bible prophecy. This essay was later published in Philadelphia (1788) under the following title: Two Academical Exercises on Subjects Bearing the following Titles; Millennium, Last-Novelties. In the article, Edwards made statements which expounded his views concerning a pre-tribulation gathering of the Church. As far as can be determined, Edwards views concerning a pre-trib rapture gained no notoriety nor was this doctrine given any credence in the Church" (The Fallacy of Rapture Theology as revealed by the Word of God by David Redmond).

Tim Warner gives ample reason why Morgan's writings on a Pretrib rapture were not taken seriously by anybody:

"Even the discovery of Morgan Edwards' book does not eliminate the ghost of Edward Irving for pre-tribbers. There is a clear tracable history back-tracking the development of modern pre-tribulationism through dispensational seminaries (like Dallas Seminary), the Scofield

Bible, early pre-trib prophecy conferences, the Plymouth Brethren, J. N. Darby, and finally the Irvingites, and even Margaret MacDonald's visions. However, despite the earlier date (32 years earlier), there is no apparent connection between Morgan Edwards' (1788) "Millennium" book and modern pre-tribulationism. So, if Morgan Edwards' theory did not take hold in some group, or if his book did not fall into the hands of Irving or Darby, then he might as well have developed his theory on Mars! Because, it had no impact at all on modern pre-trib development.

1. Morgan Edwards apparently did not rely on other works. In fact, while he occasionally referred to others, he wrote in opposition to the historicist / a-millennialism of the times. Not once did he refer to another writer to support his rapture theory (although he did appeal to the Church Fathers in support of his literal Millennium). That he considered his theory 'new' and novel, is clear from the verse he chose to put on the title page:

"May we know what this new doctrine, whereof thou speakest, is? for thou bringest certain strange things to our ears: We would know, therefore, what these things mean. ACTS xvii. 19. 20'

"2. The opening statement in his essay indicates his total lack of confidence in his new theory. And, it shows that Morgan was simply writing his essay following the instruction of his professor, to use the LITERAL method in all cases except where that would lead to absurd conclusions. This was contrary to the accepted Protestant way of treating prophecy at the time. Morgan also stated that his following the literal hermeneutic was strictly for this exercise alone, and that he did not wish to be seen as a literalist. In other words, this whole essay was hypothetical!

"And is it come to my lot to treat of the Millennium, or Christ's thousand years reign on earth? Thousand pities, sir, that you had not allotted the task to one of these older and abler students! But, since it is your pleasure, I will do my possible: and in the attempt will work by a rule you have often recommended, viz. 'to take the scriptures in a literal sense, except when that leads to contradiction or absurdity.' I need say no more to inform you, sir, that I wish to be understood as a minister of the letter only while I treat of the said Millennium. Very able men have already handled the subject in a mystical, or allegorical, or spiritual way: and could I rest satisfied with their sentiments, and deliver them perhaps with applause; as that would show my reading, - and at the same time, free a novice from the affectation of singularity and taking too much upon him, like another son of Levi.'

"His statement, 'I wish to be understood as a minister of the letter only while I treat of the said Millennium,' indicates his apparent discomfort with the literal method he was required to use by his professor! Historicists of his day saw literal interpretation as a 'Jewish' thing. Paul wrote that 'the letter killeth, but the spirit giveth life.' It was common for a-millennialists to use this verse to justify 'spiritual' interpretation. Hence, Morgan equated literal interpretation with 'the sons of Levi.' Later in the discourse, after apparently months of studying his topic, young Morgan seemed to be much more comfortable with 'literalism.'

"3. Morgan's professor's reaction to his work is very telling. Following is the closing statement of his 'Millennium' essay, followed by his professor's assessment.

"Morgan: 'I wonder, Sir, if your patience be not exhausted with the length, and perhaps, nonsense of my sermon?'

"Professor: 'You finished your discourse with a supposition that the length and nonsense of it had tried my patience. If you used lightness you are to blame. But as I hope you are always in earnest when you study the things of God, I have to assure you that the novelty and ingenuity of your attempt have entertained me not a little. And when you are more master of time than at present, I advise you to study your subject closely, and you will see cause to alter some parts of your plan, and correct errors of others.- You also dropped a hint or two touching the New Heaven and the New Earth, which sounded a little strange. Let us hear what you have to say on those subjects, when it comes your turn to appear in that desk again'" Morgan Edwards and the Pre-Trib Rapture By Tim Warner

It is obvious that the idea of a pretribulation rapture was strange to Edwards and his professor. Why would it be if there really was such a doctrine before this?

SAMUEL ROFFEY MAITLAND (1792-1866), FUTURISM
ANGLICAN CHURCH Scholar, Lawyer, Librarian

Scholar and Librarian to the Archbishop of Canterbury, Maitland read Lacunza's book and promoted Futurism after 1826. He taught a literal 3-1/2 year tribulation and a personal Antichrist. There are strong indications that Maitland borrowed from both Ribera and Lacunza in his writings. Being the Librarian at Lambeth Palace, London, he found Ribera's book on the shelf and had it reprinted as a matter of public interest.

MARGARET MCDONALD (1800-?) VISION OF SECRET RAPTURE
Member of Irving's CATHOLIC APOSTOLIC CHURCH

At the age of 15, Margaret was a member of Edward Irving's congregation and in 1830 had a vision of a Secret Rapture. There is debate whether what she saw depicted a pretrib, partial pretrib, midtrib, or posttrib rapture. I have read it through carefully over and over again and it even sounds posttrib. Personally, I think it is a bunch of demonic gibberish that isn't easy to put a label on. In spite of the confusion now resident amongst researchers, one thing is for sure: the idea of a Secret Coming of Christ as opposed to one final visible coming was introduced through her vision. This is the main point that should be emphasized, regardless of whether it is placed in any scenario. The fact of a secret coming where all the world does not see Him was apparently incorporated into the pretrib doctrine by Edward Irving, who in turn influenced Darby. You can read Macdonald's vision by clicking here or wait to read it as the next section in this series.

EDWARD IRVING (1792-1834), FUTURIST, PRETRIBULATIONIST

PRESBYTERIAN Minister, later founded CATHOLIC APOSTOLIC CHURCH (charismatic)

It was Irving who translated Lacunza's work from Spanish into English in 1827, titling his work, "Preliminary Discourse to the Work of Ben Ezra - Coming of Messiah in Glory and Majesty." He was also affected by Margaret Macdonald's vision, writing the following in a letter to a Mr. Chalmers:

Irving points out in his letter to Chalmers that he felt conviction and reproof concerning her papers, which very likely had the "secret coming" described in them. It is also possible he was affected in this way because of Margaret's emphasis on the work of the Holy Spirit in the Church as the fire and eye of God in readying the believer for tribulation and meeting Christ face to face. This latter subject of her vision dominates what she saw. Scripturally, the vision raises many questions, let alone trying to decide if it is Pre-, Mid-, Pretrib Partial or Posttrib. Though Irving most likely used the "secret coming" of her vision and the "split second coming" of Lacunza to conclude a pretrib rapture, he also had in his church at this time a restoration of prophecy, tongues and other manifestations. He is known as the father of Pentecostalism because of these manifestations.

As to whether or not Irving used the 45 days of Lacunza and Ribera to, over time, move their rapture of 45 days before the end of the tribulation to a full seven year Pretrib rapture, the following quote would seem to support that idea:

"Because the symbolism of types can be interpreted according to other influences, once sound Biblical hermeneutics are ignored, the interpretation of the feasts varied significantly from year to year. Irvingites shifted the rapture from feast 6 (of Lev 23's 7 feasts) to feast 5, then feast 4 and even feast 3 within the first few years"(2) Understanding Ministries

According to Bob Gundry, Edward Irving was most likely the first to publicly make the suggestion of a pretribulational rapture of the Church. A minister of the Church of Scotland, he attended the prophetic conferences (1826-1830) held by Henry Drummond at Albury Park, England. When Irving first suggested the secret coming of Christ, the controversial idea split those in attendance into factions.

Iain H. Murray, in The Puritan Hope - A Study in Revival and the Interpretation of Prophecy, IX. The Eclipse of the Hope, says that it was during Irving's attendance at Albury (1826-1830) that he shared the "secret rapture" before the tribulation with another return at the end of it. He says this was also prevalent in Irving's London congregation.

There are some references in literature of the 1800s stating that the secret coming was never mentioned before Irving started promoting it in its various stages of assemblance. These may not have had knowledge of Macdonald's relating her vision to Irving:

Thomas Croskery (Londonderry, Ireland) - "...this idea of the Lord removing his church secretly...was never heard of till it was proclaimed in one of the delusive utterances of the Irvingites in 1832."(3)

In 1880, William Reid in a book on Brethrenism, wrote that "Edward Irving contributed to the notion of...the secret rapture of the saints."(4)

Irving also the Secret Coming Rapture at the Powerscourt prophecy conferences at Powerscourt Castle in Dublin, Ireland in 1830.

JOHN NELSON DARBY (1800–1882), FUTURISM, PRETRIBULATIONISM
ANGLICAN Minister, later leader in the PLYMOUTH BRETHERN

Darby attended the Powerscourt prophecy conferences in 1830. It was there that he most likely heard about Macdonald's vision of a Secret Rapture promoted by Irving. Irving most likely introduced these ideas which were picked up by Darby, but it was Darby who synthesized the various points of the Pretribulation doctrine over a period of years to bring it to its final form (Irving died in 1834). This did not happen overnight, but it took a period of many years to finalize the doctrine. The doctrine did not find easy acceptance, caused divisions and bred confusion during the years he worked on it. I have read where it was during Darby's visits to Switzerland from 1838 to 1845 he began to pull the doctrine together and share it openly. Years later (1859-1874), Darby would take the message to America where it was readily accepted.

WILLIAM KELLY (1820-1906)

Revised Darby's notes to make it appear that Darby was the one who started the Pretrib doctrine and not Irving. A thorough report can be read at William Kelly's Journal — The Pinnacle of Pre-Trib Pilfering! By Dave MacPherson.

CYRUS INGERSON SCOFIELD (1843-1921), FUTURIST, PRETRIBULATIONISM
TRINITARIAN CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH Pastor Emeritus

Based his notes on the writings of J. N. Darby in his 1909 Scofield Reference Bible. By 1930, one million copies were printed and hit the Bible Colleges in America, spreading the Secret Coming doctrine.

The pieces Irving put together for the beginnings of the Pretribulation doctrine came from Ribera, Bellarmine, Lacunza - all Jesuits - and Margaret Macdonald's vision. Most damaging was Macdonald's vision, which was based on an occult experience that injected into the Church a Secret Coming of Jesus for the Church. From the Middle Ages on, many would fall for the false hope of this pieced together doctrine.

Not only that. Alberto Rivera even said that the pre-trib rapture doctrine came from the jesuits to fool people into thinking they wont be here in the end when the prophecies regarding the Pope will be fulfilled. This way they dont have to worry who the antichrist is. they did that because many were saying the Mystery Babylon in revelation is Rome and that the Pope is the antichrist. Their plan worked very well. many believe in this doctrine. including Phelps.

you can see it on that online video of Alberto and others.

Title: Roman Empire now the Roman Church by Phil Jayhan

CRAIG-OXLEY - June 7, 2007 12:39 AM (GMT)

Here is a quick overview which will show how it is that the Roman Empire never fell. It suffered a division in 476 AD, which was cemented and made permanent around 1054, which effectively split the Roman Empire into 2 empires. The Eastern Empire became the Russian/Greek Orthodox church, while the Western Empire was still centered in Rome.

cheers-
phil :)

The Hierarchy of the Roman Empire now called the Roman Church.

Vatican City is a landlocked state within the city of Rome, Italy. It is governed by the Bishop of Rome (called the Pope) are in fact clergymen.

It is the smallest sovereign state in the world.

Caesar Constantine began the "corporate takeover" by renaming all the old Roman offices, this evolution of name changing still occurs. Name changing allows a person to hide their tracks of origin.

Roman Empire offices & their modern names:

Roman Empire (Imperium Romanum) renamed: Roman Catholic Church

Curia (legal body of Senators) slight name change: Curia (legal body of Cardinals)

Roman Emperor renamed: Roman Pope (head of all church and state affairs)

Civil government matters of state: Extra-Ordinary affairs (matters of civil-state governments)

Religious orders matters: Church "ecclesiastical" matters

Roman College of Senators renamed: College of Cardinals

Magistrate of College of Senators renamed: Dean of College of Cardinals

Departments of the Roman Senatorial Curia renamed: Congregations

Political Ambassador renamed: Pro-Nuncio (highest civil ambassador sent to other governements, ie Wash.DC, London etc)

If a government has not signed a treaty with Rome which makes the Romans the head of the foreign country as certified in the Roman Code of Canon Law. This rebel nation which has no official ties has an ambassador called an Apostolic Delegate. The United States and the United Kingdom never allowed the Vatican to serve as their legal head until President Reagan quickly signed into law on January 10, 1984. This Treaty for the very first time in U.S. history recognized full diplomatic relations between the United States and the Vatican State.

In 1534 when the United Kingdom realized that the Treaty with the Vatican City-State made them subject to all the Popes rules they voided the treaty. Formal plomatic relations between England and Vatican State were broken. Full diplomatic relations with the the Pope's Vatican State were never restored for 448 years until 1982.

Roman Senators renamed: Cardinals

Roman Governors renamed: Archbishops

Roman Senator with no territory: Bishop (Code of Canon Law 376)

(Large) Roman Province renamed: Archdiocese

(Small) Roman Territory renamed: Diocese

Imperial Chair of Jupiter where Caesar sat renamed: Throne of St. Peter

Vestal Virgins renamed: Nuns

Pontifex Maximus (high priest of College of Senators) renamed: Supreme Pontiff of College of Cardinals

Pontiff or "high priest " of a pagan religious order (Zues, Apollo, Diana, Mars, Jupiter, Baal, Dionysys, Pythia etc) same name: Pontiff

A Pontiff (Latin: "pontifex") means bridge-builder or priest between man and the gods of the underworld.

The Roman Calender and Holy Days of the gods renamed: Calendar Holidays of the Saints

Voice of the gods speaking through Caesar: Ex-Cathedra: Voice of God speaking through Pope

Meeting of the Pontiffs (high priests) of the pagan religious orders renamed: Ecumenical Council of the Bishops

Legal act of creating a god (of a living or dead human, as was done to most of the Caesars) "Apotheosis of the Gods" renamed: Canonization of the Saints

A decree of Caesar (dictator for life): Pope's infalliable Dogma

Praying to a dead human god renamed: Praying to a saint

In the US the highest law of the land is the Constitution and the Bill of Rights in the Vatican State the Constitution is called the Code of Canon Law

This is great. It just makes it clear that the catholic 'church' isnt a church at all but political infiltration into every country by military officers of every rank. If people just realized this. it's their robes that are so deceiving. I wonder how many jesuits are also 'chaplains' in our military. High ranking jesuit chaplains. Encouraging the U.S. troops to continue with the Pope's inquisition around the world. Comforting the catholic raised (duped) individuals.

The Jesuit chaplains are just as much officers as anyone and hold tremendous power right within the military ranks.

Thanks Craig, for putting that particular post into its own thread, as it is the literal foundation of what we see and fight today! The Roman Empire never fell! It was morphed into the Holy Roman See, Vatican, by Caesar Constantine, and his fake conversion and vision, alleged to have been from God, but no doubt from satan, the god of this world.

The Roman Catholic Church is both the Roman Empire, as well as the Mystery Church of Babylon, home of the Mother of Harlots, and the pagan mysteries of Babylon.

And also, thanks for this great news forum on these issues! I can only hope that another thousand of these spring up in the very near future to show the spread of this message!

Nice forum Craig! Thanks for all the hard work!

I shall reply to your question only, not to the rantings of "Mary."

ANY REASON WHY YOU ARE STILL IN TOUCH WITH JESUIT COADJUTOR WHITE? HE IS ALSO FBI DIV 5
LENNY

Tim White is not a Jesuit Coadjutor or Division 5 of the FBI. Your source for that information must be from the men below.

Concering Heneghen, he is a notorious Jesuit Temporal Coadjutor evidenced by his continued defense of that "global warming" disinfo specialist and false candidate for the US presidency, Al Gore---who in turn is tied to the Pope-serving Schiff family by marriage. As Vice President to the murderous Jesuit Coadjutor Bill Clinton, Gore was a party to giving our high-tech, military technology to the Red Chinese in preparation for our Sino-Soviet-Moslem invasion. It is this same Al Gore that Tom Heneghen continues to defend. Further, Heneghen's defence of French Intelligence, as though it is an independent intelligence agency, is pure poppycock as the French Knights of Malta rule the SDECE even as the American Knights rule the CIA. All intelligence agencies have been united into the Black Pope's International Intelligence Community. Anything contrary to this is disinformation predicated upon ignorance or lies.

I dismiss Webb and Flocco as being in the same camp with Heneghen. Shall I enumerate? Maybe later as we have reviewed the details before.

Captain Eric May is without question a Jesuit Temporal Coadjutor. His intimacy with the Jesuits is from his own mouth. I have the emails---provided by Tim White.

Remember when you asked me to co-host the Cloak with you? I agreed with one stipulation: that you disassociate from Webb, Heneghen and Flocco. This you refused to do---which was your choice since the Cloak is your show. But now you are attacked by this "Mary"(who is she anyway---just what has given her opinion such weight?), she defending these three, supreme disinformation specialists and you attack my association with the Tim White, who as no money and has been in Canada for over a year now working odd jobs and using a library computer? This is the same Tim White who attacks the Jesuits relentlessly! This is the same person defended by the courageous and former NYPD detective, James Rothstein. Have you ever had Jim on the show? He is the one who revealed on public radio that Frank Sturgis made a 22-page written confession to Archbishop Cooke in 1971 concerning his part in the JFK assassination. He also revealed that Cardinal Spellman was overseeing the pedophile ring in New York City that was untouchable, Spellman controlling DA Robert Morgenthau. It was Rothstein who saved the life of Marina Lorenz who was testifying at the HSCA in the 1970s, arresting Frank Sturgis who was about to kill her. And this "Mary" attacks the brave and courageous Rothstein?

Lenny, the Coadjutors are Heneghen, Webb, Flocco, and May, not Tim White. It was White who exposed EverGreen Air as being behind the 911 airborne attack. A former Seal Team Six member on my email list is quite familiar with that outfit and has talked with White about this extensively. Further, it was Tim White (and another individual who is now in prison) who exposed the pictures of Johnny Gosh all over the internet.

In conclusion, when Tim White begins to advocate the doctrines of these accomplished Jesuit Temporal Coadjutors, then I will disassociate from him and label him as another shill for the Jesuit Order. Until then, I will continue to associate with this man as he has taught me much about the political power of Rome, especially in Denver.

I trust this has been written and has been received in the right spirit between us. You have been very good to me in giving me liberty of speech on your show. I hope it will continue.

Sincerely in Faith,

Brother Eric

Re: Eric Jon Phelps + FBI Division 5's Tim White

I am aghast by what I see posted on Cloak's main front page in support of Eric Jon Phelps!

To gain credibility in the patriot community of concerned citizens, FBI Division 5's Tim White has been posting across the internet on dozens and dozens (some 80 or more that he posts on) of internet groups and forums this letter below from a retired NYCPD Detective praising him as a heroic, true patriot,

AND is also posting across the internet

Eric Jon Phelps' praise, support and defense of FBI Division 5's very own Tim White while, at the same time, Phelps is attacking and maligning our great and courageous American Patriots Tom Heneghan, Capt. Eric May of Ghost Troop, Tom Flocco and Stew Webb.

see my email below to Tom H. on April 15th and as recent as April 27th more proof that Eric Jon Phelps continues his communication with Tim White.

Just three days AFTER his April 27th communication with Tim White , on April 30th, Cloak and Dagger continues to promote Eric Jon Phelps !!!

Lenny, last year I sent you proof from internet groups and forums postings that Eric Jon Phelps and Tim White were communicating with one another.

However, at the time you felt it was simply ignorance and all innocent on Eric Jon Phelps part and dismissed my concerns.

I see that Cloak and Dagger has on the front page Tom Heneghan's intel report of April 30, 2007, side-by-side with Cloak and Dagger's promoting Eric Jon Phelps.

Here is Eric Jon Phelps publicly attacking Tom H., Capt. Eric May, Tom F. and Stew which is posted across the internet by Tim White hardly three weeks ago, on April 12th:

"...Further, Tim White exposed "Captain" Eric May of Ghost Troop as being the Jesuit Temporal Coadjutor that he really is. This was also another great service.

White also alerted me to the lies and duplicity of Stew Webb, Tom Heneghen and Tom Flocco.. After examining their works, I agreed and removed a reference to Stew Webb on my site....

Further, it was because of the work of Tim White that I was introduced to Greg Szymanski and Dr. Bill Deagle. These two men, although we differ on some topics, have given me complete liberty to speaking on the Jesuits many, many times on their shows.

Therefore, I will continue to consult the opinion of Tim White on topics I may be unfamiliar with .. He has a total recall memory and thus is a walking encyclopedia. I deny that he is FBI Division Five or that he is a pedophile, heinous and vicious false accusations by liars, libelers, and slanderers, Stew Webb and Barbara Hartwell and others with intent to silence Tim White. If he was either one of these, I would disassociate from him."

WHY IS CLOAK AND DAGGER CONTINUING TO SUPPORT AND PROMOTE ERIC JON PHELPS WHO IS ATTACKING AND MALIGNING OUR GREAT AMERICAN PATRIOTS, WHO, AT THE SAME TIME, IS COMMUNICATING WITH, SUPPORTING AND DEFENDING FBI DIVISION 5 TIM WHITE????!!

WHEN CLOAK AND DAGGER SUPPORTS AND PROMOTES ERIC JON PHELPS WHO SUPPORTS AND DEFENDS TIM WHITE ON THE INTERNET

IN ESSENCE, CLOAK AND DAGGER IS GIVING SUPPORT TO FBI DIVISION 5!!!

THIS ADVERSELY AFFECTS CLOAK'S CREDIBILITY.

Mary

P.S. Please respect my request to leave my name out of this.

I have paid my dues a thousand times over during the past 9 years of whistleblowing, since 1998, on the extensive bribes and cover up conspiracies involving illegal Muslims and other nationals --

Subjected to false allegations, trumped up investigations and harassing interrogations and a daily hostile work environment where my coworkers were afraid to be seen talking to me, my fraud case work destroyed, intentionally overloaded with work and denied the required time to complete the work;

I was severely punished and the bribery conspiracies continue unabated -- presumably to foster "sleeper cells" for impending "false flag" attacks.

Although I am a court adjudicated Federal Whistleblower, in whistleblower retaliation, I was illegally fired after 31 years of federal service without any compensation (too young to retire).

Three court cases later containing enormous amounts of documented evidence, 5 bribed or coerced judges + my own attorney, and loss of over $30,000 in legal fees and expenses -- the Traitor Cabal, thus far, has won up to this point!

For supporting, defending and promoting our courageous American Patriots, I have been publicly maligned and threatened by Division 5's Tim White and Larry Lawson.

The Traitor Cabal have already deprived me of my professional career and professional reputation, my sole source of income, leaving me unemployed and penniless, they monitor my phone calls and emails, crashed my computer last year, disconnected phone service at the same time as Tom Flocco, block my emails and recently Chertoff's DHS 'bagman' in D.C. sabotaged a prospective job, if not many others of the 400+ jobs I have applied for, forced to loose my home of 18 years, leaving me unemployed and homeless.

Although the Traitor Cabal are reading this very email, I still ask that you please respect my request to leave my name out of this.

To Whom It May Concern:

I am writing this for Tim White. Tim White has been a true Patriot and has gone beyond what is expected of any citizen. Tim realized the danger of his actions and the personal attacks that would be made against him.. He did not hesitate to disclose the photos of Johnny Gosch. These heroic efforts have revived the interest into the disappearance of Johnny Gosch. This action was the biggest break I have seen in many years..

Tim White was and has always been honest and forthright in any dealings I have had with him.

I have worked with Noreen Gosch for the last 10 years in trying to locate her son, Johnny Gosch.

A textbook example of disinformation: one lie contradicting another lie

Excerpt from previous message: Tim White- one lie contradicts another lie It is interesting how the very same people who say that the John Birch Society is controlled by the (Catholic) Jesuits, when talking to people, who hate Catholics, also simultaneously say that the John Birch Society is controlled by the Masons, even though Masons are anti-Catholic, and the Catholics are anti-Mason.

Last week Tim White; using his alias phantom.469366 , having IP Address 64.114.129.137 from TELUS Communications Inc. claimed that The John Birch Society was run by a Jesuit.

My response to that message is below (subject line: A sneaky Jesuit conspirator under every bed!)

This week Tim White; using his alias radar runner macdill1547@... , having IP Address 64.114.129.135 from TELUS Communications Inc. claimed that The John Birch Society was founded by a mason. The fact is that neither of these lies has any shred of truth in them..

Robert Welch was not a mason, and said so repeatedly while he was alive.

WHY IS CLOAK AND DAGGER STILL PROMOTING AND POSTING ERIC JON PHELPS??!!

I TOLD LENNY LAST YEAR AND EVEN SENT HIM THE POSTING FROM TIM WHITE CONTAINING AN EMAIL IN WHICH ERIC JON PHELPS WAS IN COMMUNICATION WITH TIM WHITE.

LENNY TOLD ME THAT DIDN'T MEAN ANYTHING, THAT HE WAS SURE IT WAS TOTALLY INNOCENT ON ERIC JON PHELPS PART.

LENNY CONTINUES TO PROMOTE THIS ERIC JON PHELPS??!!

WELL, SEE BELOW THIS LAST THURSDAY, APRIL 12TH, POSTING TIM WHITE HAS UP ON INTERNET BLOGS IN WHICH THIS ERIC JON PHELPS IS PROMOTING, SUPPORTING AND DEFENDING TIM WHITE

AND MALIGNING YOU !!!

AS RECENTLY AS LAST WEEK, APRIL 10TH OR 11TH, LENNY WAS STILL PROMOTING AND GIVE CREDIBILITY TO THIS ERIC JON PHELPS WHO IS MALIGNING YOU TO THE PUBLIC???

P.S. We know that Timmy uses your, Eric's, Tom Flocco's and Stew's intel and many others AND Division 5's dis-info propaganda and presents it as his own inside source.

ERIC JON PHELPS---re:TIM WHITE

Message #34736 of 34796

The following is by Eric Phelps, author of Vatican Assassins: Wounded in the House of My Friends (Third Edition: 1,800 pages w/700+ photographs - available by writing bro. Eric at eric@... for Forty (40) Federal Reserve Notes. This comes in CD-ROM format only):

Dear Friends and Brethren,

Much controversy rages about Tim White.

Here is my position. I consider him to be a skirmisher, driving the Jesuit coadjutors out of the high grass into plain sight. He aided me greatly in providing new materials for VAIII. One of his topics was the Secret Treaty of Ft. Hunt after WWII.

Tim was also the man who provided the first photos on the web of Johnny Gosch who was kidnapped as a paperboy and sold into sex slavery. Ex-NYPD detective James Rothstein, also pictured in VAIII thanks to Tim, backs Tim's exposure of this pedophile ring enjoyed by the Bush Dynasty and controlled by the American Roman Hierarchy.

Further, Tim White exposed "Captain" Eric May of Ghost Troop as being the Jesuit Temporal Coadjutor that he really is. This was also another great service.

White also alerted me to the lies and duplicity of Stew Webb, Tom Heneghen and Tom Flocco. After examining their works, I agreed and removed a reference to Stew Webb on my site.

Further, it was because of the work of Tim White that I was introduced to Greg Szymanski and Dr.. Bill Deagle. These two men, although we differ on some topics, have given me complete liberty to speak on the Jesuits many, many times on their shows.

Therefore, I will continue to consult the opinion of Tim White on topics I may be unfamiliar with. He has a total recall memory and thus is a walking encyclopedia. I deny that he is FBI Division Five or that he is a pedophile,heinous and vicious false accusations by liars,libelers,and slanderers,Stew Webb and Barbara Hartwell and others with intent to silence Tim White If he was either one of these, I would disassociate from him.

Further, it was Tim White who broke the story of Evergreen Air as being the culprit behind the 911 deception. The aircraft used in that psyops on the Pentagon and the WTC were prepared by the CIA's Bush-backed, Evergreen Air and White even names the people involved.

So, regardless of the opinions of others, I will continue to consult Tim and view him as a reliable source of information.

Sincerely in Faith,

Brother Eric

Subject: RE: Alert on Eric + Timmy

Joined at the hip with the Bloom-Flocco-Webb-Heneghan crew at one time was a Mary Schneider, whose e-mail address you gave me years ago. She had posted something in your group about an homeowner's insurance policy that included an exclusion of liability in damage done due to war.

I wanted proof of such a statement and contacted her via e-mail asking for the insurance company or a scan from which i perhaps could find out more.

She had a bunch of excuses, produced nothing, which led me to believe she was, frankly, full of dung.

Well, this Mary is that Mary Schneider, a whack job that fits in with the above. And what's really interesting is that every one of them writes in the same childish manner with the caps and the underlining and the exclamation points. This has also made me wonder if all four are doing their own writing or just went to the same remedial English class that apparently had no positive effect.

Yeah, I'm thinking: "I told you so . . . "

v

Dear Vyz,

I remember her now. I attacked her and told her to never contact me again.

Thanks for the clarification and for "telling me so."

Brother Eric

CRAIG-OXLEY - May 12, 2007 03:29 PM (GMT)

Dear Eric,

I've sat here and had a few thoughts. It seems strange how all this is kicking off when we have a few significant events happen recently. We have the release of your 3rd Edition VATICAN ASSASSINS and the destruction of Greg's Radio Show. We see both you and Greg on the Bloom show the other day and now this? Is there an attack being set up in order to try to limit your air time? It seems to me this Mary Schneider supposedly linked to the American-French-Alliance (Haha) wants you gone. As you know I listen to Tom Heneghan and the clique as i'll call them. I understand these people are fighting simply for one of their factions of the Elite, an example is Al Gore Jr. Their simply amongst the lower down scale of the Pyramid and definately have elite ties. Its good to know some of the bickering between cliques who're part of the conspiracy themselves. Your points on Heneghan are correct. If this Tim White is poor and others are in Jail then this would give them more weight. Its similar to Fritz Springmeier being locked in Jail and Jordan Maxwell walking around with illusional Venusian Freedoms. So when it comes to the bloodlines I would rather listen to Springmeier than Maxwell even though Maxwell claims Fritz stole his work, PROVE IT!

The problem is that people like yourself highlight that these Mary, Flocco and company as agents of the Intelligence community. They do not wish this to happen as it hurts their particular agendas currently going right now. We can still listen to people like Heneghan as long as we truely understand the conspiracy from pinnacle levels. We can learn many things from these people still, an example is Eric May and his Baghdad information which has proven true. To be honest I feel Eric May is far less of a problem compared to Heneghan. We need to remember that many of these types of people simply do not understand that the top control is all ONE regardless of their little fights. If Al Gore Jr wasn't anything to do with it then why would he promote known myths about Global Warming? Why doesn't he bring up topics of the Electric Universe, Sun, other planet environments? Why is he furrilling one area of the Iron Mountain Report which ultimately leads to GLOBAL GOVERANCE and we all know who will rule this. Yes they MAY have tried to whack him out over Chicago in 1998? But one faction of a bunch of Gangs wishing someone dead is nothing new. A neighbour down the street can do this to another do this mean anything? No. We need to realise that if the true elite controlists wished Al Gore Jr dead HE WOULD BE DEAD AS A DOORNAIL ASAP. Al Gore Jr does not even come close to the power of the KENNEDY family. JFK was far more powerful than Al Gore Jr and look what happened to him. They did NOT fail to kill him off and the others as we all know. We need to remember Senator Paul Wellstone and how an enemy of Bush he was, wheres he? DEAD! All they would do is utilise PERMINDEX once again and Al Gore Jr would be destroyed. If SDECE is protecting America then why is it in such a dire mess? Its all a dame big movie of illusions to appease its different levels of intelligent actors within it.

Thankyou
Craig Oxley

P.S These people cannot call me FBI Div 5 or British SIS as I've used some of their work.

Nice to see Daniel's and my suspicions have been vindicated by Eric Phelps.

Let's not forget that since late 2006, Szymanski has been questioning the validity of the Wanta story and he claimed in a recent article that Christopher Story of worldreports.org has claimed that the Queen of England is pro-America in regards to it's financial stability. And despite this, the cloak recently added a hyperlink to the latest article from world reports. However, the cloak has had Skolnick and Heneghan report rightfully that America has no more gold and that the Queen of England has played a part in looting it.

Eventually the truth shall see the light of day.

No matter what happens, I know this forum will continue to connect the dots together.

Theres problems with V.K Durham also so I don't trust either of these wether it be Wanta or Durham!

Anyhow rather than bicker over bunkum we should be fighting, protesting on the superstates, chips, banking, chemtrails, vaccines.

Purge of French Intelligence Underway

Wayne Madsen – WMR April 10, 2007
www.waynemadsenreport.com/

Neo-con purge of French intelligence services begins. Only days after the election of neo-con Nicolas Sarkozy as President of France, the expected neo-con purge of anti-Sarkozy members of the French intelligence and security services has begun. Captain Thierry Tintoni of the Renseignements generaux (RG) (General Intelligence service) has been questioned by a secret tribunal for violating secrecy laws. Tintoni is accused of providing defeated Socialist Party candidate Segolene Royal with damaging information on Sarkozy's conduct while Interior Minister. The French intelligence services will now face the same purges that befell similar neo-con purges of the U.S., British, Australian, Danish, and Italian intelligence services.

WMR's French intelligence sources report that French intelligence services, including the DGSE and DST, expect a Stalinist-type purge by Sarkozy's forces. Expected targets include agents suspected of being too close to the Socialists and those considered too pro-Arab. The Sarkozy team will also target those agents, who, through telecommunication intercepts of Sarkozy and his associates and officials of key American neo-con organizations, including the American Enterprise Institute and the American Jewish Committee, became aware of Sarkozy's secret foreign policy and campaign financing channels. Sarkozy made foreign policy commitments with American neo-cons that ran at odds with the policies of outgoing President Jacques Chirac and Prime Minister Dominique De Villepin.

I don't trust anyone who promotes AL Gore a known person who supports the Jesuits this guy openly sold our arms to the communist Chinese. God help us when The Sino-Soviet Chinese attack the west coast via the ports in California that Clinton-Gore sold them and the Muslims attacking through the south via the ports Bush sold them.

I think we should really trash Lenny Bloom and "Cloak & Dagger" that website smells like a CONTROLLED opposition I stand by Phelps side. Tim White is also suspicious of Greg Szymanski. However he once called Skolnick a bullshit artist and I think he is wrong there. I think Skolnick was good but he just got mixed up with some pro-Gore people unfortunately. Lenny Bloom told Szymanski last August that Skolnick introduced jim to the wanta story and that Skolnick thought it had legs. That and what Tim White sais about Szymanski was interesting to say the least.

Daniel - May 13, 2007 06:03 PM (GMT)

I agree with you AntiSionist. Tim White made judgements based upon the available information at the time.

I think that even looking back at myself and others, we all have learned more as time moves forward. Even Greg Szymanski, I once suspected him because in those days, I was in the "Zionists are everything" phase as many decent researchers end up still.

But I'm glad to see that Tim White has been spot on with most the of really important matters that were necessary in allowing the true research to be able to connect the dots.

JagDRS - May 14, 2007 02:25 AM (GMT)

This may seem from "left field" and I personally have hesitated in publicly voicing this.... but here goes. It took me a few months after Sherman Skolnick died to realize that minus Sherman, I really do not get much out of C&D. Yeah, perhaps occasionally a story they've been trumpeting seems to hit the jackpot....I'll give them that much, but at the same time, I'll also give them credit for releasing all kinds of supposed "inside intel" for which there hardly ever seem to be a way to corroborate much of any of the great amount of stuff they claim. I finally started to think/feel more this way about them after the long-running drama of the The Fitzgerald Grand Jury finally fizzled out at the Cloak after having run quite successfully, soap-opera style, for nearly a full year.....while Sherman was still alive too, btw. For a while I was willing to tolerate their incessant pro-Gore schtick, but I've since grown tired of allowing them this particular indulgence..... or benefit of the doubt, so to speak.

What I hesitate to say is - given his situation prior to his death (Sherman's), the way I see it, he was effectively in the care/custody... or at least routine/close contact, so to speak, of Lenny and crowd, at the time he "became deathly ill"..... and then, poof, he was gone. Without voicing a bunch of speculation, I'll just say I have in the interim become a little bit suspicious.... not much, especially without much concrete to go on, but I am a bit suspicious. And, this has been furthered by the fact that one Eustace Mullins, who was, as of a year ago, in situation not unlike Sherman's before he died. Eustace, somewhat of advanced years and failing health, was also coming under steady attack by various minions of the state, including his home State of Virginia. The last I saw/heard any bit of news from Eustace, it was about this time a year ago, after which he had recently had his house raided by several armed "security" personnel, and was basically chased out of his home, barefoot, at the time he was also in need of medical attention. He was due to go before some sort of so-called "trial" in Virginia over the issue they targeted him on - driver's license renewal. The thing that scares me most about this is, it's now been close to one full year, I've seen/heard nothing from Eustace, nor even second-hand comments of other people mentioning him. I've asked a few other web - site admins, like Ken Adachi for one, and it seems nobody knows anything about the condition / status of Eustace. And, Lenny himself, during an MP3 "news release" from C&D, about a year ago, while providing a rund down of most of what I just said about Eustace, briefly mentioned to the effect "everything is okay for now, Eustace is okay, I'm taking care of him"

:unsure:

PPS - never mind, I think I just found it (from April 30, 2007)

PS - question.

"We see both you and Greg on the Bloom show the other day and now this? "

Craig (or anyone else) can you please point me to a reference to this -which day/date were Greg and Eric recently on the Bloom show? I pretty much ignored most if not all C&D "back breaking news" audios last week. However, after seeing you mentin the above, I was interested in this. I was just on the C&D a few minutes ago, the most recent "MP3" news report is from May8, but there is apparentlya bug getting that to play (indicated by one of their many revolving banners), at least for the time being. Clicking on the May 8 MP3 leads me in a circle that continually does nothing but reload the C&D home page.

smashstuff - May 14, 2007 05:26 AM (GMT)

Cloak & Dagger is not above reproach nor is anyone else in this business we call "Truth". Infomation is a tool and so we utilize their info to best of our abilities but nobody should be following them with a blind eye. Cloak & Dagger was Nationally Broadcast at one point and that kind of exposure is allowed only if one is a feather on a bird. C&D is not trully independent.... Truth be told it was not Bloom they were afraid of....It was Skolnick.

Thall, May, & Heneghen all have suspicious links one of which includes Marshall McCluen whom Bloom regards as his mentor. Marshall McLuhan was very much into Mind Control and had links to organizations dedicated to research in that area. Electronic Media manipulation was also a foothold of his...Mr Alan Watt goes into in this in his May 2nd/May3rd Blurb....

He has a few choice words for Tim White and Eric Phelps at the eighteen minute mark.

QUOTE

TH: This is a message to Timmy White in Denver and Eric Jon Phelps. You continue to put out your crap. I will no longer tolerate you Timmy boy because I have linked you to MK Ultra groups and the situation taking place with these individuals that are linked to these high school shoot em ups. So timmy boy, watch your back.

LB: Now Eric is a guest at cloak and dagger and a reporter like yourself and at some point you may want to have some sort of debate with him/

TH: I'm not debating him - I will debate him - I will tell you this much. He's calling me a jesuit stooge and french agent and all this bull-all these interesting points. I am a complete opponent of the Vatican and the mossad and the international, what would you want to call it, institutions linked to these Monarchies in Europe which are causing these problems.

LB: It's interesting to...

TH: Eric does not want to deal with US attorneygate, he does not want to deal with the Bush-Clinton crime syndicate. He wants to deal with the jesuits and the mossad. That's fine. But unless he's willing to debate me on these issues of the Bush-Clinton crime syndicate, he's a fraud. Now we'll go on to the next subject. You've got to deal with issues and facts. You can't deal with theories.

1. Eric has dealt with the attorneygate.

Eric Phelps - The reasoning for the Indictments

http://z13.invisionfree.com/THE_UNHIVED_MI...?showtopic=1823

2. Eric has dealt with the Bush-Clinton crime syndicate. Just read his large VATICAN ASSASSINS book. Phelps even made the comment that Clinton (AND AL GORE) sold secrets to the Chinese. Phelps' third edition as I understand was pushed back and back because he kept coming upon new information. One of these many pieces being that photo of George Bush in Dealey Plaza that day and thus, his role in JFK's murder. Cloakanddagger say the world stopped on November 22 1963 and promote JFK's speech on secret societies. So I would think they'd appreciate Phelps giving Bush's role in JFK's murder attention in his 1800 page book.

3. Heneghan has criticized the Vatican bank before to be sure. On the March 20 briefing, he says karl rove is connected to the Vatican.

<http://www.cloakanddagger.de/shows/webcast...ear%20mar20.mp3>

On March 29, he mentions that Victor Ashe, Bush's homosexual lover is an ambassador to the Vatican "where he is among MANY HIGH LEVEL FRIENDS. I.E. THE PEDOPHILE POPE." He also makes note of this Ashe connection on March 9 and 13.

CRAIG-OXLEY - June 7, 2007 05:06 AM (GMT)

Guess what folks!

Tom Heneghan has proved himself to be a

"TEMPORAL COADJUTOR"

Hey Tom wheres this so-called Answar Bin Shari? Tom you've highlighted yourself as a Temporal Coadjutor with an agenda to push Vampire cultist, Al Gore Jr. By the way is he still addicted to AdrenoCrone? Or is that yet another attempt to smear Gore by Bush haha? The same Al Gore Jr who's daughter is interlinked with the Zionist Masonic Labor Sabbatians you claim hate Gore. The same Gore that aids the SMOM's brainwashing of Climate Control. The SMOM's education system controlled by ENCYLOPEDAS and the Robert Muller School carry Gore's lying climate indoctrination of future generations DVDs. Gore's a complete fraud and if you wish to keep stagnant in a little low down part of the conspiracy pyramid feel free. Eric Phelps has highlighted to the World the true leadership of this World. Bush, Gore, their pions in the 14th Amendment "New Holy Roman" American Empire controlled from Georgetown University, Fordham University, St Patricks Cathedral, Aspen Institute, JP Morgan & Chase/Wall Street SMOM British Intelligence. Wake up Heneghan and come forth from the dark side.

Hey Heneghan heres your boy with his master SMOM Military Vicar Edward Egan at the AI Smith Dinner. Do you honestly think he's not a devious controlled crook?

I have no time for pulling words anymore. Its time people wake up and see the real control as Eric and myself constantly highlight to you all. Wake up, the enemy is the JESUIT ORDER and their "Greatest Merchants of the Earth," the SOVEREIGN MILITARY ORDER OF MALTA. There is no one higher my friends period. I must also point out how I enjoyed the work of Lindsay Williams recently but alas he's obviously fearful of speaking of the SMOM also. We deal with them here and I will till they remove me and yes it will take this...

Subject: Gore's cash cow: Armand Hammer's Occidental Petroleum Ever wonder where the Gore family got their millions?

Vice President Al Gore's daughter Karenna Gore, was recently married to Andrew Schiff. Andrew Schiff is a descendant of JACOB SCHIFF. Jacob Schiff was the Jewish New York City banker and traitor to America who financed the communist revolution in Russia in 1917. Jacob Schiff gave $20 Million Dollars in Gold (worth Five Hundred Million, $500,000,000.00, in 1999 dollars) to LEVI BRAUNSTEIN, also known as Trotsky, and Vladimir Ilich Blanc Ulyanoff, also known as Lenin. They used this money to turn Russia into a terrifying satanic anti-Christian communist slave state. The communist revolution resulted in a bloody holocaust of over 100 MILLION DEAD CHRISTIANS which no one seems to want to remember or talk about.

Hollywood has never made one movie about this Christian Holocaust. Why? If you want to know more about the history of the communist take over of Russia and the millions who were slaughtered, I urge you to purchase Aleksandr Solzhenitsyn's book THE GULAG ARCHIPELAGO.

Vice President Al Gore Jr. is the son of former United States Senator Al Gore Sr, whose major benefactor was Armand Heimer [aka Hammer], who in turn was the son of Dr. Julius Heimer [aka Hammer], founder of the American Communist Party. See article below for more information on the Red Communist sympathizer Armand Hammer. To this day Al Gore Jr. presents the "prestigious" HAMMER award for Government Efficiency.

++++
AL GORE THEME: "IF I HAD A HAMMER"

by F.R. Duplantier

If Al Gore Jr. ever becomes President, he'll have to answer some embarrassing questions about the source of his family's wealth. "One of the minor mysteries of American politics has been the source of wealth for the family of Vice President Albert Gore Jr.," observes Joseph Goulden of Accuracy in Media. "When Gore's father was first elected to the House of Representatives in the late 1930s," Goulden continues, "he was an impecunious Tennessee school teacher who eked out extra dollars by playing fiddle at church weddings. But later, as a United States Senator, he lived in the plush Fairfax Hotel on Embassy Row in Washington, and sent his son, Al Jr., to the pricey St. Albans School, the haunt of kids from Social Register families."

In a recent issue of the Washington Inquirer, Goulden summarizes the contents of a new book called Dossier, written by investigative reporter Edward Jay Epstein, which "shows that the senior Gore had a silent partner who for several decades insured that his pockets remained comfortably filled. He was Armand Hammer, the multi-millionaire businessman and oil promoter who apparently collected art and politicians with equal zeal." Goulden notes that Al Gore Sr. was "Hammer's designated door-opener in official Washington." The handsome compensation that Gore Sr. received for his services culminated in a half-a-million-dollars-a-year position with Armand Hammer's oil company, Occidental Petroleum. Al Gore Jr. picked up where his father left off and "put the family's Senate seat at Hammer's service."

Goulden describes Armand Hammer as "one of the odder, more odious characters of American business and politics, 'famous' chiefly because he was rich enough to promote his mammoth ego." He notes that Hammer's carefully and expensively crafted public persona was "that of a renegade oilman who made billions from Libyan oil, chummed around with politicians up to White House level, and adorned acres of galleries with paintings, some priceless, some fakes. Hammer's lawyers bedeviled honest journalists who tried to write otherwise."

Hammer's powerful influence on Al Gore Sr. and Jr. would have been bad enough had he been nothing more than an unscrupulous businessman. Like his father Julius, however, he was a lifelong Communist and a friend of the Soviet Union. "Some scattered hints that Hammer's ties with the USSR went beyond business friendship have surfaced over the years," says Goulden. Documents discovered in Soviet archives, however, leave no doubt that Hammer was "a man who bribed and cheated his way to great wealth -- and who started with Soviet gold."

Edward Jay Epstein's new book, Dossier, makes a compelling case that both Al Gore Sr. and Al Gore Jr. were the willing partners of a very powerful and very wealthy man, Armand Hammer, who was not loyal to the United States of America. A truly independent press would have exposed these connections decades ago, long before Al Gore Sr. and Jr. rose to their prestigious and influential positions.

Jewish NYC banker Jacob Schiff financed the communist revolution giving $20 Million to Lenin & Trotsky. This story was confirmed by John Schiff, Grandson of Jacob Schiff in an interview with reporter Charlie Knickerbocker and was published in Hearst Newspapers in 1949. The Rothschilds, the Warburgs and other International bankers were the founders of the Tri-lateral Commission, the CFR, The Bilderberger conferences and The United Nations. These international bankers have also financed not only Lenin and Trotsky but also Stalin. See the web site below for more information on this topic.

CRAIG-OXLEY - June 7, 2007 05:21 AM (GMT)

Oh well Heneghan would have you think that this talk of SMOM Papal Knight Sabbatian Murdoch (Greenberg) is just more Gore smearing by Bush. Its all bunkum my friend and we're seeing through it. Heneghan is struggling to counter-act our highlighting of him just as much as he struggles to pronounce "Permindex." I do not deny that Heneghan has some good information because he does but all this big show crap with Gore and a few other things like Shari is Bunkum. Nelson Thall's (Lenny Bloom) show will take a bashing if nothing changes I believe. I've listened all the time and promoted it very much but not no longer.

AntiSionist - June 7, 2007 05:32 AM (GMT)

It all pretty much started when the information Tim White had was brought to the attention of this board. I will still continue to listen to Heneghan and I think many of his old briefings are good. I for example would never have heard of the MI-6 olive group on US soil if it were not for him or the rogue mossad group dirty dozen. Cloakanddagger I think was in large part instrumental in stopping the Bush syndicate in attacking Toronto almost exactly one year ago. He's good, but he's just too pro-Gore and too anti-Phelps for my taste.

First Heneghan said he wouldn't debate, then said he would, then he said, "I will tell you this much." So I wonder if Heneghan is really up to it. If he really has the guts to accuse Phelps of not dealing with the attorneygate situation in any capacity or to accuse Phelps of not talking about the Bush-Clinton crime syndicate all while doing a radio show on cloakanddagger with Lenny Bloom as the moderator. Although, Eric is a big boy and he doesn't need to work to vindicate himself as we on this board pretty much have from Heneghan's accusations against him. I bet Phelps wouldn't even want to waste his time. Not that it matters in the end, because we know Phelps has talked about attorneygate and the Bushes and Clintons.

Menses - June 7, 2007 06:17 AM (GMT)

Heneghen is a showman & an entertainer. He has no business trying to debate a man of Phelps stature...I hope he does not attempt to do such a thing as things could get real ugly in a hurry....

Minuteman Matt - June 7, 2007 07:49 AM (GMT)

I say HENAGEN/Gore are both traitors although they have some usefull knowledge that exposes the bush-clinton crime familys. I have to agree with Craig and Daniel I believe C&D are part of the nwo only they are a different gang/faction who hate the other faction. In the end the Jesuits/SMOM control both factions C&D gives us good info on exposing the SIS agents and thats about it.

Also I believe Sherman Skolnik was not a part of them or the NWO I believe Sherman was a honest man and was being used by C&D Sherman didnt relize it cause he was real old.

AntiSionist - June 7, 2007 08:48 AM (GMT)

Yes. Very useful. Lots of good info on this current regime. But they don't go that extra step and talk more about the jesuits, and Gore's connection to them, or the Sabbatean Schiffs, Murdoch via the TV deal, etc. These guys are just like any other person. Lots of good info, but still missing a few pieces of the puzzle.

QUOTE

Heneghan is struggling to counter-act our highlighting of him just as much as he struggles to pronounce "Permindex."

Craig, he had no problem mentioning Permindex on Jan 30 this year.

Once Again It's Bush & Bitch - Back To Dealey Plaza We Go

It can now be reported that the Bushfraud Administration is engaged in a massive cover up in the Assassination of John F. Kennedy. Secret notes linked to the late Watergate Burglar and Dealey Plaza bum E. Howard Hunt, is being held under the cloak of National Security as new evidence linking Lyndon Baines Johnson(LBJ) to the assassination cabal is surfacing.

Note: There is no statute of limitations on murder. The embargoed notes also include a classified deposition by Hunt given to then Watergate Democratic counsel Hillary Rodenhurst-Clinton. Hillary acted as the CIA fixer excluding the deposition on the JFK Assassination from the Nixon Impeachment investigation. The notes and deposition of the late E. Howard Hunt include Dallas FBI reports taken from former LBJ Attorney Blair McClelland.

Note: Blair is the father of former White House Press Secretary, Scott McClelland. These notes and deposition tie McClelland directly to the involvement of Israeli mobster Meyer Lansky and British Intelligence Asset Lord Bloomfield all linked to Montreal Canada aka Permindex. (The plot to Kill President Kennedy).

Of course, Bloomfield , was previously tied to the assassination attempts on French President Charles De Gaulle.

CRAIG-OXLEY - June 7, 2007 11:27 PM (GMT)

No its not that Heneghan doesn't speak of Permindex because he does very much, its just he cannot pronounce it what so ever. All you hear is "Lenny, how do you pronounce it again?" Infact Permindex wasn't spoke about hardly at all by anyone. Heneghan and Bloom really highlighted that British SIS hit team. Theres an example of some good that can come of that show. All this Gore crap needs to go. Gore is very creepy!

Title: Five acquitted over Calvi death

CRAIG-OXLEY - June 7, 2007 01:00 AM (GMT)

Who controls 'The City?' The Jesuit Order utilising their Sovereign Military Order of Malta (The Greatest Merchants on Earth!). Making 'The City' the Financial and Commercial mission control of the World. This arena re-united Europe for the Superior General. From here the Black Pope has financed both the U.S and Soviets. The Federal Reserve pays the Bank of England remember. Both of those are centralised "War Banks" all tying into the SMOM's master bank in their Switzerland Banking HQ and into The Bank of International Settlements. Please note that the Jesuits use their agent Rothschild known as the "Keepers of the VATICAN treasury" to keep control of their Bank of England. -Craig

Five acquitted over Calvi death

Wednesday, 6 June 2007, 16:00 GMT 17:00 UK

<http://news.bbc.co.uk/1/hi/world/europe/6726353.stm>

A court in Rome has acquitted all five defendants of murder charges in the 1982 death of Roberto Calvi, known as "God's Banker" for his Vatican ties.

Mr Calvi, the chairman of a private Italian bank, Banco Ambrosiano, was found hanging from scaffolding under London's Blackfriars Bridge in 1982.

A British inquest ruled the death suicide, but the case was reopened at the insistence of Mr Calvi's family.

Mr Calvi died as his bank collapsed in one of Italy's largest fraud scandals.

City of London Police, who initially investigated Mr Calvi's death, said it was "disappointing for Roberto Calvi's family in particular that those responsible for his murder have still not faced justice".

In a statement, the City of London Police said they had "worked closely with the Italian authorities since 2003 to bring this case to a successful conclusion."

Cleared of murder charges are Giuseppe Calo, alleged to be a cashier for the Sicilian Mafia; Mr Calvi's close associate, businessman Flavio Carboni; businessman Ernesto Diotallevi; Mr Calvi's bodyguard and driver Silvano Vittor; and Mr Carboni's ex-girlfriend Manuela Kleinszig.

Calo has been in prison since the 1980s on Mafia charges unrelated to Mr Calvi's death.

Prosecutors had said Ms Kleinszig should be acquitted due lack of evidence but had asked for life sentences for the other four.

The prosecution alleged that they lured Mr Calvi to London and into the hands of his murderers.

Unanswered questions

Mr Calvi was linked to the Vatican bank, and prosecutors also said he was laundering money for the Mafia.

Mob bosses feared he knew where their money was going and where it was hidden and was preparing to tell all, prosecutors said.

In June 1982, his private bank collapsed with debts of $1.5bn (£750m).

An investigation began in Italy but, a few days later, Calvi's body was hanging from Blackfriars Bridge in London.

Cash and stones were stuffed into his pockets.

The first inquest ruled it was suicide but years later his body was exhumed, revealing clues suggesting he had been murdered.

Forensic tests conducted in 2003 concluded there was no evidence on Mr Calvi's shoes and clothing that he had climbed the scaffolding, indicating he had been killed elsewhere.

The two-year trial leaves more questions than answers, says the BBC's Christian Fraser in Rome.

The defence suggested more than once that there were plenty of others who had a motive for murder - some of them within the Vatican - and they said any number of these parties could have collaborated and silenced Roberto Calvi.

CRAIG-OXLEY - June 6, 2007 11:30 PM (GMT)

Mother Teresa's House of Illusions

How She Harmed Her Helpers As Well As Those They `Helped'

by Susan Shields

<http://www.holysmoke.org/sdhok/shields.htm>

The following article is from Free Inquiry magazine, Volume 18, Number 1.

Some years after I became a Catholic, I joined Mother Teresa's congregation, the Missionaries of Charity. I was one of her sisters for nine and a half years, living in the Bronx, Rome, and San Francisco, until I became disillusioned and left in May 1989. As I reentered the world, I slowly began to unravel the tangle of lies in which I had lived. I wondered how I could have believed them for so long.

Three of Mother Teresa's teachings that are fundamental to her religious congregation are all the more dangerous because they are believed so sincerely by her sisters. Most basic is the belief that as long as a sister obeys she is doing God's will. Another is the belief that the sisters have leverage over God by choosing to suffer. Their suffering makes God very happy. He then dispenses more graces to humanity. The third is the belief that any attachment to human beings, even the poor being served, supposedly interferes with love of God and must be vigilantly avoided or immediately uprooted. The efforts to prevent any attachments cause continual chaos and confusion, movement and change in the congregation. Mother Teresa did not invent these beliefs - they were prevalent in religious congregations before Vatican II - but she did everything in her power (which was great) to enforce them.

Once a sister has accepted these fallacies she will do almost anything. She can allow her health to be destroyed, neglect those she vowed to serve, and switch off her feelings and independent thought. She can turn a blind eye to suffering, inform on her fellow sisters, tell lies with ease, and ignore public laws and regulations.

Women from many nations joined Mother Teresa in the expectation that they would help the poor and come closer to God themselves. When I left, there were more than 3,000 sisters in approximately 400 houses scattered throughout the world. Many of these sisters who trusted Mother Teresa to guide them have become broken people. In the face of overwhelming evidence, some of them have finally admitted that their trust has been betrayed, that God could not possibly be giving the orders they hear. It is difficult for them to decide to leave - their self-confidence has been destroyed, and they have no education beyond what they brought with them when they joined. I was one of the lucky ones who mustered enough courage to walk away.

It is in the hope that others may see the fallacy of this purported way to holiness that I tell a little of what I know. Although there are relatively few tempted to join Mother Teresa's congregation of sisters, there are many who generously have supported her work because they do not realize how her twisted premises strangle efforts to alleviate misery. Unaware that most of the donations sit unused in her bank accounts, they too are deceived into thinking they are helping the poor.

As a Missionary of Charity, I was assigned to record donations and write the thank-you letters. The money arrived at a frantic rate. The mail carrier often delivered the letters in sacks. We wrote receipts for checks of $50,000 and more on a regular basis. Sometimes a donor would call up and ask if we had received his check, expecting us to remember it readily because it was so large. How could we say that we could not recall it because we had received so many that were even larger?

When Mother spoke publicly, she never asked for money, but she did encourage people to make sacrifices for the poor, to "give until it hurts." Many people did - and they gave it to her. We received touching letters from people, sometimes apparently poor themselves, who were making sacrifices to send us a little money for the starving people in Africa, the flood victims in Bangladesh, or the poor children in India. Most of the money sat in our bank accounts.

The flood of donations was considered to be a sign of God's approval of Mother Teresa's congregation. We were told by our superiors that we received more gifts than other religious congregations because God was pleased with Mother, and because the Missionaries of Charity were the sisters who were faithful to the true spirit of religious life.

Most of the sisters had no idea how much money the congregation was amassing. After all, we were taught not to collect anything. One summer the sisters living on the outskirts of Rome were given more crates of tomatoes than they could distribute. None of their neighbors wanted them because the crop had been so prolific that year. The sisters decided to can the tomatoes rather than let them spoil, but when Mother found out what they had done she was very displeased. Storing things showed lack of trust in Divine Providence.

The donations rolled in and were deposited in the bank, but they had no effect on our ascetic lives and very little effect on the lives of the poor we were trying to help. We lived a simple life, bare of all superfluities. We had three sets of clothes, which we mended until the material was too rotten to patch anymore. We washed our own clothes by hand. The never-ending piles of sheets and towels from our night shelter for the homeless we washed by hand, too. Our bathing was accomplished with only one bucket of water. Dental and medical checkups were seen as an unnecessary luxury.

Mother was very concerned that we preserve our spirit of poverty. Spending money would destroy that poverty. She seemed obsessed with using only the simplest of means for our work. Was this in the best interests of the people we were trying to help, or were we in fact using them as a tool to advance our own "sanctity?" In Haiti, to keep the spirit of poverty, the sisters reused needles until they became blunt. Seeing the pain caused by the blunt needles, some of the volunteers offered to procure more needles, but the sisters refused.

We begged for food and supplies from local merchants as though we had no resources. On one of the rare occasions when we ran out of donated bread, we went begging at the local store. When our request was turned down, our superior decreed that the soup kitchen could do without bread for the day.

It was not only merchants who were offered a chance to be generous. Airlines were requested to fly sisters and air cargo free of charge. Hospitals and doctors were expected to absorb the costs of medical treatment for the sisters or to draw on funds designated for the religious. Workmen were encouraged to labor without payment or at reduced rates. We relied heavily on volunteers who worked long hours in our soup kitchens, shelters, and day camps.

A hard-working farmer devoted many of his waking hours to collecting and delivering food for our soup kitchens and shelters. "If I didn't come, what would you eat?" he asked.

Our Constitution forbade us to beg for more than we needed, but, when it came to begging, the millions of dollars accumulating in the bank were treated as if they did not exist.

For years I had to write thousands of letters to donors, telling them that their entire gift would be used to bring God's loving compassion to the poorest of the poor. I was able to keep my complaining conscience in check because we had been taught that the Holy Spirit was guiding Mother. To doubt her was a sign that we were lacking in trust and, even worse, guilty of the sin of pride. I shelved my objections and hoped that one day I would understand why Mother wanted to gather so much money, when she herself had taught us that even storing tomato sauce showed lack of trust in Divine Providence.

Title: Hal Turner acting suspicious?

Description: According to Tim White he is.

AntiSionist - June 6, 2007 11:16 AM (GMT)

First, let's remember the words of Tim White.

QUOTE

Hal Turner - Illuminati disinfo media pawn. Jesuit Trained Roman Catholic.<<<notes added by Tim White>>>,vicious on air neo Nazi Racist broadcasting out of NYC and who obviously is protected by "THE ORDER"-home is in North Bergen,N.J.,1906 Paterson Plank Rd,07047,home ph 201-484-7809.

Now let's look at that Eric temporal Hufschmid had to say on his news page.

<http://www.iamthewitness.com/News.html>

QUOTE

Hal Turner Wants Certified Addresses.

As is typical of Zionists pretending to be Nazis, Turner offers childish insults about other races. Now he wants members to pay a notary public to certify their name and address. The groups of patriots, Nazis, Liberals, etc. may be collecting names for a reason. Be careful

Minuteman Matt - June 6, 2007 04:53 PM (GMT)

Hal Turner is a devious temporal cojoaditor and a big time racist I really think he is a redneck what kind of name is "hal" haha :lol:

Daniel - June 6, 2007 06:28 PM (GMT)

Hal Turner is certainly less trustworthy than DBS.

And this does not leave us with a kind picture

Truth_Sets_Free - June 6, 2007 07:20 PM (GMT)

Well... Tim White is real trustworthy LOL!

That's only if they want to join Hal Turner's organization. I think Hal doesn't want disruptive or govt agency people joining which is why Hal or his people should be able to search prospective member's houses & persons at will, for bugs, wires, etc. He doesn't want disruptive people in I'm sure. Hey if they all have his house address, he should be able to have theirs. It is only common decency. People 20 years ago never would have thought twice about giving their address to the John Birch Society. Now talking about a guy who gets all sorts of death threats, it would only be responsible to have things as transparent and legal as possible.

CRAIG-OXLEY - June 7, 2007 12:23 AM (GMT)

Erdo9494:

I think this Jesuit/Black Pope ruling the world idea is utter crap and more filler that takes you down another cul-de-sac.

If anyone rules the world, it is the Rothschild family. They control banking in all but SIX countries in the world.

Ruling the world takes money, how much coin does this black pope have? Must be a bigger bank account than the Rothschilds if they really do run the world.

Zionist Khazarian descendants (self-claimed ashkenazi jews) control the world.

Did the Jesuits/black pope incite and fund the rise of Communism? Were Lenin, Trotsky, and Stalin Jesuits?

Did Jesuits dominate the african slave trade?

Did Jesuits fund the confederate secession?

Were WW2 world leaders Jesuits?

Is Freemasonry derived from and based on mystic Jesuit literature and principles?

Do Jesuits own and control the mainstream media, which exists to provide the world with all the necessary information to get an accurate worldview?

Do Jesuits control the international banking industry?

Do Jesuits control the pornography industry?

To find out who is running the show, ask yourself: "who can i not publicly criticize?"

So you can you not criticize in our society? The Jesuits? Or the Khazarian Zionists?

Unless you can somehow demonstrate that Jesuits control the Khazarian Zionists, such as the Rothschilds, you are wrong.

Thus, you should be asking yourself who is peddling this Jesuit/Black Pope nonsense? where did they get that information? and further, who would want you to believe its the Jesuits/black pope? and why?

All your message shows me and others is that you've opened your mouth before actually doing any research on the Jesuit subject. Even the most basic understanding of the Jesuit control answers your most basic questions. I suggest you purchase Vatican Assassins III by Eric Jon Phelps and you'll receive all the answers you wish. I suspect 1800+ pages is too much for you to read as I feel you're looking for the quickest, easiest information which is obviously from your lack of knowledge.

QUOTE

Did the Jesuits/black pope incite and fund the rise of Communism? Were Lenin, Trotsky, and Stalin Jesuits?

Joseph "Grand Inquisitor" Stalin a ROMAN CATHOLIC loyal to the Pope. Who ordered the 'Famine in the Ukraine?' It was the Society of Jesus (Jesuits). Who trained Joseph Stalin? The Jesuits! Who funded the Russian Communism? The mission control #2 of the Sovereign Military Order of Malta namely New York. It was the SMOM controlled Wall Street which by the way is riddled with SMOM controlled British Intelligence such as Blackstone Group. Who created the Russian Revolution in 1917? The Society of Jesus. They then bought about a secret concordat with the Pope and Vladimir Lenin. You should also be aware of this Polish Roman Catholic Admund Dzerzhinsky who was controlled by the Jesuit Order. You should then note his son Felix Admundovich Dzerzhinsky a Roman Catholic also highly admired the Jesuit Order. Now what was Felix? The Head of the Cheka and a main man of Joseph Stalin. Why didn't the Bolsheviks or Stalin expell the SMOM from Moscow? Now what happened after the 5 year civil war? The Jesuits were allowed officially back within Russia by Vladimir Lenin,. Funny that wasn't it. They were within Petrograd and Moscow exactly where the revolution started! Funny that wasn't it? Jesuit Super General Ledochowski sent one of his Jesuit soldiers to the USSR. This was the powerful Georgetown University Fr Edmund Walsh SJ and it was Edmund who put Stalin as the Secretary of the Communist Party. Notice how SMOM Papal Knight William J Casey helped finance the Soviets via Kama River truck factory.

"It was not until our own century that Lenin adopted the essential Jesuit principles of super-centralization and the corps of professional revolutionaries." F. A. Ridley, 1938
American Historian

So my friend thats enough for that question. Just study what Stalin did for the Order in the actions you're aware of.

QUOTE

If anyone rules the world, it is the Rothschild family. They control banking in all but SIX countries in the world.

Who controls Banking/Finance/Insurance exactly? The Sovereign Military Order of Malta "The Great Merchants of the Earth." Who are the SMOM subordinate to? The Supreme Pontiff, the Pope. These days they report directly to the Superior General and his Society of Jesus. The Rothschilds are agents of Jesuits. Their defined in the Judiac Encylopedia as "The Keepers of the Vatican Treasury." The Rothschilds are Sabbatian Racial Apostate Court Jews. The Rothschilds were bought on board the Jesuit control by sheep dipped Jesuit Adam Weishaupt who formed the Order of the Bavarian Illuminati. The Jesuits needed more funding in order to seek revenge on the RCC and Pope for their attempted destruction in 1773 similar to how the Pope acted on the Knights Templars. They then bought the Rothschilds aboard in 1776, Weishaupt got the Jesuits back online with the Pope and within 41 years of the Pope's attack, the Order now took control of the Pontiff and his Roman Catholic Church. Their revenge was almost complete! Since that period in history things haven't changed. You'll also find ex British Intelligence officier Dr John Coleman expose how the Rothschilds and even the Rockefellers wealth simply doesn't come close to some of the members of the Committee of 300 which is controlled by the Order of the Garter, Pilgrim Society, all inner cores of the SMOM! Stop listening to the easy to find, every day semi truths out there. The Jews were bought into positions of power within Banking back in 1066 by the Norman Anglo-Saxon Monarchs. For this they accepted being controlled. Remember that the Law of Banking is known as International Maritime Admiralty Law. This Maritime Law was based on VATICAN Canon Law. All the "War Banks" known as Central banks get controlled from SMOM controlled Switzerland. The Federal Reserve pays the Bank of England which finally ends up in the Swiss Bank of International Settlements. All you need to do is study the SMOM and its members then look whos who in Banking.

QUOTE

Zionist Khazarian descendants (self-claimed ashkenazi jews) control the world.

I suggest you stop listening to these pathetic American wanna-be journalists who know almost zero on the Jews. Whats all this Khazarian nonsense we keep hearing? Its Bunkum. The Racial Apostate Jews you speak of are SABBATIANS period, such as Hillary Rodenhurst, Rupert Greenberg, John Cohen and so forth.

You should note how Sabbatians front control of Israel for instance such as Olmert, Peres, Sharon. These Sabbatians are subordinate to the Council on Foreign Relations. The Foreign Relations was created by the SMOM just after they created their Royal Institute of International Affairs. Both organisations get controlled through the SMOM's 'The City.' You will also need to understand how the whole of the Middle East gets controlled by SMOM Papal Knight Juan Carlos of Spain. All the Sabbatians are subordinate to this most powerful Knight and region controller. Shimon Peres etc are subordinate for instance to Juan. You should also note that Shimon Peres's power in Israel. Now note who trained im in Poland, it was the Jesuits! He's pro-Vatican and he's been their spy and assassin for eons. Wake up!

QUOTE

Ruling the world takes money, how much coin does this black pope have? Must be a bigger bank account than the Rothschilds if they really do run the world.

The Jesuit General controls all the Banking and Finance of the World utilising his SMOM "Great Merchants of the Earth." The Superior General also stole much from the Pope. You should sit back and think of something far more powerful than money. This is Knowledge! The Jesuits certainly have this and also the damn money. They finance their Inquisitions via their 14th Amendment "New Holy Roman" American Empire Federal Reserve.

QUOTE

Unless you can somehow demonstrate that Jesuits control the Khazarian Zionists, such as the Rothschilds, you are wrong.

So would you consider Henry Kissinger to be one of the most powerful people on this planet? Of course we do! What is Henry? He's a Sabbatian Court Jew! He's a Sovereign Military Order of Malta Papal Knight. Kissinger is subordinate to the SMOM Military Vicar Cardinal Edward Egan. Kissinger is subordinate to the 78th Grandmaster and Prince Andrew Bertie. Kissinger is subordinate to the Pope. Now what do many know of Kissinger? They know he's been the conduit between the Vatican and U.S for eons. They know he's a henchman of the Rockefellers. What are the Rockefellers? Their SMOM Papal Knights subordinate to exactly the same people as Kissinger. So theres just one prime example of Sabbatian Court Jewish. Stop the Khazarian bunkum. So we see many of these Sabbatians in the Great Merchants of the Earth SMOM. We know the SMOM are loyal to the Jesuits and their Vatican. Wake up!

QUOTE

Do Jesuits control the pornography industry?

The Sovereign Military Order of Malta control the Pornography industry. You should note that the Vatican is the biggest holder of Pornography in the World. Bet that shocked you! The SMOM control all entertainment and Media and have done for eons along with the Mafiosi who incidentally are subordinate to their local Archbishops. Just look at who's been behind prostitution, alcohol, gambling! It wasn't hard to find out about the Mafiosi control of the Trucking, Roads and Dockyards. You'll notice now the SMOM using knights such as King Juan Carlos of Spain controlling these new super highways right now. Hollywood is fully controlled by the SMOM and Mafiosi. It may seem Sabbatians run the Porno industry but once again thats how the Vatican likes it, you blame these. Wake up!

QUOTE

Do Jesuits own and control the mainstream media, which exists to provide the world with all the necessary information to get an accurate worldview?

As I've said earlier the Jesuits control all the media via their SMOM. For example Sabbatian Rupert Greenberg known as Murdoch controls the Fox Network. What is Rupert Murdoch? He's a SMOM Papal Knight! He's also an agent with the SMOM's British SIS. Remember the SMOM control all the Intelligence agencies. Remember that Rupert Murdoch is a practising ROMAN CATHOLIC. Remember he's also a Knight of St Gregory! Now thats just one example! The SMOM control Banking, Finance, Insurance, Intelligence, Entertainment, Politics, Media, Education.

All your questions can be easily answered with a little homework from correct sources. I'm not going to waste anymore time writing a book to answer whats already been answered. Theres too many people with a mouth blabbling quicker than their brain fills. If you guys do not wish to progress further and learn the deeper knowledge thats your business but certainly do not get in the way of people who do. Certainly don't act as if you're aware when your far from it.

The Racial Apostate Jews you speak of are SABBATIANS period, such as Hillary Rodenhurst, Rupert Greenberg, John Cohen and so forth.

Note: Most Sabbateans during and after Sabbatai Zevi were Jews and practiced only Judaism, whereas the Donmeh officially practice/d Islam and are not regarded as Jews.

Sabbateans is a complex general term that refers to a variety of followers of, disciples and believers in Sabbatai Zevi (1626 - 1676), a Jewish rabbi who declared himself to be the Jewish Messiah in 1648. Vast numbers of Jews in the Jewish diaspora accepted his claims, even after he became a Jewish apostate with his conversion to Islam in 1666. Sabbatai Zevi's followers both during his "Messiahship" and after his conversion to Islam are known as Sabbateans.

<http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Sabbateans>

Sabbateans are people who believe Sabbatai Zevi was the messiah.

I think its actually an insult to call someone that word. Few if any openly practice. Its just as heretical as Christianity. He did not fulfill all the prophecies.

Welcome to the club. I get this bunkum on another forum I post to all the time where "Zionists" and Jews are considered the ONLY group behind the NWO. Every time I try to tell the other posters there that behind EVERY "Zionist" sits a man in a long black robe and an ass-backwards white collar I get either a bunch of bunkum like you received or ignored.

Yep, nobody around here wants to here it, Its the FAGS in them black dresses FOOLS. Go kiss their filthy hand again. Even Coleman points to the Jesuits, With his Article Jesuit World SUBVERSION, To deny this is to Deny eating makes one crap. Coleman also has the Black Nobility unmasked Worldwide. It cant get more clear than ice water tossed in your face. Idiots.

Remember on that you've to be careful when you speak of Judaism. Remember theres the Torah but then theres the terrible Talmud. These Sabbatians follow the Talmud. Just look at the Talmud and then look at the Jesuit, Council of Trent. You will notice that whats termed Civil Law is really the Uniform Commerical Code also known as Talmudic Law. The Vatican in control of the Monarchs and the Churchs have enforced this since 1066 when it was first introduced into England. Remember "Jews are the property of the Norman and Anglo-Saxon Kings." also notice how their controlled from Rome's "Mission Command," the United Kingdom. You'll find this in pages 1179-1200 of Volume 71 within The George Town Law Journal.

The OWL at Bohemian Grove is "Athena", Goddess of War which is more "Roman" than Jewish!

Noahide/Noachide Law is such a replacement.

But it is Queen Beatrix of the Netherlands and The HOUSE of ORANGE, that ALL the "Finger Pointers" protect with silence and distractions.

World Council of Churches
1998: The Year in Review

<http://images.google.com.au/imgres?imgurl=...ficial%26sa%3DG>

At a service celebrating the anniversary of the WCC in Amsterdam, where its founding assembly was held 50 years earlier, general secretary Konrad Raiser greets Queen Beatrix of the Netherlands; at the right is the mayor of Amsterdam.

"The Church" (of the Trinitarian "Out of Egypt" LIE), was INVENTED by those who USURPED Holy Royal CrownS, AROUND The WHOLE World,
in order to HIDE the TRUTH of the kept promises of God, found in Hebrew and Greek HOLY SCRIPTURE, and so lead the world to their Master's desire;
DEATH WORSHIP and the SECOND, PERMANENT DEATH.

But As God also PROMISED, the hidden things would be revealed in the end times of this age.
And so it is,
that with all the scientific and archaeological 'annomolies' being found, only the spiritually blind, willingly ignorant and KNOWING DECEIVERS, continue to hold to the "Out of Egypt" LIE, which as God also warned, are around 90% of the world's population.

The majority IS ALWAYS WRONG, and the majority, regardless of their faith or lack of, accept MIZRAIM of Holy Scripture, to be Egypt, and so, knowingly or not, SUPPORT THE VATICAN, with every repeat and defence of that RIDICULOUS, "Out of Egypt" LIE.

CRAIG-OXLEY - June 7, 2007 12:20 AM (GMT)

True-Lilly your writings give people the false impression these House of Orange rule. They do not and their subordinate to the Vatican as is Queen Elizabeth II. I agree Queen Beatrix is ignored more in favour of Queen Elizabeth II and others which is a mistake. She's totally subordinate to the Jesuit Order and their SMOM no different to Queen Elizabeth II who is actually far more powerful than Beatrix. Beatrix heads the Bilderberg Group created by Jesuit Joseph Retinger utilising his Prince Bernard, the father of Beatrix. Bilderberg Group is far from the most powerful secret Society, its subordinate to the Round Tables front controlled by the Red Brotherhood cliques such as Comm 300, Order of the Garter and Pilgrim Society all inner cores of the "Greatest Merchants on Earth," the Sovereign Military Order of Malta.

Title: Rome's Latinization of America

CRAIG-OXLEY - May 5, 2007 10:38 PM (GMT)

It has been Rome's intent to Latinize our southern border for over 100 years. Thwarted until the last thirty years, the Order, using both Mexican and American presidents, has first broken the Mexican economy thereby creating the necessity for millions of desperate Mexicans to move north for jobs. These people are regarded as the lower classes of Mexico and are thus expendible.

The presence of now 20 million alien invaders, backed by the Roman Catholic hierarchy and the Jesuit Order's Bank of America (also a member of the CFR), will serve to drive the American Whites (Catholic and Protestant and Fundamentalist alike) into right-wing Jesuit fascism. When this happens, these illegals will then be rounded up and thrown into the concentration camps to the delight of the general population. This is why I tell these poor people to get out of the US as soon as possible. They will be cannon fodder for the coming American fascist Reich.

We must also remember that Mexico has been the enemy of the Jesuit Order for many years. The great Benito Juarez expelled the Jesuits and the Archbishop of Mexico City during his glorious presidency. Of course, the Order poisoned him at his desk in 1872. Mexico could be rich, as it is full of oil and silver. With patriotic Mexican leaders, the people could be quite well off, with the Roman Hierarchy expelled, of course.

I trust this is helpful.

Sincerely in Faith,

Brother Eric

CRAIG-OXLEY - May 5, 2007 10:43 PM (GMT)

As it appears to be unfolding, I believe America must first be weakened with a two-front war while the concentration camps are in full swing---as was done to Germany. During this time, the I69 corridor from Mexico to Canada will be built facilitating the quick movement of future invading foreign troops. (Hitler's Autobon served the same purpose!) With the betrayal and defeat of American troops on foreign battlefields (as was done to the German Armies East) America will then be invaded by a combined Sino-Soviet-Moslem-Latin and European coalition dividing up the US and Canada as was done to Germany and Austria after WWII. It is my opinion that the European forces will overnight be made the enemies of the Chinese, Soviets and the Moslems---igniting another Cold War Hoax. This sets the stage for Papal Europe to be the enemy of the "kings of the east" and Gog of Magog to be accompanied by the surviving Moslem countries in its invasion of Israel in Ezekiel 38 during the 70th Week of Daniel. Thus, Roman Catholic New England, Roman Catholic Quebec and the Martimes including Nova Scotia may well be occupied by the Europeans with the rest of the continent going to the Chinese, Soviets, Moslems and Latinos---whose leaders are in Jesuit hands.

Sincerely in Faith,

Brother Eric

CRAIG-OXLEY - May 5, 2007 10:45 PM (GMT)

I'm wondering if they're wanting to "improve" I-5 , I-75 (southern Florida to Sault Ste. Marie MI/ONT), or I-95 as well, since these all go all the way across the country. Launch an attack from Cuba, go into Florida, and go up I-75 or I-95.

I do know that they're wanting to extend I-69. Currently it runs from Port Huron, MI (across the St. Clair River from Sarnia, ONT) to Indianapolis, and they're wanting to extend it into Texas.

Oh, and while I'm thinking of this--is there any truth to the urban legend that so many miles of interstate have to be straight, so they can be used as runways?

Sister Alexandra

Avles - May 6, 2007 09:53 AM (GMT)

Latinizing seems necessary for them. My father remember very well when he was 5 years old and was speaking in the Slovenian mathern language in bus during fascism. His mother promptly silenced him because if some zelant fascist could have heard him, serious problem for sure should be started.

Now the independent Slovenian is Latinized by the commercial spots and music. When they'll finish they'll start with Austria etc. and so one straight to the north. Meanwhile they kept the suspicion away, causing trouble near the border of Slovenia and Austria with the Habsburg's minion, Haider, who is a crusader of the fight against the linguistic presence of Slovenian in Austria. When Slovenian in Austria will be Germanized, when the Independent Slovenia will be Latinized and Germanized, the process will go further to the North and to the East. This is the reason for the strong presence of the Latino - American music everywhere. The English language which is international, more and more will be seen as the "language of the Jews and the criminal America", and substituted by Latin languages, the ones which belong to the "South American victim" of the USA.

The Highways Hitler build in Germany had also been used for the purpose of supporting war.

Moving tanks, troops and also landing and starting planes!

To this day some German highways are build as so called "Emergency landing strips".

On these pictures you can see what they did and that they already have been used in military exercises:

Alexandra - May 8, 2007 02:07 AM (GMT)

There's something else I was asking about...it's referred to as the "one mile in five," meaning one mile out of five of our freeways had to be straight and usable as a runway. Disinformation sites like Snopes.com consider it to be a myth...but now I'm not so sure it's a myth.

CRAIG-OXLEY - May 9, 2007 12:44 AM (GMT)

the US Interstate system was built firstly for the use of the military to deploy quickly. for every 10 miles of Interstate roadway, there must be a one-mile straightaway to serve as a landing strip. anyone can check that out for themselves. so the Interstate system is already set up for military usage.

the superhighway--which the NASCO Corridor website denies is a new highway--will be built by the spanish firm grupo ferrovial, which, in a news release, stated emphatically in ICON, an industry trade periodical, that it was building an additional highway adjacent to I-35.

a spanish corporation has also taken custodial function over Indiana's section of I-80, a toll road.

all Interstates will turn toll eventually, so the new superhighways are probably more for hemispheric transportation of goods and, perhaps, if needed troops. we, the little people, get to use the old system.

CRAIG-OXLEY - May 9, 2007 04:05 PM (GMT)

I recall my father telling me that the Trans-Canada Highway was built for the same purpose...military. Which, in hindsight is quite funny as the road is literally impassable in certain places, such as the Roger's Pass, Kicking Horse Pass and parts of Northern Ontario, where avalanches and snow drifts take days and sometimes weeks to clear. Roger's is particularly notorious, being closed at least 2-3 times a year in the winter.

The entire province of Saskatchewan and half of Manitoba as well as a huge chunk of Alberta is one massive straightaway, going for 50-60 miles at a stretch.

Regards, Chuck

In 1996 Grandma Detrich, had told me exactly how america was going down. She lived thru ww1&ww2 in Germany, she said Hitler employed the same tactic. Because as we no the satanic anti-christ pope and his bunch are behind all of it. Flooding our country with latino catholics. I have a freind who is from P.R. he works for western union, he said the president of mexico gets five dollars from every transaction, he is latino, but he understands the problem and is very angry, he knows it will bring down all hispanics when the trouble starts.

The American Hierarchy making "heretic and liberal" White America a Latin Roman Catholic country as intended since 1876 according to U.S. Secretary of the Navy Richard W. Thompson in his The Papacy and the Civil Power.

Time for some state to secede before it is too late.
