

the bottle will shatter!

A disaster in our lives caused by another person can initiate just such an imbalance and be destructive to us if not released in the proper manner. From this point of view we can see that the destruction of the offending person using the energy created by the anger at the offence is a good way of killing two birds with one stone (pardon the pun). It rids us of a person who is thoroughly deserving and also rids us of the pent-up frustration in a burst of ritualized fury.

White-lighters by their very own motto confirm their assailability. This leads to becoming unbalanced and losing the ability to be a good judge of character and motive. To be able to defend oneself or to take revenge should be a fundamental right for all. If you dent this, ask yourself one question - how would I feel if the person I hold dearest to myself were harmed maliciously by another person? Would the justice of a faceless legal system be enough to compensate our inner feelings of anger? I think not.

Examine yourself thoroughly and find your own balance. Don't let others dictate their thoughts into your head until you have considered them to your own satisfaction; keep your word; be a person of action; and above all, 'do unto others as they do unto you'. In these ways, slowly but surely, you will become unassailable and your authority will be recognized by all.

LIBER WOOF

Woof as thou wilt shall be the whole of the law.
There is no god but dog.

1. Dog has the right to live by his own law:

to fetch as he will

to bark as he will

to play as he will

to sniff as he will

2. Dog has the right to eat what he will:

to drink what he will

to sleep where he will

to roll as he will on the face of the earth.

3. Dog has the right to mess as he will:

to howl as he will

to whine as he will

to slobber as he will

4. Dog has the right to love as he will

(yea, even unto next door's pedigree poodle)

5. Dog has the right to bite those who would thwart these rights.

Woof is the law, Woof under will.

Mincing Machine

MANIA AND GNOSIS

by Litha

When directing their individual life pattern, magicians act only after considering all accessible geographies and histories. Thus, it is a matter for attention when psychonauts emerge from the Void with a thought not related to the initial impetus for their voyage that has become amplified and taken as some great truth or reality. This may continue in some cases, fed by the elixirs of emotional entanglement which are spawned by personality masks close to the OSC realm and supported by peers and society suffering similar conditions.

This crystallisation of a 'great truth' is only madness, and should be seen as such. The random selection of a reality is consistent with Chaos, but when it is allowed to hypertrophy in the hands of charismatic and eloquent personalities besotted by their own visions, entropy ensues and undermines the evolution of magickal work.

Chaos is consistent. The multiverse is in constant potentia. At this brief moment in human history, we have reached reconciliations between science and magick which have allowed us to form new metaphors with far-reaching implications for our collective life stream. In increasing leaps and bounds, we are able to 'earth' this new knowledge. Experience with altered states of consciousness has proved that journeying into other states of reality, and ultimately the Void, alters cerebral and general biochemistry to accommodate the psychonaut.

Now we are tuning up our primitive nervous system to let us to make us of the grey matter that has been idle in our craniums like dead wood for 3,000 years. Let us not squander our efforts on bouts of mania that propel our energies after daemons that have been allowed to enter the circle by a back door.

Mania is a birth pang of a new magical technology that has arisen at a time when we are still not fully equipped to assimilate new experiences in an intelligent fashion. Our civilization still fails to provide us with the correct emotional and intellectual apparatus. As environment defines species, we are at least partly affected by the prevailing currents in which we breathe; but knowledge is power, and hopefully, being forearmed is to be fore-warned.

Not all inherited esoteric waffle is useless. Keep the daemons in the Triangle where they belong.