Clerk of the southern district of New-York.

RECOMMENDATION.

WE, whose names are hereunto subscribed, do certify, that we have perused, with much satisfaction, a work entitled "The New Freemason's Monitor; or, Masonic Guide. For the direction of members of that ancient and honourable fraternity, as well as for the information of those, who may be desirous of becoming acquainted with its principles. By James Hardie, A. M.;" and consider it as a very valuable publication.

We, therefore, earnestly beg leave to recommend it to the attention of our brethren, and sincerely wish, that our brother, the author, may receive a suitable reward for his labour and assiduity.

PREFACE.

THAT free-masonry has greatly tended to enlighten the minds, as well as to improve the morals of those, who have arranged themselves under its banners, is a fact, which the most intelligent part of the community will not be disposed to contradict ; and were its principles more generally known, the objections against the meetings of free-masons in secret, would be removed from the breast of every unprejudiced person.

The Great First Cause ought to be the first object of our adoration ; and the rules of our order enjoin, that we should perform acts of humanity, beneficence, and compassion to all men, as far as may be in our power ; particularly to those, who may be connected with us in the mystic tie. To extend our good offices to every human being, when in distress, we consider as our bounden duty ; but it would be unjust to accuse us of illiberality, if we should be more attentive to the wants of a brother or of his family than to those of others. Here the duties of an upright mason are circumscribed by similar boundaries, as those assigned to the pious Christian ; “ As we have opportunity, let us do good unto all men, especially unto those, who are of the household of faith.” Galatians vi. 10.

To this society, as will be seen in the following pages, emperors, kings, princes, lords, bishops, &c. have deemed, and still do deem it, an honour to belong ; and the immortal Washington, the illustrious Franklin, the brave general Warren, the patriotic Adams, formerly governor of Massachusetts, together with a great proportion of our most eminent revolutionary characters were amongst its votaries ; and it may be added, without fear of contradiction, that many of our citizens, who now sustain the most distinguished stations in the army and navy, in church and state, are proud of having their names enrolled in the list of free-masons.

In this institution, party spirit is unknown. The Prince Regent of England, the Kings of Prussia and Sweden, the Emperor of Austria, His Excellency Daniel D. Tompkins, Vice President of the United States, His Excellency De Witt Clinton, Governor of the state of New-York, &c. &c. as well as the lowest peasant or labourer in the universe, provided he be a mason, may unite together as a band of brothers. Here that asperity, which is so common amongst men who meet together, entertaining different sentiments with respect to politics or religion, is abandoned ; and harmony, love and benevolence are enforced by such emblems, that these virtues cannot easily be eradicated from the human mind.

Masonry excludes all distinction of rank as well as of religion. It considers them as being naturally on a level ; and within the walls of a lodge, no one should be admitted, unless he have made himself conspicuous by the rectitude of his conduct, and his improvement in those arts and sciences, which tend to refine our morals, and render us more worthy and upright members of society.

Actuated by this divine principle, the Roman Catholic, the Episcopalian, the Presbyterian, the Methodist, the Baptist, the Universalist, the Hebrew, the Gentoo, the Indian, &c.

may here sit together in harmony and peace. Such an institution requires only to be better known to be more respected.

Upon the subject of masonry, many books have been written ; but most of those, which I have perused, have appeared to me to be greatly deficient in that kind of information, which was most important to be communicated. In this science, art, or mystery, it is well known, that there are secrets, which will never be divulged to the world at large ; but the history of masonry, its general regulations, the benevolent views by which masons are actuated, the constitution and government of lodges, may be communicated with propriety ; nor is there any obligation of secrecy, with respect to our hymns, anthems and songs, which delight the ears of the fraternity, at almost every meeting.

I trust that my brethren will receive this Masonic Guide or Free-mason's Monitor, with their accustomed goodness and candour ; as it is truly intended to promote the real good and benefit of our most excellent society, to make its admirable principles and worthy practices more generally known, &c. and, if possible, to silence the sneering critic, and satisfy the unprejudiced stranger, that a good mason and an honest man are synonymous terms.

I may further observe, that notwithstanding all the difficulties and discouragements, all the reproach and obloquy, all the scandal and defamation, which the fraternity has, without mercy, been loaded with, they still not only keep their ground, but every where increase to an incredible degree. Our actions, though reproached, are yet blameless.

Great pains have been taken to render this publication more interesting than any of the kind, which have yet preceded it ; and as it is the honour of human nature, to be the friend of the unfortunate, I am fully persuaded, that from the well known liberality of my worthy brethren, I shall receive a reasonable compensation for my labour.

MONITOR.

CHAPTER I.

Of the Origin and History of Free-Masonry.

THE origin of this fraternity is very ancient ; but we have no authentic account of the time when it was first instituted, or even of the reason of such an association under the title of masons, more than that of any other mechanical profession. In a work entitled "Illustrations of Masonry," published in the year 1792, by William Preston, Esq. master of the Lodge of Antiquity, in London, the origin of masonry is traced from the creation. "Ever," says he, "since symmetry began, and harmony displayed her charms, our order has had a being." By other accounts, the antiquity of masonry is carried up no farther than the building of Solomon's temple. In Dr. Henry's History of Great Britain, we find the origin of the Free-Mason's society attributed to the difficulty found in former times, of procuring workmen to build the vast number of churches, monasteries, and other edifices, which the religious opinions entertained in those ages, prompted the people to raise.

Hence the masons were greatly favoured by the popes, who granted them many indulgences, with a view to augment their numbers. In those times, it may be well supposed, that such encouragement from the supreme pastors of the church must have been productive of the most beneficial effects to the fraternity, and in consequence of such patronage, the society rapidly increased.

An ancient author, who was well acquainted with their history and constitution says, that "the Italians, with some Greeks, and with them French, Germans, and Flemings, joined into a fraternity of architects, procuring papal bulls for their encouragement. They styled themselves Free-masons, and travelled from one country to another, wherever they found it was wanted, that churches should be built. Their government was regular, and they fixed themselves near the edifice, on which they were employed, in a camp of huts. A surveyor governed in chief, and every tenth man was called a warden, and superintended the other nine."

Preston supposes, that the introduction of masonry into England was prior to the Roman invasion, and says, that there are remains yet existing of some stupendous works executed by the Britons, at a much earlier period than the time of the Romans, and that even these display no small share of ingenuity and invention; so that we can have no doubt of the existence of masonry in Britain, even in those early periods. The Druids are likewise said to have had many ceremonies amongst themselves, similar to those of the masons, which they most probably received from Pythagoras or his disciples.*

Masonry is said to have been encouraged by Cæsar the Roman emperor, and by many of his generals, who were appointed governors of Britain; but whatever may have been recorded concerning their lodges and conventions is now lost. The civil wars, which, for a long time prevailed in that country, greatly obstructed the progress of masonry, and it did not revive till the time of Carausius. This general collected the best artificers he could bring over from different countries, particularly masons, whom he held in veneration, and appointed St. Alban his steward, as superintendent of their assemblies. Lodges were now regularly held, and the masons obtained a charter from Carausius to hold a general council, at which Albanus himself presided. This Albanus was the celebrated St. Alban, who suffered martyrdom for the Christian faith, A. D. 303.

* Pythagoras died in the year 497, before Christ. He obtained his knowledge of masonry by travelling into Egypt, and other countries, where the art had been known long before his time. See ANTIQUITIES,

The progress of masonry was greatly impeded by the departure of the Romans from Britain, and soon fell into neglect. This was occasioned first by the furious irruptions of the Picts, and afterwards by the ignorance of the Saxons, whom the Britons called in as allies, but who soon became their masters.

The art continued in this situation till the year A. D. 557, when St. Austin with 40 monks, among whom the sciences had still been preserved, came to England. By them, christianity was propagated, masonry patronised, and the gothic style of building introduced.

St. Austin appeared at the head of the fraternity in founding the old cathedral of Canterbury, A.D. 600; that of St. Paul in London 604, and of many others, by which the number of masons was greatly increased.

During the heptarchy, however, or that period when England was divided into seven kingdoms, masonry was in a low state; but it acquired great splendour in the year 872, when it found a zealous protector in Alfred the Great, who was the liberal patron of all arts, sciences, and manufactures. He appropriated a seventh part of his revenue to the maintenance of a number of masons, whom he employed in rebuilding the cities, castles, &c. ruined by the Danes. The complete re-establishment of masonry in England, however, is dated from the reign of King Athelstane, who in 926 granted a charter to the grand lodge of York, of which prince Edwin, the king's brother, was the first grand master. By virtue of this charter, all the masons in the kingdom were convened at a general assembly in that city, where they established their constitution. Hence the appellation of Ancient York Masons, an expression well known in every part of the British dominions, as well as in the United States of America, and in most parts of the civilized world.

During the reign of Henry II. the lodges were superintended by the grand master of the Knights Templars, who employed them in building their Temple, in 1155. Masonry continued under this order till the year 1199, when Peter de Colechurch was appointed grand master. On the accession of Edward I. in 1272, the superintendence of the masons was entrusted to Walter Gifford, archbishop of York. They afterwards wrought under the bishop of Exeter, who had been elected grand master in 1307. Edward the III. who began his reign in 1327, and died in 1377, not only patronised masons, but studied the constitution of the order, revised the different charges, and added several useful regulations to the ancient code. He appointed five deputies to inspect the proceedings of the lodges, which, as appears from old records, were, at that time, very numerous. On the accession of Henry V. to the throne, the fraternity were governed by Henry Chichely, archbishop of Canterbury, under whom the meetings were frequent.

In the year 1425, however, during the minority of Henry VI. an act was passed for suppressing the meetings of masons, because it was alledged, that by such meetings "the good course and effect of the statute of labourers, were openly violated and broken, in subversion of the law, to the great damage of all the commons." But the act was not enforced, and the fraternity continued to meet as usual, under archbishop Chichely, their grand master.

This extraordinary act had originated chiefly from the jealousy and ambition of Beaufort, bishop of Winchester, uncle to the duke of Bedford, who was then prince regent, and who wished to abolish the meetings of the fraternity, on account of the secrecy, which was therein observed. Dr. Anderson, in his book of constitutions, says, that "this act was made in ignorant times, when true learning was a crime, and geometry condemned for conjuration." He adds "that the parliament were influenced by the illiterate clergy, who were not accepted masons, nor understood architecture (as the clergy of former ages), and were generally thought unworthy of this brotherhood. Thinking they had an indefeasible right to know all secrets, by virtue of auricular confession, and the masons never confessing any thing on the subject, they were highly offended, and represented them as dangerous to the state." But Humphreys, duke of Gloucester, brother to the regent, and guardian of the kingdom, in his absence, knowing the innocence of the party accused, took the masons under his direction, and transferred the charge of sedition from them to the bishop and his followers. The death of the prelate, however, having happened in two months thereafter, put a stop to all those proceedings which had been intended against him; and the masons not only continued to meet in safety, but were joined by the king himself, who, in the year 1442, was initiated into the order, and from that time, spared no pains to become master of the art. He perused the ancient charges, revised the constitutions, and honoured them with his sanction. The royal example was followed by many of the nobility, who assiduously studied the art.

About this time also, the masons were protected and encouraged by king James I. of Scotland, who, after his return from captivity, became a zealous patron of learning, and of the fine arts. He honoured the lodges with his presence, and settled a certain income upon the grand master, who had his deputies in cities and counties.

But the flourishing state of masonry in England, was interrupted by the civil wars between the houses of York and Lancaster. About 1471, it revived under Beauchamp, bishop of Sarum, who had been appointed grand master, and to him was committed the charge of causing the castle and chapel at Windsor to be repaired. In the year 1485, it was patronised by the master and knights of the order of St. John, at Rhodes, who have since been called knights of Malta. These assembled their grand lodge in the year 1500, and chose king Henry VII. for their protector. On the 24th June 1502, a lodge of masters was held in the palace, at which the king presided as grand master, and having appointed his wardens for the occasion, proceeded in great state to the east end of Westminster Abbey, where he laid the first stone of that splendid piece of gothic architecture called Henry VII's Chapel. Many other noble structures were finished in this reign. On the accession of king Henry VIII. Cardinal Woolsey was appointed grand master. He built Hampton Court, Whitehall, Christ-Church College, Oxford, with several other noble edifices, all of which, upon the disgrace of that prelate, were forfeited to the crown. From this period different grand masters were chosen in succession, who were as eminent for rank, talents and virtue as any in the kingdom.

Upon the accession of queen Elizabeth, Sir Thomas Sackville was grand master, and the grand lodge had assembled at York, where the body was numerous and respectable. But her majesty having learnt, that the masons were in possession of secrets, which they refused to communicate, and being naturally jealous of all private assemblies, sent an armed force to break up the grand lodge. This, however, was prevented by Sir Thomas Sackville, who initiated some of the chief officers sent on this duty in the masonic art, and they, after being thus enlightened, made so favourable a report to the queen, that she countermanded her orders and never afterwards attempted to disturb the meetings.

In 1567, Sir Thomas Sackville resigned in favour of the earl of Bedford, and the celebrated Sir Thomas Gresham, to the former of whom the care of the Northern part of the kingdom was consigned, and that of the Southern part to the latter. Sir Thomas, during his grand mastership, built the Royal Exchange, and Gresham College. From this time masonry made considerable progress and at the commencement of the reign of James I. of England, lodges were held in both kingdoms. About this time a number of gentlemen returned from their travels with curious drawings of the architecture of ancient Greece and Rome, who were likewise desirous to revive the knowledge of that valuable art. Among these, was the celebrated Inigo Jones, who was appointed general surveyor to the king, and soon after made grand master of England. Several learned men were now initiated in the mysteries of masonry, and the fraternity increased in reputation and consequence. Ingenious artists resorted to England in great numbers; lodges were constituted as seminaries of instruction in the sciences and polite arts after the model of the Italian schools; the communications of the fraternity were regular, and the annual festivals duly observed. Under the direction of this accomplished architect, many of the most magnificent edifices, which now decorate the capital of the British empire were completed. Inigo Jones continued grand master till 1618, when he was succeeded by the earl of Pembroke. Several others of the nobility succeeded him; but Inigo Jones having uniformly continued to patronise the lodges, was re-elected in 1636, and continued in office till his death, in 1651.

The progress of masonry in Great Britain, was, for some time obstructed by the civil wars. It began, however, to revive under Charles II. who had been admitted into the order, during his exile. On the 27th December, 1663, a general assembly was held, when the earl of St. Albans was elected grand master, who appointed the celebrated Sir Christopher Wren and John Webb, Esq. his wardens. At this assembly, several useful regulations were made for the better government of the lodges, and the greatest harmony prevailed amongst the fraternity in every part of the British isles. In 1666, Sir Christopher Wren was made deputy grand master, in which station he distinguished himself more than any of his predecessors, in promoting the prosperity of the lodges, particularly that of St. Paul, now called the Lodge of Antiquity.

The great fire, which in 1666, destroyed a great part of London, afforded ample opportunity for the masons to exert their abilities. After a calamity so sudden and extensive, it became necessary to adopt, if possible, such regulations, as might prevent so dreadful a catastrophe in future. It was accordingly determined, that in all the new buildings to be erected, stone should be used instead of wood. Sir Christopher Wren was appointed surveyor general, and principal architect for rebuilding the city, St. Paul's cathedral, and all the parochial churches,* directed to be raised by parliament in lieu of those destroyed, as well as the other public structures. A plan was prepared for widening the streets, but owing to the objections of a great majority of the owners of property, it was not adopted so fully as could have been wished. Thus an opportunity was lost of making the new part of the city the most magnificent, as well as the most convenient for health and commerce, of any in the world. Hence the architect being cramped in the execution of his plans, was obliged to alter and abridge it, and to mould the city after the manner in which it has since appeared.

* At this fire 86 churches, amongst which was St. Paul's cathedral, many public buildings, and the houses on 400 streets were destroyed. The ruins extended to no less than 436 acres. It broke out near the place where the monument is now erected, and continued for four days and nights, when it ceased almost instantaneously.

In 1675, the foundation stone of the cathedral of St. Paul was laid with great solemnity, by king James II. and the mallet, which he used on this occasion, is still preserved in the lodge of antiquity, as a great curiosity. This edifice, which next to St. Peter's at Rome, is by far, the most splendid church in any part of the world, was finished in the year 1710, and the whole was completed under the superintendence of this most eminent architect.

In 1685, Sir Christopher was appointed grand master; but his great age and infirmities drew off his attention from the duties of his office, the annual festivals were neglected, and the number of masons began to diminish. On the accession of king George I. in the year 1714, the art began to rise in more than usual splendour, and an annual meeting was held on the 24th June of the same year, when Mr. Anthony Sayer was elected grand master, at which time there were only four lodges in London.

Before this period, a sufficient number of masons being assembled together within a certain district, had ample power to initiate members, without a warrant of constitution; but it was now determined, that the privilege of assembling as masons should not be authorised without a warrant from the grand master, with the consent and approbation of the grand lodge, and that without such warrant, no lodge should be hereafter deemed to be constitutional. To this, the following was annexed, binding the grand master for the time being, his successors, and the master of every lodge, to be hereafter constituted, to preserve the same inviolably, viz. that every regular grand lodge has an inherent power and authority to make new regulations, or to alter them for the real benefit of this ancient fraternity, provided always, that the old land marks be carefully preserved; and that such alterations and new regulations be proposed at, and agreed to, at the third quarterly communication, preceding the annual grand feast; and that they be offered also to the perusal of all the brethren before dinner, in writing, the approbation and consent of the majority of all present, being absolutely necessary to make the same binding, and obligatory."

To communicate this circumstance, it has been customary, ever since that time, for the master of the oldest lodge to attend every grand installation, and taking precedence of all present, the grand master only excepted, to deliver the book of the original constitutions to the new installed grand master. By this precaution, the original institutions were established on the firmest basis, and the ancient land marks, as they are emphatically called, set up as checks against the possibility of innovation.

Another assembly and feast were held on the 24th of June, 1719, when Dr. Desaguliers was unanimously elected grand master. A number of new lodges were now established.

the old ones visited by many masons, who had long neglected the craft, and several noblemen were initiated into the mysteries. In 1720, the fraternity sustained an irreparable loss, by the burning of several valuable manuscripts concerning the lodges, constitutions, charges, &c. particularly one written by Mr. Nicholas Stone, the warden under Inigo Jones. This was done by some too scrupulous brethren, who were alarmed at the publication of the masonic constitutions, lest the secrets of the craft should thereby become known.

In the mean time, masonry continued to spread in the North as well as in the South of England. The general assembly or grand lodge continued to meet as usual, and many persons of the first respectability were initiated into the art. Harmony subsisted between the two grand lodges, and private lodges were formed in both parts of the kingdom; under their separate jurisdictions. The only distinction which the grand lodge appears to have retained, is in the title of "the Grand Lodge of all England," while the other was only called "the Grand Lodge of England." Some difference has of late taken place between these two bodies, which is said to have arisen in consequence of some innovations having been introduced by the former; but it is the glory and boast of the brethren in almost every country, where masonry is established, to be accounted descendants of the Ancient York Masons; and from the well known fact, that masonry was first established at York by charter, the masons in England have received tribute from the first states in Europe.

From the nature of the institution, regular masons must in every age, have maintained a fraternal affection for each other; hence, when any of them was oppressed by poverty, or involved in other difficulties, relief was afforded by the benevolent contributions of his brethren; but in the year 1723, the duke of Buccleugh, who was then grand master, proposed a scheme for raising a general fund for distressed masons and their families, which was readily adopted, and a committee appointed to devise the most effectual mode of carrying it into effect. From that period, the means of relief instead of depending as heretofore on the precarious contributions of members of individual lodges, is placed on a much better footing, every grand lodge being vested with funds, which they can appropriate at discretion, to the relief of the indigent. Thus the distressed brethren, their widows, and orphans, have, since that period, always found prompt relief from this general charity, which is supported by the private funds of subordinate lodges, without being burthensome to any member of the society. The same mode has been adopted by the grand lodges of Scotland and Ireland; by those established in each of the United States of America, as well as in the different provinces belonging to Britain, and I have been informed, that a similar mode had been pursued in the grand lodges of France, Germany, &c. long before that period. Hence it will appear, that there are few parts of the civilized world, in which a needy brother may be cast, wherein he may not receive the necessary relief.

In the year 1731, Francis, duke of Tuscany, afterwards emperor of Germany, was initiated into the order, in a lodge at the Hague; and in 1738, Frederick the Great, afterwards king of Prussia, was admitted in a lodge at Brunswick. So highly did he approve of the institution, that on his accession to the throne, he caused a grand lodge to be formed at Berlin, in which it was agreed, that every sum received should be divided into three parts, viz. one to defray the expenses of the lodge, one for the relief of distressed brethren, and the third to be allotted to the poor in general.

In the beginning of the year 1768, two letters were received from the grand lodge of France, expressive of their desire to open a regular correspondence with the grand lodge of England. This proposition was cheerfully agreed to, and the book of constitutions, a list of the subordinate lodges, &c. elegantly bound, were sent to them as a testimony of respect and esteem.

On the 25th of April, 1770, a letter was received from the grand master of the United Provinces of Holland and their dependencies; requesting that a firm and friendly alliance might be established between the two grand lodges, an annual correspondence carried on, &c. On this, report being made, the proposition of the grand lodge of Holland was acceded to without hesitation. A correspondence was, likewise, agreed on between the grand lodge of England and that of Berlin, in the year 1774, agreeably to the solicitation of the grand master of the latter, the prince of Hesse Darmstadt.

The grand lodges of England, Scotland and Ireland had, for centuries, entertained a friendly intercourse with each other, and likewise with the grand lodges on the continent of Europe; but in the year 1772, the ties of union were more closely drawn between the grand lodges in the three kingdoms, under the British Crown. We accordingly find, that: "At a meeting of the most ancient and honourable fraternity of Free and Accepted Masons, held in London, September 2nd 1772, Lawrence Dermott, Esq. deputy grand master, in the chair, a letter was received from the grand lodge in Ireland, setting forth the state of the craft, &c. in that kingdom. Whereupon

Resolved, as the opinion of this grand lodge, that a brotherly connexion and correspondence with the right worshipful the grand lodge of Ireland has been, and will always be found productive of honour and advantage to the craft in both kingdoms. Therefore,

Ordered, that the grand secretary shall transmit the names of the officers of this grand lodge to the secretary of the grand lodge of Ireland, yearly, or as often as any new choice may be made, together with such information as may be conducive to the honour and interest of the ancient craft.

“Ordered, that no mason, who has been made under the sanction of the grand lodge of Ireland, shall be admitted a member, or partake of the general charity, without having first produced a certificate of his good behaviour from the secretary of the grand lodge of Ireland; but upon producing such certificate, he shall receive all the honours due to a faithful brother of the same household with ourselves.”

The deputy grand master then proposed that a correspondence should be opened with the grand lodge of Scotland, when it was unanimously agreed, that the same regulations should be observed in respect to the grand lodge of Scotland as to that of Ireland.

At a meeting of the grand lodge of the most ancient and honourable fraternity of Free and Accepted Masons, held in Dublin, November 5th, 1772, Archibald Richardson, Esq. deputy grand master, in the chair.

“Resolved, that this lodge do entirely agree with the grand lodge of England, that a brotherly connexion and correspondence between the grand lodges have been, and always will be found productive of honour and advantage to the craft in both kingdoms, Whereupon

“Ordered, that the grand secretary shall, from time to time, transmit the particular occurrences of this grand lodge, to the grand secretary of England, and that hereafter, no English mason shall be considered worthy of the regard of this body without producing a certificate from the grand lodge of England, and that we shall always consider such brethren as may be recommended to us from the grand lodge of England, equally objects of our attention as those of the fraternity in Ireland; nor can the grand lodge of Ireland omit this opportunity of testifying their high sense of the honour they have received in this invitation to a mutual and a friendly intercourse, which they shall study to preserve and strengthen by every act of good offices and brotherly love.”

At a meeting of the most ancient and honourable society of Free and Accepted Masons in Scotland, held in the city of Edinburgh, November 30th, 1772. The right honourable and most worshipful the earl of Dalhousie, late grand master, in the chair.

It was reported to the brethren, that the grand lodge of England, according to the old institutions, had, on the 2nd September last, past a resolution and order, relative to a constant correspondence betwixt them and the grand lodge of Scotland, a copy of which had been lately transmitted by their secretary, along with a letter, containing the names of their officers.

The resolution and letter being read, the grand lodge were of opinion, that the brotherly intercourse and correspondence, which the right worshipful the grand lodge of England, were desirous of establishing, would be serviceable to both grand lodges, and productive of honour and advantage to the fraternity in general, and, to promote this beneficial purpose,

Ordered, that the grand secretary transmit to the secretary of the grand lodge of England, the names of the officers of the grand lodge of Scotland, elected this day, and also, that he shall transmit such information as may tend to the honour and advantage of the craft, as he shall be by them directed, &c. ; and that he assure the right worshipful the grand lodge of England, in the most respectful manner, of the desire the grand lodge of Scotland have, to cultivate a connexion with them by a regular correspondence for the interest of the ancient craft, suitable to the honour and dignity of both grand lodges.

Ordered, that no mason made under the sanction of the grand lodge of England, according to the old institution, shall be admitted a member of the grand lodge of Scotland, nor partake of the general charity, without having first produced a certificate of his good behaviour from the secretary of the grand lodge of England, and that upon producing such certificate, he shall receive all the honours, bounty, &c. due to a faithful brother of the same household with ourselves."*

In the year 1779, a remarkable event took place in the affairs of masonry. This was the initiation of Omdit-ul Omrah Bahauder, eldest son of the nabob of the Carnatic, in the lodge of Trinchinopoly. The news being officially transmitted to England, the grand lodge sent a congratulatory letter to his highness, accompanied with an apron elegantly decorated, and a copy of the book of constitutions superbly bound. In the beginning of 1780, an answer was received from his highness acknowledging the receipt of the present, and expressive of

* The grand lodges in the United States, as will be shewn hereafter, not only correspond with each other; but with the grand lodges in Europe, particularly with those of England, Scotland, and Ireland. They likewise, in regard to foreign brethren, adopted similar regulations with those, which have been here mentioned. But these regulations are by no means strictly enforced neither here, nor, as I believe, in any country, where free-masonry exists. It possesses a spirit of charity, candour, and liberality, which may perhaps be equalled, but not surpassed in any other institution. A travelling brother, therefore, who can give a good account of himself, when in distress, may without such a certificate, obtain pecuniary or such other aid, as may be necessary for himself and family; and if he tarry in the place, and be desirous of joining a lodge, provided upon due examination, he be found to be a worthy brother, he may be admitted to membership, and a participation of all the privileges of the fraternity. From what I have personally known, as well as from what I have learnt from intelligent brothers, I have reason to believe, that this is universally the case in all ancient lodges throughout the world.

the warmest attachment to his brethren in England. His letter was written in the Persian language, and delivered in an elegant cover of gold cloth. A proper reply was made, and a translation of his highness's letter* copied on

* As this letter is replete with good sense, and warm benevolence. I shall here insert the translation, for the gratification of our brethren.

“ To the Right Worshipful, his Grace the Duke of Manchester, Grand Master of the Illustrious and Benevolent Society of Free and Accepted Masons under the Constitution of England, and the Grand Lodge thereof.

“ Most Honoured Sir and Brethren,

“ An early knowledge and participation of the benefits arising to our house, from its intimate union of councils, and interests with the British nation, and a deep veneration for the laws, constitution, and manners of the latter, have, for many years, led me to seize every opportunity of drawing the ties between us still closer and closer.

“ By the accounts, which have reached me of the principles, and practices of your fraternity, nothing can be more pleasing to the sovereign ruler of the universe, whom we all, though, in different ways, adore, or more honourable to his creatures; for they stand upon the broad basis of indiscriminate and universal benevolence.

“ Under this conviction, I had long wished to be a member of your fraternity, and now that I am initiated, I consider the title of an English mason, as one of the most honourable, which I possess; for it is, at once, a cement of the friendship between your nation and me, the friend of mankind.

“ I have received from the advocate general of Bengal, Sir John Day, the very acceptable mark of attention and esteem, with which you have favoured me. It has been presented with every circumstance of deference and respect, which the situation of things here, and the temper of the times would admit of; and I do assure your grace, vellum, and with the original elegantly framed and glazed, and hung up in the hall, at all public meetings of the society. Since that period, masonry has made a very rapid progress in the East Indies.

In the same year, the grand lodge of Germany applied for liberty to send a representative to the grand lodge of England, in order more effectually to cement the union of the brethren of both countries, which request was readily granted, and it was farther resolved that brother Leonahrdi the German representative, should wear the cloathing of a grand officer.

The late Dr. John Brown attempted to render the social institution of masonry subservient, in a peculiar manner to the cause of literature, by instituting a Latin Lodge at Edinburgh, in 1784, entitled The Roman Eagle, which he carried on with eclat for some time.

and the brethren, at large, that he has done ample justice to the commission you have confided to him, and that he has executed it, in such a manner, as to do honour to himself and to me.

“ I shall avail myself of a proper opportunity, to convince your grace and the rest of the brethren, that Omdit-ul Omrah is not an unfeeling brother, or heedless of the precepts, which he has imbibed ; and that while he testifies his love and esteem for his brethren, by strengthening the bonds of humanity, he means to minister to the wants of the distressed.

“ May the common father of all, the one omnipotent and merciful God take you into his holy keeping, and give you health, peace, and length of years, prays your highly honoured and affectionate brother,

OMDIT-UL OMRAH BAHAUDER.

It continued to flourish for several years after he went to London; but the government of the lodge having fallen into the hands of brethren not so well skilled in the latin language, the latin has been disused, and the advantages which might have arisen from it to students, have been lost.

On the 9th March, 1786, his royal highness, prince William Henry, was initiated into the secrets of masonry, and his brother the prince of Wales, followed his example 6th February, 1787, and on the 21st November, the duke of York, likewise, became a member of the fraternity. In February, 1790, prince Edward, now duke of Kent, was initiated in the union lodge, at Geneva, and the prince Augustus Frederick, was made a mason at Berlin. On the 24th of November, of the same year, his royal highness the prince of Wales was elected to the important office of grand master, (which office was vacant by the death of his uncle, the duke of Cumberland), and appointed lord Rawdon, now the earl of Moira, his deputy.

Indisposition had prevented the prince of Wales from attending at the meeting, when he ought to have been installed; his deputy, however, supplied his place. But at the next grand festival in the year 1792, he was inducted into his office with the usual solemnities. "His highness," says Preston, "performed the duties of his office in a style superior to most of his predecessors; his expression was fluent, manly, and pertinent ; and his eulogium on his deceased uncle, the duke of Cumberland, last grand master, pathetic, graceful, and eloquent."

In the year 1793, the late king of Sweden was initiated into the order, in the grand lodge of Stockholm, under the auspices of the duke of Sudermania, who presided as grand master on the occasion.

At the grand lodge held 10th April, 1799, a letter was presented by the Swedish minister, the baron de Silverhjelm from the grand lodge of Sweden, expressing a desire to form an intimate, sincere and permanent tie between the national grand lodge of Sweden, and that of England, &c.

The letter being read, it was resolved unanimously, that the grand master be requested to return an answer on the part of the society, to the duke of Sudermania grand master of Sweden, expressive of every sentiment correspondent to the warm and brotherly address received.

At the next grand lodge, 8th May 1799, the earl of Moira being in the chair, reported, that his royal highness the grand master had, on the part of the body, returned an answer to the duke of Sudermania, of which I shall only transcribe a part.

"It was with the truest satisfaction, most worshipful and most enlightened brother, that I received the letter, in which you express your desire to see an intimate connexion established between the worthy and regular masons of Sweden, and those of England. The high opinion, that I have of your character, and the fraternal esteem, which is the consequence of it, add greatly to the pleasure, I feel on your being on this occasion the voice of your brethren. A reciprocal sentiment has long disposed these two brave nations to admire each other; but this admiration, however generous, is barren. It is, therefore, to be wished, that it should be improved by a close relation between the members of a craft, the existence of which, in each of the countries, is founded on beneficence to mankind."

Having thus traced the progress of masonry in Europe, from its early dawn to the present period, I proceed to give some account of its introduction into the British provinces, on this side of the Atlantic, now denominated the United States of America.

CHAPTER II.

Of the Commencement and History of Masonry in America.

FREE-MASONRY although of a date more ancient than can be easily traced, was not established in America till the year A.L. 5733, when in consequence of several brethren residing in New England, who were free and accepted masons, having presented a petition to the right honourable lord Montague, grand master in England, dated 30th April, 1733, he was pleased to appoint the right worshipful Henry Price, grand master of New England.

Upon the receipt of this commission, the brethren assembled and constituted themselves into a grand lodge, in Boston, to which they gave the appellation of "St. John's Grand Lodge,"* and the right worshipful Andrew Belcher was installed as deputy grand master.

A petition was then presented by several brethren in Boston, praying to be constituted into a regular lodge. Whereupon, resolved, that the prayer of the said petition be granted, † and this may be considered as the foundation of masonry in North America.

The anniversary of St. John the Baptist was celebrated June 24th, 1734, when a petition being presented from Benjamin Franklin and several other brethren residing in Philadelphia, for a constitution to hold a lodge there, the grand master having in this year received orders from the grand lodge of England, to establish masonry in all parts of North America, granted the prayer of the petitioners, and appointed the worshipful Benjamin Franklin* their first master. At the same time, a warrant was granted to a number of brethren for holding a lodge at Portsmouth, New Hampshire.

In the year 5738, the right worshipful the grand master, went to England by the way of Antigua, where finding some old Boston masons, he formed them into a lodge, giving them a charter of incorporation, and initiated the governor and several gentlemen of distinction into the society. This was the origin of masonry in the West Indies.

It would be very little interesting to my readers, were I to transcribe the application of sundry brethren for charters in different places. I shall, therefore, deem it sufficient to say, that from this grand lodge originated the first lodges in Massachusetts, Rhode Island, New Hampshire, Pennsylvania, Connecticut, New Jersey, New-York, North Carolina, Maryland, Canada, Nova Scotia, Newfoundland, the West Indies, Surinam, and very probably some other places, which have not been transmitted on record.

A number of brethren, who had travelled, and been initiated into the mystery of the craft in ancient lodges abroad, became emulous to cultivate the art in this western world.

* This celebrated statesman and philosopher, whose services were so pre-eminent in affecting the liberty of his country, and whose writings were no less celebrated throughout Europe than in America, died in Philadelphia, 5790, Æt. 84.

For this laudable purpose they petitioned the grand lodge of Scotland for a charter, and received a dispensation dated November 30th, 1752, from Sholto Charles Douglas, lord Aberdour, then grand master, constituting them a regular lodge, under the title of "St. Andrew's, No. 82, to be holden at Boston, in the province of Massachussetts."

The establishment of this lodge was discouraged by St. John's Grand Lodge, who imagined that their jurisdiction was infringed by the grand lodge of Scotland. They, therefore, refused any communications or visits from such members of St. Andrew's lodge, as had not formerly sat in their lodges; and this difficulty did not entirely subside for several years.

The prosperous state of St. Andrew's lodge soon led to exertions for the establishment of an ancient grand lodge in the province, and this was effected by three travelling lodges,* which were holden in the British army, then stationed in Boston. They petitioned the most worshipful, the earl of Dalhousie, and from him received a commission, bearing date 30th May, 5769, appointing Joseph Warren, to be grand master of masons in Boston, New England, and within one hundred miles of the same. In consequence of this charter, on the ensuing festival of St. John the Baptist, 5760, the brethren proceeded to instal the right worshipful grand master Warren, who afterwards appointed and invested the other grand officers. In 5772, the right worshipful Joseph Warren received a commission constituting him grand master of the continent of America, between which period and the year 5791, this grand lodge granted warrants for the establishment of lodges in Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Connecticut, Vermont and New-York.

* In the American army, there appears to have been at least one lodge of this description, as we find that in the year A. L. 1779, on the petition of a number of brethren, officers in the American army, praying that the grand lodge would grant them a charter, to hold a travelling lodge, it was resolved, that a dispensation be granted them under the title of "Washington Lodge," to make masons, pass fellow crafts, and raise masters in this state or in any of the United States, in which there is no grand lodge; but that in any state, where a grand master presides, they shall apply for his sanction.

The political events of the year, 5775, produced great changes in the state of masonry; Boston had become a garrison, and the regular meetings of the grand lodge were, of course, suspended. At the eventful contest of the 17th June, 5775, on the celebrated heights of Charlestown, commonly called the battle of Bunker's hill, the grand lodge sustained a heavy loss in the death of their grand master WARREN, who held the rank of a major general in the provincial forces, and was slain, whilst gallantly defending the liberties of his country.

Soon after the evacuation of Boston by the British, March 18th, 5776, and previous to any regular communication, the brethren, influenced by a pious regard to the memory of their late grand master, were induced to search for his body, which had been buried with many others, indiscriminately, in the field of slaughter. They accordingly repaired to the place, and his remains, though found in a mangled condition, were easily ascertained by his having an artificial tooth; and being decently raised, were carried to the state house in Boston, April 8th, from whence, a numerous and respectable body of brethren, together with the late grand officers attending, in a regular procession, they were carried to the stone chapel, where an animated eulogium was delivered by brother Perez Morton, at their request. The body was then conveyed to the silent tomb, and there deposited without a sculptured stone to mark the spot; but as the whole earth is the sepulchre of illustrious men, his fame, his glorious actions, are engraved on the tablet of universal remembrance, and will survive marble monuments, or local inscriptions.*

* If there be no monument over his grave, one has been erected on the spot, where he terminated his glorious career. The handsome monument, which graces the heights of Charlestown, was solemnly dedicated by the society of free-masons, December 2nd, 1794, in commemoration of the events of 17th June, 1775. It is a Tuscan pillar, 18 feet high, placed on a brick foundation 10 feet from the ground, 8 feet square, inclosed by four posts. On the top of the pillar is a gilt urn, with the letters "J. W.

On the festival of St. John the Baptist, 5776, a number of the dispersed brethren having returned, convened, and celebrated the day with temperate joy. But it now became a serious question, how the grand lodge should be constituted, as the commission of the grand master had died with him, and his deputy had no power independent of his nomination and appointment. Communications for the consideration of this subject were held at different times till the 8th of March, 5777, when the brethren came to a conclusion with respect to the measures, which ought to be adopted. At this meeting, the necessity of a superintending government for the different lodges, in order that a regular intercourse might be kept up between them, appeared obvious. The extreme poverty, to which many worthy brethren had been subjected, in consequence of the war; at a time too, when, owing to the disorganised state of the institution, there was no general masonic fund, was, likewise, an object of weighty importance. After having taken the subject into serious consideration, they, therefore, deemed it expedient to proceed to the formation of an independent grand lodge, with powers and prerogatives to be exercised on principles consistent with, and subordinate to, the regulations pointed out in the constitutions of masonry.* They next proceeded to the proper organization of the lodge, and installed the most worshipful Joseph Webb grand master, &c.

MAJOR GENERAL JOSEPH WARREN

who were slain on this memorable spot,

On the 7th March, 1780, it was determined that all charters granted without the limits of this state, shall be understood to remain in force until a grand lodge is formed in the government, where such lodges are held, or during the pleasure of this grand lodge.

Nothing remarkable occurred till January 1783, when a committee was appointed to draw up resolutions, explanatory of the power and authority of this grand lodge, of the extent of its jurisdiction, and of the exercise of any other masonic authority within the same; and also to write to the grand lodges abroad, requesting such communications, as may tend to promote a friendly correspondence, and advance the general interests of the craft.

The report of the committee, and the resolution by them recommended, presented at a meeting of the grand lodge, June 24th 1783, are as follows,

“ The committee appointed to take into consideration the conduct of those brethren who assume the powers and prerogatives of a grand lodge, on the ancient establishment in this place, and to examine the extent of their authority and jurisdiction, together with the powers of any ancient masonic institution within the same, beg leave to report the result of their examination, founded on the following facts, viz.

“ That in consequence of a petition from a number of brethren of this town, to the grand lodge of Scotland, a charter was granted them under the name of “Saint Andrew’s Lodge,” by the most worshipful, and right honourable George, earl of Dalhousie, grand master of masons in Scotland, to the late most worshipful Joseph Warren, Esq. constituting and appointing him provincial grand master of the ancient and honourable society of Free and Accepted Masons, with power of granting charters of erection within one hundred miles of the metropolis; but that during the jurisdiction of the grand lodge in form and manner thus appointed, three lodges were only constituted by authority thereof.

“That the commission from the grand lodge of Scotland, granted to our late grand master Joseph Warren, having died with him, and of course, his deputy, whose appointment was derived from his nomination, being no longer in existence, they saw themselves without a head, and without a single grand officer, and of consequence, it was evident that not only the grand lodge, but all the particular lodges under its jurisdiction must cease to assemble, the brethren be dispersed, the pennyless go unassisted, the craft languish, and ancient masonry become extinct, in this part of the world.

“That in consequence of a summons from the former grand officers to the masters, and wardens of all the regularly constituted lodges, a grand communication was held, to consult and advise for some means to preserve the intercourse of the brethren.

“That the political head of this country having destroyed all connexion and correspondence between the subjects of these states and the country, from which the grand lodge originally derived its commission and authority, and the principles of the craft inculcating in its professions, submission to the commands of the civil authority of the country in which they reside; the brethren did assume elective supremacy, and chose a grand master and officers, and erected a grand lodge, with independent powers and prerogatives, to be exercised, however, on principles consistent with, and subordinate to the regulations pointed out in the constitutions of ancient masonry.

“ That the reputation and utility of the craft, under their jurisdiction, has been most extensively diffused by the flourishing state of fourteen lodges, constituted by their authority, within a shorter period than that in which three only received dispensations, under the former grand lodge.

“ That in the history of our craft we find, that in England there are two grand lodges independent of each other; in Scotland the same; and in Ireland, the grand lodge and grand master are independent both of England and Scotland. It is clear that the authority of some of these grand lodges originated in assumption; or otherwise they would acknowledge the head, from whence they derived their power of acting.

“ Your committee are therefore, of opinion, that the proceedings of the present grand lodge are dictated by principles of the clearest necessity, founded on the highest reason, and warranted by proceedings of the most approved authority; and they beg leave to recommend, that the following resolutions be adopted by the grand lodge, and ingrafted into its constitution:

“ 1st. That the brethren of the grand lodge, in assuming the powers and prerogatives of an independent grand lodge, acted from the most laudable motives, and consistently with the principles, which ought for ever to govern masons; viz. the benefit of the craft, and the good of mankind; and that they are warranted in their proceedings by the practice of ancient masons in all ages of the world.*

“2nd. That the grand lodge to be so constituted, shall be free and independent in its government and official authority, of any other grand lodge or grand master in the universe.

“3rd. That the power and authority of the said grand lodge be construed to extend throughout the commonwealth of Massachusetts, and to any of the United States, where none other is erected, over such lodges as this grand lodge has constituted or shall constitute.

“4th. That the grand master, for the time being, be desired to call in all charters, which were held under the jurisdiction of the late grand master, Joseph Warren, Esq. and return the same with an indorsement thereon, expressive of their recognition of the power and authority of this grand lodge.

“5th. That no person or persons ought to, or can, consistently with the rules of ancient masonry, use or exercise the powers or prerogatives of an ancient grand master or grand lodge, viz. to give power to erect lodges of ancient masonry, make masons, appoint superior or grand officers, receive dues, or do any thing, which belongs to the powers or prerogatives of an ancient grand lodge, within any part of the commonwealth of Massachusetts, to the rightful and appropriate limits of which, the authority of this grand lodge shall for ever hereafter extend."

The said report having been duly considered was adopted. and ordered to be registered.

On December 2nd, 5791, a committee was appointed by the grand lodge, to confer with the officers of St. John's Grand Lodge, upon the subject of a complete masonic union, throughout the commonwealth of Massachusetts, which was happily effected March 5th, 5792, and unanimously adopted by both parties.

From the preceding history, we find, that for the space of thirty-six years, two grand lodges, equally respectable, were commissioned by different authorities in the same metropolis, each acknowledging the same laws, and practising upon the same general principles. But when we consider that the design of a grand lodge is to erect private lodges, to prevent innovations, and to promote a regular intercourse amongst the brethren, it must appear obvious, that the existence of two supreme authorities in one place, and over the same jurisdiction, must tend to excite a collision of interests, and to interrupt that perfect harmony, which is the cement of our institution. A complete union of these two grand lodges was, therefore, a most important object, and it was, as has been already observed, happily effected in March, 5792, and constitutes a new era in the history of masonry in the United States.

On that memorable day, the two grand lodges convened, for the last time, in their respective halls, and each nominated a grand master, two grand wardens, a grand treasurer, and a grand secretary, and also seven electors, who met in convention, and after having duly considered the two lists of candidates, unanimously elected the most worshipful John Cutler, grand master; the right worshipful Joseph Bartlet, senior grand warden; the right worshipful Mungo Mackay, junior grand warden, &c. who were installed with great solemnity on the 19th June following. It was then resolved, that the grand lodge, organized as aforesaid, shall be hereafter known by the name of "The grand lodge of the ancient and honourable society of Free and Accepted Masons for the commonwealth of Massachusetts."

Independent of the charters, which had been given to subordinate lodges by the two grand lodges, previous to their union, the grand lodge of England had in different places, appointed provincial grand masters, to whom they gave warrants for holding lodges; but the termination of the revolutionary war having finally separated the United States from the government of Great Britain, also exonerated free-masons, in this country, from subjection to any foreign grand lodge.

To maintain a friendly correspondence with all ancient grand lodges was deemed correct, and this has carefully been attended to ever since ; but it was very properly resolved, that it was inconsistent with the principles of the craft, to be subordinate to any of them, as masonry, in a peculiar degree, inculcates the doctrine of obedience on every brother, to the government of the country, under which he lives. Independent grand lodges were, therefore, formed in each of the different states, of which I shall give an account towards the close of the work.

CHAPTER III.

Uses of Masonry.

AFTER so long a history of the rise, progress, and present state of masonry, it must be natural for those, who have not been admitted into the order, to enquire into the benefits, which result from the institution; and for what purpose it has been patronised by so many great and illustrious personages. From the profound secrecy, in which the system of masonry is so very strictly, as well as properly involved, its benefits now are, and will for ever be, best known to the members of the fraternity. This far, however, may be asserted without fear of contradiction, that it promotes philanthropy, benevolence, and morality; and that in proportion as masonry has been cultivated, the countries in which it has shed its benign influence, have been proportionably civilized.

There is, likewise, a very important advantage attached to masonry, viz. that its signs and tokens serve as a kind of universal language; so that by means of them people of the most distant nations, may become acquainted, and enter into the most friendly intercourse, with each other. In this society, the bigot and the enthusiast throw aside their rancour, and will readily take by the hand a brother, who walks in the paths of moral rectitude, and will treat him with tenderness, humanity, and delicacy, whatever diversity of opinion may be entertained between them, with respect either to politics or religion.

Thus through the instrumentality of Freemasonry, all those disputes, which have so much agitated and disturbed the world, upon subjects, concerning which it has been found impossible to come to a final conclusion, and which only tend to irritate the mind, are avoided. Here harmony and peace predominate. The Chinese, the Algerine, the Persian, the native of Indostan, the Turk, and the Jew, may, under the masonic banners, associate in love with their Christian brethren, and participate of all the benefits of the institution; nor is any dispute tolerated between whigs and tories, federalists and democrats, or any other political factions.

The basis of masonry is peace, good will to men; and he knows very little of its essential and fundamental principles, who does not feel it as an imperious duty to promote, as far as may be in his power, the happiness of the whole human race, particularly of those, who may be connected with himself in the same fraternity.

From these observations, the utility of masonry must be sufficiently apparent. Its benefits are well known to its members, who deem them invaluable; and to the world it must appear obvious, that a distressed mason, will, in most parts of the globe, find a brother ready and willing to assist him. Let brotherly love continue.

CHAPTER IV.

Of Modern Masons.

In a book entitled Ahiman Rezon, by Lawrence Dermott, Esq. deputy grand master, of the grand lodge of England, we have the following account of the origin of modern masonry. "About the year 1717," says he, "some joyous companions, who had passed the decree of a craft, though very rusty, resolved to form a lodge for themselves, in order that, by conversation, they might be enabled to recollect what had been formerly dictated to them; or if that should be found impracticable, to substitute something new, which might, in future, pass for masonry amongst themselves. At this meeting, the question was asked, whether any one present knew the master mason's part, and being answered in the negative, it was resolved nem. con. that the deficiency should be made up by a new composition; and that such fragments of the old order as were found amongst themselves, should be immediately reformed, and made more pliable to the humours of the people."

He then goes on with a ludicrous description of the manner, in which they resolved to initiate new members, which, however, I deem foreign to my purpose. But whatever may have been deemed the origin of this institution, it arose in England to a considerable degree of respectability, as we find according to Mr. Dermott's statement, that in the year 1788, the duke of Manchester was chosen grand master, and it is well known, that since that period, persons of high standing in society have successively filled the chair.

The ancient masons style themselves "free and accepted masons." The moderns "freemasons of England." But though there be a similarity of names, yet they differ greatly in their makings, ceremonies, masonic knowledge and installations.

Mr. Dermott has pointed out the difference between the two by questions and answers; I have, however, thought it better to throw aside his questions, and give the substance of his answers, which, I trust, will be more satisfactory to the reader.

1. Free-masonry, as practised in ancient lodges is universal; but that which is called modern masonry is not.

2. An ancient mason cannot only make himself known to his brother; but, in case of necessity, can discover his very thoughts to him in the presence of a modern, while the modern cannot discover, that either of them are free-masons.

3. A modern mason may, with safety, communicate all his secrets to an ancient mason; but it would be highly indiscreet in an ancient mason to repose confidence in a modern; for as a science comprehends an art, though an art cannot comprehend a science, even so ancient masonry contains every thing valuable amongst the moderns, as well as other things, which cannot be revealed without additional ceremonies.

4. A person made in the modern manner is not qualified to sit in a master's lodge, according to the universal system of masonry. To such an one, therefore, the appellation of "Free and Accepted" is, by no means, applicable.

5. A modern mason cannot be initiated into the Royal Arch Lodges, which is the very essence, the prop, the key stone of masonry, unless through the ancient ceremonies.

6. The number of the ancient masons, compared with moderns, being at least as ninety-nine to one,* proves the universality of the old order; and its utility appears from the love and respect shewn to the brethren in consequence of their superior abilities, in conversing with, and distinguishing the masons of all countries and denominations.

These and many others too tedious to be mentioned, are the advantages, which the ancient have over the modern masons; these last, however, are not so much to be blamed as some may suppose; as they have been duped and received for sterling, that which was not much better than dross. But I announce with pleasure, that modern masons becoming sensible of their delusion, are, from time to time, joining the ancient lodges; and without possessing the spirit of prophecy, I may assert, that the time is not far distant, when all who profess themselves to be masons will rally round the ancient standard.

CHAPTER V.

Objections against Free-Masonry obviated.

IN the year 1794, an extraordinary publication was issued from the press in Great Britain,

* This is so well known in Great Britain, Ireland, the United States, &c. that it becomes altogether unnecessary, to add a single argument in proof of this assertion. It is believed, that no modern lodge exists on the continent of North America.

written by John Robinson, A. M. professor of Natural Philosophy in the university of Edinburgh, entitled "Proofs of a conspiracy against all the religions and governments of Europe, carried on in the secret meetings of Free-masons, Illuminati and reading societies." What could have occasioned such a production from the pen of a professor, in so eminent an university, is difficult to conjecture. He must, however, have been actuated by the most malignant passions, stimulated by avarice to make money by any means whether right or wrong, or much learning may, perhaps, have made him mad. But whatever may have been his motive, his work was well calculated to excite the most ill founded suspicions respecting an institution, which in every age and country, had been uniformly friendly to government, good order, and religion; an institution which, in the most positive and solemn manner, denounces all plots, conspiracies, and rebellions; an institution, the very essentials of which, breathe nothing but peace and good will towards men.

But Robinson's book, notwithstanding the above well known facts, had passed through several editions in the United States; and though more replete with assertion than proof, with jealous surmises than satisfactory reasons; and in many parts inconsistent and contradictory, had met with numerous readers and some advocates. What the Illuminati may be I know not; but if their principles be such as professor Robinson has represented them, there is no masonic lodge, either ancient or modern, which would not shudder at the very idea of having any connexion or correspondence with them.

When the fact, however, was notorious, to professor Robinson, as well as to all the intelligent part of the community, that many of the wisest as well as the best members of society, in every part of the civilized world, were free-masons, he ought to have paused before he vented a philippic, which will be believed by no one of common sense, and which will ever tend to vilify his character in the opinion of men, who choose to think for themselves.

From the first chapter of this book, which treats of the origin and history of free-masonry, it appears that kings and princes, bishops and other dignitaries of the Christian Church, had deemed it an honour to belong to the order. It is likewise well known, that the immortal Washington, the illustrious Franklin, the gallant general Warren, the patriotic Samuel Adams, late governor of the state of Massachusetts, and many others of our most eminent citizens, whose names might be adduced, belonged to this ancient and honourable fraternity. Were these enemies to religion and government? His royal highness the prince regent of England, was grand master of masons in England, of whom he now styles himself the patron, and his brother prince Edward was, in the year 1815, grand master in Lower Canada. Who can for a moment suppose, that these, or any of the other eminent personages, whom I have mentioned, would wish to overturn the government of his native country? But to come nearer home, his excellency Daniel D. Tompkins, vice president of the United States, and his excellency De Witt Clinton, Esq. governor of the state of New-York, as well as many others of our most distinguished citizens, are masons of the highest grade. Does any one apprehend, that gentlemen of their rank and standing in society, would have any agency, directly or indirectly, in subverting the government or religion of the country, which gave them birth?

It may be supposed, that I am contending with a shadow, as Mr. Robinson only speaks of a conspiracy against the religions and governments in Europe; but enough has been said to convince the unprejudiced reader, that the general principles of masonry have been, in all ages and countries, essentially the same; and that in masonic lodges, there never did, nor never can exist any discussions, which can excite animosity in regard to politics, religion, or any other subject, which has the least tendency of disturb the public tranquillity.

But in order to allay every apprehension, which this book might have excited in the mind of the community, the grand lodge of Massachusetts, on the 11th June, 1798, deemed it adviseable to report to the chief magistrate of the federal government those sentiments, which characterize all the lodges, and which have ever evinced, that free and accepted masons are good, faithful, peaceable and obedient citizens.

The following is a copy of this important document.

“ An address of the grand lodge of free and accepted masons of the commonwealth of Massachusetts, in ample form assembled at a quarterly communication in Boston, June 11th, A. D. 1798, to the president of the United States.

“ Sir,

“ Flattery and a discussion of political opinions are inconsistent with the principles of this ancient fraternity; but while we are bound to cultivate benevolence, and extend the arm of charity to our brethren of every clime, we feel the strongest obligations to support the civil authority, which protects us. And when the illiberal attacks of a foreign enthusiast,* aided by the unfounded prejudices of his followers, are tending to embarrass the public mind with respect to the real views of our society, we think it our duty to join in full concert with our fellow citizens in expressions of gratitude to the Supreme Architect of the Universe, for endowing you with that wisdom, patriotic firmness and integrity, which has characterized your public conduct.

* This paragraph has reference to Professor Robinson, the visionary author alluded to in the beginning of this chapter.

“ While the independence of our country, and the operation of just and equal laws have contributed to enlarge the sphere of social happiness, we rejoice that our masonic brethren throughout the United States, have discovered, by their conduct, a zeal to promote the public welfare, and that many of them have been conspicuous for their talents and unwearied exertions. Among these, your venerable predecessor is the most illustrious example; and the memory of our beloved WARREN, who from the chair of this grand lodge, has often urged the members to the exercise of patriotism and philanthropy, and who sealed his principles with his blood, shall ever animate us to a laudable imitation of his virtues.

“ Sincerely we deprecate the calamities of war, and have fervently wished success to every endeavour for the preservation of peace. But, sir, if we disregard the blessings of liberty, we are unworthy to enjoy them. In vain have our statesmen laboured in our public assemblies, and by the midnight taper; in vain have our mountains and vallies been stained with the blood of our heroes, if we want firmness to repel the assaults of every presumptuous invader. And while as citizens of a free republic, we engage our utmost exertions in the cause of our country, and offer our services to protect the fair inheritance of our ancestors; as masons, we will cultivate the precepts of our institution, and alleviate the miseries of all, who by the fortune of war, or the ordinary occurrences of life, are the proper objects of our attention.

“ Long may you continue a patron of the useful arts, and an ornament of the present generation. May you finish your public labours with an approving conscience, and be gathered to the sepulchre of your co-patriots with the benedictions of your countrymen; and finally, may you be admitted to that celestial temple, where all national distinctions are lost in undissembled friendship and universal peace.

Josiah Bartlet, grand master.

Attest, Daniel Oliver, grand secretary.”

To this address, the President returned the following answer :

“ Gentlemen,

“ As I never had the honour to be one of your ancient fraternity, I feel myself under the greater obligations to you for this affectionate and respectful address. Many of my best friends have been masons, and two of them, my professional patron, the learned GRIDLEY,* and my intimate friend, your im-

* Of this gentleman, the following character was inserted in the public prints, and is retained in the records of the grand lodge.

“ Boston, September 17th, 1766. On Thursday last, died, Jeremy Gridley, Esquire, Attorney General for the Province, and a member of the general court. His funeral was attended with that respect, which was due to his mortal Warren, whose life and death were lessons and examples of patriotism and philanthropy, were grand masters; yet so it has happened, that I had never the felicity to be initiated. Such examples as these, and a greater still in my venerable predecessor, would have been sufficient to induce me to hold the institution and fraternity in esteem and honour, as favourable to the support of civil authority, if I had not known their love of the fine arts, their delight in hospitality and devotion to humanity.

“ Your indulgent opinion of my conduct, and your benevolent wishes for the fortunate memory, by the members of the council, &c. the society of free masons, of which he was grand master; the officers of the first regiment of militia; of which he was colonel; the members of the marine society, of which he was president, and a great number of the gentlemen of the town.

“ Strength of understanding, clearness of apprehension, and solidity of judgment were cultivated in him by a liberal education and close mode of thinking. His extensive acquaintance with classical and almost every other part of literature, gave him the first rank among men of learning. His thorough knowledge of the civil and common law, which he had studied as a science founded in the principles of government and the nature of man, justly placed him at the head of his profession. His tender feelings, relative to his natural and civil ties, his exquisite sensibility and generous effusion of soul for his friend, were proofs, that his heart was as good, as his head was sound, and well qualified him to preside over that ancient society, whose benevolent constitutions do honour to mankind. He sustained the painful attacks of death with philosophical calmness and firmness, which resulted from the steady principles of his religion.

termination of my public labours, have my sincere thanks.

“The public engagement of your utmost exertions in the cause of your country, and the offer of your services to protect the fair inheritance of your ancestors, are proofs, that you are not chargeable with those designs, the imputation of which, in other parts of the world, has embarrassed the public mind, with respect to the real views of your society.

John Adams.

Philadelphia, June 22d, 1798.”

To the above, I shall add two other interesting documents, which, though they precede the last, by a few years, may, perhaps, with more propriety, be inserted in this place.

The first is an address from the grand lodge of Massachusetts, when they presented to their illustrious brother George Washington, their book of constitutions, which is dedicated to him, and was presented with the following address:

“The grand lodge of free and accepted masons of the commonwealth of Massachusetts, to their honoured and illustrious brother George Washington, president of the United States.

“Whilst the historian is describing the career of your glory, and the inhabitants of an extensive empire are made happy in your unexampled exertions; whilst some celebrate the hero, so distinguished in liberating United

America, and others the patriot, who presides over her councils; a band of brothers, having always joined the acclamations of their countrymen, now testify their respect for those milder virtues, which ever grace the man.

“ Taught by the precepts of our society, that all its members stand upon a level, we venture to assume this station, and to approach you with that freedom, which diminishes our diffidence without lessening our respect.

“ Desirous to enlarge the boundaries of social happiness, and to vindicate the ceremonies of their institution, this grand lodge have published a book of constitutions (and a copy for your acceptance accompanies this), which by discovering the principles that actuate, will speak the eulogy of the society; though they fervently wish the conduct of its members may prove its highest commendation.

“ Convinced of his attachment to its cause, and readiness to encourage its benevolent designs, they have taken the liberty to dedicate this work to one, the qualities of whose heart, and the actions of whose life, have contributed to improve personal virtue, and to extend, throughout the world, the most endearing cordialities; and they humbly hope, he will pardon this freedom, and accept the tribute of their esteem and homage.

“ May the Supreme Architect of the universe protect and bless you, give you length of days, and increase of felicity in this world, and then receive you to the harmonious and exalted society in heaven.

Boston, December 27th, A. D. 1792."

To this address, the following answer was returned :

" To the grand lodge of free and accepted masons of the commonwealth of Massachusetts.

" Flattering as it may be to the human mind, and truly honourable as it is, to receive from our fellow citizens, testimonies of approbation, for exertions to promote the public welfare, it is not less pleasing to know, that the milder virtues of the heart are highly respected by a society, whose liberal principles are founded on the immutable laws of truth and justice.

" To enlarge the sphere of social happiness is worthy of the benevolent design of a masonic institution ; and it is most fervently to be wished, that the conduct of every member of the fraternity, as well as those publications that discover the principles, which actuate them, may tend to convince mankind, that the grand object of masonry is to promote the happiness of the human race.

" While I beg your acceptance of my thanks for the book of constitutions, which you have sent me, and for the honour you have done me in the dedication, permit me to assure you that I feel all those emotions of gratitude, which your affectionate address and cordial wishes are calculated to inspire; and I sincerely pray, that the Great Architect of the Universe may bless you here, and receive you hereafter into his immortal temple.

George Washington."

The last document, which I shall lay before my readers, on this subject, is the address which the grand lodge presented to the president upon his retiring from office, together with his answer.

"The grand lodge of ancient free and accepted masons, of the commonwealth of Massachusetts, to their most worthy brother George Washington.

"Wishing ever to be foremost in testimonials of respect and admiration of those virtues and services, with which you have so long adorned and benefited our common country, and not the last nor the least to regret the cessation of them in the public councils of the union, your brethren of this grand lodge embrace the earliest opportunity of greeting you in the calm retirement, which you have contemplated to yourself.

"Though as citizens, they lose you in the active labours of political life, they hope as masons, to find you in the pleasing sphere of fraternal engagement. From the cares of state, and the fatigues of public business, our institution opens a recess, affording all the relief of tranquillity, the harmony of peace, and the refreshment of pleasure. Of these may you partake in all their purity and satisfaction. And we will assure ourselves, that your attachment to this social plan will increase; so that under the auspices of your encouragement, assistance and patronage, the craft will attain its highest ornament, perfection and praise. And it is our earnest prayer, that when your light shall be no more visible in this earthly temple, you may be raised to the All Perfect Lodge above, be seated on the right of the Supreme Architect of the Universe, and receive the refreshment your labours have merited!

“ In behalf of the grand lodge, we subscribe ourselves with the highest esteem, your affectionate brethren.

Paul Revere, grand master.

Isaiah Thomas, senior grand warden.

Joseph Laughton, junior grand warden.

Daniel Oliver, grand secretary.

Boston, March 21st, 5797.”

The following answer was received and communicated to the grand lodge, June 12th, 5797.

“ To the grand lodge of ancient, free, and accepted masons, in the commonwealth of Massachusetts.

“ Brothers,

“ It was not till within these few days, that I have been favoured by the receipt of your affectionate address, dated in Boston the 21st of March.

“ For the favourable sentiments you have been pleased to express on the occasion of my past services, and for the regrets, with which they are accompanied for the cessation of my public functions. I pray you to accept my best acknowledgements and gratitude.

“ No pleasure, except that, which results from a consciousness of having to the utmost of my abilities, discharged the trusts, which have been reposed in me by my country, can equal the satisfaction I feel from the unequivocal proofs I continually receive of its approbation of my public conduct; and I beg you to be assured, that the evidence thereof, which is exhibited by the grand lodge of Massachusetts, is not among the least pleasing or grateful to my feelings.

“ In that retirement, which declining years induced me to seek, and which repose to a mind long employed in public concerns rendered necessary, my wishes, that a bounteous Providence will continue to bless and preserve our country in peace and in the prosperity it has enjoyed, will be warm and sincere; and my attachment to the society, of which we are members, will dispose me always to contribute my best endeavours to promote the honour and interest of the craft.

“ For the prayer, you offered in my behalf, I entreat you to accept the thanks of a grateful heart. With assurances of fraternal regard, and my best wishes for the honour, happiness, and prosperity of all the members of the grand lodge of Massachusetts,

George Washington.”

Although professor Robinson exempts the English lodges from the charge of disloyalty or want of attachment to government, it is evident from the whole tenour of his book, that he intended to sound the tocsin of alarm in the ears of the British ministry, by the thunder of his extraordinary denunciations. It must, however, have been gratifying to the fraternity, that after all his fulminations against masonry, as well as those of his predecessor, the Abbe Barruel, who had written a book in four volumes entitled “The memoirs of Jacobinism in France,” none of the members of the royal family in great Britain, nor of the European sovereigns or princes, who were free-masons, have been induced, on that account, to desert the society. On the contrary, we have a positive proof of their steadfast attachment to the order, from the following sentiments, which occur in an address delivered to the brethren, on the 3d of June, 1800, by the earl of Moira, who was then deputy grand master :

“Certain modern publications,” says his lordship, “have been holding forth to the world the society of masons as in league against all constituted authorities.” This imputation, he repels by a number of powerful arguments, of which, this last is certainly irresistibly conclusive. "The foundation stone of the lodge," says he, "is Fear God and honour the king.* In confirmation of this solemn assertion, what can we advance more irrefragable than that so many of his Majesty's illustrious family stand in the highest order of masonry, are fully instructed in all its tendencies, and have intimate knowledge of every particular, in its current administration under the grand lodge of England."

After so many testimonies, which sufficiently prove, that the principles of the institution are not only innocent, but benevolent, and highly laudable, little more need be said to refute the ungenerous aspersions, which have been so wantonly thrown out against it. I shall, therefore, close this chapter with this observation, that when on the 12th July, 1798, an act was passed by the British parliament, "for the more effectual suppression of societies established for seditious and treasonable purposes," such was the confidence of government in the loyalty of free-masons, that their lodges were exempted from its penalties. I shall close with this remark, that those, who are best acquainted with the mysteries of our order, must be sensible, that it is founded in WISDOM; supported by STRENGTH; adorned with BEAUTY ; and cemented by CORDIALITY and TRUTH. May it, therefore, be our constant study, to act in such a manner, that our practice may prove the best comment on the principles of our craft, and thereby teach the world, that Charity and Brotherly Love, Integrity of Heart, and Purity of Manners, are not less the characteristics of Masonry than of Religion. Then may we hope, that when a period even still more awful than the hour of our dissolution shall arrive, when the last trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised, when our scattered atoms shall be collected, and we shall appear in the presence of the Lord God Omnipotent, "the high and lofty One who inhabiteth eternity," that our transgressions will be graciously forgiven, and that the GRAND MASTER of the UNIVERSE will be pleased to give us rest, from all our labours, by an admission into the celestial fraternity of angels, and "the spirits of just men made perfect."

* Or the government of the country under which we live.

CHAPTER VI.

Of Qualifications necessary for those, who wish to become Free-Masons.

No one ought to think of becoming a candidate for admission into this ancient an honourable fraternity, who is not in the practice of all the private virtues. Intemperance, the great bane of human happiness, ought to be avoided, and no indulgence in any kind of excess allowed, which might prevent him from the use of his mental faculties, and the faithful performance of those moral and religious duties, which are incumbent on all men, particularly on masons. He ought to be industrious in his vocation, and adore the Lord and Master, who made heaven and earth. He ought not to eat any man's bread for nought; but should conduct himself in such a manner as to be able to pay for all the necessaries and conveniencies of life. When he is at leisure from his necessary avocations, he should employ himself in studying the arts and sciences, so that he may be better enabled to perform all his duties to his Creator, his country, his neighbour, and himself.

He is to seek and acquire, as far as possible, the virtues of patience, meekness, self denial, and forbearance; virtues, which give him the command over himself, and enable him to govern his own family with affection, dignity, and prudence. At the same time he ought to check every disposition, which might tend to the injury of his fellow creatures; and by every means in his power, promote that love and friendship, which brethren of the same household owe to each other.

To afford succour to the distressed, to divide our bread with the industrious poor, and to put the misguided traveller into the right way, are duties, which essentially belong to the craft; but though a mason should never shut his ear against any of the human race, yet when a brother is oppressed or in indigent circumstances, he is, in a peculiar manner, called to relieve him as far as prudence will permit.

It is also necessary, that all, who would be free-masons, should learn to abstain from malice, slander, and evil speaking; from all provoking and indecorous language, and that they should keep the tongue of good report. They should reflect, that the society, which they intend to join, is a band of brothers; and it ought to be their endeavour as soon as they have got admission, to strive, by every means in their power, that brotherly love should continue.

A mason should be obedient to the laws of his country, and respect the superior powers. Treason and sedition are held in abhorrence by all, who rightly understand the principles of the institution. A mason should, likewise, learn to obey those, who are set over him in the lodge; nor is he to omit this important duty, in consequence of their being inferior to him in worldly rank or condition. Masonry divests no man of his honours; yet in the lodge, pre-eminence of virtue, and superior knowledge in the art, is considered as the source of all nobility and good government.

The virtue indispensably requisite in masonry is secrecy. This is the guard of their confidence, and the security of their trust. So great stress is laid upon it, that it is enforced under the strongest penalties, nor, in their opinion, is any man to be accounted wise, who has not intellectual strength sufficient to conceal such honest secrets as may be committed to him, as well as his own more serious and private affairs; but of this I shall speak more at large in the next chapter.

It is further to be observed, that no person is capable of becoming a member, unless, together with the virtues above mentioned, or at least a disposition to seek and acquire them, he be free-born, of mature age, of good report, of sufficient natural endowments, with an estate, office, trade, occupation, or some visible way of acquiring an honest livelihood, as becomes the members of this most ancient and honourable fraternity; who ought not only to earn a sufficiency for themselves and families, but, likewise, have something to spare for works of charity, and mercy. Every person desirous of admission, must also be upright in body, not deformed, nor dismembered; but of hale and entire limbs as a man ought to be.

It is contrary to the rules of masonry, that a brother should propose for admission any person through friendship or partiality, who is not a man of unblemished reputation, and who is not supposed to be exempt from those vices and ill qualities, which would bring dishonour on the craft.

Every person desirous of being made a free-mason, should be proposed by a member, who should give the candidate's name, age, occupation, residence, and other necessary information concerning him. It is also requisite, that such proposal, should be seconded by one or more members. Such proposal should be made at least at one meeting of the lodge, prior to initiation, in order that the brethren may have sufficient time to make a strict enquiry into the character of the candidate. For this purpose, a special committee is usually appointed in country lodges; but in New-York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Boston, and other cities of the United States, this duty generally devolves on a standing committee.

The brother, who proposes a candidate should also, at the same time, deposit such a sum for him as the by-laws of the lodge may require, and this is forfeited, if the candidate should not come forward agreeably to his proposal; but it is to be returned, if he should not be approved of. In case of his being elected, he is to pay, in addition to his deposit, such further sum as the laws of the lodge may require.

Men in low circumstances, although possessed of some education and of good morals, are not fit to be members of this institution. They ought previous to their application for admission, to consider their income, and the situation of their families, and know, that freemasonry requires not only knowledge, but attendance, and a decent external appearance, to maintain and support its ancient respectability and grandeur.

All applications for initiation should be made in writing, and the petitions ought to be filed by the secretary. The following may answer as a form for any one, who may wish to become a member.

“To the worshipful master, junior and senior wardens, and brethren of lodge, No.

“The petition of A. B. most respectfully sheweth,

“That he has been long desirous of becoming a member of your ancient and honourable society, the principles of which, he has every reason to believe, are founded in morality, virtue, and religion. He, therefore, prays, that he may be admitted as a member, if after due examination, he shall be found worthy.

“His place of residence is at , his age years, his occupation

(Signed) A. B.”

The candidate has a right before his admission, to desire his friend, who proposed him, to shew him the warrant or dispensation, by which the lodge is held; which, if genuine, he will find to be an instrument either written or printed on parchment, and subscribed by some grand master or his deputy, the grand wardens and grand secretary, sealed with the grand lodge seal, constituting particular persons therein named, as master and wardens, with full power to congregate and hold a lodge, at such a place as they may think proper, and therein "make and admit free-masons according to the ancient and honourable custom of the royal craft, in all nations and ages throughout the world, with full power and authority to nominate and choose their successors, &c."

The candidate may also request the perusal of the by-laws, and a list of the members of the lodge, by which he will be better enabled to judge whether they are such persons as he could wish to associate with, and whether he could cheerfully submit to its rules. In this order, it ought to be observed, that there is no compulsion. Every one previous to his receiving even the first degree, must declare, that it is of his own free will and accord.

Previously to his introduction, every candidate ought to subscribe a declaration to the following purport:

"I, A. B. do seriously declare, upon my honour, that unbiassed by friends, and uninfluenced by unworthy motives, I freely and voluntarily offer myself as a candidate for the mysteries of free-masonry; that I am solely prompted to this measure by a favourable opinion, which I have conceived of the institution, a desire for knowledge, and a sincere wish to be serviceable to my fellow creatures. And I do further solemnly promise, that I will cheerfully conform to the ancient established usages and customs of the society. As witness my hand this day of in the year

(Signed) A. B.”

Witness, C. D.

In many lodges, however, questions are proposed to the candidate, in an adjoining apartment, previous to his initiation, which will naturally lead him to express sentiments similar to those mentioned in the preceding declaration.

No farther observations on this part of the subject are necessary. The candidate for admission, who will peruse them with attention, will obtain all that information, which will be necessary for his guidance previous to his being admitted into the arcana of freemasonry.

CHAPTER VII.

On Secrecy.

THIS, amongst free-masons, as has been already observed, is a prerequisite indispensibly necessary. Some of those, however, who are opposed to the institution, assert that there ought to be no secrets, and that if the institution were good, its principles ought not to be concealed from the world. But its principles are not concealed. Benevolence, charity, humanity, and all the other virtues are its professed objects, and though there be many who do not adhere to the rules, prescribed for the conduct of the craft, and thereby disgrace the order, it does not follow, that the rest of the fraternity should be vilified on that account; we might as well stigmatize the twelve apostles, because one of them proved a traitor, or the divine religion of the blessed Jesus, because many of its professors deviate from its holy precepts.

God in the manifestation, which he hath made of himself to mankind, hath distinguished himself as the most amiable of beings, and that his essence is love. He hath declared, that our best service consists in the exercise of this affection towards him, and prefers a voluntary service to the most costly oblation. "Perfect love (saith the apostle), casteth out fear ;” and the whole tenour of scripture represents complacency and acquiescence in the Divine attributes and conditions, as the highest perfection of rational beings ; so as the poet well observes,

“ He, who but wishes to subvert the laws
Of order, sins against the eternal cause.”

And with us, let it be the subject of our unremitting endeavours, to take off the guise from impostors, who would pass themselves upon us under the title of men of honour and humanity, and let the business of our future lives be to cultivate humanity and “ Grasp the whole world of reason, life and sense,

In one close system of benevolence.”

SECRECY, however, we maintain to be a virtue of primary importance, and believe, that we establish the position from sacred as well as profane history. In both, it will be found, that a great number of virtuous attempts never reached their designed ends, through defect of concealment, and that infinite evils have thereby ensued.

But before all other examples, let us consider that, which surpasseth all the rest, being derived from the great God himself, who especially preserves his own secrets, so that he never lets any man know what is to happen on to-morrow ; nor could the wise men in ages past foretel what would befall us in the present day. The following passages from the sacred scriptures abundantly shew, that there is no evil in keeping secrets ; but that on the contrary, secrecy is, in certain cases, a duty incumbent on us. A tale bearer revealeth secrets ; but he that is of a faithful spirit, concealeth the matter. Proverbs xi. 13. Debate thy cause with thy neighbour himself, and discover not a secret to another, lest he that heareth it put thee to shame, and thine infamy turn not away. Proverbs xxv. 9. Surely the Lord God will do nothing ; but he revealeth his secrets unto his servants the prophets. Amos iii. 7. But when thou doest alms, let not thy right hand know what thy left hand doeth, that thine alms may be in secret, and thy father which seeth in secret may reward thee openly. Mat. iv. 3. and 4. To the same purport, many more passages might be adduced ; but it is presumed, that these will suffice. On the whole, we may learn, that God himself is well pleased with secrecy, and although for the good of his creatures, he has been pleased to reveal some things ; yet his counsels will, at all times, firmly stand ; for he is the same, yesterday, to day, and forever.

We read that Cato often said to his friends, that of three things he had great reason to repent, if he ever neglected the true performance of them. The first, if he divulged any secret ; the second, if he ventured on the water when he might stay on dry land ; and the third, if he should let any day pass, in which he did not perform some good action. The two last are well worthy of observation ;

but the first, at present, more especially demands our attention.

Alexander the Great, having received several letters of much importance from his mother, after he had read them in the presence of his dear friend Ephestion alone, drew forth his signet, and without speaking, set it on Ephestion's lips, thereby intimating, that he, in whose bosom a man deposits his secrets, should have his lips so locked up, that he might never reveal them.

Among other instances on record, which point out the propriety of secrecy, it may not be disagreeable to the reader, to peruse the following story as related by Aulus Gellius, in his Attic nights:

The senators of ancient Rome had established it as a rule, that the son of each member might be admitted to hear the debates; a practice, which was found to be productive of great utility, as youth were thus initiated into the principles of government, enabled to become good statesmen, and taught the truly important duty of keeping secrets.

It happened upon one occasion, that this venerable body being engaged in the discussion of a subject of more than usual importance, continued their sitting to a very late hour. No decision, however, took place on that night, and the body was adjourned till the following day, with an express injunction of secrecy. Amongst the other young Romans, who had attended at this interesting debate, was the son of Papirius, whose family was one of the most illustrious in Rome.

The young man having come home, his mother with that curiosity, which is natural to her sex, was anxious to ascertain the weighty business, which had kept the senate so many hours longer in session than usual. He told her in the most courteous manner, that it was a matter, which it was not in his power to reveal, as he, in common with others, had been laid under the most solemn injunction of secrecy.

His refusal made her more importunate, and nothing short of the information, which she required could satisfy her. By caresses and liberal promises, she endeavoured to extort the secret; but her efforts were to no purpose, nor was she more successful, when she resorted to blows.

The young man finding a mother's threats to be very unpleasant, and her stripes still more so, began to contrast the love, which he owed to her, with the duty, which he owed to his father and to his country. He placed her and her insatiable curiosity in one scale, and his own honour, and the solemn injunction to secrecy in the other, when he found her intrinsic weight lighter than air; but in order to appease her, he invented the following ingenious fiction.

Dear mother, you may well blame the senate for their long sitting, at least for calling in question a case so important; for except the wives of senators be admitted to consult thereon, there can be no hope of a conclusion. I speak this, however, with diffidence, as I have been taught that modesty should ever be a distinguishing characteristic of a young man. When, therefore, I am in the presence of the senate, the high opinion, which I entertain of their gravity and wisdom confound me. To them, however, since you have obliged me to tell, it seems necessary for the encrease of population, and for the public good, that every senator should be allowed to have two wives, or that their wives should have two husbands. I shall hardly, under one roof, call two men, by the name of father, but had rather call two women by the name of mother. This is the question, which has so much engrossed the attention of the senate, and to-morrow it must be decided.

The mother took all this for absolute truth. Her blood was speedily in a ferment, and she flew into a rage. I need not observe, that such sudden gusts of passion seldom admit of reflection; but that on the contrary, they hurry the faculties to greater rashness, by which we are rendered incapable of extricating ourselves from impending danger. So, without consulting any one, she forthwith sent information to the ladies of Rome, concerning this weighty affair. The intelligence agitated the mind of every female. A meeting was immediately convoked, and though it has been said that an assembly of women could not be governed by one speaker; yet this affair being so urgent, the least delay so dangerous, and the result of such infinite importance, the revealing woman was allowed to officiate for herself and associates.

On the ensuing morning, there was such a confusion at the senate door, that all Rome seemed to be in an uproar. It had been determined by these good ladies, that their intentions should not be revealed till they should be able to obtain an audience; and it was here proved to a demonstration, that women can keep a secret. They were admitted, and an oration delivered by the lady of Papirius, in which she requested, that women might have two husbands, rather than men two wives, &c.

On hearing a speech so very uncommon, the senators appeared thunder struck, but upon the solution of the riddle, the noble youth was highly commended for his fidelity, and the ladies deemed it expedient to retire, not, however, without considerable confusion.

Nor should we forget the story of the faithful Anaxarchus, as related by Pliny, who being taken up in order that his secrets might be extorted from him, bit his tongue in the midst, between his teeth, and threw it in the tyrant's face.

The Athenians had a statue of brass, which was an object of their adoration. The figure was made without a tongue, as an emblem of secrecy.

The Egyptians, likewise, worshipped Har- poerates, whom they denominated the god of silence; for which reason he was always represented as holding his finger on his mouth. The Romans had a goddess of silence, named Angerona, which was pictured in the same manner. Hence the latin sentence linguam digito compesce, check your tongue by your finger.

The disciples of Plancus are greatly commended because no torment could induce them to confess a secret, with which their master had intrusted them. The servant of Cato the orator was, likewise, tortured, with great cruelty, because he would not divulge the secrets of his master.

Quintus Curtius tells us, that among the Persians, it was held as an inviolable law, to punish, more severely than any other trespasser, him, who discovered any secret. In confirmation of this, he says, that king Darius being vanquished by Alexander, had made his escape so far as to hide himself where he thought he might rest secure; but that neither tortures, nor the most liberal promises, could prevail upon the faithful brethren, who knew of it, to divulge it to any one. He adds, that no man ought to commit any matter of consequence to him, who cannot truly keep a secret.

Lycurgus, amongst his other valuable laws, enacted, that every man should keep secret whatsoever was said or done. For this reason, it was usual amongst the Lacedæmonians, when they met at any feast, for the most ancient in the company to shew every brother the door, by which he entered, saying "take heed, that not so much as one word pass out from hence, of whatsoever shall be here acted or spoken."

The first thing, which Pythagoras inculcated upon his scholars was silence. He, therefore, for a certain time, prohibited them from speaking, in order that they might the better learn to preserve the valuable secrets, which he had to communicate, and enjoined it as a maxim that they should never speak, unless when it was necessary, thereby expressing, as his opinion, that secrecy was one of the most essential virtues. Fools are known by their much speaking; and it would be desirable in masonic lodges, as well as in other societies, if some members did not expose their ignorance by the multitude of words. It is an old adage that a wise man speaks little: but in public bodies, it too often happens, that the most ignorant are the most loquacious.

When Aristotle was asked what thing was most difficult for him to perform, he answered, to be secret and silent. To this purpose St. Ambrose, one of the most eminent fathers of the Christian church, recommends the practical gift of silence as a primary virtue.

The wise king Solomon says in his Proverbs that a king ought not to drink wine, because drunkenness is an enemy to secrecy; and he adds, that a man is not worthy to reign, who cannot keep his own secrets. He furthermore sayeth, that he who discovers secrets is a traitor, and that he who keeps his tongue, keeps his soul.

The apostle James, in speaking on the same subject, thus expresseth himself, "if any man offend not in word, the same is a perfect man, and able also to bridle the whole body. Behold, we put bits in the horses mouths, that they may obey us, and we turn about their whole body. Behold also the ships, which though they be so great, and are driven of fierce winds; yet are they turned about with a very small helm, whithersoever the governor listeth. Even so the tongue is a little member, and boasteth great things. Behold, how great a matter, a little fire kindleth, and the tongue is a fire, a world of iniquity; so is the tongue amongst our members; that it defileth the whole body, and setteth on fire the course of nature, and it is set on fire of hell. For every kind of beasts, and of birds, and of serpents, and of things in the sea is tamed and hath been tamed of mankind; but the tongue can no man tame. It is an unruly evil, full of deadly poison. Therewith bless we God, even the father, and therewith curse we men, which are made after the similitude of God. Out of the same mouth proceedeth blessing and cursing. My brethren these things ought not so to be." James iii. 2—10, verses.

The improper use of the tongue has, unquestionably, occasioned more animosity amongst mankind, than all their other malignant passions. For masons, therefore, who, in a peculiar manner, profess to be votaries of peace and good will amongst men, this assertion of the apostle, that "the tongue is an unruly member," ought ever to be kept in remembrance and the evil guarded against, as far as may be practicable.

To the preceding, I shall add the words of another wise man, as recorded in the book of Ecclesiasticus, Chap. xxvii. from the 16th to the 22nd verse. "Whoso discovereth secrets, loses his credit, and shall never find a friend to his mind. Love thy friend, and be faithful unto him; but if thou bewrayest his secrets, follow no more after him; for as a man has destroyed his enemy, so hast thou lost the love of thy neighbour. As one that letteth a bird go out of his hand, so hast thou let thy neighbour go, and shalt not get him again. Follow after him no more; for he is too far off. He is as a roe escaped out of the snare. As for a wound, it may be bound up, and after reviling, there may be reconciliation; but he that bewrayeth secrets is, without hope."

I could, if I deemed it expedient, mention other proofs from sacred as well as profane writ, respecting the duty, the expediency, and the propriety of secrecy; but as I presume, that I have already advanced enough upon this subject, I shall forbear. I shall, however, venture this assertion, that the greatest honour, justice, truth, and fidelity, have been always found among those, who could keep their own secrets as well as those of others. Hence it follows, that if secrecy and silence be duly considered, they will be found essentially necessary to qualify a man for any business of importance, and if this be granted, I feel confident, it will not be disputed, that free-masons have been superior to all others in taciturnity. Bad members have been expelled; but they keep the secrets, with which they have been entrusted. Neither the power of gold, which has often betrayed kings and princes, and sometimes overthrown states, empires and kingdoms, nor the most cruel punishment, which the most malignant tyrants could devise, ever extorted the secrets of free-masonry, even from the weakest member of the fraternity.

From what has been said, I presume it will not be disputed, that the happiness of mankind was the cause of so grand an institution as that of free-masonry, no art, having, as yet, been so extensively useful. It not only tends to protect its members from external injury; but to polish their morals, and to detain them within the bounds of true religion and virtue; for such are the doctrines inculcated by this sublime art, that if those, who have the honour of being members, would only live up to them, every man of the least reflection, would lead such a life as becomes a being possessed of a precious and immortal soul. And although very few brethren may arrive at the sublimity and beautiful contrivance of Hiram Abiff, yet the very enemies of masonry must own, that it is the most renowned society, that ever was, is now, or perhaps ever will be in the world.

The following poetic description of the royal art will shew its great use to mankind.

“ Hail mighty art ! Hail gracious gift of heaven !
 To aid mankind by our Creator given.
 'Twas you alone, which gave the ark its form,
 And saved the faithful from th' impending storm ;
 When sinful cowans grovelled in the tide,
 The mason's ark triumphantly did ride
 O'er mighty waves, nor cared they where it steered,
 Till floods abated and dry land appeared.
 On Ararat, on ceasing of the storm,
 There stood their ark. They opened lodge in form.
 There the good mason of his own accord,
 An altar built, to serve the heavenly Lord,
 Returned thanks and offered sacrifice,
 Which pleased God, and to himself he cries,
 “ For sake of man, I'll curse the ground no more,
 Nor smite the living, as I've done before.
 While earth remains, this blessing, I'll bestow,
 A proper time, when you your seed may sow ;
 The harvest time to bless the labouring swain
 With fruitful crops for all his care and pain.
 Night, days, and seasons shall surround this ball,
 Nor shall they cease until the end of all ;
 And to confirm my promise unto thee,
 Amidst the clouds, my bow a witness be,
 An heavenly arch, to shew God saved the lives
 Of masons four, likewise their happy wives.”
 Such are the blessings of each time and season,
 Which God has promised to the master mason,
 By which we see, that mighty things were done,
 By this great art, since first the world begun.
 What mortal living, whether far or near,
 Around the globe, within the heavenly sphere,
 Can name an art so much by God approved
 As masonry in David, whom he loved ?
 On mount Moriah, God appeared to man,

And gave the prince the holy temple's plan,
 Which charge his son did afterwards fulfil,
 By aid of Tyre and Hiram's wonderous skill:
 This is the art, which others doth excel,
 And pleased the Lord of Hosts to come and dwell
 Amongst the men, who did the temple frame,
 To worship God and reverence his name.
 By mason's art, aspiring domes appear,
 Where God is worshipped still in truth and fear.
 By masons' art, the greedy miser's breast,
 Though iron bound much closer than his chest,
 Compassion feels, and values not his store,
 But freely gives what he would not before.
 By mason's art the busy tongue doth fall,
 And silence reigns upon the master's call.
 By mason's art, the wings of loose desire
 Are clipt so short, that they can soar no higher.
 The vicious mind, the ancient craft restrains
 From bents immodest, lawless, and profane.
 By mason's art, the puny foppish ass
 (Mankind's disgrace and sport of every lass,)
 Soon quits his folly, and when wiser grown,
 Looks on himself as one before unknown.
 By mason's art, the proud ensigns of state,
 Ambition's nursery and her lofty seat,
 Are deemed but useless, idle, foolish toys,
 Free-masons seek for more substantial joys.
 While here on earth they're blest with an abode,
 They must prepare for e'er to live with God.
 They ought to live in harmony and love,
 And thus ascend to the grand lodge above."

CHAPTER VIII.

Of the conduct of Masons.

SECTION I.—OF BEHAVIOUR IN THE LODGE.

It need scarcely be observed, that a society of men united, as a band of brothers; by the strongest ties, ought to be kind and courteous to each other in all places, where they meet. This, however, is more essentially requisite when they assemble in a lodge, in which brotherly love ought always, in a peculiar manner, to prevail; and where no disputes about nations, families, religion, or politics, can, on any account whatever, be introduced.

While the lodge is open for work, every member should attend to the business under consideration, and not interrupt any brother while speaking. He must, likewise, hold no private conversation, nor be concerned with any committee without permission from the presiding officer. If he rightly understand the rules of the craft, he will always treat the master and wardens, with that respect which is due to those, whom the fraternity have appointed to preside at their meetings, and will, likewise pay due respect to all his fellows. The Christian advice of St. Paul to the Thesalonians, will be found peculiarly applicable to free-masons. “ We beseech you, breth- ren," says he, "to know them, which labour among you and are over you in the Lord, and admonish you, and to esteem them very highly in love, for their work's sake, and be at peace among yourselves." 2. Thes. v. 12, 13.

Every brother, deemed guilty of a fault, is bound to submit to the decision of the lodge; unless he appeal to the grand lodge.

SECTION 2.—OF BEHAVIOUR AFTER THE LODGE IS CLOSED.

After the business is finished, the brethren may remain till a seasonable hour, to enjoy themselves in innocent mirth, enlivened by songs, anecdotes, &c. but no brother is to be compelled, or even importuned, to stay longer than he thinks proper; for it ought to be remembered, that in the hours both of labour and festivity, a mason should always be FREE. On such occasions, no excess ought to take place, and the conversation, though social and easy, ought to be innocent; nor should a single expression be uttered, which even borders on obscenity or immorality. In fine, it ought to be deeply imprinted on the mind of every brother, that though after the adjournment of the lodge, masons are as other men; yet if they should be guilty of improper behaviour, the blame might be cast on the craft, at large, by the ignorant and invidious part of the community.

SECTION 3.—OF THE BEHAVIOUR OF MASONS IN THEIR PRIVATE CHARACTERS.

When a number of masons happen to meet together in any other place than in a lodge, and no stranger being amongst them, it may be well, if they would attend to the following friendly hints.

1. You are to salute each other in the same courteous manner as you have been accustomed to do in the lodge, and are freely to communicate hints of knowledge, but without disclosing secrets, unless to those, of whose honour and taciturnity, you have had ample proof.

2. Before those who are not masons, you should be cautious in your words, carriage, and behaviour, so that the most penetrating stranger may not be able to discover any part of our secrets. The ensnaring questions of those, who are desirous of prying into the mysteries of the craft, must be answered with prudence, or the discourse wisely diverted to some other purpose.

3. When at home, your conduct and deportment should be unexceptionable, so that, if possible, even the breath of calumny may not be able to raise a whisper against you. Masons should be good husbands, good parents, good sons, and good neighbours; and they should be correct and punctual in the performance of all the private duties of life. You should not stay too long from home;

should carefully avoid all excess, and act in such a manner, that men may see your good works and glorify your father, which is in heaven. Matthew v. 16. And every good mason should recollect that "the path of the just is as the shining light, that shineth more and more unto the perfect day." Prov. iv. 18.

4. If a stranger apply in the character of a mason, you are to examine him with caution, agreeably to the rules of the craft, so that you may not be imposed on by a pretender; but if you discover him to be a true and faithful brother, it is your duty to treat him with respect, and, if he be in want, to relieve him as far as may be in your power, without injuring yourself or family; or to direct him to some source from whence he may obtain relief. You must likewise, give him employment, if he want it, and it be in your power, and if not, you must, if possible, recommend him to some one, from whom he can obtain it.

5. You are expressly charged to avoid slander and backbiting, and never to traduce the character of a brother; but support it, as far as may be in your power, consistent with propriety. You are, as a mason, to avoid malice and unjust resentment, "to put of anger, wrath, blasphemy, and filthy communications." Colossians iii. 8. "to lay aside all guile and hypocrisies and envies." 1 Peter ii. 1. for "where envying and strife is, there shall be contention and every evil work." James iii. 16. To this it may be added, that "wrath killeth the fool- ish man, and envy slayeth the silly one." Job v. 2. Of such folly and wickedness, it is therefore, to be wished, that free-masons, as they value their own reputation and happiness, and the prosperity of the ancient and honourable society, to which they belong, will never be guilty.

6. You are placed like a city set on a hill. The eyes of the world are upon you, and strong prejudices are entertained against the institution, which can only be obviated by the correct deportment of its members.

7. If you suppose, that a brother has done you an injury, which you cannot settle between yourselves, you ought, in the first place, to apply to your own or his lodge for redress; and if you be not satisfied with their decision, application may be made to the grand lodge, and no suit ought to be instituted, unless such reference has been first made, and the determination found to be such as to render a compliance therewith impracticable. The parties may then appeal to the laws of their country; but they are to avoid all rancour and animosity, and neither say nor do any thing, which may prevent the continuance or renewal of that brotherly love and friendship, which are the glory and cement of this ancient fraternity. Masons, however, in respect to law suits, ought to observe the directions, which the apostle Paul gives to Christians; "Now, therefore," says he, "there is utterly a fault amongst you; because ye go to law one with another. Why do ye not rather take wrong? Why do ye not rather suffer yourselves to be defrauded?" 1 Corinthians vi. 7. He had previously told them, that all differences between brethren, should be referred to the arbitration of some members of the church, and expresses his most pointed disapprobation of "brother going to law with brother." Masons ought to be actuated by sentiments of the same kind, and, in case of any unfortunate difference, should act in the manner here recommended.

By conducting yourselves agreeably to the preceding directions, you will evince to the world, the benign influence of masonry, as all wise, true, and faithful brethren have done from the creation of the world, when God said, "Let there be light, and there was light;" and as all who shall follow us, and would be thought worthy of the name of masons will do, till architecture shall be dissolved in the general conflagration.

These charges and such others as may be given to you in a way, that cannot be written, you are conscientiously to observe; and be assured, that the more closely you adhere to them, the more happy will be your situation in this world, and the better your prospect of entering into that temple not made with hands, eternal in the heavens, whose builder and maker is God.

Amen. So mote it be.

CHAPTER IX.

Charges to new admitted brethren in the different degrees.

SECTION I.—TO AN ENTERED APPRENTICE.

Brother,

I congratulate you on your admission as a member, into this our ancient and honourable fraternity; ancient, as having subsisted from time immemorial; and honourable, as tending, in every respect to render a man so, who will act in conformity with its precepts. No institution was ever raised on better principles, or on a more solid foundation; nor were ever more excellent rules and useful maxims laid down than those, which are inculcated on all persons initiated into our mysteries.

Monarchs, in all ages, have been patrons of this art, and many of them have presided as grand masters, deeming it no derogation from their dignities, to put themselves on a level with their brethren, to extend their privileges and to patronize their assemblies.

On this side of the Atlantic, which may, in some respects, be called a new world, the immortal Washington, the illustrious Franklin, the brave general Warren, and many more of our most celebrated revolutionary characters, too tedious to be mentioned, were of this institution most distinguished members; and I have the pleasure to add, that many of the most eminent statesmen, who have been since called to guide the destinies of this rising empire, have not only been members of our society; but have delighted in exerting themselves to the utmost, to promote its honour and best interests.

The world's great architect is our supreme master, and the unerring rule, which he has given to every one, I mean the light of conscience, is the rule, by which we ought invariably to work.

There are three great duties, which masons ought not only to perform themselves; but, likewise, to inculcate, as far as possible, on their friends and acquaintances, viz. their duty to God, their neighbours, and themselves.

1. To God. In never mentioning his sacred name, unless with that reverential awe, which is due from a creature to his creator, whom we ought to adore, as the source of all happiness, not only in the present; but also, in that future world, which is beyond death and the grave; whom we ought always to have in view, as our chief good, and whose blessing we ought to implore, on all our laudable undertakings.

2. To your neighbours, you are to act upon the square, i. e. you are to follow the golden rule of doing to others, as, in similar circumstances you would wish that they should do to you.

3. As it respects yourself, you are to avoid intemperance and excess of every kind, whereby you may be rendered incapable of following your work or prosecuting the duties of your profession, or by which you may be led into behaviour unbecoming of our order. You are likewise to labour diligently in your vocation; for "he, who doth not work, should not eat," and "he, who is slothful in work, is brother to him, who is a great waster."

In the state you are to be a quiet and peaceable citizen. You are never to countenance treason or rebellion; but to shew yourself, on every occasion, disposed to act in conformity to the laws, constitution and government of the country, in which you live, and to induce others, as far as may be in your power, to act in the same manner.

In your intercourse with the world, you are to be particularly careful, to act in such a manner, as that you may avoid censure or reproach.

Let not interest, favour, or partiality, to any individual bias your integrity, or influence you to be guilty of a dishonourable action, of which you might afterwards have cause to repent; but let your whole conduct be such as will ensure you the testimony of a good conscience, towards God and towards man.

Be eminent for the practice of benevolence and charity, which may with great propriety be considered as the distinguishing characteristic of this venerable institution.

You are carefully to study the principles, and endeavour to excel in all the virtues of the craft

A punctual attendance, at every meeting of the lodge is required. Your improvement and your happiness will, thereby, be greatly promoted. Yet masonry must not interfere with your necessary employments; for these are, on no account, to be neglected. At your leisure, it is expected, that you will apply to such brethren as are skilled in the mystic art, whom you will find to be fully as ready to give, as you to receive instruction.

You are to endeavour to improve in useful knowledge. Here no reflection is intended upon you. But it may be safely asserted, that the wisest of us have much to learn, and that when a man thinks himself perfect in any art, science, or profession, all hopes of his improvement may, in general, be considered as vain. But of you, my brother, we entertain the most sanguine expectations, and doubt not that by your industry, perseverance, and good conduct, you will become an useful member of this lodge, and an honour to the craft.

If, in the circle of your acquaintance, you should find one, who may be desirous of being received into our society, you are by no means to recommend him, unless you be convinced, that he will conform to our rules, so that the honour and reputation of our institution may not be tarnished, and that the world, at large, may be satisfied with respect to its benign influence.

Finally, You are to keep sacred and inviolable the mysteries of the order, as these are to distinguish you from the rest of the community, and mark your consequence amongst the fraternity.

Brother, we bid you a sincere welcome to all the pleasures of this affectionate and happy fraternity.

SECTION 2.—A CHARGE TO A FELLOW CRAFT.

Brother,

As you are now advanced to the second degree of masonry, viz. that of a fellow craft, we congratulate you on your preferment.

Your past good behaviour and regular deportment, have merited the additional honours which we have now conferred upon you; and, in this new character, it is not only expected that you will conform to the principles of masonry, but that you will steadily persevere in the practice of every virtue.

The study of the liberal arts, that valuable branch of education, which tends so effectually to polish and adorn the mind, is earnestly recommended to your consideration, especially the science of geometry, which is justly deemed the basis of our art. Geometry or masonry, originally synonymous terms, is of a divine and moral nature, and enriched with the most useful knowledge ; for, while it proves the wonderful properties of nature, it demonstrates the more important doctrines of morality.

As the solemnity of our ceremonies requires a corresponding solemnity on your part, you are to be particularly attentive to your behaviour in all our meetings, to preserve the ancient usages and customs of the fraternity sacred and inviolable, and to induce others, by your example, to hold them in due veneration.

You are to support and maintain our laws and regulations, and be ever ready to assist in seeing them duly executed. You are neither to palliate nor aggravate the offences of your brethren, but are to judge with candour, admonish with friendship, and reprehend with justice.

As a craftsman in our private assemblies, you may offer your sentiments on such subjects as may be agreeable to the tenets of masonry. By the exertion of this privilege, you may improve your rational and intellectual powers, qualify yourself to become an useful member of society, and as every brother should do, endeavour to excel in every thing which is good and honourable.

You are duly to honour, and practically to obey, all signs and summonses, inasmuch as they consist with our professed principles. You are to supply the wants, and relieve the necessities of your brethren and fellows, to the utmost of your power, without injuring yourself and family ; and you are, on no account whatever, to wrong them or see them wronged, but you are to apprize them of approaching danger, and consider their interest as inseparable from your own.*

Such is the nature of your engagements as a fellow craft, and to these duties you are now bound by the most sacred ties.

SECTION 3.—A CHARGE AT THE INITIATION OF A MASTER FREE-MASON.

Brother,

Your zeal for instruction, the progress you have made in the mysteries of masonry, and your steadfast conformity to our useful regulations, have pointed you out as a proper object for that peculiar mark of our esteem and favour.

Duty, honour and gratitude, will now bind you to be faithful to your trust, and to support the dignity of your character on all occasions. Exemplary conduct on your part, will convince the world, that merit is the only title to our privileges, and that on you, our favours have been deservedly bestowed.

To preserve unsullied the reputation of the fraternity, ought to be your constant study ; and, for this purpose, it is incumbent on you to give the necessary instruction to unexperienced brethren, respecting the manner in which they ought to conduct themselves. To their superiors, you are to recommend them to be obedient, to their equals to be courteous and affable, and to their inferiors to be kind and condescending. You are zealously to inculcate universal benevolence, and by the regularity of your own conduct, to afford the best example for the conduct of others. You are carefully to preserve our ancient landmarks, and shall, on no account whatever, suffer the least deviation whatever from our established usages and customs. Masonry, as it now stands, and has stood from time immemorial, has been found to be a most excellent institution, and stands in no need of improvement. Any attempt, therefore, to introduce the least innovation will be reprobated, not by one, but by the whole of the fraternity.

Your honour and reputation are concerned in supporting, with dignity, the character which you now bear. Be true and faithful, and imitate the example of that great man so celebrated in masonry, whom you have this evening represented. Thus, you will render yourself worthy of the honour which we have conferred, and worthy of that confidence which we are persuaded we have very properly reposed in you.

MAY BE DELIVERED AT THE INITIATION OF A CLERGYMAN.

You, reverend brother, are a preacher of that religion, which inculcates benevolence and unbounded charity. You will, therefore, be fond of the order, and zealous for the interest of free-masonry, which, in the strongest manner, recommends the same charity, and like that religion, which you so worthily endeavour to prevail upon your hearers to adopt, encourages every moral and social virtue. It also recommends, by arguments the most cogent, peace and good will among men; so that he, who is warmed by the spirit of Christianity, cannot, when he is acquainted with its doctrines, be a foe to FREE-MASONRY.

Here virtue, the grand object in view, shines refulgent on the mind, enlivens the heart, and warms us with sympathy and affection to all mankind, particularly to our brethren of the same society.

Though every man, who carefully listens to the dictates of reason, may arrive at a clear perception of the beauty and necessity of virtue, both public and private; yet it must appear to you as a full recommendation of this institution, that its members have these pursuits constantly in view, as the main objects of their association. And these, my reverend brother, are the laudable bonds, which from time immemorial, unite us in one indissoluble fraternity.

SECTION 5.—AN ADDITIONAL ADDRESS, WHICH MAY BE USED AT THE INITIATION OF A FOREIGNER.

You, brother, the native and subject of another nation, by entering into our order, have connected yourself by sacred and affectionate ties, with many thousands of masons in this and other countries. Ever recollect, that the order, into which you have just entered, bids you always to look upon the world as one great republic, of which every nation is a family, and every particular person a child. When, therefore, you return to your own country, take care that your friendship be not confined to the narrow circle of national connections or particular religions, but let it be universal, and extend to every branch of the human race. At the same time, you are to remember, that besides the common ties of humanity, you have now entered into obligations, which engage you to kind and friendly actions to your brother masons, of whatever station, religion, or country they may be.

SECTION VI.—AN ADDRESS, WHICH MAY BE USED AT THE INITIATION OF A SOLDIER.

Our institution breathes a general spirit of philanthropy, and its benefits, considered in a social point of view, are very extensive. It unites all mankind. In every nation it opens an asylum to virtue in distress, and grants hospitality to the necessitous and unfortunate. The sublime principles of universal goodness and love to all mankind, which constitute its basis, cannot be lost in national distinctions, prejudices, or animosities. It has abated the rage of contest, and substituted the milder emotions of humanity.

Should your country demand your services in foreign wars, and captivity should be your portion, it is probable that you will find affectionate brethren, where others would only find enemies.

In whatever nation you travel, when you meet a mason, you will find a brother and a friend, who will do all in his power to serve you, and who will cheerfully relieve you to the utmost of his abilities, if you should be involved in poverty or distress.

Other charges suitable to extraordinary occasions might be introduced. The judicious master, however, will find no difficulty in annexing to the usual charges, such additions as, in his opinion, the nature of the case may require.

CHAPTER X.

Of Masonic Virtues.

SECTION 1.—OF BROTHERLY LOVE.

By the exercise of this virtue, we are taught to regard the whole human species as one family, whether high or low, rich or poor, who, as children of the same parent, are to aid, support, and protect each other.

Relief is the next tenet of the profession, which, indeed, may be considered as a most important part of what we have denominated brotherly love. To relieve the distressed, is a duty incumbent on all men, but particularly on masons, who are linked together by ties, which may be considered as indissoluble. To soothe calamity, alleviate misfortune, sympathise with the miserable, and, as far as may be practicable, to restore peace to the troubled mind, ought ever to be objects of primary importance.

SECTION 2.—OF TRUTH.

We are taught, in the sacred scriptures, that truth is a peculiar attribute of the deity, that those, "who worship him, must worship him in spirit and in truth" John iv. 24. and that "every one should tell truth to his neighbour." To be good and true is one of the first lessons, which we are taught in masonry. This, therefore, is a theme, which we ought to contemplate, and, by its dictates, endeavour to regulate our conduct ; for we are told, that God "desireth truth in the inward parts." Psalm li. 6.

The arts of deceit and cunning continually grow weaker and less effectual to those, who practise them, while, on the other hand, integrity gains strength by use, and the more and the longer any man accustoms himself to it, the greater service it will do him ; as it will establish his reputation, and thus encourage others to repose in him the greatest trust and confidence, which may be certainly considered as being of unspeakable advantage in the common affairs of life.

Truth is, always, consistent with itself, and needs nothing to help it out. It is near at hand ; it sits upon our lips, and is ready to drop out before we are aware ; but a lie is troublesome and sets a man's invention constantly on the rack to preserve even a tolerable appearance of consistency. A lie is like a building upon a false foundation, which continually stands in need of props to preserve it, and proves, at last, more chargeable than the erection of a substantial building would have been, on a true and solid foundation. Truth is firm. It is irresistible, and those who practise it, in all their transactions, can never be put to shame. "The wicked flee, when no man pursueth ; but the righteous are bold as a tion." Let us, therefore, not only in regard to truth but, likewise, every other moral duty, always maintain the testimony of a good conscience, and we have nought to fear.

Influenced by these principles, in our intercourse with each other, and with the world at large, hypocrisy and deceit should be unknown among us; and the heart and tongue should unite in promoting our mutual welfare, and in rejoicing in each other's prosperity.

Truth has ever been a distinguishing prerequisite among free-masons; and he who deviates from it, in a single instance, is acting in direct opposition to one of the first precepts of the order.

" The man, whose mind on virtue bent,
Pursues some greatly good intent,
With undiverted aim,
Serene, beholds the angry crowd,
Nor can their clamours, fierce and loud,
His stubborn honour tame."

BLACKLOCK.

SECTION 3.—OF TEMPERANCE.

Temperance may be defined to be the restraint of passion. That it is a quality essential to happiness, reason and observation bear ample testimony. So highly, indeed, has it always been esteemed, that it ranks as a virtue in every system of morality; for as uncontrouled passions lead us to wickedness and turbulence, so temperance leads us to virtue and tranquillity. Even in worldly affairs, it is found to be a guide to health, wealth, and prosperity ; for it forbids us to indulge in enervating luxuries, and inculcates economy in all the concerns of life.

Its best recommendation is to be found in its effects ; and no one, who is convinced, that temperance leads to bliss, can hesitate in adhering to it through life. It is essentially necessary that this virtue should be observed by all, who wish to live with comfort ; but, for reasons, which will naturally occur to every free-mason, it is peculiarly proper, that it should be observed by them.

The dire effects of intemperance are thus most pathetically described by an ingenious poet ; if I remember right, the late Rt. Rev. Dr. Porteous, bishop of London.

———War its thousands slays ;
 Peace its ten thousands. In th' embattled plain,
 Though death exults and claps his raven wings,
 Yet reigns he not ev'n there so absolute,
 So merciless, as in yon frantic scenes
 Of midnight revel, and tumultuous mirth ;
 Where in th' intoxicating draught, concealed,
 Or couched beneath the glance of lawless love ;
 He snares the simple youth, who nought suspecting,
 Means to be blest—but finds himself undone.
 Down the smooth stream of life the stripping darts,
 Gay as the morn ; bright glows the vernal sky ;
 Hope swells his sails, and passion steers his course ;
 Safe glides his little bark along the shore,
 Where virtue takes her stand ; but if too far
 He launches forth beyond discretion's mark,
 Sudden the tempest scowls, the surges roar,
 Blot his fair day, and plunge him in the deep.
 O sad, but sure mischance !

SECTION 4.—OF FORTITUDE.

Fortitude is that noble and steady purpose of the mind, which enables us to resist temptation, and encounter danger with spirit and resolution. This virtue is equally distant from rashness and cowardice ; and he, who is possessed of it, is seldom shaken and never overthrown by the storms, which surround him. A man of an upright spirit disdains the malice of fortune. He doth not suffer his happiness to depend on her smiles ; and, therefore, with her frowns he shall not be dismayed. As a rock on the sea shore, he standeth firm, and the dashing of the waves disturbeth him not. He raiseth his head like a tower on a hill, and the arrows of misfortune drop at his feet. In the instant of danger, the courage of his heart sustains him, and the steadiness of his mind beareth him out.

SECTION 5.—OF PRUDENCE.

Prudence teacheth us to regulate our lives and actions agreeably to the dictates of reason, and to determine rightly on the mode of conduct, which we ought to pursue in respect to our present as well as our future happiness. This is a virtue, which ought to be the peculiar characteristic of every mason ; but, on this subject it cannot be necessary to enlarge.

Without suspicion of being betrayed in our words, or ensnared in the openness of our dealings, our mirth in the lodge is undisguised. It is governed by PRUDENCE, tempered with LOVE, and clothed in CHARITY. Thus it standeth void of offence. No malicious mind warps innocent expressions to wicked constructions, or interprets unmeaning jests into sarcasms or satires; but as every sentiment flows full of benevolence, so every ear in the lodge is attuned to the strain, in harmonious concord, and tastes the pleasures of festivity so pure, that they bear our reflections in the morning without remorse.

Peace, regularity, and decorum, are in the lodge, indispensable duties, nor are they the offspring of control or of authority, but a voluntary service, which every man brings to the lodge.

There are seasons, indeed, in which authority may be exercised with propriety. Man is frail, and the most prudent may sometimes deviate from the rules of strict propriety. It was a maxim of the ancient philosophers, that "to err was human, to forgive divine." In the lodge, therefore, there should be a constant governor, who should restrain those improprieties, which may creep in amongst us; but all this must be done with PRUDENCE.

SECTION 7.—OF JUSTICE.

Justice consists in an exact and scrupulous regard to the rights of others, with a deliberate purpose to preserve them, upon all occasions, sacred and inviolable; and from this fair and equitable temper, performing every necessary act of justice, which relates to their persons and properties, being just to their merits and just to their very infirmities, by making all the allowance in their favour, which their circumstances require, and a good-natured and equitable construction of particular cases will admit of, being true to our friendships, to our promises and contracts, just in our traffic, just in our demands, and just, by observing a due moderation, even in our resentments.

We should do justice, deal fairly, bear good will, practice beneficence, succour the afflicted, and relieve the necessitous, esteem the worthy, reverence God and our parents, and obey the constituted authorities.

Justice is the foundation of an everlasting fame, and there can be nothing commendable without it.

Be ever steady to your word, yet be not ashamed to confess your errors, nor slow to indemnify those, who may have suffered by your mistake.

Philip, king of Macedon, in a fit of intoxication, happened to determine a cause unjustly, to the prejudice of a poor widow.

She had no sooner heard his decree, than she cried out, "I appeal to Philip when sober." The king struck with the singularity of what she had said, recovered his senses, gave a new hearing to the cause, and finding that he had been mistaken, ordered her to be paid out of his own purse, double the sum, which she was to have lost. This is an example worthy of imitation.

Justice is a glorious and communicative virtue, ordained for the common good of mankind, without any regard to itself. This keeps men from tormenting one another, and it is this, which preserves tranquillity in the world. It is the bond of human society, a kind of tacit agreement and expression of nature, without which there is not any thing, which we do, that can deserve commendation. The just man wrongs nobody, but contents himself with his own, does good to all, and speaks well of all, gives every man his due, and is not any man's hindrance. He is just for justice sake, and asks no other reward, than that which he receives in the comfort of being just.

——— If Justice now requires,
With vice it should go ill, with virtue well,
Yet so it fares with neither in this life ;
It then remains, that in some other life,
Will this distinction certainly be made,
And then the scene, which with regard to man
Now rude appears, nor worthy of a God
All-wise and gracious, shall itself disclose ;
And every thing be seen, the cloud removed,

In its true colour and its proper place.
 If this you doubt, say by what rule you prove
 That there's a God at all, who governs things
 With perfect harmony and nicest skill!
 What, does he every thing besides direct
 With just propriety, and only fail
 In this, the chiefest part? Not so; a time
 Will come, (enquire not how,) this is enough,
 'Tis plain; a time there will be after death,
 When God as fit, the just from the unjust,
 The guiltless from the guilty shall select,
 And give to every man his due reward.

SECTION 5.—OF CHARITY.

CHARITY! O how lovely is the theme! It is the brightest gem, which can adorn the profession of a free-mason. It is the best test and the surest proof of our being possessed of that religion, which cometh from above. Charity is the chief characteristic of a virtuous and liberal mind. It combines most good qualities, which can adorn the heart, and excludes the vices and feelings, which are inseparable from an unkind disposition.

The relief of want and wretchedness, although in itself meritorious, forms only a small part of this excellent attribute. Neither envy, pride, anger, or falsehood, can exist in the same breast with charity; but forbearance, humility, and truth, are its necessary constituents. Every character, which is admired for the practice of those virtues, makes individuals amiable, and teacheth the value and excellence of this transcendent quality. The good Samaritan is the subject of universal praise, and the benevolence which he displayed towards the victim of cruelty, is enhanced by the unfeeling indifference of the Priest and Levite. Luke x. 29. But the forgiving temper, the generous affection, the rigid fidelity, and patient sufferings of Joseph, exhibit charity in the extensive and affecting views, which every good man is anxious to attain.

Blessed and happy is he, who is successful in the amiable ambition of inheriting that quality, which, to use the beautiful language of PRIOR,

“ Opens in each heart a little heaven.”

He is like the meandering stream, tranquil in itself, and diffusing health and fertility whithersoever it floweth. Benevolence, attended by heaven-born charity, is an honour to all, who are possessed of it. The charitable man envieth not his neighbour, nor does he listen with patience to a tale, which has been repeated to his injury. Revenge or malice hath no place in his breast. He forgiveth the injuries of men, and endeavoureth to blot them from his recollection. Let us, therefore, remember that we are Christians and masons, and as such, let us ever be ready to listen to him, who craveth our assistance, and extend readily, a liberal hand to him, who is in want. Thus shall an heartfelt satisfaction reward our labour, and the blessing of the Most High will await us. "Above all things have fervent charity amongst yourselves ; for charity shall cover the multitude of sins." 1 Peter iv. 8.

Charity is, sometimes, taken only for giving alms ; and sometimes for having a favourable opinion of our neighbours ; but the proper interpretation of the word is LOVE, and St. Paul has fixed its meaning, and clearly shewn its effects in his first epistle to the Corinthians, chap. xiii. of which chapter my readers will be pleased with the following beautiful paraphrase.

" Did sweeter sounds adorn my flowing tongue,
 Than ever man pronounced, or angels sung ;
 Had I all knowledge, human and divine,
 Which thought can reach, or science can define ;
 And had I power to give that knowledge birth,
 In all the speeches of the babbling earth ;
 Did SHADRACH'S zeal my glowing breast inspire,
 To weary tortures, and rejoice in fire ;
 Or had I faith like that, which ISRAEL saw,
 When MOSES gave them miracles and law ;
 Yet gracious CHARITY, indulgent guest,
 Were not thy power exerted in my breast,
 Those speeches would send up unheeded prayer,
 That scorn of life would be but wild despair.
 A cymbal's sound were better than my voice ;
 My faith were form, my eloquence were noise.
 CHARITY, decent, modest, easy, kind,
 Softens the high, and rears the abject mind ;
 Knows with just reins and gentle hand to guide,
 Betwixt vile shame and arbitrary pride.
 Not soon provoked, she easily forgives,
 Soft peace she brings, wherever she arrives ;
 She builds our quiet, as she forms our lives ;

Lays the rough paths of peevish nature even,
 And opens in each heart a little HEAVEN.
 Each other gift, which God on man bestows,
 Its proper bounds, and due reflection knows ;
 To one fixed purpose dedicates its power,
 And finishing its act, exists no more.
 Thus in obedience to what HEAVEN decrees,
 Knowledge shall fail, and prophecy shall cease.
 But lasting CHARITY'S more ample sway.
 Nor bound by time, nor subject to decay ;
 In happy triumph shall for ever live,
 And endless good diffuse, and endless praise receive.
 As thro' the artist's intervening glass
 Our eye observes the distant planets pass,
 A little we discover, but allow,
 That more remains unseen than art can shew ;
 So whilst our mind to knowledge would improve,
 (Its feeble eye intent on things above)
 High as we may, we lift our reason up,
 By FAITH directed and confirmed by HOPE,
 Yet we are able only to survey
 Dawnings of beams and promises of day.
 HEAVEN'S fuller effluence mocks our dazzled sight ;
 Too great its swiftness, and too strong its light.
 But soon the mediate clouds shall be dispelled ;
 The sun shall soon be face to face beheld,
 In all his robes, with all his glory on,
 Seated sublime on his meridian throne.
 Then constant FAITH and holy HOPE shall die,
 One lost in certainty, and one in joy ;
 Whilst thou more happy power, fair CHARITY,
 Triumphant sister, greatest of the three,
 Thy office and thy nature still the same,
 Lasting thy lamp, and unconsumed thy flame,
 Shalt still survive—————
 Shalt stand before the host of HEAVEN confest,
 For ever blessing and for ever blest."

I shall conclude this section by a few observations, which ought deeply to be impressed on the mind of every free-mason. "The objects of true CHARITY," says Mr. Hutchinson, in his SPIRIT OF MASONRY, "are MERIT and VIRTUE in distress;—persons, who are incapable of extricating themselves from misfortunes, which have overtaken them in old age; industrious men from inevitable accidents hurled into ruin; widows left survivors of their husbands, by whose labours they subsisted; and orphans in tender years left helpless and exposed to the world."

These are the true objects of charity, and a genuine mason will always endeavour to obviate the difficulties of such persons, without putting them to the painful mortification of soliciting aid.

CHAPTER XI.

Masonic Precepts.

(Extracted from the German.*)

I.

ADORE the Most High, by whose order every thing which exists had its origin, and by whose unremitting operations, every thing is preserved.

Be thankful that thou wert born in a country, which is blessed with the glorious light of the gospel. Confess this divine religion every where, and let none of its duties be neglected.

Let all thy actions be distinguished by enlightened piety without bigotry or fanaticism.

II.

Always remember that man is the master piece of the creation; because God created him after his own image, and animated him with his breath. Genesis i. 27, and ii. 7.

III.

Thou owest thy first homage to the Deity, and the second to the authority of civil society.

* These precepts appeared at length in the Free-Mason's Magazine for November and December, 1794. The whole would be too tedious in a work of this kind. It is believed, however, that the following abridgement will be satisfactory to masonic readers, and may prove useful to them as well as others.

Honour the fathers of the state ; love thy country ; be religiously scrupulous in fulfilling all the duties of a good citizen ; consider that they are become peculiarly sacred by thy voluntary masonic vow ; and that the violation of them, which, in one, not under such obligations, would be weakness, would in thee be hypocrisy and criminality.

IV.

Love affectionately all those who, as offsprings of the same progenitor, have like thee the same form, the same wants, and an immortal soul.

The mother country of a mason is the world ; all that concerns mankind is contained within the circle of his compass

Honour the order of Free-masons, and come to our lodges to do homage to the sacred rights of humanity.

V.

God suffers men to partake of unlimited and eternal happiness.

Strive to resemble this divine original, by making all mankind as happy as thou canst ; nothing good can be imagined, which ought not to be an object of thy activity.

Let effectual and universal benevolence be the plumb line of thy actions.

Anticipate the cries of the miserable, or, at least, do not remain insensible to them.

Detest avarice and ostentation. Do not look for the reward of virtue in the plaudits of the multitude, but in the innermost recesses of thy own heart ; and if thou canst not make as many happy, as thou desirest, reflect on the sacred tie of benevolence, which unites us, and exert thyself to the utmost in promoting our labour of love.

VI.

Be affable and kind to all, and endeavour to kindle virtue in every heart.

Rejoice at thy neighbours prosperity, and never embitter it with envy.

Forgive thy enemy, and if thou wouldst revenge thyself on him—do it by benevolence. If thine enemy be hungry, give him bread to eat ; and if he be thirsty give him water to drink. For thou shalt heap coals of fire upon his head, and the Lord shall reward thee. Proverbs xxv. 21 and 22.

By acting in this manner thou wilt fulfil one of the most exalted commands of religion, and act agreeably to the dignity of thy nature.

Often unveil and examine thy heart, so that thou mayest discover its most secret dispositions ; for the knowledge of one's self is the sum of all Masonic precepts.

Thy soul is the rough ashlar, which thou must labour to polish. Thou canst not do homage more worthy of the Supreme Being, than when thou offerest up to him, regular desires and inclinations, and restrainest thy passions.

Beware of the dismal consequences of pride. It was this, which first caused the first degradation of man.

To compare thyself with those, who are possessed of inferior faculties would be a dangerous flattery of thyself: rather let a virtuous emulation animate thee, when thou perceivest superior talents. Let thy tongue be a faithful interpreter of thy heart. A mason, who abandons candour, and hides himself behind the mask of dissimulation and deceit, is unworthy to sit amongst us; as he would sow upon our peaceful soil the seed of distrust and dissimulation, and soon become the scourge of our societies.

Study eagerly the meaning of our emblems; for under their veil, very important and satisfactory truths are concealed.

Remember, that of all the sciences, on whose extensive field the industry of men gather useful illustrations, none will afford thy heart heavenly satisfaction except that, which instructeth thee in thy relation to God and the Creation.

VIII.

Every free-mason, without any consideration to what religious denomination he belongs, where he is born, or what rank he holds, is thy brother, and has a claim upon thee for assistance, when he stands in need of it.

Equality was the first lot of nature; but was soon swerved from. The mason restores the original rights of mankind; he never sacrifices to vulgar prejudices. The sacred plumb line amongst us puts all ranks on a level. It is, nevertheless, our duty to respect the distinctions of rank in life, which society has either introduced or permitted:

Beware of introducing amongst us improper distinctions, by which equality would suffer; and be not ashamed before the world of a poor, but honest man, whom thou hast acknowledged a short time before as a brother. Is he in danger, hasten to his assistance. Is he distressed, open thy purse to him and, rejoice in having found an opportunity of making so benign an use of thy money. Is he blinded by error, endeavour by friendly representations to reclaim him.

Hast thou animosity against thy brother, hasten to a reconciliation. Call in an unprejudiced mediator, and invite him to brotherly mediation; but never step over our threshold, unless thy heart be clear from hatred and malice. In vain wouldst thou attempt to supplicate the presence of the Eternal in our lodges, if they were not ornamented by the virtues of our brethren, and consecrated by their unanimity.

IX.

Fulfil, with religious strictness, all those moral duties, which the order prescribes. Follow its wise precepts, and honour those, who by the confidence of the brethren, have been made the guardians of the laws and the interpreters of the universal union.

Thy will must be subordinate, in the Order, to the will of the law and of thy superiors ; for thou wouldst not be a true brother, if thou wouldst resist this subordination, so very requisite, in every respectable society.

In particular we have a law, the inviolable compliance with which thou hast promised before the face of heaven. It is the strictest silence concerning our rites, ceremonies, signs, and the form of our alliance. Do not imagine that this obligation is less sacred than that, which thou takest before the civil magistrate. Indeed, from many circumstances, which must naturally occur to thy mind, nothing can be more binding.

Thou wert free, when it was administered to thee ; but it is not now at thy option to violate it : the Eternal, whom thou hast invoked to witness it, hath ratified it.

Conclusion.

Should these precepts, which the order communicates to thee, with a view to make the path to truth and happiness smooth, imprint themselves deep into thy heart, open to the impressions of virtue ; shouldst thou make those excellent precepts thy own, which distinguish each step of thy masonic career, and render them the plumb line of all thy actions, how great would be our joy ! Then wouldst thou answer thy exalted destination ; thou wouldst remember that resemblance to God, which was the share of man in his state of innocence, which is the object of religion, and the principal end of masonic initiation: thou wouldst once more be the favourite of heaven; the abundance of its blessings would be poured over thee, and acquiring the title of a wise, free and happy man, thou wouldst run thy terrestrial career, as the BENEFACTOR of mankind, and the PATTERN of thy brethren.

CHAPTER XII.

Of God and Religion.

It is incumbent on every one, who from the love of knowledge or curiosity is desirous of becoming a free-mason, to know, that as his foundation or great corner-stone, he is to believe in the great first cause, and to pay that worship and adoration, which is due to him as THE SUPREME ARCHITECT AND GOVERNOR OF THE UNIVERSE. A mason ought also, as a true Noachida,* to pay strict attention to the moral law; and if he understand the rules of the craft, it will be impossible for him to be an atheist, an irreligious libertine, or to act in opposition to that inward light, which his merciful Creator has been pleased to give him, I mean his conscience.

* A son of Noah; the first name for a free-mason.

He ought, likewise, to shun the dreadful errors of bigotry and superstition; errors, which at different periods, have occasioned the most serious calamities to the human species, and should make a due use of his own reason, according to that "liberty, wherewith a mason is made free," for though in ancient times, masons were charged to comply with the established religion of the country, in which they sojourned, it has, for many years been deemed adviseable, to give the brethren, no other injunction on this subject, than that they should be good men and true; that in their deportment they should be actuated by the principles of honour and integrity, and adhere to those essential points of religion, in which all good men are agreed, leaving every brother to his own judgment, in regard to particular forms.

The lodge consists of men of the most opposite religious persuasions, who, if they were suffered to discuss their different opinions, instead of harmony and brotherly love, discord and hatred would prevail. Wisely, therefore, was it calculated to conciliate true friendship amongst persons of all religions, by adopting the broad and natural principle of viewing all men as brethren, created by one Almighty parent, and placed in this sublunary world for the mutual aid and protection of each other.

The solemnity of our rites, however, which as they embrace all that part of religion, from which morality is derived, necessarily calls our attention to the Great Architect of the Universe, the Creator of us all. In contemplation of his wisdom, goodness and power, the Mahometan under one name, the Jew and Christian under another, can join in adoration, all agreeing in the grand essential and universal principle of religion, the recognition and worship of a Deity, in whose hands are the issues of life and death, though differing in some minute points peculiar to each. Shall, then, this temporary and happy accommodation of sentiment to good purposes, stamp us as Deists? God forbid! When the lodge is closed, each departs untainted by the other, the Jew to his synagogue, the Mahometan to his mosque, and the Christian to his church, as fully impressed as ever with the divine origin and rectitude of his own faith, from the principles of which, he has never, for one moment, deviated, either in thought or deed.

Our order contemplates the whole human species, divested of all religious or political distinctions. It should be free to the worthy and accepted of all nations and languages. In this institution, party spirit is unknown. The Prince Regent of England, the King of Prussia, their Excellencies Daniel D. Tompkins, and De Witt Clinton, a Roman prelate and a Protestant reformer, a Wellington and a Jackson at the head of their armies, and an humble quaker, who holds in detestation the sword and bayonet, and indeed, the lowest peasant in the universe, may, provided they are free-masons, unite together as a band of brothers. Masonry, as has been before observed, excludes all distinction of religion, as well as of rank. The Episcopalian, the Presbyterian, the Methodist, the Baptist, the Catholic, the Hebrew, and the Turk, may here sit together in peace and harmony.

Thus masonry is the centre of unity, and the happy means of conciliating the affections of many upright and intelligent men, who might otherwise have remained at a distance from each other.

CHAPTER XIII.

The Grand Architect's Six Periods.

WHEN we contemplate that the formation of the world was the work of that Omnipotent Being who created the beautiful system of the universe, well may we exclaim with wonder and astonishment, "O Lord, our Lord, how excellent is thy name in all the earth, who hast set thy glory above the heavens. When we consider the heavens, the work of thy fingers, the moon and the stars, which thou hast ordained, What is man, that thou art mindful of him, and the son of man, that thou visitest him?" Psalm viii.

Before he was pleased to command this vast world into existence, the elements and the materials of the creation, lay blended without form or distinction. "Darkness was upon the face of the deep, and the Spirit of God moved upon the face of the waters." when the great Jehovah, as an example to man, that things of moment ought to be done with deliberation, was pleased to take SIX DAYS in periodically bringing it from chaos to perfection.

The Supreme Architect shewed the first instance of his power, by commanding light; and seeing that it was good, he gave it his sacred approbation, and distinguished it by a new name, by calling the light day, and giving the appellation of night to darkness; and in order to keep new framed matter within just limits, the SECOND period was employed in laying the firmament, which was to keep the water above the clouds, and those below them asunder, and God called the firmament heaven. On the THIRD period, he commanded those waters to be restrained within due bounds, on the retreat of which dry land appeared, which he called "earth, and the gathering together of the waters, called he seas." The earth being yet irregular and destitute of any kind of cultivation, God spake the word, and immediately it was covered with a most beautiful carpet of flowers, plants, trees, herbs, and shrubs of all sorts, in full growth and perfection.

On the FOURTH period, these two grand and bright luminaries, the sun and moon were created ; the former to rule the day, and the latter to rule the night, and to be for signs and for seasons, and for days and years. Beside these two great lights, the omnipotent Architect was pleased to bespangle the ætherial concave with innumerable stars, so that man, whom he intended to create, might employ himself, at suitable periods in contemplating his supereminent wisdom, and justly praising his divine majesty and glory.

On the FIFTH period, he created the birds, which fly in the air, so that man might please both his eyes and ears, in being delighted with some for their beautiful plumage and uncommon instinct, and others for their melodious notes. He also commanded the waters to bring forth a variety of fish for our use ; and in order to impress on our minds a reverential awe of his omnipotence, he created great whales and every living creature, that moveth, which the waters brought forth abundantly.

On the SIXTH period, he created the beasts of the field, and reptiles to crawl upon the earth. Here we may perceive the most evident manifestation of his goodness, wisdom and mercy in all his proceedings. He produced what effect he pleased without the help of natural causes ; thus he gave light to the world before he created the sun and moon, and made the earth fruitful and to bring forth plants without the influence of the heavenly bodies. He did not create the beasts of the field, until he had provided for them sufficient herbage ; nor did he make man till he had prepared every thing requisite for his comfort and pleasure. To dignify the work of his hand, he made him after his own image, and gave him "dominion over the fish of the sea, and the fowl of the air, and over the cattle, and over all the earth, and over every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth." Man came into the world with greater splendour than any of the creatures, which preceded him, as they were brought into existence with no other ceremony than a Dixit Deus, i. e. God said, but in the creation of man, there was a consultation of the adorable Trinity, saying, "Let us make man," and he was accordingly formed out of the dust of the earth, into his nostrils was breathed the breath of life, and he became a living soul. In this one creature, was centered every thing, which was excellent in creation. He was made a little lower than the angels, and crowned with glory and honour. To him, likewise, dominion was given over all other creatures, and he was formed after the image of GOD, so that he might the better be enabled to adore him, who had been graciously pleased to bestow on him, the faculty of speech, the use of reason, and a soul, which may enjoy the most extatic bliss through all the ages of a never ending eternity.

The Almighty, then, as his last and best gift to man created woman. "Grace was in all her steps, heaven in her eye, in every gesture, dignity and love." "O woman! lovely woman, men would be brutes without thee."

The heavens and the earth, and all their hosts, having thus been created in the space of six days, God, on the seventh day rested from all his work, and sanctified it as a holy sabbath to himself, thereby intimating, in the clearest manner, that man should work with industry for six days, for the maintenance of himself and family, and set apart the seventh as a day of rest from his labour, and that he should devote the same to the praise and glory of God his creator.

May the six days work of the creation, emulate every free-mason, to industry during the week, and may they always be enabled to spend the SEVENTH in such a manner, as may be most conducive to their present as well as their future happiness.

CHAPTER XIV.

Of the Seven Liberal Arts and Sciences.

These are Grammar, Rhetoric, Logic, Arithmetic, Geometry, Music and Astronomy.

The Grammar rules instruct the tongue and pen,
Rhetoric teaches eloquence to men,

By Logic, we are taught to reason well,
Music has charms beyond our powers to tell.
 The use of numbers, numberless we find,
Geometry gave measure to mankind,
 The Heavenly system elevates the mind. }
 All these and many secrets more,
 Were by free-masons taught in days of yore.

But of these liberal arts and sciences, we shall treat more at large, as they are entitled to the attention of every one, who is desirous of arriving at distinction in our fraternity.

SECTION 1.—OF GRAMMAR.

Grammar is the art of writing and speaking any particular language correctly. If any one expect that he can acquire a facility of expressing himself with accuracy, without a knowledge of this science, whatever he may think of his own acquirements, men of learning with whom he have may occasion to converse or correspond, will soon perceive his deficiency. This science merits our most serious attention, as it may, in fact, be considered as the gate, or avenue, which leads to all the others.

SECTION 2.—OF RHETORIC.

Rhetoric instructs us how to select words with taste, and to arrange them with a view to please, to engage, and to persuade. It is commonly defined the art of speaking well, that is to say, of speaking in such a manner as to make ourselves heard, and to persuade those who hear us.

SECTION 3.—OF LOGIC.

Logic is that art, which teacheth us to reason in a systematic manner, and by a regular train of argument, to proceed from one step to another, till we arrive at the full conviction of the proposition intended to be proved.

SECTION 4.—OF ARITHMETIC.

Arithmetic adjusts the greatest sums by a cypher and the nine digits. It adds, multiplies, and divides numbers in every manner that can be required. It arranges and combines them in all sorts of regular series and progressions, both finite and infinite. It not only discovers, with a wonderful facility, the properties and sums of finite ones from general principles, without a tedious consideration of each particular number, but by determining the sums of such progressions, as can never come to an end, sets bounds to infinity itself. With no less surprising invention, it effects apparent impossibilities, and when no real quantity can be found, which will answer the question proposed, it finds a just solution by imaginary, yet intelligible quantities, or by a series of quantities, which continually approximates to the truth; till at last all error vanisheth.

SECTION 5.—OF GEOMETRY.

Geometry determines lines to which we cannot apply any measure. It traces out lines, which, continually approaching nearer to one another, can never coincide, however far they are extended. It has discovered the most ingenious, surprising, and just mensuration of surfaces and solid bodies. It traces accurately, the paths of bodies, which are thrown into the air, though projected at random in any direction whatever. On this science architecture is founded. It teacheth the general how to arrange his army, the engineer how to lay out his ground for fortifications and encampments, the geographer and mariner how to delineate the extent, situation and boundaries of different countries, seas and oceans, and the astronomer his observations on the course of the heavenly bodies. On geometry, likewise, the various branches of the mathematics entirely depend.

The moral advantages of geometry, however, are, what in a more peculiar manner, deserve our attention. Free-masonry is a speculative science, issuing from that important practical science, geometry; the laws of which were observed in the creation, and are still manifest in the regulation of the world.

And as the grand lodge of the universe, this stupendous globe excels, in magnificence of design, and stability of foundation, demonstrative of its builder; so, contemplating this mighty scale of perfection and wonder, does our society proceed, conceiving the importance of order and harmony, and catching the spirit of beneficence, from what is observed of wisdom, regularity, and mercy, in the world of nature.

Nature, indeed, surpasses art in the boldness, sublimity, and immensity of her works. Man can only contemplate, in awful amazement, her mightier operations; but in her smaller designs, the ingenuity of man advances, with admirable success, from study to imitation; as is demonstrated in the wonderful variety and beauty of the works of art, the imitative arts particularly, and chiefly those of painting and sculpture.

But of all the works of human art, masonry is certainly the first, as most useful, and, therefore, approaching nearer in effect to the beneficent purposes of Providence. Architecture has been justly deemed the favourite child of civilization; it is the science, which has ever discriminated by its progress, refinement from rudeness; by its presence or absence, savage from social life. In countries, where operative masonry never laid the line, nor spread the compass; where architecture never planned the dome, nor projected the column, all other evidences of elegant improvement are sought for in vain ; all is darkness and barbarism.

A survey of the works of nature, first led men to imitate as far as their limited abilities would admit, the great plan of the Divine Architect. This gave rise to societies, which led to improvements in every useful art. But of all the societies which have contributed to the propagation of knowledge, the society of free-masons has been, and ever will be, the most conspicuous. The ravages of time have destroyed the most stupendous fabrics, which have been erected by the ingenuity and labour of man ; but the masonic art still continues to flourish in all its ancient splendour.

SECTION 6.—OF MUSIC.

Music is a science, which teaches how sound, under certain measures of time and tune, may be produced, and so ordered and disposed, as that either in consonance or succession or both, it may raise various sensations from the height of rapture, even to that of melancholy or distraction.

This art from the time of JUBAL, the father of such as handle the harp and organ, down to the immortal ORPHEUS, and from thence to that of the no less immortal HANDEL, has ever been held in the highest esteem ; and most deservedly, since it is productive not only of the highest entertainment, but also of the most beneficial effects. Its principal use is to celebrate the praises of the Deity, with that musical sacrifice and adoration, which has claimed a place in the customs of different nations ; for the Greeks and Romans of the prophane, as well as the Jews and Christians of the sacred world, did as unanimously agree in this, as they disagreed in all other parts of their economy. Nor can we doubt, that the songs of Zion or other sublime poetry, softened in the most moving strains of music, have the power of swelling the heart with rapturous thanksgiving, or of humbling or exalting the soul to the most fervent pitch of devotion.

On the effects of music, Shakspeare thus expresses himself,

The man that hath no music in himself,
 Nor is not moved with concord of sweet sounds,
 Is fit for treasons, villanies and spoil :
 The motions of his spirit are dull as night,
 And his affections dark as Erebus.
 Let no such man be trusted.

SECTION 7.—OF ASTRONOMY.

Astronomy leads our thoughts to planets, which are of equal, or probably of a superior magnitude, and of a similar substance to that of our earth. It considers these mighty globes, as projected by an Almighty Hand, and confined in their different orbits by that same gravity which causeth all bodies, which are projected, to descend to the earth.

By means of imaginary points, lines, and circles, it divides the Heavens into its distinct regions. It assigns to the fixed stars their settled habitations, marks out the wide circuits of the planets and comets, and calculates their periods, oppositions and conjunctions, with astonishing exactness. While we are engaged in the study of this science, it cannot fail to give us the most exalted ideas of the wisdom, the beneficence, and the greatness of the Almighty Creator, and will induce us to exclaim in the language of the Psalmist, "O Lord! our Lord, how excellent is thy name, in all the earth! who hast set thy glory above the heavens. When I consider the heavens, the work of thy fingers, the moon and the stars which thou hast ordained, what is man that thou art mindful of him? and the son of man, that thou visitest him?"

CHAPTER XV.

Of the Five Noble Orders in Architecture.

By order in architecture, is meant a system of all the members, proportions and ornaments of columns and pilasters; or it is a regular arrangement of the projecting parts of a building, which united with those of a column form a beautiful, perfect and complete whole.

From the first formation of society, order in architecture may be traced; for when the rigour of the seasons compelled men to contrive some shelter from the inclemency of the weather, we read that they first planted trees on end, and then laid others across to support a covering. The bands, which connected these trees at top and bottom, are said to have given rise to the idea of the base and capital of pillars, and from this simple hint originally proceeded the more improved art of architecture.

The five orders are these, the Tuscan, the Doric, the Ionic, the Corinthian, and the Composite. The Doric, the Ionic, and the Corinthian, are called Grecian, the other two are called Roman orders.

SECTION I.—OF THE TUSCAN ORDER.

The Tuscan Order is characterised by its plain and robust appearance, and is, therefore, used only in works, where strength and plainness are wanted. It has been used with great effect and elegance, in that durable monument of ancient grandeur, the Trajan column at Rome. Indeed, general consent has established its proportions for such purposes beyond all others. It was invented in Tuscany, from whence it derives its name. Its column is seven diameters high, and its capital, base and entablature, have but few mouldings.

SECTION 2.—OF THE DORIC ORDER.

The Doric is the most agreeable to nature, and most ancient. It was invented by the Dorians, a people of Greece, and has seldom any ornament on its base or capital, except mouldings, though the frieze is distinguished by triglyphs and metopes, and triglyphs compose the ornament of the frieze. Its column is eight diameters high. The composition of this pillar is both grand and noble, and is, therefore, principally used in warlike structures, where strength, and a noble, but rough simplicity is required.

SECTION 3.—OF THE IONIC ORDER.

The Ionic partakes of more delicacy than either of the former, and, therefore, as well as on account of its origin, is called Feminine, and not improperly supposed to have a matronic appearance. The first idea of its invention was given by the Ionians, a people of Greece. Its column is nine diameters high; its capital is adorned with volutes, and its cornice has dentils or simple modillions; and history informs us, that the famous temple of Diana at Ephesus, was of this order.

SECTION 4.—OF THE CORINTHIAN ORDER.

The Corinthian possesses more delicacy and ornament than any other order; the beauty and richness of the capital, and the delicacy of the pillar, render it the most suitable in those edifices, where magnificence and elegance are required. On this account, it is frequently used for the internal decoration of large state rooms, in which it has a chaste, though at the same time, superb appearance. It is deemed a master piece of art, and was invented at Corinth, by Calimachus; its column is ten diameters high; its capital is adorned with two rows of leaves, and eight volutes, which sustain the abacus. This order is principally used in stately and superb structures.

SECTION 5.—OF THE COMPOSITE ORDER.

The Composite or Compound Roman order, is derived from the other four orders, and we are indebted to the Romans for its invention, its column is ten diameters high, and is quartered round as the Tuscan and Doric. Its capital hath the volutes of the Ionic; the two rows of leaves of the Corinthian, and its cornice has dentils or simple modillions; this order is principally used in structures, where strength, elegance and beauty are displayed.

CHAPTER XVI.

Jeptha's decisive battle over the Ephraimites.

IT dates its origin, from the time that the Ephraimites crossed the river Jordan, in order that they might pick a quarrel with Jeptha the general of the Gileadites, because he had not called them out to partake of the rich spoils of the Ammonitish war, as their former leaders had done. The Ephraimites had long been a clamorous and turbulent people, but they, at length, came to extremities, threatening to destroy Jeptha and his house with fire. Jeptha tried all lenient means to pacify them; but finding his efforts unsuccessful, he gave them battle, and defeated them with great slaughter.

Jeptha, in order to secure himself from the like molestation in future, sent and guarded the passes of the river Jordan, which he knew they must cross in their return to their own country, with strict injunctions to his guards, that if any came that way and owned themselves Ephraimites, to kill them immediately; and if they said that they were not of that people, there was a test word put to them, which was to pronounce the word Shibboleth, which they, for want of an aspiration peculiar to their dialect, could not contrive to articulate; but called it Sibboleth, which small deviation discovered their country and cost them their lives, so that there fell, on that day, in the field of battle, and on the banks of the Jordan, as holy writ informs us, forty and two thousand Ephraimites, and that test word was afterwards used among the Gileadites to distinguish friend from foe:

CHAPTER XVII.

Of the Working Tools of Free-Masons.

THE uses to which these tools are appropriated by operative masons, are well known; but from the manner, in which they are used in every ancient and regular lodge by speculative masons, it will be found, that lessons can be drawn from them of a moral and spiritual nature.

If we trace our order by the science, which gave it birth, without recurring to the creation, or to man, the chief subject of creation, we shall find it of great antiquity; but without contending for an higher origin, we refer it with confidence to the building of Solomon's temple.

The general history of this memorable building is well known. Consummate wisdom delineated the plan, and the craftsmen achieved the grand design. Under this knowledge, we cannot be surprised, that science and morality went hand in hand. We are taught, that the workmen were divided into classes, under competent directors; that the implements of operative masonry, were made symbols of moral duties, and from the nature and interpretation of those symbols, handed by tradition down to us, we learn, that the purport of them was to form good men; to inspire a love of fidelity, truth, and justice, to promote friendship and social intercourse, and to associate men under the banners of virtue, friendship, and harmony.

It is from this high origin, that we derive our existence as a society; from this source, we draw our line, our rule, and our compass. It is from hence, that we adopt the measures of space, used as such by the operative mason, and apply it to ourselves as a measure of time, giving us an orderly routine of duties. The instrument, which is here alluded to, is the twenty-four inch guage. Alfred the Great divided his time into three portions, viz. eight hours for sleep, eight for business, and eight for study and devotion,* and it would be well, if all free-masons would endeavour, as far as may be practicable, to follow his example.

* An intelligent man. in a letter to his son, advises him, that for the advancement of his health, virtue and fortune, as well as the happiness of his connexions, he should distribute the twenty-four hours in the following manner. viz. six to sleep, two to exercise, eight to business, four to study, two to meals, and two to the pleasures of society.

The Square,

Which enables the artist to form and fashion his works, teaches us symbolically to form and fashion our lives. It is an emblem of morality, and instructs us in that most important moral obligation, to do as we would be done unto, and to live upon the square with all mankind.

The Level,

Used in art to make the building plain and even, morally teaches us the equality of our nature. It serves as a memorial, that we are equally subject to diseases, to accidents, to sorrows; that we are equally under the care and protection of the Great Parent of all; that we are equally doomed to die, to be levelled with the earth, to corrupt, and be forgotten. Art and accident vary our chances and situations, but taking life altogether, we shall find a more equal participation of good and evil, than is commonly imagined.

In the edifice of free-masonry, equality is the grand corner stone. Without it, we know, that friendships are ill cemented amongst men, the high and the low, the rich and the poor, cannot form an intimate bond of union of any considerable duration. Every brother, therefore, at his initiation enters the lodge, not in splendour of dress, but in a garb of humility, and he finds, when admitted, that the laws of the society have abolished, as far as good order will permit, all adventitious distinctions.

The Plumb Line.

So again the Plumb Line, an instrument of art, by the application of which, the building is raised in a perpendicular direction, is another of our symbols. It is figurative of a fair and honourable plan of life, and typically cautions us against any deviation from an upright conduct, in all our transactions, whether public or private.

The Compass,

Is a mathematical instrument used to describe circles. This we adopt as an emblem of prudence. It symbolically instructs us to put moral restraints on our appetites,* to circumscribe within rational bounds, our wants, our pleasures, our expenses—warning us, that by an opposite course, we shall endanger our quiet, our health, our reputation, and our liberty.

* “Men are qualified for civil liberty, in exact proportion to their disposition to put moral chains upon their appetites—in proportion as their love of justice is above their capacity. It is ordained in the eternal constitution of things, that men of intemperate minds cannot be free, their passions forge their fetters.” BURKE.

In every well governed lodge, there will be found, the Bible, the Square, and the Compass. The bible is dedicated to God, because it is his inestimable gift to man ; the square to the master, because it is the proper emblem of his office ; and the compass to the craft, because by a due attention to its use, they are taught to keep their passions within due bounds.

The ornamental parts of a lodge, are, the Mosaic Pavement, the Indented Tassel, and the Blazing Star. The Mosaic pavement represents the ground floor of Solomon's temple ; the indented tassel, that beautiful border which surrounded it ; and the blazing star in the centre, is in commemoration of the star, by which the Magi, or wise men of the east, were conducted to the place of our Saviour's nativity. The Mosaic pavement, is emblematical of human life, which is chequered with good and evil ; the border which surrounds it, the manifold blessings which surround us, and which we may obtain by a steadfast reliance on Divine Providence, which is represented by the blazing star in the centre.

Amongst the various symbols, which require the consideration of free-masons, the ashler is one of the most important. The rough ashler is the stone as taken from the quarry, in its rough and natural state ; the perfect ashler is the stone, when duly adjusted to the use, for which it is intended, by the hands of the workman. On the trestle board the master draws his designs.

By the rough ashler, we are reminded of our degenerate state by nature ; by the perfect ashler, we are taught to aspire to that state of perfection, which those, who act in conformity to the will of the Divine Architect, may hope to attain. The trestle board should put us in mind, that as the operative mason erects his temporal building, agreeably to such plan, as has been laid down by the master on his trestle board, so it should be our study to raise our spiritual building, agreeably to the regulations prescribed by the Supreme Architect in the book of life.

It may here be observed, that masons, previous to the introduction of Christianity, dedicated their lodges to KING SOLOMON ; but since that period, those, who believed in the Christian religion have dedicated their lodges to ST. JOHN THE BAPTIST, and ST. JOHN THE EVANGELIST, both of whom were eminent patrons of masonry. There has, from time immemorial, been represented in every well governed lodge, a point within a circle ; the point representing an individual brother ; the circle, the limits of his duty to God and man, beyond which he is never to encroach on any occasion. This circle is bordered by two parallel and perpendicular lines, emblematical of the two great patrons of Christianity, as well as masonry, St. John the Baptist, and St. John the Evangelist ; and upon the vertex rests the HOLY BR-

BLE, which, in the most plain and intelligible language, points out the whole duty of man to his Creator, to society, and to himself. In going round this circle, it will be impossible for a mason, who keeps himself thus circumscribed, to deviate materially from the rules of moral rectitude.

The working tools of a master mason, include all the implements of masonry: but more especially, the trowel.

The Trowel teaches, that nothing can be united without proper cement, and that the perfection of a building must depend on the manner in which the materials are joined together. Charity, the bond of perfection and social union, must connect, in one, separate interests, so that, like the radii of a circle, which extend from the centre, to every part of the circumference, the principle of universal benevolence, may be diffused to every member of the community. This is the spiritual use, which should be made of the trowel, by us free and accepted masons.*

* FREE, because no bondsman is permitted among us, and Accepted, seeing we have stood the test of several probationary degrees with applause; emulous to be found worthy of the illustrious badges, worn by those, who have held the first places there, where no atheist, no libertine, no reprobate person, known to be such, ought ever to gain admission. To guide us by the way, we have not one star, but many. Let the bible be the rule of our faith: may we square all our actions by the precepts of our blessed Saviour, and set a compass on our words, as relative to others, especially those whom we know to be brethren.

We are led by a reference to the uses, which operative masons make of this instrument, to the spiritual use of spreading the cement of brotherly love, by which we are united into one sacred band or society of brothers, amongst whom peace, harmony, love, and an unceasing desire to alleviate the distresses of each other, should ever be the distinguishing characteristics.

The Pot of Incense

Represents that purity of heart, without which, no one ought to think, that his prayers or praises can be acceptable to the Omnipotent Jehovah, and as this glows with fervent heat, so should our hearts glow with gratitude to the giver of all good, for the many mercies, which we daily receive from his bounty.

The Bee Hive

Is an emblem of industry, and should inculcate on our minds, this golden maxim, that we should never sit down with contentment, while any of our fellow creatures are in want, if

And as in our mundane system, the sun rules by day, and the moon by night, with an inferior lustre, so may we fulfil our appointed duties ; more particularly, by yielding a cheerful obedience, to those, whom the Architect of the universe hath set over us.

it be in our power to help them, without doing an injury to ourselves.

Love is certainly the noblest passion of our nature. Many are the principles of action within us; but the greatest of these is love. It has the full approbation of reason, and powerfully prompts us to promote the welfare of all mankind. The enemies of this divine virtue, are ambition, which aims to be highest,—Pride, which owns no obligation,—Envy, which can bear no superior,—Jealousy, which apprehends affronts and injuries, which were never intended,—Anger, which refuseth to deliberate,—Avarice, which withholds the portion which misery claims,—Selfishness, which knows no wants, but its own, and Sensual pleasure, which intoxicates the senses, and drowns the understanding. Against these, which are predominant features in our corrupt nature, let us always be on our guard. On the contrary, let us be persuaded to cultivate with assiduity, that meekness and lowliness of disposition, that sympathy and tenderness, that ardent and generous good will, which makes every brother's situation its own; and induces us to do unto all men, as we would, that they should do unto us. That we may have not only the inclination, but the ability to afford effectual relief, we should go to the ant, and learn of her to be industrious; we should consider the industry of the bees, and learn of them to be provident.

Upon this subject, it may be farther observed, that man, on his first entrance into existence, is by far, a more helpless creature than any of the brutal creation. Months, nay, years, must elapse, before he is capable of making any provision for himself, or any defence against the innumerable casualties, to which he is exposed. Mutual assistance becomes, therefore, an imperious duty.

To this, it may be added, that it has pleased the Almighty Architect to have formed men as dependent creatures; dependent on him, the God, who made them, and dependent on one another. He, therefore, who is not industrious in that station, in which Divine Providence has placed him; he who does not, according to the utmost of his abilities, exert his best endeavours to promote the good of his fellow citizens at large, particularly those of his brethren, may be justly considered as a drone in the hive, and can have no claim on the protection of the masonic fraternity.

The Book of Constitutions, guarded by the Tyler's Sword,

Should remind us, that we ought always to be guarded in our thoughts, words, actions; particularly, when in the presence of those, who are inimical to the principles of our institution, always paying due regard to the virtues of silence and circumspection, which are peculiarly incumbent on every member of the order.

The Sword, pointing to a Naked Heart,

Is intended to admonish us, that, though we may, for a time, escape the punishment due to our demerits, the sword of justice will, at last, overtake us, and that though our deviations from moral rectitude may not be observed by our fellow mortals, nothing can escape the

All-Seeing Eye

of the great Sovereign of the universe, to whom the secrets of every heart are open, and who will ultimately reward every one according to his works.

The Anchor and Ark.

The ark is an emblem of that divine ark, which wafts the virtuous, with safety, through all the storms and tempests, which may assail them during their voyage from time to eternity. The anchor is emblematical of the well grounded hope, which they, who faithfully perform their duty in this life, may entertain of being, at last, happily moored in a blessed we harbor, where the wicked cease from troubling, we weary are at rest.

bees, are emblem of human life. We are ac-Uined from our infancy to the vulgar

adage, "as runs this glass, man's life doth pass." The sand runs almost imperceptibly to the end of the hour; so passeth the life of man, till it terminates in death. When we look at the hour-glass, it ought to remind us of the following considerations, which are communicated to us in holy writ. "Man that is born of a woman, is of few days, and full of trouble. He cometh forth like a flower, and is cut down; he fleeth also as a shadow, and continueth not." Job xiv. 1. "We are but of yesterday, and know nothing; because our days upon earth are a shadow." Job viii. 9. "Though a sinner do evil an hundred times, and his days be prolonged, yet surely, I know that it shall be well with them, that fear God. But it shall not be well with the wicked, neither shall he prolong his days, which are as a shadow." Eccl. viii. 12. The good man, however, has this consolation. "I know, that my Redeemer liveth, and that he shall stand, at the latter day, upon the earth. And though, after my skin, worms shall destroy this body; yet in my flesh shall I see God. Whom I shall see for myself, and mine eyes shall behold for myself, and not another." Job xix. 25.

The Scythe

Is an emblem of time. Alas! how speedily will the consummation of all things commence! for, yet a little while, and the commissioned arch-angel will lift up his hand to heaven, and swear by him who liveth for ever and ever, that "there should be time no longer," Rev. x. 6. Then abused opportunities will never return, and new opportunities will never more be offered. Then should negligent mortals, wish ever so passionately, for a few hours,—a few moments only,—to be thrown back from the opening eternity, thousands of worlds, would not be able to procure the grant.

I shall conclude my observations upon this subject, with a few lines, from Mr. Ogilvie's celebrated poem, upon the day of judgment.

"Be dark, thou Sun, in one eternal night!
 And cease, thou Moon, to rule with paler light!
 Ye planets, drop from these dissolving skies,
 Rend all ye tombs, and all ye dead arise!
 Ye winds be still; ye tempests rave no more:
 And roll, thou deep, thy millions to the shore.
 Earth be dissolved, with all these worlds on high,
 And time be lost in vast eternity.

Now by creation's dread tremendous sire,
 Who sweeps these stars, as atoms in his ire;
 By Heaven's Omnipotent, unconquered King;
 By him, who rides the rapid whirlwind's wing;
 Who reigns supreme in his august abode,
 Forms or confounds, with one commanding nod;
 Who wraps in black'ning clouds his awful brow,
 Whose glance, like lightning, looks all nature thro';
 By him I swear." He paused and bowed the head,
 Then raised aloft his flaming hand, and said:
 "Attend ye saints, who in seraphic lays
 Exalt his name; but tremble while you praise;
 Ye hosts, that bow to your Almighty Lord;
 Hear, all his works th' irrevocable word!

Thy reign, O man, on earth thy days are o'er !
 I swear by him, that time shall be no more."
 He spoke ; (all nature groaned a loud reply)
 Then shook the sun and tore him from the sky."

To this I shall only add, the advice of an eminent moralist " Make good use of time, if you love eternity ; reflect that yesterday cannot be recalled ; to-morrow cannot be assured ; to day is only yours, which, if you procrastinate, you lose ; and if lost, it is lost for ever. One day present, is worth two to come."

The Three Steps

Which are usually depicted on the carpet in the lodge room, represent the three periods of human life, viz. youth, manhood, and old age. In the three first degrees of masonry, of which these steps are symbolical ; we ought to advance from one degree of virtue and knowledge to another, till at last, having arrived at as great a degree of perfection as falls to the lot of mortals in this life, we may die in the full assurance of attaining everlasting felicity, in that world which is beyond death and the grave, to which we are all hastening. From this emblem, we ought to study to act well our part, in which all the honour lies, and as an inducement to our perseverance, let us "mark the perfect man, and behold the upright ; for the end of that man is peace."—
 Psalm xxxvii. 37.

The Forty-Seventh Problem of Euclid.

The theorem is, that "in any right angled triangle, the square, which is described upon the side subtending the right angle, is equal to the squares described upon the sides, which contain the right angle." This was a discovery made by our illustrious friend and brother, the great PYTHAGORAS, who, as it has been already mentioned in a preceding chapter, travelled for knowledge into Egypt, &c. where he was initiated into different orders of priests, who, in those days, kept all their learning secret from the vulgar. Pythagoras also made every geometrical theorem a secret, and admitted only such to the knowledge of them, as had first undergone a five years' silence. On his inventing the aforesaid theorem, it is said, that in the joy of his heart, he exclaimed in the Greek language, Ευρηκα, I have found it; and afterwards sacrificed a hecatomb, or one hundred cattle, as an offering to the deity for having thus enlightened his mind. The reason why this problem is introduced into masonic lodges, is to teach the brethren, the value of the arts and sciences, and that, by patience and perseverance, they may, at last, be able to make some discoveries, which shall enable them to render a most important service to the community.

The Chisel and the Mallet are the working tools of the mark master mason.

The moral instruction, which is intended to be conveyed to us in the lodge by the chisel, is to afford us a demonstration of the advantages, which result from discipline and education. "A human soul without education, is like marble in the quarry, which shews none of its inherent beauties, until the skill of the polisher fetches out the colours, makes the surface shine, and discovers every ornamental cloud, spot and vein, that runs through the body of it. Education, after the same manner, when it works upon a noble mind, draws out to view, every latent virtue and perfection, which, without such helps, are never able to make their appearance." The mind, like the marble in the quarry, is in its original state, without any polish; but the effect of the chisel on the marble, is no less obvious, than education on the latent virtues of the mind, and draws them forth, in such a manner, as will greatly expand our knowledge, and thereby enable us more effectually to perform our duty to God, to ourselves, and to our fellow mortals.

The Mallet.

This instrument, as used by operative masons, needs no explanation. It, in a moral sense, teacheth us to subdue all irregular passions, and to treat every man on his proper level in society; so that, in every state, in which Providence may cast his lot, he may learn therewith to be contented. What the mallet is to the operative mason, enlightened reason is to the speculative. It curbs ambition; it depresses envy; it moderates anger, and it encourages every good and virtuous principle. Contentment with our respective stations, ought to be the characteristic of every virtuous man, particularly of those, who are initiated into the mysteries of our order. Indeed, a contented mind, is a continual feast, and, if in the present life, a man's happiness arises from the subduing of his desires, it will arise in the next, from the gratification of them. The contented man enjoys many blessings, to which, those of a different description are total strangers, and he may with propriety, exult in the language of a celebrated poet.

“ Let other's boast their useless wealth ;
 Have I not honesty and health,
 Which riches cannot give ?
 Let others to preferment soar,
 And changing liberty for power,
 In golden shackles live.

'Tis time at length I should be wise,
 'Tis time to seek substantial joys,
 Joys out of fortune's power.
 Wealth, honours, dignities and fame
 Are toys, the blind capricious dame
 Takes from us every hour.

Come, conscious virtue, fill my breast,
 And bring content, thy daughter, dress'd
 In ever smiling charms.

Let sacred friendship too attend,
A friendship worthy of a friend,
Such as a brother warms.

With these, I'll in my bosom make
A bulwark fortune cannot shake,
Tho' all her storms arise ;
Look down and pity gilded slaves,
Despise ambition's giddy knaves,
And wish the fools were wise."

OF SOLOMON'S TEMPLE.

Numerous are the traditions to shew, that the principles of our institution are coeval with the wants of men ; but the occurrences of the early ages are so involved in fable and obscurity, as to render it difficult to give credit to many things, which have been asserted on this subject. We, therefore, pass to that memorable era, when the wise king Solomon, at the head of an hundred and eighty three thousand three hundred craftsmen and labourers, was enabled by an admirable display of his wisdom and perseverance, not only to designate their respective merits and employments, but by a judicious enaction of by-laws, and an impartial appointment of officers to administer them, he established that undissembled love and friendship, by which this illustrious and truly numerous band of brothers, were, for a period of seven years, so happily distinguished. Here, every member was taught, "to keep a tongue of good report, maintain secrecy, and practice charity."

It appears from chronology, that the dedication of this splendid temple was a thousand and four years previous to the birth of Christ, and if the ceremonies and privileges of the fraternity, were originally confined to operative masons, and their associates in practical architecture, till that period, it is equally certain, that they were now communicated to the free-born and accepted; that they were patronised by the wise and learned, and were liberally extended to every good man and true.

The erection of this stupendous edifice, was attended with two circumstances, both of which are peculiarly interesting, 1st. Josephus the celebrated historian of the Jews, informs us, that although seven years were employed in building it, during the whole time it never rained in the day time; so that the workmen were never interrupted in their labours. 2d. That "the house, when it was in building, was built of stone made ready before it was brought thither, so that there was neither hammer, nor axe, nor any tool of iron heard in the house while it was in building." 1 Kings, vi. 7. This famous fabric was supported by one thousand four hundred and fifty-three columns, and two thousand nine hundred and six pilastres, all made of the finest Parian marble; and so wisely were the arrangements made by that mighty monarch, whom the Most High had endowed with more wisdom than any other person, that notwithstanding the immense multitude who were employed on the work, the utmost regularity prevailed, and every thing was conducted in such a manner, that none went away dissatisfied.

The Badge of a Mason.

It is well known to those, who have not been initiated into the secrets of our order, as well as to those who have, that every one, on his admission, is presented with a lamb-skin, or white apron.

The lamb has, in all ages, been considered as an emblem of innocence and of peace. The Lamb of God, who taketh away the sins of the world, will grant to those, who put their trust in him, his peace. He, therefore, who wears the lamb-skin as the badge of masonry, is thereby reminded of that purity of life and conversation, which it is absolutely necessary for those to observe, who expect to be admitted into the grand lodge above, where under the presidency of the Grand Master of Heaven and Earth, they will for ever enjoy those "pleasures, which eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things, which God hath prepared for them that love him." 1 Corinthians, ii. 9.

This lamb-skin, or white apron, the person initiated is told, is more ancient than the golden fleece, or Roman eagle, more honourable than the star and garter or any other, which could be conferred upon him then, or at any time thereafter by king, prince, potentate, or any other person, except he be a mason, and which every one ought to wear with equal honour to himself and to the fraternity.

From what has been said, it must appear obvious, that science and morality have, from time immemorial, gone hand in hand together; that at the building of Solomon's temple, the workmen were divided into classes or lodges under competent masters; that the implements of operative masonry were made symbols of moral duties; and from the nature and interpretation of those symbols, we learn, that their purport was to form good men, to inspire a love of fidelity, truth, and justice, to promote friendship and social manners, and to associate men under the banners of voluntary order and virtue.

Free-masonry deals in hieroglyphicks, symbols, and allegories, and to be qualified to reveal their meaning, a man must know more than a mere nominal mason. The full interpretation of them, like that of the mysteries of old, is in select hands; it has been committed only to those of tried fidelity. Others, if not deficient in intellect, yet wanting industry or inclination to explore the penetralia of the temple, are not qualified, if willing to betray it. Hence the secrecy, which has so long distinguished the fraternity.

Hence it appears, that the doctrine of free-masonry embraces all the natural, moral, and political obligations of society. It directs us to fulfil our duty to our God, our country, our neighbours, and ourselves. It inculcates reverence, resignation, and gratitude to Him, who made and preserves us; obedience to the laws of the land in which we live; courtesy and amity to our brethren; equity and compassion to all mankind. It teaches us, like the Christian religion, to pity and forgive our enemies; to love and reward our friends; to relieve the distressed, and cherish the neglected. Masonry is confined to no form of faith, nor sect of religion; and its charity, like its creed, is universal. So, likewise, as it rejects all bigotry in matters of faith, it nourishes no blind zeal on the subject of politics, nor affords any support to civil discord.

Private benevolence, in its extensive operation, becomes patriotism, which is, in fact, public benevolence; from liberality of thinking and acting towards individuals, it becomes propitious to general liberty;—but it is liberty void of licentiousness. The grand principles of our order are, those of peace, patience, and good will; they hold out no encouragement to faction or tumultuous broils, and as far as the welfare of the state depends, our wishes, as well as those of all good members of the community, must ever be for its prosperity and happiness. Under the auspices of masonry, we are taught to support the public tranquillity, by every honourable means which may be in our power. Love is our principle, and happiness our aim ; and every emblem, symbol, or hieroglyphick, which has ever been represented to us in the lodge, ought to remind us of our duties to God and man, and teach us, that the time is not far distant, when we must take our departure for that undiscovered country, from whose bourne, no traveller returns.

How careful, therefore, ought we to be, not to disappoint the wise design of this mysterious secrecy, nor pervert that, which is meant to keep us perpetually on our guard, into a source of fatal security ; for the day most assuredly will come, (whether sooner or later, is of little importance,) when we all must be numbered with those, who have been.

May we all, therefore, endeavour to live daily, as we shall fervently wish we had lived, when that awful moment shall overtake us, in which our souls shall be required of us. May we study to act in such a manner, that our practice may prove the best comment on the principles of our craft, and thereby teach the world, that charity and brotherly love, integrity of heart, and purity of manners, are not less the characteristics of masonry, than of religion. Then may we piously hope, that when a period, even still more awful than the hour of our dissolution shall arrive, when the last trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible ; when our scattered atoms shall be collected, and we shall all appear in the presence of the Lord God Omnipotent, "the High and Holy One, who inhabiteth eternity," that our transgressions will be mercifully forgiven, and that the GRAND ARCHITECT OF THE UNIVERSE will be graciously pleased to give us rest from all our labours, by an admission into the celestial fraternity of angels, and of the spirits of just men made perfect. Amen, so mote it be.

CHAPTER XVIII.

Of the Apparel and Jewels of Masons.

MASONS, as one of their first principles, profess INNOCENCE. They put on white apparel as an emblem of that character, which speaks purity of soul, and a determination on their part, that their demeanour through life shall be such, as to give no just cause of offence to their neighbours.

Whilst the white apron, with which we are clothed, indicates a disposition of INNOCENCE, and belies not the wearer's heart, let the ignorant deride. Superior to their ridicule and malice, we will enfold ourselves in the garb of integrity, and shielded by a self-approving conscience, stand unmoved against the persecution of all our opponents.

The raiment, which truly implies the innocence of the heart is, as has been before observed, a badge more honourable than ever was devised by kings; the Roman eagle, with all the orders of knighthood, are far inferior. They may be prostituted by the caprice of princes, but innocence is innate and cannot be adopted

To be a true mason, is to possess this principle; or the apparel which he wears is an infamy, and only points him out as an object of shame and contempt. That innocence should be the professed principle of a mason, occasions no astonishment, when we consider, that the discovery of the Deity leads us to the knowledge of those maxims, by which he may be well pleased. The very idea of a God, is succeeded by the belief, that he can approve of nothing which is evil; and when our predecessors first professed themselves servants of the Architect of the world, as an indispensable duty, they professed innocence, and put on white raiment as a type and characteristic of their conviction, and of their being devoted to his will.

Every degree of sin strikes the rational mind with some feelings of self-condemnation. Under such conviction, who could call upon or claim the presence of a Divinity, whose demonstration is good works? Hence, men are naturally led to conceive, that such a Divinity will only accept of works of righteousness. Zealous for the approbation of heaven, the first servants of God bound themselves to maxims of purity and virtue; and as MASONS, we, regarding the principles of those, who were the first worshippers of the true

God, should imitate their apparel, and assume the badge of innocence.

Our JEWELS or ornaments imply, that we should try our affections by justice, and our actions by truth, as the square tries the workmanship of the mechanic ; that we regard our moral state, whether it be opulent or indigent, as being of one nature in the beginning, and of one rank in its close. In sensations, passions and pleasures ; in infirmities, diseases and wants, all mankind are on a parallel. NATURE has given us no superiority ; nor can it be derived from any other source, except from WISDOM and VIRTUE. From such maxims, we make estimates of our brother, when his calamities call for our counsel or our aid. The works of CHARITY are from sympathetic feelings, and BENEVOLENCE acts upon the level. The emblem of these sentiments is another of the jewels of our society.

To walk uprightly before God and men, neither inclining to the right, nor to the left, is the duty of a MASON. He is neither to be an enthusiast, nor a persecutor in regard to religion ; nor is he to bend towards innovation or infidelity. In civil government, he is to be firm in his allegiance, yet steadfast in defence of our laws, liberties and constitution. In private life, he is to yield up every selfish propensity, and to incline neither to avarice, nor injustice ; to malice, nor revenge ; to envy, nor contempt with mankind ; but as the builder raises his column by the plane and perpendicular, so should every mason conduct himself towards the world.

To rule our affections by justice, and our actions by truth, is to wear a JEWEL, which would ornament the bosom of the greatest sovereign on earth. Human nature has her impulses from desires, which are often too inordinate; love blinds with prejudices, and resentment burns with fevers; contempt renders us incredulous, and covetousness deprives us of every generous and humane feeling. To steer the bark of life upon the sea of passion, without quitting the course of rectitude, is one of the highest excellencies, to which human nature can be brought.

Yet merely to act with justice and truth, is not all that man should attempt; for even that excellence would be selfishness; that duty would not be relative; but merely proper. It is only touching our own character, and doing nothing for our neighbour; for justice is an indispensable duty in each individual. We were not born for ourselves alone, to shape our course through life, in the tracks of tranquillity, and solely to study that, which should afford peace to the conscience at home. But men were made as mutual aids to each other; for no one, however opulent, can subsist without the assistance of his fellow creatures. Nature's wants are numerous. Our nakedness must be clothed, our hunger satisfied, our thirst allayed, our diseases remedied, &c. Where shall the proud man toil for sustenance, if he stand unaided by his neighbour. When we look through the varied scene of life, we see our fellow creatures attacked with innumerable calamities, and were we without compassion, we should exist without one of the finest feeling of the human heart. To love, is a movement in the soul of man, which yields him pleasure ; but to pity gives him heavenly sensations, and to relieve is divine. Thus CHARITY has her existence ; her rise is from the consciousness of our similarity in nature. We weigh the necessities of our suffering fellow creatures by our natural equality, by compassion, our sympathy, and our own abilities and dispense our gifts from affection. Pity and pain are sisters by sympathy.

To be an upright man, is to add still more to the mason's character ; to do justice, and to have charity are excellent steps in human life ; but to act uprightly, gives a superlative degree of excellence ; for we shall thus become examples in religious, in civil, and in moral conduct. It is not enough, that we are neither enthusiasts, nor persecutors ; that we neither bend towards innovation, nor infidelity ; nor is it enough, that we should be in the passive only ; but we should appear in the active character. We should be zealous observers and practisers of religious duties. In civil matters, we should submit to the laws of our country without murmuring, and endeavour, as far as may be in our power, that our constitution should remain pure and uncontaminated. In morality, it is required of us, not only to abstain from error by injuries, betraying or deceiving ; but that we should do good as far as may be practicable, in that station of life, in which kind Providence may have ordered our lot.

By such metes, let the mason be proved, and thus convey to the world, that his emblematical jewels are only ensigns of the inward man. He will thus stand approved before God and his fellow mortals, purchasing honour to his PROFESSION, and happiness to the PROFESSOR.

CHAPTER XIX.

A Description of Solomon's Temple.

THE first worshippers of God, in the nations of the East, represented the Deity, by figures of the SUN and MOON, from the influence of those heavenly bodies on the earth, professing, that the universe was the temple in which the divinity was, at all times, and in all places, present.

They adopted these with other symbols, as a cautious mode of explaining divine knowledge : but we perceive the danger arising from thence to religion ; for the eye of the ignorant, the bigot, and the enthusiast, cast up towards these objects, without the light of understanding, introduced the worship of images; and, at length, the worship of OSIRIS and ISIS, became the gods of the Egyptians, without conveying to their devotees, the least idea of their great archetype. Other nations, who had expressed the attributes of the Deity by outward objects, or who had introduced into their sacred places as ornament, or rather to assist the memory, ran into the same error, and idols multiplied in every direction.

Amongst the ancients, the worshippers of idols had at last, entirely lost the remembrance of the original, of whose attributes, these images were at first, merely symbols; and the second darkness in religion, was more tremendous than the first, as it was strengthened by custom, by bigotry and superstition.

Moses had acquired the knowledge of the Egyptians, and derived the doctrines of truth from the enlightened men of the East. He was also illuminated by Divine Grace, and taught the people of Israel the worship of the true God, without the enigmas of the idolatrous nations, which surrounded them.

The ruler of the Jews, perceiving how prone the minds of ignorant men were to be led aside, by show and ceremony; and that the eye being attracted by pomp and solemn rites, perverted the opinion, and led the heart astray; and being convinced, that the magnificent festivals, processions and ceremonials of the idolatrous nations, impressed the minds of mankind with an enthusiastic devotion, thought it expedient, for the service of the God of Israel, to institute holy offices, though in a less ostentatious mode, well judging, that the adoration of the Deity, must be established in the judgement and conviction of the heart of man, with which ignorance was ever waging war.

At an after period, SOLOMON built a temple for the service of God, and ordained its rites and ceremonies to be performed with a splendour, equal to the most extravagant pomp of the idolaters.

As this temple* received the second race of the servants of the true God, and as the craftsmen were here proved, in their work, it may not be improper to crave the attention of my readers to those circumstances, which are gathered from holy writ, and from historians, touching this structure, as an illustration of some of the most important secrets of masonry.

In the fifth chapter of the first book of Kings, we are told, that "Hiram, king of Tyre, sent his servants unto Solomon; and Solomon sent to Hiram, saying, Behold, I in-

* Ezekiel xlv. 2, 3, 4. "The east gate shall be shut; it shall not be opened, and no man shall enter in it; because the Lord the God of Israel hath entered in by it; therefore it shall be shut. It is for the prince: the prince shall sit in it, to eat bread before the Lord. Then he brought me by the way of the north gate, before the house."

tend to build an house unto the name of the Lord my God ; and Solomon raised a levy out of Israel, of thirty thousand men, and he had seventy thousand, who bore burthens, and eighty thousand hewers in the mountains ; besides three thousand and three hundred persons, who acted as overseers. In the fourth year after he had begun to prepare the materials, the foundation of the temple was laid, and in the eleventh year, it was completely finished, when Solomon sent for Hiram, from Tyre. He was a widow's son, of the tribe of Naphthali, and his father was a man of Tyre, a worker in brass ; and he cast two pillars of brass, with two chapiters, and these he set up in the porch of the temple. And he set up the right pillar, and called the name thereof JACHIN, and he set up the left pillar, and called it BOAZ.

In the second book of Chronicles, chapter ii. &c. we read, that he set three hundred and ten thousand men, to be bearers of burthens ; eighty thousand, to be hewers in the mountains, and three thousand six hundred to be overseers of the work. We are further informed, that Solomon sent to Hiram, king of Tyre, to send him a man skilled in working in gold, in silver, in brass, &c. And Hiram sent unto him a cunning man, endued with the understanding of Hiram his father. And he made the veil of the temple of blue, purple, crimson, and fine linen. And he made before the house two pillars, and called the

When this splendid structure was finished, "Solomon stood before the altar of the Lord, in the presence of all the congregation of Israel, and spread forth his hands and said, O Lord God of Israel, there is no God like thee in the heaven or in the earth. O Lord, my God, hearken unto the cry, and the prayer, which thy servant prayeth before thee; O Lord God, turn not away the face of thine anointed."

In the conducting of this stupendous edifice, we must admire the wisdom of this pious

* The raising of pillars and obelisks was a custom of the Eastern nations, and of Egypt in particular; the use of which was to record the extent of dominion subject to the Egyptian empire. &c. or in commemoration of memorable events. Diodorus tells us, that Sesostris, signalized his reign by the erection of two obelisks, which were cut with a design to acquaint posterity of the extent of his power, and the number of nations he had conquered, one of which was afterwards transported to Rome, and placed in the Campus Martius. The obelisk of Shannesses exceeded all, which had preceded it; Constantine and Constantus his son caused it to be moved to Rome, where it remained the noblest piece of Egyptian antiquity existing in the world. Solomon had followed this custom in erecting his pillars in the porch of the temple, which he designed should be a memorial to the Jews, as they entered the holy place, to warm their minds with confidence and faith, by the recollection of the promises made by the Lord, unto his father David, and which were repeated to him in a vision, in which the voice of God proclaimed, 1 Kings ix. 5. "I shall establish the throne of thy kingdom upon Israel for ever."

architect. He perceived the necessity of assigning to portions of his people, the particular labour, which they were to pursue, and gave them particular signs, and secret tokens, by which each rank should be distinguished, in order, that the whole might proceed with propriety, and without confusion. He, likewise, selected such religious men as were most skilful in geometry, and had been initiated and proved in the mystical learning of the ancient sages, and those he made overseers of the work. It is further to be observed, that the whole was conducted with so great a degree of reverence, that the noise of a tool or instrument of any kind, was not permitted to disturb the sacred silence on MOUNT MORIAH, sanctified by the presence of the Almighty, and by his miraculous works. Was it not then, reasonable to conceive, that no part of this structure was to be formed, unless by men of pure hands, and holy minds, who had enrolled themselves under the banner of true religion and virtue; and, as the sons of Aaron, were alone admitted to the performance of sacerdotal rites, so none but devotees were allowed to participate in this labour. On this stage, we see those religious persons, who had imbibed the truth, engaged as architects in this holy work. This, together with the construction of the tabernacle under Moses, are the first instances of our predecessors, being exhibited to the world as builders; for although it is certain, that the sages amongst the Hebrews, Egyptians, Persians, Chaldeans, Greeks, Romans, Druids, &c. understood geometry, and the rules of proportion and numbers, we have no evidence of their being the actual executors of any plan in architecture; and yet, without question, they were the projectors and superintendents of such works, in every age and nation.

Without such regulations as those which Solomon devised for the government of his workmen, and a superior wisdom overruling the whole, we should be at a loss to account for the finishing of that great work in the space of seven years and six months, when the two succeeding temples, though much inferior, employed infinitely more time; and when we have good authority to believe, that the temple of Diana at Ephesus, a structure not comparable to the temple at Jerusalem, was two hundred and twenty years in building. It required thirty-five years to erect the noble fabric of St. Paul's cathedral in London; while that of St. Peter's at Rome, was no less than one hundred and fifty-five years from its commencement, till the time of its being finished, although assisted by the police and interest of the Roman See, and attended by the best artists in sculpture, statuary, painting, and Mosaic work.

The work being thus conducted by a set of religious persons, it is natural to conceive, that from devotion, as well as emulation, those employed had unceasing motives to prompt their diligence, and preserve harmony ; as their labour was probationary, and led to higher points of knowledge, and at last, to that honourable pre-eminence of a MASTER of the holy work.

Solomon himself was an extraordinary personage, and his wisdom and magnificence had gained him the admiration of the neighbouring nations ; but this splendid structure, the wonder of the earth, thus raised by the hands of men, labouring in the worship and service of the God of Israel, would, of course, extend his fame, and attract the wonder of the more distant parts of the world ; his name, and his artificers, would be astonishing to mankind, and his works would excite in their minds a spirit of emulation. For this reason, the MASONSONS OF SOLOMON would be dispersed into different countries, to superintend the edifices of other princes, where they would convert infidels, initiate the most worthy in their mysteries, and extend their order over the distant quarters of the known world.

We find, that the like distinction was observed in rebuilding the temple in the reign of Cyrus, and that the work was executed by the religious part of the Israelites, and not by ordinary mechanics ; for they refused to admit the Samaritans to a participation in the work, although they petitioned it under the denomination of servants of the same God. They were, however, rejected as unworthy ; for though they declared, that they were worshippers of the true God, they polluted their religious ceremonies by idolatry.

Josephus, in his history of the antiquities of the Jews, in speaking of Solomon's commencing the erection of the temple at Jerusalem, gives copies of the letters, which passed between Solomon and Hiram king of Tyre, on that subject, which are as follow.

Solomon, to king Hiram.

“ Know thou, that my father would have built a temple to God, but was hindered by wars, and continual expeditions, for he did not leave off to overthrow his enemies, till he made them all subject to tribute ; but I give thanks to God for the peace I at present enjoy, and, on that account, I am at leisure, and design to build a house to God ; for God foretold to my fathers, that such an house should be built by me. Wherefore, I desire thee to send some of thy subjects, with mine to Mount Lebanon, to cut down timber ; for the Sidonians are more skilful than our people in cutting of wood. As for wages for the hewers of wood, I will pay whatsoever price thou shalt determine.”

Hiram, to king Solomon.

“ There is reason to bless God, that he hath committed thy father's government to thee, who art a wise man, and endued with all virtues. As for myself, I rejoyce at the condition thou art in, and will be subservient to thee in all thou requirest ; for when by my servants, I have cut down many and large trees of Cedar and Cypress wood, I will send them to sea, and will order my subjects to make floats of them, and to sail to whatsoever place of thy country, thou shalt desire, and leave them there ; after which, thy servants may carry them to Jerusalem ; but do thou take care to procure corn for this timber, which we stand in need of, because we inhabit an island.”

Solomon was wise in all the learning of the ancients, possessed of all their mystical knowledge, and was, likewise, enlightened by the immediate gift of heaven. It was also the mode and manners of the times, in which the temple of Jerusalem was erected, to use emblematical and symbolic ornaments in the public edifices ; a fashion derived from the hieroglyphic monuments of the Egyptians, and the mysterious mode, in which their sages concealed their knowledge from the vulgar eye, and communicated science only to those of their own order.

The pillars erected at the porch of the temple were not only ornamental ; but also carried with them an emblematical import in their names. BOAZ being in its literal translation, In thee, is strength, and JACHIN, It shall be established, which, by a very natural transposition, may be put thus, “ O Lord, thou art mighty, and thy power is established from everlasting to everlasting. Or otherwise, they might imply, as Boaz was the father of Da- vid, the house of David shall be established for ever. We are justified in this latter application, by the express words of Nathan the prophet unto David, 2 Samuel, vii. 12. "And when thy days be fulfilled, and thou shalt sleep with thy fathers; I will set up thy seed after thee, which shall proceed out of thy bowels, and I will establish his kingdom. He shall build an house for my name, and I will establish the throne of his kingdom forever. And thine house and thy kingdom shall be established for ever before thee. Thy throne shall be established for ever."

In commemoration of this great promise, we masons ornament the entrance into our lodges with these emblematical pillars, from our knowledge of the completion of that sacred sentence, accomplished in the coming of our blessed Redeemer.

CHAPTER XX.

The happy deliverance of the children of Israel, from their Egyptian bondage.

FROM the earliest period, mankind have ever had the most convincing proofs of the existence of a Supreme Being. Yet from the most ancient and best historians, we do not find it recorded, that any place was set apart for worshipping the true God, till after the emancipation of the Israelites from Egpy-tian bondage, when the Almighty revealed himself amongst men in so wonderful a manner, as to render his name glorious throughout nations.

He did not lead the children of Israel through the land of the Philistines, though a much nearer way; but through the wilderness, wherein he shewed his great wisdom and mercy; as the spirit of liberty being yet in embryo, their hearts might fail them at the appearance of so warlike a people as the Philistines, and they return to their former slavery.

He, therefore, commanded his servant Moses to conduct them through the wilderness, to the borders of the Red Sea, in their way to the promised land, which made Pharaoh king of Egypt, regret that he had let so many useful slaves, as he termed them, depart from his dominions. He, therefore, ordered six hundred chosen chariots to attend him, with all the chariots and captains that were in Egypt, as he was determined to bring them back to their former captivity, or perish in the attempt.

The children of Israel finding themselves confined by the Red Sea in front, impassable mountains on the right and left, and the Egyptian army in the rear, were overcome by fear, and in their despair, they murmured sorely against Moses, saying, "Because there were no graves in Egypt, hast thou taken us away to die in the wilderness? Wherefore, hast thou dealt with us, to carry us forth out of Egypt?"

Is not this the word, that we did tell thee in Egypt, saying, let us alone, that we may serve the Egyptians? For it had been better for us to serve the Egyptians, than that we should die in the wilderness." Exod. xiv. 11, 12.

Moses addressed them in the language of comfort, and told them to fear nothing, for that on that day, they should see the salvation of the Lord, who would fight for them; and, in order to prove his assertion, he, by God's command, stretched forth his hand over the waves of the Red Sea, on which the waters were immediately divided, so as to be apparently a wall on each side, while the children of Israel marched through on dry ground

Pharaoh on perceiving this, became hardened in his heart, and attempted to follow them; but the Almighty continued his protection by a miraculous pillar, which had two wonderful effects, one was of light to the Israelites by night, to conduct them through the Red Sea, and the other as a pillar of cloud and smoke by day, which was darkness to the Egyptians, and prevented their pursuit. He also sent a further plague amongst them; for he sent an angel by night to strike off their chariot wheels, which caused them to drag so heavily, that the two armies came not together all that night.

When day appeared, Pharaoh perceiving the hand of God working sorely against him, attempted to return; but it was then too late; for, by the time the Israelites had gained the opposite shore, Moses desired them to look back upon their long dreaded enemy, the Egyptians; because, from that time, they should see them no more. He then, by God's command, stretched forth his hand a second time over the Red Sea, when the waters returned into their primitive channel, and overwhelmed Pharaoh and all his host. And in commemoration of so happy and glorious a deliverance, Moses marched the children of Israel three days into the wilderness, singing hymns of praise to the Most High. They also erected a tent or tabernacle in the wilderness agreeably to the plan given to Moses on Mount Sinai, which afterwards proved to be the model or ground plan of that magnificent temple, which was afterwards built at Jerusalem by king Solomon.

CHAPTER XXI.

Of the Master Mason's Order.

OF the three first orders of masonry, viz. those of the ENTERED APPRENTICE, the FELLOW CRAFT, and the MASTER MASON, the latter is by far the most sacred and solemn.

By the apprentice's order is implied the first knowledge of the God of nature, in the earliest age of man. By the craftsman's order, reference is had to the Mosaic legation, and Solomon's temple at Jerusalem, as also to the light, which men received for the discovery of the divine wisdom, by geometrical solutions; but the order of master masons is analogous to a dispensation, which is by far more perfect and sublime.

The initiation into the two first orders is attended with rites of great solemnity; but those attached to the third degree, are calculated to leave a far more lasting impression on the mind, than those, which belong to either of the preceding. During the performance of these last ceremonies, of which none but those who are admitted to the degree of master masons, can have any conception, the soul is struck with reverence, and all the spiritual faculties are called forth to worship and adoration.

This order is, therefore, a positive contradiction of those, who know not God, and gives the most irrefragable proof of the resurrection of the body.

The divine construction put upon the emblem of the master mason's order, which he declares to be the principle by which he is raised from darkness to light, is also the emblem of moral duties, professed by the mason, and to which, in former ages, the most religious attention was paid. These also, are principles immediately resulting from the doctrines of Christianity.

The MASTER MASON imposes upon himself, duties replete with moral virtue and Christian charity; duties, which enforce upon him, in the strongest terms, that love which every man should extend to his neighbour, but more especially to his brother; these, however, are best illustrated by the explanation generally given of the FIVE POINTS OF FELLOWSHIP.

FIRST, That when the calamities of our brother call for our aid, we should not withdraw the hand, which might sustain him from sinking, but that we should render him those services, which, without being detrimental to ourselves or families, charity and religion may dictate.

SECOND, From the preceding purpose, indolence should not permit the foot to halt, or wrath to turn our steps out of the way; but forgetting injuries and selfish feelings, and remembering, that man was born for the aid of his fellow creatures, not for his own enjoyments only, but to do that which is good, we should be swift to extend our mercy and benevolence to all, but more particular to a BROTHER MASON.

THIRD, As the good things of this life are partially dispensed, so that whilst some are in opulent circumstances, others are in poverty and want, it is the duty of a mason, to testify his good will towards his brother, let him be ever so poor; and the more distressed he may be by sickness, or any other casualty, the stronger are his claims on his more opulent brother. RICHES alone, do not allow the means of doing good. VIRTUE and BENEVOLENCE are not solely confined to the opulent. The rich man from his wealth, is required to give employment and subsistence to the poor; but on the most indigent brother of our community, there is likewise imposed, an important duty; for as the cry of innocence ascendeth to heaven, as the voice of babes and sucklings reach the throne of the Most High, and the breathings of a contrite heart are always acceptable to Him, so the prayers of a mason for the welfare of his friend and brother, if made with sincerity, will ascend to the throne of grace, and meet with a gracious reception from the God of mercy. Our prayers, therefore, for the temporal and eternal happiness of our fellow mortals, should never be neglected.

FOURTH, It is a duty incumbent on us, never to injure the confidence of a brother, by revealing his secrets, as we might thereby do him the greatest injury, which he could possibly sustain. It would be like the villainy of an assassin, who lurks in darkness to stab his adversary when unarmed, and least prepared to meet him.

FIFTH, So much is required of a mason, in his benevolence and charity to his distressed brother, as may be compatible with his own situation and circumstances in life. "Charity begins at home;" but like a fruitful olive tree planted by the side of a river, so is charity. It spreads its arms abroad from the fertility of its situation, and lends its shade for the repose and comfort of those, who are gathered under its branches.

Charity, when given with imprudence, ceases to be a virtue; but when flowing from persons in easy circumstances, and bestowed with discretion, it is glorious as the beams of the morning sun, in whose beauty, many millions of created beings rejoice. When, however, donations, extorted by piteous supplications, are detrimental to a man's family, they become sacrifices to superstition; and like incense to idols, are disapproved of by the Great Jehovah.

And, here, it may be proper to observe, that as Moses was commanded to take his shoes from off his feet on Mount Horeb, because the ground which he trode, was sanctified by the presence of the Deity, so the brother, who would prepare himself for the third degree of masonry, should advance in the paths of truth, without reserve or disguise, be divested of every degree of arrogance and self assurance, and come forward in the steps of innocence, humility, and virtue, to challenge the ensigns of an order, whose institutions are founded on the most solemn and sacred principles of morality and religion.

It is, further, the peculiar duty of master masons, to search the scriptures, diligently for the secrets of our art, which are therein contained, as well as for other purposes, which they will ultimately find to be highly conducive to their everlasting happiness; and while they endeavour to pry into the covenant, the signs, and tokens, which were communicated between the kings of Judah and Tyre, it is to be hoped, that the spirit of the widow's son will be in them, and fill them with the knowledge of all the points, on which our mystic art depends, and these are, WISDOM to design, STRENGTH to execute, and the BEAUTY OF HOLINESS to adorn. Let us remember, that the same pages contain an inestimable pearl of great price, and that those individuals are the only wise and good, who make that pearl their own. Numberless are our encouragements to this duty. We are told, that if we ask, we shall receive, if we seek, we shall find, and that if we knock, it shall be opened to us. Luke xi. 9. In that case, we lay hold on the right pillar in the temple, both of solid fame and spiritual wealth, whereby we shall be established; and then we may safely rest upon the left, a still higher column in the Masonic department, as in that we shall find STRENGTH.

Another motive to this, flows from the examples before us. Whatever may be our rank in life, we shall find, on a close investigation, many, who in a similar station, have dignified themselves, and been useful to mankind. Let us remember, that the widow, who threw in her mite into the treasury, was, in the opinion of the Saviour of the world, more generous and compassionate than any, who had, on that occasion, entered the temple.

Verbal love is nothing. Therefore, let his example, who went about continually doing good, be the pillar so elegantly adorned with lily work, kindly directing and inflaming our hearts towards the brethren. Let us meet the very lowest of them on the level of condescension, and may we never venture to despise the man, for whom, perhaps, a Saviour died, that so we may be able to hold up our heads, when justice is laid to the line, and righteousness to the plummet. Let our benevolence spread in every direction, and even extend to our enemies when in distress; that thus, we may prove ourselves to be the children of the Most High, who extends his mercies to the wicked and the ungrateful.

Philanthropy ought not to be confined to any name, sect, or party, or to any climate or language. Like the power of attraction, which reacheth from the largest to the smallest bodies in the universe, it unites men from the throne to the cottage. Whether our lodge meets on the high mountains of earthly grandeur, and is beheld from afar, or in the lower vales of obscurity, and noticed only by a few; and in whatever situation you may be placed, O sit not at a brother's call. If he be in danger, fly to his relief. If he be deceived, tell him the truth. If he be calumniated, justify his character; bear his burdens; allay his sorrows, and espouse his cause. Nay, if in many things, he hath erred, still let us recollect, that indiscretion in him, ought not to supersede humanity in us.

As the Eastern Magi opened their treasures, which, doubtless were various, to the Redeemer of Souls, so every brother should be given to hospitality, ready to distribute, willing to communicate, and eager to employ his gift or power, whatever it may be, for the mutual good of each other, and the common benefit of all. Owing to the prevalency of this endearing munificence, king David, who collected materials so magnificently towards the building of the temple, aided by the spirit of inspiration, informs us in the book of Psalms, that the followers of the glorious head of the church, and Grand Master in Israel, of whom the whole family in heaven and on earth is called, may, amongst other things, be found out by this, that as God loves them, they will shew their love to one another.

On, on, then, my dear brethren, let us pursue the great lesson of benevolence, which is the most important duty of human life, with alacrity and firmness, each moving on the square of truth, by the compass of God's word, according to our respective stations, in all the rules of symmetry, order, and proportion. Then we need not dread, that when our earthly lodge shall be dissolved, our jewels will still be safe, and we shall be admitted into a more glorious lodge, even "an house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens;" where Cherubim and Seraphim, angels and saints, and the spirits of just men made perfect, shall be our fellow crafts and companions, and the Supreme Architect of the Universe, will be our ineffably great and glorious Grand Master, our light, our joy, our hope, our all, for ever.

Amen. So mote it be.

CHAPTER XXII.

Of the Social Influence of Free-masonry.

THE institution of free-masonry, as has been already observed, has an absolute tendency to inculcate on the mind of its votaries, every thing laudable and useful to society ; and its leading qualities are, well directed philanthropy, pure morality, inviolable secrecy, and a taste for the fine arts.

It may be observed, that Solon, Lycurgus, Numa, and all the other most celebrated legislators of antiquity, were never able to render their establishments permanent, nor to extend their laws, however salutary they might have been, to all countries, or to cause them to be perpetuated to distant ages. Having little more in view than the elevation of one set of people above another, they were never universal, nor consonant to the genius or interest of all nations. They were not founded on philanthropy, and he is but little acquainted with history, who has not perceived, that the love of country, badly understood, often destroys in warlike republics, the love of general humanity.

Men are not to be essentially distinguished by the difference of tongues which they speak; of clothes which they wear, of countries which they inhabit, nor of the exalted stations which they may have attained, either in church or state. The whole world is one great republic, of which, each nation is a family, and each individual a child. To revive and reanimate these important maxims, is an object of primary concern in the society of free-masons. The great design of the institution has ever been, to unite all men of sense, talents, and integrity, not only in a reciprocal love of the fine arts, but still more in the great principles of virtue, by which the interest of the fraternity might become that of the whole human race; where all nations might increase in knowledge, and every subject of every country, might exert himself without jealousy, live without discord, and embrace mutually, without forgetting, or too scrupulously remembering, the spot in which he was born. What benefits may we not, therefore, expect from the existence of a society, the main object of which, is the reunion of the understanding and the heart, and the amelioration of both by the contact.

The sanctity, which attends the moral qualities of the society, next require our consideration. Other institutions, intended for the benefit of mankind, have been founded in different ages and countries, and though the design, which they severally had in view, was nearly the same, the means by which they have attempted to accomplish it, have greatly varied; but the principles of free-masonry are now the same in all places of the world, have remained the same from time immemorial, and will continue the same till this terraqueous globe, and all the other temporary works of the Great Architect, shall be annihilated. The masonic order has for its objects, the forming of men into good citizens, good husbands, good fathers, and good sons; of making them inviolable in their promises, faithful friends, and more lovers of liberality than of recompense.

But free-masonry is not bounded by the display of virtues merely civil. As a severe and misanthropic kind of philosophy disgusts its votaries, so the establishment of the system of which we are now speaking, renders men amiable, by the attraction of innocent pleasures, pure joys, and rational gaieties. The sentiments of this society, are not such as a censorious world may be tempted to suppose. Those who are suspected of irreligion, libertinism, incredulity, and debauchery, are by the book of constitutions, and the practice of all well regulated lodges, precluded from becoming members. The meetings of the masons resemble those amiable entertainments, spoken of by Horace, where all those are made welcome guests, whose understandings may be enlightened, whose hearts may be mended, or who may be, in any way, emulous to excel in that which is true, good, or great.

From the society in question, are banished all those disputes, which might alter the tranquillity of friendship, or interrupt that perfect harmony, which cannot subsist, but by rejecting all indecent excesses, and discordant passions. The obligation imposed upon this order is, that each member is to protect a brother as far as he can, to advise him according to his abilities, in the language of tenderness and love ; to edify him by his virtues, to assist him in an exigence, to sacrifice all personal resentment, and to seek diligently for every thing, which may contribute to the pleasure and profit of the society. It instructs us in our duty to the Great Architect of the universe, and also in our duty to our neighbours ; it teaches us to injure him in none of his connexions, and that in all our dealings with him, we should act with justice and impartiality ; it discourages defamation, orders us to be faithful to our trusts, to be above the meanness of dissimulation, to let the words of our mouths be the thoughts of our hearts, and to perform religiously whatsoever we promise.

With regard to our secrets, to which some, who know nothing about them may object, they are only cautionary guards and innocent distinctions, by which we can discover a brother from an impostor, whatever language he may speak, or of whatever country he may be a native ; and as knowledge must ever be communicated and acquired gradually, to each class amongst us, we wisely affix a distinguishing mark.

As masons, therefore, it is our duty to fraternise, for the purpose of social intercourse, of mutual assistance, of charity to the distressed, and of good will to all ; and fidelity to a trust, reverence to the constituted authority of the country in which we live, and obedience to the laws, are sculptured in capitals upon the pediment of the institution.

I cannot conclude this chapter more emphatically, than in the words of the apostle Paul, "Let all bitterness, and wrath, and anger, and clamour, and evil speaking, be put away from you, with all malice. And be ye kind one to another, tender hearted, forgiving one another, even as God for Christ's sake hath forgiven you." Eph. iv. 31.

CHAPTER XXIII.

Antiquities.

CONSISTING of a number of extracts from old manuscripts, selected from different authors.*

* These extracts, in the books, from which I have transcribed them, are printed in the old Saxon character, and the orthography is such as was in use at the time when they were written ; but as many of my readers might not so easily understand that old fashioned style, I have deemed it proper to put them in the language, which is now common amongst us. I have, however, been careful not to deviate, in any instance, from the precise meaning of the original.

No. I.

An old manuscript, which is said to have been in the possession of Nicholas Stone, a celebrated sculptor under Inigo Jones, one of the greatest architects that ever appeared in England, contains the following particulars.

“ St. Albans was a warm friend to the society of free-masons, and did every thing in his power to promote their interest. He saw, that they were well paid, as he gave them two shillings per week, and three pence for refreshments; whereas, previous to his time, a mason only had a penny per day, and his board. St. Albans, likewise, obtained for them, a charter from his majesty, by which they were empowered to hold a general council or assembly. At these meetings, he frequently attended in person, assisted in making masons, and, from time to time, gave them such advice, as appeared to him best calculated to improve their morals, and to promote their happiness and prosperity.”

No. II.

A record of the society, written in the reign of Edward IV. formerly in the possession of Elias Ashmole, the celebrated founder of the museum at the university of Oxford, gives the following account of the state of free-masonry at that period.

“ Though many of the ancient records of the fraternity in England, were lost or destroyed in the wars between the Danes and Saxons, yet king Athelstane, the grandson of Alfred the Great, who was a sincere friend to science, after causing the holy scriptures to be translated into the Saxon language, A. D. 930, and restoring tranquillity to the kingdom, forthwith turned his attention to those means, by which he could most effectually promote the interest of the brotherhood. For this purpose, he erected many stately edifices, and encouraged a number of masons to remove from France, whom he appointed overseers. These brought with them the rules and regulations of the lodges on the continent, which had been preserved from the time that Rome was in her greatest glory. He also effected the improvement of the constitution of English lodges, according to the foreign model, and increased the wages of working masons.

“ The said king's brother having been initiated in the art, was soon after promoted to the office of master of the lodge, and for the love, which he bore to the craft, and the benevolent purposes on which it is founded, he obtained from king Athelstane, a free charter for the masons, by which they were empowered to regulate their proceedings as they might deem proper ; to amend what might appear amiss in their constitutions, and to hold a yearly communication and general assembly.

“ Prince Edwin accordingly summoned all the masons in the realm, to meet with him in a congregation, at the city of York,* where they composed a general lodge, of which he was grand master. These brethren brought with them, all the writings and records extant, in Greek, Latin, French, &c. relative to the art, from all which, that assembly framed the constitution of an English grand lodge, ordained good pay for working masons, &c. passed a law for the due observance of these rules and regulations in all time coming.

“ Prince Edwin also, composed a book, stating the general principles, on which the institution was founded, and ordered that it should be read on the making of every mason, for his future guidance and direction; and from that till the present time, the government of all regular lodges has been agreeably to that form. Since that period, however, certain charges have been adopted at diverse assemblies, such as the exigencies of the craft rendered necessary. But it ought to be observed, that, though from local circumstances, some differences may have taken place in the constitutions of lodges, the principles are uniformly the same; nor can there, on any account whatever, be the least deviation admitted from the ancient land-marks.”

* From this circumstance, as has been already observed, we have the title of Ancient York Masons.

No. III.

In the glorious reign of king Edward III. during which, lodges were very numerous, the right worshipful the master and fellows, by consent of the lords of the realm, most of whom were free-masons, ordained, "that, in future, the constitution and ancient charges should be read by the master, or one of the wardens, at the making or admission of a member.

"That such as were to be admitted master masons, or masters of work, should be examined, if they were possessed of sufficient skill to serve their respective lords in the highest, as well as the lowest stations, to the honour of the aforesaid art, and the benefit of their lords; for so those are to be considered, who employ and pay them."

The following particulars are also contained in a very old manuscript, of which, a copy was in the possession of the most worshipful GEORGE PAYNE, grand master of England, in 1718.

"That when the master and wardens meet in a lodge, if need be, the sheriff of the county, the mayor or one of the aldermen of the city, in which it is held, should be admitted into the mysteries of the art, and associated with the master, to help him against rebels, and to support the rights of the realm.

"That entered apprentices on their initiation, be particularly cautioned against fraudulent conduct in themselves, or conniving at it in others; and that it be enjoined upon them, to labour honestly for their pay, to love their fellows as themselves, and to be true to the king, the realm, and the lodge.

“ That at such meetings it shall be inquired, whether any master or fellow, has violated any of the articles, which have been agreed on; and if the offender, after having been duly cited, should neglect to appear, the lodge shall determine, that he must renounce his masonry, and that he be no longer considered as a member. It was, likewise, further enjoined, that if he should be contumacious, the sheriff of the county shall imprison him, and take all his goods, which are to be placed at the disposal of the king, till the accused brother obtain pardon from the fraternity for his improper conduct. For this cause, particularly, these assemblies have ordained, that the lowest as well as the highest, should be well versed in the aforesaid art, throughout all the kingdom of England.”

No. IV.

The Latin register of William Molart, prior of Canterbury, entitled, “ Liberatio generalis Domini Gulielmi Prioris Ecclesie Christi Cantuariensis erga fastum Natalis Domini, 1429,” informs us, “ that in that year, during the minority of Henry VI. a respecta-

The lodge was held at Canterbury, under the patronage of the most reverend archbishop Chicheley; at which, were present, a number of eminent persons, all of whom are particularly named." A record of that time, says, "that the company of masons, otherwise termed free-masons, of ancient standing and good reputation, had rendered themselves much respected by the sociability and harmony, which prevailed at their meetings, and the love, which they universally displayed in their intercourse with each other; and that they frequented this mutual assembly, in the time of king Henry VI., A. D. 1434." See Stowe's Survey, chap. 5.

The same record says, further, "that the charges and laws of the free-masons, have been seen and perused by our late sovereign king Henry VI., and by the lords of his most honourable council, who have approved of them, and declared, that they are good and reasonable to be holden, as they have been drawn out and collected from the records of ancient times," &c. &c.

Ancient Charges.

"You shall be true to the king, to the master you serve, and to the fraternity in which you are admitted. You shall be faithful to, and love each other. You shall call each either brother, and, by no means, make use of any ill natured or disgraceful appellation.

You shall appoint the wisest to be master of the lodge ; and neither for love, relationship, riches, or favour, promote one to that office, who is ignorant of the duties annexed to it, as then, by it, he would be ultimately disgraced ; and you, by whose means his election had been effected, would have great reason to be ashamed of your conduct. You shall also call the governor of the work, master, during the time that you are working with him ; and thus shall you deserve your reward.

“ Every brother shall treat the peculiarities of each other, with that delicacy, tenderness, and forbearance, which he can conscientiously suppose is due to his own.

“ You shall have a reasonable pay, and live honestly ; and are to assemble in a general convention once a year, to consult how you may best work to promote the reputation of the craft, as well as your own interest and prosperity.”

No. VI.

A manuscript copy of an examination of some of the brotherhood, taken before king Henry VI., was found by the learned John Locke, Esq. in the Bodleian library, and is supposed to have been written in the year 1430.

This dialogue possesses a double claim to our regard, first, for its antiquity, and secondly, for the ingenious notes and conjectures, which Mr. Locke has made upon it. The approbation of a philosopher of as great learning and discernment as the English nation ever produced, added to the real value of the piece itself, must give it a sanction, and render it deserving of a serious and candid examination.

The ancient manuscript is as follows, viz.
 "Certain questions with answers to the same, concerning the mysteries of masonry, written by king Henry the sixth, and faithfully copied by me, John Leylande,* Antiquarius, by the command of his †highness.

"Question. What is this science of masonry?

"Answer. It is the science of nature, the understanding of the mysteries thereof, and of her sundry operations, the art of arithmetic, geometry, regulating weights and measures, and the true manner of fashioning things for the use of man, of constructing dwelling houses and buildings of every description, and, in fine, the performance of all other things, which are most conducive to the comfort and convenience of the community.

* John Leylande, was appointed by king Henry VIII., at the dissolution of the monasteries, to search for such books and records as were most valuable; and perhaps, no person could have been found better qualified for such a purpose, as he was not only a profound scholar; but also a man of great perseverance and industry.

† His highness, meaning the said Henry VIII. The kings of England, had not then the title of majesty.

“ Q. Where did it begin ?

“ A. It began with the first men of the east, who were before the first men of the west, and coming westerly, it hath brought along with it, all comforts to the wild and comfortless.

“ Q. Who brought it to the west ?

“ A. The Venetians,* who being great merchants, came first from the east into Venetia, for the convenience of their commercial pursuits, both east and west, by the Red and the Mediterranean seas.

“ Q. Who was the first person, who brought it into England ?

“ A. Peter Gower,† a Grecian, who travel-

* The Venetians, &c. “ In times of monkish ignorance, it is no wonder, that the Phenicians, should be mistaken for the Venetians. Or, perhaps, if the people were not taken one for the other, similitude of sound might deceive the clerk, who first took down the examination. The Phenicians were the greatest voyagers among the ancients, and were, in Europe, thought to be the inventors of letters, which, perhaps, they brought with them from the east, with other arts.” In this idea of Mr. Locke, there is certainly a great deal of ingenuity, and we think it highly probable, that he was correct in his opinion.

† Peter Gower. This must be another mistake of the writer. I was puzzled at first to know, who Peter Gower should be, the name being perfectly English ; or how a Greek should come by such a name ; but as soon as I thought of Pythagoras, I could scarcely forbear from smiling, to find that philosopher had undergone a metempsychosis, of which, he had never dreamt. We need only consider the French pronunciation of this name Pythagore, that is, Petegore, to conceive, how easily such a mistake might be made, by an unlearned clerk. That Pythagoras led for the purpose of obtaining knowledge through Egypt, and Syria, and every other land, in which the Venetians had established masonry. He was initiated into the mysteries of the art, visited all the lodges, and was thereby greatly improved in knowledge. He afterwards went to Magna Græcia,* where he resided, during the remainder of his days, and formed a great lodge at Groton,† in which he made many masons, some of whom removed to France, and there established lodges; from whence, in process of time, the art was communicated to England?

“ Q. Do masons discover their secrets unto others?

travelled for knowledge into Egypt, is well-known to all the learned; and that he was initiated into several different orders of priests, who, in those days, kept all their knowledge secret from the world, is as well-known. Pythagoras, also, made every geometrical theorem a secret, and admitted only such to the knowledge of them, as had first undergone a five years silence. He is supposed to have been the inventor of the 47th proposition of the first book of Euclid, for which, it is said, that in the joy of his heart, he sacrificed an hecatomb. He, also, knew the true system of the world, which has been of late revived by Copernicus, and was certainly a most wonderful man. See his life by Dion. Halicarnassus.

* Magna Græcia, a part of Italy so called, in which the Greeks had settled a colony.

† Groton. This is the name of a place in England. The place here alluded to is, Crotona, a city in Græcia Magna, which, in the time of Pythagoras, was very flourishing and populous.

“ A. Peter Gower, when he travelled with a view to learn, was first made, or initiated into the order, and afterwards received the necessary instruction, and the rule, which was observed in regard to him, should be strictly adhered to in respect to all, who may wish to become acquainted with the masonic art. Nevertheless, free-masons have, in every age, from time to time, communicated to mankind such of their secrets as might be of general utility; but they have kept back those, which they thought might prove injurious, if divulged to men, whose dispositions were opposed to moral rectitude; to those, to whom it would be useless, without sufficient instruction in the body of a lodge; to those, who, being deemed unworthy of membership, could not be expected to abide by those immutable rules of the society, which enjoin upon all its votaries, the sacred duties of friendship, charity, benevolence, and mutual forbearance. —

“ Q. What arts have the masons taught mankind?

“ A. They have taught the arts of agriculture, architecture, astronomy, geometry, arithmetic, music, poetry, chemistry, government, and religion.

“ Q. What makes you suppose, that masons are better teachers than other men?

“ A. They have, by their assiduity and penetration, been fortunate, in a peculiar manner, in finding out new arts, the first of which, came immediately from God. By this art, they find out the true way of pleasing Him, and of communicating the knowledge, which they may have thus obtained, to others. What other men have found out, is only by chance, and, in general, worthy of little attention.

“ Q. What do the masons conceal and hide ?

“ A. They conceal the art of finding out new arts, and such as may in a peculiar manner, redound to their own praise and profit. They conceal the art of keeping secrets, that thereby the world may conceal nothing from them. They conceal the art of working wonders, and of foreseeing things to come, that so the same arts may not be used by the wicked to bad purposes. They also conceal the art of changing, or the transmutation of metals, the way of obtaining the faculty of Abrac ;* the skill of becoming good and perfect without the aid of hope or fear, which, likewise, teacheth the universal language of masons.†

* The faculty of Abrac. An abbreviation of the word Abracadabra. In the days of ignorance and superstition, that word had a magical signification ; but the explanation of it is now lost.

† The universal language of masons. The being able by secret and inviolable signs, carefully preserved amongst the fraternity throughout the world, to express themselves intelligibly to men of all nations and languages. A man, who has all these arts and advantages, is certainly in a condition to be envied. But we are told, that this is not the case with all masons ; for though these arts are among them, and all have a right, and an opportunity to know

“ Q. Will you teach me the same arts ?
 “ A. You shall be taught, if you be found worthy and able to learn.
 “ Q. Do all masons know more than other men ?

“ A. No ; but they have the right and opportunity of obtaining knowledge, more than other men. Some, however, fail in capacity, and many more through want of industry, which is absolutely necessary to the attainment of this important object.

“ Q. Are masons better than others ?
 “ A. Some masons are not so virtuous as some other men ; but, in general, they are better than they would have been, if they had not been made masons.

“ Q. Do masons generally love each other in the manner which has been represented ?

“ A. They certainly do ; nor can it be otherwise, it being an unquestionable fact, that the better men are, the more they love one another.

“ Here endeth the questions and answers.”

A letter from Mr. Locke, to the right honourable the earl of Pembroke, to whom he them ; yet some want capacity, and others industry to acquire them. However, of all their arts and secrets, that which I most desire to know is, the skill of becoming good and perfect, and I wish it were communicated to all mankind ; since there is nothing more true, than the beautiful sentence contained in the last answer, that the better men are, the more they love one another ; virtue having in itself, something so amiable, as to charm the hearts of all who behold it.

sent the aforesaid ancient manuscript, concludes as follows. "I know not what effect this old paper may have upon your lordship ; but, for my own part, I cannot deny, that it has so much raised my curiosity, as to induce me to enter myself into the fraternity, which I am determined to do, if I may be admitted, the next time I go to London, and that will be shortly. I am, my lord, &c.

" JOHN LOCKE."

No. VII.

Ancient charges at the constituting of a lodge, extracted from a manuscript in the possession of the lodge of ANTIQUITY IN LONDON, written in the time of James the Second, who began his reign, A. D. 1685.

" Every man who is a free-mason, must consider it as a sacred duty, to fix on his mind the following charges, and to observe them with due care, principally for dread of the Most High God, by whose holy name, he hath sworn to obey them ; for it is a great error to be guilty of perjury.

" The first charge is, that you worship God in sincerity and truth, and that you do not attempt any heresy or schism in the church.

" Secondly, You shall be true liege men to the government and laws of your country, and never be guilty of falsehood or treason ; and should any treasonable practices come to your knowledge, you are forthwith to give information thereof to the proper authority. You are also to be true to one another, and to observe the golden rule, of doing to every brother, as you would wish that he should do to you.

“Thirdly, You shall keep, with inviolable secrecy, all the mysteries of free-masonry, which may be communicated to you in the lodge. You must conduct yourselves as men of honesty and integrity, and serve your master in such a manner, as may be most conducive to his honour and profit.

“Fifthly, You shall respect the chastity of a brother's wife, his daughter, and servant; and shall commit no act, which can cast a reflection on his character, or expose him to shame.

“Sixthly, Wherever you go, you shall be careful to pay for your board and lodging, and always act in such a manner as may reflect honour on the craft.”

These are the charges, which have heretofore been given to all true masons, whether masters or fellows. I shall now rehearse some other charges, which equally demand your attention.

“First, No mason should take upon him his master's work, or any other person's, unless he be conscious to himself, that he is able to perform it in such a manner as will not injure the reputation of the craft.

“ Second, No master shall take work without a reasonable compensation, so that the person who has employed him, may be truly served, and the master enabled to live with decency, and pay his workmen with punctuality. Nor shall any master or fellow, supplant another in regard to employment; that is to say, if one brother hath undertaken any work, another shall not supersede him, unless the former should be found incapable of performing it.

“ Third, He, who shall be made a mason, shall be free-born, of reputable parents, of good reputation, and not a bondsman. He shall also be perfect and complete in his limbs, as a man ought to be.

“ Fourth, No master shall take an apprentice, unless he have occasion for two or three fellows, at least.

“ Fifth, No master or fellow shall put away any one's work to task, which ought to be journey work.

“ Sixth, Every master shall give pay to his fellows and servants, according to their respective deserts, so that he may not be accused of fraud or partiality. In his conversation, he must likewise be careful not to slander an absent brother, nor use any expression, which may injure his good name.

“ Seventh, No mason, whether at home or abroad, shall speak to a brother in the language of ill nature without cause.

“ Eighth, Every mason shall treat those, who are older than himself, with reverence. He shall be no common player at cards, dice, hazard, or any other unlawful games, in consequence of which, the craft may be dishonoured.

“ Ninth, No mason shall go into town at night, unless he have a brother along with him, who may be able to certify, that he was in good company.

“ Tenth, Every master and fellow, shall come to the assembly, if he have had due notice, and the place of meeting be within fifty miles of him;* and if he have trespassed against the rules of the craft, he shall abide by the award of his brethren.

“ Eleventh, Every master mason or brother, who has been accused of injuring another, shall stand by the decision of his brethren; but if he should be refractory, he must be prosecuted at common law.

“ Twelfth, No master or fellow shall make a mould-stone, square, or rule, to any lown, nor permit any lown, either within or without their lodge, to mould stone.

“ Thirteenth, Every master shall courteously receive and cherish, a strange brother, who

* This, as well as the rule immediately preceding, would, in our times, be deemed peculiarly hard. Masons, however, know the limits, which are now prescribed, and if they study their own interest, will not transgress them.

may have come into the country, and set him at work if he can ; but if he have no employment for him, he shall give him money sufficient to defray his expenses, till he can arrive at the next lodge.

“ Fourteenth, Every mason shall truly serve his master for his pay, and the master, shall honourably perform his work, task, or journey, whethersoever it may be.”

These are the charges and covenants, which ought to be read at the instalment of a master, or making of a free-mason. May the Almighty God of Jacob, have us all in his holy keeping, and grant us his blessing in this world, and in that which is to come. Amen.

No. VIII.

Extract from the diary of Elias Ashmole, a learned Antiquary.

“ I was made a free-mason at Warrington, in Lancashire, 16th October, 1646. On March the 10th, 1682, I received a summons to appear at a lodge, to be held the next day, at Mason's Hall, in London. March 11th. I accordingly attended, where I was the senior fellow amongst them, it being nearly 35 years since I had been admitted into the fraternity.” After giving the names of the brethren who attended, which it is of no importance for us to know, only that they were men of the highest standing in society, he adds, “ we all dined at the Half Moon Tavern, where we partook of a sumptuous dinner, at the expense of the new accepted masons."

The writer of Mr. Ashmole's life gives the following account of masonry.

"He, (Mr. Ashmole,) was elected a brother amongst the free-masons, a favour esteemed so singular, that even kings have not disdained to enter as members of the society. These are the adopted, the free and accepted masons, who are known to each other all over the world, by certain signs and words, which are intelligible to themselves alone. They have several lodges for their reception, in different countries, and when any of the members falls into decay, the brotherhood are bound to relieve him. The manner of their adoption, is very formal and solemn; and accompanied by an oath of secrecy, which has had a better fate than other oaths, as it has, from time immemorial, been most religiously observed, nor has the world been yet able to dive into this mystery, by the inadvertency, surprise, or folly, of any of its members."

In some of Mr. Ashmole's manuscripts, there are many valuable collections, relative to the history of free-masons, as may be gathered from the letters of Dr Knipe, of Christ Church, Oxford, to the publisher of Mr. Ashmole's life, of which, I deem it sufficient, to subjoin the following.

“ As to the ancient society of free-masons, concerning whom, you are desirous of ascertaining what may be known with certainty, I shall only tell you, that if our worthy brother, E Ashmole, Esq. had executed his intended designs, our fraternity had been as much obliged to him, as the brethren of the most noble order of the garter. I would not have you surprised at this expression, or think it at all too assuming. The sovereigns of that order, have not disdained our fellowship, and there have been times, when emperors also, have been masons. What I could gather from Mr. Ashmole's collection was, that the report of our society having taken rise from a bull granted by the pope, in the reign of Henry VI., to some Italian architects, to travel through Europe and erect chapels, was ill founded. Such a bull there was, and those architects were masons. But as to the time and manner of that establishment, I shall quote something from the same collection.

“ St. Alban, the protomartyr, who suffered death, A. D. 303, established masonry here, (in England), and from that period it flourished more or less according to the state of the times, down to the days of king Athelstane, who, at the request of his brother Edwin, granted the masons a charter. Under our Norman princes, they frequently received extraordinary marks of royal favour. There is no doubt, that the skill of masons was always transcendently great, even in the most barbarous times. Their wonderful kindness and attachment to each other, however different they may be in condition, and their inviolable fidelity in keeping religiously their secrets, must expose them in ignorant, troublesome, and superstitious times, to a variety of adventures, according to the different state of parties, and other alterations in government. But it ought to be observed, that masons have always been loyal, in consequence of which, they have been exposed to great severities, when power prevailed over right, and those who committed treason, punished true men as traitors. Thus, in the 3d year of Henry VI., an act was passed to abolish the society of masons, and to prevent the holding of lodges, chapters, or other regular assemblies, under the most severe penalties; yet this act was afterwards virtually repealed, and even before that, king Henry and several lords of his court, became fellows of the craft.' ”

Some lodges in the reign of Charles the Second, were constituted by leave of the several noble grand masters, and many gentlemen, and famous scholars requested, at that time, to be admitted members of the fraternity.

CHAPTER XXIII.

Of a Lodge and its Government.

A LODGE is a place, in which masons assemble, or go on with their work, and transact their necessary business, and may be considered of similar import with the word church, which is expressive of the congregation, as well as of the place, in which they meet. To some lodge, every brother ought to belong ; but he must not be a member of more lodges than one, although if he conduct himself with propriety, he will be a welcome visitor in any lodge throughout the world. He, should, likewise, attend with punctuality, at every regular or extra meeting, unless he be prevented by sickness or some other cause, which will satisfy his brethren that it was not voluntary. He should be subject to the by-laws, which are of two kinds, general and particular, of which, the young mason will acquire more extensive knowledge, by a regular attendance on his lodge, and a friendly intercourse with some of his enlightened brethren. He may become acquainted with the general regulations, by perusing the constitution of the grand lodge of the state of New-York, which, when compared with the constitutions of all other grand lodges, not only in the United States, but in all other parts of the world, will not be found to differ very materially.

A lodge ought to assemble for work, at least once in every month, and must consist of a master, a senior and junior warden, a secretary, treasurer, two deacons, one or more stewards, a tyler, and as many members as the master and a majority of the brethren shall think proper.* It is, however, in general, deemed expedient for the convenience of working to advantage, that a lodge should not consist of more than fifty members. When a lodge considerably exceeds that number, some of the most able workmen, and others under them, will obtain leave from the grand lodge to separate, and form themselves into a new lodge.

All preferment, amongst masons, should exclusively depend upon merit, so that the body may be well served, and thereby have honour and profit. The wardens must be chosen from amongst the master masons, and no one can be promoted to the master's chair, who has not officiated as a warden, except on extraordinary occasions, or when a new lodge is to be formed; in which case, three master masons, though never masters or wardens before, may be installed as master and wardens of the new lodge; but no number, whatever, unless there be three master masons, can constitute a lodge, and no brother can be grand master, or a grand warden, who has not been a master of some particular lodge.

* In all lodges, where there are many members, there is, likewise, in general, an officer who is denominated master of ceremonies.

CHAPTER XXIV.

Of the Ceremony of Opening and Closing a Lodge.

IN all regular assemblies, convened for wise and useful purposes, the commencement and conclusion of the business is, in general, accompanied by some form. In every country, the practice prevails, and is deemed essential. It is traced from the most remote periods of antiquity, and the refined improvements of modern times, have not abolished it.

Ceremonies, simply considered, are little more than visionary delusions; but their effects, are sometimes very important. When they impress awe and reverence on the mind, and attract the attention to solemn rites, they become peculiarly interesting. A good beginning, is the most certain mode of ensuring a good ending, of any business or pursuit whatever; and it may be observed, that when order is neglected at the beginning, it will seldom be found to take place at the end. "Let all things," says the apostle Paul, "be done decently, and in order." 1 Corinthians, xiv. 40.

And again, xiv. 33, "God is not the author of confusion but of peace."

The ceremony of opening and closing the lodge with solemnity and decorum, is, therefore, universally adopted; and though the mode may vary in some meetings, it will be found to be in all, essentially the same. To conduct this ceremony with propriety, ought to be the particular study of every mason; but more especially, of those, who have the honour of presiding in our assemblies.

Our first care is directed to the external avenues of the lodge, and the proper officers will always direct their attention to this important object, so that no improper persons can gain admission.

At the opening of the lodge, two purposes are effected, the master is reminded of the dignity of his station, and the brethren of that respect which is due to him, whom they have appointed to direct their steps in the masonic art.

But these are the least important of the advantages, which result from this ceremony. A reverential awe for the Great Architect of the Universe, is inculcated, and the eye fixed on that object, from whose radiant beams, light can only be derived. Hence, in this ceremony, we are taught to adore our Creator, Preserver, and continual Benefactor, and to supplicate his direction on our well-meant endeavours. The master now assumes his government, and his wardens under him, and the brethren uniting with one accord in duty and respect, the ceremony ends. And at the closing of the lodge, a similar form takes place. Masonic meetings always convene in the name of the Most High God, and in his name, they part; and from this pious custom they will never deviate.

A Prayer used at Opening the Lodge.

May the favour of heaven be upon this meeting; and as it is happily begun, may it be conducted in order, and closed in harmony. Amen.

A Prayer used at Closing the Lodge.

May the blessing of heaven rest upon us, and all regular meetings; may brotherly love prevail, and every moral and social virtue cement us. Amen.

The Ancient Prayer at Making, or Opening a Lodge.

Most holy and glorious Lord God, the great Architect of the Universe, the giver of all good gifts and graces, thou hast promised, that where two or three are gathered together in thy name, thou wilt be in the midst of them. In thy name, we assemble, most humbly beseeching thee to bless us in all our undertakings, that we may know and serve thee aright, and that all our actions may tend to thy glory, and to our advancement in knowledge and virtue.

And we beseech thee, O Lord God, to bless this our present assembling, and grant that this our new made brother, may prove true and faithful. Endue him with a competency of thy divine wisdom, that he may, with the secrets of free-masonry, be able to unfold the mysteries of godliness; and may he and we walk in the light of thy countenance, and when all the trials of our probationary state shall be over, be admitted into the temple not made with hands, eternal in the heavens. Amen.

A Prayer at the Making of a Mason.

O God, the author of every good and perfect gift, we thy servants approach thy Divine Majesty, with the most exalted ideas of thy character, and the highest reverence for thy perfections, with gratitude for thy goodness, and submission to thine authority.

We beseech thee, to bless us. Give our brother the spirit of wisdom, to avoid the evil and choose the good, the spirit of meekness and forbearance, of brotherly love, and charity. And grant, that we may not abuse our freedom; but in all our thoughts, words, and actions, so live within the compass of thy commandments, as to secure thy love. Amen.

Another Prayer at the Making of a Mason.

Thou Supreme Author of Peace, and Lover of Concord, bless us in the exercise of those kind and social affections, which thou hast given us. May we display and cherish them, as our honour, and our joy. May this, our friend, who is now to become our brother, devote his life to thy service, and consider aright the true principles of his engagements. May he be endowed with wisdom to direct him in all his ways, strength, to support him in all his difficulties, and beauty, to adorn his moral conduct; and may we jointly and individually walk within compass, and square our actions by the dictates of virtue and conscience, and the example of the wise and the good. Amen.

Another, for the same object.

Vouchsafe thine aid, Almighty Father of the Universe, to this our present convention; and grant, that this candidate for masonry, may dedicate and devote his life to thy service, and become a true and faithful brother amongst us. Endue him with a competency of thy divine wisdom, that by the secrets of our art, he may be better enabled to display the beauties of brotherly love, relief, and truth, to the honour of thy holy name. Amen.

Another.

Great Architect of Heaven, Maker and Ruler of worlds unnumbered! Deign, from thy celestial temple, to look down on us, the workmanship of thy hands. As we are now about to enlighten a fellow mortal in masonry, wilt thou enlighten us in the knowledge of divine truths. Enable us to live within the compass of thy commands, and to square our actions to thy divine will; and bless us, even us, Father Almighty. Thou hast planted reason in the human heart, may it expand until it reacheth the footstool of thy throne; and when our spirits shall be called to part from this lodge of clay, may they be permitted to join the all-perfect lodge in heaven, there to receive never ending refreshment, in the regions of bliss and immortality. Amen.
So mote it be.

Another.

Grand Architect! Behold us aspiring towards thee. Thy works fill us with rapture. Heaven's gates stand open, to welcome thy sons to glory. Behold our friend, who is soon to be our brother, entering upon the threshold, which is before this apartment in thy works. May love burst the silence around him, and salute him welcome at the first step. May joy triumph in his heart, and friendship guide him as he ascends. May his countenance be cheered by the light, and confidence increase as he passes on. May he behold the emblems of his labour, and his heart reply in ready obedience. May the cheerfulness inspired by the dawning light, attend him through the day; and when a long day shall be completed, may he find his lot with the faithful, in the immortal glory of the temple, which is pure with the light of God, and eternal in the heavens. Amen.

*A General Prayer in a Lodge.

Great Architect, in whose work all life is employed, the whole is harmony in thee; each part has its place, and all is perfect.

Behold us, who from this apartment in thy work, small indeed in itself, but vast enough for our full employment. From hence, we behold thy magnificent displays of power and wisdom, and here we enjoy thy goodness. Regard our work, begun in thy presence, and under thy laws. On the equal base of truth, let our building stand. May its entrance be illuminated with hope, and may great and good actions give it glory. With our master, may our labour be sweet, and our reward sure. May the skilful inspire a laudable ambition, and each soul be filled with light.

When we extend our hands to a friend, and introduce him to our joys, let truth guide our lips, and love dwell in our hearts. May we add merit to our friendship, and a sincere heart to our pleasures. May the entrance be a sweet recollection to him. May each visit improve his hopes and enlarge his virtues, and may our virtues shine together with brighter light, and the glory of the everlasting God be upon us. Amen.

CHAPTER XXV.

Of the Duty of Officers.

SECTION I.—OF THE MASTER, HIS ELECTION AND DUTIES.

In the twenty-third chapter of this book, I have already taken notice of some of the qualifications, which ought to be possessed by those, who preside as masters of a lodge. I now proceed to mention the manner of their election and general duties.

The master of every lodge, is chosen annually by ballot, at some stated meeting, after which, the other officers are to be elected in the same manner and ; it is a standing rule, that no brother shall refuse to accept of an office, to which he may have been chosen, unless he had previously served in the same station.

As soon as the master is installed, he has it in special charge to see that the by-laws of his own lodge, as well as the general regulations of the grand lodge, be duly observed; that his wardens faithfully perform their duty, and by the correctness of their moral deportment, set a good example to the craft; that correct minutes of all proceedings be made by the secretary; that the treasurer keep exact and just accounts of all monies received and expended, and that he exhibit the same when thereunto required by the body, and that all the funds and property belonging to the lodge be disposed of in such manner, as to a majority of the brethren may appear proper.

He shall also take care, that no apprentice or fellow craft, be taken into his lodge, unless he be found duly qualified to learn and comprehend the sublime mysteries of the art. Thus shall apprentices, when they have made the necessary progress, become fellow crafts; and, in due time, be raised to the sublime degree of master masons; and if they conduct themselves with propriety, they may afterwards be initiated into the higher orders.

The master of every lodge, has the power of calling the members thereof together, upon the application of any of the brethren, or upon any emergency, which may, in his opinion, render such extra meeting necessary. It is, likewise, his duty, together with his wardens, to attend the grand lodge, at their quarterly, as well as their special communications, and when there, they, or either of them, have authority to represent their lodge, and to transact all matters, in the same manner, as if the whole body were present.

SECTION 2.—OF THE WARDENS OF A LODGE.

No one can be elected as a warden, who is not a master mason.

In the absence of the master, the senior warden takes the chair; and in case of the master's death, resignation, or removal, he is to fill his place till the next stated election. In ancient times, it was the rule, that, in such cases, the master's authority should revert to the last past master; but it has been settled, for many years, that it should devolve upon the senior, and in his absence, upon the junior warden. These, however, will, in general, wave their right, in honour of a past master, who may be present, and request him to take the chair. Still, however, such past master holds his authority under the warden, and cannot act, until he congregates the lodge.

If none of the officers be present, nor any former master, the members, according to their seniority and merit, are to supply the places of the absent officers.

The general duty of the wardens is, to assist the master in conducting the business of the lodge, in due form and order. Particular lodges, however, by their by-laws, assign other duties to their wardens; nor can their right to do so, be disputed, provided, that they do not infringe on the ancient land marks, nor deviate from the true genius and spirit of masonry.

SECTION 3.—OF THE SECRETARY OF A LODGE.

It is his duty to record all the transactions of the lodge, which, it is proper to commit to writing, in order that such minutes, or an authenticated copy of them, may be laid before the grand lodge at each quarterly communication, if required. He shall also keep a correct list of all the members of the lodge, with the dates of their admission; and shall, annually, at such time as may be required, send to the grand secretary, a list of all the members; for the time being. It is, likewise, his duty, to collect the monthly dues, and pay the same to the treasurer.

SECTION 4.—OF THE TREASURER OF A LODGE.

He shall keep exact account of all monies raised, or paid out, agreeably to orders drawn on him by authority of the lodge. He is to make regular entries of all receipts and expenditures, and have his books and vouchers ready for examination, at such stated meetings, as may be prescribed by the by-laws, or at any other time, when they may be specially called for.

The treasurer, has, likewise, the charge of the jewels and furniture of the lodge, &c. unless when it may be deemed expedient, to appoint some other responsible brother, for that particular duty ; or when the officers may see fit, to take the charge immediately upon themselves. But the warrant, or charter, must always be retained by the master.

SECTION 5.—OF THE DEACONS OF A LODGE.

The deacons are to assist the wardens in the execution of their duties, to examine and welcome visiting brethren, to prepare candidates, and to perform such other services as may be assigned to them.

SECTION 6.—OF THE MASTER OF CEREMONIES.

The duty of this officer is well-known to every mason ; and to others, his title is so evidently plain, as to require little or no explanation.

SECTION 7.—OF THE STEWARDS.

It is the duty of the stewards, to provide the necessary refreshments, and make a regular report of the expense to the treasurer. They are, likewise, to take care, that the regalia of the lodge, be always kept in good order and ready for use.

SECTION 7.—OF THE TYLER OF A LODGE.

In order that a proper regard may be had to decorum, and that secrecy, which is so essentially necessary to be observed in this institution, may not be violated, a brother well skilled in the master mason's part, is, therefore, appointed and paid, for tyling the lodge, during the hours of business; but, in general, a brother ought to be preferred, who is reduced in his circumstances, and to whom, the fees annexed to the office may be of some consequence.

To commit to writing all the duties of this officer, would be improper. They are, however, fixed by custom, from time immemorial, and well known to every brother.

CHAPTER XXVI.

Of Grand Lodges in General.

A GRAND LODGE consists of the masters and wardens of all the regular lodges within its jurisdiction, with the grand master at their head, his deputy on his left, and the grand wardens in their proper places; attended, also, by the grand secretary, grand treasurer, grand tyler, grand pursuivant, and other necessary officers, as will be explained hereafter; all of whom must be master masons.

No new lodge is acknowledged, nor can their officers be admitted to a seat in the grand lodge, until such new lodge be regularly constituted, and registered by the authority of the grand lodge.

All past grand masters, past deputy grand masters, past grand wardens, and past masters of warranted lodges on record, provided they still continue to be members of any regular lodge, are, likewise, by courtesy, as well as by custom, admitted to vote in all grand lodges. By courtesy, also, past grand secretaries, and past grand treasurers, have the privilege of sitting in all grand lodges, and voting on such matters, as by the rules of the grand lodge, they might or could have voted on, while in office.

No master, warden, or other member of the grand lodge, should ever attend the same, without the jewels, which he ought to wear in his own particular lodge, unless he can produce a satisfactory apology for such omission. And when the officer of any particular lodge, from such urgent business as may appear to be a sufficient excuse, cannot personally attend the grand lodge, he may send a brother of his lodge, with his jewel and cloathing, to supply his place, and support the honour of his lodge in the grand lodge; and when it so happens, that a lodge cannot attend the communications of the grand lodge, they may appoint a brother, not under the rank of a past master, to represent them, and vote in their behalf. He, bearing their certificate, under the seal of the lodge, and signed by the master and wardens, may, if approved of by the officers of the grand lodge, take his seat among them, and vote and act in the name of the lodge, which he represents; but no individual can appear for more than one lodge at the same time.

A respectable brother of the rank of master mason, having business, or whose attendance may be necessary in any point of evidence or intelligence, may be admitted into the grand lodge, if that body should deem it proper; but such brother shall have no vote, nor be allowed to speak on any question, without special permission.

The grand lodge must have four stated meetings annually, for quarterly communications, and shall also have other occasional meetings, as business may require; and such meetings shall be held in the grand lodge room only, unless the grand master should, for some particular reason, deem it expedient to appoint some other place, for such special meeting.

All matters in the grand lodge are determined by the majority, each member having one vote, unless in certain cases, where for the sake of expedition, the determination of any particular subject is left to the decision of the grand master.

The business of the grand lodge, whether at quarterly communications, or other meetings, is to consider, transact and settle all matters, which concern the prosperity of the craft in general, or private lodges and individual brethren in particular. Thus all differences, which cannot be accommodated by brethren, who unfortunately have some altercations, nor by any particular lodge, are here to be taken into consideration and decided. But if any brother think himself aggrieved by such decision, he may, by lodging an appeal in writing with the grand secretary, have the matter re-examined and finally determined upon, at the next quarterly communication; provided it be not at the annual meeting of the grand lodge, or on either of the festivals of St. John, on which days, it is agreed by the new regulations, that no petitions or appeals shall be heard, nor any business transacted, which may tend to interrupt the harmony of the assembly; but that all shall be referred to the next meeting of the grand lodge. And in general, whatever business cannot be concluded at any one meeting of the grand lodge, may either be postponed to the next meeting, or be, in the mean time, referred to a committee, by whom it shall be taken into consideration, and who shall report their opinion concerning the matter, at the next meeting.

The officers of all subordinate lodges, under the jurisdiction of the grand lodge, shall, at every quarterly communication, (except the officers of distant lodges, who, shall, annually, on or before the festival of St. John the Evangelist,) deliver an exact list of such members, as have been either made or admitted by them, since the communication immediately preceding; and books shall be kept by the grand secretary, in which the said returns shall be duly recorded, together with all the subordinate lodges, the usual times and places of their meetings, and the names of all their members. In the said books, are also to be registered, all the proceedings of the grand lodge, which are proper to be committed to writing.

It is, likewise, the duty of the grand lodge, to devise the most prudent and effectual means of collecting and disposing of such money as may accrue to the general charitable fund.

SECTION 2.—OF THE ELECTION OF THE GRAND MASTER.

The grand lodge shall assemble in some convenient place, in order to elect new, or re-appoint their old officers; and such election or re-appointment, shall be made in such season, that the grand lodge may be completely organised, and duly prepared for the celebration of the annual feast in June, and the transaction of other important business.

The election may be made, either by the shew of hands, or by ballot, as may be agreed on by the majority ; provided always, that the brother recommended by the grand master in office, as his successor, be the first voted for, and, if he be not chosen, the other candidates in the order they were proposed, until one has the majority of voices, or ballots. When the election is thus made, he is to be proclaimed, installed, and saluted, if present ; but if absent, a day is to be appointed for this ceremony, which is one of a most solemn and serious nature, but cannot be described in writing, as it will never be known to any, except true master masons.

The ceremony of installing the new grand master, is to be conducted by the last grand master ; but he may order any brother, well skilled in the usages observed upon that occasion, to assist him, or to act as his deputy.

In case the new grand master cannot attend at the time appointed for his installation, he may be installed by proxy, on signifying his acceptance of the office ; but such proxy must be either the last, or a former grand master, or else a very reputable past master.

SECTION 3.—OF THE ELECTION OR APPOINTMENT OF THE DEPUTY GRAND MASTER.

The last grand master thus continued, or a new one thus appointed and installed, hath an inherent right to nominate and appoint the deputy grand master ; because as it cannot be supposed, that the grand master can give his attendance on every emergency, it hath, from time immemorial, been deemed proper, not only to allow him a deputy, but that such deputy should be a person, in whom he could repose the fullest confidence, and with whom he could act in the most complete harmony. For this reason, it is evidently proper, that the grand master should have the nomination of his deputy ; although cases may occur, when the grand lodge may deem it expedient to reject the grand master's nomination, and choose for themselves. - Instances of this kind will, however, seldom, if ever, take place in any grand lodge, either in the United States, or in any other country.

The deputy grand master being thus continued, or a new one appointed or chosen as above, he shall be proclaimed, saluted, and congratulated, in due form, on his first appearance in the lodge ; for neither the deputy grand master, nor the grand wardens, can be allowed to appear by proxy, this being the sole prerogative of the grand master.

SECTION 4.—OF THE ELECTION OF GRAND WARDENS.

The grand lodge has the right of electing the grand wardens, and any member has a right to propose for candidates one or both of the former wardens, or to nominate new ones; and the two brethren, who have the majority of votes or ballots, are declared duly elected.

SECTION 5.—OF THE GRAND SECRETARY AND HIS DUTIES.

The office of grand secretary, is one of the most important in the masonic society. All the transactions of the grand lodge, are to be duly recorded by him. All petitions, applications, and appeals, must pass through his hands. No warrant certificate, or instrument of writing from the grand lodge, is considered as authentic, without his attestation and signature, and his affixing the grand seal as the laws require. The general correspondence with lodges and brethren, over the whole world, is to be managed by him, agreeably to the voice of the grand lodge, and directions of the grand master or his deputy, whom he must, therefore, always be ready to attend with the books of the lodge, in order to give all necessary information concerning the state of masonry in general, and of what is necessary to be done on any emergency.

For these reasons, at every annual election, or appointment of grand officers, the nomination or appointment of the grand secretary, has been considered as the right of the grand master, to whom he acts as an amanuensis, and is fully as necessary as his deputy. It is, therefore, held under the old regulations, which yet stand unrepealed, that if the grand lodge should disapprove, either of the deputy grand master or grand secretary, they cannot disannul their appointment, without choosing a new grand master, by which all his appointments will be rendered void. This is a case, however, which hath very seldom happened, in any part of the world, and while brethren continue to be actuated by the benevolent principles of masonry, there will be little necessity for any provisions to guard against such a contingency.

The grand secretary is, ex officio, a member of the grand lodge, and may appoint an assistant or clerk. Such assistant or clerk, however, must be a master mason; but he is not considered as a member of the grand lodge, nor allowed to speak to any question without permission, unless he have otherwise a right by having passed the chair in the grand, or some regular private lodge.

SECTION 6.—OF THE ELECTION AND OFFICE OF GRAND TREASURER.

The grand treasurer is elected by the grand lodge, in the same manner as the grand wardens, and is considered as an officer peculiarly responsible to all the members in due form assembled; since he is entrusted with the charge of their common stock and property. To him, is committed the care of all money raised for the general charity, and for other incidental expenses of the grand lodge, of all which he is to keep a regular account, and specify the respective uses, to which the several sums have been appropriated. He is, likewise, to pay out or expend the same, agreeably to such orders, as the rules of the grand lodge shall allow to be valid.

The grand treasurer is, ex officio, a member of the grand lodge. He may appoint an assistant or clerk, who must have attained, at least, the degree of a master mason; but such person so appointed, shall have no vote, nor liberty of speaking without permission, unless he be otherwise entitled to a seat or vote.

The grand treasurer or his clerk, shall be present at every meeting of the grand lodge, and be ready to attend the grand master, &c. with his books for inspection, when required; and likewise, the meetings of any committee, which may be appointed to adjust and examine his accounts.

SECTION 7.—OF THE GRAND TYLER AND GRAND PURSUIVANT.

Both these officers must be master masons; but neither of them being members of the grand lodge, has a right to speak upon any subject, which may be under discussion, without permission. The grand tyler's duty is, to guard the door on the outside, to see that none enter, except members, and to summon the members to assemble, when directed by the proper officers of the lodge.

The duty of the pursuivant is, to stand at the inward side of the door, and report the names and titles of all who desire admittance, as reported to him by the tyler. He is also to deliver messages, and perform sundry other services, which are known only in the lodge.

The grand deacons, whose duty is well known in the grand lodge, as particular assistants to the grand master and senior warden, in conducting the business of the lodge, are always members of the same; and may be either nominated occasionally on every lodge night, or appointed annually by the grand master, or presiding officer.

SECTION 8.—GENERAL RULES FOR CONDUCTING THE BUSINESS OF THE GRAND LODGE, IN CASE OF THE ABSENCE OF ANY OF THE GRAND OFFICERS.

If the grand master be absent from any meeting of the grand lodge, his deputy takes the chair; in the absence of both, the senior grand warden, and in case that he should likewise be absent, the junior grand warden presides. All grand officers, present and past, take place of every master of a private lodge, and the present grand officers have precedence of all past grand officers. Nevertheless, any of them may wave their privilege, in honour of any eminent brother and past master, whom the lodge may be willing to place in the chair, on some particular occasion.

If neither the present, nor past grand officers should attend at any grand lodge, duly summoned, the master of the senior private lodge, who may be present, is to take the chair, although there may be masters of lodges, who are older masons than he. But to prevent any altercation, the grand master when he finds, that he must necessarily be absent from any grand lodge, usually gives a special commission under his hand and seal, countersigned by the grand secretary, to the senior grand warden, or in his absence, to the junior, or in case of the absence of both, to any other grand officer, or particular master of a private lodge, past or present, to supply his place, if the deputy grand master be necessarily absent.

But if there be no special commission, the general rule of precedence is, that the junior warden supplies the place of the senior in his absence, and if both be absent, the oldest former grand wardens take place immediately, and act as grand wardens pro tempore, unless they should wave their privilege.

When neither the grand wardens of the present, nor of any former year, are in company, the grand master, or he who legally presides in his stead, selects such brother as he deems best qualified to act as deputy grand master and grand wardens pro tempore; although the preference is generally given to the master, or past master, of the oldest lodge present. The presiding officer has the further privilege of appointing a secretary, or any other grand officer, if neither the stated officers nor their deputies be present; it being a standing rule, that the business of the grand lodge must never be suspended for want of officers.

In case of the death of a grand master, the same order of succession and precedence is to take place, as is above mentioned, until a new grand master be duly chosen and installed.

Those who may serve as officers in the grand lodge, may be again chosen officers of private lodges; but this does not deprive them of any of the privileges, to which as former grand officers, they were entitled; only that a former grand officer, being the officer of a private lodge, must depute a past officer of his particular lodge, to act for him in the grand lodge, when he assumes his former rank in the same.

SECTION 9.—OF GRAND VISITATIONS, COMMUNICATIONS, ANNUAL FESTIVALS, &c.

The grand master with his deputy, the grand wardens and grand secretary, shall, if possible, annually visit all the lodges under his jurisdiction; or when this laudable duty becomes impracticable, from the extent of his jurisdiction, he shall as often as may be necessary, and annually, if possible, appoint visitors of different districts, composed of his officers, and such other assistants as he may think proper, who shall report their proceedings to the grand lodge, agreeably to such instructions as may be given them.

When the grand master and his deputy are both absent, the senior or junior grand warden may preside as deputy, in this general visitation, or in constituting new lodges; neither of which can be done, without, at least, one of the present grand officers, except in places at too great a distance from the seat of the grand lodge. In this case, some faithful past master, &c. shall have a deputation under the seal of the grand lodge, if the order be made in the absence of the grand master and deputy, or under their private seals, if they are present; but such instrument must, likewise, before it become valid, be countersigned by the grand secretary. Under such authority, the brother so appointed, shall act as grand master pro tempore, in visiting old lodges, or constituting new ones, in places far distant from the grand lodge, and in remote countries or beyond seas, where it would be impracticable, or, at least, highly inconvenient for the grand lodge to attend.

The brethren of all the regular lodges, under the same jurisdiction and grand communication, shall meet in some convenient place on St. John's day, to celebrate the festival, either in their own, or in such other regular lodge, as they shall judge most convenient; and any brethren, who are found true and faithful members of the ancient craft, may be admitted. Only those, who are members of the grand lodge, can be present at the election of grand officers.

SECTION 10.—PARTICULAR RULES OBSERVED IN THE GRAND LODGE OF NEW-YORK.

Every grand lodge has an inherent right to make local ordinances and new regulations, as well as to amend the old ones, for their own particular benefit, and the good of the fraternity in general; provided, however, that the ancient land marks be carefully preserved, and that such regulations be first proposed in writing for the consideration of the members, and at last, duly enacted by the consent of the majority. This is a point, which has never been disputed; as the members of every grand lodge, are the true representatives of all the fraternity in communication, and constitute an independent body, with legislative authority; provided, as has been already observed, that the grand masonic constitution be not violated, nor any of the old land marks removed.

Upon these principles, the grand lodge of New-York, have made, or adopted, some particular rules, of which the following is an abstract.

1st. Quarterly communications* shall be held in the city of New-York, on the first

* The following are the times and places at which communications are held, in the grand lodges of several of the United States ; from the others, we have been able to obtain no certain information.

Quarterly communications of the grand lodge of New-Hampshire, are held at Portsmouth, in the months of January, April, July, and October.

In Massachusetts, communications are held in Boston, on the second Mondays of December, March, June, and September.

In Rhode-Island, the quarterly communications are holden in Providence, on the last Mondays in February, May, August, and November.

In Connecticut, the communications are semi-annually, viz. in the months of May and October. It is believed, that they are held at Hartford.

The communication for the state of Vermont, is held annually, on the Monday preceding the second Thursday of October, at Windsor and Vergennes, alternately.

The annual communication for the state of New-Jersey, meets at Trenton, on the second Tuesday of November.

In Pennsylvania, the communications are held on the first Mondays in March, June, September, and December.

The grand lodge of Delaware, is held in the borough of Wilmington ; but of the time of its meetings, we are not apprized.

The meetings of the grand lodge of Maryland, are holden in the city of Baltimore.

The communication of the grand lodge of Virginia, is held annually at the city of Richmond, on the second Monday in December.

Wednesdays in March, June, September, and December, when the different lodges are to attend, by their proper officers or deputies.

2d. None except a past master of some regular lodge, who is a resident, or honorary member of the lodge he is chosen to represent, can be admitted as proxy for such lodge; and his commission must be under the seal of the lodge, which appointed him, authenticated by the signature of the master and secretary.

3d. Every member of the grand lodge, must pay into the treasury, quarterly, the sum of fifty cents, and the same sum for non-attendance, at a quarterly communication, unless he produce a satisfactory reason for his absence.

4th. Every member of a lodge constituted under this grand lodge, shall pay quarterly, towards the general charity fund, the sum of twelve and an half cents; but the quarterly

The grand lodge of North-Carolina, meets annually in the city of Raleigh; but we know not the precise time.

In South-Carolina, communications are held quarterly, on the last Saturdays in March, June, September, and on the next Saturday but one, preceding the festival of St. John the Evangelist.

Concerning the meetings of the other grand lodges in the United States, we have only learnt, that the communication of the grand lodge of Georgia, is held at Savannah; that of Kentucky, in the town of Lexington; of Ohio, at Chillicothe; and of Louisiana, at New-Orleans. Of the times when they meet, we have been able to obtain no information.

fees for members of lodges in the city of New-York, are twenty-five cents.

5th. Every person initiated in any lodge, under the jurisdiction of this grand lodge, shall pay one dollar and twenty-five cents, towards the general fund of charity; but those, who are initiated in the city of New-York, shall pay, two dollars and fifty cents to the same purpose; all which dues shall be made good, by every particular lodge, at least once a year, at the communication previous to the feast of St. John the Baptist. But in the city of New-York, all such dues are to be paid quarterly.

6th. Every brother, who shall be returned by his lodge, and registered in the books of the grand lodge, shall pay twelve and an half cents to the grand secretary for such registration.

7th. Every member of a subordinate lodge, who may require a grand lodge certificate, shall pay to the grand secretary one dollar and fifty cents; but no one can obtain such certificate, without a previous one from the lodge of which he is a member, setting forth that he has conducted himself with propriety, and that he has discharged all lodge dues.

8th. All petitions for warrants, shall come recommended by the officers of the lodge, nearest to the place where it is intended that the new lodge should be constituted.

9th. No charter, or dispensation for holding a lodge, shall be granted to any person or persons, residing out of this state; if within the jurisdiction of any other grand lodge.

SECTION 11.—REGULATIONS OF THE COMMITTEE OF CHARITY.

1st. The committee of charity, shall consist of all present and former grand officers, with the masters of all lodges, under the jurisdiction of the grand lodge; who are bound to take all petitions, &c. into consideration, and to order such relief to distressed petitioners, as their cases may severally require.

2d. All collections, and sums of money for charitable purposes, belonging to the grand lodge fund, are to be deposited in the hands of the grand treasurer, or of such other person, as the grand lodge may specially appoint; no part of which fund must be expended, on any account, without an order from the committee of charity, which shall be entered on their book of transactions, with the names of the persons, to whom the same is given.

3d. No anonymous letter, petition, &c. shall be read in the committee, and only registered masons, who have, for twelve months, contributed to the general charity fund, and, for that time, been members of a warranted lodge, are to be relieved. Sojourners and travelling masons, when in distress, are to be assisted by private contributions, out of the general fund, as the majority of the committee may think proper.

4th. All petitions, or recommendations for charity, should be signed by the master and wardens of the lodge, to which the applicant belongs; and, although any brother may send in a petition or recommendation, yet none can be admitted to hear the debates, except the stewards or members of the committee.

5th. It is the inherent right of the committee, which is commonly called "The Steward's Lodge," to dispose of the grand charity fund, to such as shall appear to them to be the most necessitous and deserving, in such manner as they shall deem most effectual for the relief of the distressed brother, or his family. It is, however, expressly enjoined on the committee, that no person initiated in a clandestine or unconstitutional manner, nor any one, who has assisted at such initiation or making, shall ever be entitled to receive any assistance from the said fund.

6th. The committee is, likewise, authorized to hear and adjust all matters, concerning free-masons and masonry, which may be laid before them, (except the making of new regulations,) and the determinations of the committee are final, unless an appeal be made to the grand lodge.

7th. For the speedy relief of distressed petitioners, three of the members are appointed as a sub-committee, who direct donations to be given in such manner, as they may suppose, will be most beneficial to the applicants. All transactions of this committee of charity, or steward's lodge, are to be read audibly in the grand lodge, at their quarterly communications.

8th. So far as this committee shall exercise the power vested in them, in regard to the hearing of complaints, and punishment of delinquents, according to the laws of the craft, they are instructed to adhere most religiously to the following regulation, viz. "If a complaint be made against a brother, by another brother, and he be found guilty, he shall abide by the determination of this committee, or, (in case of an appeal) of the grand lodge. But if the complainant cannot support his charge, he shall incur such penalty as the said committee shall deem just."

9th. The steward's lodge shall meet quarterly, on the last Wednesdays in February, May, August, and November, at which times, the dues of the lodges in the city of New-York, are to be paid; and in default thereof, such lodge so neglecting, shall be precluded from the benefits of the grand lodge, during the existence of such default or delinquency.

A Prayer, which may be used at the Constituting and Opening of a Grand Lodge.

O most glorious, and eternal God, thou infinitely wise Architect of the Universe, we thy servants, assembled in solemn grand lodge, would extol thy power and wisdom.

Thou saidst, "let there be light, and there was light." The heavens opened and declared thy glory, and the firmament shewed thy handy work. The sun, who rules the day, gave light to the moon, who rules by night, surrounded by an innumerable multitude of stars ; so that there is one glory of the sun, another glory of the moon, and one star differs from another in glory, and all, by most wondrous signs and tokens, without voice, sound, or language, solemnly proclaim divine mysteries.

We adore thee for our creation ; for the breath of life ; for the light of reason ; for our preservation to the present period, and for all the noble and useful faculties of our souls, which give us so exalted a rank in the order of being. And we pray thee to enable us to live in conformity to our exalted privileges and happy destination.

We beseech thee to give us, thy servants, at this, and at all times, wisdom in all our doings, fortitude in all our difficulties, and the beauty of harmony in all our communications with one another.

Grant, we beseech thee, that thy servant, who is now to be solemnly invested with the government of these lodges, may be endued with knowledge, discretion, and wisdom ; and may we and all our brethren, under his jurisdiction, not only learn and understand, but keep all the statutes of the Lord, pure and undefiled. May charity and brotherly love always abound amongst us, and when we have finished our work here below, may our transition be from this earthly tabernacle to the heavenly temple above; and may we there appear among thy jewels in glory everlasting.

We pray thee to bless and prosper every branch and member of this fraternity, throughout the habitable globe. May thy kingdom of peace, love, and harmony come. May thy will be done on earth, as it is in heaven, and may the whole world be filled with thy glory.
Amen.

A Benediction, which may be pronounced after the Instalment of a Grand Master.

MAY the Supreme Architect of the Universe shed his blessings abundantly upon this society. Enable his servant, now raised to the office of grand master, over our lodges, to discharge the duties of his important trust, to the honour of his holy name, and to the credit of this happy fraternity.

Amen! So mote it be. Amen!

CHAPTER XXVII.

Of the Education of the Children of Indigent Masons.

A PLAN for the education of the children of indigent masons, had, for some time, been an object of consideration with the grand lodge of the state of New-York, and on the 6th of September, A. L. 5809, the committee, composed of the masters of the several lodges in the city, who had been appointed to take this truly important subject into consideration, made a report to the following purport.

First, that it was essentially necessary, that measures should be adopted to compel a prompt discharge of dues, to effect which, they recommended the adoption of the following resolution.

“ All members of lodges, who are, or shall be, in arrears for one year’s dues, may be suspended by their respective lodges from all masonic communication, and upon report being duly made to the grand lodge, they shall be notified thereof by the grand secretary, and enjoined to discharge or commute the same, within twelve months from the date of such notice, on pain of being excluded, by a formal expulsion, from all communication with, or benefit from, the institution ; which penalty, on failure, and at the instance of the lodge to which the delinquent belongs, shall be duly inflicted."

From the adoption of this measure, or of something similar, the committee anticipated the most beneficial consequences, and stated, as their opinion, that if their calculations were not extremely erroneous, the lodges in the city of New-York, would speedily be placed in such a situation, as would afford, without difficulty, the contributions contemplated in the following plan.

“ For the education of fifty poor children, whose fathers are, or have been, members of the ancient and honourable fraternity of free and accepted masons.

“ 1st. Each lodge in the city of New-York, (of which, at the date of the report, there were twenty-two,) shall pay ten dollars per annum, making two hundred and twenty dollars.

“ 2d. The grand lodge shall contribute, annually, eighty dollars, which, with the preceding sum of two hundred and twenty dollars, from the subordinate lodges in the city, would amount to three hundred dollars, the sum required.

“ 3d. The above sums are to be paid regularly, by the respective lodges in advance, on, or before the quarterly communication, next preceding the anniversary of St. John the Evangelist. Each lodge thus contributing, shall have the right of naming two children, to receive the benefit of this charity, which privilege, if not exercised, at, or before the time prescribed for making the advance payment, is to be considered as relinquished, and to rest in the grand lodge school committee, who shall fill the remaining six places, as also all vacancies, which may occur from individual lodges declining, or neglecting to recommend, as aforesaid."

The general business is conducted by a committee of three, to be chosen by, and from, the grand lodge, and to be denominated, "The Grand Lodge School Committee."

This report was agreed to by the grand lodge, on 30th August, 1809, and has, since that time, been uniformly in operation. It was in contemplation, that these fifty children, should not only be taught, but clothed at the expense of the fraternity. The funds, however, were, at that time, deemed too low to answer both purposes. It was, therefore, deemed expedient, for the present, to confine this charity to the education of the above number of poor children; but, it is believed, that it will not be long, before the funds will be adequate to all the purposes originally contemplated.

We are, likewise, happy to learn, that in all parts of the world, where the craft has become sufficiently numerous, they have very humanely directed their attention to the education of the children of their poor and deceased brethren.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

Ceremony of Constituting and Consecrating a Lodge, Installation of Officers, &c.

ANY number of master masons, not less than seven, desirous of forming a new lodge, must apply, by petition, to the grand lodge of that state in which they reside, setting forth, "that they are regular* master masons; that they are at present, or have been, members of regular lodges; that, having the prosperity of the fraternity at heart, they are willing to exert their best endeavours to promote and diffuse the genuine principles of masonry; that, for the sake of having a place of meeting convenient to their respective dwellings, and other good reasons, they have agreed to form a new lodge, to be named ———, and have nominated and do recommend A. B. to be their first master, C. D. to be their first senior warden, and E. F., to be the first junior warden of the said lodge;

* By regular masons, is to be understood, persons initiated into masonry in a constitutional manner, agreeably to the charges and regulations of the order.

that in consequence of this desire, they pray for a dispensation or warrant of constitution, to enable them to assemble as a regular lodge, in the township of ———, at such times as may be deemed necessary, and then and there to discharge the duties of masonry, in a regular and constitutional manner, according to the original forms of the order, and the laws of the grand lodge ; that should the prayer of the petition be granted, they promise a strict conformity to all the constitutional laws and regulations of the grand lodge.”

This application being duly signed and recommended by brethren of good standing, who are acquainted with the petitioners, is to be laid before the grand lodge, and if it meet their approbation, a warrant is granted in form following ;

“ To all the fraternity, to whom these presents shall come,

“ The grand lodge of the most ancient and honourable society of free and accepted masons of the state of ———, sends greeting,

(SEAL.)

— G. M. presented to us by [Here insert the names of the petitioners] all
 — D. G. M. ancient, free and accepted masons, praying, that they, with such others as shall hereafter join them, may be erected and constituted a regular lodge of free and accepted masons, which petition appearing to us as intended for the advancement of masonry, and the good of the craft, “ Know ye, therefore, that we, the grand lodge aforesaid, reposing special trust and confidence in the prudence and fidelity of our beloved brethren above named, have constituted and appointed, and by these presents, do constitute and appoint the said A. B., C. D., E. F., &c. a regular lodge of free and accepted masons, under the title and designation of ——— lodge ; hereby giving and granting unto them and their successors, full power and authority to convene as masons, within the town of ———, in the county of ———, and ——— aforesaid, to receive and enter apprentices, pass fellow crafts and raise master masons, upon the payment of such compensations as may be determined by the said lodge ; also to make choice of a master, wardens and other officers annually or otherwise, as they shall see cause ; to receive and collect funds for the relief of poor and distressed brethren, their widows and orphans ; and, in general, to transact all matters relating to masonry, which may to them appear to be for the good of the craft, according to the ancient usages and customs of masons.

“ And we do hereby require the said constituted brethren to attend the grand lodge at their quarterly communications and other meetings, by their master and wardens, or by proxies regularly appointed ; also to keep a fair and regular record of all their proceedings, and to lay them before the grand lodge, when required.

“And we do enjoin upon our brethren of the said lodge, that they be punctual in their quarterly payment of such sums as may be assessed on them, for the support of the grand lodge, that they behave themselves with respect and obedience to their superiors in office, and that, in all other respects, they conduct themselves as good masons.

“And we do hereby declare the precedence of the said lodge, in the grand lodge and elsewhere, to commence from the ———.

“In testimony whereof, we, the grand master and grand wardens, by virtue of power and authority to us committed, have hereunto set our hands, and caused the seal of the grand lodge to be affixed, at ———, this ——— day of ———, Anno Domini ———, and of masonry ———.

D. E. grand senior warden,

F. G. grand junior warden.

By order of the grand lodge,

O. P. grand secretary.”

But it is usual, in the first instance, to grant a dispensation, which is signed by the master or deputy grand master, and authorizes the petitioners to hold a legal lodge for a certain limited time.

In some jurisdictions, the grand and deputy grand masters may respectively grant such dispensations; but in others, the special direction of the grand lodge is necessary.

The presiding officers of lodges, working under dispensations, are not entitled to vote in the grand lodge ; nor can such lodges change their officers without the consent of the grand lodge, of which they are merely considered as the agents ; and in case that such lodges should cease to exist, their funds, jewels, and other property, belong to the grand lodge, and must be deposited into the hands of the grand treasurer.

When the conduct of such lodge, however, has been regular during the time of their probation, they will be entitled to the enjoyment of all their privileges, so long as they shall continue to act in conformity to the constitutions and land marks of ancient masonry.

The grand lodge having signified its approbation of the new lodge, the grand master appoints a day and hour for its consecration, and for the installation of the officers, &c.

If the grand master, together with his officers attend the ceremony, the lodge is said to be constituted in ample form ; if the deputy grand master, with the other grand officers, we say it is constituted in due form ; but if the power of performing the ceremony be vested in any subordinate lodge, as is usual in such cases, when the distance is so great as to render it inconvenient for the grand officers to attend, it is said to be constituted in form.

At the time appointed, the grand master and officers (or the master and officers of any private lodge, authorized by the grand master for that purpose) meet in a convenient room, near to that, in which the lodge to be constituted, is assembled.

The officers of the new lodge are to be examined by the deputy grand master; and after they are approved, they return to their lodge and prepare for the reception of the most worshipful grand lodge. When notice is given, that they are prepared, the grand lodge walk in procession to their hall; to whom, on their entrance, the grand honours are paid; and to them the officers of the new lodge resign their seats, and take their stations on the left.

The necessary cautions are then delivered from the chair; after which, all, excepting masters or past masters of lodges, are desired to retire, until the master of the new lodge is placed in the chair of Solomon.

Upon due notice, the brethren return; and all take their places, except the members of the new lodge, who form a procession on one side of the hall to salute their master. The grand master thus accosts them, "Brethren, behold your master." As they proceed, they make the proper salutation, and when they have all passed, the master joins them and takes his proper place.

The lodges then form into such order of procession, as agreeably to the circumstances of the brethren present, may be deemed most suitable and convenient.

The whole procession then moves on towards the church or house, in which it is intended, that the services shall be performed, with the Reverend the clergy, and such other gentlemen of the town and neighbourhood, as may have been invited and are in waiting.

When the front of the procession arrives at the door, they halt, open to the right and left and face inward, while the grand master and others in succession pass through and enter the house or church.

The public services, are such as the brethren of the lodge to be constituted, have previously arranged, with the approbation of the grand master. The business generally commences with a piece of solemn music, followed by prayer, and a discourse delivered by the grand chaplain, or some respectable and intelligent brother, appointed for that purpose.

The grand master, deputy grand master, grand chaplain, and grand secretary, go to the place of consecration, and the officers and brethren of the new lodge, form before the grand master, whom the deputy grand master accosts in the following manner;

“MOST WORSHIPFUL MASTER,

“ A number of brethren, duly instructed in the several degrees of free-masonry, and good workmen, having, by virtue of a dispensation granted them for that purpose, assembled as regular masons, and duly recorded their transactions, now desire to be formed into a regular lodge, under the jurisdiction of the grand lodge, and promise to conform in all things, agreeably to the duty incumbent on all good masons."

The secretary then delivers the dispensation and records to the master elect, who presents them to the grand master, and he, after being satisfied respecting their correctness, observes, that,

"Upon due deliberation, the grand lodge have seen fit to grant the petition of the brethren here assembled, and a charter has been given them, which the grand secretary will now read."

After the charter has been read, the grand master proclaims, "the records appear to be properly entered, and are approved. We shall now, therefore, proceed, according to ancient usage, to constitute these brethren into a regular lodge."

Whereupon, the jewels and badges are delivered by the several officers of the new lodge to their master, who presents them to the deputy grand master, and he presents them to the grand master.

The deputy grand master now presents the master elect, to the grand master, saying,

"MOST WORSHIPFUL,

"I present you, brother ———, whom the members of the lodge, now to be constituted, have chosen as their master."

The grand master asks them, if they remain satisfied with their choice, when they bow in token of assent.

The master then presents his wardens and other officers, one after the other, naming them and their offices. The grand master asks the brethren, if they are still satisfied with each, and all of them. (They give their assent as before.)

The business of consecration commences with solemn music, during which the lodge is uncovered. On the ceasing of the music, all kneeling, the first clause of the CONSECRATION PRAYER is read, as follows:

“Great Architect of the Universe! Maker and Ruler of all Worlds! Deign from thy celestial temple, from realms of light and glory, to bless us in all the purposes of our present assembly.

“We humbly invoke thee, to give us at this, and at all other times, wisdom in all our doings, strength of mind in all our difficulties, and the beauty of harmony in all our communications! Permit us, O thou Centre of light and life, great Source of love and happiness, to erect this lodge, and now solemnly to consecrate it, to thy honour and glory.

“Glory be to God on high.”

[Response by the brethren.]

“As it was in the beginning, is now, and ever shall be, world without end.” Amen.

“ Grant, O Lord, our God, that they who are now to be invested with the government of this lodge, may be endued with wisdom to instruct their brethren in all duties. May brotherly love and charity, always prevail among the members of this lodge, and may this bond of union, continue to strengthen the lodges throughout the world !

“ Bless, we beseech thee, all our brethren, wheresoever dispersed, and grant speedy relief to all, who are either oppressed or distressed.

“ We earnestly recommend to thy fatherly care and protection, all the members of thy whole family. May they increase in the knowledge of thee, and in the love of each other.

“ Finally, We beseech thee to enable us to finish all our works here below, with thy approbation, so that we may have our transition from this earthly abode, to thy heavenly temple above, there to enjoy light, glory, and bliss ineffable.

“ Glory be to God on high.”

[Response by the brethren.]

“ As it was in the beginning, &c.

“ Amen ! So mote it be !. Amen !”

Another.

“ Supreme and most adorable Lord God !
Thou great Creator of heaven and earth, who,

out of thine infinite goodness and mercy to mortal man, hast generously promised, that where they assemble together in thy name, thou wilt hear and grant their requests, we beseech thee, O Lord, to hearken unto the prayers, which we, with grateful hearts, now offer up to thee, for having so long preserved us in health and prosperity; desiring thee still to extend these manifold blessings, to us, and to all men, till it shall please thee to call us from this transitory life to everlasting bliss.

“ Grant, O Lord, that the society which we have formed, and which we this day offer to thy immediate protection, under the name of ——— lodge, may flourish like the green bay tree by the water side. May they, in their journey through life, always bear in mind, the principles of thy most holy religion; and may they always be in preparation for the great change, which will unavoidably happen to all men, so as to die on a level with all mankind, and be ready at a moment's notice, to answer the summons to join the grand lodge above, whose supreme master, is the Great Jehovah, and his officers, the holy angels.

“ And we beseech thee, O Almighty God, to take into thy protection, all our brethren of whatever nation, religion, or degree; desiring thee, to grant them that peace which the world cannot give, that they may always put faith in thee, have hope in thy salvation, and be in charity with all mankind. And, finally, we recommend to thy aid and protection, all our distressed brethren, wheresoever dispersed, over the face of the earth ; grant that they may always experience that relief, which, in thy infinite wisdom, thou mayest think suitable for their several calamities. These, and all other blessings, we beg in the name, and for the sake of Him, who gave his life to save a guilty world from sin and death, to whom, be all honour, glory and power, now, and for ever. Amen.”*

Then succeeds solemn music, while the lodge is covering. After which, the grand chaplain dedicates the lodge, in the following terms :

“ To the memory of HOLY SAINT JOHN, we dedicate this lodge. May every brother revere his character, and imitate his virtues.

“ Glory be to God on high !”

[Response.]

“ As it was in the beginning, &c.”

After this, during solemn music, the officers of the new lodge advance to salute the grand lodge, bowing as they pass. They then take their places, and stand as they were.

* It is not necessary, that the grand chaplain, or brother officiating, should confine himself to either of these forms of devotion : as he may, by consent of the grand master, introduce one of his own, prepared for the occasion.

The music ceases, and the grand master rises, and constitutes the new lodge, after the following form :

“ In the name of the most worshipful grand lodge, I now constitute and form you, my brethren, into a lodge of free and accepted masons. From henceforth, I empower you to act as a regular lodge, by the title and designation of _____ lodge, to be holden in _____, in the county of _____; and you are fully empowered to exercise all the rights and privileges of free-masons, agreeably to the tenure of their charters, the laws of the grand lodge, and the ancient usages of the fraternity; and may the Supreme Architect of the Universe, prosper, direct, and counsel you, in all your undertakings.”

[Response.]

“ Amen ! So mote it be !”

The grand honours are then given, and the ceremony of INSTALLATION succeeds.

The grand master then asks his deputy, “ have you examined the master nominated in the warrant, and do you find him well skilled in the science of masonry, and worthy to be invested with the government of this lodge ?”

The deputy answering in the affirmative, the grand master says, “ present him to me.”

A a

On this, the deputy takes him by the hand, and presents him to the grand master, saying,

“ MOST WORSHIPFUL,

“ I present you my worthy brother, ——— ———, to be installed master of this lodge. I find him to be of good morals and of great skill, true and trusty, and a lover of the whole fraternity, wheresoever dispersed, over the face of the earth ; and I am persuaded that he will discharge his duty with fidelity.”

The grand master then, thus addresses him :

“ BROTHER,

“ Previous to your investiture, it is proper that you signify your assent to those ancient charges and regulations, which contain the duty of a master of a lodge.”

The grand master then reads, or orders to be read, a summary of the ancient charges to the master elect, as follows :

“ I. You agree to be a good man and true, and promise strictly to observe the moral law.

“ II. You agree to be a peaceable subject, and promise, that you will cheerfully conform to the laws of the country in which you reside.

“ III. You promise, that you will not be concerned in any plot or conspiracy against government, and that you will patiently submit to the decision of the supreme legislature.

“ IV. You agree to pay a proper respect to the civil magistrate, to work diligently, to live creditably, and act honourably with all men.

“ V. You agree to hold in veneration, the original rulers and patrons of the order of masonry, and their regular successors, supreme and subordinate, according to their stations; and to submit to the awards and resolutions of your brethren, in general chapter convened, in every case, consistent with the constitutions of the order.

“ VI. You agree to avoid private piques and quarrels, and to guard against intemperance and excess.

“ VII. You agree to be cautious in your behaviour, courteous to your brethren, and faithful to your lodge.

“ VIII. You promise, that you will respect true and lawful brethren, and discountenance all impostors, and dissenters from the original plan of masonry.

“ IX. You promise, that you will exert your utmost endeavours, to promote the general good of society, to cultivate the social virtues, and to propagate the knowledge of true masonry.

“ X. You promise to submit to the grand master for the time being, and to his officers, when duly installed; and strictly to conform to every regulation of the grand lodge, or general assembly of masons, which is not subversive of the principles and ground work of masonry.

“XI. You admit, that it is not in the power of any man, or body of men, to make any alteration or innovation in the science of masonry.

“XII. You promise a regular attendance on the committees, and communications of the grand lodge, on receiving proper notice ; and that you will pay attention to all the duties of masonry, on convenient occasions.

“XIII. You admit, that no new lodge should be formed, without the permission of the grand lodge, and that no countenance should be given to any irregular lodge, or to any person clandestinely initiated therein.

“XIV. You admit, that no person can be regularly made a mason, or admitted into any lodge, without previous notice and due inquiry into his character.

“XV. You agree, that no visitors shall be received into your lodge, without due examination, and producing proper vouchers of their having been initiated in a regular lodge.”

These are the regulations of free and accepted masons.

The grand master then addresses the master elect, in the following manner :

“BROTHER,

“Do you submit to these charges, and promise to support these regulations, as masters have done in all ages before you ?”

The new master having signified his approbation, the grand master says,

“ Brother A. B., In consequence of your conformity to the charges and regulations of the order, you are now to be installed master of this new lodge, in full confidence of your care, skill, and capacity, to govern the same.” He then invests him with his jewel, and proceeds thus,

“ I invest you with the honourable badge of your office, as master of this lodge, and now present you the insignia of your office, and the necessary furniture of your lodge.*

“ The various implements of the profession, are emblematical of our conduct in life, and upon this occasion should be particularly enumerated.

“ This volume, containing the HOLY SCRIPTURES, that great light in masonry, will guide you to all truth ; will direct you to the temple of love, and point out to you the whole duty of man.

“ The SQUARE, the use of which is to bring all rude matter into form, teaches you to form and instruct all masons under your care, so as to make them perfect in the principles of morality and virtue.

* When the grand master is not present, this ceremony may be performed by the deputy grand master ; but, in all other cases, it should be performed by the presiding officer, whether an officer of the grand lodge or deputed for the occasion.

“ The COMPASSES should teach you to keep your brethren within the limits of masonry, and to endeavour to induce them so to regulate their desires, in every station, that they may live respected and die regretted.

“ The RULE directs, that we should pay strict attention to the performance of our duty ; press forward in the path of moral rectitude, in one straight course, ever having eternity in view.

“ The LINE teaches the criterion of moral actions, to avoid dissimulation, both in our words and actions, and to direct our steps to that straight path, which leads to immortality.

“ I present you, also, this book, which contains the Constitutions of masonry. Search it at all times ; cause it to be read in your lodge, that none may pretend ignorance of the excellent precepts, which it contains.

“ Lastly, I give into your charge the by-laws of your lodge. It will be your duty to see that every member abides by them * * * * *

After this, the jewels of the officers of the new lodge, being returned to the master, he delivers them to the several officers of the grand lodge, according to their rank:

The subordinate officers of the new lodge are then invested with their jewels, by the grand officers of corresponding rank, and are, by them, severally, in turn, conducted to the grand master, who delivers to each of them a short charge, to the following purpose :

To the Senior Warden.

“ Brother C. D., you are appointed senior warden of this lodge, and I now invest you with the badge of your office.

“ This LEVEL, as an instrument in your hands, you will use to preserve that equality, which ought to subsist among masons, which nature assigns, and which love requires.

“ Your regular attendance on our stated and special meetings, is highly expedient. In the presence of the master, you are to assist in the government of this lodge, and, in his absence, to take the charge of it. You will undoubtedly discharge with fidelity, the duties of this important office, and become a pillar of strength to the lodge. Look well to the West.”

To the Junior Warden.

“ Brother E. F., you are appointed junior warden of this new lodge, and are now invested with the badge of your office.

“ The PLUMB should teach you to act with that uprightness, which belongs to your office, and that we ought to hold the scale of justice in equal poise, to observe the just medium between pleasure and intemperance, and to make our passions and prejudices coincide with the line of our duty.

“ To you is entrusted the examination of visitors; and the care of the lodge is committed to you, during the hours of refreshment.

“ In the absence of the master and senior warden, you know your duty, and will, it is hoped, faithfully perform it.

“ Beautify your column in the temple of masonry, and look well to the South.”

To the Secretary.

“ Brother G. H., I invest you with the badge of your office, as secretary to this lodge.

“ It is your duty to keep the records regularly, fairly, and faithfully; to receive all monies, and pay the same into the hands of the treasurer.

“ Your love to the craft, and attachment to this lodge, will induce you cheerfully to fulfil the duties of your office, and in so doing, you will merit the esteem of your brethren.”

To the Treasurer.

“ Brother I. K., I invest you with the badge of your office, as treasurer of this lodge.

“ Your honour, and the confidence of your brethren reposed in you, will excite you to that faithfulness in the discharge of the duties of your office, which their important nature demands.”

To the Senior Deacon.

“ Brother L. M., I invest you with the badge of your office, as senior deacon of this lodge.

“ You must be sensible, that your station is one of considerable importance. You will be attentive to the worshipful master, careful in introducing visitors, and in accommodating them. Be watchful in preparation, and although you halt at the door of the temple, lead those rightly, who require it.

“ Your regular and early attendance upon the lodge, being highly necessary, is expected.”

To the Junior Deacon.

“ Brother N. O., I invest you with the badge of your office, as junior deacon of this lodge. Whatever is delivered to you in the West, faithfully carry to the South. To that, which is more immediately your care, be particularly attentive. Prepare duly, lead upon the square, and be prompt like a workman. Your regular attendance on the lodge, it is hoped, will not be neglected.”

To the Stewards.

“ Brothers P. Q. and R. S., you are appointed stewards of this new lodge, and I invest you with the badges of your office. Your duties are, to assist in the collection of dues and subscriptions, to provide necessary refreshment, by the advice of the master, and see the table furnished, at his command ; and you are to keep an exact account of all expense for supplies, and give information of what may be in store, or what may be wanted. Your regular and early attendance on the lodge, will be a sure proof of your attachment to it."

To the Tyler.

" Brother T. U., I invest you with the badge of your office, as tyler to this lodge.

" A faithful discharge of your duty, is necessary for the safety of the craft ; and your constant attention upon the lodge cannot be dispensed with, except by the permission of the master."

The master of the new lodge then advances, and returns thanks to the grand master and officers, after the following manner ;

" MOST WORSHIPFUL,

" Permit me to render to you and to the grand lodge, my thanks, and the thanks of this lodge, for the honour now conferred on us. It shall be our care to cultivate the sublime art, and to perform with assiduity the duties incumbent on us "

The grand master, or some brother, by his appointment, then delivers an address to the master, the officers, and brethren of the new lodge.

Various charges have been composed suitable to this occasion ; but the following being not only brief, but comprehensive, will fully answer the purpose.

Charge to a Master at his Installation.

“ WORSHIPFUL MASTER,

“ You have been of too long standing, and are too good a member of our community, to require, at this time, any information respecting the duties of your office. What you have seen praiseworthy in others, we are persuaded, that you will endeavour to imitate, and that whatever you have seen defective amongst us, you will amend in yourself.

“ We have, therefore, the greatest reason to expect, that you will be constant and regular in your attendance on the lodge, faithful and diligent in the discharge of your duty ; and that you will make the honour of the Supreme Architect of the universe, and the good of the craft, the chief objects of your regard.

“ While we are confident, that you will pay punctual attendance to the laws and regulations of this society, as more particularly becoming your present station, we trust, that you will, at the same time, require a due obedience to them all, from every member, well knowing, that without this, the best laws are useless.

“ For a pattern of imitation, consider the great luminary of nature, which, rising in the east, regularly diffuses light and lustre to all within its circle. In like manner, it is your province to spread and communicate light and instruction to the brethren of the lodge. Forcibly impress upon them the dignity and high importance of masonry, and seriously admonish them never to disgrace them. Charge them to practise out of the lodge, those duties, which they have been taught in it, and by amiable, discreet, and virtuous conduct, to convince mankind of the goodness of the institution, so that when any one is said to be a member of it, the world may know, that he is one, to whom the burthened heart may pour out its woes ; to whom distress may prefer its suit ; whom bigotry has never prevented from being the friend of virtuous men of all professions ; whose hand is guided by justice, and heart expanded by benevolence ; who listens to the admonitions of temperance, and the modest voice of humility ; and whose life demonstrates his love of God, and regard to men. Tell them, that whatever eloquence they may exert in speaking of the excellence of their order, it is their example only, which can recommend and do service to it. In short, by a diligent observance of the by-laws of your lodge, the constitutions of masonry, and above all, the holy scriptures, which are given as a rule and guide to your faith, you will be enabled to acquit yourself with honour and reputation, and lay up a crown of rejoicing, when time shall be no more.

“ BROTHER SENIOR AND JUNIOR WARDENS,

“ And other officers of the lodge, you will remember, that it is your duty to assist the master in the discharge and execution of his trust, to diffuse light, and impart knowledge, to all the brethren under his care; to keep them in just order, so that nothing may obstruct the peace and harmony of the lodge; and that these may be the better preserved, you must carefully enquire into the character of all candidates for admission into this society, and recommend no one, who, in your opinion, is unworthy of the privileges of freemasonry, rejecting those, who would dishonour our cause, and disturb our peace.

“ Encourage the brethren to work cheerfully, giving them refreshment in their fatigue, and reward for their merit; so that when dismissed, none may go away dissatisfied.

“ BRETHREN OF ——— LODGE,

“ Such is the nature of our institution, that, as some must, of necessity, rule and teach, others, must, of course, learn to submit and obey. Humility is, in both, an essential duty. The officers, who are appointed to govern this lodge, are so well acquainted with the laws of the institution, that they will not exceed the powers, with which they are entrusted; and you are of too generous dispositions, to envy their preferment. You will, therefore, readily follow their advice and instruction, submit cheerfully to their decisions, and lay aside all resentments and prejudices against each other. Let complacency and benevolence, distinguish all your communications, so that you may be BRETHREN, not only in name, but in the full import and extent of so endearing an appellation.

“ Finally, my brethren, as this association has been formed and perfected in so much unanimity and concord, in which we greatly rejoice, so may it continue. Then the genuine principles of free-masonry will be cultivated and supported, and your lodge will flourish and be truly respectable; you will bring credit to the craft, and do good to mankind. With this pleasing prospect, I rest assured of your steady perseverance, and conclude, with wishing you, my brethren, joy in your master, wardens, and other officers, and in your establishment and union; and may the tenets of our profession, be transmitted through your lodge, pure and unimpaired from generation to generation.”

The grand marshal then proclaims the new lodge, in the following manner, viz.

“ In the name of the most worshipful grand lodge of the state of ———, I proclaim this new lodge, by the name of ——— lodge, duly constituted.”

This proclamation is made thrice, with the honours of masonry.

The grand master then orders, that the lodge be registered in the grand lodge books, and that the grand secretary signify the same, to the regular lodges.

The grand chaplain then makes the concluding prayer, and the grand procession being formed in the same manner as before, returns to the hall.

The grand master, deputy grand master, and wardens, being seated, the procession continues round the hall, and upon passing the several grand officers, pays them due homage. During the procession, which passes three times round the lodge, the following is sung :

HAIL, MASONRY divine !
 Glory of ages shine ;
 Long may'st thou reign :
 Where'er thy lodges stand,
 May they have great command,
 And always grace the land,
 Thou Art divine !

Great fabrics still arise,
 And grace the azure skies ;
 Great are thy schemes :
 Thy noble orders are Matchless beyond compare ;
 No art with thee can share,
 Thou Art divine.

Hiram the architect,
 Did all the craft direct
 How they should build ;
 Sol'mon, great Isr'el's king,
 Did mighty blessings bring,
 And left us now to sing,
 Hail, royal Art !

CHAPTER XXIX.

A Charge at Constituting, which, with occasional abridgments, may be used at the Visitation of Lodges, by the M. W. Josiah Bartlet, Esq. of Massachusetts.

THE attainment of happiness, in some form or other, has been the constant pursuit of man ; but while wealth, honour and pleasure, have been prevailing objects of attention, the philanthropist has employed his talents, by various means, to sweeten the bitter cup of adversity, and extend the blessings of friendship and universal charity.

Among these, the institution of free-masonry, sustains a distinguished rank ; and although we cannot on this occasion, delineate its origin or history, we are well assured, that its principles and influence have existed from the earliest ages, continued in different nations, and been diffused in a degree, proportionate to the rise and progress of learning, arts, freedom, and religion ; nor have the beneficial effects, of its doctrines and precepts, been wrapt up in the veil of secrecy, for we might look back, to the times of the patriarchs and prophets, and find the names of those, who were justly venerated for their wisdom, prudence, and liberality ; and, in every generation, from the days of Solomon, to the present period, we might trace the virtue, benevolence, and patriotism, of those, who have strenuously advocated, the interests of this ancient fraternity.

It is by a frequent recurrence, to the nature and design of our society, that we are enabled to illustrate its usefulness ; and, at this time, it is peculiarly proper to consider the general method of preserving inviolate, and transmitting to posterity, its privileges.

The qualifications of candidates for initiation, first claim our attention ; and is a subject, in which, the honour and happiness of the craft are so deeply interested, that it is the indispensable duty of every good mason, to consider it. Natural benevolence, industry, temperance, and economy, are the characteristic marks of an honest mind, and if united, will lead to utility and public influence. But when from personal motives, or with a view to benefit the funds of the lodge, we admit a person of doubtful character, we not only violate our trust, but defeat our own purposes ; for agreeably to the words of an inspired grand master of old, “ In the house of the righteous is much treasure ; but in the revenue of the wicked is trouble." Prov. xv. 6.

The next object of importance, is the appropriation of a suitable time, for the instruction of Entered Apprentices and Fellow Crafts ; for it frequently happens, for reasons, which, at the time may appear plausible, that brethren are admitted Master Masons, in a manner injurious to themselves, and derogatory to the lodge ; since, as they have suddenly attained this privilege, they have fewer inducements for improvement, and are seldom qualified to fill with dignity, any of the important offices belonging to the institution.

A punctual attendance at the stated meetings, when our necessary avocations will permit, is essential to the prosperity of the lodge, and highly conducive to our improvement as individuals. It discovers a respect for the institution, enlivens our fraternal union, reminds us of our engagements to each other, and cherishes those friendly sentiments, which are the strength and ornament of our profession.

In a country like this, where every member of the community is versed in the rights of society, and taught from his infancy, that distinctions and preferment should be the reward of merit only, it is scarcely proper to mention the necessity of prudence and circumspection in the choice of officers. Those, who are honoured with the suffrages of the brethren, should always remember, that their dignity consists in an entire conformity to the laws and regulations, under which they are appointed; and the members should consider, that a due submission, to the constitutional commands of those, who are appointed to govern, is no more than a just compliment to themselves.

A. regular intercourse with the grand lodge, either by the master and wardens, or a discreet and well informed representative, is of the greatest consequence, as it not only promotes that harmony, which is the cement of our society, but is the easiest way of communicating with those, who are alike prepared, to sympathize in all our sorrows, and participate in our joys.

By a frequent and attentive perusal of the book of constitutions, and other publications of a similar nature, we shall be acquainted with the duties of our calling, and may be qualified, not only to preserve the ancient land marks of our fathers, but to sustain with honour, the most exalted offices among the brethren.

The flourishing state of masonry in this country, has greatly contributed to enlarge the boundaries of social happiness; and a general enjoyment of its principles and ceremonies, has, with the enjoyment of civil and religious freedom, extended the blessings of philanthropy among every class of our fellow citizens.

We now, my beloved brethren, congratulate you on the establishment and prosperous situation of this respectable lodge, solemnly constituted for the promotion of morality and virtue ; and we offer our fervent wishes for your personal and public felicity. By a careful observance of the precepts, which have been repeated, you may eradicate prejudices from the minds of those, who are candid and will discover, that though you possess secrets for your immediate benefit, your benevolence is imparted to the whole family of mankind.

While the fair, and most amiable part of the creation, are not admitted into the lodge, let your constant endeavours to render them happy, remove every suspicion of a want of confidence, and convince them, that their importance is not diminished, by that universal custom, which prevents their connexion with this, and several other societies, whose laws and regulations do not accord with their dispositions, nor suit their convenience.

Long may you enjoy every satisfaction and delight, which disinterested friendship can afford. May kindness and brotherly affection distinguish your conduct as men and masons. Within your peaceful walls, may your children's children celebrate with gratitude, the transactions of this auspicious solemnity ; and may future generations, animated by the recollection of your exertions, transmit a benediction to their successors, like that contained in this ancient and truly expressive language ;

“ God Almighty bless thee, and make thee fruitful, and multiply thee, that thou mayest inherit the land wherein thou art a stranger ; and thou shalt spread abroad to the west, and to the east, to the north, and to the south : and in thee, and in thy seed, shall all the families of the earth be blessed.”

CHAPTER XXX.

Ceremony observed on laying the foundation stone of public structures.

THIS ceremony is conducted by the grand lodge, and by such officers and members of private lodges, as may find it convenient to attend, accompanied by the magistrates of the place where the building is to be erected, as well as the most respectable inhabitants in the vicinity.

At the time appointed, the grand lodge is convened at some convenient place. Music is provided, and the brethren appear with the insignia of their order. The lodge is opened by the grand master, and the rules for forming the procession are read by the grand secretary. The necessary cautions are then given from the chair, and the lodge is adjourned. They then move in procession to the place, where the foundation of the building is to be laid.

A triumphal arch is usually erected on the spot, where the ceremony is to be performed, under which, the brethren repair to their station, and the grand master and his officers, take their place on a temporary platform, covered with a carpet. An ode suitable to the occasion, is then sung.

The grand master commands silence, and the necessary preparations are made for laying the stone, on which is engraven the year of masonry, with the name and titles of the grand master, &c. The workman's tools are presented to the grand master, who applies them to the stone in their proper positions, and pronounces it to be, "WELL-FORMED, TRUE AND TRUSTY." The stone is next raised, by means of an engine erected for that purpose, and the grand chaplain, delivers a prayer, to the following purport:

"May the Grand Architect of the Universe, grant a blessing on this foundation-stone, which we have now laid; and by his providence, enable us, to finish this, and all our works, with skill and success.

"Glory be to God in the highest."

[Response by the brethren.]

"As it was in the beginning, is now, and ever shall be.

After solemn music, the grand treasurer, by the grand master's command, places under the stone, various coins and medals of the present age ; and the stone is placed in the manner, in which it is intended that it should lie.

The cornucopia, and two silver vases, are next brought to the table, when the former is delivered to the deputy grand master, and the two vases to the wardens, who successively present them to the grand master, and he, according to ancient ceremony, pours the corn, the wine, and the oil, on the stone, saying,

“ May the all-bounteous Author of Nature, bless the inhabitants of this place, with all the necessaries, conveniences, and comforts of life ; assist in the erection and completion of this building ; protect the workmen against every accident ; and long preserve the intended structure from decay. And grant to us all, according to our several necessities, the CORN of nourishment, the WINE of refreshment, and the OIL of joy.”

“ Amen ! So mote it be. Amen !”

He then strikes the stone thrice, with the mallet, and masonic honours are given.

The grand master then delivers to the master workmen, the various implements of architecture. After which, he re-ascends the platform, and an oration, suitable to the occasion is delivered.

An ode, in honour of masonry, is then sung ; after which, the procession returns, and the lodge is closed in form.

SECTION 2.—CEREMONY AT THE OPENING OF A BRIDGE.

The grand lodge, the neighbouring lodges, and individual brethren, walk in procession to the new bridge, accompanied by the magistrates, and other respectable citizens in the vicinity. They form, in order, at the entrance of the bridge, when the grand master with his wardens, examine the work, and finding it to be "WELL CONSTRUCTED, AND FIT FOR PUBLIC USE," he causes proclamation to be made accordingly. The masonic honours are then given, which are followed by an address, and an ode adapted to the occasion. They then march over the bridge, and return with music, when the proclamation is repeated ; after which, it is usual to have a discharge of artillery. The grand lodge then returns in procession, and is closed in form.

SECTION 3.—CEREMONY OBSERVED AT THE DEDICATION OF FREE-MASON'S HALLS.

On the day appointed for dedication, the grand lodge meet in a convenient room adjoining to the place, in which the ceremony is to be performed, and is opened in form, in all the degrees of masonry. The order of procession is read by the grand secretary, and committed to the grand marshal; after which, the necessary directions are given to the brethren, from the chair. The lodge is then adjourned, the procession commences, and moves forward, till it reacheth the master's chair. The officers of the lodge are then proclaimed, and solemn music is introduced and continued, while the procession moves three times round the hall. The lodge is then placed in the centre, and the grand master having taken the chair, under a masonic canopy, the masters and wardens of lodges, repair to the places previously assigned for their reception. The THREE LIGHTS, and the gold and silver vases, with the corn, wine, and oil, are placed on the lodge, at the head of which stands the PEDESTAL, with the bible open, the square and compasses laid thereon, and the constitution roll on a crimson velvet cushion. An anthem is then sung, and an encomium on masonry is delivered. The architect returns thanks to the grand master, for the honour conferred on him, and surrenders the implements entrusted to him for finishing the work. The grand master having expressed his approbation, an ode is sung accompanied by instrumental music. After this, such of the spectators as are not masons withdraw. The lodge being tiled, the business of masonry is resumed. The grand secretary informs the grand master, that it is the desire of the fraternity, to have the hall dedicated to masonry, upon which, he orders his officers to assist in the ceremony. Solemn music commences, and is continued, except at the intervals of dedication.

The lodge is uncovered, and the first procession being made round it, the grand master having reached the east, strikes thrice with his mallet, and, after profound silence, dedicates the hall to MASONRY, "in the name of the GREAT JEHOVAH, to whom, be all glory and honour." Upon which, the grand chaplain strews corn over the lodge.

Solemn music then begins, and a second procession is made round the lodge, when, on the grand master's arrival at the east, silence is again proclaimed, and he declares the hall dedicated as before, to VIRTUE; on which the grand chaplain sprinkles wine on the lodge.

Solemn music is again performed, and a third procession takes place round the lodge; when the grand master having reached the east, silence is enjoined, and the hall is dedicated as before, to UNIVERSAL BENEVOLENCE. Here, the grand chaplain dips his fingers in the oil, and sprinkles it over the lodge. At each dedication, the honours are given.

Prayer by the grand chaplain, with responses from the brethren, follow; after which, an anthem is sung. The lodge is then covered, and the grand master retires to the chair.

The spectators may now return, and the grand master may direct the procession to be resumed, and to march three times round the hall, halting each time on their arrival at the east. The music is continued, during the moving of the procession, but is suspended, when it halts. The members of the grand lodge now take their places, and an oration, suited to the occasion, is delivered by the grand chaplain, or some other brother, appointed for that purpose, by the grand master.

The grand lodge again forms in procession as at first, and returns to the room, where it commenced, the laws of the order are rehearsed, and the grand lodge is closed in ample form.

SECTION 4.—CEREMONIES OBSERVED AT FUNERALS, WITH THE SERVICE TO BE USED ON SUCH OCCASIONS.

The practice of funeral rites, has been general in all ages and nations. It affords an opportunity for the recollection of the virtues of the deceased, as well as for the public testimony of the friendship, which has subsisted between the dead and the living. It at once assists sympathy, and is greatly subservient to the cause of virtue.

The ceremonies are different in different nations, but general conformity has been recommended amongst the masonic fraternity. They have also their usual forms, in which they express their common friendship, in mourning for the deceased.

No mason can be interred with the formalities of the order, unless by his own special request, to the master of the lodge of which he was a member, nor unless he has been promoted to the third degree of masonry; foreigners, soldiers, and particular officers, excepted. From the above restrictions, there can be no other exceptions.

The master of a lodge, being notified of the death of a master mason, and of his request to be interred with the ceremonies of the order, as also of the time and place of interment, must summon his lodge.

If more lodges are expected to attend, he must apply to the grand master, for permission to preside over such brethren from other lodges, as may assist in forming the procession, who are to be under his direction, unless the grand master, his deputy, or grand wardens, are present. In case of a stranger, the master of the senior lodge present presides, if the grand officers are absent.

The dispensation being obtained, the master may invite as many lodges as he may think proper. All the brethren ought to appear in decent mourning, dressed in white stockings, gloves, and aprons, the usual clothing of master masons.

The officers must appear with the badges of the lodge, and such as have holden offices, may wear the badges of their former stations; provided, that the brethren actually in office, are sufficiently distinguished by sashes, &c.

The lodge being opened in the usual manner, at the hall, or some other convenient place, the brethren proceed in procession to the house of the deceased. If singers be present, an anthem may be sung. The master then proceeds to the head of the corpse, when the service begins, the master or chaplain, saying,

“What man is he that liveth, and shall not see death? Shall he deliver his soul from the hand of the grave?”

Response. “Man walketh in a vain shadow; he heapeth up riches, and cannot tell who shall gather them.”

Master or Chaplain. “When he dieth, he shall carry nothing away; his glory shall not descend after him.”

Response. “Naked he came into the world, and naked he must return. The Lord gave, and the Lord hath taken away; blessed be the name of the Lord.”

The grand honours are then given, and certain forms used, which it would be improper, in this place to explain. Solemn music is introduced, during which, the master strews herbs or flowers over the body; and taking the sacred roll in his hand, he says,

“Let me die the death of the righteous, and let my last end be like his.”

The brethren answer,

“God is our God forever and ever; he will be our guide even unto death.”

The master then puts up the roll and says,
 “ Almighty Father ! into thy hands we commend the soul of our loving brother.”

The brethren answer three times,

“ The will of God is accomplished ! so be it ;” and the masonic honours are given each time.

The master or chaplain then repeats the following prayer, or some other to the same purpose.

“ Most glorious God, author of all good, and giver of all mercy, pour down thy blessings upon us, and strengthen our solemn engagements with the ties of sincere affection. May the present instance of mortality remind us of our approaching fate ; and by drawing our attention towards thee, the only refuge in time of need, may we be induced so to regulate our conduct here, that when the awful moment shall arrive, at which we must quit this transitory scene, the enlivening prospect of thy mercy may dispel the gloom of death, and that after our departure from hence in peace and in thy favour, we may be received into thine everlasting kingdom, and there enjoy in union with our departed friends, that uninterrupted and unceasing felicity, which is allotted to the souls of just men made perfect. Amen.”

An anthem being sung, the master retires from the corpse and the coffin is nailed. A suitable oration is delivered, after which the brethren join hands and renew to each other, in silence, their pledged vows.

The lodge is adjourned, and the procession goes on to the place of interment, where an exhortation is delivered by the master or chaplain, to the following purpose ;

“ Here we view a striking instance of the uncertainty of life, and the vanity of all human pursuits. The last offices paid to the dead, are only useful as they are lectures to the living. From them, we are, therefore, to derive instruction, and ought to consider every solemnity of this kind as a summons to prepare for our approaching dissolution.

“ Notwithstanding the various mementos of mortality, with which we so often meet ; notwithstanding our thorough conviction, that death has established his empire over all the works of nature ; yet, through an unaccountable infatuation, we are still apt to forget, that we are born to die. We go on, from one design to another, add hope to hope, and lay out plans for the employment of many years, until we are suddenly alarmed with the approach of death, and that too, at a time when we least expect him, and at an hour, which we may have probably concluded would be the meridian of our existence.

“ What are all the externals of majesty, the pride of wealth, or the charms of beauty, when nature has paid her just debt ? If, for a moment, we devote our attention to the last scene, view life stripped of its ornaments, and exposed in its natural meanness, we shall then be convinced of these empty delusions. In the grave, all fallacies are detected, all ranks are levelled, and all distinctions done away.

“ While we drop the sympathetic tear over the grave of our deceased friend, let charity induce us to throw a veil over his foibles, and let us not withhold from his memory the praise, to which, from his virtues, he was entitled. Suffer the infirmities of human nature to plead in his behalf. Perfection has never been attained in this life. The wisest, as well as the best of men have erred. Let us, therefore, imitate his meritorious actions, and derive instruction from his weakness.

“ May the present example excite our serious attention, and strengthen our resolutions of amendment, and as life is uncertain, and all earthly pursuits vain, may we no longer postpone the important concern of preparing for eternity ; but embrace the happy moment, while time and opportunity permit, to provide with care against that great change, when the pleasures of this world shall cease to delight, and the reflections of a life spent in the exercise of piety and virtue, can yield us the only comfort and consolation.

“ Thus shall our expectations be realized, and we shall not be hurried unprepared, into the presence of our omnipotent and all-seeing Judge.

“ To conclude : let us support with propriety, the character of our profession ; on every occasion, advert to the nature of our solemn engagements, and pursue with unwearied assiduity, the sacred tenets of masonry ; so that from the endearments of a virtuous society on earth, we may be raised to immortal bliss, in the mansions of everlasting felicity, eternal in the heavens."

The following invocations are then to be made, by the master, each of which is to be accompanied by the usual honours.

Master. "May we be true and faithful; and live and die in love."

The Brethren. "So mote it be."

Master. "May we profess that which is good, and always act agreeably to our profession."

Brethren. "So mote it be."

Master. "May the Lord bless us, and prosper us; and may all our good intentions be crowned with success."

Brethren. "So mote it be."

The secretaries then advance, and throw their rolls into the grave, with the usual forms, while the chaplain or master, pronounces, with an audible voice,

"Glory be to God on high; on earth, peace, and good will towards men."

Brethren. "So mote it be, now, from henceforth, and for evermore."

The master then concludes the ceremony at the grave, in some such form as the following:

"BRETHREN,

"From time immemorial, it has been an established custom among the fraternity of free and accepted masons, when requested by a brother on his death-bed, to accompany his corpse to the place of interment, and there to deposite his remains with the usual formalities.

“ In conformity to this laudable usage, and at the special request of our deceased brother, whose memory we revere, and whose loss we deplore, we are here assembled in the character of masons, to resign his body to the earth, from whence it came, and to offer up the last tribute of our affection to his memory; thereby demonstrating to the world, the sincerity of our past esteem, and steady attachment to the principles of our honourable order.

“ With due respect to the established customs of the country, in which we reside, with due deference to our superiors in church and state, and with unlimited good-will to all mankind, we appear in the character of our profession. Invested with the badges of masonry, we on this solemn occasion, declare our obedience to the laws of the country in which we live, and an ardent wish to promote the general welfare and prosperity of society. We humbly implore the blessing of heaven, on all our endeavours for this laudable purpose; and pray, that, during the whole of our lives, we may never deviate from a perseverance in the principles of piety and virtue.

“ As it has pleased God, in the removal of our brother, to weaken the chain, by which we are linked together, it becomes us, who survive him, to be more strongly cemented in the ties of unity and friendship ; and, in some measure, to make up his loss, in a warmer zeal and fidelity, in all the characters and duties of life.

“ Unto the grave, we resign the body of our friend and brother. (The body is entombed, the Ψ dropped, and each brother near, deposits a shovel full of earth on the coffin, if permitted.)

“ Friend of our hearts, there rest in peace. Raised by the Grand Master's word, mayest thou hereafter share the honours of perfection, and the joys of bliss immortal.

“ Amen ! So mote it be. Amen !

“ Farewell ! We will meet again.”

Here the service ends, when the usual honours are given, and the procession returns to the place, from whence it set out.

The brethren being arrived at the lodge, the necessary duties are complied with, and the business of masonry is resumed. The regalia, and ornaments of the deceased, if an officer of a lodge, are returned to the master in due form, with the usual ceremonies ; after which, the charges for regulating the conduct of the fraternity are rehearsed, and the lodge is closed, in the third degree, with a blessing.

Another form of Funeral Service.

The brethren should first assemble, if it be possible, in their lodge room, and after having opened in due form, should remain standing during the first part of the service, which may, in common cases, be performed in their hall, with the usual ceremonies.

A procession is then formed, the lodges then move according to seniority, except that the one of which the deceased was a member, immediately follows the corpse.

When arrived at the place of interment, the brethren proceed to the foot of the grave, and open, so that the master may stand at the head of the grave, and the mourners may halt at the foot, whilst the brethren encircle it.

If no part of the service has been already performed in the lodge, or some other place, with the proper ceremonies, it is to be now rehearsed; or such service as may be substituted by direction of the master.

The service may be performed by responses, or by one voice, at discretion.

The master, or chaplain by his direction, begins, thus,

“Where is now our brother?”

“He sojourneth in darkness.”

“Can we redeem our brother?”

“We have not the ransom. The place that knew him, shall know him no more.”

“ Shall his name be lost ?”

[Here the roll is unfolded.]

“ The memory of a brother is precious, we will record his name.”

[Viewing the roll.]

“ Write it here.”

“ We will write it in our hearts.”

“ How will it then be known ?”

[Here strew flowers.]

“ It shall live in his virtues, which shall live in us, and in every brother.”

“ Was he worthy ?”

“ Like him we will be, brethren, and our last end shall be in peace.”

“ He was, indeed, our brother.”

“ But who hath done this ?”

“ The LORD gave, and the LORD taketh away.”

“ Let us then bless the name of the LORD.”

EJACULATION.

“ What is our life ? It is a shadow ! A dream !”

“ We once were ; but, what were we ?”

“ Whither are we going ? What shall we become ?”

“ Who is poor ? Who is rich ? The king and the beggar lie down together !”

“ Our brother hath forsaken us !”

“ He is no longer one of ourselves !”

“ Every connexion of life has ceased !”

“ The form is no longer beautiful !”

“ He stretcheth not his hands to us !”

“ The hour of death hath overtaken him !”

“ Shall not some friend comfort us ?”

Here an oration may be delivered, but if one has not been prepared for the occasion, the following may answer.

“ Thus, our brother has reached the end of life ! How many offerings has he made upon the altar of charity ? How honourably has he sustained the cares of life ? How did he make the hearts of all around him happy ? He revered the laws of his country, and his religion taught him to love mankind, and to endeavour, by every means in his power, to promote their happiness and prosperity.

“ But he has bidden us the last farewell. We must, therefore, acquiesce in the dispensations of Divine Providence, and say, farewell, our brother. Go, visit the grand lodge of brethren ! Go, meet thy God, and may it be thy happy portion to live with Him, in immortal bliss, through all the ages of a never-ending eternity. May we be faithful, and may our eyes be closed in peace ; and let it be impressed on the minds of each of us, that it ought to be our constant study, to live in such a manner that we need not be afraid to die, so that when the great king of terrors shall stare us in the face, we may be enabled to say, “ O death, where is thy sting ? O grave, where is thy victory ? But thanks be to God, which giveth us the victory, through our Lord Jesus Christ. Therefore, my beloved brethren, be ye steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord; forasmuch as ye know, that your labour is not in vain in the Lord.

“Farewell, dear brother, till the grand summons shall call us from hence to the world of spirits.”

“Then, brother, we will rise and meet thee, as we trust, in glory everlasting.”

“Glory be to God on high.”

“As it was in the beginning, is now, and ever shall be. Amen.”

The following prayer, or one to a similar purpose, may then be read or repeated.

“Light of life! all things live before thee! the darkness and the light are both alike to thee! with thee, there is no darkness; for thou seest us at our birth, and at our death. Thou knowest us, when in the womb and in the grave. Thou forgettest not, where we have been, and knowest where we are to be. We are always present with thee, and our thoughts never perish from thy remembrance. May our brother live with us, as well as with thee. May good tidings be on our lips and his works written on our hearts. “May we all die the death of the righteous, and our latter end be like his.” Let his death teach us that we too must die, and may our conduct be so regulated by thy grace, that at our exit from this world of cares, we may be deemed worthy of taking our seats in the grand lodge above.

“ Amen ! So mote it be ! ”

Then the brethren join hands, and renew, in silence, the tokens of their friendship. If they choose to have devotional music, it may now be performed.

The body is then deposited into the silent grave.

After which, the following declaration and prayer, or one to the same purpose, shall be read or spoken extempore.

“ BRETHREN,

“ With proper respect to the established customs of the country in which we reside, with due deference to our superiors in church and state, and with unlimited good will to the whole of the human race, we appear in the character of our profession. Invested with the badges of masonry, we publicly declare our obedience and submission to the laws and government of the country in which we live, and an ardent wish to promote the general good of society.

“ As it hath pleased the Divine Creator, to remove our brother from this transitory state of existence, and to weaken the chain by which we are linked one to another, may his death remind us, that our own must soon take place, and incline us, who survive him, to be more united in the ties of friendship and brotherly love.

“ To the grave, we resign our brother, in expectation of his immortal happiness, and we humbly hope, that our Almighty Creator will graciously hear us, when we now attempt to approach him as the hearer of prayer.

“ Almighty God, of infinite mercy and goodness, extend to us the riches of thine everlasting favour, and crown thy present benefits with honour and immortality, and to God, be glory for ever. Amen.”

Then the † is dropped into the grave, and each brother near it, may, if permitted, throw on the coffin, a shovel full of earth.

The brethren then return to the hall or place where they formed, the proper charges are given, and the lodge is closed with a blessing.

“ May the Lord bless us, and keep us. May he give us light and truth, and unite our hearts for ever.”

“ Amen ! So mote it be !”

sion follow.

NOTES.

When two or more lodges walk in procession, they form as above, either in one body or in separate lodges. If separately, the youngest lodge precedes the elder.

The marshals are to walk on the left of the procession.

All officers of lodges, in procession, should wear the badges of their office.

None except master masons, are to wear decorated aprons. Those on the third step, may have an edging of silk, or a square and compass made of silk, and the aprons of those of higher degrees, according to their order. None but officers, who must always be master masons, are permitted to wear sashes ; and this decoration is only for particular officers.

If a past or present grand master, deputy grand master, or grand warden, should join the procession of a private lodge, they are to be treated with that attention, which is due to their respective stations. They take place after the master of the lodge. Two deacons with black rods, one on the right and another on the left, attend a grand warden, and when a grand master, or deputy grand master is present, the book of constitutions is borne before him, a sword bearer follows him, and the deacons with black rods are placed on his right and left, at an angular distance of five feet, as in No. 2.

Musicians, if belonging to the fraternity, walk in the procession, after the tyler ; but if they be not masons, they precede the tyler, or walk on the right and left of the procession.

The order of procession No. 1 is suitably formed for funerals. The cushion on which the holy bible is placed, is covered with black silk or black cloth ; a black silk knot is placed at the end of each steward's rod, and also on the musical instruments. The procession immediately precedes the corpse, and the brethren walk two and two, except such officers, as from their station, are to walk otherwise.

When a new lodge is to be consecrated &c., that lodge is always to form separately, and its place in the procession is immediately preceding the grand lodge.

CHRONOLOGY

Before Christ.

- 3875 CAIN and his adherents, having been instructed in the sciences of geometry and architecture, by the first mason Adam, built a city, which he called Enoch, after the name of his oldest son.
The posterity of Cain, Jabel, Jubal, and Tubal-Cain, not only improved in masonry and geometry, but made discoveries in several other useful arts.
See Genesis iv. 17. 20, 21, 22.
- 2348 The ark, in which Noah and his three sons, Shem, Ham, and Japhet, all true masons, were preserved, built.
- 2217 Nimrod, the grandson of Ham, and founder of the Babylonian monarchy, built many cities in Shinaar.
- 2188 Metzaim or Menes, the second son of Ham, carried to Egypt his skill in the masonic art, in consequence of which, many great cities, as Memphis, Heliopolis, Thebes, &c., besides their famous pyramids, and many other magnificent edifices, were afterwards built.
- 1920 The masonic and other arts, which flourished amongst the Chaldeans, carried out of Chaldea and Assyria, to the Egyptians, by Abraham.
- 1874 The Israelites built for the Egyptians, two strong cities, Pithon and Raamasis.
- 1490 During the forty years peregrination of the Hebrews in the wilderness, it pleased the Divine Architect to inspire with wisdom, certain persons, who erect-

- ed the glorious tabernacle, in which the Schechinah resided.
- 1451 Joshua, after having finished his wars with the Canaanites, fixed the tabernacle at Shiloe, in Ephraim, ordering the Israelites to serve God, cultivate the land, and carry on the grand design of architecture, in the true Mosaic style.
- 1252 The city of Tyre built, by a great body of Sidonian masons from Gabala, under their grand master and his wardens.
- 1117 The Phœnicians built the famous temple of Dagon at Gaza, which was afterwards pulled down by Samson, when 3000 of the Philistian chiefs were slain.
- 1056 Hiram, king of Tyre, as grand master, took upon himself the direction of the craft, erected many new cities and stately edifices in his dominions, and joined the city of Tyre to the temple of Jupiter Olympus, situate on an island.
- 1047 King David, having taken the city of Jebus, and the strong hold of Zion, employed the craft in repairing the walls and public edifices.
- 1012 Upon the death of David, and Solomon's accession to the throne, king Hiram sent a splendid embassy to the new king, which was well received, and laid a permanent foundation of friendship between the two grand masters.
- 980 Many lodges were constituted, under grand master Solomon, at Jerusalem, who employed 113,600 masons, exclusive of 70,000 labourers, in building the temple.
- 972 Solomon's temple finished, and Hiram Abiff*, the principal superintendent of the workmen, mentioned 2 Chron. ii. 13, assassinated.
- 970 Ninus, who had assisted in building the temple, carried the masonic art into France and Germany.

* The tradition with respect to Hiram, king of Tyre, is, that he had been grand master of all masons, but that upon the temple being finished, and before its consecration, upon a conversation with Solomon on various topics, he found, that the Great Architect of the universe had inspired king Solomon with wisdom above all other men. He, therefore, very readily yielded the pre-eminence to Solomon Jedediah, the beloved of God.

- 941 Dresiphon and Archiphron, who had acquired the masonic art from some of those employed in the erection of Solomon's temple, superintended the building of the celebrated temple of Diana at Ephesus.
- 747 Nabonassar, called also Baladan, was an excellent architect, and greatly encouraged the craft, particularly in employing them in building the famous city Babylon.
- 740 The Syrians, by the assistance of Solomon's masons, adorned Damascus with a lofty temple, a royal palace, and an altar of most exquisite workmanship.
- 707 Deioces, king of the Medes, during a reign of fifty years, constantly engaged the fraternity, and built the cities of Ecbatana, Susiana, and Persepolis.
- 570 The walls of Babylon, the temple of Belus, a golden image in the plains of Dora, which was 60 cubits high, and 6 broad, and in value about 14 millions of dollars, together with many other stately edifices, were built under the direction of Nebuchadnezzar grand master.
- 536 Cyrus, founder of the Persian empire, appointed as grand master, for the rebuilding of the temple at Jerusalem, Zerubabel, under the title of Tirshatha.
- 520 Zoroastes, grand master of the Magi, in Persia, and his disciples, made great progress in geometry and the liberal arts, and erected many splendid palaces and temples in the empire.
- 516 Pythagoras, a native of Greece, travelled into Egypt and other countries, in which he continued about twenty years, and having acquired the knowledge of geometry and other sciences, on his return, instituted a lodge of free-masons.
- 510 Ahasuerus, called Artaxerxes Longimanus, appointed Ezra the scribe, to succeed Zerubabel, in the direction of the craft, under whom many synagogues were built in Jerusalem, and in the other cities of Judea.
- 500 The Doric, Ionic, and Corinthian orders, in architecture, brought to great perfection.
- 455 Nehemiah, who built the strong walls of Jerusalem

- divided his workmen into lodges ; but reserved to himself the superintendence of the whole.
- 408 Sanballet, the Horonite, appointed by Darius Nothus, as grand master, to superintend the building of a splendid temple on mount Gerizim, near Samaria.
- 353 Mausolus, king of Caria in Lesser Asia, having died, his wife caused a stupendous monument of 140 feet in height, surrounded by 136 columns of most admirable sculpture, to be erected to his memory*.
- 382 Democrates, an eminent architect, with a view to encourage the fraternity, prevailed on Alexander the Great, to build a famous city in Egypt, to which he gave the name of Alexandria.
- 304 Masonry greatly flourished in Egypt, under Ptolemy Soter, at which period Euclid, the celebrated geometrician from Tyre, was one of the most distinguished members of the lodge.
- 300 The Rhodians employed the famous architect, Chares, to erect the great Colossus at Rhodes, the completion of which, kept him and his craftsmen employed for 12 years†.
- 284 Ptolemy Philadelphus, king of Egypt, finished the famous tower in the island of Pharos, and carried on several other very splendid edifices, under the superintendence of his grand wardens Dexephanes and Sostratus.
- 246 Ptolemy, the son of the preceding, whose wardens were his two learned librarians Eratosthenes and Appolonius, erected a library at Serapium, which in time, contained upwards of 300,000 volumes, to which, Cleopatra, queen of Egypt, afterwards added 200,000, from the library of Pergamus‡.

* This work was performed by the four best masons of the age, Scopas, Leochares, Timotheus and Briax. It is from the name of this king, that we derive the word mausoleum.

† This Colossus, may be considered as one of the greatest wonders in the world. It was 70 cubits high, and duly proportioned in every limb, striding over the harbour's mouth, and wide enough to receive ships between its legs. It was thrown down by an earthquake, and lay where it fell for 894 years, when the reigning calif sold it to a Jew merchant, who loaded with it 900 camels, and allowing only 800 pounds to every camel's burden, its weight would have amounted to 720,000 pounds.

‡ This immense library was burnt by the ignorant and brutal Saracens,

- 207 Masonry greatly flourished at Syracuse, under Archimedes the learned geometrician, architect, and engineer, who was unfortunately slain, when that city was taken by Marcellus, a Roman general.
- 200 The stupendous wall between China and Tartary, extending in length, upwards of 1500 miles, finished.
- 190 The Tuscans, who had long imitated the Greeks in arts and sciences, instructed the Romans in the knowledge of masonry; and about this time, Marcellus erected his famous theatre, with a temple devoted to Virtue, and another to Honour.
- 55 Julius Cæsar, the grand master of the Roman empire, patronized masonry, not only in his own dominions, but likewise in Great Britain, after he had landed in that country.
- 37 King Herod, an excellent grand master, sent for the most expert masons from Greece, who with his own masons, built a splendid Grecian temple at Jerusalem, rebuilt Samaria, to which he gave the name of Sebaste, built the cities Antipatris, Phasælis, and Cypron, and the admirable tower of Phasæl at Jerusalem.
- 29 The emperor Augustus encouraged the craft more than any of his predecessors. Under him and his principal warden, the learned Vitruvius, the pantheon, the bridge of Arminium, the great forum, several temples, and a number of stately public edifices were constructed.

JESUS CHRIST, our blessed Saviour, the Great Architect of the Church, was born at Bethlehem, in Judea, in the 4th year before the vulgar Christian æra, and in the year of masonry 4000.

After Christ.

- 34 Tiberius, upon attaining the imperial dignity, became an eminent patron of masons, and banished Pontius Pilate for his injustice to the blessed Jesus.

when they took the city of Alexandria, to the irreparable loss of the learned.

- 70 The emperor Nero, though an execrable tyrant, greatly patronized the fraternity.
- 84 Upon the return of Titus from the overthrow of the Jewish nation, he employed the craft in building a triumphal arch, adorned with splendid engravings and sculpture, and a noble palace with the famous statue of Laocoon of one stone.
- 114 The emperor Trajan, by his warden, the renowned architect Appolodorus, constructed a wonderful bridge across the Danube, and built a noble circus, and several other edifices of stupendous magnitude at Rome.
- 130 Adrian, the Roman emperor, who was an operative, as well as a speculative mason, built the Roman wall, near the borders between England and Scotland, a commodious bridge at Rome, his famous mausoleum &c.
- 287 St. Alban, the first who suffered martyrdom for Christianity in England, was the first grand master in that country.
- 306 Constantine the Great, reared at Rome, the last triumphal arch after the Augustan style; and on the removal of his throne to Byzantium, which he called Constantinople, he employed the craft and eminent artists of every description, in embellishing his new metropolis.
- 378 Theodosius the Great, emperor of the East, was so great a patron of the fraternity, that he passed a law, exempting them from taxation.
- 384 Arcadius, the son of Theodosius, enriched the city Constantinople with many superb structures, and a lofty pillar, with a flight of stairs, 147 feet high.
- 526 Justinian the first, supported the lodges of craftsmen, and, in a great measure, restored the whole Roman empire to its former splendour.
- 560 Under the same emperor, the church of St. Sophia was completed. He, in vain, attempted that this building should equal Solomon's temple, although he expended on it about 120 millions of dollars.
- 600 St. Austin, as grand master, founded the old cathedral of Canterbury ; and, in 604, that of St. Paul, London.

- 710 At the request of Kenred, king of Mercia in England, to the most worshipful Charles Martel, grand master of France, some expert masons were sent from thence, to teach the Saxons those usages of the craft, which since the invasion of the Goths had been too much neglected.
- 771 Charlemagne, emperor of Germany and France, kept up several lodges, and gave great encouragement to the craft.
- 900 Alfred the Great, who was a most excellent prince, employed the craft in various works, which reflect great honour on his memory. As grand master, he laid the foundation of the university of Oxford.
- 926 King Athelstane granted a charter to the grand lodge of York, of which his brother, prince Edwin, was first grand master.
- 950 Malcolm I. king of Scotland, was a great patron of the royal art ; and under his direction, the foundation stone of Edinburgh castle was laid.
- 996 Hugh Capet, king of France, whose reign commenced in the year 987, was a great patron of masonry ; and his son Robert, when he ascended the throne, followed the example of his father.
- 1060 During the reign of Canute, the craft were employed in building religious houses, particularly the abbeys of Coventry, Westminster, &c.
- 1090 Under the direction of the bishop of Rochester, who was then grand master, the palace of Westminster, and Westminster Hall, which is 270 feet long and 74 wide, being as is believed, the largest single room upon earth, were built.
- 1099 The order of Knight templars, who were originally denominated Hospitallers of St. John of Jerusalem, began about this year.
- The knights of Rhodes, afterwards called knights of Malta, after the capture of Jerusalem, began to be distinguished by their habiliments, and besides the vows which they had formerly taken, they took

- another, viz, that they would defend the pilgrims against the insults of the infidels.
- 1146 The craft employed under their grand master, the marquis of Pembroke, in building St. Stephen's chapel, the edifice, in which the commons of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland hold their meetings.
- 1219 The knights of the Holy Sepulchre were formed into an order.
- 1272 The superintendence of masons committed to the archbishop of Canterbury, during the minority of King Henry III.
- 1307 The fraternity employed in building several colleges at Oxford and Cambridge in England, under the superintendence of the bishop of Exeter, who had been appointed grand master.
- 1348 In the reign of King Edward III. when lodges were numerous, the grand lodge, with the consent of the lords of the realm, who were then generally free-masons, revised the constitution, and added several useful charges to the ancient code.

- 1443 James I. of Scotland, who was a zealous patron of masonry during his whole reign, was initiated into the order.
- 1450 John De Medicis became grand master of the masons in Tuscany, and greatly promoted not only the masonic, but other arts and sciences.
- 1500 Free-masons, in England, were under the direction of the knights of Malta, from the year 1485, till Henry VII. avowed himself as their protector.
- 1502 24th June, Henry VII. presided as grand master, at a lodge held in his palace; from whence, accompanied by a great concourse of brethren, he

* The act, however, was not enforced, lodges being held as usual, under archbishop Chichely, till the initiation of King Henry VI. into the order, when the act was formally repealed.

- proceeded in ample form to the end of Westminster abbey, where he laid the foundation stone of King Henry VII.'s Chapel
- 1509 Cardinal Woolsey appointed grand master on the accession of Henry VIII. and notwithstanding his bad conduct in other respects, he was very attentive to the concerns of the fraternity, who prospered greatly under his administration.
- 1530 On the disgrace of the cardinal, Cromwell, earl of Essex, succeeded as grand master. He employed the fraternity in building St. James' palace and other stately edifices.
- 1561 27th December, Queen Elizabeth, being jealous of free-masons, sent an armed force to suppress their communication at York ; but some of the principal officers employed on that service, having been initiated, made so favourable a report of the principles and proceedings of the fraternity, that she forthwith countermanded her orders, and gave them no farther trouble.
- 1566 7th June, Sir Thomas Gresham, as grand master, laid the foundation stone of the Royal Exchange, London, which he afterwards completed at his own expense.
- 1651 The famous and learned Inigo Jones, was appointed grand master in 1607, and continued in that office till 1618, when he was succeeded by the earl of Pembroke ; he was re-elected in 1636, and continued to preside over the lodges till his death.
- 1673 King James II. attended by a numerous body of the fraternity, laid the foundation stone of St. Paul's Cathedral*, London.
- 1674 The palace of Holyrood house, at Edinburgh, rebuilt in the truly Augustan style, under the direction of

* This noble fabric was begun and completed in the space of 35 years, by one architect, the great Sir Christopher Wren, one principal mason, Mr. Strong, and under one bishop of London, Dr. Henry Compton ; whereas, St. Peter's at Rome, was 153 years in building, under twelve successive architects, assisted by the police and interest of the Roman See, and attended by the best artists in sculpture, statuary, painting, and mosaic work.

Sir William Bruce, baronet, grand master of Scotland

- 1695 King William, having been initiated into the order, approved of the appointment of Sir Christopher Wren as grand master, and honoured the lodges with his royal sanction.
- 1717 In the beginning of the seventeenth century, the annual assembly of the grand lodge, had not, for some years, been duly attended, owing to the bodily infirmities of Sir Christopher Wren ; but upon his death, Mr. Sayer was elected and masonry revived.
- 1719 A great addition to the number of free-masons takes place in England, after the election of Dr. Desaguliers to the office of grand master.
- 1720 A number of valuable manuscripts, concerning lodges, particularly one written by Nicholas Stone, warden under Inigo Jones, destroyed by some too scrupulous brethren
- 1723 The book of constitutions of the free-masons, containing the history, charges, and regulations of that most ancient and worshipful fraternity. by James Anderson, published under the sanction of the grand lodge.
- The Duke of Buccleugh, then grand master of England, proposed a scheme for raising a general fund for the permanent relief of distressed masons and their families, which was readily adopted.

- 1740 A grand lodge established at Berlin, by Frederick the Great, on his accession to the throne.
- 1741 His serene highness, the margrave of Brandensburgh, established a lodge in the metropolis of his dominions, the inauguration of which was celebrated with great pomp.
- 1744 A regular correspondence established between the grand lodges of Berlin and England.
- 1745 3d March, by a decree of the republic of Berne, he who frequented a masonic assembly was to pay a fine of one hundred crowns.
- 1746 3d May, at a meeting of the grand lodge of England, a communication was received from the lodge at Calcutta, representing the prosperous

* In this remarkable edict, it is stated, that "though they (the States General) had not discovered any thing in the behaviour or practices of the fraternity contrary to the peace of the public, or to the duties of good subjects, they were resolved nevertheless, to prevent any bad consequences, which might ensue, that the lodges, congregations, assemblies of the free-masons should be entirely abolished."

But this, and the other ridiculous edicts, passed by some other states, answered no purpose, except, perhaps, to unite the brethren more closely. Their assemblies were continued as usual, and in France, that illustrious hero the prince of Conde, frequently laid aside his warlike habiliments to wear the honest and humble apron, and work with diligence in carrying on the design. Days of intolerance are now, however, gone, and it is sincerely to be hoped, that they will never again return.

- state of masonry, throughout the territory of Bengal.
- 1747 30th April, a very handsome contribution to the general charity, received from the lodge at Gibraltar.

- 1762 Provincial patents issued for Jamaica, Armenia, Westphalia, Bombay, Brunswick, and many islands in the West Indies.
- 1765 Their royal highnesses the dukes of Gloucester and Cumberland, initiated.
- 1768 January, two letters received from the grand lodge of France, expressing a desire to open a regular correspondence with the grand lodge of England. The request was readily agreed to, and a book of constitutions, a list of the lodges under the jurisdiction of the English grand lodge, with the form a deputation, &c. elegantly bound, ordered to be sent as a present.
- 1769 While his grace the duke of Beaufort was grand master, the increase of foreign lodges was so great, that it was deemed expedient to appoint a provincial grand master general.
- 1770 25th April, Baron de Boetzelaer, grand master of the United Provinces of Holland, having requested that a firm and friendly alliance might be established between the grand lodges of England and

- Holland, and an annual correspondence carried on, the same was readily agreed to.
- 1772 The ties of union, which had existed for centuries, between the grand lodges of England, Scotland, and Ireland, drawn more closely.
- 1775 May 1, the foundation stone of the new Free-Mason's Hall, in London, laid in solemn form, in the presence of a numerous company of the brethren, at which meeting, the office of grand chaplain was first instituted.
- 1776 May 23, the above mentioned hall was finished, and dedicated to Masonry, Virtue, and Universal Charity and Benevolence.
- 1777 Free-Mason's Calendar, first ordered to be printed, by authority of the grand lodge of England.

- 1780 A representative of the grand lodge of Germany, received with distinguished honour, by the grand lodge of England; and the most intimate union agreed on between the grand lodges of the two countries.
- 1784 The Roman Eagle lodge, in which all the business was carried on in the Latin language, instituted at Edinburgh.
- Noerthouck's edition of the book of constitutions, printed.
- 1785 1st August, lord Haddo, grand master of Scotland, accompanied by the lord provost, magistrates, and a great number of masons, laid the foundation stone of the South Bridge at Edinburgh, with the usual solemnities.
- 1786 9th March, his royal highness prince William Henry, now duke of Clarence, was initiated in lodge No. 86, at Plymouth.
- 1787 6th February, his royal highness the prince of Wales, was made a mason.

- 1787 21st November, the duke of York, followed the example of his brother.
- 1788 The Royal Cumberland Free-Mason's School, instituted in London.

- 1795 25th November, The corner stone of the State House, of Massachusetts laid by his excellency Samuel Adams.
- 1802 6th September, The foundation stone of the City Hall, New-York, laid by Edward Livingston, then mayor of the city, and grand master of the state.
- 1806 9th January, General royal arch constitution for the United States, adopted at Middletown, in the state of Connecticut.
- 1808 January, The grand lodge of Ohio constituted at Chillicothe.
- December, The grand lodge of Kentucky formed at Lexington.

From the state of Louisiana, and the four other new states, it has been impossible for me to obtain any information respecting the number of lodges within their respective territories; although I have it from good authority, that masonry has been long established in Louisiana, and there is no doubt, but that the mystic art is known in every part of the United States.

The following is an accurate statement of the number of lodges in each of the States ; so far as could be ascertained in the year 1816.

In Rhode Island	13
Massachusetts	81
New Hampshire	19
Connecticut	48
Vermont	31
New York	301
New Jersey	17
Pennsylvania	115
Delaware	7
Maryland	30
Virginia	54
Kentucky	28
North Carolina	31
South Carolina	41
Georgia	21
Ohio	26

863

In Upper Canada, there are 10 lodges, subordinate to the grand lodge of that province ; to that of Lower Canada, there are 15 ; and to that of Nova Scotia 23.

MASONIC SONGS.

SONG I.

THE ENTERED 'PRENTICE'S SONG.

COME let us prepare,
We Brothers that are Assembled on merry occasion ;
Let 's be happy and sing,
For life is a spring,
To a Free and an Accepted Mason.

The world is in pain
Our secrets to gain,
And still let them wonder and gaze on ;
They ne'er can divine
The word or the sign,
Of a Free and an Accepted Mason.

'Tis This and 'tis That,
They cannot tell what,
Why so many great men of the nation.
Should aprons put on,
To make themselves one
With a Free and an Accepted Mason.

Great kings, dukes, and lords,
Have laid by their swords,
Our myst'ry to put a good grace on ;
And thought themselves fam'd,
To have themselves nam'd
With a Free and an Accepted Mason.

Antiquity's pride
We have on our side,
And it maketh men just in their station :
There 's nought but what 's good
To be understood
By a Free and an Accepted Mason.

We 're true and sincere,
And just to the fair,
They 'll trust us on any occasion ;

No mortal can more
The ladies adore
Than a Free and an Accepted Mason.

Then join hand in hand,
By each Brother firm stand,
Let's be merry, and put a bright face on ;
What mortal can boast
So noble a toast
As a Free and an Accepted Mason.

CHORUS three times repeated.

SONG II.

[Tune, Rule Columbia.]

WHEN Earth's foundations first were laid,
By the Almighty Artist's hand,
'Twas then our perfect, our perfect laws were made,
Establish'd by his strict command.
Hail, mysterious, hail, glorious Masonry ;
Which makes us ever great and free.

As man throughout for shelter sought,
In vain from place to place did roam,
Until from Heav'n, from Heav'n he was taught
To plan, to build, to fix his home.
Hail, mysterious, &c.

Hence, illustrious, rose our art :
And now the beauteous piles appear,
Which shall to endless, to endless time impart
How worthy and how great we are.
Hail, mysterious, &c.

Nor are we less fam'd for ev'ry tie
By which the human thought is bound,
Love, truth, and friendship, and friendship socially,
Join all our hearts and hands around.
Hail, mysterious, &c.

Our actions still by virtue blest,
And to our precepts ever true,
The world admiring, admiring shall request,
To learn, and our bright paths pursue.
Hail, mysterious, &c.

SONG III.

[Tune, Young, Damon once, the happy swain.]

A MASON'S daughter fair and young,
The pride of all the virgin throng,
Thus to her lover said :
Tho', Damon, I your flame approve ;
Your actions praise ; your person love ;
Yet still I 'll live a maid.

None shall untie my virgin zone,
But one to whom the secret 's known,
Of fam'd Free-masonry ;
In which the great and good combine,
To raise with generous design,
Man to felicity.

The lodge excludes the fop and fool,
The plodding knave and party tool,
That liberty would sell.
The noble, faithful, and the brave,
No golden charms can e'er deceive,
In slavery to dwell.

This said, he bow'd, and went away :
Apply'd—was made without delay ;
Return'd to her again.
The fair one granted his request :
Connubial joys their days have blest :
And may they e'er remain.

SONG IV.

KING Solomon, that wise projector,
In Masonry took great delight ;
And Hiram, that great architector,
Whose actions shine ever bright :
From the heart of a true honest Mason,
There 's none can the secret remove ;
Our maxims are justice, morality,
Friendship, and brotherly love.

CHORUS.

Then who would not be a Free-mason,
So happy and jovial are we ?
To kings, dukes, and lords, we are brothers,
And in every Lodge we are free.

We meet like true friends on the square,
 And part on a level that 's fair.
 Alike we respect king and beggar,
 Provided they 're just and sincere.
 We scorn an ungenerous action :
 None can with Free-masons compare.
 We love for to live within compass,
 By rules that are honest and fair.

Then, &c.

Success to all accepted Masons :
 There 's none can their honour pull down :
 For 'e'er since the glorious creation,
 These brave men were held in renown :
 When Adam was king of all nations,
 He formed a plan with all speed,
 And soon made a sweet habitation,
 For him and his companion Eve.

Then, &c.

We exclude all talkative fellows,
 Who babble and prate past their wit :
 They ne'er shall come into our secret ;
 For they 're neither worthy nor fit :
 But those who are well recommended,
 Whom we find honest and true :
 When our Lodge is well tyl'd we 'll prepare 'em :
 Like Masons our work we 'll pursue.

Then, &c.

There 's some foolish people reject us,
 For which they are highly to blame.
 They cannot show any objection,
 Or reason for doing the same.
 The art's a divine inspiration,
 As all honest men will declare :
 So here 's to all true-hearted brothers,
 That live within compass and square.

Then, &c.

Like an arch well cemented together,
 So firmly united we stand ;
 And lovingly drink to each other,
 With plumb, line, and level in hand.
 Till the world is consumed by fire,
 And judgment is pass'd on us all,
 There 's none shall come into our secrets,
 Nor we from Free-masonry fall.

SONG V.

MASONIC ALLEGORY.

[Tune, Anacreon in Heaven.]

AS Poverty once in a fit of despair,
 Sat beating her bosom and tearing her hair,
 Smiling Hope came to ask, what her countenance told,
 That she lay there expiring with hunger and cold.
 Come rise, said the sweet smiling cherub of joy,
 The torments you suffer I'll quickly destroy.
 Take me by the hand. All your griefs come dispel.
 I'll lead you for succour to Charity's cell.
Take me, &c.

Old Poverty hobb'd. Hope softened her pain.
 But long did they search for the goddess in vain.
 Towns, cities, and countries they travers'd around :
 For Charity's lately grown hard to be found.
 At length at the door of a lodge they arriv'd,
 Where their spirits exhausted, the tyler reviv'd,
 Who when ask'd, as 't was late, if the dame had gone home,
 Said, " No. Charity always is last in the room."

The door being open'd, in Poverty came ;
 Was cherish'd ; reliev'd ; and caress'd by the dame ;
 Whilst each brother present, the votary to save,
 Obey'd his own feelings, and cheerfully gave.
 Then shame on the man who our science derides,
 Where this soft beaming virtue forever presides :
 In the scriptural maxim let 's ever accord,
 What we give to the poor, we but lend to the Lord.

SONG VI.

THE FAREWELL.

To the Brethren of St. James's Lodge, Tarbolton.

BY ROBERT BURNS.

[Tune, Good night, an' joy be wi' you a'!]

ADIEU ! a heart-warm fond adieu !
 Dear brothers of the mystic tie !

H h

Ye favour'd, ye enlighten'd few,
 Companions of my social joy !
 Tho' I to foreign lands must hie,
 Pursuing fortune's slidd'ry ba',
 With melting heart, and brimful eye,
 I 'll mind you still, tho' far awa'.

Oft have I met your social band,
 And spent the cheerful festive night ;
 Oft, honour'd with supreme command,
 Presided o'er the sons of light :
 And by that hieroglyphic bright,
 Which none but craftsmen ever saw !
 Strong mem'ry on my heart shall write,
 Those happy scenes when far awa' !

May freedom, harmony, and love,
 Unite you in the grand design,
 Beneath th' omniscient eye above,
 The glorious Architect divine !
 That you may keep th' unerring line,
 Still rising by the plummet's law,
 Till order bright completely shine,
 Shall be my pray'r when far awa'.

And you, farewell ! whose merits claim,
 Justly that highest badge to wear !
 Heav'n bless your honour'd noble name,
 To Masonry and Scotia dear !
 A last request permit me here,
 When yearly ye assemble a',
 One round, I ask it with a tear,
 To him, the bard that 's far awa'.

SONG VII.

ARISE, and sound thy trumpet, Fame :
 Free-masonry aloud proclaim,
 To realms and worlds unknown,
 To realms. &c.
 Tell them 'twas this great David's son,
 The wise, the matchless Solomon,
 Priz'd far above his throne,
 Priz'd, &c.

The solemn temple's cloud-capt tow'rs,
 And stately domes are works of ours :
 By us those piles were rais'd.

Then bid mankind with songs advance,
And through the ethereal vast expanse,
Let Masonry be prais'd.

We help the poor in time of need ;
The naked clothe ; the hungry feed ;
'Tis our foundation-stone.
We build upon the noblest plan,
While friendship rivets man to man,
And makes us all as one.

Thy trumpet, Fame, yet louder blow,
And let the distant regions know,
Free-masonry is this ;
Almighty Wisdom gave it birth,
While heaven fix'd it here on earth,
A type of future bliss.

SONG VIII.

AS long as Columbia her form shall uprear,
Will masons stand foremost in verse.
Whilst harmony, friendship, and joys are held dear,
New bards shall our praises rehearse.

CHORUS.

Though lodges less favoured, less happy, decay,
Destroy'd by old time as he runs ;
Tho' Albions, Gregorians, and Bucks fade away,
Still masons shall live in their sons.

If Envy attempt our success to impede,
United we 'll trample her down.
If Faction should threaten, we 'll show we 're agreed :
And Discord shall own we are one.

Tho' lodges, &c.

While with ardour we glow, this our order to raise,
Promoting its welfare and peace :
Old masons return our endeavours to praise,
And new ones confirm the increase.

Tho' lodges, &c.

Go on, cry our parents ; for time is your friend ;
His flight shall increase your renown ;
And Mirth shall your guest be : and Bacchus attend,
And joy all your meetings shall crown.

Tho' lodges, &c.

SONG IX.

COME, are you prepar'd,
 Your scaffolds well rear'd ?
 Bring mortar, and temper it purely ;
 'Tis all safe, I hope,
 Well brac'd with each rope,
 Your ledgers and putlocks securely.

Then next your bricks bring,
 It is time to begin,
 For the sun with its rays is adorning ;
 The day 's fair and clear,
 No rain you need fear,
 'Tis a charming and lovely fine morning.

Pray where are your tools,
 Your plumb line and rules,
 Each man to his work let him stand, boys ;
 Work solid and sure,
 Upright and secure ;
 And your building, be sure, will be strong, boys.

Pray make no mistake,
 But true your joints brake,
 And take care that you follow your leaders ;
 Work, rake, beck, and tueth,
 And make your work smooth,
 And be sure that you fill up your headers.

SONG X.

[Tune, On; on my dear Brethren.]

THE curious vulgar could never devise,
 What social free-masons so rapt'rously prize,
 No human conjecture, no study in schools ;
 Such fruitless attempts are the efforts of fools.

Sublime are our maxims, our plan from above,
 As the creation antique, and cemented by love ;
 To promote all the virtues that adorn human life,
 To subdue baser passions, and banish all strife.

Pursue, my dear brethren, embrace with great care
 A system adapted our actions to square ;
 Whose origin clearly partakes of divine ;
 Observe how its precepts to virtue incline.

The secrets of nature, king Solomon knew,
 The names of all trees in the forest that grew ;
 Architecture his study, free-masons' sole guide,
 Thus finished his temple, antiquity's pride.

True ancient free-masons our art did conceal,
 Their hearts were sincere, and not prone to reveal ;
 Here 's the widow's son's memory, that glorious sage,
 Who skilfully handled plumb, level, and gage.

Toast next our grand master, of noble repute,
 No brother presuming his laws to dispute ;
 No discord, no faction, our lodge shall divide,
 Here truth, love, and friendship, must always abide.

Cease, cease, ye vain factions, your country's disgrace,
 To ravage like traitors, our arts to deface ;
 Learn love to your country, our laws to defend,
 And live like free-masons, your lives to amend.

SONG XI.

THE KNIGHTS TEMPLARS' SONG.

AT the bright Temple's awful dome,
 Where Christian Knights in arms are drest :
 To that most sacred place we come,
 With Cross and Star upon the breast ;
 Pilgrims inspir'd with zealous flame,
 Through rugged ways and dangers past ;
 Our sandals torn, our feet were lame,
 But Faith and Hope o'ercame at last.

Remember, Knights, the noble cause,
 Let Simon's fate prevent your fall ;
 Be firm and true, obey the laws,
 Nor let the cock unheeded call,
 Let none the sacred word profane,
 Nor e'er, like Peter, Christ deny ;
 Your conduct still preserve from blame,
 Nor let the urn be plac'd on high.

H h 2

Unite your hearts, unite each hand,
 In friendship, harmony, and love ;
 Connected thus Knights Templars stand,
 Our love and charity to prove,
 Until that awful final day,
 When fire shall melt this earthly ball,
 Your courage and your faith display,
 Attend to Freedom's sacred call.

True to our God, our Laws, and King
 Devout, obedient, loyal, free,
 The praise of our grand master sing,
 The patron of our mystery.
 In uniform each Knight is drest,
 Distinguish'd all by black, red, blue,
 The Cross and Star upon the breast,
 Adorn the heart that's just and true.

A GLEE.

LIGHTLY o'er the village green
 Blue-eyed fairies sport unseen,
 Round and round, in circles gay—
 Then at cock-crow flit away :
 Thus, 'tis said, tho' mortal eye
 Ne'er their merry freaks could spy,
 Elves for mortals lisp the prayer—
 Elves are guardians of the fair ;
 Thus, like elves, in mystic ring,
 Merry Masons drink and sing.

Come then, brethren, lead along Social rites, and mystic song !
 Tho' nor Madam, Miss, or Beas,
 Could our mysteries ever guess ;
 Nor could ever learn'd divine
 Sacred Masonry define ;
 Round our order close we bind
 Laws of love to all mankind.
 Thus, like elves, in mystic ring,
 Merry Masons drink and sing.

— Health, then, to each honest man,
 Friend to the Masonic plan ;
 Leaving parsons grave to blunder,
 Leaving ladies fair to wonder,

Leaving Thomas still to lie,
 Leaving Betty still to spy.
 Round and round we push our glass—
 Round and round each toast his lass.
 Thus, like elves, in mystic ring,
 Merry Masons drink and sing.

A HYMN

Sung at the Consecration and Installation of a Lodge.

UNTO Thee, great God, belong
 Mystic rites and sacred song !
 Lowly bending at thy shrine,
 We hail thy Majesty divine !
 Glorious ARCHITECT above,
 Source of Light, and Source of Love,
 Here thy light and love prevail—
 Hail ! Almighty Master, hail ;

Whilst in yonder regions bright,
 The SUN by DAY, the MOON by NIGHT,
 And the STARS that gird the sky,
 Blazon forth thy praise on high ;
 Join, O EARTH, and (as you roll)
 From East to West, from pole to pole,
 Lift to Heav'n your grateful lays,
 Join the universal praise.

Warm'd by thy benignant grace,
 Sweet Friendship link'd the human race ;
 Pity lodg'd within her breast,
 CHARITY became her guest,
 There the naked raiment found,
 Sickness balsam for its wound,
 Sorrow comfort, hunger bread,
 Strangers there a welcome shed.

Still to us, O God, dispense
 Thy divine benevolence !
 Teach the tender tear to flow,
 Melting at a Brother's woe !
 Like Samaria's son, that we
 Blest with boundless Charity,
 To th' admiring world may prove
 They dwell in GOD who dwell in LOVE.

A PARAPHRASE

ON THE

Lætatus sum in his. PSALM CXXII.Sung at the laying of the first stone of a Bridge.

ON wings of harmony up-borne
 Wide flew the exulting sound ;
 Auspicious beam'd the festal morn,
 That call'd the nations round.

To Salem's favour'd tow'rs and plains
 The bands fraternal move :
 Her temples catch the solemn strains,
 That swell to Peace and Love.

O'er Salem's plains new structures rise ;
 Her busy sons spread wide,
 Heave mighty turrets to the skies,
O'er-arch the fluent tide.

Sweet science beams upon their toil,
 Descending Powers approve ;
 And sounding round the sculptur'd pile,
 The strains are Peace and Love.

Now swells the choir in solemn tone,
 And hovering angels join ;
 Religion looks delighted down,
 When vot'ries press the shrine.

To Salem bliss—and 'midst her tow'rs,
 May guards celestial move,
 To join the grateful hymn that pours
 Its strains to Peace and Love.

MASONIC TOASTS.

1. Our most Worshipful Grand Master. May he long continue to execute the duties of his highly important office with honour to himself, as well as to the lodges over which he so worthily presides.

2. All grand officers around the globe. May they square their lives by the strictest regard to the rules of morality, and regulate their conduct by the plumb line of equity, so that when any of them shall be consigned to the silent grave, it may be inscribed on his tomb "here lies a good man."

3. Health, happiness and unanimity to all the fraternity of free and accepted masons, around the globe.

4. To all the members of the ancient and honourable craft. May they always be desirous of contributing to the relief of their distressed brethren and never be destitute of the means.

5. May every mason entertain that ardent and generous good will to his brother, which makes his brother's situation his own, and do to all as he would they should do to him.

6. To all ancient masons, wherever dispersed and oppressed. May they soon find friends able and willing to relieve them.

7. May every mason, who is desirous of assisting a distressed brother or his family, be always possessed of the means.

8. All regularly constituted lodges throughout the globe. May peace, harmony and love predominate in all their meetings, and happiness be the portion of every member, in his individual capacity.

9. May the funds of all lodges be managed in such a manner, that the distressed widows and orphans of deceased members may never have the mortification of applying for that relief, of which they stand in need, but cannot obtain.

10. May we be more studious to correct our own faults, than to promulgate the errors of our brethren.

11. May no honest heart ever know distress.

12. May the fragrance of a good report, like a spring of cassia, bloom over the head of every departed brother.

13. May the tongue of every free-mason be the faithful interpreter of his heart, so that he may never be under the necessity of abandoning candour, or hiding himself behind the mask of dissimulation.

14. May we strive to resemble our divine master, in promoting, as far as possible the happiness of all mankind and when we cannot succeed, may it be for want of ability, never for want of inclination.

15. May we enter apprentices to virtue ; be fellow-crafts with charity ; and always masters of our passions.

16. The heart that conceals, and the tongue which never reveals.

17. The immortal memory of the Widow's Son.

18. The good Samaritan. May masons, when they meet a fellow mortal in distress be actuated by such motives, as those which influenced this benevolent man, and endeavour as far as possible to contribute to his relief, whatever may be his political creed or religious tenets.

19. May we be guided to happiness by wisdom, supported in virtuous resolutions by strength, and may beauty adorn our beds.

20. Sincerity ! May all, who belong to our order, scrupulously adhere to this virtue, not only in their transactions with their brethren, but with all mankind.

21. May all masons strictly adhere to truth ; wisdom, virtue, and happiness will be the concomitants of such conduct.

22. May brotherly love continue and encrease ; till the time shall come, when as a band of brothers, we shall all be united in the grand lodge above.

23. Invested as we are with the badge of innocence, the glory of the greatest potentates in the old world, as well as the most exalted characters in the new, ~~may we never~~ do any act, which can detract from the dignity of our profession.

24. May every mason be obedient to all lawful orders of his superiors, friendly to his equals, and condescending to his inferiors.

25. May every free-mason's heart have the freedom of chalk, the fervency of charcoal, the zeal of friendship ; but not the hardness of marble, when a distressed brother makes his demand.

26. May universal benevolence be the plumb line of all our actions.

27. May every mason endeavour to attain a thorough knowledge of himself.

28. May the square form our conduct through life ; the level and plumb line remind us of our condition, and teach us to walk perpendicularly and act uprightly.

29. May our wisdom be as conspicuous to our sisters, as the wisdom of our grand master Solomon was to the queen of Sheba.

30. May every free and accepted mason rise in the East, find refreshment in the South, and when he rests in the West, may he enjoy the same reward as was bestowed on our patron St. John, that of being the disciple, whom the saviour of mankind loved.

31. The American fair. May virtue, modesty, grace and love, endear them to the affections of their husbands.

32. Success to every mason, who stands plumb to his principles, yet on a level with his brethren.

33. The President and constituted authorities of the United States. Though in the lodge, we can have nothing to do with political disputes, we must all unite in wishing health and prosperity to the magistrates of our country.

34. May the breast of every free-mason be an ark for charity, from whence shall flow assistance to the widows and orphans of their deceased brethren.

35. May the rays of celestial light dart from the east, illuminate the west, and may perseverance remove the key-stone which covers truth.

36. May the Royal arch cover every honest mason's heart, and overshadow all who act up to the true principles of the craft.

37. May the conduct of every mason be such through life, that his brethren may hear him when he makes his demand, see and recognize him at a distance, and, by the strongest ties, feel him and know him in the dark.

38. May the Bible rule and guide us through life; the square square our actions, and the compass circumscribe the bounds, which we are to keep with all mankind, especially with a brother.

39. May masonry flourish till nature expire,
And its glories ne'er fade till the world is on fire.

40. The Craft. Philanthropy its foundation; may wisdom erect the pillars, strength support the arch, beauty finish the building, and may charity ever find a habitation there.

41. The immortal memory of our late most worshipful brother, general George Washington, "the father of his country, and the friend of man."

42. Our Sisters. May we ever regard them with the eye of affection; may their virtues ever meet our kind and tender embraces, and may we ever deserve from them the character of affectionate brothers.

43. May brotherly love, the basis of free-masonry, not only continue and encrease amongst ourselves, but amongst all ranks and conditions of men, in every nation around the globe.

44. May secrecy, good fellowship, morality, and an ardent desire to promote the happiness of each other be the glorious of every mason.

45. May masonry flourish and vice decay.

46. May the two great parallels be our guide to the grand lodge above.

47. May every mason, as far as may be consistent with prudence, contribute to the wants of his fellow mortals, particularly to those of his brethren; may he ever put the fairest construction on the conduct of his neighbours, and before he censures others "let him look at home."

48. May masonry continue to flourish till time shall be no more.

49. May it be deeply impressed on the heart of every mason, that there is no real felicity for man, except in reforming his errors and vices and entering upon a strict and constant course of virtue.

50. Religion! it is necessary to the young, comfortable to the old, serviceable to the poor, an ornament to the rich, an honour to the fortunate, and a support to the unfortunate. May every free-mason ever be actuated by its divine precepts.

51. May the heart of every mason be conformable to the divine will, and his actions void of offence towards his fellow mortals.

52. May we as masons be affectionate to our friends, faithful to our brethren, obedient to the laws, and just even to our enemies; and may it ever be a maxim of our creed, to fear death less than the least reproach of our conscience.

53. May every mason be enabled to conquer his passions, so that he may no longer be the slave of fear nor the fool of hope; no more be emaciated by envy, enflamed by anger, or depressed by grief; but walk on calmly through the pleasures or difficulties of life, as the sun pursues his course alike through the calm or the stormy sky.

54. The great masonic virtues faith, hope and charity. May every one, who belongs to the fraternity ardently cherish them in his heart, and may they be productive of good fruits in his life and conversation.

55. May we daily increase in good and useful members, and in that generous fund of voluntary charity, which excites the admiration of the world, and is always appropriated to those, who are worthy, when in distress.

56. May the whole brotherhood continue constant in good works, and adorn their profession, whilst arts and learning flourish amongst men, even to the end of the world.

57. The secret and silent.

58. All mankind.
