(U//LES) Hempstead Blood Member Causes Fatal Car Crash After Fleeing From Shooting in Freeport, NY.

(U//LES) On 18 June 2011, Lloyd Williams, an identified Hempstead Blood member was involved in an altercation and shooting at the Phase Bar located at South Bayview Ave, Freeport, NY. After the shooting, Williams fled the scene in a Mitsubishi Galant at a high rate of speed and failed to obey traffic laws. Shortly thereafter, Williams crashed his vehicle into another vehicle on Guy Lombardo Avenue in Freeport, NY killing one individual and critically wounding another. Williams was arrested in the backyard of a residence after fleeing the scene of the accident.¹

(U//LES) According to police reports, Williams and an unknown individual were involved in a fight with a bouncer when the altercation spilled outside and at least one shot was fired. No one was hit by the gunfire; and, it is not known whether Williams was the shooter. After the shooting, Williams quickly fled the scene. The bouncer was also arrested after he picked up the loaded handgun after the fight and hid it in his vehicle.
