INTRODUCTION

Oya is the Spirit of the Wind in the West African religious tradition called "Ifá". The word Oya is the name given to describe a complex convergence of Spiritual Forces that are key elements in the Ifá concept of change. Those Spiritual Forces that form the foundation of Oya's role in the Spirit Realm relate to the movement between dynamics and form as it exists throughout the Universe. According to Ifá, dynamics and form represent the polarity between the Forces of expansion and contraction. Together these Forces create light and darkness, which in turn sustains and defines all that is. According to Ifá, it is the interaction between light and darkness that generate the physical universe and the spiritual world. This interaction is in a constant state of flux and motion. There is no inert, unchanging state of matter in the West African religious tradition. An understanding of this process of spiritual transformation and a set of scriptures that are the basis for a complex system of divination.

Ifá is found throughout the African diaspora where it spread as an integral part of Yoruba culture. The Yoruba Nation is located in the Southwestern region of Nigeria. Prior to colonization, the Yoruba Nation was a federation of city-states that was originally centered in the city of Ilé Ife. According to Ifá myth, the Yorubas migrated to Ilé Ife from the East under the leadership of a warrior chief named Oduduwa. It is difficult to date the time of the Yoruba move into West Africa because of limited archaeological research on the subject. Estimates range from between sixteen hundred to twenty-five hundred years ago. It is likely that migration took place over a number of generations. As the population grew, each new city-state that became a part of the Yoruba federation was governed by a chief called "Oba". The position of Oba is a form of hereditary monarchy and each Oba goes through an initiation that makes them a spiritual descendant of Oduduwa.

Traditional Yoruba political institutions are very much integrated with traditional Yoruba religious institutions. Both structures survived British rule in Nigeria, and continue to function alongside the current civil government.

Within the discipline of Ifá, there is a body of wisdom called "awo", which attempts to preserve the rituals that create direct communication with Forces in Nature. Awo is a Yoruba word that is usually translated to mean "secret". Unfortunately, there is no real English equivalent to the word awo, because the word carries strong cultural and esoteric associations. In traditional Yoruba culture, awo refers to the hidden principles that explain the Mystery of Creation and Evolution. Awo is the esoteric understanding of the invisible forces that sustain dynamics and form within Nature. The essence of these invisible forces is not considered secret because they are devious, they are secret because they remain elusive, awesome in their power to transform and not readily apparent. As such, they can only be grasped through direct interaction and experiential knowledge, which is the intent of Ifá.

The primary inspiration for Ifá is the communication between transcendent spiritual Forces and human consciousness. This communication is believed to be facilitated by the Spirit of Eṣu, who is the Divine Messenger. Working in close association with Eṣu is Ogun, who is the Spirit of Iron. Ogun has the power to clear away those obstacles that stand in the way of spiritual growth. According to Ifá, the work done by Ogun is guided by Ochosi, who as the Spirit of the Tracker has the ability to locate the shortest path to our spiritual goals. The essential goal that Ochosi is called upon to guide us towards is the task of building "iwa-pẹ̀lẹ̀", which means "good character". This guidance takes the form of a spiritual quest which is called "iwakiri". One of the functions of Obatala is to preserve the Mystic Vision that to those who make the quest of iwakiri in search of iwa-pẹ̀lẹ̀.

The power of Oya is described by Ifá as one of many Spiritual Forces in Nature which are called "Orisha". The word Orisha means "Select Head". In a cultural context, Orisha is a reference to the various Forces in Nature that guide consciousness. According to Ifá, everything in Nature has some form of consciousness called "Orí". The Orí of all animals, plants and humans is believed to be guided by a specific Force in Nature (Orisha) which defines the quality of a particular form of consciousness. There are a large number of Orisha and each Orisha has its own awo.

The unique function of Oya within the realm of Orisha Awo (Mysteries of Nature) is to provide the those changing conditions that force consciousness to grow, expand and transcend its limitations. To call an Orisha the Spirit of the Wind is to make a symbolic reference to constant motion that exists in Nature. The reference to Wind is not limited to the wind that blows across the surface of the Earth. Wind is a phenomena that occurs throughout Creation causing shifts and movement throughout all that exists. If it were not for the random element of change as represented by Oya, everything that existed in the Universe would have the same texture, structure and appearance.

Ifá teaches that all Forces in Nature come into Being through the manifestation of energy patterns, which are all identified and labeled as different Orisha with different, but different expressions of consciousness. But because consciousness itself is generated by Obatala every Orisha contains an element of Obatala's aṣẹ (power).

In metaphysical terms, this means that all of Creation is linked to Obatala as the Source of Being. Ifá teaches that all forms of consciousness contain a spark of aṣẹ (spiritual power) from Obatala, and it is this spark that links everything that is to its shared Beginning. It is Oya who has the task of shaking the divergent aspects of consciousness in such a way that consciousness continues to evolve. Oya is the Force in Nature that insures that there is no stagnation in any corner of Creation.

In addition, Oya supplies the gateway that links cycles of atunwa (reincarnation). Ifá teaches that persons come back to life on Earth through the process of rebirth. Every individual has a soul called "emí", which survives physical death and dwells in Ikolẹ̀ Ọ̀run, which is the invisible Realm of the Ancestors. While the emí is in Ikolẹ̀ Ọ̀run it is capable of making contact with those who live on earth. This contact is facilitated through the Spiritual Winds that link the Realm of the Ancestors with Earth. This Wind is at the heart of Oya's power and makes Oya an essential participant in those ceremonies which honor the memory of the Ancestors.

ALO IRINTÀN OYA FOLKTALES OF THE SPIRIT OF THE WIND

A. OYA KO SI 'KU — The Spirit of the Wind Protects Us From Death

It was Oya (Spirit of the Wind) who advised Ọrúnmílà to cast Ifá on the day that Iku (the Spirit of Death) was planning to journey past his home. Ọrúnmílà heeded the warning and placed a plate of yams, a bowl of soup and a cooked chicken on the refuse heap near his home.

As the Spirit of Death approached the house he saw the food on the refuse heap and he went to eat. When he had finished his meal he spotted Ọrúnmílà and gave chase. The food allowed him down and Iku was unable to catch his intended prey.

Speaking to him from a distance, Ọrúnmílà asked Iku why he had come to Ikoig Ayé (Earth). Iku said "I have come to fetch someone who was thoughtless. I was to take him with me to the land of the ancestors. But I cannot be rude to someone who has offered me a meal."

Commentary: The Ifá concept of Destiny includes the belief that every person has a pre-ordained time of passing. This time cannot be extended, but it can be shortened. Those who do not live their life to the full time allowed are considered careless in their efforts to live in harmony with self and world.

Ọrúnmílà was able to avert his premature death by making the proper offerings to Iku at a time when death was near. In the story it was Oya who warned Ọrúnmílà of the presence of death. Ifá cosmology closely associates Oya with a Spiritual Force called Ajalaiye. The Ajalaiye are hot winds that blow close to the earth. These winds play a positive role in the process of replenishing the soil, but they also carry the kind of germs that cause epidemics in West Africa.

Orúnmilà was able to avoid Iku because he was sensitive to the message from the Spirit of the Wind.

B. OYA YA SHANGO — The Spirit of the Wind as Wife of the Spirit of Lightning

Shango (The Spirit of Lightning) was the fourth Alafin (Regional Chief) of Oyo. It was a time when the Yoruba Nation was plagued by war and internal conflict. In an effort to bring stability to the Nation, Shango united the kingdom of Oyo. When the days of battle and strife came to an end, Shango sat in his palace and suffered from boredom. In an effort to recreate the excitement of his youth, he ordered his brothers, Timi and Gbonkaa to fight a duel.

Timi and Gbonkaa came to the compound of the Alafin (Regional Chief) and played their dueling drums until Timi fell asleep and Gbonkaa declared himself the winner. Shango was not satisfied and ordered them to return to fight again.

Timi and Gbonkaa came to the compound of the Alafin (Regional Chief) on the following day prepared for battle. Timi strung his bow and began hurling arrows at Gbonkaa. None of the arrows hit their target because Gbonkaa was wearing the ogun (medicine) of protection. Gbonkaa repeated the incantations that put Timi asleep, then stood over his body and cut off his head.

When the people of Oyo saw Timi dead at the palace they became angry at Shango and drove him from the compound. Overcome with grief, Shango left the city of Oyo and hung himself. The first person to find his body was his wife Oya who said, "Oba ko so" which means, "The Chief is not dead."

Commentary: The Myth of Shango is based upon a historical figure who created a federation of city-states along the Eastern rim of the Yoruba Nation. The region had been plagued by internal Wars, which made it vulnerable to slave traders from the regions North of the rain forest.

This Myth has several variations which put a slightly different emphasis on the role of Shango in relationship to the brothers Timi and Gbonkaa. In some versions, Timi and Gbonkaa are involved in political intrigue. Shango becomes angry at their actions and unleashes his aggression in an excessive way, causing the deaths of many innocent people in the city of Oyo. The more common version of the myth has Shango pitting the two brothers against each other for his own amusement and out of jealousy for their popularity among the people of Oyo.

In both versions, Shango is accused of committing an offense which makes him unworthy to serve as the Alafin. Yoruba culture is based on hereditary Patriarchal chieftaincies. The conduct of a political chief is monitored by a council of male and female elders, called "Ogboni". If the council of elders believes that the chief has flagrantly abused the power of his position that he must be removed from office as the economic and political life of the community would suffer. If the chief is removed from office he was expected to commit suicide. This was accomplished by ingesting poison, which he would drink as part of a ritual passage that would prepare him for entry into the realm of the ancestors.

Most of the versions of the Shango Myth have him take his own life by hanging from a tree. In some versions of the Myth it is an iroko tree and in others the tree is the ayan tree. Both trees are sacred to the ancestors and are used as communal shrines in places where these trees are located near a town. This portion of the Myth suggests that Shango realizes his mistake before he comes under censure by Ogboni and attempts to avoid the shame and guilt of censure by the elders by taking his own life.

The appearance of Oya at the moment of the hanging insures that Shango's spirit will become transformed as he passes into the realm of the ancestors. This Myth is the Ifá expression of the dynamics of death and resurrection. Because of the belief in reincarnation the resurrection is not the physical reappearance of Shango in physical form. It is the elevation of the emi, or soul of Shango to a place where it returns to source and becomes merged with the power of lightning.

This identification may seem confusing to those who are used to the Western concept of linear time. The Myth of Shango is rooted in the Ifá concept of circular time. According to Ifá the process of spiritual transformation is both preparation for future cycles of reincarnation and a return to the primal source of consciousness. By realizing his mistake, Shango prepares for his next life and becomes reunited by the spirit of fire which gave birth to his own personal consciousness. The presence of Oya serves to open those passageways that allow this identification to take place.

This story established the scriptural basis for Oya's sacred function within Ègbé Egúngun (Ancestral Reverence Societies). It is the female initiates of Oya who frequently have the task of invoking possession in the male mediums who wear the colored cloth of Egúngun ritual. Oya as the Spirit of the Wind has the power to open the gateways between Ikolẹ Orun (The Invisible Realm of the Ancestors) and Ikolẹ Ayé (Earth). This gateway is opened through the use of shango which means "Wind of Earth" and egun which means "Wind of the Ancestral Realm". It is these Spirit Winds that are used as roadways between the human dimension and the ancestral dimension. This Wind should not be confused with the winds that effect weather on the planet. They are lines of ase (power) which exist in the invisible atmosphere that links the Spiritual World with the Physical World.

In metaphysical terms the relationship between Oya and Shango is one of eternal polarity. Shango is the lightning that is generated by the wind. Shango gains his potency through the ase (power) that is generated by Oya. Ifá teaches that all ase (power) is generated by the relationship between forces of expansion and forces of contraction. In Ifá scripture forces of expansion are usually characterized as male Orisha and forces of contraction are usually characterized as female Orisha. It is the force of the wind that contracts in a circular movement that generates the static electricity that bursts from the sky after the current is concentrated in a small area. This is a literal manifestation of the interaction between male and female principles of power as they exist in Nature.

C. OYA GALÀ'BINRIN — The Spirit of the Wind as Deer Woman

Oya made the journey from Ikolẹ Orun (The Realm of the Ancestors) to Ikolẹ Ayé (Earth) in the form of an antelope on the day that she wanted to sell her goods in the market. Every five days Oya was able to change her shape from galà (deer) to obinrin (woman). Oya waited five days, then entered the market carrying a bundle of multicolored cloth. It was on that day that Shango (Spirit of Lightning) became overwhelmed by her beauty.

Oya ignored Shango's efforts to make her acquaintance. Instead, she sold her cloth, left the market and headed into the forest. Because he was struck by her beauty, Shango followed Oya into the forest, where he watched her put on the skin of said deer and transformed herself into a creature of the jungle.

The next day Oya returned to the marketplace and transformed herself back into a woman. She headed for the market. Shango took her animal skin and placed it in his sack. Later that day Oya returned to the forest and made a desperate search for her skin. Because Oya could not live in the bush without her animal skin she agreed to return with Shango to his home and become his wife.

Shango had two senior wives; Oshun (The Spirit of the Oshun River) and Oba (The Spirit of the Oba River). In time Oshun and Oba became jealous of the favored treatment that Oya received from Shango. Oshun and Oba told Oya that they thought she was crude, and that she behaved like an animal. Because Oya did not want the women to discover her secret, she renewed her search for her skin. When she found the skin in Shango's sack, she took it and returned to the forest.

Shango felt grief when he found that Oya had left him. He followed her into the forest until he spotted a galà (deer) with two powerful horns. The beast was digging a hoof into the dirt and had its head lowered in preparation for battle. It was on that day that Shango recognized the galà as Oya. Instead of lifting his bow, Shango offered the animal a plate of akara (bean cakes). Oya removed the horns from her head and presented them to Shango in return for his kindness.

From that day on Shango has used the horns of the galà to call the Spirit of Oya.

Commentary: Ifá teaches that Orisha exist at all levels of Being. This means that the Spirit of the Wind can be found in the gas storms that swirl around exploded stars, Oya can be found in the Wind that blows across the surface of the Earth, and Oya appears in the animal realm as a horned deer.

Ifá also teaches that all things evolve from a single source and that all things are interconnected and interrelated. This means that the process of becoming attuned to Awo 'ya (The Mystery of the Spirit of the Wind) involves a sense of empathy and deep spiritual bonding with many different dimensions of reality.

There are constant shifts between manifestations of human and animal. The goal is the unity of all things within the scope of one's consciousness and reserve respect. Each being is linked psychically and biologically to all the life forms that have evolved into human nature.

Ifá also teaches that it is possible to learn lessons from Nature through mystical identification with certain animal forms. In this instance it is the deer who teaches the lesson of tolerance, acceptance and compassion.

Oya is often described as a warrior, which is accurate. However, her asè as a warrior comes through her ability to invoke the assistance of elemental spirits such as deer and birds to assist her in battle. This ability gives Oya a key role in the protection of those who are going through the process of initiation. It also makes Oya one of the guardians of issues related to the fair treatment of women.

II.

ÌMỌ OYA

THE THEOLOGICAL FUNCTION OF THE SPIRIT OF THE WIND

A. OYA YÀNMỌ-ÌPIN — The Spirit of the Wind and the Concept of Destiny

The Ifá concept of "àyànmọ-ìpin", which means "Destiny", is based on the belief that each person chooses their individual destiny before being born into the world. These choices materialize as those components that form human potential. Within the scope of each person's potential there exists parameters of choice that can enhance or inhibit the fullest expression of individual destiny. Ifá calls these possibilities "ọ̀nà ipin" which means "road or destiny". Each decision that is made in the course of one lifetime can effect the range of possibilities that exists in the future, by either limiting or expanding the options for growth.

It is within the context of choice, or what is known in Western philosophical tradition as "free will" that Ifá recognizes a collection of Spiritual Forces called "Ibora". In Yoruba, the word Ibora means "Warrior". Traditionally the Ibora include Eṣu, Ògún and Ochosi. Eṣu is the cornerstone that links the Ibora as they relate to the issue of spiritual growth. According to Ifá, each moment of existence includes a wide range of possible actions, reactions and interpretations. Those moments which require decisive action are described in Ifá scripture as "ọ̀nà'pàdẹ", which means "junction in the road". Whenever a person who is trying to build character through the use of Ifá spiritual discipline reaches ọ̀nà'pàdẹ, it is customary to consult Eṣu regarding the question of which path will bring blessings from Orisha.

Ifá teaches that blessings come to those who make choices that are consistent with their highest destiny. Within Yoruba culture it is understood that an individual's highest destiny is based on those choices that build "iwa-pẹ̀lẹ̀", which means "good character". Those who develop good character are often described as weaving white cloth, which means creating purity and spiritual elevation in the world. The collective impact of those who weave white cloth is entering into a state of mystical union with the Chief, or the Source of White Cloth who is called "Obatala". This is true for everyone, even those who worship other Orisha. Ifá scripture clearly suggests what all of the Orisha exist as an extension of the power of consciousness that is created by the aṣẹ (power) of Obatala.

The relationship between Oya and Obatala has several dimensions. Oya is the guardian of the gateway to the Realm of the Ancestors. Oya has a ceremonial role in the preservation of the wisdom of the ancestors and ancestor reverence is based on the belief that the ancestors are by standing in the shoulders of those who have gone before us. Those who are initiated into Iwa Oya (Mysteries of the Spirit of the Wind) have the keys for unlocking the wisdom of the past as a constant source of inspiration and guidance. Obatala is the guardian of iwa-pẹ̀lẹ̀ (good character), and it is Oya who brings the voice of those ancestors who preserved the wisdom that leads to the development of good character.

Oya also has the role of disrupting complacency. Ifá teaches that the process of seeking harmony and balance with self and world is an ongoing process which requires constant attention, vigilance and wisdom. It is possible to live under the illusion that your life is in harmony with its own destiny and in harmony with Forces in Nature that exist in the world. Ifá scripture suggests that when a person is in a state of illusion they will eventually run up against those Forces in Nature that will shatter the illusion. Oya is one of those Forces. The Wind as a Spiritual Principle brings the unexpected, the chaotic, the transformative and the overwhelming Forces of Nature that give human consciousness a sense of mortality and humility.

B. OYA ONITOJU AṢẸ — The Spirit of the Source of Change

Ifá cosmology is based on the belief that the Primal Source of Creation is a form of Spiritual Essence called "aṣẹ". There is no literal translation for aṣẹ, although it is used in prayer to mean "May it be so".

Ifá teaches that the visible universe is generated by two dynamic forces. One is the force of "inàlo", which means "expansion", and the other is the force of "isoki", which means "contraction". The first initial manifestation of these forces is through "imọ" which means "light", and through "aimoyẹ", which means "darkness". In Ifá myth expansion and light are frequently identified with Male Spirits called "Orisha ko". Contraction and darkness are frequently identified with Female Spirits called "Orisha ye". Both are either manifestation of aṣẹ or considered as aṣẹ. Imọ and aimoyẹ are viewed as essential elements in the balance of Nature.

In Ifá cosmology both imọ and aimoyẹ arise from the matrix of the invisible universe which is called "Imolẹ", which means "House of Light". Within the house of light there is an invisible substance that transforms spiritual potential into physical reality. The invisible substance that moves between these two dimensions is called aṣẹ, and it is Obatala who brings the aṣẹ of Light into the world. If there was nothing but light in the world, the universe would burn, then fade.

It is the constant interaction between light and dark, between expansion and contraction, between fusion and fission that gives shape to the universe. If these polarities always interacted in the same way, the universe would be made up of stars that were all the same size, planets that were all the same shape, land would be similar all over the Earth and everyone would look the same. One of the most perplexing aspects of Creation to Western science is the fact that there exists a wide range of variation within every aspect of Being. Western science call this the result of chaos; Ifá says that it is the result of the aṣẹ of Oya.

Oya — The Spirit of the Wind

III.

ÒNA OYA

THE ROADS OF THE SPIRIT OF THE WIND

The word Oya is an elision of the Oriki (Praise Name) Omo-Ṣinṣin which means "Child of the Mother of Nine". In the West, Yansa is used as a synonym for Oya. However, the Oriki suggests that Oya is the child of Yansa and that Ṣinṣin is the Mother of the Spirit of the Wind. Two aspects of Oya which make frequent appearance in Ifá scripture are "Ajalaiye" which means "Winds of the Earth", and "Ajalòrun", which means "Winds of the Realm of the Ancestors".

IV.

ILÉ ORISHA

THE SHRINE OF THE SPIRIT OF THE WIND

A. ILÉ ORISHA ADURA — Shrine for Prayer and Meditation to the Spirit of the Wind

Those who are interested in honoring Oya who have no access to either Ifá or Orisha elders can set up a shrine that may be used for meditation and prayer. The shrine can be used as a focal point for meditation that can lead to a deeper awareness, appreciation, and understanding of Oya's role and function within Nature. Such a shrine should be set up in a clean place and make use of multicolored cloth as a setting for other symbolic altar pieces. Pictures of powerful and disruptive Forces in Nature such as volcanoes, hurricanes, tornadoes and thunderstorms would reflect the quality of Oya's inner nature.

Oya is also associated with bush cow and seven spiritual manifestations of birds. The birds are used in association with the female mysteries of "Iyami", which means "My Mothers". These spirit birds are used to induce astral travel, clairvoyance, and provide healing to those who suffer from otherwise incurable illness.

B. ILÉ ORISHA ORIKI — Shrine for Invocation to the Spirit of the Wind

Shrines which are used for the invocation of Oya are constructed from consecrated religious elements that are presented to a devotee during initiation. These objects may vary, but they generally include a pot that contains the sacred power objects that attract the aṣẹ (spiritual essence) of Oya, a rattle made from seed in a pod, a black horse tail fan, a sekere (beaded rattle), and weapons made from copper.

The Ifá calendar is based on a five day week and those who have received the aṣẹ of Orisha generally greet their shrine each morning and say invocations to their shrine every five days. The invocations are called "Oriki", which means "praising the consciousness". An example of Oriki Oya is as follows:

Iba ṣẹ Oya Oluweku.

I respect the Spirit of the Wind, Chief of the Ancestors.

Iba ṣẹ Opere Lalaoyan.

I respect She Who Walks with Confidence and Pride.

Iba ṣẹ Oya yeba Iya mesa Oyo.

I respect the Spirit of the Wind, the Senior Mother.

Ajalaiye aṣẹ ọku lẹlẹ biọkẹ.

The Wind, Earth carry the Ancestors.

Ajalorun aṣẹ ọku lẹlẹ biọkẹ.

The Winds of the invisible Realm carry the Ancestors.

Ajalaiye, Ajalorun fun mi ni 're.

May the Winds of Earth and the Winds of the invisible Realm bring me good fortune.

Oya winiwini.

The Spirit of the Wind is wondrous.

Iba se Oya l'o ni Egún.

I respect the Spirit of the Wind who Guides the Ancestors.

Iya mi oro bi omu ṣẹ l'aiya.

Mother fill me with the wisdom of your breasts.

Iba ṣẹ Omo Yansan.

I respect the child of the Mother of Nine.

Mbẹ mbẹ Yansan.

May the Mother of Nine exist forever.

Aṣẹ.

May it be so.

C. ADIMU OYA — Offerings to the Spirit of the Wind

In all forms of Ifá and Orisha worship it is traditional to make an offering whenever guidance or assistance is requested from Spiritual Forces. Adimu is a term that is generally used to refer to food and drink that is presented to the Spirit of a particular shrine. The idea behind the process of making an offering is that it would be unfair to ask for something for nothing. Those who have an unconsecrated shrine to Oya can make the offering in their own words. Those who have a consecrated shrine to Oya may use the Oriki for Oya when making a presentation of Adimu. This is usually done when a prayer requesting assistance from Oya is made. The answer to the prayer can then come through divination.

The traditional forms of adimu offered if Oya include:

- 1. Eggplant
- 2. Red wine

EBO OYA — Life Force Offerings to the Spirit of the Wind

There is a wide range of ritual procedure in Africa involving the worship of Orisha. Many of the differences in ceremonial process reflect regional differences in emphasis rather than essence. The term, "life force offering" is used in reference to the fact that many Orisha rituals require a preparation of a feast or communal meal. Whenever this occurs the blood from the animal that is used for the meal is given to Orisha as an offering. This offering is considered a reaffirmation between Ikolé Orun (The Realm of the Ancestors) and Ikolé Ayé (Earth). This covenant is an agreement between Spirit and humans that Spirit will provide food for the nourishment of people on earth. In return, the worshipers of Ifá and Orisha agree to respect the spirit of the animal who provided the food and agree to elevate the spirit of that animal so it will return to provide food for future generations.

Whenever a life force offering is made to any of the Orisha, an invocation is generally made to Ogun as part of the process. This is a grossly misunderstood aspect of Ifá and Orisha worship which has suffered from negative stereotypes in the press and the media. It is part of awo Ogun (Mystery of the Spirit of Iron) to learn the inner secrets of making life force offerings. When an Orisha initiate is making a life force offering it should include an invocation for the Odu Ogunda. If the initiate is using the Lucumí system of Merindinlogun, the invocation would be to Ogunda Meji. In Ifá the invocation for life force offerings is to Ogunda Irete.

The traditional life force offerings fro Oya include:

1. Hen
2. Ram
3. Sheep
4. Goat

E. AWE OYA — Cleansing for the Spirit of the Wind

Cleansing is a ritual procedure used to remove negative spiritual influences. The most fundamental form of cleansings takes the form of blessing water. This means that the water is charged with the power of prayer to accomplish a specific purpose. Once the water has been blessed it can be used to wash specific parts of the body such as the head, the hands or the feet, or it can be used for bathing.

Those who are uninitiated may say a prayer to Oya in their own language and breathe the prayer into the water. It is also common for Oya to make use of a broom for cleansing work. The following prayer may be used for both water and the broom by those who have been initiated in Awo 'ya (Mysteries of the Spirit of the Wind).

Those who are initiated may add their asé to the water with the following prayer:

Iba sẹ Oya gbe nla ijo mora.

I respect the Spirit of the Wind who dances with big movements.

Oya b'a mi de 'di a agbo omo mi.

Spirit of the Wind, touch my child's medicine.

K'o mu, ko ki.

Make it strong and powerful.

Kieso omo mi di pupo gun rẹrẹ.

Let my child be blessed for the good.

Ajalaiyẹ Ajalórún mo be yin,

I beg the Winds of Earth and the Winds of the Invisible Realm,

Mimi r'owo san awin Órun mi ati beebee.

May I always do good things in the World.

Aṣẹ.

May it be so.

Following the cleansing, empty the water somewhere away from the entrance to your home. If a room is being used clean the room by rubbing it in the Earth.

F. OYA IYA 'JA — The Spirit of the Wind, Mother of the Market Place

In rural regions of Nigeria most Yoruba cities are founded on a farming economy. The cities are surrounded by communal farms that are generally run by specific extended families. Traditionally the men work on the farms and the women sell the excess produce in the market. Rural markets are usually located in the center of town, are open air and are consecrated to Oya. There is frequently an altar to Oya at either the center or the gateway to the market. The altar varies from a simple mound of dirt to elaborate shrines. Once a year offerings are brought to the market place at the market festival.

Because of her association with commerce, Oya is frequently called upon as a source of abundance. It is common for women in Nigeria to bring a handful of cornmeal to the market place, pray on the grain, then toss it near the entrance to the market. For those who have a consecrated shrine to Oya the following prayer may be used:

Ire ni mo nwa l'owo o to.

It is abundance that I am searching for.

Oya re'le Egúngun lo lo're wa fun mi owo ni nwa l'owo mi o to.

Spirit of the Wind, go to the house of the Ancestors and bring me abundance.

Oya gbe rẹrẹ ko ni Olu-gbe-rẹrẹ.

Spirit of the Wind bring me good things from the Chief of Good things.

Bi ojo ba la maa la.

When the day breaks abundance will come to me.

A dupe.

I give thanks.

ORISHA 'GUN THE SPIRIT OF THE WIND AND THE MEANING OF SPIRIT POSSESSION

Those who practice the religion of Ifá in Africa are generally members of a society that worships a single Orisha. These societies are usually referred to by the term "ẹgbẹ", which means "heart", as in the expression "the heart of the matter". Those who worship Oya would be members of ẹgbẹ Oya. There are regional differences in the use of this term. In some areas, societies of Oya worship might be called ẹgbẹ Oya, meaning "heart of Oya" or "heart of Oya" meaning. These are the same

Regardless of the name used, each of these societies preserves the oral history, myth and wisdom associated with Egun (The Mystery of the Wind). Part of the wisdom that is preserved concerns the discipline used to access altered states of consciousness. Western literature on Orisha tends to refer to these states as "possession". This term is inadequate to describe the various forms of trance that are used to assist the Orisha worshiper in their understanding of the Mysteries of Being.

Ifá teaches that it is possible to access both Orisha (Forces in Nature) and Egun (ancestors) through the disciplined use of dreams. The word "alá" is used in Yoruba to mean "dream". Ala is the last part of the word Obatalá and it suggests that the dream state is closely associated with the source of consciousness itself. The word "alála" is the word for "dreamer". Because dreamer has a positive connotation in Ifá, the word alála is a reference to those who are able to make effective use of dreams. Alala appears to be a contraction of ala and ala. In Yoruba words are often repeated for emphasis or to establish relative relationships. To use the word alá twice suggests that the reference to dreamer is an expression of the belief that dreams can access the true source of inner thoughts.

Ifá teaches that it is possible to develop an ongoing relationship with Orisha that makes a person sensitive to the influence of Orisha on a daily basis that effects their immediate environment. In English this is usually referred to as a highly developed intuition. The Yoruba word for intuition is "ogbon inu", which translates literally to mean "the stomach of the earth". Ifá metaphysics is based on the idea that those Forces in Nature that sustain life on earth establish certain guidelines for living in harmony with Creation. The development of a sensitivity to these forces is part of the discipline of Orisha worship and this sensitivity is called "ogbon inu".

There are a number of words that are used to describe those altered states that are commonly referred to as possession. In conjunction with the word awo meaning either "mystery" or "power" are used to describe a close spiritual connection with Orisha. The phrase "awo ran" is used to describe those who have assumed the characteristics of a particular Orisha.

The more common term for possession is "ini". This word reveals the Ifá perspective on those trance states which represent a deep connection with the asé (power) of Orisha. The word ini appears to be a contraction of "i", which is a personal pronoun, and "ni", which is the verb "to be". To use the phrase "I am" as a reference to possession suggests that what is frequently thought of as an intrusion from outside forces is more accurately understood as a process of unlocking the awo (mystery) of the inner self. Ifá teaches that every person comes to Earth with a spark of divinity at the foundation of their ori (inner spirit). Part of the discipline of Orisha worship is to access this spark of divinity. This is generally accomplished through initiation, which is designed to guide the initiate towards access to the inner self, which in turn forms a transcendent link to that Orisha which is closest to the consciousness of the initiate.

Those who have been through initiation for Oya can enhance their access to ini at the same time that offerings are made to their shrine on a five day cycle. This is done by saying Oriki Oya in front of the initiate's Oya shrine. When the Oriki is spoken a candle is lit near the Orisha pot and a glass of water is placed near the candle. After the Oriki has been completed, the initiate breathes into the glass of water and says the word "to", which means "enough". The word to is used at the end of Oriki as a seal or lock to attach the invocation to whatever it is spoken onto.

Using the index finger, the ring finger and the little finger on the left hand, the initiate dips the fingers in the water and runs the water from between the forehead across the top of the head and down the back of the neck. When the fingers are between the eyebrows say, "iraju", which is the name of the power center at the forehead. When the fingers are on the top of the head say "ori" which is the name of the power center at the crown of the skull. When the fingers are on the back of the head say "ibon" which is the name of the power center at the base of the skull.

A sample of the type of Oriki that is used for Oya is as follows:

Iba se Oya o rin n' eru ojikuu s' eru.

I respect the Spirit of the Wind who does not fear death.

Iyagba n'le Ifon alabalase oba patapa n'ile iranje.

Mother of the Realm of the Ancestors is the one who guides all future generations.

Oya, gbese nla ijo mora.

Spirit of the Wind who dances with big movements.

Oya o pe o.

Spirit of the Wind I am calling you.

Oya o pe o.

Spirit of the Wind I am calling you.

Oya o pe o.

Spirit of the Wind I am calling you.

Oya o pe o.

Spirit of the Wind I am calling you.

Oya ro.

Spirit of the Wind descend.

Efufu lẹlẹ ti nda igi lokeloke,

Strong Wind that clears a path,

A dupẹ.

I thank you.

Aṣẹ.

May it be so.

ÒGÚN

Ifá and the Spirit of Iron

ISBN 0-942272-28-5 $4.95

Ogun is the Spirit of Iron in the West African religious tradition called Ifá. The essence of Ògún is considered one of many Spiritual Forces in Nature which are called Orisha. There are a large number of Orisha and each Orisha has its own Awo. The unique function of Ògún within the realm of Orisha Awo (Mysteries of Nature) is to remove all obstacles that stand in the way of Spiritual evolution, which includes the evolution of all that is. In order to do this Ogun must sacrifice all that stands in the way of spiritual evolution. Because of these sacred responsibility Ogun is considered the Guardian of Truth. Ògún does not protect the truth of what we would like to be, he guards the truth of what is. It is the process of making this distinction that lies at the core of Ògún's mystery.

This is the second in a series of booklets about the Orisha. Please feel free to write us and tell us which of the Orisha you would like to know more about.
